In relation to the first, the three strategies described by Hammer can be identified in the way magicians legitimize their practices generally, by, for instance, appealing to narratives of personal experience, or by clothing their practices in scientific nomenclature, including the quite frequent appeal to quantum mechanics, or to psychological theories. The relation to the authenticity problem in Enochian magic is somewhat more complex. We clearly find appeals to (constructed) tradition to be at the core of what I termed the perennialist response, while the pragmatic/progressive response may include elements of both scientistic and experiential rhetoric. However, the perhaps more curious purist response does not squarely find its expression in Hammer's scheme. At one level, it is related to scientism, in that it makes an appeal to the epistemic authority of solid scholarship, especially in the discipline of history. As will be shown in a later chapter, however, the claim that teachings on Enochiana must be grounded in thorough, scholarly study of original source material seems to be an additional discursive strategy that started to gain serious ground in the 1970s and 1980s. This is an emphasis on an allegedly scholarly concept of authenticity, which interestingly seems to share common points with distinctions made by some academic writers. One could for example mention Gershom Scholem's work on Kabbalah, where past masters were construed as "authentic" expressions of the tradition, while modern reconstructions and reinterpretations were rejected as anachronistic frauds and charlatans.[49] Intriguingly, we find the same kind of rhetoric employed within occultism as well, leveled against competing interpretations, criticized for being "inauthentic" in the sense of presenting distorted doctrines and practices.

In the second part of the book the historical development of the strategies is reflected in the division of chapters. We will first see how the Golden Dawn current continued, with modifications, into the twentieth century. Chapter 5 discusses the innovations of Aleister Crowley, while chapter 6 looks at new divisions and conflicts on Enochian magic within the remaining and reconstructed Golden Dawn groups, especially between Regardie and Paul Foster Case. Chapter 7 will discuss the emergence of modern Satanism, represented by LaVey and Aquino, and the role of Enochiana in the middle of modern Satanism's first schism. Through these chapters, Enochiana will largely be cast in the context of claiming and contesting "tradition." Chapter 8 moves on to discuss the interesting development that I term "the purist turn," beginning in the 1970s and overlapping with the turbulence in society and the religious and intellectual culture associated with that period. Finally in chapter 9 I chart out the latest developments in Enochiana, with a specific look at the importance of the emergence of the Internet for contemporary occultism. In addition, we will see that even though the purist turn largely influenced contemporary Enochian magic, later years have seen what some practitioners term the "New Flow": a set of new revelations from the Enochian angels, gradually acquiring a position as canonized parts of the Enochian corpus, alongside Dee and Kelley's original material.

PART TWO

MAJOR TRENDS IN ENOCHIAN MAGIC

5
The Angels and the Beast

Aleister Crowley (1875–1947) is one of the most well-known figures in modern occultism. He has been the subject of sensational stories in newspapers and magazines since his own days, and at some sixty years after his death biographies can be counted in the dozens.[1] Nevertheless, it is not until quite recently that academics have started to look at Crowley seriously. Since the late 1990s, an entire literature has cropped up that dissects Crowley's role in the modern religious and occult landscape, and the broader cultural and intellectual contexts of his own days. New biographies give a source-driven and nuanced portrayal of Crowley's life and actions, made understandable in light of his times and the specific goals and endeavors he set for himself.[2] Other academic studies place Crowley in the context of late-Victorian and Edwardian culture, and not least the moral, political, and religious anxieties of the interwar period. In this section of the literature Crowley has been linked to early-twentieth-century discourses on sexuality and transgression,[3] his engagement with the great political ideologies and upheavals has been analyzed,[4] and he has even been used as a focal point for exploring Edwardian experiences of subjectivity.[5]

Perhaps surprisingly, Crowley's ideas on magic have largely been neglected in this current of academic interest, left instead for other occultists to argue over.[6] While there have certainly been some exceptions to this general trend, it is still the case that the scholar who wishes to assess Crowley's magic has much less thorough secondary literature to rely on.[7] By extension, this applies to the endeavor of placing Crowley's role in that subset of occult magical discourse which is Enochiana. The only scholarly commentary touching on this issue is Alex Owen's chapter on "Crowley in the Desert," discussing Crowley's vision quest in the Algerian desert in 1909, induced by magical invocations of the thirty Aethyrs.[8] Owen contextualizes the exceptional series of magical experiments in light of Orientalist discourse, sexual frustrations and taboos, psychology, and the search for the authentic self. Needless to say, our present concerns are somewhat different, and even though Owen gives a valuable interpretation of the mutations of Golden Dawn magic into Crowley's work, she cannot tell us much about the specific relevance of Enochiana in the middle of all this. Indeed, what little she has to say about Enochian magic is that it was "a complex magical system developed by John Dee...and his clairvoyant, Edward Kelley."[9] As the first part of this book demonstrated, such a description is much too simplistic. It will be an aim for the present chapter, then, not only to recapitulate Crowley's exotic use of Enochian magic, but to frame him in the unfolding narrative of the reception history of this particular set of angelic magic.

As we shall see, Crowley has indeed played a central role, steeped in the Golden Dawn's teachings but constantly pushing further with his original interpretations and new strategies to establish esoteric knowledge. Because of this emphatic Golden Dawn heritage, the present chapter should be read together with the next one. In one sense, Crowley could aptly be seen together with some of the figures we will meet there, as a pretender to the "authentic" lineage and authority following the fall of the Golden Dawn. While some of the people we will meet later have tried to reestablish such authority from within the preexisting structures, Crowley sought out different types of legitimating strategies, as well as new institutional bodies for carrying on and embodying such authority. Before we can turn to his appropriations of Enochian magic, then, we should place his overall magical and religious philosophy vis-à-vis the Golden Dawn.

The Making of a Prophet

Aleister Crowley's magical career formally began in 1898, when he was introduced to the Golden Dawn. He was taken up as an ambitious young man aged twenty-three, and quickly advanced through the Order's system of initiations. By the time of the schisms of 1900, Crowley was knocking on the portal of the Second Order. Teaming up with MacGregor Mathers, now having reached a peak of unpopularity among the London adepts, Crowley was given an initiation by the chief personally in Paris. However, this initiation would soon be declared void by the London rebels, after Crowley acted as Mathers's protégé in what has become known as "the Battle of Blythe Road"—an unsuccessful scheme to bring the rebels back to the fold.[10]

When the schisms raged, Crowley set out on a series of explorations, of both terrestrial and magical lands. Availing himself of money inherited from the death of his father, he departed for a journey around the globe, visiting such places as Mexico, Japan, Ceylon, India, Burma, and Egypt, acquiring as much knowledge as he could from those countries' pools of religious and esoteric philosophies.[11] He claimed to have studied Sufism and Arabic in Cairo under the tutelage of an unnamed sheik.[12] While in Ceylon he spent six weeks with his old friend from the Golden Dawn, Allan Bennett, who was now setting himself up as a master yogi.[13] Back in London Bennett had been one of Crowley's personal tutors in the art of ritual magic; now he had taken up Buddhism, and gave Crowley an intensive course in yoga.[14] Following Bennett's example Crowley also engaged in a more intimate relation with Buddhism during his visit, and would subsequently consider himself a Buddhist for many years. Crowley would later make attempts to systematize and tabulate all the esoteric knowledge he had accumulated during his various trips and studies, incorporating them with the Golden Dawn teachings on Kabbalah and ritual magic. Notably, this project resulted in his book 777, a set of tables showing correspondences between various systems modeled on the ten sefirot and twenty-two paths of the Kabbalistic Tree of Life, published in 1909.[15]

With hindsight, the most significant event of these years was nevertheless the 1904 "reception" of Liber Legis, the book that would become the founding document of Crowley's new religion, Thelema. As part of their honeymoon, Crowley and his first wife Rose Edith Crowley, née Kelly, had arrived in Cairo on February 9, where they would stay for several months.[16] During the stay, Rose apparently started to act strangely. Following a specific ritual evocation performed by Crowley on March 17, allegedly for no other reason than to impress Rose with his magical aptitude, she started to display a kind of mediumistic behavior. She began uttering strange, incoherent phrases to her husband, such as the ominous, "They are waiting for you," and, according to Crowley, making various fragmentary statements about "the child" and "Osiris."[17] This had apparently continued for several days, and Rose would soon reveal that it was the god Horus who had started to talk to her, and that he wanted to get in contact with Crowley.

On March 20, at the spring Equinox, Crowley arranged a ritual to invoke the Egyptian god in his particular form as Ra-Hoor-Khuit, the sun-god. During this ritual, Rose's apparent mediumship would reach its climax. Through her, Horus declared that the spring Equinox of 1904 signaled "the Equinox of the Gods," the moment in time where the previous "aeon" was to be replaced by a new one. More specifically, Osiris's two thousand years-old reign came to an end at the arrival of Horus's aeon, the aeon of "the Child." In Crowley's own interpretation of the event, he was now to establish contact with the "Secret Chiefs," the discarnate intelligences ruling the secret "Third Order" of the Golden Dawn. Despite their previous brief alliance during the tumultuous events of 1900, Crowley had fallen out with MacGregor Mathers, the earthly leader of the Order. Now, conveniently to say the least, Horus and the Secret Chiefs were calling upon Crowley to receive and devise new magical formulae and rituals suited for the New Aeon, and devise plans to destroy the old Order once and for all.[18] Over three days, from April 8 to April 10, Crowley would write the three chapters of The Book of The Law, making him the prophet of the New Aeon. This became the founding moment, and the foundation myth, of a new religious movement, Thelema.

As prophet of a new age, the Aeon of Horus, Crowley took great efforts to reform the magical and initiatory formulae of the now, in his view, outdated Golden Dawn. This led to new Thelemic versions of specific rituals taught in the Golden Dawn, such as the important magical rituals of the pentagram and hexagram, and naturally a drift of symbolic focus away from Osiris toward Horus.[19]

Crowley's vision of Thelema as a complete religious and magical philosophy took shape and solidified only several years after the unusual events in Cairo during the spring of 1904. In order to understand the place and function of magic in the work of Crowley, it is necessary to look somewhat closer at the ideas he developed for Thelema.

Magick for All

The Book of the Law and Crowley's numerous commentaries on it prophesize the end of "the Aeon of Osiris," a millennia-long period characterized by patriarchal and largely collectivist religions such as Christianity and Islam, and the coming of a new "Aeon of Horus" to replace it.[20] In this new aeon, a radical individualism is the new credo, and Thelema put forward as its only proper religion. Thelema's famous dictum is "Do What Thou Wilt," but one should quickly point out that this was not simply meant as a license to pursue any indulgence. Rather, Crowley's commentaries emphasized that it also implied the strictest possible discipline, since Thelemites are bound to discover their single "True Will" and follow it unconditionally.[21] This endeavor becomes the ultimate purpose of magic in the context of Thelema.

The True Will is said to transcend the subject's ordinary limitations for knowledge and self-knowledge, and magic is invoked as a tool for reaching this absolute knowledge of self. In Thelemic discourse the magical procedure that leads to knowledge of the True Will is variously referred to in alchemical and Hermetic terms as "the Great Work," or in a more mystical vein as the attainment of the "knowledge and conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel." Although various procedures should be possible, Crowley's preferred one was based on a seventeenth-century magical grimoire known as the Abramelin operation, from which the term Holy Guardian Angel was taken.[22]

With reference to this attainment, Crowley wrote that it > is the essential Work of every man; none other ranks with it either for personal progress or for power to help one's fellows. This unachieved, man is no more than the unhappiest and blindest of animals. He is conscious of his own incomprehensible calamity, and clumsily incapable of repairing it. Achieved, he is no less than the co-heir of Gods, a Lord of Light. He is conscious of his own consecrated course, and confidently ready to run it.[23]

Only when this True Will has been discovered can the magician begin to make correct choices in life, binding him or herself to it as prescribed in the doctrines of Thelema. Only at the point when one's True Will is known can the more general laws of "magick" which Crowley wrote up be followed, where it is defined as "the Science and Art of causing Change to occur in conformity with Will."[24] Indeed, magick, spelt with a "k" to differentiate it from previous "superstitious" interpretations, becomes a complete "form of life."[25]

Crowley's take on magic springs out of his Golden Dawn training, but it is taken in a direction of personal development, and the laying down of a new ethics and a new religion when coupled with the Thelemic project. Institutionally, this synthesis was embedded in two different structures. In 1907 Crowley founded his own magical Order together with George Cecil Jones, the A.·.A.·. (Astron Argon).[26] Officially launched with the first edition of the occult periodical The Equinox in 1909, this Order incorporated the grade structure and basic teachings of the Golden Dawn, but expanded it with Crowley's new take on magic as well as giving a central place for Thelema. Furthermore, its motto was "the Method of Science—the Aim of Religion," reflecting Crowley's insistence that his was a revised form of magic, adapted to conform to the methods and standards of science rather than the superstition characteristic of the earlier aeons.[27] Another important feature which differentiated the A.·.A.·. from the Golden Dawn was that it was not intended to function socially in the same way; instead, it should be a school of intense and focused magical training based on a teacher-pupil relation.

In the years leading up to the Great War of 1914 Crowley launched a campaign to spread Thelema to all branches of society, hoping to establish it as a political force to be reckoned with. For this goal, a secretive magical society such as the A.·.A.·. was inefficient; instead, Crowley availed himself of his newly acquired leading position in the German Neo-templar group Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.).[28] In a process initiated by the Order's "Outer Head" Theodor Reuss between 1910 and 1912, Crowley was set to rewriting the O.T.O.'s rituals and doctrine, streamlining the initiation outline and making the Order fully operable. However, he also took this opportunity to thoroughly "thelemize" the Order, making it a new and more practically oriented vessel for spreading Crowley's radical social and religious vision. In 1923 Crowley succeeded Reuss as international leader of the O.T.O. (he had headed the British branch up to that point) and more fully emphasized the Order's role for promulgating the "Law of Thelema" and working as a kind of political avant-garde for the new Thelemic world order.[29] The campaign failed badly, however, and Crowley left a largely dysfunctional and splintered Order when he died in 1947.[30]

With this admittedly very basic overview of the doctrines and institutions of Thelema and the place of magic within it, we can proceed to the main task of this chapter: placing Crowley in an emerging post-Golden Dawn discourse on Enochiana.

The Enochian World of Aleister Crowley

When it comes to the subject of Enochian magic, Crowley's role as Thelemic prophet did not primarily manifest in attempts to "thelemize" the system. In a sense, Crowley stayed largely within the Golden Dawn framework of interpretation, while moving beyond it primarily through a partial "return to the sources" and pioneering attempts to incorporate other parts of the original material into magical practice. As seen earlier, not only did the Golden Dawn invent their own readings and interpretations, but they also used only a small portion of the magic available from the original sources as their basis. Their fascination had been with the Great Table, which lent itself easily to a fourfold interpretational scheme in which the elements and the Tetragrammaton figured centrally. Meanwhile, the Heptarchic system and the system of the Aires and the various calls in the Adamic language were left unused. Although the latter were mentioned in the Golden Dawn curriculum, they do not seem to have been implemented practically and deployed in rituals. The most influential contribution Crowley would bring to the development of Enochian magic was indeed to explore and give an explanation for the Aires, or "Aethyrs." It is with him that we find the first attempts at a more or less consistent theory of these entities and their connection to the elemental magic of the Golden Dawn's Great Table.

The relation between the angels of the Great Table and those of the thirty Aethyrs seems to have fascinated the young Crowley already during his short but intense stay with the Golden Dawn. In his autobiography, Crowley described a crude and not entirely successful Enochian experiment that took place in 1899–1900:

> In bed, I invoked the Fire angels and spirits on the tablet, with names, etc., and the 6th Key. I then (as Harpocrates) entered my crystal. An angel, meeting me, told me, among other things, that they (of the tablets) were at war with the angels of the 30 Aethyrs, to prevent the squaring of the circle. I went with him unto the abodes of fire, but must have fallen asleep, or nearly so. Anyhow, I regained consciousness in a very singular state, half consciousness being there, and half here. I recovered and banished the Spirits, but was burning all over, and tossed restlessly about—very sleepy, but consumed of Fire![31]

Working of course entirely within the Golden Dawn framework, which he was still at this point learning to master, Crowley had summoned an elemental angel from the Great Table, while "scrying in the spirit vision." Met by the "astral form" of one of the angels of fire, he was told that a celestial war was being waged between what seems to be two distinct types of angelic beings: those of the elemental tablets of the Great Table, and those of the Aethyrs. A subtle hint to the natures of these differing classes of angels can also be extracted from this passage. Since the strife of the warring parties was over "the squaring of the circle," that ancient mathematical and mystical problem, with the elementals striving against it and the Aethyrs working for it, it seems reasonable to assume that Crowley imagined the Aethyrs to be rather more spiritually profound than the elemental angels. Their agenda in this vision was, as it were, to work mathematical miracles.

Crowley would use both magic and scholarship in his quest to understand and flesh out the cosmology of the Enochian system, which must undoubtedly have seemed like the most profound thing the Golden Dawn had to offer. We know that at one point, possibly already during his Golden Dawn training, Allan Bennett passed him a copy of the Inner Order instruction Book "H" to study. This book, which we have seen to be a copy of the Sloane 307 manuscript, amended and abridged by Westcott, would have been a part of the instructions above Crowley's grade at the point, and he should not officially have been able to study it. Nevertheless, as Rankine and Skinner's reproduction of Bennett's copy show, Crowley did have access to it and even added some notes to the text himself.[32]

The system described here, we remember, was one of ritual magical evocation for various defined purposes, closely following the functions sat down in Dee's originals. While it does not seem as though Crowley tried to experiment with that system at this point, he found opportunities to explore the more mysterious Aethyrs after he dissociated himself from the Golden Dawn and embarked on his travels. Perhaps intrigued by the small glimpse of information he had gathered in his experiment earlier that year quoted above, Crowley set out to explore the Aethyrs more closely after arriving in Mexico in the autumn of 1900.[33]

On November 14 and 17 Crowley sat down to scry the two "lowest" Aethyrs, "TEX" (the 30th) and "RII" (29th), by calling the nineteenth Enochian key.[34] The result, Crowley would later describe, was "mysterious and terrific in character. What I saw was not beyond my previous experience, but what I heard was as unintelligible to me as Blake to a Baptist."[35] In the words of his recent biographer Richard Kaczynski, Crowley's visions were "surrealistic, apocalyptic, and bear the stamp of his evangelical upbringing."[36] In his second attempt, for instance, Crowley saw an immense angel approaching, with eagle wings hiding all the heavens. The angel spoke in that recognizable ancient tone of fire and brimstone:

> Cursed, cursed be the Earth, for her iniquity is great. Oh Lord! Let Thy Mercy be lost in the great Deep! Open thine eyes of Flame and Light, O God, upon the wicked! Lighten thine Eyes! The Clamour of Thy Voice, let it smite down the Mountains![37]

After this the exploration of the Aethyrs would be discontinued for almost a decade, until his famous 1909 Algerian adventure.

Algeria, 1909

We shall now turn to the events in the desert of Algeria. On November 17, 1909, Crowley arrived at the sprawling north African city of Algiers together with his pupil and lover, the poet Victor Neuburg. The trip was claimed to be purely recreational in intent, but ended with Crowley reporting a set of twenty-eight visions, which would since rank among the most important sources of revealed doctrine in Thelema, second only to The Book of the Law itself.[38]

The visions and voices only manifested after Crowley found his old notebook from the Aethyric experiments in Mexico, almost a decade earlier. Despite denying premeditation of his new attempt to scry the Aethyrs, it is quite clear that Enochiana had not simply faded from Crowley's attention over the interceding years. In fact, several of his activities between 1900 and 1909 reveal a continued interest in the Enochian material. When Crowley edited Mathers's manuscript translation and abridgement of the Lesser Key of Solomon, or Goetia, in 1904, he added his own translation of the accompanying conjurations from English into the profound "Angelic language" of Enochian.[39] Even more important, unpublished sources show that Crowley engaged in a close study of the original Dee material just prior to his departure with Neuburg to Algeria. On October 30, 1909, Crowley wrote in a letter to his A.·.A.·. companion J. F. C. Fuller that he had been doing research into the Enochian documents at the Bodleian Library in Oxford.[40] This is significant considering Crowley's claim that there was no premeditation behind the magical experiments that followed only a few months after his research trip.[41] As it turns out, Crowley had planned to include a longer essay expounding on the Enochian system for his new occult review, The Equinox, already during the summer of 1909. In fact, it was while looking for his old Enochian tablets (and a pair of skis) in the attic during that summer that Crowley rediscovered the original manuscript of The Book of the Law—an anecdote often told in the Thelemic literature.

The trips to Oxford and Algeria were part of the same research project into Enochiana; the first scholarly and theoretical, the second practical and experiential.[42] The overall project did amount in two works which have since become classics of the modern Enochian literature, published a few years later.[43] As I will argue, the trademark of Crowley's approach consisted in innovation grounded in a personal, experiential exploration of the system, only occasionally restrained by a scholarly reassessment of sources.

Being the first magician after the Golden Dawn to fully combine archival research with practical experiments in Enochian magic, Crowley also seems to have been the first to experience the post–Golden Dawn authenticity problem. This may, indeed, have happened during his Oxford research trip. In Oxford Crowley had the opportunity to study Elias Ashmole's copies of Dee's "revealed books," including the system of the Aethyrs portrayed in Liber Scientiae, studiously presented in Ashmole's hand.[44] Perhaps it was here that Crowley discovered the "most discomforting disenchantment" about the system of the Aethyrs, namely that the original document seemed to attribute the entities simply to "aires" or "climes" of the world, corresponding to angels governing various geographical regions and peoples.[45]

As was mentioned earlier, Crowley did not favor this interpretation himself, even after being confronted with and recognizing it. This can be seen in the specific editorial choices he took when finally publishing his exposition of Enochian magic in The Equinox in 1912. Not only did Crowley omit references to the anomalous Liber Scientiae when presenting the Aethyrs in his classic essay "Liber Chanokh,"[46] but he also chose, conveniently, to "omit for the present consideration of the parts of the earth to which they are stated to correspond."[47] Instead of that stated correspondence, Crowley went on to discuss "the Thirty Aethyrs whose dominion extendeth in ever-widening circles without and beyond the Watch Towers of the Universe."[48] In doing so, Crowley is seen to follow an interpretation more consistent with the Golden Dawn tradition, viewing the Aethyrs as subtle spiritual layers outside of the elemental realm, accessible with the use of the nineteenth Enochian call and certain techniques for scrying in the astral.

The experiments in Algeria were indeed an opportunity to work from within this frame of interpretation. The method Crowley employed in the desert with Neuburg was to use a golden topaz stone set in a wooden Calvary cross as a focus for scrying, in Crowley's own words playing a part "not unlike that of the looking-glass in the case of Alice."[49] While gazing into the spiritual realm of a given Aethyr he reported being filled with visions and voices speaking to him, the appearance of angels and other spiritual creatures—as had been the case already in Mexico in 1900. All of these sights and sounds he dictated to Neuburg on the spot, who was charged with writing the whole spectacle down. The outcome of these visionary episodes was published as a special supplement to The Equinox in 1911, under the title of The Vision and the Voice.[50]

The actions recorded were indeed spectacular. In a recent reconstruction, Richard Kaczynski describes the method of obtaining the visions in the following way:

> A.C. removed his scarlet cavalry [sic] cross, a pin inset with a huge topaz inscribed with a rose cross. He gazed into the stone while concentrating on his third eye, the ajna chakra, and, when he felt prepared to receive a vision, he began the 28th Call in the Angelic Language: "Madrax da-es perafe BAG cahis mihaolzed sanit caosgo odeh fisisah balzed izedrase Iaidah!"[51]

The topaz stone in his necklace rose-cross was used as a substitute for the "shewstone," which Edward Kelley had used to commune with the spirits. An active and ordered use of the imagination, furthermore, played an important part in accessing these ostensible magical "realms." As Crowley noted in his Confessions:

> I had learned not to trouble myself to travel to any desired place in the astral body. I realized that space was not a thing in itself, merely a convenient category (one of many such) by reference to which we > can distinguish objects from each other. When I say I was in any Aethyr, I simply mean in the state characteristic of, and peculiar to, its nature.[52]

Not only does this quote show Crowley applying a Kantian perspective to the magical theories of astral travel, but it also tells something of the nature of the visionary experiences. He would retain his spatial and temporal awareness while "drawing down" these visions to the scrutiny of his imagination. "Remaining in his body," Crowley would describe and speak out in words the visions he had to Victor Neuburg, who promptly wrote it down in his notebook.[53] As a general rule, one Aethyr was invoked in this way each day while the companions marched across the desert, with some days performing two, others none. Each of these sessions typically lasted about an hour or so.

In the visions Crowley would encounter angels and heavenly beings, taken through initiations and shown to "the City of the Pyramids," where the highest adepts dwelled. Content-wise, the bulk of the visions were close to the ones reported nine years earlier in Mexico. There were some exceptions, however. Sometimes the "visions" would take on an astonishing complexity, and even involve strange synaesthetic experiences. This sensual richness can be found in the invocation of the twenty-first Aethyr on November 29. In the transcription of this session, Crowley encounters an enthroned but invisible deity, which tries to communicate with him primarily through taste sensations:

> He [the deity] is trying to make me understand by putting tastes in my mouth, very rapidly one after the other. Salt, honey, sugar, asafoetida, bitumen, honey again, some taste that I don't know at all; garlic, something very bitter like nux vomica, another taste, still more bitter; lemon, cloves, rose-leaves, honey again; the juice of some plant, like a dandelion, I think; honey again, salt, a taste something like phosphorous, honey, laurel, a very unpleasant taste which I don't know, coffee, then a burning taste, then a sour taste that I don't know. All these tastes issue from his eyes; he signals them.[54]

Later, Crowley connected these tastes with astrological and Kabbalistic symbolism. In an extreme example of the kind of Kabbalistic hermeneutic Crowley would recommend for his Scientific Illuminism, these translations led to a "decipherment" of the deity's signals, even revealing an apparent message in text![55]

The most enduring event was nevertheless the apocalyptic encounter in the desert with the demon Choronzon. As we learned in chapter 2, the name of this demon comes from Dee and Kelley's records. There its name had been spelled "Coronzom," which in turn morphed into "Coronzon" in Casaubon's published version of the same manuscript. As mentioned in that chapter, Crowley's spelling betrays the influence of the Sloane 307 manuscript, which, we saw in chapter 3, the Golden Dawn had used as one of its original sources.

Spelling and provenance aside, the demon fully entered the mythology of modern occultism following Crowley and Neuburg's invocation of the tenth Aethyr, performed December 6, at night, "in a lonely valley of fine sand, in the desert near Bou-Saada."[56] Due to the somewhat cryptic, fragmentary, and partially conflicting records of this action, it is hard to tell what really went on this evening; on any reading, it was definitely different from the earlier invocations.[57]

Through the previous visions Crowley had learned that he was about to cross the so-called Abyss, an abstract Kabbalistic concept designed to signify the "space" between the three upper sefirot and the lower seven, or the unbridgeable space between godliness and manifested individuation. Passing through the Abyss meant the destruction of one's own ego in order to attain a state where one's individuation dissolves and mystical union is attained.[58] In Crowley's system of magic, this crossing is correlated with the so-called dark night of the soul, a term originating with the sixteenth-century Christian mystic St. John of the Cross. In the visions of the eleventh Aethyr (the one immediately preceding the tenth, since they are invoked from the last to the first), Crowley was told that the crossing of the Abyss involved an encounter with the malicious demon Choronzon, who resided there.[59]

Knowing that this encounter was at hand, the method of working was changed accordingly. A complete temple for ritual evocation was set up, in accordance with the standard methods provided by the grimoire tradition of the Goetia.[60] A protective circle was built out of stones, enforced with divine names, and east of it a triangle was erected, where the demon was to appear.[61] Although the records are unclear about this, it seems likely that after Crowley and Neuburg had performed the preparatory banishing rituals Neuburg stayed in the center of the circle and took the role of magus, while Crowley took his place in the triangle itself. About to take up position as a material basis for the spirit to materialize in, Crowley proceeded with the invocation of the Enochian Aethyr as usual. Instead of having a vision, however, he was now "possessed" by the demon Choronzon himself, who would speak through him and threaten and test Neuburg's skills and willpower.[62]

The account that followed is somewhat confusing. While Neuburg stands in the circle and commands the demon/Crowley to speak, the demon is said to take on different forms and shapes; variously, Neuburg reported to have been encountered by a girl he had fallen in love with, by Crowley himself, and by a snake with a human head.[63] It would seem that these figures appeared outside of the circle and the triangle, attempting to distract and overcome the mage by appealing to his various emotions. Even more exceptionally, Choronzon the demon would at one point start to talk very fast through Crowley, spouting gibberish, with the goal of keeping the scribe occupied with writing everything down. While Neuburg was busy keeping his records, the demon/Crowley would throw sand on the circle in order to eradicate it and break the magician's protective barrier.[64] Just when Neuburg became aware of the scheme, the demon, purportedly in the form of a ferocious "savage," leapt upon him, biting for his neck with sharp fangs. Only by yelling divine names and stabbing the demon with his magically consecrated dagger did Neuburg repel the attacker and confine him to his triangle once again.[65] What actually occurred during these dramatic minutes remains unclear; however, Lawrence Sutin is probably right in pointing out that the most reasonable solution is that Crowley, behaving possessed, actually jumped upon Neuburg the magician.[66]

No doubt, these experiences made a great impact on Crowley and his followers. Alex Owen even argues that Crowley's personal and material problems in the aftermath of the operations in the desert are a sign that his "crossing of the Abyss" was in fact a failure: the demon had consumed his soul, and consequently he lost his grip on reality.[67] It certainly looks awkward when the academic historian passes judgment on the success or failure of a rite like this. It even seems that Owen, in her search for a psychologized interpretation of Crowley and his magic, is driven to pass over or ignore Crowley's own interpretation of the rituals' significance and relation to later events. In Confessions Crowley noted that his later problems in the "real world" were actually an expected outcome of a successful crossing: "Part of the effect of crossing the Abyss is that it takes a long time to connect the Master with what is left below the Abyss."[68] The disorientation resulting from the attainment of magical genius may look a lot like personal disintegration. In Crowley's understanding there is a fine line distinguishing prophets from madmen. For himself, he claimed nothing short of prophethood.

When heading back for Britain, Crowley reported in a letter that "we have the Apocalypse beaten to a frazzle. . . . This is the holiday-holyday of my whole life."[69] As we shall see, the apocalyptic madness in the desert would indeed lead to specific doctrinal innovations within the religion he revealed to the world.

The Enochian Aethyrs and Thelemic Religion: Crowley on Authenticity

In 1911 Crowley designed an authoritative curriculum for his magical order A.·.A.·., based on a classification of four different kinds of texts, ranging from A through D.[70] Each class of literature reflected both the method of production and the authority of the texts belonging to it. Class A documents were considered "received" works which had the highest authority; their real authorship should be attributed to "the Secret Chiefs" of the Great White Brotherhood rather than the material person Crowley. The Book of the Law was the main representative of this category. The collection of visions resulting from the Enochian experiments with the Aethyrs, however, were classed as both A and B. The A status reflects that the document was held to contain material considered "received," while it also brought commentaries reflecting on that received material.[71]

The A.·.A.·. syllabus furthermore gave a short note for each text, describing its particular relevance. The description for The Vision and the Voice declared that the doctrinal content conveyed by the entities in the visions was uniquely authentic:

> Besides being the classical account of the thirty Aethyrs and a model of all visions, the cries of the Angels should be regarded as accurate, and the doctrine of the function of the Great White Brotherhood understood as the foundation of the Aspiration of the Adept. The account of the Master of the Temple should in particular be taken as authentic. The instruction in the 8th Aethyr pertains to Class D, "i.e." it is an Official Ritual, and the same remarks apply to the account of the proper method of invoking Aethyrs given in the 18th Aethyr.[72]

The realms of the Aethyrs accessed by Crowley are considered so spiritually sublime that information acquired there is given a uniquely profound status. Visions endowed by Enochian angels about particular spiritual issues, such as the offices of a "Master of the Temple" (i.e., the eighth degree in Crowley's magical system, and the third highest one), are to "be taken as authentic," while other commands form the basis for official rituals within Crowley's magical system. Additionally, important aspects of what would become a Thelemic theology were revealed by these entities, and expressed through rituals and creeds.[73]

One clear example is found in the Gnostic mass which Crowley wrote up for his Gnostic Catholic Church (Ecclesia Gnostica Catholica) in 1913.[74] Crowley designed the mass as an exoteric celebration of the esoteric secrets of the O.T.O., making the sexual symbolism of that secret one of the major themes of the mass' liturgy. By extension, the mass became, and still remains, the most central religious ceremony of Thelema today.[75] What interests us here is that much of the sexual theme of the mass's liturgy centers on two godlike entities which are not found in The Book of the Law: the male entity "Chaos" and the female goddess "Babalon."[76] Both of these entities were introduced properly for the first time in the Enochian visions.[77] In these visions, the two "deities" or "entities" are interlinked with certain Kabbalistic representations from the Tree of Life. In the fourth Aethyr, Chaos is attributed to the sefirah hokmah ("wisdom"), and Babalon to binah ("understanding"), that is, to the second and third sefira respectively.[78] The two deities are seen as the very first manifestation of a dual principle, with a male and female polarity. Thus, this is also a primeval cosmological manifestation of sexuality. In the liturgy of the Gnostic mass, Babalon is described as a universal womb, while Chaos is "the sole viceregent of the Sun." The implication of this is the sort of solar-phallicism associated with Richard Payne Knight, Hargrave Jennings, and others; a religious stance that is central to the mysteries of the O.T.O.[79] Through Crowley's experiential exploration of the Enochian system, and the subsequent and accompanying innovations made to it, Enochiana has become centrally inscribed in Thelemic religion.

Crowley's take on the Aethyrs is important in another respect as well, namely, for the initiatic quality that he attributes to working magic with these sublime astral entities. Crowley significantly claimed to have received his initiation into the Magister Templi degree of the A.·.A.·. while traveling in these occult lands, and we have seen that the description of its function given in the records later became official teaching in the order.[80] The initiatic theme has had a significant reception in occultism after Crowley, as we will see in later chapters of this book, but it also played an important role in Crowley's quest for legitimating his position in the broader occultist milieu. We have already seen that he claimed The Vision and the Voice to be "the classical account of the thirty Aethyrs," and the "model of all visions." Combined with the fact that Crowley was the first to incorporate the Enochian system of the Aethyrs into modern occultism, this has effected the perpetuation of his interpretation of the system at the expense of the original, but by some standards perhaps less spiritually sublime, system portrayed in Dee's Liber scientiae.

* * *

At this point we should return to what was mentioned earlier, namely, that Crowley was the first magician after the Golden Dawn to encounter and struggle with "the authenticity problem" as formulated in the previous chapter. It is also in his work that we first encounter the full play of strategies that we have introduced and discussed in chapter 4. Dissatisfied with the Golden Dawn curriculum, Crowley took it upon himself to do research into the original sources. When the evidence of the sources he researched conflicted with the perennialist outlook of the Golden Dawn's frame of interpretation, Crowley would nevertheless favor the latter. At the same time, he is at several instances seen to give more or less pragmatic arguments when the authenticity problem arises. Writing about the Enochian language, Crowley first assures his readers that this is an authentic language:

> The conjurations of Dr. Dee are in a language called Angelic, or Enochian. Its source has hitherto baffled research, but it is a language and not a jargon, for it possesses a structure of its own, and there are traces of grammar and syntax. In any case it is probably corrupt.[81]

But then the argument suddenly switches from authenticity to pragmatics:

> However this may be, it works. Even the beginner finds that "things happen" when he uses it: and this is an advantage—or disadvantage!—shared by no other type of language. The rest need skill. This needs prudence![82]

From this twofold argumentation we first read quite explicitly that the power of the Enochian language qua magical language is not conventional or pragmatic as such; that is, Enochian is "real" and not simply "a jargon." But in the absence of definite evidence, there is an appeal to the ostensible fact that "it works." At the same time, it is also clear that the language is conceived to work because of its sublime nature. Thus, the pragmatic appeal to experience does not entirely sidestep the issue of provenance; instead, the experiential argument is designed to support the exceptional claims about the language and system.

As an example, "the angels themselves" hinted to a perennialist interpretation in Crowley's visions of the Aethyrs. Referring to Edward Kelley, Crowley was told that "this is a holy mystery, and he that did first attain to reveal the alphabet thereof [i.e., of the Angelic language], perceived not one ten-thousandth part of the fringe that is upon its vesture."[83] The very provenance of Enochiana lies outside of this world, and its profundity greatly surpasses the insight of even the first historical "receivers," Kelley and Dee. Crowley's legitimization of the system rests in the end on perennialism, asserting its highly enchanted quality. Furthermore, the specific kind of perennialism adopted opens up for continued revelations, which may supersede those of Dee and Kelley and serve as basis for revisions in the system. As we saw already, the continued Enochian prophetic tradition was conveniently perceived as resting in the hands of the prophet of the new aeon and Thelema himself.

A Note on the Crowleyan Heritage

Crowley left a magical heritage that may be viewed as exclusively Thelemic, involving trafficking with idiosyncratic entities, and the performance of rituals that were revised or entirely invented by him, and most importantly, embedded within a Thelemic framework in which the most central aims are the discovery of the "True Will" and the attainment of "Knowledge and Conversation with the Holy Guardian Angel." Examples of such explicitly "Thelemic magic" may be found in Lon Milo DuQuette's The Magick of Thelema (1994), Rodney Orpheus's Abrahadabra (1995), both of which seek to provide a more or less unified and accessible picture, and more recently in J. Daniel Gunther's Initiation in the Aeon of the Child (2009).[84]

Within this "Thelemic school" of ritual magic, one does not generally find one specific take on Enochiana, as an independent and stable system. Rather, elements of Enochian magic are incorporated into other systems in a synthetic approach similar to that of the Golden Dawn. Perhaps the clearest and most grand scale example of this is the tendency to attribute the Aethyrs to the paths and sefirot of the Kabbalistic "Tree of Life,"[85] and the widespread opinion that the Aethyrs represent an "Enochian path-working,"[86] comparable in all respects to the practice of Kabbalistic path-workings popularized through the Golden Dawn.[87] In addition is the quite common conception of Enochian, both elemental and Aethyric, as an initiatory tool. This is prefigured in Crowley, who, as we have seen, claimed to have his Master of the Temple initiation through the Aethyrs. The initiatory theme is clearly present, among other places, in a recent publication by the Thelemite "Frater W.I.T." (Scott Brush), tellingly entitled Enochian Initiation (2006).[88]

But Crowley's influence on these points reaches far beyond the borders of Thelema. It is not without justification to claim that a kind of Weberian "routinization of charisma" has taken place within modern occultism at large with regard to Crowley and his innovations. His "charismatic" revelations are taken as authoritative in several different movements. As part of this general routinization, Crowley's experiments with the Aethyrs have become paradigmatic in other occult currents. Crowley's influence on later developments of modern Enochian magic has therefore been significant, and we will see it again in due course.

6
Angels of Satan

The critical reader would perhaps find a reputedly angelic language embedded in self-styled Satanism to constitute a supreme incongruity. Nevertheless, when Anton Szandor LaVey (born Howard Stanton Levey; 1930–1997) published the Satanic Bible at the close of 1969, the Enochian calls, taken from the version published by Crowley in The Equinox, occupied its closing section. Instead of viewing this inclusion as an inconsistency stemming from rampant eclecticism I submit that it should be viewed as part of a strategy for positioning oneself in the magic current after the Golden Dawn, while maintaining a high degree of friction with it. In LaVey's satanic version of the Enochian calls, every reference to "God" or "Heaven" in the English translations had been substituted for the suitable infernal counterparts, "Satan" and "Hell."[1] Furthermore, as the Satanic worldview draws heavily from secular-materialist outlooks, LaVey gives interpretations of magical efficacy that are far less metaphysically charged than those considered so far. As we shall see in the present chapter, the "satanization" of Enochiana infuriated certain prominent figures in the established esoteric milieu, notably Israel Regardie.

The emergence of a satanic variety of Enochian magic added significantly to the contestation of that purportedly angelic system. Through the present chapter we will see how these contests for legitimacy and interpretive authority emerge as intrinsically bound to a wider struggle between various groups, people, and institutions in the occultural milieu. Modern Satanism emerged out of a milieu where occultists of various shades were already deeply entwined in polemics about the nature of various occult and magical practices. Particularly in the United States, the various splinter groups of the Golden Dawn were fighting among themselves, and with the remaining and new Thelemites. In the first part of this chapter I will take a closer look at some of the struggles over the nature and authenticity of Enochian magic in the middle of these clashes. Against this background I go on to place special emphasis on how Satanism's ambiguous relation to these magical groups, and the wider cultural impulse from Western esotericism, formed the interpretation of the Enochian system given by LaVey.

But this is not all that controversy has to do with reception and reinterpretation. Enochiana did not only play a central part in polemics with external groups and spokespersons—the "esoteric Others" of Satanism—but it also featured centrally in the foremost doctrinal split within early Satanism, namely between Anton LaVey's Church of Satan and Michael Aquino's splinter group, the Temple of Set. This schism, as we will see, had organizational reasons as well as doctrinal ones. In place of the rationalistic outlook of LaVey, Aquino came to develop an increasingly more esoteric worldview—a feature that is readily apparent in his interpretation and use of the Enochian system as well. I will begin, however, by going back to the significant context provided by the fall of the Golden Dawn, and the many controversies arising there over the "correct" interpretation of the Enochian material.

Background: Schismatic Golden Dawn Groups and Enochian Controversies

Crowley and the A.·.A.·. was far from the only trajectory carrying on the magical paradigm of the Golden Dawn, and not even the most direct one. When the dust began to settle after the breakup of the original Golden Dawn, three main schismatic groups continued the legacy in various forms: The Independent and Rectified Rite of the Golden Dawn, headed by A. E. Waite; the Stella Matutina, led by R. W. Felkin; and the continued lineage of MacGregor Mathers and those (including, from ca. 1908, J. W. Brodie-Innes) still loyal to his leadership, the Alpha et Omega.[2]

While it falls well outside the present scope to deal in detail with these various splinter groups,[3] I wish to focus on a specific case: a controversy that sheds interesting light on conceptualizations of magic and occult entities in the modern age generally, and on Enochiana especially. Furthermore, this helps us frame Enochiana within its relevant discursive and polemical context.

Before I introduce the controversy, there are a couple of remarks to be made about the various splinter groups that form the context of it. One should know, for instance, that A. E. Waite's group, The Independent and Rectified Rite, aimed to extinguish the practice of ritual magic altogether, and instead focus deeply on a sort of Christian mysticism.[4] As such, it is of less interest for the history and development of Enochian magic. Stella

Matutina, on the other hand, sought to continue the magical practice. It was papers from this faction that were published by Regardie (who had joined in 1934) in the late 1930s. It is also through a particular lineage of the Stella Matutina that knowledge of Enochian chess, discussed in an earlier chapter, was transmitted. Regardie complained in his Golden Dawn that none of the adepts he ever met could give any sufficient answers as to what were the rules and function of this most esoteric board game.[5] His major problem was that R. W. Felkin, who was the leader and most accomplished magician of this lineage, had moved to New Zealand during the Great War. In 1916 Felkin took up permanent residence there, and established the Smaragdine Thalasses Temple of the Stella Matutina.[6] It was from recovered papers and conversations with members of this group that Chris Zalewski, many decades later, was able to reconstruct the four-handed divinatory esoteric chess game, later published as Enochian Chess of the Golden Dawn (1994).[7]

The Alpha et Omega (A.O.) group similarly sought to continue the magical heritage of the original order under MacGregor Mathers's leadership. This group would become the meeting place for several influential characters in twentieth-century occultism, and give birth to a couple of important offshoot groups. Two of the characters were Violet Mary Firth (1890–1946), better known under her occult pen name Dion Fortune, and Paul Foster Case (1884–1954). Fortune would found her Fraternity of the Inner Light in 1922, after falling out with Moina Mathers, whereas Case, also falling out with Moina that year, founded the Builders of the Adytum (B.O.T.A.) based on the A.O.'s New York temple. The B.O.T.A. soon conducted one of the most successful occult correspondence courses to that time.[8]

Both Fortune and Case were initiated into the A.O. in the wake of MacGregor Mathers's death in 1918, under Moina Mathers's somewhat clumsy attempts at keeping it running.[9] Bringing up various criticisms of both leadership and doctrine, they contributed to the disruption of the Order and Moina's loss of leadership. What is interesting for us is that, in Case's criticism of the Order, we find a series of remarks concerning the Enochian system of magic, on which he held a view that was quite untypical.

"Disintegrations of Mind or Body": P. F. Case and the Spiritual Dangers of Enochiana

Probably due to increasingly diverting views on occult theories and practices Case, based in the A.O.'s New York temple, started to drift away from Moina Mathers in Paris. According to the correspondence they exchanged in the early 1920s, it appears that Moina was concerned with some of Case's teachings, especially on what she termed "the Sex Theory" and "sex matters."[10] It has been suggested that Case was divulging occult secrets concerning what may have been a sexual magical theory belonging to the highest degrees of the Second Order.[11] However, if such a theory really existed within the Golden Dawn at this time, any direct evidence of it, such as notes or records of experiments, are lost. The lack of any definite evidence may be reason enough to doubt that there ever was a Golden Dawn sexual magic. It is, perhaps, more likely that Moina reacted to Case's attempts to introduce such theories, which were, after all, quite abundant in the occult milieu of the times, into his local A.O. temple. At any rate, as the dispute continued and increased in gravity, Case declared his resignation from the order in 1922, while Moina, on her part, threw him out.[12]

If teachings of a sexual nature were one of the diverging points of Case's teachings, it was not the only one. Interesting insights into Case's thoughts on the Golden Dawn teachings and tradition is found in a letter correspondence between him and Israel Regardie dating from 1933.[13] This correspondence is also of great importance since it shows Regardie's search for answers about the Golden Dawn one year prior to his admittance into the Stella Matutina. He had then served as Crowley's secretary since 1928, and knew the Golden Dawn material through the publications in The Equinox. He had even reproduced and published some of this material himself in 1932, a publication that was scorned by the A.O. while somewhat ambivalently welcomed by the Stella Matutina.[14]

Case's letters to Regardie spell out the view of the former on the legitimacy of the original Golden Dawn, and defend the most drastic changes done by his own American B.O.T.A. Particularly, his defense involved a stronger focus on the Rosicrucian heritage, the Kabbalah, and the Tarot, while the Enochian symbolism so present in the original G.D. had been removed entirely.[15] Case's arguments for removing the Enochian system and magic altogether were several, ranging from the fear of metaphysical devastation to a curious stance of purism. The latter is succinctly expressed in the following formulation:

> I submit that "orthodoxy" simply means "correct teaching" and that the burden of my criticism is that MacGregor (and nobody else) introduced alien elements into the stream which seems to have come to us through Mackenzie, Levi and their contemporaries. In eliminating the Enochian elements, we in America have lost nothing of practical effectiveness.[16]

The "correct teaching" Case refers to is obviously what he conceived of as a "pure" Rosicrucianism. As he further explained to Regardie, Case preferred to play safe "by eliminating from the rituals something that is certainly suspect as coming from a dubious source, by no means clearly connected with 'Rosicrucianism.'"[17] It seems that Case either did not know, or did not consider, that the Enochian elements of the Golden Dawn actually came through the allegedly Rosicrucian Cipher MS; unless he was happy to contend that the MS was fraudulent. For the original Golden Dawn the Enochian material was very much a part of the Rosicrucian heritage, playing for instance a major role in the Vault and Adeptus Minor ceremonies, with all their emphasis on the Rosicrucian theme. There, the candidate was told that the Enochian language was part of the knowledge collected by Christian Rosenkreutz, thus preceding Dee and Kelley by several centuries.[18] Today it may of course also be added that blaming Mathers for eclecticism while regarding Mackenzie and Lévi as representing a "pure" current is somewhat ironic; we now know that it was probably Mackenzie himself who was responsible for introducing the "alien element" of Enochian into modern occultism through the Cipher MS, and certainly Lévi can be attributed with the role of initiating the mode of "programmatic syncretism" so prominent in modern occultism, including the Golden Dawn.[19]

At any rate, Rosicrucian purism was not the only basis for Case's reservations. When he asserted that his American branch had not lost anything "of practical effectiveness" by leaving out the Enochian elements, he did not mean that Enochian magic was without any magical potency. On the contrary; Case warned Regardie that he personally believed the performance of G.D. Enochian magic was responsible for "serious disintegrations of mind or body" in as many as twenty-five or more magicians that he had known.[20] The most famous example of this unfortunate consequence Case found in Aleister Crowley; the "personal shipwreck" and "disintegration of that great genius" he attributed to the practice of Enochian magic. Here he was probably referring to the experiments with the Aethyrs in the Algerian desert, the negative magical efficacy of which we have even seen defended in a semiserious way by a later academic commentator.[21] Perhaps contradictorily, Case did most certainly assert the magical efficacy of Enochian, even though in other places he hinted toward the possible artificiality of the Enochian language by stating that "it is not beyond the power of man to invent a coherent language."[22]

Case does seem to go in somewhat diverging directions in his criticism of Enochian, sometimes insinuating that it may be a fraudulent fiction produced by Edward Kelley and reintroduced by Mathers, and other times accentuating the spiritual danger he associated with working it. At any rate it seems to me that the criticism of possible fraud is primarily to be read as a criticism leveled against the perennialist interpretation of Enochian; what Case clearly does, besides expressing his fears of the system's effect, is to historicize and situate it in the context of Dee and Kelley once more, something which for him withdraws it from any Rosicrucian connections. Thus, with reference to my discussion of the authenticity problem, we do actually find Case to represent a sort of historical purism. Interestingly, this is not only a "negative purism," discrediting Enochiana for not being Rosicrucian. Case also writes in the letters to Regardie that one of the actual reasons why the system is potentially dangerous is that, in the Golden Dawn tradition, it is mixed and fused with so many other systems:

> If the Order's method of evoking the elementals were purely Enochian, then I should have nothing to say. But since it is a mixture of the Enochian language and tablets with other, and probably older, materials, it seems not unlikely to me that such success as attends the use of the rituals is due to the real effectiveness of the various pentagrams, etc., than to anything else.[23]

Following in this vein and making sure that the problem is the danger he associates with the eclecticism of Golden Dawn Enochian magic, Case reassures that "my objections are not to ceremonial. It is only that I have had so much experience of the subtle dangers of corrupt ceremonial."[24]

The B.O.T.A., which still exists today with headquarter in Los Angeles and groups in Europe, New Zealand, and the United States, still adheres considerably to Case's teachings, and does not endorse Enochian magic in any form.[25]

Regardie and the Stella Matutina: Some Golden Dawn Perennialist Responses

The Golden Dawn had cast itself as the modern executor of a perennial Rosicrucian tradition, of which the Enochian material was a significant part. A consequence of this perennialism has been that interpretations of the material that were close to the original Renaissance meaning became way too mundane to meet the occultists' expectations of profound, perennial wisdom. As we saw in chapter 3, this led Regardie to edit out the one single document in the Golden Dawn Enochian corpus that described magical practices in accord with what we find in the original sources. This stance was not directly compatible with an emphasis on the actual historical origin of the material in John Dee's diaries; thus, in addition to the case of Regardie's editing, we also find that information on the provenance itself is completely left out of the Golden Dawn initiation rituals, in favor of more esoteric historiographies. This seems to have worked well in the heyday of the Order, but how to defend the practice and the perennialist interpretation when the purist attack has been made and is gaining ground in a more—as far as occultism goes—public sphere? And, given the Rosicrucian myth, how to explain that the Enochian material emerged for the first time with Dee and Kelley at the close of the sixteenth century, decades before the appearance of the Rosicrucian manifestos?

One particularly esoteric response has been to set "clairvoyants" on the case, to scry the "correct" history of the Angelic system. In his publication of Stella Matutina material in 1937–1940 Regardie included the results of one such approach.[26] Here, the Order's clairvoyants claimed that Dee and Kelley had gained access to the Enochian system only when they were in Central Europe, through contact with alleged Rosicrucian centers in Germany, Austria, and Bohemia.[27] Of course, this claim does not convince the historian, nor a purist with a good overview of the original sources, since it clearly leaves out the accounts given by Dee and Kelley themselves (the reception of the Enochian material started already in London, for instance). In addition, historically there was no Rosicrucianism before the seventeeth century, even though the emic historiography of modern esoteric movements commonly takes the claims of the Fama Fraternitatis at face value, and hence dates the foundation of Rosicrucianism to the legendary frater Christian Rosenkreutz in the fifteenth century.[28] The Golden Dawn was certainly no exception. The claim made by still other clairvoyants referenced by Regardie—that Enochian magic is part of a system originally practiced in Atlantis—is no more sober.[29]

Another strategy was to emphasize the importance of the Enochian language, with the claim that it really was a genuine, "natural language." If this could be established, one could start looking for evidence of it predating Dee and Kelley. An interesting document taking this approach is one of the so-called "side lectures" for the grade of Zelator, written by J. W. Brodie-Innes.[30] His speech directed at the new Zelatores reached aspirants who had just recently been introduced to the perplexing letter squares of the Earth Tablet in their initiation ritual. In the lecture, Brodie-Innes explained that the letters on the tablet they had seen had been transliterated from another script, "one of the most ancient symbols in the world."[31] The reference is clearly to the Enochian alphabet. He continued to reveal that the language in question was "a great curiosity merely from the linguistic point of view," because he claimed it was a real language, with real syntax, grammar, and semantics, but yet one that was not proved to have been spoken "by mortal man."[32] Brodie-Innes went on to suggest that it was a primordial, but "hidden," language, never known in entirety in historical times:

> We find traces of it on rock-cut pillars and on temples, apparently as old as the world. We find traces of it in the sacred mysteries of some of the oldest religions in the world, but we find no trace of it ever having been used as a living language, and we hold the tradition that it is the Angelic secret language.[33]

The implication is that the language has been known and used by the angels since creation, while drops of it have become known to humanity through history and distorted through time. Brodie-Innes gave one example:

> The high priest of Jupiter in the earliest days of Rome was called Flamen Dialis, and you will find that the most learned are utterly ignorant as to whence came the word Dialis. They will tell you that it is ancient Etruscan, but beyond that they can tell you nothing. It is not the genitive of any known nominative. On that Tablet (Earth) you will see that the second of the Three Holy Secret Names of God is Dial.[34]

By insinuating that Etruscan words are derived from Enochian, one holds on to the idea that the genealogy of the Enochian language itself is the best evidence for its primordial provenance.

If Brodie-Innes laid the foundation of this line of argument, it has been frequently raised again by others eager to defend the perennial status of Enochian. Crowley held the same position in his Confessions,[35] and Israel Regardie elaborated on the idea by providing what he considered to be further evidence. In Regardie's view, an Enochian word could be found that bears a resemblance to a Sanskrit word of similar meaning. Linking this with linguistic theories prominent at the time, of a proto-Indo-European language, he found himself able to corroborate one of the more imaginative speculations made by the Order's clairvoyants. If there is a language "which lies behind Sanskrit," Regardie reasoned, then, "according to the philosophy of the Ancient Wisdom" it has to be "that of Atlantis."[36] With one single word sounding similar to a Sanskrit term, Regardie argued that "the Enochian or Angelical language bears several strong points of resemblance to"[37] the assumed Atlantean language. How "strong" and convincing such evidence really is can obviously be disputed; at any rate the line of argumentation and the strategy for defending "the primordial language thesis" is well worth noting.

In their structure, these arguments, whether they hold the Enochian language to be "the hidden Angelic language," of which a few words have been "leaked" to humanity, or whether they, like Regardie's, advance an esoteric historiography in the guise of a scientific linguistic theory, of descent and gradual corruption from Atlantis, through ancient languages such as Sanskrit and Etruscan, all seem to agree on one thing: that Enochian did not really originate with Dee and Kelley, but remains part of a most arcane system of perennial philosophy. With recourse to Olav Hammer's mode of analysis, this can easily be seen as a variety of a "rhetoric of rationality." With this line of argumentation, there is an attempt to sidestep the authenticity problem posed by the purist approach, by arguing for a much more ancient provenance than Dee and Kelley.

Satanic Angelologies:

Satanism between Esoteric Discourse and Secular Iconoclasm

The Enochian discourse was already full of controversies by the mid-twentieth century. As we shall now see, these controversies form an important background for understanding the incorporation and use of the Enochian language and Enochian magic in the context of an emerging self-styled Satanic position in late 1960s California. The doctrinal and aesthetic innovations that came out of this movement led to more confrontations with the ideologues of the older Golden Dawn currents.

It does not take too much reading of the primary sources of modern Satanism to find that its relation to the cultural heritage of Western esotericism is ambiguous and complex.[38] On the one hand, modern Satanism, with all "Left-Hand Path" splinter groups, is clearly indebted to ideas flourishing in nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century occultism. The emphasis on ritual magic ultimately follows in the current from Lévi, the Golden Dawn, and Crowley. However, it is an influence that has partially sparked a need for differentiation and opposition to its source.[39] On a broad scale the whole phenomenon of modern Satanism should be viewed as a part of the "secularization of esotericism,"[40] and the emergence of "occulture,"[41] as discussed in chapter 4. In this sense it has become commonplace to view modern Satanism as a "Self-religion," the "dark cousin" of modern spiritualities such as New Age religion and the Human Potential Movement.[42]

The ambiguous relation of Satanism to esoteric discourse also has important bearing in the context of the ideological fault line between the two main strands in the first schism within Satanism. Despite the obvious esoteric connection historically, there exists in modern Satanism a tendency to differentiate and distance oneself from those esoteric currents. This is notably the case in LaVey's writings, where we find numerous passages preoccupied with attacking various "witchcraft and magical groups" and other "occultisms of the past."[43] Instead of the "holy esoterica" of previous occult systems LaVey emphasizes the importance of a robust materialistic philosophy, a Darwinian anthropology, utility-maximizing rationality inspired by Ayn Rand's Objectivist philosophy, and the realization of carnal desire. As a rule of thumb LaVey interprets what he borrows from esoteric systems in the light of, and with appeal to, this rational-materialist worldview. As was mentioned in chapter 4, LaVey's satanic occultism can be viewed as "the secularization of esotericism" come full circle.

But then we find Michael Aquino, the spokesperson of the schismatic Temple of Set, speculating on such esoteric matters as the procession of "Aeons," "Secret Chiefs," and even claiming that the foundational document of his group, The Book of Coming Forth by Night, is in some way "channelled" from the Egyptian god Set.[44] The similarity to the esoteric claims Crowley made for his Liber Legis of 1904 is clear.

The discrepancy between these two spokespersons needs further explication, as it will form a significant background for the rest of this chapter. A useful typology for assessing it is Jesper Aagaard Petersen's ideal type distinction between rational and esoteric Satanism.[45] These two categories roughly coincide with the two major organizations, with LaVey's Church of Satan representing "rational Satanism" while Aquino's Temple of Set embody a more "esoteric" approach. The first category is to be viewed as the more secularized and rationalistic variety, viewing Satan largely as symbolic of the self and of egoistical, carnal virtues, that is, as a symbol of mundane things.[46] With the rationalist outlook comes an understanding of ritual magic as emotional psychodrama, only seldom and somewhat ambiguously as a supernatural practice. Esoteric Satanism, on the other hand, tends to fit better with other currents in the history of Western esotericism, seeing Satan as a metaphysical entity or force, present in nature, humanity, or the intellect.[47] This stance is also to a greater extent expressed in the perspective on magical theory and practice. All in all, this distinction is useful in pointing out a difference in how the obvious esoteric heritage is negotiated with a secular worldview. The satanic rationalist generally comes out in favour of secularism, while the satanic or "Left-Hand Path" esotericist tends to validate the esoteric sources and traditions to a much greater extent.[48]

Obviously, this has distinct bearing on how the Enochian system is conceived as well. Anton LaVey assimilated the Enochian calls to various Satanic ceremonial and magical purposes, but tended to view their efficacy in purely pragmatic or psychological terms. For Aquino, on the other hand, the Enochian keys were indeed exactly that: magical keys imbued with metaphysical qualities to access esoteric realms, disjoined from ordinary reality. Following up the intuitions established by Crowley, Enochian was situated at the center of ongoing contestations of legitimacy, both within and without the Satanic milieu.

The Church of Satan

Enochiana and the Struggle with Esoteric Others

Anton LaVey founded the Church of Satan in California in 1966 more or less by accident.[49] Springing out of a small occultist circle with eclectic interests, the church was not founded on any consistent philosophy, religious creed, or cultic activity. The quest for forging a position only started in the years following the formation of the Church. The first attempt consisted of LaVey's short monograph "Satanism," which was written and circulated in 1968–69.[50] This consisted of the "Nine Satanic Statements," which would later be included in The Satanic Bible, and some instructions in what "Satanism" means to the Church of Satan, and especially what the nature of Satanic magic is.[51] In the text, LaVey already makes sure to keep aloof from "other witchcraft or magical groups," which he antagonistically denotes as "white magical groups."[52]

In the book that would be far more important for cementing a modern Satanic identity, The Satanic Bible (1969), the strategy of distancing oneself from "traditional" esotericisms was followed up. The main bulk of the book was really an edited version of the material circulated as "Introduction to Satanism" and other "polemical essays" LaVey had written over the previous years.[53] However, there was not enough material to fill a full volume. Instead, LaVey copied material from other sources and pasted it to the front and end of what became the Satanic Bible. The first text, added at the front under the title "The Book of Satan," was an adaptation of the social Darwinist tract Might Is Right, written by the New Zealander Arthur Desmond under the pseudonym Ragnar Redbeard, at the turn of the century.[54] The second text was the Enochian keys or calls, borrowed from the version published by Aleister Crowley in The Equinox.[55] The English translations were, as mentioned, further altered to remove the distinct "holy" and divine tone of the text, replaced instead with diabolical references.[56] The inclusion of the Enochian verses in The Satanic Bible made them an important expression of Satanic religious discourse, and their use were further elaborated upon in the following central book, The Satanic Rituals (1972).

The randomness of the process leading up to the Enochian calls becoming an authorized part of Satanic discourse is at first sight striking. Even the whole project of writing and publishing The Satanic Bible was not LaVey's own initiative; the project was conceived by the editor of the publishing house Avon Books, Peter Mayer, who saw that his market would crave a Satanic bible after the grand popularity of Roman Polanski's 1968 movie adaptation of Rosemary's Baby.[57] The United States saw a veritable occult revival, which a deft publisher could easily profit from.

The Enochian material was only included when Mayer's deadline loomed over the project and the book was still not sufficiently voluminous. Indeed, one is tempted to speculate whether the slightly curious Satanic reception of the most famed system of angel magic should simply be explained away by reference to mere happenstance. This may at least serve as part of the explanation. But it has to be accompanied by a few other and perhaps more intriguing considerations as well. Even though chance led to the situation in which LaVey had to choose other texts to flesh out his book, it is not mere chance that the two particular texts actually used were an obscure social Darwinist tract on the one hand, and a revised version of the Enochian calls on the other. By choosing these two, LaVey makes a statement: a sociopolitical and moral statement in the case of Might Is Right,[58] but one regarding legitimacy toward the esoteric community with the Enochian material. The reembedding of such utterly unrelated individual elements creates a bricolage with a uniquely LaVeyian edge.

The inclusion of an altered version of the Enochian keys in The Satanic Bible may, in the first place, be seen as a slightly tongue-in-cheek attempt to situate oneself between the preexisting esoteric traditions Satanism drew upon and the anti-esoteric characteristic of rational Satanism. Enochian would be one of the elements of the Californian occulture in which LaVey was situated, even a particularly treasured one. Taking this particular element out of previous contexts, reembedding it with other available elements, from Human Potential psychology to social Darwinism, effectively infusing it with new meanings, is thus not much different from the mode of cultic innovation seen in connection with the New Age movement and other occultural religious systems of the era.[59] It is a characteristic part of the religious dynamics of the twentieth century.

Satanic Angel Magic

The marked tendency toward secularizing esoteric concepts manifests clearly in LaVey's take on Satanic magic. A complete treatment of Satanic magic sensu LaVey requires its own study, and falls outside the present scope.[60] However, a basic outline of some general trends is necessary before we look at the reception of the Enochian magic in particular.

One such trend in LaVey's conception of magic is the distinction between "lesser" and "greater" forms of magic.[61] These are to be seen in a continuum where the main difference is that the lower form approximates completely "mundane" manipulative actions in social reality, while the higher forms consist of a practice of ritual magic. In this sense, "lesser magic" lends heavily from non-esoteric sources, particularly the application of lessons from social psychology. Among the people referenced in LaVey's primary work on lesser magic, The Compleat Witch, we find, for instance, the sociologists Goffman and Klapp, and psychologists such as Reich, Ferenczi, and Freud.[62]

"Greater" ritual magic on the other hand is said to have the aim of accomplishing "something which, by other means, could not be done."[63] It is described as "a very real power," which "utilizes such tools as hypnosis, telepathy, psychology, etc."[64] The definition of magic bases itself on Crowley's famous statement in Magic in Theory and Practice (i.e., "the Science and Art of causing Change to occur in conformity with Will"), but somewhat qualifies it by adding that acts of magic exclude "normally accepted methods."[65] One should nevertheless be careful about inferring from this assertion that LaVey is advocating supernaturalism; on the same page he employs the notion that magic thus understood is effective through hitherto unknown forces in nature.[66] This strategy, of naturalizing the purportedly supernatural, is however not new with LaVey, but rather a common strategy in occultism from the middle of the nineteenth century.

In continuation, this interpretation holds true for LaVey's presentation of Enochian magic as well, which in his system is mainly restricted to the Enochian calls and the use of its language. In one of the articles on their use, he gives suggestions as to which type of magical operation is most congenial to each of the Enochian calls, implying that each did have a specific, unique character.[67] Contrary to what we saw in the Golden Dawn groups, LaVey did not see the language of the calls as really "angelic," or indeed as having anything to do with any metaphysical concept of "angels." LaVey asserts that the angels "are only "angels" because occultists to this day have lain ill with "metaphysical constipation."[68] Rather, the Enochian language was to be employed in satanic rituals for perceived psychological benefits; it was thought to be a particularly evocative language. That it was shrouded in some mystery was not the main point, although it clearly did no harm either:

> The magical language used in Satanic ritual is Enochian. Enochian is a language which is thought to be older than Sanskrit, with a sound grammatical and syntactical basis. . . . In Enochian the meaning of the words, combined with the quality of the words, unite to create a pattern of sound which can cause tremendous reaction in the > atmosphere. The barbaric tonal qualities of this language give it a truly magical effect which cannot be described.[69]

Although we see LaVey echoing Brodie-Innes, Regardie, and Crowley, it is worth noting that the main focus for LaVey is on the sonic qualities of the language. Enochian is to be employed chiefly because of the "truly magical effect" that its tonal qualities are said to possess. This is further emphasized in a short essay LaVey wrote on the pronunciation of Enochian in Cloven Hoof: "[T]he importance should be placed upon the rhythmic and sequential delivery of the words, rather than a scholarly attempt to pronounce them properly."[70] The emphasis is again on the pragmatic effect rather than the scholarly "authenticity," or metaphysical correspondence, of the language.

LaVey's Satanic reception of the Enochian "Angelic" calls is presented in a "secularized," or "disenchanted" tone. Acting well in concert with LaVey's sometimes anti-esoteric stance we see a move away from earlier perennialist legitimizations of Enochian, toward a predominantly pragmatic line of argumentation. Purist considerations about the historicity of the language are also largely ignored; the point of the matter for LaVey is the effect and evocative sound of the language, not its provenance.

To emphasize again the polemical context it is interesting to note that LaVey's tinkering with the Enochian calls did not go unnoticed by "traditional" esotericists who, as we have seen, had been quarreling over the correct interpretation of the system for decades. When Israel Regardie in 1972 published an edition of Crowley's 1909 Enochian experiments in the Algerian desert, he attacked The Satanic Bible in his introduction, calling it a "debased volume," which presented a "perverted edition" of Enochian.[71] Regardie's attack referred specifically to the satanic revisions of the translated calls, and "several other pieces of similar stupidity."[72] Although not surprised by Regardie's response, LaVey nevertheless took it with some disappointment.[73] The attack was taken seriously enough to prompt an answer. In an article published in the CoS newsletter Cloven Hoof entitled "Caucus Race," Michael Aquino, still with the Church at that time, answered Regardie's attack from a historical perspective. By documenting how the Golden Dawn and Crowley receptions of Enochian, which Regardie defended against the satanic "perverted edition," were themselves reinterpretations and decontextualized versions of the original sixteenth-century work of Dee and Kelley, he attacked the very premises of Regardie's argument.[74] From a scholarly point of view, Aquino was entirely right; rather than presenting a sound historical argument Regardie was himself defending an esoteric position against the new dissenting Satanism, just as we have seen him do in the face of P. F. Case's attacks in the 1930s. A copy of the article was sent to Regardie personally who, in Aquino's words, "probably found it as palatable as Anton had found his introduction."[75] After this initial skirmish, Regardie and Aquino later became good friends.[76]

The Temple of Set: Enochiana on the Left-Hand Path

Referring to Max Weber's tripartite distinction between "traditional," "rational-legalistic," and "charismatic" types of authority James R. Lewis has observed that LaVey's primary strategy to base the legitimacy of the CoS against competing occultisms was an emphasis on "rationality."[77] Although in a common sense he is indeed often seen as a "charismatic" leader, he did not claim charismatic authority in the technical sense Weber implied.[78] LaVey would never claim that texts like The Satanic Bible were "received" or "inspired" works, or that he was "touched by Satan" in any prophetic way. Neither did he offer supernatural ailments to adherents through his magic; rather he appealed to a rational-humanistic and egoistical ethos by which each has to save himself. This rational appeal took the form of distrust and mockery of established "traditional" religions, and also the anti-esoteric stance we have seen above.

Lewis also observed that the legitimizing strategy of the CoS itself changed over the years, especially around the schismatic year 1975. In these latter years of the history of the early CoS the organization had spread far outside its natal San Francisco, and a number of "Grottoes"—local governing bodies of the Church—had sprung up across the country. Coinciding with this, LaVey had started to tire of his official persona as the "Black Pope," and gradually started to cut off contact with these distant bodies.[79] This culminated in his "Phase IV" policy of the Church in 1974, which aimed at making it more like an informal movement.[80] By early 1975 the Church's structure faced disintegration and a series of schismatic Satanist groups emerged from the institutional chaos. Similar in a way to what happened upon the breakup of the Golden Dawn, this led to several new takes on Satanism and its various doctrines and practices.

However much LaVey himself would stress rational authority, it was unavoidable that he was perceived as a charismatic leader as well. This especially holds for the more informal movement of second generation Satanists, who knew their leader as a symbol rather than by personal acquaintance. As Weber predicted that charismatic authority tends to switch toward either rational-legalistic or traditional forms of authority after a while, it is interesting to note with Lewis what seems to have happened in the Satanic milieu after the schism. While some indeed stuck with LaVey's own rational strategy, others, particularly the remnants of the original CoS, moved toward a traditional approach in which LaVey's texts formed a sort of canonized corpus, which enables one to distinguish between "real" (i.e., "LaVeyian") Satanists and "pseudo-Satanists."[81] This move is to be understood in context of the variety of other, non-LaVeyian forms of Satanism. Chief among these was Aquino's Temple of Set.

Michael Aquino was one of those who saw LaVey and the original CoS as "authentic" in a more than conventional way. As he writes in his continuously expanding history of the Temple of Set, he > had never regarded [the CoS] as "just another organization" alongside which other, similar Satanic churches could just as validly exist. Correspondingly I did not consider Anton LaVey as simply a charismatic individual or even genius, but as the anointed personal deputy of Satan himself.[82]

One should not be led astray by Aquino's use of "charismatic" in this sentence; what Aquino is actually saying is that he saw LaVey and his organization as having charismatic legitimacy in Weber's technical sense. He had been anointed by a higher power, Satan, and could not simply be replaced by the work of men. Neither could his defunct Church. When other rebelling members of the CoS looked to Aquino for somebody to build a new institution, he therefore felt that such a "second Church" could not be formed without some extraordinary legitimacy endowed from "above" (or, per Satanic parlance, "below"). Since Satan had, according to Aquino, in a very real way "anointed" both LaVey and the CoS, a new church body would only be legitimate if the infernal Lord again stepped in and chose someone, bestowing his authority anew. In Aquino's own words:

> As the Church of Satan's 1975 crisis began to unfold, I attempted to comprehend and address it reasonably and practically through correspondence and discussion. But as the situation worsened, I felt increasingly the need to seek guidance from the authority of the Church's very existence, Satan himself. It seemed to me that if the Church were authentic—and, for that matter, ultimately so beyond Anton LaVey's current representation of it as merely his personal creation and vehicle, the Prince of Darkness would have to step in. As the senior Master next to Anton himself, I concluded that the responsibility to seek such a G[reater] B[lack] M[agic] resolution fell on me.[83]

Aquino sought to renew this charismatic legitimacy through ritual magical means in which, borrowing heavily from the legacy of Crowley, exploration of the Enochian Aethyrs were crucial. It was a series of experiments with this system that led to the writing of The Book of Coming Forth by Night, the foundation document of the ToS, which itself contains certain references to Enochian and Aquino's own take on it.

Aquino testifies that he began experimenting with the Enochian system at the time when the crisis of the CoS started to unfold, early in 1975. Having been tipped by the Washington, D.C.–based Satanist Robert Ethel about a recently published facsimile edition of Casaubon's 1659 account of Dee's angel conversations, Aquino tracked down a copy in a local occult bookstore.[84] Once he got hold of it, he found the section containing the Enochian calls, and found that these differed from those used by LaVey. Aquino decided to take "the original Keys out for a test drive." That same evening he went out to some old artillery batteries outside Fort MacArthur, where he had previously "conducted many a Call to Cthulhu during Army Reserve weekends with the infamous 306th Psychological Operations Battalion".[85] Now he was set on exploring the Enochian Aethyrs.[86]

Aquino's first experiments with the Casaubon keys took place on March 8, 1975. The model was Crowley's method, as discussed earlier. The resulting vision of his attempt to invoke the thirteenth Aethyr, called "ZIM," is described in the following manner:

> I recall coming, under hazy circumstances, to a large wooden-beamed hall in which were seated a number of men around a table. I knew them to be the "Secret Chiefs" of the "White" tradition of whom Aleister Crowley and others have spoken.
>
> I suggested that I might be allowed to join them, sensing that they did not immediately perceive my identity as a Magister Templi of the Left-Hand Path. But there was some dissent, as though some of them were wary of me.
>
> Finally I revealed myself as a Magister Templi. They reacted more negatively than before, donning robes of various colors. I responded by donning my own black/blue robe, whereupon there was a reaction by them of even stronger dislike. I responded with anger in turn.
>
> There was a violent conflagration, the hall collapsed, and I recall nothing further.[87]

Already from this first experiment it is clear that Aquino felt he had stumbled upon a potent key to unlock certain esoteric regions of the universe in which he could expect to meet such supra-human authorities as the "Secret Chiefs," so important in the Golden Dawn current.

After this early experiment Aquino was convinced that the "more authentic" version of the Enochian keys he had found in the Casaubon

volume had ensured its overwhelming success, in spite of its being a first shot.[88] He believed himself to hold a potent tool in his hands, which called for further experiment. The next full working that Aquino mentions came a couple of months later, on May 30.[89] On this occasion Aquino apparently wanted help with his studies, and used the Enochian calls to conjure up a sphinx and a chimera to discuss some magical importance of the dialogues of Plato.[90] "Scholarly work preceded the working; then G[reater] B[lack] M[magic] was used to overlay it with enlightened awareness," Aquino later recalled.[91]

Immediately following this rather bizarre colloquium, the events began that would lead up to the formation of the ToS: "[I]n the first week of June, something quite unexpected happened. I began to write a text in instalments of one or two hours per night. . . . [I]t declared the Enochian Keys to be a remote corruption of something called the Word of Set."[92] The next month Aquino would be preoccupied with "recovering" (i.e., writing) this Word of Set, which turned out to be an entirely new English translation of the nineteen Enochian calls.[93]

The reliance on new revelation instead of historically verifiable fact seems perhaps curious taking into account the somewhat purist criticism Aquino himself had leveled against Regardie a few years earlier. Interestingly, Aquino has later built up a considerable defense against possible Enochian purists who would attack the Word of Set translation for its divergence from historical sources. The argument goes in two steps. First, Aquino writes how he had gone through all the Enochian sources he knew, equipped with a familiarity with cryptography and a mind to unravel the linguistic "lineage." "After some weeks of work, I concluded that Enochian is not a true language," Aquino writes. "Rather it is an artificial jargon, i.e. arbitrary words placed together in roughly consistent sequences to simulate a true language."[94] He continued by comparing it to another language that possesses the same feature: the pseudo-Lovecraftian language "Yuggothic," which had featured in two rituals based on H. P. Lovecraft's "Cthulhu mythos," published in The Satanic Rituals.[95] In fact, it was Aquino himself who ghostwrote the whole section of The Satanic Rituals dealing with the Lovecraftian theme, and indeed it was he who had invented the language that features there:

> It was about the work of two months to develop the "nameless language" of the Ceremony of the Nine Angles and the Call to Cthulhu. A word that sounded properly "Lovecraftian" would be constructed arbitrarily: El-aka = world, gryenn'h = [of] horrors. Then the word would be used consistently throughout the text for both rituals.

> Slight modifications of endings would suffice for different sentence constructions, and there you have a "language" every bit as flexible as Enochian![96]

The second part of the argument against the Enochian purist easily follows: since the language is not a real language, the "translation" is really arbitrary. Thus, he notes that what LaVey had done with his "falsification" of the original translations was to put in words that felt more prudent. Rather than wrecking the efficacy of the magic utilizing these calls, Aquino claimed that the CoS produced far better results with LaVey's than with the original keys. Aquino's own approach with the Word of Set should therefore be seen in the same way: "seeking words to express what I [Aquino] seemed to sense the Keys were actually intended to say."[97]

And what did they say? The first two calls, or "parts of the Word of Set," which were the only ones to be written down at this time,[98] are cast as speeches from the Egyptian god Set. The first one seems to be addressed to a human magus of the Left-Hand Path, and tells how Set has created man and endowed him with intellect and ability to know "all lesser things."[99] It calls ultimately for the human being to ascend to his "divine" nature, through discovery and pride in one's capabilities. The second part of "the Word" similarly calls for self-gratification, and the discovery of "the flame within" that gives "the strength to live forever."[100] I will not delve into the possible theology of these verses, but the role given to the alleged spokesperson should be noted carefully. In these verses, Set has already conquered the role Satan possessed in LaVey's keys. He also speaks in a much more exalted, veiled, or mystical language than any text LaVey would have approved of.

The importance of Set was to reach its point of no return on the night of the summer Solstice, June 20–21, 1975. This was when Aquino performed the Greater Black Magic working (i.e., "ritual") that would be known as the "North Solstice working."[101] At this point, he had reached the conclusion that the ongoing conflict in the CoS could only be resolved through a GBM working, as seen earlier. The time was come to take on the responsibility and prerogative of a Magister Templi to call forth the Devil, in an attempt to renew the pact that, in Aquino's eyes, had secured the legitimacy of the CoS. His method of doing so rested on the newly "received" translation of the Enochian keys:

> My altar was located in the living room of the house. I opened the working in the traditional Satanic Mass, then spoke aloud the First Part of the Word of Set. I felt an impulse to enter my study—"the > Sanctum" as I nicknamed it—and with Brandy [his dog] curled up at my feet, sat down at my desk and took up pen and paper. Then, over the next four hours, I wrote down the words of The Book of Coming Forth by Night.[102]

This book would be for Aquino what Liber Legis had been for Crowley. Its message can mainly be summed up as a call for Aquino to take up his position as prophet of the new Aeon of Set, and usher in it through the foundation of a new Temple, with new rituals and holy names.[103] In effect, this book is a statement that polemically defends Aquino's newly found esoteric authority against his two most important influences: Aleister Crowley and Anton LaVey. And the key to it all had been the Enochian keys.

Satanic-Enochian Magics: Some Comparative Remarks

LaVey's rationalist take on Enochian was a highly psychologized and secularized one. The system was freed of its "angelic" association by stating that this was merely the outcome of the false consciousness of generations of previous occultists. The potency of the language did not hinge on its "divine," angelic origin, but rather on the particular qualities of its sounds. Whether this relies implicitly on a speculative metaphysics of phonetics remains an unanswered question. What is certain is that the terms used to describe its efficacy are mostly pragmatic. With this in mind, and with the inversion of certain words in the text to better fit a satanic context, the Enochian keys could be employed in satanic rituals.

With Aquino's esoteric turn of the satanic discourse, which may perhaps more accurately be seen as a move away from Satanism per se to a broader "Left-Hand Path," the interpretation differs in important respects. Opposite from LaVey, Aquino largely lacks the psychologizing language used to legitimize magic generally. Rather, it is clear that Aquino sees the need to engage with the esoteric sources in a much more sincere way. He seems predisposed to finding the presumably more "authentic" calls in Casaubon's edition more efficient than later renderings. This also led him to compare all extant sources he knew—Casaubon, Golden Dawn, Crowley, LaVey—in order to outline the "linguistic lineage" and determine authenticity. Although he concluded that no such authenticity existed, it is clear that an evocative sound alone was not enough for him.

Focus should be given again to the ways Aquino put the Enochian keys to use. Rather than merely being utilized as psychological instruments in the frame of LaVeyian "intellectual decompression chambers," the calls seem to be understood as possessing an esoteric power of their own. With Crowley's visionary quest in the Algerian desert as his exem- plum Aquino's first experiment with the Enochian calls was to invoke and astrally travel to the Aethyrs. In this practice he found a key to higher sources of authority, as Crowley had claimed before him, encountering the veritable "Secret Chiefs" in his very first attempt.

Although the general trend seems to be that Aquino does not allow the same degree of secularized approach as does LaVey, the esoteric interpretations he ends up giving are in and of themselves quite novel. For instance, while the source of the powerful nature of the Enochian calls cannot be merely pragmatic, they cannot be "angelical" either. The solution is the revelation that they are in fact corruptions of the presumably perennial Word of Set. The new interpretation he gives to them is conceptualized as a revelation of their true, esoteric essence, rather than simply a more prudent rendering. From these considerations it seems that Aquino presents a new sort of Enochian perennialism, which curiously employs pragmatic arguments as well as more scholarly linguistic analyses to ward off purist attacks.

7
The Purist Turn

The Postmodern Condition in Occultism

It is not entirely without justification to say that the advent of modern Satanism put an end to the Golden Dawn era. This does not mean that from thereafter Golden Dawn magic was never again practiced—indeed, in terms of expansion and publications a contrary development seems to be the case. But there is an extent to which the movements stirred by LaVey and Aquino had a lasting impact on the perceived authority of that system. I have argued that LaVeyian Satanism represented in some senses the secularization of esotericism come full circle. This implied a fundamental distrust of the occultist "master narrative" that the Golden Dawn system had really provided, something that has led to the not uncommon assertion that Satanism was a precursor to the development of Chaos Magic in Britain in the 1970s.[1] In a way, it was with Satanism that occultism entered the postmodern age.

Curiously perhaps, the advent of the "postmodern condition"[2] in occultism may have provided a rationale not only for radically relativistic approaches, as associated with Chaos Magic, but also for a search for lost "authenticity." In the postmodern development of Enochiana, this gives rise to what I term the "purist turn": the development of an approach to Enochian magic that rests on systematic and scholarly examination of original sources. Although it seems perhaps surprising at first, this development was really to be expected, since a common trend of postmodernism's "incredulity toward metanarratives" has been, especially in the academic context, a (re)turn to the particular at the expense of the universal.[3] The great system builders have been replaced by the myopic examiners of the unique.

While we have seen that the purist response did exist already, the purist turn signifies more than merely the existence of purists. When analyzing the impact of the postmodern condition, Jean-François Lyotard raised the question: "Where, after the metanarratives, can legitimacy reside?"[4] With the G.D. synthesis considered as the master narrative of occultism, what we see with the purist turn, as here defined, is a change in the conditions of the discourse community of Enochian magicians in favor of a legitimacy based on diligent research of the particulars of the "original" Enochian system. The inauthentic remnants of previous system builders must be eradicated to preserve the uniqueness of the Enochian system.[5]

This chapter aims to explore the development of the purist current, and its main protagonists. It should be noted at this point that Pasi and Rabaté in their concise article on the Enochian language similarly identified a "purist" current in modern Enochian literature.[6] However, while they cited two works representing this current, namely, Geoffrey James's Enochian Evocation (1984) and Donald Tyson's Enochian Magic for Beginners (1997), there are still other proponents that, I shall argue, represent clearer and more important examples of the trend. This chapter, then, aims to present a more detailed view of the purist turn, and lay out some of its significance. Thus, after dissecting its internal dynamics and identifying its main spokespersons, I will also have a look at some of the reactions that came in its wake. Through this presentation, I will show that the emergence of a full-blown Enochian purism changed the direction and dynamics of the Enochian discourse.

Preparing the Ground: Dictionaries and Source Materials

One of the background conditions for the purist turn in Enochian magic was a rapidly growing interest in the system, and especially its language, throughout the 1970s. This is quite probably a partial influence of Satanism, or more precisely, of the Satanic Bible. Despite its idiosyncrasies, the publication and wide distribution of the book greatly popularized an interest in the Enochian calls.[7] Together with the publication of Llewellyn's new editions of Regardie's Golden Dawn in 1969 and 1971, the stage was set for a new generation of occultists to explore Enochiana.

This period also saw a relatively extensive publication of source materials, and even dictionaries of the Angelic tongue, all valuable tools for those wishing to penetrate deeper into the material. In 1974 Stephen Skinner published a facsimile edition of Casaubon's True and Faithful

Relation under the title John Dee's Action with Spirits.[8] Although this was a limited and expensive hardcover edition, it soon attracted interest among dedicated magicians. As we saw in the previous chapter, it was this edition that sparked Aquino's research into the "linguistic genealogy" of the Enochian keys. It even influenced him to acquire microfilm copies of the material in the Bodleian Library, which he later incorporated into his own Word of Set translation of the calls.[9] It is not impossible that it was this edition that inspired other groups as well, such as the Aurum Solis, which will be discussed later, to "correct" the spelling of the Enochian language from the Golden Dawn version.

Another indication of the renewed interest in Enochian and its language is evident from the publication of two dictionaries, in 1976 and 1978. The first one was Leo Vinci's Gmicalzoma.[10] Although providing a systematic overview of the language, this edition rested emphatically on occultist premises stemming from the Golden Dawn. As Pasi and Rabaté have noted, Vinci recapitulates the etymological fantasies of Brodie-Innes and Regardie, and even takes them a step farther by suggesting a connection between the Enochian word raas (given as "east") and the name of the Egyptian sun god Ra.[11]

In contrast, The Complete Enochian Dictionary published by the Australian linguist, anthropologist, and skeptic Donald Laycock in 1978 presents something quite different.[12] In the introductory essay published with the dictionary, entitled "Angelic language or mortal folly?" Laycock aimed to give a scholarly and linguistic analysis of the language. His conclusion was that the language exhibits structural and phonetic patterns that rule out the possibility of it being a natural language, that is, a real language with independent grammar and syntax.[13] Instead, he argued, it possessed syntactical features common to constructed language (it has basically the same syntax as English), and two revealing phonetic features: one that is common in glossolalia, and another which is common when putting together letters arbitrarily, without thought of the disposition of vocals and consonants. Even though Laycock's work has become a classic of skeptical linguistics, his dictionary is still popular with many magicians. The reprint of the book by Weiser is a document of this, prefaced and introduced by two leading occultist authors, Stephen Skinner and Lon Milo DuQuette. In his preface, Skinner, who was a personal friend of Laycock's, even manages to recast him as a practicing magician, without mention of the thoroughly skeptical tone of his article on Enochian language.[14] Nevertheless, it seems clear that the publication of these tools prepared the ground for other purist approaches to the Enochian material.[15]

Robert Turner and the Order of the Cubic Stone

I will now call attention to a little-known group of ritual magicians which deserves serious attention in the modern history of Enochian magic: the Order of the Cubic Stone (O.C.S.). As it evolved, this group acquired a vanguard position in the purist turn of Enochiana. Based in Wolverhampton and the Midlands, UK, the group first emerged in the mid-sixties, founded by the elderly occultist Theodore Howard. Howard resigned quickly, and left the actual running of the order to two young scientific technicians, David Edwards and Robert Turner.[16] By the seventies the O.C.S. had earned reputation as a particularly practically minded magical order. Writing in 1970, Francis King commented about the O.C.S. that "its Chiefs are both competent and sincere—they have themselves done what they teach."[17] In King's view, this distinguished the group from the mainstream, faddish interest in occultism of the late 1960s.

In the leaflets that the O.C.S. would send to interested enquirers in its early years, the stated aim of the Order was to "train the student in our approach to Ceremonial Magic." Furthermore, it was stated that "the system we use is based on the Qabalah and our teachings stem from the Golden Dawn and other similar sources."[18] From a self-initiation ritual published in the O.C.S. journal, The Monolith, and later reproduced by Francis King, it seems evident that the "other sources" included Crowley. His "Mass of the Phoenix" ritual is made a part of the initiation, as is a use of the thirty Enochian Aethyrs seemingly based on Crowley's theory about these entities, and their initiatory potential.[19]

At this point in the O.C.S.'s history, their aim was not so much to work a novel and innovative framework of magic, but rather to encourage actual practical work in a tradition that was already established. This impression is strengthened from considering the short book on magic published by one of the Order's chiefs in this period, David Edwards. The occult and magical lore compiled in his Dare to Make Magic (1971) bases itself on Kabbalistic correspondences and techniques for scrying deriving ultimately from the Golden Dawn.[20] The main point of the book confirms King's comment on the O.C.S.'s practical approach: in occultism it is not enough to read and memorize; one must also dare to do the practical work and exercises required to become an accomplished magician. The book is filled with suggestions, motivating statements, and advice for practical training.

While this profile seems to hold for the early phase of the O.C.S., its focus was soon to change drastically in directions that are of interest to the present study. This change of perspective happened just around the time King dedicated a short chapter to the Order in his Ritual Magic in England, thus it was not covered by his study. To my knowledge, there have been no scholarly comments on the interesting later development of the O.C.S.[21]

The Enochian Turn of the O.C.S.

The change of perspective in the O.C.S. coincided with David Edwards's resignation from the Order in or around 1970, which left Robert Turner in sole command. Turner seems to have been particularly fascinated with Enochiana. Through the 1970s he developed an increasingly stricter focus on this particular system of magic. What makes Turner's approach stand out from the various trends discussed earlier is his strict insistence on a scholarly return to the source materials. According to a previous member of the O.C.S., Steven Ashe, his "academic approach" led to a gradual rejection of the Golden Dawn and Crowley approaches to magic generally and Enochian magic particularly.[22] Under Turner, "the sole focus hinged upon what could be reconstructed from the Dee material."[23] This makes him the earliest clear-cut example of a consistent purist.

Turner's diligent research of the original manuscripts at the British Library and the Bodleian in Oxford later resulted in the publication of the books The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee (1983) and Elizabethan Magic (1989).[24] These are often considered, even from a scholarly perspective, some of the best editions of original Dee material available; certainly, The Heptarchia Mystica was the first publication of the Heptarchic system ever to appear in print. Turner's publications have also greatly informed the occult discourse on Enochian magic by popularizing a scholarly founded criticism of the Golden Dawn's approach to it. In the introduction to his edition of The Heptarchia Mystica, for instance, Turner expresses his baffled amazement over the neglect of the Heptarchic system. In Turner's view, this is really "the only true example of a complete magical system to be found in the Dee papers,"[25] and yet he could find no trace of its use by modern occultists. Instead, people had been making grand syntheses out of incomplete systems in other parts of Dee's diaries. This vein of criticism has earned Turner's two books a central position in the purist turn.

Turner's scholarly, meticulous approach seems however to have caused, or at the very least added to, frictions within the O.C.S. According to Steven Ashe, an increasing gap started to appear between the scholarly and the practical work in the Order, which frustrated many of its members.[26] When some of the O.C.S. members embarked on practical experiments with the "new" Heptarchic material dug up by Turner's efforts, they were met with discouragement. The Order that had produced Dare to Make Magic and been known for its emphasis on practical experiments had gradually developed a more cautious and purely theoretical focus. The discontent peaked at the beginning of the 1980s, when a series of core members left the group due to controversies with the leadership over practical work.[27] This was the beginning of the end for the O.C.S., which nevertheless seems to have been more influential through the publications of Turner.

An Inconsequent Purist? Turner and the Necronomicon Scam

Robert Turner was part of another curious publishing project, which deserves to be mentioned briefly here, namely, the edition of The Necronomicon that appeared at the publishing house Neville Spearman in 1978.[28] This book belongs to the genre of literature related to H. P. Lovecraft's "Cthulhu mythos," and more specifically to the subgenre of books (appearing from the early 1970s) purporting to be the real version of the originally fictitious grimoire Necronomicon.[29] In Lovecraft's horror universe, this ancient tome was said to have been written down in Damascus by Abdul Alhazred, a mad Arabian poet, just before his mysterious and sudden disappearance in 738.[30] The grimoire was said to have survived in a manuscript tradition continuing into the early Modern period, when John Dee had made a personal copy. However, this was "never printed, & exists only in fragments recovered from the original MS."[31] This fictitious historiography opens doors for the Dee scholar and Enochian magician Turner.

The 1978 Neville Spearman Necronomicon edition was published in collaboration between Colin Wilson, George Hay, and Robert Turner. According to the Lovecraft specialist Daniel Harms, Turner had already been looking into the possibility that Lovecraft had been inspired by actual grimoires when producing his ideas about the Necronomicon.[32] In the collaboration with Hay and Wilson, however, Turner put his knowledge and familiarity with the Dee material in the British Library to the task of creating an intriguing origin myth to the new Necronomicon edition. The introduction, written by the prolific British science fiction writer, literary critic, and occultist Colin Wilson, explained how Turner had set out to explore the link between the Necronomicon and John Dee, which Lovecraft asserted in his short "History of the Necronomicon." Familiar already with the Dee manuscripts in the Sloane collection of the British Library, Turner was said to have consulted the perhaps most cryptic of all the Dee papers, the grids of squares and letters of the Liber Loagaeth.[33] According to Wilson's introduction, Turner copied the elaborate and mysterious letter squares, sent them to the computer programmer and cryptographer David Langford, who "deciphered" the manuscript. The surprising result was the appearance of the text of the true Necronomicon, apparently coded in by Dee.

As is often the case with esoteric provenances, this astonishing story never happened. The truth behind the book was revealed by Wilson himself only a few years after it was published.[34] In that version, Turner had not so much played the role of researcher as that of author. The actual history of the volume was that George Hay had been given the task of creating an authentic-looking Necronomicon by the head of Neville Spearman. Wilson had later been contacted to look at the material that had been gathered for the volume. He was unimpressed, and contacted Turner to write the actual text of the grimoire. Given Turner's competence as a ritual magician and knowledge of the sources the result is a text that borrows much from actual grimoires, especially the Goetia. Any actual link with John Dee, however, remains spurious.

As J. W. Gonce has pointed out, Turner's involvement in this project is ironic when considered in the light of his image as a Dee purist, known for his uncompromising attacks on other occultists' syntheses.[35] Here, the same Turner lends his credibility to the claim that there is a connection between Dee's magic squares and Lovecraft's Necronomicon. In this respect it is interesting to note that senior members of the O.C.S. seem to agree that Turner's involvement with the Necronomicon volume seriously damaged the work of the Order, probably on several levels.[36] It has been suggested that the relative success of the book distracted Turner from the actual running of the O.C.S.[37] The whole event seems to have damaged Turner's integrity within the group, as well as the integrity of the group itself, contributing to its decline when approaching the 1990s.

An Experiment in Elizabethan Magic

Despite this development there is still the intriguing story of a practical working performed in 1983. Some time that year, the remaining members of the O.C.S. rented the Tixall Lodge Gatehouse in Staffordshire, originally raised in 1555 by Sir Edward Aston.[38] Led by Turner himself, the magicians conducted a rite of Elizabethan magic in these historically authentic surroundings. Although it is not certain what the actual purpose and outcome of the rite was, it has been suggested that it was based on the magical writings of the Elizabethan physician and magician Simon Forman (1552–1611).[39]

On the other hand, it is tempting to see the report of this working in light of a short note made by Turner toward the end of the introduction to his Heptarchia Mystica, published that same year:

> A Midlands based occult group have recently reconstructed the Holy Table, wax discs and other necessary equipment and shortly hope to perform the Heptarchical rite, publishing their findings in due course. Whether or not the spirits will welcome this invasion of their four hundred year repose remains uncertain.[40]

Although the evidence remains painfully circumstantial, this indicates that at least a major Enochian working was being planned.

Aurum Solis

We now move on to consider another esoteric order that has largely evaded scholarly examination. The Aurum Solis is an esoteric order that claims to represent "the Ogdoadic tradition."[41] It first appeared in a series of occult books published from 1974 to 1981, The Magical Philosophy I–V by Melita Denning and Osbourne Phillips—the pen names of Vivian Godfrey and Leon Barcynski—but claims to have roots back to 1890s England.[42] Although I cannot at present enter into a detailed examination of this claimed lineage, it will suffice to say that it seems likely to be yet another spurious and invented historiography. No documentary evidence has been presented by the authors, and attempts to verify some of the named predecessors have met with no success.[43] Thus, the five volumes of The Magical Philosophy can be considered the real foundation of the Aurum Solis, and their content is generally equated with the teachings of the Order.

The Aurum Solis does not qualify as a squarely purist movement. For reasons I will soon explain, I nevertheless hold that its Enochian teachings should be considered in the context of it. I will suggest that the Aurum Solis Enochiana exist at an interesting junction between the Golden Dawn tradition and the impact of the purist turn. This subchapter makes a brief interlude from the "strong" purism, represented by Turner, to consider that junction. Another reason that justifies its inclusion here is that the Aurum Solis' related publications have had a considerable impact on later Enochian magic, including that of a more explicitly purist bent.

Robe and Ring

When reissued by Llewellyn in 1982, book one of The Magical Philosophy series came with an appendix containing some Enochian material.[44] The material seems predominantly taken from Golden Dawn sources, without providing much new in way of interpretation. Here we find the same emphasis on elemental attributions and magic as we did in the Golden Dawn tradition, and Enochian is to be merged and used together with other systems. For instance, it is stated that the Claves Angelicae are to be employed whenever a separate magical language "is required for use in connection with the elemental forces."[45]

In connection with the Angelic language, we also find another interesting passage:

> [A] modern expert on linguistics has expressed a considered opinion that Kelley "invented" [the Enochian language]. The arguments put forward are so irrational, that we cannot and need not rationally refute them: they are furthermore based on theories devoid of all psychological understanding of the role of the natural faculties of the seer, and devoid too of any magical discernment or experience. Any who are disturbed by such arguments need only reflect that this sonorous barbaric language is of extreme magical potency, as many true occultists have proved.[46]

The passage seems to refer to Laycock's work, indicating that the appendix on Enochian was written after 1978. Furthermore, the quote is interesting, as it more than suggests what can be called a "realistic" interpretation of the Enochian language. Although there is an appeal to the evidence of experience, we see no trace of the purely pragmatic standpoint. Rather, the authors are anxious to expel the "irrational" criticism provided by linguistic analysis, in order to assert the language's "extreme magical potency."

So far, there is still not much trace of a purist approach. This changes toward the end of the appendix. When the authors include a section on the system of the thirty Aires or Aethyrs, they recognize its original geopolitical significance.[47] Apparently the authors did find it relevant to consult non–Golden Dawn/Crowley sources, perhaps Skinner's 1974 edition of Casaubon. Furthermore, they apparently did not feel the need to recapitulate Crowley's view on the subject. This is quite significant in connection with the purist turn, since the Aurum Solis thereby seems to be the first modern occultist group to do this. As we have seen already, Crowley's interpretation reigned supreme in other receptions of the Aethyrs, including modern Satanism and Left-Hand Path magic. Even the early O.C.S. followed him on this matter in their ritual for self-initiation.

Mysteria Magica

Books II–IV of the Magical Philosophy series contain no reference to Enochian. Book II largely discusses ritual and symbolism, closely following the astrological, Kabbalistic, and alchemical correspondence systems developed by the Golden Dawn.[48] Book III concerns sefirotic symbolism, and includes a discussion of the Golden Dawn system of initiation, which is simplified into a tripartite system used by the Aurum Solis.[49] The fourth book is much concerned with developing a sort of magical psychology, building on the system presented in the previous works.[50] Only in the fifth and last book, Mysteria Magica (1981), Enochian reemerges and is treated thoroughly.

Mysteria Magica contains two major sections on Enochian, entitled "De Rebus Enochianis" 1 and 2, in addition to an appendix on the pronunciation of the language.[51] This work clearly reveals familiarity and respect for the original sources. For instance, most of the content of MS Sloane 3191 is reproduced, including the 48 Claves Angelicae and the Liber scientiae.[52] Here, diligent notes and comments on the spelling of Enochian words, and the exact reproduction of the Aires corresponding to geographical regions shows that the authors have taken pains going through the original documents.

But even so, one should note that the presentation of the Aires adds completely new functions to the ninety-one "Good Ministers" of the thirty Aires, seemingly complementary to their original function.[53] Although the functions listed are somewhat reminiscent of the offices of the seventy-two spirits of the Goetia, the origins of these attributions are not clear. The resulting system is unique to the Aurum Solis.

While much material is added to the pool of Enochian lore already in existence, there is still much remaining of the Golden Dawn system. For instance, while the system of the Great Table has been expanded and explained in greater detail, the basic framework of elemental and Kabbalistic magic is still preferred at the expense of the original system.[54] In addition, part two of "De Rebus Enochianis" is entirely preoccupied with showing how the Enochian system can be incorporated into other kinds of magical operations. Thus, although we see a partial return to the sources in the Aurum Solis' system of Enochian magic, the synthetic approach of the Golden Dawn still seems to have a strong grip.

Despite this, the material published in the fifth book of the Magical Philosophy series is at the core of the purist turn, simply because it provided access again to parts of Dee's material that had not been given much consideration in modern occultism. Along with Turner's work, it has had an impact on later magicians of a purist bent.

Geoffrey James's Enochian Evocations

Returning again to the stronger purist position, we have to consider the author Geoffrey James and his Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee (1984).

This is another of the key publications of the purist turn, greatly influencing later thought on the subject. The book is really a thoroughly edited version of original material taken from various Dee sources, including unpublished manuscripts and Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation, with a prefatory article and appendixes. In James's own words, "The Enochian Evocation is intended to present the essential core of Dee's evocation system arranged in a fashion similar to other renaissance evocation texts."[55] This means that material has been extracted from their original place in various documents and reorganized such as to give a coherent presentation of a magical system, with the first chapter giving the "sacred history" of Enochian as narrated to Dee at various times by the angels.[56] Then follows the various parts of Dee's magical system in order: the Heptarchic system, the Claves Angelicae, Liber scientiae, and the magic of the Great Table.

As with Turner's edition, James's work is not primarily intended for a scholarly audience. His aims are magical and operational, something that is clear from the introduction and the appendices. I will consider two aspects of this: first, James feels the same need as Denning and Phillips to defend the authenticity of the Enochian language from Laycock's criticism; secondly, he makes an effort to fill in some of the blanks of Dee's magical manuscripts, in order to put the system into practice.

In the introduction James spends several pages in an attempt to discard the criticisms and suspicions raised by Laycock. This takes the form of a search for passages in the Dee material that can be considered, in James's own words, "evidence for the presence of the supernatural."[57] Furthermore, he enters into a more detailed dialogue with some of Laycock's points. As was mentioned earlier, Laycock had found that parts of the Enochian language exhibited features that did not make sense phonetically, and suggested that this represented an arbitrary combination of letters. James's response is curious, and goes contra Laycock from the presupposition that angelic beings are real:

> [T]he Angelical language. . . .exhibits characteristics that would seem to indicate that it was designed to be a non-spoken language. As Da Vinci had pointed out nearly 100 years before the keys were dictated, spirits would be unable to make audible sounds on their own, due to the lack of vocal chords with which to vibrate air.[58]

This line of argumentation is valuable to note also in the context of the debate on the legitimacy of magic in secular modernity. It seems clear that James does not here allow for psychologized or purely pragmatic approaches to the question of occult entities; rather, he quite clearly supposes some kind of realistic understanding of the angels. Interestingly, we should note that this seems to be a preferred tendency in the purist approach to Enochian. We saw hints of it as well in the Aurum Solis above, and we will see it again in the currents influenced by purism.

However, it seems that James's approach was slightly modified over the years. In the introduction to the second edition of his book, we find the following statement on the reality of angels:

> As best I understand it, Enochian angels are unlikely to be "real" in the sense of being composed out of atoms, particle waves, or quantifiable material. On the other hand, I believe that angels may represent aspects of the human consciousness that all of us share. In that way, they exist in collective unconscious, which is, in some ways at least, more "real" than the physical world.[59]

Again, this underscores the point that studies on emic understandings of the reality of such beings in modern ritual magic should focus on and emphasize the plurality and unfixed status of this discourse. Now, a psychological interpretation is allowed for, albeit one that is just as much a sacralization of the psyche as a psychologization of the sacred. Especially following Jungian and transpersonal perspectives, this has become a major trend in contemporary Western religiosity more generally.[60]

Finally, James has added a section with notes for practice as an appendix.[61] An interesting aspect of this section is the way the author seeks to reconstruct the use of the Aires in Liber scientiae by drawing upon procedures in Renaissance manuals of talismanic magic. Influenced by Agrippa in particular, James argues that the spirit of each geographical location should be engraved on a circular disc, together with the name of the region and the name of the Aire ruling it. In addition, he notes the sigils of each spirit, which also appear in Dee's diaries, but were given no attention before. These actually correspond to the letter squares of the Great Table, in a way similar to the famous sigils of the planets in Agrippa's De Occulta philosophia. For this reason, James argues that the sigil and letter square where it is found should also be engraved on the disc, making a talisman in the Renaissance magical fashion. In this way we see how a purist still needs to put his creativity to make the magical system coherent, but applies that creativity with a stricter focus on what would have been plausible in the original historical context, rather than on the discourses most prevalent in his own days.

Against the Purist Current

The Schuelers and Enochian Revisionism

In their survey of the Enochian language, Pasi and Rabaté distinguished a "revisionist" current alongside the "purist" one.[62] Revisionists in this sense care less for keeping it close to the originals, favoring and encouraging additions, syntheses, and new interpretations instead. Two books were explicitly mentioned in the essay: Lon Milo DuQuette and Christopher Hyatt's Enochian World of Aleister Crowley (1991), and Gerald and Betty Schueler's Enochian Magic: A Practical Manual (1996 [1985]). In the case of the former, the revisionism only consists in that these authors accept the earlier revisions, done by the Golden Dawn and Crowley. DuQuette and Hyatt's book may be viewed as a document of the continued influence of Crowley's rendition of the Golden Dawn interpretation; the bulk of the book consists of a new edition of Crowley's Liber Chanokh and an exegesis of that text.[63] The only further revision is found in a scant nineteen pages at the end of the book, where an attempt is made to apply Enochian elements from the G.D./Crowley tradition to "Tantric" sex magic.[64] It is also worth noting that the introduction, written by DuQuette, actually includes a note on what we can consider an effect of the purist turn. DuQuette acknowledges that many "excellent" new works have appeared lately, which "offer valuable contributions".[65] Robert Turner is specifically mentioned, before DuQuette continues with the following paragraph:

> Some [other recent books] I feel are of less value. While perhaps informative as examples of the "findings" of one magician's experimentation, the distinction is not always made clear as to what is the author's speculation and innovation and what actually are the procedures suggested in the original documents.[66]

It could of course be brought in against DuQuette that Crowley and Regardie hardly classify as "original sources" in the strict sense either; however, the quote suggests that the approach of the authors was not dominated by wholesale "revisionism."[67] It is more a case of orthodoxy on behalf of the late-Victorian and Edwardian interpretations of occultist ritual magic.

It seems that a far clearer example of a revisionist current is found in what may well have been the authors DuQuette referred to in the passage above: Gerald and Betty Schueler. In addition to the title mentioned by Pasi and Rabaté, the Schuelers have written a whole oeuvre presenting a more or less novel interpretation of the Enochian language and its associated magic.

The Schuelers have published books on Enochian magic with Llewellyn since the late 1980s. The aim has been to construct a new spiritual worldview by fusing the available versions of Enochian magic (the original Dee material, and the G.D. and Crowley syntheses) with other sources, including Theosophy and transpersonal psychology.[68] While the first book, Enochian Magick (1985), does not add too much new material (being largely a recapitulation of information extracted almost directly from Regardie's Golden Dawn and Crowley's pieces published in Gems from the Equinox),[69] the eclecticism becomes emphatic in their following titles. Enochian Physics (1988) resembles a pseudoscientific, "New Age science" cosmology, fusing Enochian magic with nomenclature borrowed from modern physics; Enochian Tarot (1989) recasts the Tarot based on Enochian entities and symbolism; while Enochian Yoga (1995) introduces yogic techniques to an Enochian ritual context. Given the impact of the purist turn, this has unavoidably led to criticisms from other voices in the Enochian milieu, especially online, as will be shown in the last chapter of this book.

Major Themes in the Schueler system

Following largely in the footprints of the Golden Dawn and Crowley, most of the Schuelers' Enochian system is based upon speculations on the Great Table and the Aethyrs. In Enochian Physics and Angels' Message to Humanity (1996, 2002) these letter squares form the basis of two different esoteric cosmologies. These have later been described as a "two-dimensional" and a "three-dimensional" model, respectively. The first one lays out the cosmos as a "map" detailing the different "planes" attributed to the four elements and the element of spirit, and (following the G.D. tradition) the elemental tablets of the Enochian Great Table. The second cosmology is different, in that it constructs an "Enochian cube" from the tablets (or "Enochian mandalas," in the Schuelers' terminology) of the Great Table, presented as a three-dimensional, cubic model of the universe.[70] The Tarot and Yoga books similarly base themselves on the Great Table system when synthesizing Enochian with Tarot and yogic techniques.

Since 1998 the Schuelers have run a Web site which features a section (situated between the sections on "Schueler's Gnosticism" and "Norwegian Forest Cats") synthesizing the essentials of the Enochian system presented in their published works.[71] Here, we also find published other parts of the original Dee material, namely, Liber scientiae, De heptarchia mystica, and the Enochian language of the Claves.[72] But little is done to actually incorporate these sets of data into the general system presented in the Schuelers' books.

Instead, there is a cautionary remark that the system of the heptarchia mystica, for instance, should not be taken literally when it speaks about entities that can be exploited to find precious metals:

> [T]his does not mean that we can invoke a deity such as Bornogo and have him tell us where we can find gold for ourselves, for example. Such self-centered goals are laden with karmic pitfalls, and seldom work the way we would want. What we can gain, however, is information, usually in the form of experience (e.g., altered states of consciousness), of our entire universe both visible and invisible.[73]

What emerges here is an apparent ethical divergence between the magical systems of the Renaissance and that of the Schuelers. The latter seeks to overcome the former by presenting a "spiritualized" interpretation of the magical practice that originally had rather mundane goals. It should be recalled that a similar case was seen with Regardie, when he left out the original interpretation of the Great Table in his Golden Dawn, feeling that the material was "spiritually unsound."[74]

In the Schuelers' view, Enochian magic "focuses on the Great Work of spiritual evolutionary development and its ultimate goal is ego-trancendence [sic] or what is commonly called enlightenment."[75] For the Schuelers, Enochian magic is a framework for self-realization, and not a mere manipulative tool.

The only notable exception to the rule would be when the magic is put to practice for altruistic ends:

> We view the practice of Enochian Magic, or any type of magic, for personal gain as Black Magic. We view the practice of Enochian Magic, or any type of magic, for selfless devotion to the welfare of others as White Magic.[76]

Only altruistic "white magic" is perceived as licit, as in the example of "Enochian healing."[77] This subdiscipline is one of the innovations of the Schuelers, dealing with the construction of new letter squares from words in the Enochian language, to be used with mantras and visualizations to cure sickness.[78]

Matters of Legitimacy

On the Schuelers' Web site there also appear various statements in defense of their approach. The main strategy consists of simply acknowledging that there are different "schools" in Enochian magic, rather than one unifying paradigm by which legitimacy can be measured. There is an attempt to relativize by stating simply that "Schueler's Enochian Magic is Enochian Magic as defined and used by Gerald and Betty Schueler."[79]

In a note included in Angels' Message to Humanity, the Schuelers admit "borrowing heavily" from John Dee, the Golden Dawn, and Crowley, and furthermore explain the relationship between their own approach and these other "schools":

> We make no claims to present Enochian Magic, as taught by John Dee or the Golden Dawn or Crowley, per se; rather, we have blended together the best of these magical pioneers into an integral, workable system. We have also added new material, including our own interpretations and findings, to the available and often conflicting source material. Our system of Enochian Magic will agree in many areas with the source material but will disagree elsewhere.[80]

This is, in short, a legitimization of creative innovation. Contrary to both the strict purists and perennialists, it is not believed that any of the previous schools possessed "the truth" in Enochian matters. There is no appeal to primordial tradition, or "scholarly" authenticity. Rather, there is a certain progressive attitude, implying that individual parts can be disembedded and re-embedded in new systems as one sees fit, constructing pragmatically more useful systems. Referring to my previous discussion of the authenticity problem this is a clear example of the pragmatic/progressive strategy, placing the Schuelers' approach closer to LaVey and (to a certain extent) Aquino as far as the structure of the legitimizing rhetoric goes.

In this context it is interesting as well to consider what kind of metaphysical theories come with the Schuelers' Enochian magic. One would perhaps expect that the pragmatic approach to the legitimacy of the system as a whole should imply a pragmatic, ontologically noncommittal interpretation of the entities belonging to that system as well. In LaVey's case, this seemed to hold. With Gerald and Betty Schueler it is not that clear:

> Like John Dee, we view the Angels, Kings, Seniors, and others as inhabitants, and in some cases rulers, of those vast planes and subplanes of invisible worlds that surround our Earth. They are the emissaries, children if you will, of God, however you chose to define Him. In one sense they are real external living beings. In another sense, they are personified projections from our own personal and collective unconscious.[81]

To a certain extent, a realistic interpretation is alluded to, which involves a cosmology where the totality of the world consists of several "planes" and "subplanes," of which our material reality is the lowest one.[82] The angels are "real" in the sense that they have existence on these other planes (similarly it is stated that "the heavens of the world's religions" are situated on the astral plane). At the same time a certain psychologization is invoked with the statement that the angels, in another sense, stem from our "personal and collective unconscious." This may perhaps look like a noncommittal strategy. However, the latter statement seems just as much to be an expression of an esoteric psychology rather than a psychologized esotericism, implying that there is no real distinction between the "collective unconscious" and the supra-material "planes."[83] We recognized a touch of this in Geoffrey James as well—which here has become a thoroughgoing framework for countering the semantic questions of magic whenever they arise.

Donald Tyson's Enochian Apocalypticism

Another central player on the post–purist turn Enochiana scene of the 1990s is Donald Tyson. Tyson won fame in the contemporary occult community in 1993 with his erudite edition of Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy, based on the 1651 English translation by James Freake.[84] Additionally, he is the author of a couple of dozen books on occult topics, ranging from rune magic to the Necronomicon.[85]

Although Tyson's Enochian Magic for Beginners (1997) was classified by Pasi and Rabaté as one of the two foremost examples of the purist current, Tyson's general work does not squarely fit this rubric as employed here.[86] Even in that book, Tyson possesses a desire to push on the boundaries of the actual material and make novel interpretations, although, admittedly, he is tidy enough to clearly tell the reader when he is making subjective statements.[87] The most significant point he brings to the material is the reconstruction of an "eighteen-day working," which, in Tyson's opinion, is to be performed to make contact with the spirits of the Great Table in the first place,[88] together with his firm belief that there is a dark secret to Enochian magic. According to Tyson, Enochian carries within its corpus the magical key to set off the Apocalypse as described in Revelations.[89]

The argument of this more spectacular idea is that there exists at the core of the Enochian system a hitherto unpronounced "Apocalypse Working," which especially relate to the use of the Angelic calls. Tyson first expressed his views on the angelic apocalyptic agenda in his book Tetragrammaton (1995), which was more recently republished as Power of the Word (2004). The same idea was expressed in his much-discussed 1996 article in Gnosis Magazine, entitled "The Enochian Apocalypse."[90] In Enochian Magic for Beginners, the idea is found several places, such as the following:

> [I]t is also my opinion that the forty-eight expressed Keys. . . .are intended by the angels to be used in a great working, probably of fifty days duration, designed to initiate the period of destructive transformation that is generally known as the apocalypse. This may be linked with the eighteen-day invocation of the angels of the Great Table[91]. . . .or it may be a separate working.[92]

Still, Tyson's book is certainly influenced by the purist turn. It is written with the expressed intention of making available all aspects of Dee's original system, and does indeed give a very systematic treatment of both the Heptarchic system, the Great Table material, the Aires, and the Claves Angelicae, all based on research of original sources. It also includes a precise and accurate debunking of the Golden Dawn and Crowley syntheses in light of what is actually present in the primary sources.[93] The idiosyncrasies of Tyson's work stem rather from his reconstructions, which are far more spectacular and imaginative than that of the earlier purists, such as Robert Turner and Geoffrey James.

Tyson's ambivalence toward the sources is further indicated by his other projects. For instance, over the years he has collaborated with the Schuelers in their work. Most significantly, he wrote a foreword to the Schuelers' book Angels' Message to Humanity, published in 1996. Here it is revealed that it was actually Tyson who came up with the idea of making an inverted version of the "Tablet of Union" of the Great Table—named the "Tablet of Chaos"—to construct the "Enochian Cube" cosmology mentioned above.[94] According to Tyson, it was the collaboration on this project that eventually turned him toward the apocalyptic interpretations of Enochian which he incorporated in his Tetragrammaton and Enochian Magic for Beginners.[95]

Although he does not seem to involve himself much with the contemporary community of Enochian magicians, the publication of Tetragrammaton and Enochian Magic for Beginners has acquired for Tyson a position in it, and, as we will see in the last chapter, his work is often discussed by magicians.

8
Enochiana without Borders

The core publications of the purist turn have greatly influenced the reception and conceptualization of Enochian magic in the last two decades. However, while the purist current has remained very much alive in the 1990s and the new millennium, there is a variety of interpretations on the market. The Golden Dawn interpretation still has wide currency, Crowley's use of the Aethyrs is taken as exemplum by Thelemites and non-Thelemites alike, while some seek to build further on these occultist classics, and others even claim new revelations from Dee's and Kelley's angels. With the mass-popularization of esoteric discourse of the late twentieth century, the Enochian discourse has been imported to other countries as well, including non-English speaking countries such as France and Norway.[1]

Meanwhile, the full-blown emergence of the Internet by the mid-1990s has provided for a rapidly growing occult community online, spawning new occult fascination with Enochian in what seems an exponential growth curve. The massive migration of occultism online toward the end of the previous century resulted in a radically democratized situation, marked more by endless discussions and negotiations between individual practitioners with unlike views, than by asserted, normative positions. While I have indeed sought to emphasize these flexible, dialogical, and discursive features in earlier periods as well, moving the discussion into the contested spaces of the World Wide Web has made the subject matter of Enochian magic even more contested. Also, with the blurred boundaries between private and public knowledge that follows online publication, the many debates, uncertainties, and polemics have become even more open and apparent. Competing for survival in the marketplace is not as easy as it was before, given the omnipresence of differing views and products. This has laid strains on practitioners making claims about Enochian, leading to the flourishing of interesting discussions on the basis for legitimacy in Enochian matters.

The present chapter will emphasize the major trends in argumentation to be found in the contemporary Enochian discourse community online. As the online/offline distinction does not refer to entirely distinct realms or worlds, there will, however, obviously be overlaps. Especially, we shall see that the literary production discussed in the previous chapter has provided a framework which much of the online debates revolve around. In addition to tracing and analyzing these discussions, I will have a closer look at the perspectives of a couple of prominent Enochian magicians who emerged solely from this online occult community, and have continued to have influence in the new millennium.

The Internet, Contemporary Occulture, and International Enochian Networks

The 1990s saw the full-blown emergence of the Internet, and the explosive growth of the World Wide Web. Probably the most revolutionary development in information technology since the printing press, this change in the conditions and means of communication and publishing had far-reaching consequences for the development of contemporary religiosity.[2] As a part of this broader development, occultism has been equally influenced by the new technology, finding new ground for recruitment and dissemination of information online.[3] As Christopher Partridge noted in his discussion of the contemporary occulture, the advent of the Internet "has facilitated and accelerated the emergence of mystical networks and organizations."[4] Following the work of sociologist Colin Campbell on the "cultic milieu," the proliferation of ideas through such networks is at the core of "mystical religion," or, in Partridge's terminology, of occulture itself. The Internet laid the foundation for an explosive growth of such networks, by largely sidestepping geographical boundaries.[5]

The significance of the Internet in providing a way of efficient communication has had a considerable impact on Enochiana. The new routes of communication provided by the Net have facilitated the growth of a worldwide network of Enochian magicians, through various e-mail lists and discussion forums. Generally, it seems, occultists were early birds in taking advantage of the new technology, as the Enochian magicians illustrate. It was only in 1995–96 that the Internet entered a period of explosive growth; during that period the Internet gained the full attention of the general public, and we also saw the distribution of user-friendly software, resulting in millions of new users.[6] Although occultism had already gone online through earlier successful networks such as Usenet, it was in this period of growth, toward the end of 1996, that a number of occultists established the "Enochian-L" mailing list.[7] This would become the basis for thriving discussions and networking between Enochian magicians in years to come. In fact, most of the notable scholars, authors, and magicians currently working with Enochian participated in this list, including such names as Benjamin Rowe, David R. Jones, Al Billings, Clay Holden, Darcy Küntz, Chris Feldman (a.k.a. Christeos Pir), Runar Karlsen, and others. The Internet, shortly put, empowered and gave a voice to a new class of Enochian specialists, previously without the means of uttering their ideas to a broader public of likeminded individuals.

As e-lists became increasingly outdated at the turn of the millennium, the center of gravity for online occult discussions switched toward discussion groups and forums. For the Enochian community, the most notable one is the Yahoo! group "Enochian," established in January 2002 and still growing rapidly.[8] This was the forum to which the Enochian-L subscribers migrated and kept the discussions going. As discussion groups are much more easily available than e-lists to a broader public, the membership rapidly grew. As of spring 2008 the group has more than 550 members, who have published more than 5,200 posts in total.

In addition to facilitating the emergence of communication networks the Internet has also provided a cheap, easy, and decentralized way for individuals to publish material. Also on this front, the occult community has been quite prolific. The resource portal hermetic.com, established by Al Billings in 1996, holds much Enochian material. Here we find both original sources and the essays of modern and contemporary magicians.[9] Another important site is "Norton's Imperium," which was run by the late Benjamin Rowe. Now relocated to hermetic.com, this site still contains Rowe's collected works on Enochian, which have been much discussed by the online Enochianites.[10] In addition, original source documents have been made available in various forms. Perhaps most notable is the online Magickal Review, run by Ian Rons, which has secured rights from collections in order to publish electronic scans of the original Sloane and Cotton manuscripts, in addition to more essays and contemporary theories on the practice of Enochian magic.[11]

Also on the material side, the Internet has opened new possibilities. As marketing and distribution of goods has become more and more common online as well, there now exists a Web site making and selling ritual equipment for Enochian magic. A wooden Great Table, a "ring of Solomon" in gold, or a Sigillum Emeth carved in beeswax can all be obtained online and shipped to magicians who have a few hundred U.S. dollars to spend.[12]

It is safe to say that the growth of the Internet has provided a whole new infrastructure for the production and distribution of knowledge on Enochiana, as in other domains. Perhaps one of the most important aspects is that it has provided an arena for a whole class of people who did not already have a voice in the form of being contracted and published authors. It should be remarked that before the Internet revolution, what existed of Enochian material and discussions of it came out of a small handful of publishers. Llewellyn was certainly the main actor, publishing Regardie and the Golden Dawn material, as well as the works of Tyson and the Schuelers. The alternatives, especially the vanguard publications of the purist turn, came out of smaller publishing houses, mostly in Britain, such as Adam McLean's Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourcework series, Askin Publishers, Element, and Aquarian Press.[13] In the 1990s, Weiser Books and New Falcon also entered the scene, most notably representing the Thelemic school of Enochian magic.[14] With the advent of the Internet, and the means of networking and publication that it provided, the access to both production and consumption of Enochian lore was largely decentralized. Consequently, a host of new voices was empowered. What did they have to say?

Discussing the Angels Online

The amount of information available online—material spanning, at the time of writing, fourteen years of running discussions—is far too vast to be considered in its entirety. However, the information accumulated in discussion forums and e-lists has an advantage that will be explored here, namely its "Q&A" quality. This makes it possible to browse for specific topics that are discussed and analyzed by the main participants of the forum or e-list. In the present section, therefore, I will look specifically at discussions related to the points raised in chapter 4, concerning the authenticity problem and the legitimacy of magic.

Discussing Authenticity

When the Enochian e-list was established in 1996, the anonymous author of one of the very first posts addressed "the esteemed Benjamin Rowe," who had also subscribed to the list.[15]

Rowe was already a respected Enochian magician, operating in California, who had written several (unpublished) essays and articles on the topic, now published online. He had been experimenting with Enochian magic since 1985, when he engaged in what he termed extensive "tourism" of the tablet of Earth according to the Golden Dawn attributions.[16] Rowe's various articles reveal an innovative and practical take on Enochian magic, operating primarily from the basis of Golden Dawn and Crowley systems, but also with a sensibility tuned toward the attitude of the purists. This is especially evident from his "Enochian Magick Reference," a document detailing to some extent the different parts of the original system, a brief "history of use," and an annotated bibliography of the existing Enochian literature.[17] His other works include reports on practical experiments, newly composed rituals, and theoretical pieces on the Enochian system.

Rowe was one of the most emphatic and defining voices on the Enochian-L e-list. Although he does not qualify as a strict purist himself, he was highly critical of the eclectic approach of Gerald Schueler, and also to the more imaginative aspects of Donald Tyson's work.[18] This seems to have been a quite widespread opinion on Enochian-L; just after Tyson had published Tetragrammaton and his contested 1996 article in Gnosis, there appeared a thread discussing his system. At first, Rowe wanted to know if anybody had tried practicing Tyson's method of combining the angelic calls with the Great Table. After a short while, however, the thread focused entirely on his apocalyptic ideas. When Rowe learned that Tyson had collaborated with Schueler on Angels' Message, he headshakingly commented that "Between Jerry's theosophy and Tyson's apocalyptics, there's gonna be some mighty confused readers out there."[19] Meanwhile, two others, Michael Lynch and Charla Williams, proposed featuring Tyson in the humor section.[20] Clearly, his position did not have much credibility in the forum, which is perhaps also indicated by Rowe's judgment of his books in the "Enochian Magick Reference" document, where he is included together with Schueler in the "Hall of Shame":

> Tyson combines the Enochian material with Fundamentalist millennialism and Lovecraftian horror fiction, to paint a picture of the Angelic Calls as the means by which the apocalypse will be brought about. In the process, he twists facts to suit his thesis, selectively interprets the Calls, and blithely dismisses contrary portions of the record as "not what was intended."[21]

But Rowe's "Hall of Shame" was nevertheless dominated by the works of Gerald Schueler. One of the highlights of the Enochian-L discussions occurred when Schueler himself joined the list, and engaged in a polemical exchange with Rowe.[22] Before he entered the discussion, Rowe had been criticizing Schueler's books, especially what he saw as unaccredited borrowing from other sources, overly imaginative changes to the system, and a low standard of scholarship.[23] As Rowe quickly pointed out to Schueler on the list, he had an "extreme bias" against his books: "This bias started to build with Enochian Magick, and that marvelous piece of semantic nullity, Enochian Physics, drove a spike through the heart of my few remaining doubts about my judgment."[24]

The "semantic nullity" of Enochian Physics referred especially to what Rowe identified as a rhetorical, inconsistent, and nonsensical use of scientific-sounding terminology. Schueler had defended his eclectic take on magical theory by saying that his work was intended to "put the Enochian material into a framework that is (1) useful and practical, and (2) founded on a solid theoretical basis."[25] Rowe responded by pointing to Enochian Physics, hastily deconstructing and debunking some of its scientizing language, before concluding that > [i]t would take me at least a couple of months to catalog and explain all the errors of logic, undefined and multiply-defined terms, contradictory statements and other messes I found in the book. Doing so would be as tedious as finding all the logical fallacies in Aquinas, and would take us far from the purpose of this e-list.[26]

Rowe intended to show how the whole work was useless as a theoretical fundament, since it was massively inconsistent and contradictory. In his view, Schueler's paralleling of Einstein's famous mass-energy equation of special relativity, $E = mc^2$, with his own "equation of Enochian physics," $S = Fv^2$ (where S is "Spirit," F is "Form," and v is "the speed of thought"),[27] constitutes "a sort of "authority by propinquity," giving the aura of meaningfulness to nonsense by mentioning it in the same breath as something that is meaningful."[28] Schueler's response to the claims that his theoretical expounding qualifies as gibberish is summed up in his statement: "Not for me it doesn't. It actually makes a whole lot of sense."[29] The argumentation seemed to stop there.

Schueler's latter statement is perhaps illustrative of a subjective and relativistic argumentative strategy that goes well with his approach generally. Faced with Rowe's resentful criticism, Schueler further tries to explain that he does not accept any definite and universal mode of interpretation of the Enochian system—even though Rowe surely criticizes him for doing exactly this with his theosophical, scientizing model presented by definite and absolutist figures of speech (e.g., "Enochian magic teaches," "Enochian physics teaches," etc.). Instead, Schueler insisted on being fully aware that "[t]hose whom I would label 'Dee purists' are never going to accept my interpretations, nor did I ever expect them to. I assume that you are a 'Dee purist' and that is fine."[30]

Interestingly, Rowe did not consider himself to be a purist, as he stated explicitly in his response. However, he added, he did "believe in maintaining a sharp distinction between information that comes from the original material, and information that comes by other means."[31] The reason for this, Rowe makes clear, is that he agrees with one central point Schueler makes, namely that Dee's diaries and magical manuscripts have significant gaps, such that they do not present a fully functional magical system: "A certain amount of improvisation has always been necessary, and the angels took this into account in their (admittedly brief) instructions on how to use them."[32] Adding to this, with another clear sting against Schueler, Rowe expressed being "not at all certain that an 'overall theoretical foundation' [of Enochian magic] is in any way necessary, or even possible."[33]

The discussion between Rowe and Schueler is intriguing in connection with the problem of authenticity. It bears witness to an interesting nuance, which deserves to be addressed in some detail. In his criticism, Rowe to a considerable extent makes use of the language of purism, although when confronted with it, he denies being a purist. On a broad level of analysis, both Rowe and Schueler have a pragmatic approach to Enochian magic; they are both opposed to the strict perennialism, or appeal to tradition, of previous occultist syntheses, and at the same time aware of the operational flaws of the strictly original Dee material. Both arrive at the conclusion that a certain amount of creativity is necessary.

Their main difference is, rather, found on a somewhat deeper level of analysis, where it stems from a differing choice of discursive strategies. For this analysis, I refer again to the three strategies identified in modern esoteric discourses by Olav Hammer, namely "(terminological) scientism," "appeal to tradition," and "appeal to experience."[34] With reference to this, Rowe was an experimentalist, and his language of choice in legitimizing his claims on Enochian magic is found in an appeal to experience. His final word in objection to Schueler is not actually purist, but rather experiential. As Rowe put it, to prove his innovations were legitimate, Schueler would "have to publish a hell of a lot of his own magickal records to convince me he got his stuff from actually using the magick."[35] In the course of his own work, Rowe published extensive amounts of personal experiences and dealings with the Enochian entities, from the angels of the Great Table, to scrying of the Aethyrs and the ninety-one parts of the earth presented therein.[36] With the basis in such experiments he went on to (re)construct rituals and methods for working with the Enochian entities, based mostly on known ritual structures from the Golden Dawn and Crowley, such as the rituals of the hexagram, which was revised and "Enochianized" by Rowe.[37]

While an appeal to experience seems to be the main discursive strategy taken by Rowe, the polemical exchange surrounding Schueler's Enochian Physics illustrates a clash with what can be discerned as "terminological scientism." Rowe's suspicions about the use of scientific nomenclature constructing an "authority by propinquity" does not seem totally off target; certainly, Schueler himself seems to argue that he is merely "updating" Enochiana by making "a synthesis of Blavatsky, Crowley, Dee, and modern science."[38] Meanwhile, the experiential dimension is not as emphatic in his writing; although when confronted, Schueler had to defend himself on experiential terms as well, by affirming that he had undertaken practical work. But his final word, contrary to that of Rowe, was that a "theoretical framework" explaining how Enochian magic might work is necessary "if you want a worldview that accepts Enochian material as fact. . . . Else it all rests on faith, and you may as well go to church."[39]

Discussing the Nature of Angels

While the previous section illustrates the continued and increasing contestation of legitimacy that has followed Enochiana's migration to Cyberspace, there is now need for a brief discussion as well of the question of interpreting the nature of the Enochian entities. Together with the question of "who decides the right way" in Enochiana, this very question seems to attract most interest, at least from newcomers that join the online e-lists or discussion groups. Again, the plurality of views and positions is considerable. As one commentator online put it in 2005, "The two opposing schools of thought is [sic!]: spirit contact is either a psychological manifestation, or . . . spirits are real and have their own external abodes."[40] This broad divide frequently shows up in discussions on the reality of the angels; certainly the psychologized version does not have monopoly.[41] For the sake of brevity I will focus my discussion here on one thread of posts on Enochian-L where the local champion Ben Rowe is put to the test by fellow debaters.

After discussing a technical point concerning occult attributions in the Enochian Great Table, Rowe was asked by an eager student, signing interchangeably as "V. H." and "Tim," whether he believed that Enochian was, in fact, delivered by angels, and if he perceived validity (i.e., legitimacy) in Enochian matters to hinge on reconstructing the motivations of the angels.[42] It is well worth quoting Rowe's response at some length, as it reveals an attitude that seems quite pervasive among the more eloquent and articulate segments of the contemporary occultural milieu. First, Rowe responded that for a long time he had adopted a practice in which he > put the word "angels" in quotes, to show that I was using it as a convenience rather than as a statement of belief about the nature of the phenomena observed. I haven't the faintest idea as to the "real" nature of the source of these recorded words.[43]

Such seemingly agnostic, or rather conventionalist, expressions seem to be quite widespread among present day magicians. I also encountered it in my previous research on contemporary ritual magic in Norway.[44] In addition, it seems to be a part of the structure of "psychologized magic" as understood by Hanegraaff, and the "suspension of disbelief" noticed by Luhrmann in her study of contemporary British witches.[45] Revisited from the viewpoint of a discursive analysis, this seems to be a strategic agnosticism; a convenient way for magicians to remain ontologically noncommittal, suspending their judgment when confronted by critical or skeptical voices, while still being able to retain the basic point that there is "something going on." However, the magicians' evaluation seldom stops there, and Rowe is no exception. After asserting this initial bracketing of the ontological question, Rowe claims that the evidence of Dee's diaries provides a picture of independent, sapient beings: "In the absence of strong evidence to the contrary," he goes on to write, "it is simplest to deal with the material in the terms in which it presents itself, and to see where that leads."[46] Rowe invents an analogy to argue his point:

> The evidence I have for the existence of these "angels" as separate beings is of exactly the same sort as I have for the existence of "V. H." [i.e., the person he is responding to]. In some ways the evidence in their favor is a bit stronger; the angels I contact using the Calls frequently surprise me, while "Tim" is fairly predictable. Perhaps "Tim" is just a clever AI program running on a MacIntosh somewhere in the bowels of Apple Corp; or perhaps "Tim" is a bit of online theater, maintained over the years by a group of scriptwriters. ;-) Still, most of the time it is simpler to act as if Tim is an intelligent, individual being. The same for these "angels."

The essence of the argument, then, is in one sense "pragmatic," but in another sense "realistic"; given the way things seem, the reality of the angels may be perceived as an inference to the best explanation. In other words, Rowe claims for himself an argument based on abductive reasoning which, although not logically valid from a formal perspective, is widely considered an important cornerstone of the scientific method.[47] Interestingly, the noncommittal, agnostic position seems to be merely an early stage in a broader argument which goes in the direction of asserting the reality of the angels in some more-than-mundane sense.

If, as I have suggested, this position is widespread, it is still far from uncontested. In the thread mentioned, Rowe quickly got a response from someone signing as "nigris (333),"[48] apparently a Satanist, opening most of his posts with "Hail Satan!"[49] Nigris's response is interesting in that it puts the seemingly rational basis of Rowe's evaluation to the test—which eventually pushes Rowe into giving even more of what he considers evidence for the reality of the angels. First of all, Nigris contests Rowe's alleged agnosticism, or bracketing, which is at the basis of his argument, by saying that taking alternative models than those presented in the diaries themselves into account actually is relevant from the beginning, as he puts it, "if one is attempting to discover precisely what is going on in the process of communication (as reflective or investigative inquiry during or prior to engagement of the art/science)."[50] In a later post Nigris advocates a psychologized interpretation instead, and, when actually working the magic, employing a quite conscious suspension of disbelief.[51] In addition Nigris attacks the validity of Rowe's abductive inference: the analogy he constructed is not really analogous, Nigris claims, since the inference that "Tim is real" is based on the knowledge that Rowe himself appears in the same manner (i.e., as words on a screen) via the medium of computer and Internet, whereas he has presumably no such experience of ever having appeared to someone as an angel in visions.[52] The point made is that the inference of the reality of the angels is not grounded in the same type of trivial experience; the inference of Tim's existence is based on a background knowledge of how humans generally behave, a trivial, tacit knowledge which he does not have of angels. In the end, Nigris proclaims that "I'm not sure I understand what is being called 'real' and would bypass the question of 'reality' for an analysis of possibilities as regards what it is that is happening in the Calls and what or who it might be that becomes involved with them."[53]

As an effect of these criticisms, Rowe defends his position by bringing in more of what he considers evidence supporting the hypothesis that the angels are real and independent beings. He especially points to the Dee diaries themselves, and some of the more mysterious features revealed by a close reading of them. For instance, Rowe points to the somewhat perplexing fact that the names of the "91 parts of the earth" in Liber scientiae, and the sigils belonging to each of the ninety-one spirits, are extracted from the letter squares of the Great Table, but that the Table itself actually appears to have been constructed or received only a month later than the former.[54] He acknowledges that skeptics have suggested, for this and other reasons, that Kelley must have been something of "a con-man with an IQ above genius level and an eidetic memory, who planned the whole thing out ahead of time, memorized all the data, and leaked it out through the 'visions' over the course of four years."[55] However, Rowe added, "I personally do not find this alternative credible."[56]

Finally, Rowe also indicates that he is conscious of the seemingly fluctuating "nature" of the angels as they present themselves to different people:

> If you read over the available records of people's contacts with these beings, it is clear that the way in which they appear depends a lot on the nature of the magician they are contacting. To Dee and Kelly they appeared as imperious Christian angels; to Crowley they were theatrical thelemites; to the Aurum Solis they were bands of goetia-like spirits; and to me they are friendly, laid-back metaphysicians.[57]

Although this could have been taken straight out of scholarly discussions of the historical and cultural contingency of "mystical experience," as discussed by, for instance, Steven Katz and Wayne Proudfoot,[58] Rowe goes on to assert that the one stable and universal feature, in his opinion, is that the angels act in all cases as "initiators par excellence, who aren't restricted by any human religion or world-view."[59] Here we see again the theme initiated by Crowley.

It seems fairly unambiguous in the end that Benjamin Rowe, for one, considered the angels to be real in a more than psychological sense. To close this section, I will quote the opening statement of Rowe's perhaps most influential tract on Enochian magic, "Godzilla meets E.T.":

> What most distinguishes the Enochian magickal system is that it is an artifact, a made thing. . . . It is equally clear to those who have used the system extensively that it is not the product of human creativity, but of a being or beings possessing a much higher order of perception and a much greater scope of action. The magickal beings who are bound into this system are all (except the cacodemons) of at least the human level of development. Each has a nature as deep and complex as any man, and each has an individual will as strong. Further, the system appears to touch on every part of the magickal universe; no magician has yet found any limit to its connections.

> Both of these facts demonstrate that the origin of this magick must have been truly divine. No lesser source could possibly have bound together the elements it contains; no lesser source could have made those elements so instantly and perfectly responsive to the will of the user.[60]

New Revelations

Through the course of this book we have seen how painstakingly preoccupied modern occultists have been with negotiating the authority of Dee's original documents, possessing an air of ancient legitimacy, with new and sometimes quite modern frameworks of interpretation. In recent years, however, the field of Enochian magic has also seen an attempt to move beyond this whole complex of interpretation and reinterpretation of something that happened in Elizabethan times. At the turn of the new millennium we find an Enochian milieu that places emphasis on new revelation. Roughly coinciding with Benjamin Rowe's illness and death, the focus of the online discussions shifted from being centered on technical points of interpreting original data and evaluating the Golden Dawn and Aurum Solis, to extensive comparison of notes, reports on newly discovered Enochian words, or entire verses and newly received letter tablets. In Cyberspace, the angels spoke again.

A Latter-Day Edward Kelley?

The most central, or at least the most illustrative, figure of this movement is Runar Karlsen. Karlsen (b. 1963) is a Norwegian magician based in Oslo, where he graduated at the Academy of Fine Arts. He has a firm background in Thelema, having run one of the competing thelmeic groups, "Balt Oasis" of the Caliphate O.T.O., in Oslo in the early 1990s.[61] There is also evidence that he had at some point read the literature concerning Michael Aquino and the revelation of his Book of Coming Forth by Night.[62] This seems a relevant fact considering Karlsen's own Enochian endeavors.

When he joined the Enochian-L mailing list in September 1997, Karlsen testified of having been interested in Enochiana since 1988, when he had become absorbed by the Enochian keys.[63] Subsequently he had introduced Enochian workshops and rituals into his O.T.O. group. The name of that group itself betrays an interest in Enochian magic, as "Balt" is the Angelic for "Justice"; associated in the Enochian calls with "Iad Balt": "God of Justice."

When he joined Enochian-L in 1997 Karlsen for a long time held a relatively low profile, making the occasional comment to queries, and posting some of his own experiences with Enochian scrying. After a while he started posting material that revealed more idiosyncrasies. His first contribution was a post on "The Elements," which argued that the elemental attributions assigned to pentagrams used in the Golden Dawn did not make sense, and had to be revised, especially by incorporating certain Enochian spirit names into the equation.[64] This sparked some minor debate in the forum.

But his posts would become more intriguing still. Responding to a discussion on certain unexplained numbers that appear in the text of the nineteen Enochian calls, Karlsen revealed for the first time his quite novel interpretation. In Karlsen's view, "The numbers in the calls refer to independent spirits; a pantheon within the system."[65] He immediately followed up by giving the names of twenty-eight spirits from "the table of NI."[66] "NI" is an Enochian word appearing in the seventh call, where it is rendered as the number 28.[67] The spirit names that Karlsen lists, however, are not to be found anywhere in the original Enochian corpus. In fact, it soon surfaces that "the table of NI" is an entirely new letter table communicated to Karlsen, as some latter-day Edward Kelley, together with several other new calls and spirit names.

Karlsen's main work, it seems, had been to chart out the spirits allegedly "masked" behind mysterious numbers in the Enochian calls and devise methods to call them forth. According to his own statement, Karlsen's first encounter with these uncharted Enochian entities was not a product of any deliberate effort on his part. As he explained, he had been performing some elemental magical work unrelated to Enochian, when nine spirits intruded into his visionary experience. The spirits started speaking in "soft voices at a very loud volume," dictating a book to him in a language he would later identify as Enochian.[68] The book would become known as Dor OS zol ma thil, which Karlsen later translated as "The falling seats of the twelve black hands." [69] It contained three chapters that "explained" the works of "the nine fire spirits of EM" (a word meaning "nine" in Enochian, appearing in the sixth call) and revealed their names.[70] This event took place in January 1991.

This was not the only "received work" Karlsen got. Over the years to come, he tried to communicate with the angels in order to have the Dor OS zol ma thil translated, but with only partial success.[71] In addition, however, another series of Enochian texts were revealed to him from 1992 and onward.[72] This corpus, consisting of verses in Enochian and a series of new letter tablets, bears the name I Ged (translated as "Is falling").

The corpus has later been described as "an Enochian grimoire," in that it tabulates entirely new letter squares and spirit names for the groups of spirits that Karlsen has discovered behind the numbers in the original calls. It also gives entirely new Enochian calls to be used for working with them.[73] Together with the Dor OS zol ma thil this new material makes up a whole new subsection of Enochian magic; or, as Karlsen described it to Enochian-L subscribers in 1998, "a pantheon within the system."

Despite the somewhat extraordinary-sounding character of his work, Karlsen was not given too much attention on Enochian-L at first. His early posts gave the impression of a slightly unpredictable character, with unusual and strange ideas, often formulated in less than waterproof English. During his first months at Enochian-L, there was really just one other person, Dean Hildebrandt, who seemed genuinely intrigued by Karlsen's work, and encouraged him by asking clearly interested questions.[74] But as time progressed, Karlsen's presence on the Internet facilitated a growing interest in his work. In Spring 2001 several people posted reports on Enochian-L about their attempts to work with Karlsen's spirits and calls.[75] In the summer of 2002, Paul Joseph Rovelli (writing under the name Zephyros93) uploaded his analysis of Karlsen's transmission as a Thelemic prophetic work to the Enochian Yahoo! group, connecting it with Crowley's Liber Legis.[76] When the discussions moved into the Yahoo! group, it seems that Karlsen's revelations were gradually incorporated and recognized as a new part of the Enochian system.

The previously mentioned Dean Hildebrandt played a significant role in this development. He was the first to seriously embrace Karlsen's ideas, and started collaborating with him. In 1997 they started e-mailing and comparing notes as Hildebrandt begun exploring Karlsen's newly received material.[77] Around 1999 they created a Web site together, entitled Ored Dhagia—The Infinite Ways, which is dedicated to exploring Karlsen's system.[78] The site features all the newly received material, indexed and commented on by both Karlsen and Hildebrandt, and also a collection of various essays (and links to external essays) written by others who have become associated with this current. Especially worthy of mention are Patricia Shaffer and Marid Audran. Shaffer's claim to fame in contemporary Enochiana was her theory of "letter essences," which she published in its first form on the Enochian-L list in 1998.[79] Operating from a theory that each letter and its corresponding sound expresses some meaning that is universal (although hidden) "to the mind of man," Shaffer constructed a list of such essences for the Enochian letters.[80] Thus she got, for instance

O: Root of Being-Becoming: being, becoming; existence
L: Root of Primacy: first, primary, one; providence
S: Root of Possession: have, acquire, gather; together
N: Root of Interiority: within, inside, self-hood.[81]

Already after Shaffer's initial posting of it on Enochian-L Karlsen showed great interest in the theory, which he found resonant with his own ideas.[82] His positive response led to an exchange of ideas between the two. In his later work Karlsen frequently incorporates Shaffer's method of letter analysis in order to translate new Enochian words.

Marid Audran is another magician who has followed up on Karlsen's track, and has received more material in the same way. A section of Audran's work is included on Karlsen's Web site; this work combines Karlsen's revelations and Shaffer's letter essence theory, while exploring new and uncharted territories, such as the entity Caosgo—an Enochian name allegedly belonging to "the spirit of the Earth."[83]

"The New Flow"

In 2006 someone asked the Enochian Yahoo! group whether or not it was true that Enochiana consisted of several, rather than one, magical systems. The response given by a member calling himself Ima Pseudonym is quite illustrative of what seems to have happened in contemporary Enochiana after Runar Karlsen's entry:

> [O]n a gross level, there are at least three official systems: Watchtower, Heptarchy, and Loagaeth. Patricia [Shaffer]'s Letter Essences are perhaps best seen as an expansion of Loagaeth material, but can be considered on their own. Dean [Hildebrandt] and Runar [Karlsen] have added the I Ged material. Others have added smaller, but still relevant, works.[84]

At the turn of the millennium we find an Enochian milieu that places a much greater emphasis on new revelations. As the quote above suggests, some of these have been more or less canonized as parts of the Enochian literature, adding to the original revelations of Dee and Kelley. At least in the minds of some Enochian magicians, there is no definite distinction of authority or legitimacy between the revelations of Kelley and those of the latter-day spirit seer Runar Karlsen. After all, the real authors of the material are the Enochian angels—or so it is claimed. In recent years there has been a growing understanding in the milieu that what has happened during the last decade or so, starting with Enochian-L and Benjamin Rowe, onward to the Yahoo! group and Karlsen, Hildebrandt, Shaffer, Audran et al., is in fact the emergence of a "New Flow" of Enochian material. The term "New Flow" was first used by Karlsen, but was soon picked up by others.[85] That the tendency was reified by being given its own term is not without significance. It signifies that legitimacy can now rightly reside in claims to a specific sort of revelatory experience; such experiential claims are intersubjectively validated by participants in the Enochian discourse.

In a sense, this development may be seen as a product of the dynamics of the online discussion community itself, starting with the Enochian-L discussions largely revolving around the person of Benjamin Rowe. In summer 2004 this was recognized in an announcement on the Enochian Yahoo! group of a proposed book project, > that will present what Runar once referred to as "the New Flow" of Enochian work, starting most likely with Ben Rowe and continuing, with permission of course, with the stupendous amount of work accomplished by Runar and Dean, et. al. The emphasis will be on Enochiana as a spiritual practice path, rather than on scholarship per se.[86]

The book has yet to appear. Meanwhile, it is my hope that the present work, although certainly a work of scholarship and not of practice, may have made a contribution toward presenting this interesting new development in a way that does justice to its position within the modern history of Enochian angel magic.

Conclusions

Enochiana as a Contested Field of Discourse

Through the course of this book we have seen how Enochian magic became a center of controversy for post–Golden Dawn occultists. This is in part a result of the kind of religious innovation that was present in fin de siècle occultism: with the dawning of a more complete historical consciousness some modern occultists reached the conclusion that the Golden Dawn system was an innovative synthesis, and not necessarily a legitimate one. In the aftermath of the Golden Dawn we saw a developing contest for the legitimate interpretation of the Order's heritage between various competing groups. As is particularly evident in the case of Paul Foster Case's B.O.T.A., the Enochian factor played an important part of this. According to Case the use of Enochiana delegitimized the competing Golden Dawn groups, since it had nothing to do with Rosicrucianism. For others who placed importance on Enochiana, however, it was mostly the other way around: Regardie could refer to Enochian as proof that the Order was really arcane, whether stemming from Atlantis or the heavenly angels, while Crowley could appeal to the system of the Aethyrs and his exploration of those entities as confirmation of his prophetic quest. The same theme showed up again in the context of Satanism, where Crowley's strategy was taken over and imitated by Aquino.

Until the dawn of LaVey's "Age of Satan," occultists nevertheless largely stayed within the G.D. framework of interpretation. With LaVey, a breach with the "occultism of the past" was attempted, resulting in further strategies to delegitimize the Golden Dawn's perennial and esoteric conceptions, and instead construct other frameworks for understanding the legitimacy and efficacy of Enochian magic. Here we see a full-blown appeal to pragmatic groundings: Enochian works because it is a particularly sonorous and evocative language, not because it is "divine."

These developments coincide with the emergence of a culture in the West of questioning all authority, questioning all claims to truth, questioning all master narratives. In this respect, LaVeyian Satanism represents the emergence of the postmodern condition in occultism, a development that would become most felt in Chaos Magic. Enochian, which has been associated with "High Magic" in the most ritualized and ceremonial sense, does not seem to have caught too much serious attention in that current. However, I do suggest that the "postmodern condition" had a different impact on the development of Enochian magic considered by itself, a kind of influence that is not stereotypically attributed to postmodernism, but which nevertheless belongs to it. By questioning the occultist master narrative of the Golden Dawn one was in need of new foundations for legitimate practice. As more students started exploring Enochiana from the available textbooks, some, such as Robert Turner and Geoffrey James, took to the original sources. The strategy of using the original Dee manuscripts to both attack and delegitimize prior positions, and to pose a positive framework for doing Enochian magic "correctly" became a central feature of what I have termed the purist turn of the Enochian discourse.

The late 1980s and early 1990s witnessed an explosion of interest in Enochiana. In addition to the new standard works of the purist turn Llewellyn signed Gerald and Betty Schueler, whose books contributed to the popularization of the system. These went in a direction quite opposite from that of the purists. As suggested, they tended to cloth their discourse in the scientizing language of a "rhetoric of rationality," while continuing the synthesizing trend, adding new elements including Theosophy and transpersonal psychology. The coexistence of these two approaches to Enochian has given rise to a persistent field of conflict and polemical exchange, especially after the migration of Enochiana online. The vast criticism Gerald Schueler received on the Enochian-L list, and his attempt to defend himself, is indicative of the hardening competition faced especially by those wishing to do something more eclectic with Enochian after the purist turn.

In Cyberspace the Enochian milieu took another turn as well, with the "New Flow" associated with the circle around Runar Karlsen. Adding to the multiplicity of views and approaches, and the contested issue of "What is Enochian?" the last decade has seen an increasing interest in and acceptance of new revealed Enochian material. I believe this to be a development that was facilitated by the way knowledge is produced, disseminated, and consumed after the emergence of the Internet. As discussion forums and online networks of likeminded people complement and to a certain extent even replace the centrality of published books, a picture of Enochian magic as being less stable and fixed seems to have emerged. There has been a growing emphasis on the comparison of notes and discussions of ritual methods, results, and metaphysical issues. When some of the results include entirely new calls, letter tablets, and instructions from the angels, this has presented a picture of Enochian magic that is more dynamic, fluctuating, and in continual development. When this picture is established, the purist criticism is no longer seen as threatening.

The Legitimacy of Magic Revisited

The close attention to individual claims and counterclaims among modern magicians in this book also provides an opportunity to make some remarks on the conceptions of magic more generally. As with the question of the nature of Enochiana the tendency is not toward a broad consensus on all points of interpretation of what magic is, how it works, and what the reality of its entities consists of. Rather we do see a great variety, from LaVey's notion that the angels "are only 'angels' because occultists to this day have lain ill with metaphysical constipation," to theories depending on the collective unconscious, the more "traditional" understandings present in parts of the purist movement, and "realistic" understandings reinforced with (purportedly) rational arguments, such as the abductive inference of Benjamin Rowe and others. There is a wealth of positions, a wealth of argumentative strategies to defend them, and a wealth of reasons to produce them. One should especially remember LaVey's polemical stance toward traditional esotericists—a clear example of how a position and the line of argumentation it is presented in is embedded in a social context.

With this I will recall the debates on the transformations of magic in light of a (possibly) disenchanted modern culture. Especially one should revisit briefly the "psychologization of magic" thesis postulated perhaps most forcefully by Wouter Hanegraaff. While it seems to me that it does not hold in its strongest formulation, there are still other observations that seem to point to a more stable phenomenon. On an ontological level, that is, understood as "internalization" of entities such as "demons" and "angels," or the evacuation of magic to the psyche as described by Hanegraaff, psychologization seems to be not a rule, but rather one strategy, sometimes employed, among several others. But Hanegraaff also observed something else, which I think is a tendency with some more permanence: the prevailing conception that magic is ultimately about personal spiritual development.[1] This seems to have been a lasting inheritance from the Golden Dawn, with its focus on the "higher self," through Crowley's "True Will" of Thelema, and further reinforced by the self-religionists of the 1960s counterculture. In Enochian magic this focus on spiritual development manifests in interesting ways, such as Regardie's exclusion of the Golden Dawn Book "H", which consisted of an interpretation of the Enochian Great Table that was close to that of Dee and Kelley. The use of angels and demons to procure precious metals, heal or cause wounds, and transporting people from country to country, although the function clearly stated in the original sources, was deemed "mediaeval, and definitely unsound from a spiritual viewpoint."[2] A similar remark was found in the contemporary writings of Schueler, this time with reference to the Heptarchic system. In both cases, it seems, there is a view of magic as more spiritually sublime than what a close reading of the early modern sources they base themselves on allows for. Interestingly, when it comes to modern Enochian discourse, it seems that the only current that really does allow a return to the less lofty motivations of magic is found among the purists. At large, however, the Aethyrs remain initiatory astral spheres and sources for prophecy instead of geographical entities and a magical system for geopolitical manipulation, while the Great Table remains a tool for exploring subtle aspects of the astral world and the four elements, instead of a system for evocation of angels and cacodaemons for practical purposes.

There is still a question of whether this could be labeled a psychologization of magic. There is an obvious emphasis on individual development, but it could just as well be framed as an aspect of a modern culture more generally, where individualism, personal expression, and development continue to be ideological focal points. This is in keeping with trends observed for emerging forms of religiosity in the West more generally. In the end, modern magicians tend to have a more spiritualized understanding of magic than their medieval and early modern predecessors. Magic has lost some of its utility, and gained instead in religious or even mystical validation.

APPENDIX

Author's note

This appendix contains the most central text alleged to have been received from the Enochian angels by the Norwegian magician Runar Karlsen in 1991. The three chapters, which are given here both in Enochian and Karlsen's own English translations, purport to introduce the names and functions of the nine "Spirits of EM." These are spirit entities that have not appeared in the earlier Enochian corpus. With regard to the language of these new calls, it consists of a combination of "old" Enochian words and new ones, which, again, appear for the first time in Karlsen's work. As Karlsen states in his introduction below, the translations are sometimes quite rough. They appear to include several grammatical errors; however, I have decided to leave the translation pretty much in its original form.

I have also included an introductory note provided by Karlsen himself, kindly supplied for the occasion of this publication. In it, he gives some glimpses of his own interpretation of the work and its significance. Readers who have read the whole book should now have little difficulty placing the interpretations in the proper context of speculations that have occupied the Enochian segment of the occulture for decades. For the ease of reference, I have added notes of my own pointing toward relevant sections in this book.

An Introductory Note to Dor OS zol ma thil

Runar Karlsen

This text is dictated by the three first spirits of the EM, the Nine Fire spirits, who speak out on their nature, how things look from their perspective and how the spirits may be used. The EM are a group of spirits among many other groups that are mentioned by numbers in the Calls received by Dee and Kelly.[1]

The title Dor OS zol ma thil.. connects it with the grimoire . . I ged. Combined and translated, they read: "The twelve black hands [and their] falling seats . . . are falling." From this we can understand that it is in . . I ged ("are falling") that the processes spoken of are carried out.[2] The . . I ged does contain calls for the other groups of spirits mentioned by numbers in Dee and Kelly's Calls. The whole work is therefore elaborating the system already laid out by Dee and Kelly. We see now that there are both global and galactic implications of this work which could not have been understood properly back in the 16th century, as common knowledge was limited (with an incomplete world map, and assuming our solar system to be of only seven planets).

The three chapters reveal the spirits as transcendent, the creator's newborn flame, and the lethal destroyer, or the karmic avenger. These themes are not unfamiliar to imperial religions, so I find it fair to say that the mighty powers of heaven do really want a refreshing if not an outright reset of an outdated or neglected formula.

John Dee was known as a Rosycrucian, and the central glyph of his Monas Hieroglyphica is also found in the main Rosycrucian books of his time.[3] The themes of the Book of the Em and also certain parts of . . I ged are relevant to Rosycrucianism, and may become part of its development into a more independent religion, more in tune with Hermetic philosophy and its traditions.

I finished the translation in 1993 and there have only been a few minor corrections since. I have also written a note to say that my translation is not perfect and should not be relied on in the particulars, just in the general. The translation is "raw" and word by word, little if anything has been done to recreate English sentence structure. There are still a few things remaining to complete the . . I ged, as there is much still waiting to be understood of its internal structure and functions. As of spring 2011, the old Ored Dhagia website is to be re-launched at http://www.infiniteways.net, where this work should be completed. Among other things, it will provide an outline or manual to the work spoken of by the EM.

Runar Karlsen, January 2011

14:53 Friday 25. January 1991

DOR OS ZOL MA THIL . . .

The 12 black hands and the falling seats.

Chapter one:

1) Ma pratisi kolia navadigi, selig quanisi gon. Hua na vetha seg GOVENTAZ dol po.

1. The fallen virgins are creating the stones on the path, the faithful and handless olives. I that sembles the evil spirit goventaz (saying neither here) am wholly divided.

2) Beria merkrth, so i rana, vetha keisa leta meru. Kolemn. Kethar sefi roni, Quesar lothi na veit kolia.

2. I am sleeping beyond, the visit is cold and to assimilate is finding torment. The creator herein. The bridge is to carry out the sunset. The destruction quenches the weaknesses that comes from the created.

3) Betha re i vah ma the zon, ke it do le. Gavana, dire kiti meg le sik kore; Na vai. Thero saka setia le paia seki sathajia.

3. Talking cunning is like falling as forms, therefore is it in the first. Arise, dismantle the 12 whose good intension was looking at the trinity's first mystery number, nr 2, Therefore mine provided oneness always shall be my openness.

4) Mer doi na van sej keti, beria vethi. Ramzakal no i a sevi late zar. PERIO da sajin sekun. Doria da sai vethik lama ran methik coi Necun. Per sak sal.

4. The torment-snake that is neither good nor bad, sleep comes from. The regrets within 456 becomes, and is the 2nd finding ways. PERIO is the black brother of mine. The black and fallen (brothers) illusionary path of regret are in continuance and (they) rather holy servants. Burning is my house.

5) Boru metha goii me tha la ke varunn, metha fetha keiin sel na va KATI re vaunn set.

5. The hurricane is blind, saying around in the excesses, therefore seeing. To the blinding visit within the hands of the good brother, cunning seeing is needed.

6) Therkes da vei nala Zax periodon. Thata rami, keta sa sek vetha quati zel berathi keiin. Do rati ve nonta ri ve ogg sa vekti lavi Ni Ni me onto rama i sevi kesar ka del o seki norotauni. Pe o ka za Ni vethi ra ta quasar. Te i pe ona terio la KETI. Thedit PeNi, raki o ve lasa.

6. The 2nd ladder which crosses Zax is the brothers fight. The cycle accelerates, they are within me, it is like having the creator's hands within. In hardening like the earths mercy-like chamber and letting the mute cry invoke the 28 28 (NI NI) for the pouring of regret, the feelings of destruction are the fighters named my defaced sons. Being called within are the 28 making regret as their pleasure. It is your making and shall be the good brother. Work the PeNI and weeping is called forth like riches.

7) Pena, reti keon tara leane sefi keta ra te ti. Peja naka theri ve naki theja mopolosa theri. Tik tan-tika lef ti ra netika. Sa i on. Pe rati fek karjja seg olon. Fetik sevia na heria fek tarja ketholon teria kothon sak krajin.
PERIAK

7. The furs; (as much as) the hard creation shall be (as) the branches feeling the regret as it is. Your life shall be like life when your extinguishing becomes. The man of balance; the unique man. Its regrettable being without nothing, the within is so made. The slave in the noisy oven pouring awfulness. Don't visit feelings which split matter noisy, The creatures steady waves shall be the fence of mine disappearing in spirals. PERIAK.

17:15 Saturday 26. 1991

DOR OS ZOL MA THIL . . .

Chapter Two

1) Sa-Kala kherat; zner PA-I-ON, Ne vaktarim. Pe voojim zakre ta sejion te vani la peres-tak el mana-kire.

1. And 456 spoke, swore that being is made; the Holy living essence of breath, for your mighty movements in the temple invoked the fiery feet of the One which bids you vitality.

2) Pe o sa ja ki le ma perest ta veii. Pe la ki teresa karisèo taii. Pe tajo talasa kai nepa, neki o parastia tajo-no-i.

2. Being called within, truth grants the Ones fall, fiery as the second. Your One grants becoming and let it be lit. For your excesses of the freedom sword, Life calls the Fire of comfort, which lights, becomes and is.

3) Ven-tora tajik pejitar kavana sel tar tijo, Vekto ram-kaal najise sejio tarkes. Plostra keni-ja-kes meriva tejo pekitar. Fes taji qanos t traja.

3. Neither sustains and doesn't light but stretches out, the arising hands goes forth and lights. The mute and cold cry from 456 wills the black brother as the ladder. The variety is truly bound in torment as you are stretching out. Carry out your olive and its seed.

4) Om NI, Talajo pejina saki tal, vet-toro. PeNI PaNI terio keso. PARAMA terejo tarke lanoviel. Peres saji pent.
4. Understand the 28 (NI), the creatures stretches out mine excess and makes it sustain. PeNI PaNI, becomes and are. PARAMA shall he the ladder and map of the 2nd and the One. The Fire awfully stinging.

5) Leta zar veiio kanatroja perestoka levani quat trokij sevi ona spav. Perenu vasti kerestinu, veijia kelastikal quato Ra-Maz-Kil.
5. Finding the ways perfected and fixed, the fire-mountain invokes the creators mind and feelings that makes one cry in utter joy. The Fire in truth demands union with the 2nd, the born and appearing by the creator's regrettable pact of the bolt.

6) Fe Ne za vetika quanis sekio, Pereji savina queto rakajita dol. Fetika sekit terejo natika teren sav kel.
6. Visit the holiness within the not-made olive of mine. The Fire enters the whole weeping creation. Visit the man of mine become that man, go forth and feel born.

7) Perji-on ta vethik quan tares ke lati seji. Qoulemanu vet tranu sak, i ta fen savji qued saki net. Tol dezi quat setina.
7. Fire made thee the not-made creations becoming, and is found as the black brother. The creator is herein, making the marrow of mine,(and) is as a follower, feeling our shrinking creation by mine emptiness. All heads the creator's temple.

Sunday 16:00 January 27. 1991.

DOR OS ZOL MA THIL . . .

Chapter Three—Part One

1) Gohusali ta nat ho raki-sela, methari kati na veiiti sekio fet. Thari ket naria tala veiita. Meri ketholo peti Zax nethik vetio thari ma-sala.
1. I say thee as the child of zeros weeping hands: follow out the good intention that comes from my visit that is their deadly expansion. Torments steady waves is going to Zax, wearing full equipment, the making shall be fallen wonders.

2) Fet-io tari KETI na za lo karia, te rati fek quati selig KETI ranousli, pei natir kevi jetolo quanis teri ja moloso.
2. Eternal visit shall be for the good brother (KETI), that is within the One's oven. The hard noise from the creator's handless white brothers home, for the child does not care, out of him olives shall be the truth spitting out.

3) Peria KETI sak quati leojo. Peri uat tenik quato, leta vet sakia. PERIO pa leijo ma saki uet davani keniquat.
3. The Flaming white brother of mine is the wheel of creation. Fire made a wild creator that made or found me. PERIO is the fallen wheel of mine making the arising from the bound creation.

4) Pel-i-va ta riga za li na huati ta reiji pen pon ta moto sagi ta roi-na. Uet ta raki seii huat da huen na huat ti raki-solo. Tejo hua do rati tejo huat di naro-kolasi-pejon-ton.
4. The stiff Fire is like thee Core, within the first that hails as the wand destroys the furs of the awful's robes ; the sunrise of the Trinity. Do as the weeping black brother, worship the worshipper that worships its weeping hands. Light the worshipper in the slave, light the worship of the killing of the creators riches for the whole-making.

5) PERIO dalina uatij seki doro zan. Huat pei dogi la nesi-qurasti-quan. Tekil doro huati seki pa-las-teri naki dogno pejontolosa PERIKO. na huet i GA perjei.
5. PERIO is the fighter, making mine black finger. Worship for the howling of the walking maidens creation. The unknown blackness for mine adorer shall be the divided life howling in PERIKO's heavenly riches. That worshipper is the Fire of the 31.

6) Kel-ika sek quato dor-onto pajina huet Berika la maasi doro pejonorak. PeNI PaNI: DO.
6. Unborn is mine created blackness pouring and stretching over the worshipper of the sleeping (PERIAK) and laid up black heavenly no-son PeNI PaNI: IN.

7) Keli soko ra, beti dejona fet likavi sejionor Znati gei. Pelika savani ront ka jagile sejona pari KALA mitari konoto sek quati dor-onto.
7. Born is the reigner's regret, he is talking about resigning, and visits then the earthly sons wandering spirit. The stiff Fire arises upon the mountains sunset and are the reason why the earthly burns, the 456 follows and perfects my creators black pouring.

8) Pei doro sak quetina, pejina dor teliko sak KETI no.Poi seki darak, ket naji metholo.
8. For black is my rottenness, stretching out the black death for mine white brothers song. Divide my self-lessness, they will continue.

9) PARAMAON saki nalati doro. Pei saki Na reti pejolo noraki seg so selig. Keloto sak perijo na veti Periodonto.
9. PARAMAON mine black cross. For mine Trinity hardens the weeping sickle, and the awful visits handless. Born is the Fire that comes from the brothers full fight.

10) QUELI !!! Znorzulgi quati na huet tejo norim. KATI?. Tejo Zax Salim. Peti reti nara-timolum-sak. Quati derinu cum pei doromiona.
10. Disappear from earth!!! (I) bring terrible curses on creation that worships and lights the sons (brothers). The good intention? Lit in the house of Zax! Going to harden the killing wooden work of mine, Creation shall be a united frame for solid gathered shapes.

11) Pekil sekil darim-ma-thil terio KETIL sekio. Pejonto ra-maz-tok quani, saii peli nerimo-qlzrt.
11. The apprentice to mine gathered falling seats shall be the first white brother of mine (PA-I-ON) (This is) the heavenly and regrettable pact of the mountain and the olives, the black and stiff fire of the torment-knowing maidens.

Chapter Three—Part Two

1) Golaqin tuari sek quan. Peii snar tolo quan deri meth faki, tel sono ta meti dol quati neres.
1. Stainless and pure shall my creation be. The sickles absolute motion unites with creation in a blinding noise, All forms as a blinding whole, to the creators true pity.

2) Pejonorapethivetsaiionohuetnalekira.Petsakihuetnalimiatiperionasekdolomi.
2. Heavenly regrets is going to make the temple for the worshipper of the Ones vitality. For mine worshipper, crosses of fire makes mine ALLPOWER.

3) Perio do sani peji huet na kai talà dorina ka huati nek ki lasa. Perio ke nati sek ki naltamire do neji kel.

3. PERIO in parts rests, worships that freedom, all is then black, thereby is the worshipper's life's riches granted. PERIO is granting the torment of the cross in willing my child's birth.

4) Peontorama ketinanu sak keti darum. Peli sak dolomani, ket dire paj sek ki quati nor dol EM.
4. For the pouring of coldness to the white brothers stone, my w.b.'s [white brotherhood] self the whole offer is my stiff Fire, but for them whom dismantles the 12, by my guaranteeing the creators son of all 9.

Chapter Three—Part Three

1) Pejiqstra donoki satia mejnokila pejonora pesita quenti la seki hua. Pet nara pei nokila meri Na trajo.
1. The sickle's release in the servant demands looking for the servant's consumption, for the becoming regrets of the weak fire is a rotten one like mine I. Going to kill. (it) for the servants consumption of torment, to the trinity's becoming.

2) Terio pen soko la meriona peti KALA tej dores taj netika, poj berijo toj peregi la huati na pei doro sa kila, Pei no thila perejo kani-KAL-me sek doront.
2. Shall the furs of the reigning one become the made torment, go to 456, light blackness, light emptiness, divide the sleeper and light the Fire of the worshipper of the Trinity, for blackness is what I consume. As for the following falling seats of fire; they are falling with 456 and my black pouring.

3) Huati nek kien sak letina pejodo tei doronto petalen cors doje. Hua lata kolia dor napi sekil dol terien dal Keti ra.
3. The worshipper of life is restricted, I find the trinity opened by my sickle, and is against the black pouring of our common fire such howls. Where I find the black creation, that place of mine shall wholly be unto the white brothers regret.

4) Pereti koi go lati seki la sa dol petina huati gel tojo. Peria cors da LA.
4. The light rather says my riches goes wholly unto the trinity, and the worshipper is enlightened, (by) FIRE, such of the FIRST.

Chapter Three—Part Four

1) Doloka—Quasinor,—torona peii dazi; ket ! La marasina huet da kalina doi pe ra si; ket!
1. Death, o son of pleasure, shall sustain for that head, THEIRS. The hopeless worship of the blood-serpent, your regret ends, THEIRS.

2) Però kol no basi, la huani ket dor OS. Pei no huati dol geri-sal-qina hua si noro da fiò pei nò.
2. PERIos creating becomes (like)a cup, the worshipper; and they are the black twelve. For being the worshippers whole killing of the created man. I finished the sons with the union, for the song of it.

3) Plati gei sati per doii nothora, pel da pej, cor sa qina laviò-sak pereijo.
3. The partaker herein providing PERDOI (the fire snake) and makes him sustain. The stiff fire there unto such concentration, invoking my FIRE.

Chapter Three—Part Five

1) Dolomi na terejo kati-sna pa rogo lavio-na-kile sak PeNI PeNA dol parajo nok di savjon.
1. The All-power that becomes the good brothers motion is being coated. Invoking the bolt, my PeNI furs wholly the fire of the temple.

2) Pel-on-toki poj dari, quen di na uja qoria sek olon da miorakistal, delio pen da-ra-mikalz corz snav pejilo por da huati saii.
2. The stiff fire makes a mountain, divide, unite, the creation there, the made trinity. The oven pours awfulness for the mighty release of tears. The fighter's furs of the mighty regret such makes the knife move and lust for the worshipper of awfulness.

3) Keni ma-prathisi sekio sna loi doromina del quati sekia tel doroma, pejona dol peno sem da reti Qooloimo—TORIA!
3. The bound and falling virgins of mine moves and kisses the solid gathered shapes of the fighters of mine creator, the black seats falls, The sickle all furs overruns, the hard understanding of the creators kiss—SUSTAINS!

4) Petik derio na veit sak peri dol ka seki tel napa-ra-kise, Fejo la ki ti sek quati nor tajo fen.
4. Not going to unite with what comes from my Fire? All are then my seats and the sword of regret, encircling the one and guaranties it to be my creator's son, the light follower.

5) Pelia doros saki ses sna per-odo doki la merital quati sonors. Godinal pei soninal dogorathi pei sic le.
5. The stiff fire of the black 12, my axe moves opens the fire, fulfils the One's all-torment. The creator swore: the speed of matter for the entities of' earth, the mystery of the howling slaves.

6) Perio sna vethi neiNa koti seg lo ponamira go huasi taj na, Vet sami na rami do kaanistra pei doqola mi senid da ronto.
6. PERIO's motion is coming from the will of the trinity, and is the cover of the awful one, destroying torment or saying I end it by lighting the trinity making war to the power of regret in olives release, for in the creator power laments and pours blackness.

7) Quen tagi meii dore, fet guatina le poji sek da retina, kenti malasa ko nori-ma.
7. The creation lights and looks around the blackness and visits rottenness. Mine hard sickle divides. Rotten fallen riches covers fallen sons.

8) Feii sek do lami-na-na del kenti sek poroto nomistral. Pejonor dol po.
8. I am whirling in the stones path, the fighters rottenness; my fiery lust. End and release, sickle son your wholly divided.

9) KETI sna ve rathi no; QO! Snati qe rathi re-mi-sa-na goro la mana ke saki sovi.
9. The white brother is acting like a slave, GARMENTS! The move is only the slaves cunning power finger. Desiring the offer are mine feelings.

10) Pei sek sa lima pei dorok ken ta de ra, peti sna veti vapelionara da ketira quana seqi sel na huati na huati dol po.
10. The stiff Fire mine house, for darkness is bound of regret. going to move, do as the stiff Fire, kill the white brothers regrettable olive. Mine hand that worshipper wholly divides.

11) Dolio cors da hueti ro saki sez snarza PERÒ.
11. Everything, such as the worshipper is gone by my axe, swore PERÒ.

NOTES

Introduction

1. This episode, its context, significance and aftermath is discussed in the last chapter of this book.
2. E.g., in order of appearance, Peter French, John Dee; Frances Yates, The Occult Philosophy in the Elizabethan Age; Christopher Whitby, John Dee's Actions with Spirits, two volumes; Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy; Deborah Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels; Håkan Håkansson, Seeing the Word: John Dee and Renaissance Occultism; György E. Szőnyi, John Dee's Occultism: Magical Exaltation through Powerful Signs; Stephen Clucas, ed., John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies in English Renaissance Thought. The literature of recent John Dee research is discussed in chapter 1 of this book.
3. Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. 1., 41, 69, 77, citation on 200, n. 53.
4. Owen, Place of Enchantment: British Occultism and the Culture of the Modern, 186–220.
5. Ibid., 196.
6. E.g., Boaz Huss, "Authorized Guardians"; cf. Egil Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata," 132–33, 142–43.
7. Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique, l'énochien."
8. For this interpretation, see especially Adam McLean, "Dr. Rudd's Treatise"; idem, "Introduction," 11; Stephen Skinner and David Rankine, Practical Angel Magic, 38–43. It was also briefly reiterated by Pasi and Rabate, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 107.
9. For parts of this argument, see Asprem, "False, Lying Spirits or Angels of Light."
10. Idel, "Prisca Theologia in Marsilio Ficino and in Some Jewish Treatments," 138–39; cf. von Stuckrad, Locations of Knowledge, chapter 2.
11. Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. 1, 62–86, quotation on page 84; cf. Partridge, "Occulture is Ordinary." The term itself appears to have been coined around the early 1980s by the artist, musician, and punk-occultist Genesis P-Orridge (born Neil Andrew Megson, 1950). As Partridge relates, P-Orridge had noted in the late 1970s "how a small number of fanatical individuals could have a disproportionate impact on culture." This acknowledgment lies behind Partridge's theory of occulture as well: while occulture is becoming mainstream, reaching an enormous amount of people and ultimately changing their plausibility structures, the core milieus in which occultural ideas and discourse are produced in the first place are indeed very limited. The same goes, of course, for the occultural field of Enochiana. Whereas a relatively small group of occultists actively work with Enochian magic, drops and pieces occasionally make it into the broader culture through, e.g., literature, film, TV, and music. See Partridge, "Occulture is Ordinary." See also my discussion in chapter 4 of the present book.

12. Partridge, "Occulture is Ordinary"; Jesper Aagaard Petersen, "From Book to Bit." For a panoramic view of crucial changes in esoteric discourse of the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries, see the other essays in Asprem and Kennet Granholm, eds., Contemporary Esotericism.
13. Von Stuckrad, "Discursive Study of Religion," 266–67. For the concept of "discourse" and its import to Religious Studies, see Tim Murphy, "Discourse."
14. See, e.g., Hanegraaff, "Forbidden Knowledge"; Hammer and von Stuckrad, eds., Polemical Encounters.
15. E.g., Hanegraaff, "Western Esotericism in Enlightenment Historiography."
16. Hammer, Claiming Knowledge.

Chapter 1. The Magus and the Seer

1. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 16–17; cf. Nicholas Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy, 140–41.
2. Harkness, Conversations with Angels, 16; Whitby, "John Dee and Renaissance Scrying"; Thomas, Religion and the Decline of Magic, 255–56, 272–74; Delatte, La Catoptromancie Grecque et ses derives; Lang, "Angels around the Crystal"; Fanger, "Virgin Territory."
3. Yates, The Occult Philosophy in the Elizabethan Age, 96.
4. Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy, 203.
5. Ibid., 203–41.
6. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels. The following presentation of Dee's intellectual trajectory is deeply indebted to Harkness's and Clulee's books.
7. See especially Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy, and Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels.
8. See, e.g., Foucault, The Order of Things; Rummel, The Humanist-Scholastic Debate; Copenhaver, "Natural Magic, Hermetism, and Occultism in Early Modern Science."
9. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 64–65.
10. In the sense outlined and described by, e.g., Ashworth, "Natural History and the Emblematic Worldview."
11. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 71–77.
12. Ibid., 77.
13. See Josten, "A Translation of John Dee's 'Monas Hieroglyphica'"; cf. Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy, 77–115; Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 77–90; Szőnyi, John Dee's Occultism, 161–74; Forshaw, "The Early Alchemical Reception of John Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica."
14. See Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy, 143–76; Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 91–97.
15. Cf. Clulee, "At the Crossroads of Magic and Science."
16. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 96.
17. Ibid.
18. See Whitby, ed., John Dee's Actions with Spirits, volume II, 341; cf. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 99.
19. I.e., Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition; idem, The Rosicrucian Enlightenment; idem, The Occult in the Elizabethan Age; French, John Dee.

20. E.g., Clulee, "Dee's Natural Philosophy Revisited."
21. In order of publication the most significant works shedding light on the angel diaries are the following: Christopher Whitby, John Dee's Actions with Spirits, two volumes; Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy; Harkness, "Shews in the Shewstone"; idem, John Dee's Conversations with Angels.
22. Clucas, ed., John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies.
23. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 98.
24. Ibid., 98–130.
25. E.g., Eco, The Search for the Perfect Langauge.
26. Szőnyi, "Paracelsus, Scrying and the Lingua Adamica," 215.
27. Harkness, Conversations with Angels, 160. For more on the authors mentioned and their ideas on this issue, see Francois Secret, Les Kabbalistes chrétiens; M. L. Kuntz, Guillaume Postel; Claes-Christian Elert, "Andreas Kempe (1622–1689)."
28. E.g., Whitby, "John Dee and Renaissance Scrying."
29. Clucas, "'Non est legendum;'" idem, "John Dee's Angelic Conversations and the Ars Notoria."
30. For a concise biography of Kelley, see Michael Wilding, "A Biography of Edward Kelly, the English Alchemist and Associate of Dr. John Dee."
31. Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition, 167; French, John Dee, 114.
32. Sledge, "Between 'Loagaeth' and 'Cosening.'"
33. For this point, see, e.g., Susan Bassnett, "Absent Presences," 285.
34. James, The Enochian Magic of Dr. John Dee, xxv.
35. Cf. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 23–24.
36. Luhrmann, Persuasions of the Witch's Craft.
37. See e.g. Nicholas P. Spanos, Multiple Personalities & False Memories: A Sociocognitive Perspective. This book serves as an excellent introduction to the approach, which provides thorough discussions of research and further references.
38. Bassnett, "Absent Presences," 287.
39. Ibid.; Jan Bäcklund, "In the Footsteps of Edward Kelley."
40. Bassnett, "Absent Presences," 292.
41. See Cotton Appendix XLVI (detailing the angel conversations from May 28, 1583, to May 23, 1587, plus March 20, to September 7, 1607); MS Sloane 3188 (the diary for December 22, 1581-May 23, 1583); MS Sloane 3189 (the "received book" Liber Loagaeth); and MS Sloane 3191 (including the four "received books" 48 Claves Angelica; Liber scientiae, auxilii, et victoriae Terrestris; De heptarchia mystica; Tabula bonorum angelorum). All these have been made available in high resolution electronic facsimile copies by Ian Rons, at "The Magickal Review" Web site: http://www.themagickalreview.org/enochian/mss/.
42. Szőnyi, "Paracelsus, Scrying, and the Lingua Adamica," 216–18.
43. See Peterson, ed., John Dee's Five Books of Mystery, 66-73. This book is a transcription of MS Sloane 3188, which contains the earliest angel conversations we have records of. It should be noted that these were not among the material published by Meric Casaubon in 1659.
44. This is preserved in MS Sloane 3189. The title page says "Liber Mysteriorum Sixtus et Sanctus" ("The Sixth and Holy Book of the Mysteries"), which is another name sometimes used for it. At any rate "Logaeth" seems to be a misspelling stemming from Casaubon's edition of the manuscripts now in the Cotton Appendix. Cotton Appendix MS XLVI f. 15b shows Dee spelling it "Loagaeth," which is the form that will be adopted here.

45. For the diary entries of these conversations, see Peterson, ed., Five Books of Mystery, 257–359.
46. See MS Sloane 3189. This book is written in Kelley's handwriting. See also Harkness, Dee's Conversations with Angels, 41. For closer examinations of the method of receiving the Angelic language, and critical linguistic evaluation of its claim to be a authentic natural language, see Donald C. Laycock, "Angelic language or mortal folly?" and also my own evaluation, Asprem, "'Enochian' Language: A Proof of the Existence of Angels?"
47. Reeds, "John Dee and the Magic Tables in the Book of Soyga." His thorough and penetrating mathematical and statistical analysis of the tables of Soyga and those of Loagaeth is also a valuable cross-disciplinary contribution.
48. Harkness, Dee's Conversations with Angels, 41.
49. E.g., as an angel answered Dee on April 18: "God shall make clere whan it pleaseth him: & open all the secrets of wisdome whan he unlocketh. Therefore Seke not to know the mysteries of this boke, tyll the very howre that he shall call thee," Peterson, ed., Five Books of Mystery, 351.
50. Ibid. The manuscript is now in Sloane MS 3191, f. 32–51.
51. See especially Sloane MS 3191, f. 45b-51a.
52. See the modern reprint in Stephen Skinner, ed., The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, 59–96.
53. This is in MS Sloane 3191, f. 1a-14b.
54. MS Sloane 3191, f. 14a-31b.
55. See MS Sloane 3191, f. 16a.
56. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 187–92.
57. MS Sloane 3191, f. 52b-80b. See Table 1.1 for a reproduction.
58. The conversations as they unfolded are printed in Casaubon, ed., True & Faithful Relation, 172–83.
59. Ibid., 179. Italics in original.
60. Considering the fact that the letter squares of the Great Table appeared a month later than the names that appear to have been extracted from it, this constitutes one of the more puzzling aspects of the angelic communications. It seems to suggest that the table must have been already produced long before Kelley "scryed" it in sessions with Dee.
61. Clucas, "'Non est legendum." For the Ars Notoria sigil, see Gösta Hedegård, ed., Liber Iuratus Honorii: A Critical Edition, 70. This and more links between Dee's work and earlier medieval sources and practices are explored in Clucas, "John Dee's Angelic Conversations and the Ars Notoria"; Claire Fanger, "Virgin Territory." For a highly relevant contribution to the more general discussion of medieval sources' continued importance in renaissance magic, see Frank Klaassen, "Medieval Ritual Magic in the Renaissance."
62. Peterson, ed., Five Books of Mystery, 445–46.
63. Donald C. Laycock, "Angelic language or mortal folly?"
64. Claire Fanger, "Virgin Territory," 203.
65. E.g., Klaassen, "Medieval Ritual Magic in the Renaissance."
66. See Bassnett, "Abesent Presences," 286.
67. The way they worked was rather through prayer and petition addressed to God for sending the angels, and not evocations of specific spirits, as is taught in the material they received. Refer again to my initial distinction between the "magic" they worked through and the "magics" that resulted from the actions. See also Harkness, Dee's Conversations with Angels, 41.

Chapter 2. Whispers of Secret Manuscripts

1. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 217.
2. Cited in ibid., 223.
3. The title of this section is taken from Samuel Butler's satirical poem Hudibras (1664), figuring the Rosicrucian adept Sidrophel, obsessed with Dee's angel conversations. In the course of the poem, Kelley's "shewstone" is referred to as "the devil's looking-glass." For a brief discussion, see Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 224.
4. In the following referred to as T&FR.
5. E.g., Frances Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition, 433–70.
6. Casaubon, "The Preface," unpaginated.
7. Cf. Serjeantsen, "Casaubon, (Florence Estienne) Meric (1599–1671)."
8. Cf. Richard Kieckhefer, Magic in the Middle Ages, 37–42; Norman Cohn, Europe's Inner Demons, 22–23.
9. Cohn, Europe's Inner Demons, 24–29; Stuart Clark, Thinking with Demons, 166–67.
10. E.g., Serjeantsen, "Casaubon," unpaginated.
11. The diaries are in MSS Sloane 3624–3628. See also Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 222–23.
12. See the entry for that date in Sloane 3624.Also note that the spelling "Logaeth" is a misprint on the part of Casaubon—the original diaries had "Loagaeth." Thus, we can know that the magicians were probably working from Casaubon's text.
13. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 223.
14. Additionally, Rankine and Skinner found portions of the text copied in two documents in the Bodleian, namely MS Rawlinson D.1067 and Rawlinson D.1363. These are of a later date, and are not complete copies. See Rankine and Skinner, John Dee's Enochian Tables.
15. The first two are in Harley MS 6485, the Chymical Wedding in 6486, the "Rosicrucian Chymical medicines" in 6481, and the defense of Orientals in 6479.
16. Harley MS 6483. This grimoire was recently published in Skinner and Rankine, eds., The Goetia of Dr. Rudd.
17. For a detailed critical analysis of this manuscript, see Asprem, "False, Lying Spirits or Angels of Light."
18. See McLean, ed., Treatise, 30–31; cf. Peterson ed., John Dee's Five Books of Mystery, 399.
19. This has notably been the opinion of Adam McLean, "Dr. Rudd's Treatise"; and idem, "Introduction," 11. The contention has also been reiterated by academic scholars. See for instance Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 107.
20. Yates, The Rosicrucian Enlightenment, 257–58.
21. As far as I am aware, the first refutation of this attribution in the scholarly literature was made in my 2008 article, "False Lying Spirits," on which the present discussion builds.
22. I.e., McLean, "Introduction," 11–12; Skinner and Rankine, The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables.
23. McLean, "Introduction," 15–16.
24. See for instance the overview presented in Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 117–20.

25. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 218–19.
26. Ibid., 219. These documents are now to be found in Cotton Appendix XLVI, detailing the angel conversations with Kelley from May 28, 1583, to May 23, 1587, plus a couple with Hickman from March 20 to September 7, 1607.
27. Cf. Owen Davies, "Angels in Elite and Popular Magic, 1650–1790," 298–99.
28. In Christopher Whitby, John Dee's Actions with Spirits.
29. Appleby, "Woodall, John."
30. Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 220.
31. Ibid., 2, 220.
32. Michael Hunter, ed., Elias Ashmole 1617–1692, 41–42. See also the indispensable volumes of original Ashmolian documents, with historical introduction by C. H. Josten, ed., Elias Ashmole (1617–1692).
33. Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 108. Ashmole's copies are preserved in the Ashmole collection of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, as MSS Ashmole 422, Ashmole 580, and Ashmole 1790. See Josten, ed., Elias Ashmole (1617–1692), vol. III, 1272, and vol. IV, 1335–36, 1843.
34. Where they comprise MS Sloane 3188 (the diary for December 22, 1581-May 23, 1583), MS Sloane 3189 (the "received book," Liber Loagaeth), and MS Sloane 3191 (including the four "received books," 48 Claves Angelica; Liber scientiae, auxilii, et victoriae Terrestris; De heptarchia mystica; Tabula bonorum angelorum).
35. As Casaubon tells us in his preface.
36. This was first noted in Turner, Elizabethan Magic, 155.
37. See Table 1.2. Dee's version in Sloane 3188 f. 94b is originally in Latin characters, while the two others displayed Enochian letters. For ease of comparison I have translated all tables to their Latin equivalents.
38. It should be noted that Waite was quite convinced that Peter Smart was a forger. In Waite's opinion, Smart had forged MS Harley 6485, appearing to be a Rosicrucian text by John Dee. See Waite, Brotherhood of the Rosy Cross, 401. For a discussion of that manuscript, and of the Smart/Rudd connection, see the introduction to E. J. Langford Garstin, ed., Rosie Crucian Secrets. The latter also finds Thomas Rudd to be an unlikely candidate for the identity of "Dr. Rudd," while being more hesitant about dismissing that there was somebody behind Smart.
39. This argument is put in full in Asprem, "False, Lying Spirits."
40. See for instance McLean, ed., Treatise, 173–82.
41. McLean, ed., Treatise, 179–80.
42. Ibid., 175–76.
43. McLean, ed., Treatise, 33; emphasis mine.
44. Ibid., 36.
45. With the exception of Ebriah, who nevertheless may be connected to "Ebriel," the name of the ninth unholy sefirah according to Isaac ha-Cohen of Soria. See Gustav Davidson, A Dictionary of Angels, Including the Fallen Angels, 101.
46. See The Goetia, 31, 41.
47. See Skinner and Rankine, Practical Angel Magic, 38–43.
48. Ibid., 42.
49. Ibid., 41.
50. Ibid.
51. Saunders, "Rudd, Thomas (1583/4–1656)."
52. Rons, "Review: The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables." This particular corruption is interesting, since it would have great impact later, notably on Aleister Crowley, through the central position Sloane 307 acquired in the Golden Dawn. See also Rons's heavily detailed updated review, which does not come across any more positive than the original one. Rons, "Practical Angel Magic: An Updated Review."

53. I.e., as the official instruction Book "H", prepared by W. W. Westcott.
54. We know that Crowley studied the document carefully. One major merit of Skinner and Rankine's otherwise problematic edition of Sloane 307 is the inclusion of Golden Dawn students' notes on the MS, including the notes of F. L. Gardner and Allan Bennett.

Chapter 3. Victorian Occultism and the Invention of Modern Enochiana

1. See Randall Styers, Making Magic, 3; cf. Hanegraaff, Esotericism and the Academy, chapter 3.
2. Granger, A Supplement, Consisting of Corrections and Large Additions, to a Biographical History of England, 94–95.
3. Burke, The Annual Register, "Characters" section, 51–52.
4. Cf. Hanegraaff, Esotericism and the Academy, chapter 3; idem, "Western Esotericism in Enlightenment Historiography."
5. Godwin, Lives of the Necromancers, 373–98; citation on 389.
6. Ibid., 390.
7. Ibid., 379.
8. The best way to form a picture of Hockley is by reading the material collected and commented in R. A. Gilbert and John Hamill, eds., The Rosicrucian Seer. See also Alex Sumner, "Angelic Invocations." Sumner compares Hockley's practices with those of other occult angelologies, including that of John Dee's conversations.
9. Ellic Howe, Fringe Freemasonry, 15.
10. See Francis King, "Introduction," 17; Barrett, The Magus. It is significant that The Magus contained no references to Enochian magic. This is a clear indication that Dee's magic was largely forgotten and/or neglected by practitioners in the eighteenth century.
11. This was his statement given to the London Dialectical Society, when speaking for their special Committee of Spiritualism on June 8, 1869. See Gilbert and Hamill, eds., The Rosicrucian Seer, 96.
12. Ibid., xxi.
13. See for instance Joscelyn Godwin, The Theosophical Enlightenment, ch. 9. I am also grateful to Daniel Kline, who let me read his unpublished paper on crystal gazing in early occultism.
14. Gilbert, "Secret Writing: The Magical Manuscripts of Frederick Hockley," 32.
15. See especially the excerpts from Hockley's "Crystal manuscripts," in Gilbert and Hamill, eds., Rosicrucian Seer, 109–28.
16. Godwin, Theosophical Enlightenment, 185.
17. King, "Introduction," 19.
18. For concise overviews of the history and significance of the Order, see Gilbert, "The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn"; cf. Asprem, "The Golden Dawn and the O.T.O."
19. See Joscelyn Godwin, The Theosophical Enlightenment, 333–79.
20. Former members of the original order were the first to speculate. Among these we find men such as the authors W. B. Yeats and Arthur Machen, and the occult scholar A. E. Waite; all of whom touched upon the subject in their respective autobiographies. The standard scholarly discussion remains Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 1–25.

21. See Darcy Küntz, ed., The Complete Golden Dawn Cipher Manuscript. An online reproduction has also been made available. See: http://www.hermetic.com/gdlibrary/cipher/ (last accessed 09/06/2009).
22. See Gilbert, "Provenance Unknown"; idem, "Supplement to 'Provenance Unknown.'"
23. Talking about emic historiographies I refer to the uses of history and mythmaking in the process of constructing esoteric traditions, for example by delineating chains of transmission from mythical times through significant sages down to one's own group, presented as the current guardian of a "legitimate" esoteric "lineage." Cf. the detailed discussion in Hammer, Claiming Knowledge, 155–81.
24. The details of this episode are laid out in Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 1–25.
25. The most relevant evaluations of these issues are in Robert A. Gilbert, The Golden Dawn; idem, The Golden Dawn Companion; Ellic Howe, The Magicians of the Golden Dawn; R. A. Gilbert, "Provenance Unknown." I will mostly be following Gilbert, "Provenance Unknown," and Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn (especially pp. 1–25).
26. Several attempts to locate any traces of a German Rosicrucian Order at the indicated place and time, both by occultist and writer Gustav Meyrink, and by the scholar Ellic Howe, have proved unsuccessful. See Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 10. It is also well known that Westcott most probably forged a series of letters to make it appear as if the MS had come from this alleged German Order and their chief, "soror S.D.A." a.k.a. "Anna Sprengel." See ibid., 5–25.
27. See Lévi, Transcendental Magic, 99–103, 378–411; Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 2–3.
28. Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 2.
29. This position is convincingly argued for in Gilbert, "Provenance Unknown."
30. For a discussion and account of their meeting, see Christopher McIntosh, Eliphas Lévi, 117–23.
31. For my discussion of this form of creativity, its context and implication in the Golden Dawn and other occultist contexts, see Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata," esp. 133–37, 144–47.
32. On the place of "concordances" in Western esotericism generally, cf. Faivre, Access to Western Esotericism, 10–15.
33. See for example Anupassana [Suzan Wilson], "Introduction to the Elemental Grade Ceremonies," 135.
34. Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata," 144–47.
35. Cipher MS, f. 13.
36. Dee's final version of this being, as we have seen, in the Tabula bonorum angelorum of Sloane 3191.
37. Casaubon, ed., True & Faithful Relation, 173.
38. Ibid., 181.
39. Ibid.; cf. Sloane 3191, f. 52b-80b.
40. See Cipher MS f. 21 (Theoricus and "tablet of air"), f. 22, 26 (Practicus and "Great Western Quadrangle of water"), f. 34, 41 (Philosophus and "fire tablet").

41. This is relevant also because Mathers has often been blamed for the radical syncretism of the Order. See for instance King, "Introduction," 20.
42. See the reproduction of Westcott's letter to Mathers in Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 12.
43. See Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 75–90.
44. Cipher MS, folio 13.
45. See "Ceremony of the Zelator 1° = 10° Grade" in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 147–48.
46. See Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 141, 156, 167–68, 182–83.
47. Darcy Küntz notes that it is part of a series of folios that were written and added later, probably forged by Westcott. See Küntz, ed., The Complete Golden Dawn Cipher Manuscript, 35. The folio itself is reproduced in ibid., 162–63.
48. See Casaubon, ed., A True and Faithful Relation, 179. The four tables are shown in a fourfold arrangement only in Casaubon, ed., "Actio Tertiæ," in A True and Faithful Relation, 15. However, here the Black Cross is not included. The arrangement of the tables shown on these pages (rearranged by Raphael in 1587) is nevertheless the one used in the Cipher MS and thus in the G.D. For manuscripts that show Dee's actual configuration of the Black Cross, see MS Sloane 3191, f. 52b-80b (Tabula bonorum angelorum).
49. The latter interpretation is not unreasonable, considering the novelty in the interpretation of the system generally. It would not be hard at all to find what the angels and Dee and Kelley thought about for instance the Great Table's use, as this is quite clearly stated even in Casaubon. In other words, it is not only possible but likely that the author knew, but did not care/had other plans.
50. See Casaubon, ed., True and Faithful Relation, 175–76, "Actio Tertia," in ibid., 15; Sloane 3191 f. 52b-558a; Cotton appendix XLVI f. 198b-201a.
51. See "The Book of the Concourse of the Forces," 630–58 in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 631–34. This document was circulated in the Inner Order of the Golden Dawn, and was probably written by Westcott. It is assumed, however, that the actual research was made by Mathers, who indeed is invoked and quoted several places in the document.
52. I have argued before that this syncretistic and progressive aspect of the Golden Dawn's frame of mind shows the Order as resonant with main aspects of Victorian Modernity. See Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata."
53. "Ceremony of the Grade of Adeptus Minor," in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 231.
54. Ibid.
55. Ibid.
56. The five documents, or "books," are Book "H": Clavicula Tabularum Enochi; Book "S": The Book of the Concourse of Forces; Book "T": The Book of the Angelical Calls; Book "X": The Keys of the Governance and Combinations of the Squares of the Tablets; and Book "Y": Rosicrucian Chess. All but the first one were published by Regardie. See Regardie, ed., Golden Dawn. The significance of Regardie's exclusion will be thoroughly discussed in chapter 6.
57. See the whole list in, e.g., King, "Introduction," 28–29.
58. Regardie, "Introduction," 1–48 in idem, ed., The Golden Dawn, 43–44.
59. Regardie, Golden Dawn, 658.
60. Regardie's approach to questions of legitimacy and authenticity will be discussed more closely in chapter 6.
61. This manuscript, together with Sloane 3188, which was one of Elias Ashmole's documents on Enochian, was quite recently reproduced and published in Rankine and Skinner, The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tablets: Tabularum Bonorum Angelorum Invocationes as Used by Wynn Westcott, Alan Bennett, Reverend Ayton. However, as was discussed in chapter 2, there are several serious problems with the interpretative frame imposed on the material by the editors. Another edition of the Book "H" is available online at http://www.angelfire.com/ab6/imuhtuk/gdmans/rith.htm (retrieved 09/09/2007).

62. MS Sloane 3191, f. 52b-80b.
63. Casaubon, ed., True and Faithful Relation, 179.
64. As a matter of comparison, we may mention the notion of a purely "spiritual alchemy," which appeared in the middle of the nineteenth century with Mary Ann Atwood's Suggestive Inquiry into the Hermetic Mystery (1850). This book popularized a conception of medieval and early modern alchemists as talking entirely allegorically about the transmutation of metals, while in reality guarding a deep and very ancient spiritual insight. The conception, which has been remarkably resilient even in academic quarters, is now typically dismissed by serious scholars of alchemy as a nineteenth-century presentist projection. See, e.g., Lawrence Principe and William R. Newman, "Some Problems with the Historiography of Alchemy."
65. Most notably in another short piece by Westcott, "Further Rules for Practice," 669–70 in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn. Here he seems to keep the information of the different skills of the spirits, but blends it in with the elemental attributions to each table. More will be said about this short piece later.
66. Skinner and Rankine, John Dee's Enochian Tables, 49–50, 269–70.
67. "The Book of the Concourse of the Forces," 630–58 in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn.
68. Ibid., 638–42.
69. Ibid., 646–55.
70. Ibid., 655–56.
71. See "The Keys of the Governance and Combinations of the Squares of the Tablets," in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 659–62.
72. Ibid., 660.
73. Ibid., 661–62.
74. Casaubon, ed., True and Faithful Relation, 145.
75. This is elaborated in ibid., 153ff.
76. Sloane 3191.
77. "The Fourty-Eight Angelical Keys or Calls," in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 672–73.
78. One could add here that the former Golden Dawn magician Aleister Crowley went on to experiment with these "Aethyrs," first in 1901 and then again in 1909. See Crowley, Victor B. Neuburg, and Mary Desti, The Vision & The Voice with Commentary.
79. See the part "Enochian or Rosicrucian Chess," 683–96 in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn. This includes a lengthy commentary by Regardie, and original documents by Mathers.
80. For a history and introduction to the various Tarot games before it became an esoteric divinatory system, see Michael Dummet and Sylvia Mann, The Game of Tarot.
81. See for example Regardie, ed., Golden Dawn, 456–78.
82. The Adepts in question are Mrs. Helen Rand (Vigilate), Ms. Annie Horniman (Fortiter et Recte), Dr. H. Pullen-Berry (Anima Pura Sit), Dr. E. Berridge

(Resurgam), and Pamela Bullock (Shemeber). The Flying Roll is partially published two places. One half is in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 662–68, the other in King, ed., Astral Projection, Magic, and Alchemy, 81–87.

83. In King, ed., Astral Projection, 86–87.
84. Ibid, 87.
85. Moina Mathers, "Of Skrying and Travelling in the Spirit-Vision," reprinted in Regardie, Golden Dawn, 467–73.
86. Ibid, 470.
87. For a very rich and thoughtful elaboration on the role of scrying in Victorian occultism, see Alex Owen, The Place of Enchantment, especially chapter 5.
88. Regardie, The Golden Dawn, 683.
89. Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 228.
90. See Mary Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, 141–42.
91. Ibid., 141.
92. Cited in ibid., 142.
93. Westcott, "Further Rules for Practice," 669–70 in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn.
94. Ibid., 668.
95. Ibid.
96. Ibid., 669.
97. Ibid., 699–70.
98. Ibid., 670.
99. Ibid.
100. See for instance the ritual written by Allan Bennett, performed with three other adepts, aimed at the evocation of the spirit Taphthartharath: Bennett, "Ritual for the Evocation unto Visible Appearance of the Great Spirit Taphthartharath."
101. Yeats cited in Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, 141.
102. See Gnothi Seauton, Manuscript notebook, in the Gerald Yorke Collection, The Warburg Institute, "New Listing," 60, 66, 100. For a modern reproduction, see Küntz, ed., The Enochian Experiments of the Golden Dawn.
103. This group is an interesting chapter in the history of the Golden Dawn. For more on its workings, see, e.g., Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, esp. chapters 21–24; Owen, The Place of Enchantment, 82, 129–30, 222.
104. This material is briefly discussed in Owen, The Place of Enchantment, 150, 291n.4.
105. See Küntz, ed., The Enochian Experiments of the Golden Dawn.
106. I am thinking here of the term as used by Olav Hammer, signifying the tendency in modern esoteric discourse to avoid citing originators of ideas, concepts, or themes. This can often be seen to give the presentation of the idea an aura of stability, sanctity, endurance, or even eternity. See Hammer, Claiming Knowledge, 180–81.

Chapter 4. The Authenticity Problem and the Legitimacy of Magic

1. For details, see Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 239–40.
2. Owen, The Place of Enchantment.
3. Luhrmann, Persuasions of the Witch's Craft.
4. Pasi, La notion de magie.
5. E.g., Wouter J. Hanegraaff, New Age Religion and Western Culture; Olav Hammer, Claiming Knowledge; Christopher Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, two volumes; Asprem and Granholm, eds., Contemporary Esotericism.

6. I.e., Hanegraaff, "How Magic Survived"; Asprem, "Thelema og ritualmagi." See also Hanegraaff's entry "Magic V" in the Dictionary of Gnosis and Western Esotericism.
7. There are indeed important magical currents that do not spring directly from the Golden Dawn synthesis, particularly those developed in continenteal Europe, particularly Germany, France, and Italy, at the fin de siècle and during the early decades of the twentieth century. Any list of important names and groups should include, e.g., Papus (Gerard Encausse), Giuliano Kremmerz (Ciro Formisano), Arturo Reghini, Julius Evola and the UR group, Gregor A. Gregorius (Eugen Grosche) and the Fraternitas Saturni, Maria de Naglowska, Franz Bardon, etc. For cursory overviews of some of these figures, see, e.g., Hans Thomas Hakl, "The Theory and Practice of Sexual Magic"; Massimo Introvigne, Il Cappello del Mago; Stephen Flowers, Fire & Ice; relevant entries in Hanegraaff et al., eds., Dictionary of Gnosis and Western Esotericism.
8. Webb, The Flight from Reason.
9. I.e., Hanegraaff, "The New Age Movement and the Esoteric Tradition"; idem, "How Magic Survived"; Owen, Place of Enchantment; Richard Noakes, "Spiritualism, Science and the Supernatural in mid-Victorian Britain."
10. For the former, see Godwin, Chanel, and Deveney, eds., The Hermetic Brotherhood of Luxor.
11. Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn.
12. Such as Crowley, Magick: Liber ABA.
13. Colin Campbell, "The Secret Religion of the Educated Classes."
14. Peter Berger, ed., The Desecularization of the World.
15. Paul Heelas, The New Age Movement; Christopher Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, two volumes.
16. Bruce, God Is Dead, 1–44.
17. E.g., Steve Bruce, "The New Age and Secularization"; Campbell, "The Cult, the Cultic Milieu, and Secularization."
18. Campbell, "The Secret Religion of the Educated Classes."
19. E.g., Hanegraaff, New Age Religion and Western Culture.
20. E.g., Luhrmann, Persuasions, 10–11.
21. See James R. Lewis, "New Religion Adherents: An Overview of Anglophone Census and Survey Data."
22. Hanegraaff, "How Magic Survived."
23. Ibid., 361–264.
24. Ibid., 366–267.
25. Ibid., 366ff. For a more detailed criticism of the "psychologization thesis", see Asprem, "'Magic Naturalized'?"
26. Ibid., 370.
27. Hanegraaff, "Magic V," 740.
28. Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. 1, 40–41.
29. Ibid., 41; italics added. Quotes in text taken from Luhrmann, Persuasions, 164, 177–78.
30. I.e., Partridge, Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. 1, 38–46.
31. Ibid., 84.
32. See especially Partridge, "Occulture Is Ordinary."
33. Ibid., 68, 70.

34. See for instance the articles in John Storey, ed., Cultural Studies and the Study of Popular Culture.
35. Cf. Asprem, "'Magic Naturalized'?"
36. LaVey, The Satanic Bible, 119.
37. LaVey, "Satanism," 440.
38. E.g., LaVey, "On Occultism of the Past."
39. Dyrendal, "Satan and the Beast"; LaVey, The Compleat Witch.
40. Asprem, "Thelema og ritualmagi," 122–24.
41. Ibid., 124.
42. Ibid., 124, 132–33.
43. See, e.g., Howe, The Magicians of the Golden Dawn; Gilbert, The Golden Dawn; Gilbert, The Golden Dawn Companion. For the aftermath and formation of new branches across the world, see Francis King, Ritual Magic in England; King, Modern Ritual Magic.
44. For instance, A. E. Waite, Shadows of Life and Thought; Arthur Machen, Things Near and Far.
45. Crowley, Confessions, 612–13.
46. Ibid.
47. Hammer, Claiming Knowledge.
48. E.g., ibid., 22–25, 42–46. The latter is not to be confused with the common philosophical meaning of "scientism."
49. For the polemical aspects of Scholem and other Kabbalah specialists, see esp. Huss, "Authorized Guardians." For the implications of Scholem's approach to the (neglect of) the study of modern occultism, see Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata," 132–33, 142–43.

Chapter 5. The Angels and the Beast

1. For a good survey of the literature, see Pasi, Versuchung der Politik, 23–32; cf. idem, "The Neverendingly Told Story."
2. See especially Lawrence Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt; Richard Kaczynski, Perdurabo for the most up-to-date biographical accounts.
3. Hugh Urban, "Unleashing the Beast;" idem, Magia Sexualis.
4. Pasi, Aleister Crowley und die Versuchung der Politik.
5. Alex Owen, "The Sorcerer and His Apprentice;" idem, The Place of Enchantment, 186–220.
6. E.g., Lon Milo DuQuette, The Magick of Aleister Crowley; Christopher Hyatt and DuQuette, The Enochian World of Aleister Crowley; Rodney Orpheus, Abrahadabra.
7. Some notable exceptions include Pasi, La notion de magie; Asprem, "Magic Naturalized?"; idem, "Kabbalah Recreata"; Urban, Magia Sexualis, 109–39.
8. Owen, The Place of Enchantment, 186–220.
9. Ibid., 196.
10. For the details of this incident, see Howe, Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 219–32.
11. Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 80–117.
12. Ibid., 119.
13. On Allan Bennett, see John L. Crow, The White Knight in the Yellow Robe.
14. Ibid., 95. Cf. Pasi, "Lo yoga in Aleister Crowley."
15. For the relevance of this book to the interpretation and use of Kabbalah in modern occultism, see Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata." For Crowley's idea of these tabulations as a form of science, see Asprem, "Magic Naturalized?"

16. For these events, see Crowley, Magick, 405–43; idem, Confessions, 391–403; but cf. Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 115ff.
17. Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 120.
18. Ibid., 121.
19. Crowley's Thelemic revisions of these rituals are known respectably as "the Star Ruby" and "the Star Saphire" rituals. Both were published for the first time in Crowley's playful Book of Lies, as chapters 25 (5 x 5) and 36 (6 x 6). Among the main differences from the Golden Dawn rituals are that Hebrew god-names are exchanged for Thelemic ones, and that the new version of the hexagram ritual has been given more explicit sexual references.
20. For the most important commentaries on the Law of Thelema, see Crowley, The Law is for; idem, Liber Aleph.
21. E.g., Crowley, "Liber II."
22. McGregor Mathers had translated this ritual instruction from manuscripts in the Bibliothéque de l'Arsenal and published it in 1898. See Mathers, ed., The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage.
23. Crowley, Magick, 494.
24. Ibid., 126.
25. Cf. Asprem, "Thelema og ritualmagi."
26. The Greek Αστρον Αργον has a double connotation, giving the English translation "the Still and Shiny Star." This is hinted at in Crowley's esoteric poem "One Star in Sight," where we read: "One star can summon them to wake / To self—star-souls serene that gleam / On life's calm lake."
27. Crowley, "Editorial," 2. For a thorough discussion of the meaning of science in the context of Crowley and the A.·.A.·.'s "Scientific Illuminism," see Asprem, "Magic Naturalized?"
28. For a concise overview of these events, see Asprem, "The Golden Dawn and the O.T.O."; cf. Pasi, "Ordo Templi Orientis."
29. The essence of Crowley's views on the Order in this respect was published already in 1919, in the so-called "Blue Equinox," being the first issue of the third volume of The Equinox.
30. The best studies of the O.T.O.'s institutional legacy—a largely underresearched field—are Martin P. Starr, The Unknown God; idem, "Chaos from Order."
31. Crowley, Confessions, 192; italics in original.
32. For Bennett's copy, see Rankine and Skinner, John Dee's Enochian Tables, 271–77. The editors note that Bennett must have made his copy between 1892 and 1894. Crowley's note to Bennett's copy is a technical suggestion for how to evoke Enochian spirits letter by letter, through the use of the "keys." See ibid., 277.
33. Ibid., 612–13; cf. Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 71.
34. For Crowley's claim that the event had been entirely unanticipated, see Confessions, 613.
35. Ibid.
36. Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 71.
37. Crowley, Vision and the Voice, 41–42.
38. Crowley, Confessions, 611.
39. See Crowley, ed., The Goetia, 95–124.
40. See Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 117, n82.
41. Crowley, Confessions, 611.
42. Cf. Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 151, 155.

43. Crowley and Neuburg, "Liber XXX Aerum" (1911); Crowley, "Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh," parts I and II (1912).
44. Crowley would have access to Ashmole MS 422, Ashmole MS 580, and Ashmole MS 1790. See my overview of the transmission of Dee's manuscripts in chapter 2.
45. Ibid., 612–13.
46. See "Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh," parts one and two.
47. Crowley, "Liber Chanokh," part one, 239.
48. Crowley, "Liber Chanokh," part two, 125.
49. Crowley, Confessions, 616. For a recent discussion of the event, see Owen, Place of Enchantment, 186–220.
50. Crowley and Neuburg, "Liber XXX Aereum."
51. Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 155.
52. Crowley, Confessions, 616.
53. Ibid.; Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 155.
54. Crowley et al., The Vision and The Voice, 86.
55. Ibid., 87n. For the role of this recreated kabbalistic hermeneutic, see Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata."
56. Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice, 170.
57. Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 202–204.
58. See Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 204–205.
59. Crowley et al., Vision and the Voice, 156–57.
60. See Crowley, ed., The Goetia.
61. Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 159–60.
62. Ibid.
63. Ibid., 161–63.
64. Ibid., 162–63; Crowley et al., The Vision and The Voice, 168.
65. Crowley et al., The Vision and The Voice, 168–69.
66. Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 204.
67. Owen, Place of Enchantment, 211.
68. Crowley, Confessions, 628. See also Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 204–205.
69. Letter to J. F. C. Fuller, cited in Sutin, Do What Thou Wilt, 204.
70. This was written for the first time in 1911, but only published two years later, for the final issue of the first volume of The Equinox. Crowley, "A Syllabus of the Official Instructions of the A.·.A.·." See also Richard Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 189.
71. Crowley, "A Syllabus of the Official Instructions," 46.
72. Ibid.
73. For instance, important god-like entities in Thelemic cosmology are not to be found in Liber Legis, but are introduced properly for the first time in these Enochian visions. This is notably the case with "Chaos" (mentioned in the visions pertaining to Aethyrs 14, 4, 3, and 2) and "Babalon" (speculations on this Thelemic goddess occupies much of the content of Aethyrs 12 through 2). See Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice.
74. See, e.g., Kaczynski, Perdurabo, 210–11.
75. E.g., ibid., 211.
76. For the liturgy, see Crowley, "Liber XV, O.T.O. Ecclesiæ Gnosticæ Catholicæ Canon Missæ."
77. Chaos is described in the visions pertaining to Aethyrs 14, 4, 3, and 2, while the Thelemic goddess Babalon plays a central role in all the visions from Aethyrs 12 through 2. See Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice.

78. Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice, 206–11.
79. Crowley, "Liber XV, O.T.O. Ecclesiæ Gnosticæ Catholicæ Canon Missæ," 585. For solar-phallic religion and occultism, see Godwin, The Theosophical Enlightenment, 1–48. For a brief discussion of solar-phallicism in the O.T.O., see, e.g., Asprem, "The Golden Dawn and the O.T.O."
80. See especially Crowley et al., Vision and the Voice, 137–42.
81. Crowley, Liber ABA, 187.
82. Ibid.
83. Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice, 116.
84. DuQuette, The Magick of Aleister Crowley; Orpheus, Abrahadabra; Gunther, Initiation in the Aeon of the Child.
85. See, e.g., Crowley et al., The Vision and the Voice, 36, 254–56.
86. E.g., DuQuette, The Magick of Aleister Crowley, 246, n2.
87. Detailed examples of how path-workings may function are described in the anthropological standard work on contemporary ritual magic: Luhrmann, Persuasions of the Witch's Craft.
88. Frater W.I.T., Enochian Initiation.

Chapter 6. Angels of Satan

1. See Anton Szandor LaVey, The Satanic Bible, 159–272. Compare with the version in Crowley, "Liber Chanokh," part two, 99–128. The spelling of the calls here are identical, while at the same time differing from those of the Golden Dawn papers published by Regardie, Golden Dawn, 673–82.
2. King, Ritual Magic in England, 110–11.
3. But see King, Ritual Magic in England, 94–191; cf. Howe, The Magicians of the Golden Dawn, 233–83.
4. Ibid., 95–96.
5. Regardie, ed., Golden Dawn, 683.
6. King, Ritual Magic in England, 107.
7. Zalewski, Enochian Chess of the Golden Dawn.
8. As is the opinion of Mary K. Greer: Women of the Golden Dawn, 251.
9. See, e.g., Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, 348–58.
10. See Moina Mathers in Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, 352.
11. Greer, Women of the Golden Dawn, 352–53.
12. Ibid., 353.
13. Perseverantia [P.F. Case], letter to Regardie, January 15, 1933; letter to Regardie, August 10, 1933.
14. Regardie, The Garden of Pomegranates. For the reception, cf. King, Ritual Magic in England, 153–54.
15. Case authored a book on the Tarot: see Case, The Tarot.
16. Case, letter to Regardie, January 1933.
17. Ibid.
18. "Ceremony of the Grade of Adeptus Minor" in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 231.
19. E.g., Asprem, "Kabbalah Recreata."
20. Case, letter to Regardie, August 10, 1933.
21. Cf. my discussion of Alex Owen's work on Crowley in chapter 5.
22. Ibid.
23. Case, letter to Regardie, January 15, 1933; emphasis added.

24. Ibid.; emphasis added.
25. See for instance their international Web site for more information: http://www.bota.org/.
26. Regardie, The Golden Dawn, 626. Unfortunately, Regardie does not reveal who these clairvoyants were, or when the experiments were conducted. It does not seem unreasonable, however, to suspect that it was in the Stella Matutina period.
27. Ibid.
28. It is nevertheless intriguing to note, as we did at the beginning of chapter 3, that the idea of Dee as an initiate of a Rosicrucian brotherhood was being spread in the Enlightenment historiography of the late eighteenth century.
29. Ibid.
30. Partially reproduced in Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, 627–28. Again, it is not stated when or where this was actually used. However, as the position has become influential also in a later period when defense against purists had become relevant, it is nevertheless an important document.
31. Ibid.
32. Ibid.
33. Ibid., 627–28.
34. Ibid., 628. The three names are Mor, Dial, Hctga.
35. Crowley, Confessions, 612.
36. Regardie, The Golden Dawn, 628–29.
37. Ibid.
38. Modern Satanism has started to receive more attention from scholars in later years, with the first international academic conference dedicated to the topic being held in Trondheim, Norway, in the fall of 2009. The same year saw the publication of the hitherto most complete anthology of modern religious Satanism, i.e., Jesper Aagaard Petersen, ed., Contemporary Religious Satanism. The first work to place it in the context of earlier religious and intellectual discourses on Satan and Satanism was Massimo Introvigne, Enquête sur le satanisme. It remains to this day the most complete treatment of the historical background, although Introvigne's discussion of modern Satanism has been rendered outdated by more recent research. Other works that touch upon the history of modern Satanism—some scholarly, some coming from emic perspectives—include Arthur Lyons, The Second Coming; Joachim Schmidt, Satanismus; Philip Stevens, "Satan and Satanism"; Jean LaFontaine, "Satanism and Satanic Mythology"; Gavin Baddeley, Lucifer Rising; James R. Lewis, Satanism Today; Jesper Aagaard Petersen, "Modern Satanism"; Petersen and Lewis, eds., Encyclopedic Sourcebook of Satanism.
39. See, e.g., Asbjørn Dyrendal, "Satan and the Beast." Introvigne also discusses the influence of earlier occult trends, especially the Californian Thelemic circle around Jack Parsons, on LaVey. See, e.g., Introvigne, Enquête sur le satanisme, 260ff. Cf. Pasi, "Dieu du désir, Dieu de la raison."
40. The now classic discussion of this process is Hanegraaff, New Age Religion and Western Culture.
41. Cf. the discussion in chapter 4.
42. E.g., Petersen, "Modern Satanism," 424–25; Partridge, Re-Enchantment of the West.
43. E.g., LaVey, "Satanism"; idem, "On Occultism of the Past."
44. Pasi, "Dieu du désir, Dieu de la raison" gives a discussion of the differences between LaVey and Aquino concerning the interpretation of the devil.

Although he does not explicitly use the dichotomy adopted here, it gives a good example of one of its main manifestations. See also the section on Aquino in this chapter.

45. Petersen, "Modern Satanism." One should however also note that applying the label "Satanism" to Aquino's position is not without its problems. For a discussion, see Kennet Granholm, "Embracing Others than Satan." Petersen's distinction is similar to an earlier fourfold typology made by Introvigne, which distinguished between "Rationalist Satanism" (Church of Satan), "Occultist Satanism" (Temple of Set), "Acid Satanism" (informal, youth oriented), and "Luciferian Satanism" (Gnostic). See Introvigne, Auf den Spuren des Satanismus. In the following I will be adhering to Petersen's dichotomy, which bases itself on Introvigne's "Rationalist"/"Occultist" distinction.
46. Petersen, "Modern Satanism," 444.
47. Ibid. Thus, it is "esoteric" in ways more similar to those movements, spokespersons, and texts defined and circumscribed by Antoine Faivre, e.g., Access to Western Esotericism. However, I do not here enter into the web of debate on the definition (or description) of "esotericism." See, however, Hanegraaff, Esotericism and the Academy; cf. von Stuckrad, Was ist Esoterik?; idem, "Western Esotericism."
48. It has been suggested, notably by Kennet Granholm, that referring to the Temple of Set as "Satanic" is misleading. The figure and symbolism of Satan is largely changed for other expressions (e.g., Set), and it would be more accurate to refer to the position by the more generic "Left-Hand Path." This also holds true for a range of later groups often denoted "Satanists" because of their heritage and links to LaVey and/or Aquino. See Granholm, "Embracing Others than Satan."
49. See Aquino, The Church of Satan, chapter 3.
50. Ibid, 52.
51. See LaVey, "Satanism," Appendix 1 to The Church of Satan, Aquino, 436–45.
52. Ibid, 444.
53. Lewis, "Diabolical Authority," 8.
54. Ibid; Aquino, Church of Satan, 65.
55. Crowley, "Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh. A Brief Abstract Description of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe Derived by Doctor John Dee through the Skrying of Sir Edward Kelly," The Equinox I, nos VII and VIII (1912). Compare those in "A Brief Abstract...," Equinox VIII (1912): 99–128, with LaVey's in The Satanic Bible, 159–272. The spellings of the keys here are identical, while at the same time differing from those of the Golden Dawn published in Regardie, Golden Dawn, 673–82.
56. Aquino, Church of Satan, 65. See also Crowley, Victor B. Neuburg, and Mary Desti, The Vision and The Voice.
57. Aquino, Church of Satan, 52.
58. Although it should be made clear that it was not known at the time that Redbeard's tract was in fact the source of this part of the Satanic Bible; it was only named "The Book of Satan" and references to Redbeard were not included. Rather, the content was seen as compatible with the rest of the content of the satanic philosophy of life.
59. E.g., Campbell, "The Cult, the Cultic Milieu, and Secularization"; Olav Hammer, Claiming Knowledge; Partridge, The Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. I.
60. Dyrendal's forthcoming "Satan and the Beast" gives a more thorough treatment of this subject by comparing the notion of magic in Crowley, LaVey, and Aquino, their affinities and differences.

61. LaVey, The Satanic Bible, 111.
62. Dyrendal, "Satan and the Beast"; LaVey, The Compleat Witch. This book is really a sort of handbook for women in how to attract and manipulate men through various more or less mundane tricks.
63. LaVey, "Satanism," 439.
64. Ibid.
65. LaVey, The Satanic Bible, 110.
66. Ibid.
67. E.g., LaVey, "Enochian Pronunciation Guide"; idem, "Suggested Enochian Keys for Various Rituals and Ceremonies." Both reproduced on the CoS Web site: http://www.churchofsatan.com/Pages/EnochianGuide.html.
68. The Satanic Bible, 155.
69. Ibid. Also in LaVey, "Satanism," 442.
70. LaVey, "Enochian Pronunciation Guide."
71. Regardie cited in Aquino, Church of Satan, 65.
72. Ibid.
73. Ibid., 66. LaVey considered Regardie a personal friend, and it seems likely that his disappointment was due to this rather than any hope to be recognized by the established esoteric community.
74. Ibid. I have not succeeded in locating a copy of this article. However, Mr. Aquino has kindly told me that the article "was fairly brief, just making the point that Anton LaVey's modification of the Enochian Keys was only the latest in several successive modifications through the Golden Dawn and Crowley periods." Later on, however, Aquino would do more research into the original sources, acquiring a microfilm of the Dee material in the Ashmolean collection at the Bodleian Library. These studies were incorporated into his own position, which developed later. Aquino, e-mail to the author, February 20, 2008. More on Aquino's position follows below.
75. Aquino, Church of Satan, 66.
76. Aquino, e-mail to the author, February 20, 2008.
77. Lewis, "Diabolical Authority."
78. See Weber, Wirtschaft und Gesellschaft, Chapter III, §10.
79. Aquino, Temple of Set, 6–7.
80. See LaVey, "Phase IV message," appendix no. 116 in Aquino, Church of Satan.
81. Lewis, "Diabolical Authority," 5.
82. Aquino, Temple of Set, 7; emphasis added.
83. Aquino, Temple of Set, 9; emphases added.
84. Ibid., 7–8. This was Stephen Skinner's edition of Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation, published as John Dee's Action with Spirits. It was a hardcover facsimile copy in a limited edition of 350 copies.
85. Aquino, The Temple of Set, 8. Aquino's engagement with U.S. military PSYOP, and the battalion's coterie of strange and unusual men is further outlined in his Church of Satan, 535–36.
86. Aquino, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary," 104–105.
87. Aquino, diary entry of March 9, 1974, cited in The Temple of Set, 8.
88. Aquino, Temple of Set, 9.
89. Aquino, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary," 105. For the full text of the result (which, amusingly, is in dialogue form between the two mythological creatures mentioned in the title), see Aquino, "The Sphinx and the Chimera."

90. Ibid.
91. Aquino, Temple of Set, 9.
92. Aquino, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary," 105.
93. The current version of these translations is available as appendix 4 to Aquino's Temple of Set, 129–35.
94. Aquino, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary," 103; emphasis added.
95. LaVey, The Satanic Rituals, 173–202.
96. Aquino, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary," 104.
97. Ibid., 105.
98. The other seventeen were done much later, the whole composition being ready by 1981.
99. Aquino, Word of Set, 129.
100. Ibid.
101. Aquino, Temple of Set, 9.
102. Ibid.
103. For details, see Aquino, The Book of Coming Forth by Night; idem, "The Book of Coming Forth By Night—Analysis and Commentary."

Chapter 7. The Purist Turn

1. E.g., Dave Evans, History of British Magic after Crowley, 374–75.
2. Jean-François Lyotard, The Postmodern Condition.
3. Ibid., xxiv.
4. Ibid., xxv.
5. It may be interesting to compare this project with other attempts to preserve, save or even recreate "uniqueness." The theme has clear parallels to postcolonial discourse, the struggle against Western acculturation of natives, and the recovery of "subaltern" identities and voices. This of course impacted the Western religious landscape as well, notably perhaps with the flowering of neo-pagan currents, some of them at least attempting to reconstruct lost or repressed identities.
6. Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 120. It might be added that the perception that a "purist" tendency has gained ground over this period was recognized by Enochian magicians themselves, sometimes by that precise term (see, e.g., Gerald Schueler, "Re: Schueler's 'translations,'" Enochian-L, 13.10.1997; cf. the discussion in chapter 8). Incidentally then, I already developed a category of Enochian purism for my working hypothesis, before encountering it independently developed in Pasi and Rabaté's article.
7. The Satanic Bible is likely to have been one of the most popular occult books ever. In 1991 it had already sold more than 600,000 copies worldwide. In addition there have been illegal translations distributed in Spanish and Russian, and since the 1991 figures, other legal translations into Swedish, German, and French have been made. See Lewis, "Diabolical Authority," 9.
8. Skinner, ed., John Dee's Action with Spirits.
9. Aquino, e-mail to the author, February 20, 2008.

10. Vinci, Gmicalzoma!
11. See Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 119; Vinci, Gmicalzoma!, 12.
12. Laycock, The Complete Enochian Dictionary. Reprinted in 1994 by Weiser Books.
13. I.e., Laycock, "Angelic language or mortal folly?"
14. Skinner, "Preface to the Revised Edition," no page numbers.
15. It seems a promising vista for new research to chart out the extent to which something like the "purist turn" makes itself present more generally in the world of ritual magic from the 1970s and 1980s onward. Certainly, a considerable number of sourcebooks were published in this period. Some examples would include Skinner, ed., The Fourth Book of occult Philosophy (1978), the various editions by Adam McLean's Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourcework series, and editions of grimoires, such as Daniel Driscoll, Sworn Book of Honorius (1977).
16. King, Ritual Magic in England, 187.
17. Ibid.
18. Cited in King, Ritual Magic in England, 190.
19. For the reproduced self-initiation ritual, originally titled "The Magical Ladder of Frater L.Z.I., the 4 = 7 to 5 = 6 Workings," see King, Ritual Magic in England, 187–89. For Crowley's "Mass of the Phoenix," see Crowley, The Book of Lies, chapter 44.
20. Edwards, Dare to Make Magic.
21. Pasi and Rabaté do not treat this Order in their article, although Turner is mentioned in connection with the "Necronomicon scam," discussed below. See "Langue angélique, langue magique," 105–106.
22. Ashe, e-mail to the author, March 2, 2008. Steven Ashe was a member of the O.C.S. from 1979 to the early 1980s. Later he has acquired a name within contemporary occultism for his publications on occultist Kabbalah. See, e.g., his recent Qabalah—The Complete Golden Dawn Initiate.
23. Ashe, e-mail to the author, March 2, 2008.
24. Turner, ed., The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee. First published in the Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks series in 1983, reprinted with new introduction and additional material by Aquarian Press, 1986. Turner, Elizabethan Magic.
25. Turner, The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, xxii.
26. Ashe, e-mail to the author, March 2, 2008.
27. Ibid.
28. George Hay, ed., introduced by Colin Wilson, The Necronomicon: Book of Dead Names.
29. A full-length treatment of this phenomenon is available in Harms and Gonce, Necronomicon Files. For a scholarly analysis of Lovecraft's place in modern and contemporary esotericism, see Hanegraaff, "Fiction in the Desert of the Real."
30. H. P. Lovecraft, "A History of the Necronomicon."
31. Ibid.
32. Ibid., 49.
33. In Sloane MS 3189.
34. For this account, see Harms, "The Necronomicon Made Flesh," 50.
35. Gonce, "A Plague of Necronomicons," 129.
36. Ashe, e-mail to the author, March 2, 2008.
37. In Ashe's words, the success "went to Mr. Turner's head somewhat." Ibid.
38. See http://www.staffordtown.co.uk/tlodge.html (accessed Match 2, 2008).
39. Ashe, e-mail to the author, March 2, 2008. Forman's magical papers are in the British Library, Add. MS 36674, ff. 47–56, f. 56. For more on Forman, see A. L. Rowse, Simon Forman; Barbara Traister, The Notorious Astrological Physician of London; Lauren Kassel, Medicine and Magic in Elizabethan London.

40. Turner, The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, 12.
41. This constructed tradition is set forth by Denning and Philips, Robe and Ring, xxx–xxxv.
42. Denning and Phillips, The Magical Philosophy, Book I, Robe and Ring, was published in 1974 by Llewellyn. Books II and III followed in 1975 (The Appeal of High Magic and The Sword and the Serpent), number IV in 1978 (The Triumph of Light), and number V in 1981 (Mysteria Magica). Hereafter I will refer to the volumes by their second titles.
43. According to a well-informed previous member, Al Billings, the few searches that have been done into the roots of the order have failed to find any trace of the turn of the century antiquarian society it claims to stem from, the Societas Rotae Fulgentis. The claimed lineage still seems to have wide currency among present members. Billings, e-mail to the author, March 10, 2008.
44. Dennings and Phillips, "The Heptarchical Doctrine." Although I have not been able to acquire a first edition of this book, there are strong indications that this material was not present when it was first published in 1974. Vide infra.
45. Ibid., 150.
46. Ibid., 149.
47. Ibid., 150–52.
48. Denning and Phillips, The Apparel of High Magick.
49. Idem, The Sword and the Serpent, esp. 139–41.
50. Idem, The Triumph of Light.
51. Idem, Mysteria Magica, 174–212, 213–54, 431–52.
52. Ibid., 184–208, 209–12.
53. Ibid., 232–44.
54. Ibid., 174–79.
55. James, Enochian Evocation, 194.
56. Ibid., 1–15.
57. Ibid., xxiv.
58. Ibid., xxii.
59. James, The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee, xii.
60. See, e.g., Hanegraaff, New Age Culture, 482–514.
61. Ibid., 179–91.
62. Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 120–21.
63. DuQuette and Hyatt, Enochian World of Aleister Crowley, 19–59 (exegesis/instructions), 61–102 (Liber Chanokh).
64. Ibid., 103–22.
65. DuQuette, "Instruction," in Enochian World of Aleister Crowley, 17; emphasis added.
66. Ibid.
67. For an intriguing personal account of DuQuette's magical biography, see his book My Life with the Spirits. Here, he also writes about his experiments with Enochian magic, which has been a long-term pursuit. DuQuette also mentions that he ran a study group called the Guild of Enochian Studies (G.O.E.S.). The group apparently met twice a week for three years, studying the available Crowley and Golden Dawn material on Enochian magic. Unfortunately, DuQuette does not provide us with an exact dating, but this seems to have taken place in the early 1980s. See My Life With the Spirits, 133–55.

68. Gerald Schueler has a background in the latter, being a member of the Association for Transpersonal Psychology (ATP). For his and Betty's curriculum vitae, see http://www.schuelers.com/bio.htm.
69. Especially "Liber Chanokh" and "The Vision and the Voice," published in Regardie, ed., Gems from the Equinox, 385–430, 431–591. Regardie's compilation was published for the first time in 1974.
70. Both these models are succinctly laid out on the Schuelers' Web site: see "Universe," http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/map.htm.
71. http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
72. See "Liber scientiae," "De Hep Mystica," and "Language" subsections at http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm. The Enochian language is also treated in G. and B. Schueler, Enochian Magick, predominantly from a G.D. and Crowley perspective.
73. G. Schueler, "Comments on the Heptarchia Mystica," linked to http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
74. Regardie, The Golden Dawn, 44.
75. "Schueler's Enochian Magic," javascript pop-up at http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
76. Ibid.
77. "Enochian healing," linked to http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
78. Ibid. This was first spelled out in G. and B. Scueler, Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick.
79. "Schueler's Enochian Magic," javascript pop-up at http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
80. G. and B. Schueler, Angels' Message to Humanity, acknowledgments page.
81. "Schueler's Enochian Magic," javascript pop-up at http://www.schuelers.com/enochian/index.htm.
82. This cosmology, which is succinctly explained on the Schueler Web site, borrows heavily from Blavatsky. The "higher" planes are, in order, the etheric, astral, lower and higher mental, and the divine plane. See also G. Schueler, Enochian Physics.
83. Cf. Hanegraaff's observation in "Magic V," 743.
84. Agrippa, Three Books of Occult Philosophy.
85. For a list and discription of his prolific production, see Tyson's Web site: http://www.donaldtyson.com/books.html.
86. It should nevertheless be noted that for Pasi and Rabaté the distinction between "purists" and "revisionists" is meant to indicate whether or not an author accepts the particular revisions done by the G.D. and Crowley (Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 119). In this sense, Tyson too is certainly a critic of the G.D. synthesis. With reference to the discursive strategies discussed in chapter 3, however, this is not the end of the story, since he also has a highly innovative side which is explored further here.
87. E.g., Tyson, Enochian Magic for Beginners, 35–47, 212, 220–25, 269, 271–74, 308, 309–51.
88. Ibid., 309–51.
89. E.g., ibid., 35–47, 225, 274–76.
90. Tyson, "The Enochian Apocalypse."
91. Tyson's other main innovation.
92. Ibid., 274. This seems to be the main criterion for Pasi and Rabaté. See note 26 above.

93. Ibid., 245ff, 283–308.
94. Tyson, "Foreword," xxiii–xxvi.
95. Tyson, Power of the Word, 170. Here he refers to the book as Enochian Mandalas, which seems to have been the working title of Angels' Message.

Chapter 8. Enochiana without Borders

1. The French context is briefly discussed by Pasi and Rabaté, "Langue angélique, langue magique," 121–23. Content-wise the Enochian material published in French is unremarkable, being mostly based on the G.D. material. See, e.g., Jean-Pascal Ruggiu, La Magie Hénokéenne; Étienne Morgant, La magie enochienne. The Norwegian context will be treated somewhat more in detail later, as it has had a greater influence on the recent development of Enochiana internationally as well.
2. The study of the Internet's impact on religion is rapidly developing. Some recent key studies include Douglas E. Cowan and Jeffrey K. Hadden, "Virtually Religious"; Lorne L. Dawson and D. E. Cowan, eds., Religion Online; Heidi Campbell, Exploring Religious Community Online; D. E. Cowan, Cyberhenge; Morten T. Højsgaard and Margrit Warburg, eds., Religion and Cyberspace. A good overview of the state of research is available in Doris R. Jakobsh, "Understanding Religion and Cyberspace."
3. Studies that focus more specifically on occult and related currents online include Dawson and Jenna Hennebry, "New Religions and the Internet"; Cowan and Hadden, "Virtually Religious"; and Cowan, Cyberhenge. For a thorough discussion on how and how not the Internet has affected modern religious groups (represented by pagan communities), see especially Cowan, Cyberhenge, 51–58. Cowan argues that there is nothing radically new about religion online (i.e., it does not become "virtual" per usage of "virtual reality"), but rather has given somewhat new patterns to old phenomena. For a discussion of methodological challenges related to studying online religion (and esotericism), see Petersen, "From Book to Bit."
4. Partridge, Re-Enchantment of the West, Vol. 1, 66.
5. Although it should be noted that researchers for a long time have pointed to a new global class divide along the lines of Internet access and information technology "haves and have-nots." See, e.g., Castells, Internet Galaxy; Lenhart, "The Ever-Shifting Internet Population."
6. K. G. Coffman and A. M. Odlyzko, "The Size and Growth Rate of the Internet," 13.
7. All the posts of this list are archived and accessible at http://www.hollyfeld.org/heaven/Email/Enochian-l/.
8. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochian/. Founded and moderated by "Frater Amoris" from Sidney. See his profile: http://profiles.yahoo.com/amoris313. Amoris also runs the group "Realmagick," a more general occult discussion forum which currently has more than 1,250 members. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/realmagick/.
9. http://hermetic.com/enochia/index.html.
10. http://hermetic.com/browe-archive/.
11. http://themagickalreview.org/.
12. http://www.enochian.org/new/enochiantools.shtml. The site has been operative since 2006, and is run by a person writing under the name "Athena" in the Enochian Yahoo! group.

13. Vide the publications of Turner, Skinner, and Laycock in the bibliography.
14. E.g., DuQuette and Hyatt, Enochian World of Aleister Crowley; Crowley et al., Vision and the Voice.
15. "on line enochian resources?" Enochian-L, November 11, 1996. When citing posts from e-mail lists and online discussion forums, I will refer to the author, the subject title, name of list/forum, and date of posting. In the bibliography I give URLs to the archives of the forums and e-lists used (see the "Web sites and online sources" section), so that the reader can easily find the reference without it being necessary to litter the footnotes with URL addresses. The exact URL to online documents and essays can also be found in the bibliography.
16. Rowe, "Enochian Temples."
17. Rowe, "Enochian Magick Reference."
18. The first post in which he openly attacks the Schuelers' books on Enochian is "Re: Scheuler and context," Enochian-L, November 17, 1996.
19. Rowe, "Re: Tyson's system," Enochian-L, November 20, 1996.
20. E.g., Charla Williams, "Re: Tyson's system," Enochian-L, November 20, 1996.
21. Rowe, "Enochian Magick Reference," 52.
22. "Jerry" Schueler wrote his first post on October 12, 1997.
23. E.g., Rowe, "Schueler's \'translations'\," Enochian-L, October 9, 1997.
24. Rowe, "Re: Schueler's 'translations,'" Enochian-L, October 12, 1997. When quoting online posts I will generally leave the language and system of punctuation unedited. Since the language styles in discussion forums online tend to be rather liberal, the result is that several of the quotations will have odd punctuation and abundant spelling errors. For ease of reading I have chosen not to interfere with sic! in the most extreme cases, but rather let the texts stand as they are. As an exception, I have inserted italics where authors have indicated it through the use of underscores. For a discussion of styles and genres online, see Petersen, "From Book to Bit."
25. Schueler, "Re: Schueler's 'translations,'" Enochian-L, October 13, 1997.
26. Rowe, "'Enochian physics,' mostly," Enochian-L, October 14, 1997.
27. For Schueler's equation, see Enochian Physics, 156–57.
28. Rowe, "'Enochian physics,' mostly," Enochian-L, October 14, 1997.
29. Schueler, "Re: 'Enochian physics,' mostly," Enochian-L, October 14, 1997.
30. Schueler, "Re: Schueler's 'translations,'" Enochian-L, October 13, 1997.
31. Rowe, "'Enochian physics,' mostly," Enochian-L, October 14, 1997.
32. Ibid.
33. Ibid.
34. E.g., Hammer, Claiming Knowledge, 22–25, 44–45. See also my discussion in chapter 4.
35. Rowe, "Schueler's \'translations'\," Enochian-L, October 09, 1997.
36. See for instance the papers: Rowe, "The 91 Parts of the Earth"; idem, "The Lotus of the Enochian Temple: Sample Visions"; idem, "Experiments with the Second Enochian Key."
37. I.e., Rowe, "A Modified Hexagram Ritual for Enochian Workings"; idem, "A Ritual of the Heptagram." Rowe's most complete manifesto on Enochian magic is his "Godzilla meets E.T." (two parts).
38. Schueler, "Re: 'Enochian physics,' mostly," Enochian-L, October 14, 1997.
39. Ibid.

40. Frater_tommy, "enochian electrical field," Enochian Yahoo! group, August 26, 2005.
41. As is testified by for instance the fairly recent discussion on the Enochian Yahoo! group entitled "ritualistic enochian vs. spoken enochian," especially from the post by Dean Hildebrandt posted January 18, 2007, and onward.
42. Tim a.k.a. V. H., "Re: The Tablet of God," Enochian-L, November 14, 1996.
43. Rowe, "Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 15, 1996.
44. I.e., Asprem, "Thelema og ritualmagi."
45. Hanegraaff, "How Magic Survived"; Luhrmann, Persuasions of the Witch's Craft.
46. Rowe, "Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 15, 1996.
47. For a recent and thorough (philosophical) discussion, see Lipton, Inference to the Best Explanation. It should be noted that I found the same abductive line of argumentation in my study of ritual magicians in Norway. See Asprem, "Thelema og ritualmagi," 124.
48. In the following, I will normalize the spelling of his name, to read "Nigris" with a capital "N."
49. Nigris (333), "Re: Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 15, 1996.
50. Ibid.
51. Nigris (333), "Re: Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 23, 1996.
52. Nigris (333), "Re: Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 15, 1996.
53. Ibid.
54. Rowe, "Re: Are the Angels Real?" Enochian-L, November 16, 1996. The Aethyrs with geographical attributions, names, and sigils were given in Krakow, May 21–23, 1584, while the Great Table was revealed on June 25 the same year. Cf. Casaubon, True and Faithful Relation, 140ff, 172–81.
55. Rowe, "Re: Are the angels real?" Enochian-L, November 16, 1996.
56. Ibid.
57. Ibid.
58. E.g., Katz, ed., Mysticism and Philosophical Analysis; idem, ed., Mysticism and Religious Traditions; idem, ed., Mysticism and Language; Proudfoot, Religious Experience.
59. Rowe, "Re: Are the angels real?" Enochian-L, November 16, 1996.
60. Rowe, "Godzilla meets E.T."
61. Balt camp, and later oasis (from 1994), was founded in 1992, and was the third attempt to start an O.T.O. group in Oslo. The Balt group arose as a response to a conflict in the previous camp, Yggdrasil, which was run by Simen Berntsen. According to informed sources, the circle surrounding Karlsen's Balt group consisted of around twenty people, of which half were more or less stable and actively participating members. The group had a distinct emphasis on magical practice, including Enochian work. It was disbanded by its leader in 1997, due to what Karlsen experienced as homophobic discrimination embedded in the O.T.O. structure. This especially related to Karlsen's dissatisfaction with the Gnostic Mass, which he wanted to rewrite in order to incorporate two male priests instead of a priest and a priestess. During its period of existence, two other more or less competing O.T.O. camps were in existence in Oslo: Heimdall, and Aurora Borealis. While Balt focused extensively on ritual magic and Enochiana, Heimdall focused on the revival of Ásatrú (the group was run by Egil Stenseth, who played a pivotal role in establishing organized Ásatrú in Norway in the 1990s), while Aurora Borealis was preoccupied with Masonry. After the demise of Balt oasis, Heimdall largely took over as the main O.T.O.

body in Oslo. This continues to be the case, although with renewed leadership and somewhat weakened ties to the Ásatrú community. For references, see Karlsen, "A Recollection by Runar Karlsen"; for the O.T.O. in Norway, see O.T.O. Norway's official Web site, http://www.oto.no/; for reconstructionist Ásatrú in Norway and internal and external polemics, see Asprem, "Heathens Up North."

62. See Karlsen, "EM: The 9 Fire spirits," Enochian-L, January 4, 1998.
63. Karlsen, "Re: Intro & New Questions—Paraoan," Enochian-L, September 22, 1997.
64. Karlsen, "The Elements," Enochian-L, December 13, 1997.
65. Karlsen, "Re: Thoughts on the calls," Enochian-L, January 2, 1999.
66. Ibid.
67. To exemplify, the strophe in question reads "they are become 28 living dwellings, in whom the strength of man rejoices" (Enochian: "i noas ni paradial, casarmg ugear chirlan").
68. Karlsen, "EM: The nine Fire spirits," Enochian-L, January 4, 1998. One should note, however, that Karlsen, by his own statement, had already developed a great interest in Enochian, and especially the calls and its language.
69. Ibid.
70. This text, with Karlsen's translation, is found as an appendix to this book.
71. The translation he finally ended up with (by 1993) is claimed to be partially "received," but mostly his own. Looking closer at Karlsen's calls shows that some words are identical or very similar to those found, with translations, in the original calls (and later tabulated in the various Enochian dictionaries), while others do not resemble anything known.
72. See Karlsen, "About the I Ged Calls," http://home.no.net/karl24/aboutCalls.htm.
73. See the section of Karlsen's Web site where the I Ged is published, with all the squares and new calls: http://home.no.net/karl24/IgedIndx-rel.htm.
74. E.g., Hildebrandt, "Re: Thoughts on the calls," Enochian-L, January 2, 1999.
75. E.g., Hildebrandt, "Precession of the Equinoxes essay revisited," Enochian-L, April 23, 2001; W. P., "I GED Godname prayers," Enochian-L, May 27, 2001.
76. Zephyros93 [P. J. Rovelli], "New file uploaded to enochian," Enochian Yahoo! group, August 29, 2002. For the document, see Rovelli, "The DOzmt Index vel Dor OS zol ma thil: Commentary on the Runar Transmissions."
77. Hildebrandt, e-mail to the author, dated April 28, 2008.
78. http://home.no.net/karl24/. The Web site was taken down around 2009, but is expected to reappear at a new domain shortly: http://www.infinite-ways.net.
79. Shaffer, "Letter Essences of the Angelic Language," Enochian-L, June 4, 1998.
80. Ibid.
81. Ibid. Shaffer's theory has later been published online in a more condensed form. See http://members.aol.com/AJRoberti/enochale.htm.
82. Karlsen, "Re: Letter Essences of the Angelic Language," Enochian-L, June 5, 1998.
83. See http://home.no.net/karl24/audMindex.htm.
84. Ima Pseudonym, "Enochian and Gnosticism," Enochian Yahoo! Group, May 12, 2006.
85. I.e., Karlsen, "Re: Meta Re [enochian]: Re: Worldsoul of the Sun," Enochian Yahoo! group, June 7, 2004; Frater S.S.N.S., "A Modest Proposal," Enochian Yahoo! group, July 23, 2004.
86. Frater S.S.N.S., "A Modest Proposal," Enochian Yahoo! group, July 23, 2004.

Conclusion

1. See Hanegraaff, "Magic V," 743.
2. Regardie, Golden Dawn, 44.

Appendix

1. The introduction of this group of spirits is discussed in chapter 8 of the present book—E. A.
2. According to Karlsen, the awkward translation is an effect of a general lack of congruence between English and Enochian grammar. Karlsen's translations (those in the document given below included) follow a direct word-by-word approach, which tend to ignore aspects of grammar and syntax which remain unclear. The words added in brackets qualify merely as a best guess at the "correct" grammatical relation—E. A.
3. But see the discussions of Dee, Enochiana, and the construction of Rosicrucian lineage elsewhere in this book, particularly chapters 3 and 6. From the perspective of the academic historian, there is no evidence that Rosicrucianism existed before the early seventeenth century, i.e., after Dee's death—E. A.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Primary Sources

Anupassana [Suzan Wilson]. "Introduction to the Elemental Grade Ceremonies." In The Golden Dawn, ed. Israel Regardie, 135–40. St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1989.

Aquino, Michael. The Book of Coming Forth by Night: Analysis and Commentary. Appendix 3 to The Temple of Set, Draft 6, 2006. Available from Xeper.org: http://www.xeper.org/maquino/nm/TOSd6.pdf.

———. The Church of Satan. Fifth edition, 2002. Available from Xeper.org: http://www.xeper.org/maquino/nm/COS.pdf.

———. "The Sphinx and the Chimera." Appendix 1 to The Temple of Set, idem., Draft 6, 2006.

———. The Temple of Set, idem., Draft 6, 2006

———. The Word of Set. Appendix 4 to The Temple of Set, idem., Draft 6, 2006.

Ashe, Steven. Qabalah—The Complete Golden Dawn Initiate. Lulu Enterprises, U.K. Ltd., 2007.

Bennett, Allan. "Ritual for the Evocation unto Visible Appearance of the Great Spirit Taphthartharath." The Equinox 1, no. 3 (1910): 170–90.

Burke, Edmund. The Annual Register, or a View of the History, Politics, and Literateure, For the Year 1774. Second edition. London: J. Dosley, Pall-Mall, 1778.

Casaubon, Meric. A True & Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits. London, 1659.

Case, Paul Foster ["Perseverantia"]. Letter to Regardie, January 15, 1933. Made available by The Paul Foster Case Study Group at http://kcbventures.com/pfc., and the Fraternity of Inner Light at http://www.lvx.org/Archive/index.html.

———. Letter to Regardie, August 10, 1933. Made available by The Paul Foster Case Study Group at http://kcbventures.com/pfc/, and the Fraternity of Inner Light at http://www.lvx.org/Archive/index.html.

———. The Tarot: A Key to the Wisdom of the Ages. Richmond: Macoby, 1947.

Crowley, Aleister. The Book of Lies: Which Is Also Falsely Called Breaks: The Wanderings or Falsifications of Frater Perdurabo Which Thought Is Itself Untrue. San Francisco: Red Wheel/Weiser, 1981 (1st ed., 1913).

———. The Confessions of Aleister Crowley. London: Arcana Penguin Books, 1989.

———. "Editorial." The Equinox: The Official Organ of the A∴A∴. Th e Review of Scientific Illuminism 1, no. 1 (1909): 1–6.

———. Gems from the Equinox: Instructions by Aleister Crowley for His Own Magickal Order. Ed. Israel Regardie. Tempe: Falcon Press, 1986 (1974).

———. The Law Is for All: The Authorized Popular Commentary of Liber AL vel Legis Sub Figura CCXX, The Book of the Law. Ed. L. Marlow, W. Breeze, and L. U. Wilkinson. Tempe: New Falcon Publications, 1996.

———. "Liber II: The Message of the Master Therion." The Equinox 3, no. 1 (1919): 41–43.
———. "Liber XV, O.T.O. Ecclesiæ Gnosticæ Catholicæ Canon Missæ." In Magick, Liber ABA, idem, 584–97. San Francisco: Weiser Books, 1997.
———. "Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh. A Brief Abstract Description of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe Derived by Doctor John Dee through the Skrying of Sir Edward Kelly." Part One. The Equinox 1, no. 7 (1912): 229–43.
———. "Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh. A Brief Abstract Description of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe Derived by Doctor John Dee through the Skrying of Sir Edward Kelly." Part Two. The Equinox 1, no. 8 (1912): 99–128.
———. Liber Aleph vel CXI: The Book of Wisdom or Folly. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 1991.
———. Magick. Liber ABA. Book Four. Parts I–IV. York Beach: Samuel Weiser, 1997.
———. "A Syllabus of the Official Instructions of the A.·.A.·." The Equinox 1, no. 9 (1913): 41–56.
———, ed. The Equinox Vol I. Two volumes. York Beach: Red Wheel Weiser, 1999 (originally published 1909–1913).
———, ed. The Goetia: The Lesser Key of Solomon the King. Clavicula Salomonis Regis. Trans. Samuel Liddell Mathers. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 1995.
Crowley, Aleister, and Victor Neuburg. "Liber XXX Aereum, vel Saeculi sub Figura CCCCXVIII Being of the Angels of the 30 Aethyrs. The Vision and the Voice." Special supplement to The Equinox 1, no. 5 (1911).
Crowley, Aleister, Victor B. Neuburg, and Mary Desti. The Vision and the Voice with Commentary, and Other Papers. Ed. William Breeze. York Beach: Weiser Books, 1998.
Denning, Melita, and Osborne Phillips. "The Heptarchical Doctrine." In The Magical Philosophy. Book I: Robe and Ring, 135–55. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1983 (1974).
———. The Magical Philosophy. Book I: Robe and Ring. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1983 (1974).
———. The Magical Philosophy. Book II: The Appeal of High Magick. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1975.
———. The Magical Philosophy. Book III: The Sword and the Serpent. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1975.
———. The Magical Philosophy. Book IV: The Triumph of Light. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1978.
———. The Magical Philosophy. Book V: Mysteria Magica. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1981.
Driscoll, Daniel J. Sworn Book of Honorius the Magician. Gillette: Heptangle Books, 1977.
DuQuette, Lon Milo. The Magick of Aleister Crowley: A Handbook of the Rituals of Thelema. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 (1st ed. 1994).
———. My Life With the Spirits: The Adventures of a Modern Magician. York Beach: Weiser Books, 1999.
Edwards, David. Dare to Make Magic. London: Rigel Press, 1971.
Gilbert, Robert A., and John Hamill, eds. The Rosicrucian Seer: Magical Writings of Frederick Hockley. Wellingborough: Aquarian Press, 1986.
Godwin, William. Lives of the Necromancers: Or, an Account of the Most Eminent Persons in Successive Ages, Who Have Claimed for Themselves, or to Whom Has Been Imputed by Others, the Exercise of Magical Powers. London: Frederick J. Mason, 1834.
Granger, James. A Supplement, consisting of Corrections and large Additions, to A Biographical History of England. London, 1774.

Gunther, J. Daniel. Initiation in the Aeon of the Child: The Inward Journey. Lake Worth, FL: Ibis Press, 2009.

Hay, George, ed. The Necronomicon: The Book of Dead Names. Introduced by Colin Wilson. St. Helier, Jersey Channel Islands: Neville Spearman, 1978.

Hedegård, Gösta, ed. Liber Iuratus Honorii: A Critical Edition of the Latin Version of the Sworn Book of Honorius. Stockholm: Almqvist og Wicksell International, 2002.

Hildebrandt, Dean. "Essay on Enochian." First posted at the enochian e-maillist, January 7, 2001. http://home.no.net/karl24/DeanOnEnochiana.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

Hyatt, Christopher S., and Lon Milo DuQuette. The Enochian World of Aleister Crowley: Enochian Sex Magic. Tempe, AZ: New Falcon Publications, 1991.

James, Geoffrey. Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee. Gillette: Heptangle Books, 1984.

———. The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee: The Most Powerful System of Magick in Its Original Unexpurgated Form. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1998.

Josten, C. H., ed. Elias Ashmole (1617–1692). His Autobiographical and Historical Notes, his Correspondence, and Other Contemporary Sources Relating to his Life and Work. Volumes I, III and IV. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1966.

Karlsen, Runar. "About the I Ged Calls." 2001. http://home.no.net/karl24/aboutCalls.htm (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. Dor OZ zol ma thil. 1991 (later commentaries not dated). http://home.no.net/karl24/boeindex.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. The I Ged Index. 1992 (later commentaries not dated). http://home.no.net/karl24/IgedIndx-rel.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "A Recollection by Runar Karlsen." In The O.T.O. Phenomenon, ed. Peter Koenig. Online at: http://user.cyberlink.ch/~koenig/sunrise/runar.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

Küntz, Darcy, ed. The Complete Golden Dawn Cipher Manuscript. London: Holmes, 1995.

———, ed. The Enochian Experiments of the Golden Dawn: The Enochian Alphabet Clairvoyantly Examined. Sequim: Holmes Publishing Group LLC, 1996.

Kupperman, J. S. ,trans. and ed. The Cipher Manuscript. http://www.hermetic.com/gdlibrary/cipher/. (Last accessed September 24, 2007). Undated.

Langford Garstein, E.J., ed. The Rosie Crucian Secrets: Their Excellent Method of Making Medicines from Metals, Also Their Lawes and Mysteries. Wellingborough: Atlantis, 1985.

LaVey, Anton Szandor. The Compleat Witch. New York: Lancer Books, 1970.

———. "Enochian Pronunciation Guide." In The Cloven Hoof, May issue (1970). Online reprint by Church of Satan: http://www.churchofsatan.com/Pages/EnochianGuide.html.

———. "On Occultism of the Past." The Cloven Hoof, September (1971). http://www.churchofsatan.com/Pages/LaVeyPastOccultism.html.

———. "Phase IV message." Appendix no. 116 in Aquino, The Church of Satan. Fifth ed., 2002.

———. The Satanic Bible. New York: Avon Books, 1969.

———. The Satanic Rituals. New York: Avon Books, 1972.

———. "Satanism." Appendix no. 1 in Aquino, The Church of Satan, 436–45. Fifth ed., 2002.

———. "Suggested Enochian Keys for Various Rituals and Ceremonies." In The Cloven Hoof, June issue (1970). http://www.churchofsatan.com/Pages/EnochianGuide.html.

Laycock, Donald. The Complete Enochian Dictionary: A Dictionary of the Angelic Language as Revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley. London: Askin, 1978.

———. "Enochian: Angelic Language or Mortal Folly?" In The Complete Enochian Dictionary, ed. Donald Laycock and Stephen Skinner, 19–64. Boston: Weiser Books, 1994.

———, and Stephen Skinner, eds. The Complete Enochian Dictionary: A Dictionary of the Angelic Language as Revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley. York Beach: Weiser Books, 1994.

Lévi, Eliphas. Transcendental Magic: Its Doctrine and Ritual. Trans. A. E. Waite. York Beach: Weiser Books, 2001.

Lovecraft, H. P. "A History of the Necronomicon." In Necronomicon Files: The Truth Behind Lovecraft's Legend, ed. Daniel Harms and John Wisdom Gonce III, 303–305. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 (1998).

Machen, Arthur. Things Near and Far. London: Martin Secker, 1923.

Mathers, S. L. MacGregor et al. Astral Projection, Ritual Magic, and Alchemy. Ed. Francis King. London: Neville Spearman, 1971.

Mathers, S. L. MacGregor, ed. The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage. Mineola, NY: Dover, 1975 (Facsimile of 1900 second ed.).

McLean, Adam, ed. A Treatise on Angel Magic. York Beach: Weiser Books, 2006 (1989).

Morgant, Étienne. La magie enochienne. Paris: Guy Trédaniel Éditeur, 1995.

Orpheus, Rodney. Abrahadabra: Understanding Aleister Crowley's Thelemic Magick. Stockholm: Looking Glass Press, 1995.

Peterson, Joseph, ed. John Dee's Five Books of Mystery. Original Sourcebook of Enochian Magic. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 (First edition by Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourcework series, 1985).

Rankine, David, and Stephen Skinner, eds. The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables. Singapore: Golden Hoard, 2004.

Regardie, Israel. The Garden of Pomegranates: Skrying on the Tree of Life. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1995 (First ed. 1932).

———, ed. Gems from the Equinox: Instructions by Aleister Crowley for His Own Magical Order. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1974.

———, ed. The Golden Dawn. The Original Account of the Teachings, Rites and Ceremonies of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1989 (First ed. 1937–1940).

———. "Introduction." In: The Golden Dawn, ed. Israel Regardie, 1–48. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1989.

Rovelli, Paul Joseph [a.k.a. Zephyros93]. "The Dozmt Index vel Dor OS zol ma thil: Commentary on the Runar Transmissions." Available from Enochian Yahoo! group, at: http://fi.grp.yahoofs.com/v1/EJIVSL9b4EP_waoRaVzGxHDzU2VKr3hTPeCGi6-CD9Bov83-Xw_buSWOGuoC7Sj7RkpzD9NZ6PKylKwCloB1yjKu050/Essays%20%26%20Writings%20from%20Members/Runar%27s%20Transmission%20Commented.doc. (Accessed April 28, 2008).

Rowe, Benjamin. "The 91 Parts of the Earth." http://www.hermetic.com/browe/91intro.html. Independently published, 1994. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "Enochian Magick Reference." Independently published, 1997. http://hermetic.com/browe-archive/enochian.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "Enochian Temples: Chapbook." http://hermetic.com/browe/etemple.html. Independently published, 1992. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "Experiments with the Second Enochian Key." http://hermetic.com/browe/keytwo.html. Independently published, 1987, 1992. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "Godzilla meets E.T." http://www.hermetic.com/browe/godzilla.html (part one); http://www.hermetic.com/browe/godzilla2.html (part two). Independently published, 1994. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "The Lotus of the Enochian Temple: Sample Visions." http://hermetic.com/browe/lot-vis.html. Independently published, 1993. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

———. "A Modified Hexagram Ritual for Enochian Workings." http://www.hermetic.com/browe/hexrit.html. Independently published, 1988, 1992. (Accessed 23.04.2008).

———. "A Ritual of the Heptagram." http://www.hermetic.com/browe/heptagrm.html. Independently published, 1990, 1992. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

Ruggiu, Jean-Pascal. La Magie Hénokéenne de l'Ordre Hermétique de la Golden Dawn: Le Livre de la Convergence des Forces. Paris: Éditions Télètes, 1994.

Schueler, Gerald. Enochian Physics: The Structure of the Magical Universe. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1988.

Schueler, Gerald, and Betty. Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick: A Complete Manual of Enochian Magick. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1995.

———. Angels' Message To Humanity: Ascension to Divine Union. Powerful Enochian Magick. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1996. (2002 edition with a foreword by Donald Tyson).

———. Enochian Magick: A Practical Manual: The Enochian Language Revealed. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1996 (first edition 1985).

———. The Enochian Tarot. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1989.

———. Enochian Tarot: A New System of Divination for a New Age. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 2002.

———. Enochian Yoga: Uniting Humanity and Divinity. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1995.

Shaffer, Patricia. "Angelic Letter Essences." Not dated. http://members.aol.com/AJRoberti/enochale.htm. (Accessed April 23, 2008).

Skinner, Stephen. "Preface to the Revised Edition." In The Complete Enochian Dictionary, ed. Donald Laycock and Stephen Skinner, unpaged. Boston: Weiser Books, 1994.

———, ed. The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy. Berwick, ME: Ibis Press, 2005 (First ed., 1978).

———, ed. John Dee's Action with Spirits. London: Askin, 1974.

———, and David Rankine. The Goetia of Dr. Rudd: The Angels & Demons of Liber Malorum Spirituum Seu Goetia Lemegeton Clavicula Salomanis with a Study of the Techniques of Evocation. Singapore: Golden Hoard Press, 2007.

———. The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables. Singapore: Golden Hoard, 2004.

Torrens, R.G. The Secret Rituals of the Golden Dawn. Wellingborough: Aquarian Press, 1973.

Turner, Robert. Elizabethan Magic: The Art and the Magus. Shaftesbury: Element, 1989.

———. The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee. Wellingborough, Northamptonshire: Aquarian Press, 1986.

———, ed. The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee. Edinburgh: Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks 17, 1983.

Tyson, Donald. "The Enochian Apocalypse." Gnosis: A Journal of the Western Inner Traditions 40 (1996).

———. Enochian Magic for Beginners: The Original System of Angel Magic. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1997.

———. "Foreword." In Betty and Gerald Schueler, Angels' Message to Humanity, ix–xxvi. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1996.

———. Power of the Word: The Secret Code of Creation. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 2004. [Second edition of Tetragrammaton].

———. Tetragrammaton: The Secret of Evoking Angelic Powers and the Key to the Apocalypse. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1995.

Vinci, Leo. Gmicalzoma! An Enochian Dictionary. London, New York: Regency Press, 1976.

Waite, A. E.. Shadows of Life and Thought: A Retrospective Review in the Form of Memoirs. London: Selwyn and Blount, 1938.

Weekly News. "Secrets of the Rosicrucians." March 22, 1910. Reproduced online by lashtal.com: http://www.lashtal.com/nuke/module-subjects-viewpage-pageid-2.phtml.

Westcott, William Wynn. Book "H": Clavicula Tabularum Enochi. Online edition by Frater Alastor, not dated, at: http://www.angelfire.com/ab6/imuhtuk/gdmans/rith.htm.

———. "Further Rules for Practice." In The Golden Dawn, ed. Israel Regardie, 669–70.

Whitby, Christopher, ed. John Dee's Actions with Spirits. Two volumes. New York: Garland, 1988.

W.I.T., Frater (Scott Brush). Enochian Initiation: A Thelemite's Journey into the Ultimate Transcendence. Parker: Outskirts Press, 2006.

Zalewski, Chris. Enochian Chess of the Golden Dawn: A Four-Handed Chess Game. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1994.

Manuscript Sources

British Library, London:

Cotton Appendix XLVI. (Dee's diary from May 28, 1583, to May 23, 1587, plus March 20 to September 7, 1607. Later reproduced by Casaubon as T&FR.)

Harley 6482. ("Dr. Rudd's" Treatise.)

Harley MS 6483. ("Dr. Rudd's" Goetia.)

Sloane MS 307. ("Invocation of Angels", with copy of Dee's Great Table.)

Sloane MS 3188. (Dee's diary for December 22, 1581-May 23, 1583.)

Sloane MS 3189. (Dee's Liber Loagaeth.)

Sloane MS 3191. (Dee's 48 Claves Angelica; Liber scientiae, auxilii, et victoriae Terrestris; De heptarchia mystica; Tabula bonorum angelorum.)

Sloane MSS 3624–3628. (Diaries of magical operations between the years 1671–1688.)

Sloane MS 3821. ("Tractatus Magici et Astrologici"; copy of Great Table, as in Sloane 307.)

Web sites and online archival sources

Donald Tyson's Supernatural World. http://www.donaldtyson.com/. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Enochian-L Archives. 1996–2001. http://www.hollyfeld.org/heaven/Email/Enochian-l/ (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Enochian Yahoo! group. 2002-present. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochian/. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Enochian Linguistics. http://members.aol.com/AJRoberti/enochlng.htm. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Enochian Tools and Supplies. http://www.enochian.org. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

The Equinox Vol. I Online. http://www.the-equinox.org/vol1/index.html (Accessed April 27, 2008).

The Hermetic Library. http://hermetic.com/. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Ored Dhagia: The Infinite Ways. Ed. Runar Karlsen and Dean Hildebrandt. http://home.no.net/karl24/. (Accessed April 27, 2008). New Web site to appear at http://www.infinite-ways.net/.

Realmagick Yahoo! group. http://groups.yahoo.com/group/realmagick/. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

Schueler's Online. Edited by Gerald and Betty Schueler. http://www.schuelers.com/. (Accessed April 27, 2008).

References and Secondary Literature

Appleby, John H. "Woodall, John (1570–1643)." In Oxford Dictionary of National Biography. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2004. Online: http://www.oxforddnb.com/view/article/29902.

Ashworth, William B. "Natural History and the Emblematic Worldview." In Reappraisals of the Scientific Revolution, ed. Robert S. Westman and David C. Lindberg, 303–32. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1990.

Asprem, Egil. "'Enochian' Language: A Proof of the Existence of Angels?" Skepsis, December 13, 2006. Online: http://www.skepsis.no/marginalia/enochian_language_a_proof_of_t.html.

———. "False, Lying Spirits and Angels of Light: Ambiguous Mediation in Dr Rudd's 17th Century Treatise on Angel Magic." Magic, Ritual, and Witchcraft 3, no. 1 (2008): 54–80.

———. "The Golden Dawn and the O.T.O." In Cambridge Handbook of Mysticism and Western Esotericism, ed. Glenn Magee. New York: Cambridge University Press, forthcoming 2012.

———. "Heathens Up North: Politics, Polemics, and Contemporary Norse Paganism in Norway." The Pomegranate 10, no.1 (2008): 42–69.

———. "Kabbalah Recreata: Reception and Adaptation of Kabbalah in Modern Occultism." The Pomegranate: The International Journal of Paganism Studies 9, no. 2 (2007): 132–53.

———. "Magic Naturalized? Negotiating science and occult experience in Aleister Crowley's Scientific Illuminism." Aries 8, no. 2 (2008): 139–65.

———. "Thelema og ritualmagi: med magi som livsholdning i moderne vestlig esoterisme." Chaos 46 (2006): 113–37.

———, and Kennet Granholm, eds. Contemporary Esotericism. London: Equinox, forthcoming 2012.

Baddeley, Gavin. Lucifer Rising: Sin, Devil Worship and Rock 'n' Roll. London: Plexus, 2003.

Bäcklund, Jan. "In the Footsteps of Edward Kelley." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies, ed. Stephen Clucas, 295–330. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

Bassnett, Susan. "Absent Presences: Edward Kelley's Family in the Writings of John Dee." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies, ed. Stephen Clucas, 285–94. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

Berger, Peter, ed. The Desecularization of the World: Resurgent Religion and World Politics. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1999.

Bruce, Steve. God is Dead: Secularization in the West. Malden / Oxford / Carlton: Blackwell Publishing, 2002.

———. "The New Age and Secularisation." In Beyond New Age. Exploring Alternative Spirituality, ed. Steven Sutcliffe and Marion Bowman, 220–36. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2000.

Campbell, Colin. "The Cult, the Cultic Milieu, and Secularization." A Sociological Yearbook of Religion in Britain 5 (1972): 119–36.

———. "The secret religion of the educated classes." Sociological Analysis 39, no. 2 (1978): 146–56.

Campbell, Heidi. Exploring Religious Community Online: We Are One in the Network. New York: Peter Lang, 2005.

Castells, Manuel. The Internet Galaxy: Reflections on the Internet, Business, and Society. New York: Oxford University Press, 2001.

Clark, Stuart. Thinking with Demons: The Idea of Witchcraft in Early Modern Europe. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1997.

Clulee, Nicholas. "At the Crossroads of Magic and Science: John Dee's Archmastrie." In Occult and Scientific Mentalities in the Renaissance, ed. Brian Vickers, 57–71. New York: Cambridge University Press, 1984.

———. "Dee's Natural Philosophy Revisited." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies in English Renaissance Thought, ed. Stephen Clucas, 23–37. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

———. John Dee's Natural Philosophy: Between Science and Religion. London: Routledge, 1988.

Clucas, Stephen. "John Dee's Angelic Conversations and the Ars Notoria." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies, ed. Stephen Clucas, 231–73. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

———. "'Non est legendum sed inspiciendum solum': Inspectival Knowledge and the Visual Logic of John Dee's Liber Mysteriorum." In Emblems and Alchemy, ed. Alison Adams and Stanton J. Linden, 109–132. Glasgow Emblem Studies, 1998.

———, ed. John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies in English Renaissance Thought. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

Cohn, Norman. Europe's Inner Demons: The Demonization of Christians in Medieval Christendom, rev. ed. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1993.

Coffman, K. G., and A. M. Odlyzko. "The size and growth rate of the Internet." AT&T Labs Research. Online: http://www.dtc.umn.edu/~odlyzko/doc/internet.size.pdf, 1998.

Copenhaver, Brian P. "Natural Magic, Hermeticism, and Occultism in Early Modern Science." In Reappraisals of the Scientific Revolution, ed. David C. Lindberg and Robert S. Westman, 261–302. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1990.

Cowan, Douglas E. Cyberhenge: Modern Pagans on the Internet. London: Routledge, 2005.

———, and Jeffrey K. Hadden. "Virtually Religious: New Religious Movements and the World Wide Web." In The Oxford Handbook of New Religious Movements, ed. James R. Lewis, 119–36. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2004.

Crow, John L. The White Knight in the Yellow Robe: Allan Bennett's Search for Truth. Research MA thesis, History of Hermetic Philosophy and Related Currents, University of Amsterdam, privately published by author, 2009.

Davies, Owen. "Angels in Elite and Popular Magic, 1650–1790." In Angels in the Early Modern World, ed. Peter Marshall and Alexandra Walsham. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2006.

Dawson, Lorne L., and Jenna Hennebry. "New Religions and the Internet: Recruiting in a New Public Space." In Cults and New Religious Movements: A Reader, ed. Lorne L. Dawson, 271–91. Malden: Blackwell, 2003.

Dawson, Lorne L., and D. E. Cowan, eds. Religion Online: Finding Faith on the Internet. New York: Routledge, 2004.

Delatte, Armand. La Catoptromancie Grecque et ses derives. Paris: Droz, 1932.

Dummet, Michael, and Sylvia Mann. The Game of Tarot: From Ferrara to Salt Lake City. London: Gerald Duckworth, 1980.

Dyrendal, Asbjørn. "Satan and the Beast. The Influence of Aleister Crowley on Modern Satanism." In Aleister Crowley and Western Esotericism, ed. Henrik Bogdan and Martin P. Starr. Forthcoming.

Eco, Umberto. The Search for the Perfect Language. Trans. James Fentress. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1995.

Elert, Claes-Christian. "Andreas Kempe (1622–1689) and the Language Spoken in Paradise." Historiographica Linguistica 5 (1975).

Evans, Dave. The History of British Magic after Crowley: Kenneth Grant, Amado Crowley, Chaos Magic, Satanism, Lovecraft, The Left Hand Path, Blasphemy and Magical Morality. N.p.: Hidden Publishing, 2007.

Faivre, Antoine. Access to Western Esotericism. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1994.

———, and Wouter J. Hanegraaff, eds. Western Esotericism and the Science of Religion: Selected Papers presented at the 17th Congress of the International Association for the History of Religions, Mexico City 1995. Leuven: Gnostica (2), 1998.

Fanger, Claire. "Virgin Territory: Purity and Divine Knowledge in Late Medieval Catoptromantic Texts." Aries 5, no. 2 (2005): 200–24.

Flowers, Stephen E. Fire and Ice: The History, Structure, and Rituals of Germany's Most Influential Modern Magical Order: The Brotherhood of Saturn. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1994.

Forshaw, Peter. "The Early Alchemical Reception of John Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica." Ambix 52, no. 3 (2005): 247–69.

Foucault, Michel. The Order of Things: An Archaeology of the Human Sciences. London: Routledge, 1989 (1966).

French, Peter. John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus. Dorset Press, 1971.

Gilbert, Robert A. The Golden Dawn: Twilight of the Magicians. Wellingborough: Aquarian Press, 1983.

———. The Golden Dawn companion. A guide to the history, structure, and workings of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. York Beach: Weiser Books, 1986.

———. "Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn." In Dictionary of Gnosis and Western Esotericism, ed. Hanegraaff, in collaboration with Antoine Faivre, Roelof van den Broek, and Jean-Pierre Brach, 544–50. Leiden: Koninkleijke Brill, 2005.

———. "Provenance Unknown: A Tentative Solution to the Riddle of the Cipher Manuscript of the Golden Dawn." In Wege und Abwege: Beiträge zur europäischen Geistesgeschichte der Neuzeit, ed. Albrecht Götz von Olenhausen, 79–89. Freiburg: Hochschul Verlag, 1990.

———. "Secret Writing: The Magical Manuscripts of Frederick Hockley." In Rosicrucian Seer: Magical Writings of Frederick Hockley, ed. R. A. Gilbert and J. Hamill, 26–33. Wellingborough: Aquarian Press, 1986.

———. "Supplement to 'Provenance Unknown': The Origins of the Golden Dawn." In The Complete Golden Dawn Cipher Manuscript, ed. Darcy Küntz, 11–13. Edmonds, WA: Holmes, 1996.

Godwin, Joscelyn. The Theosophical Enlightenment. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1994.

———, Christian Chanel, and John Patrick Deveney, eds. The Hermetic Brotherhood of Luxor: Initiatic and Historical Documents of an Order of Practical Occultism. York Beach: Samuel Weiser, 1995.

Gonce, John Wisdom. "A Plague of Necronomicons." In Necronomicon Files: The Truth Behind Lovecraft's Legend, ed. Daniel Harms and John Wisdom Gonce III. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 [1998].

Granholm, Kennet. "Embracing Others than Satan: The Multiple Princes of Darkness in the Left-Hand Path Milieu." In Contemporary Religious Satanism. A Critical Anthology, ed. Jesper Aagaard Petersen, 85–101. Farnham: Ashgate, 2009.

Greer, Mary. Women of the Golden Dawn: Rebels and Priestesses. Rochester, VT: Park Street Press, 1995.

Håkansson, Håkan. Seeing the Word: John Dee and Renaissance Occultism. Lund: Lunds Universitets Forlag, 2001.

Hakl, Hans Thomas. "The Theory and Practice of Sexual Magic, Exemplified by Four Magical Groups in the Early Twentieth Century." In Hidden Intercourse: Eros and Sexuality in the History of Western Esotericism, ed. Wouter J. Hanegraaff and Jeffrey J. Kripal, 446–78. Leiden: Brill, 2008.

Hammer, Olav. Claiming Knowledge: Strategies of Epistemology from Theosophy to the New Age. Leiden: Brill, 2001.

———, and Kocku von Stuckrad, eds. Polemical Encounters: Esoteric Discourse and its Others. Leiden and Boston: Brill, 2007.

Hanegraaff, Wouter J. Esotericism and the Academy: Rejected Knowledge in Western Culture. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, forthcoming 2012.

———. "Fiction in the Desert of the Real: Lovecraft's Cthulhu Mythos." Aries 7, no. 1 (2007): 85–109.

———. "Forbidden Knowledge: Anti-Esoteric Polemics and Academic Research." Aries 5, no. 2 (2005): 225–54.

———. "How Magic Survived the Disenchantment of the World." Religion 33 (2003): 357–88.

———. "Magic V: 18th-20th Century." In Dictionary of Gnosis and Western Esotericism, ed. Hanegraaff, in collaboration with Antoine Faivre, Roelof van den Broek, and Jean-Pierre Brach, 738–44. Leiden: Koninkleijke Brill, 2006.

———. "The New Age Movement and the Esoteric Tradition." In Gnosticism and Hermeticism from Antiquity to Modern Times, ed. Roelof van Den Broek and Wouter J. Hanegraaff, 359–82. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1998.

———. New Age Religion and Western Culture: Esotericism in the Mirror of Secular Thought. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1998.

———. "Western Esotericism in Enlightenment Historiography: The Case of Jakob Brucker." In Constructing Tradition: Means and Myths of Transmission in Western Esotericism, ed. Andreas Kilcher. Leiden: Brill, 2009.

Harkness, Deborah. John Dee's Conversations with Angels: Cabala, Alchemy, and the End of Nature. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1999.

———. "Shews in the Shewstone: John Dee's Angelic Conversations." Renaissance Quarterly 49 (1996): 707–37.

Harms, Daniel. "The Necronomicon Made Flesh." In Necronomicon Files: The Truth Behind Lovecraft's Legend, ed. Daniel Harms and J.W. Gonce. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 [1998].

———, and John Wisdom Gonce III. Necronomicon Files: The Truth Behind Lovecraft's Legend. York Beach: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2003 [1998].

Heelas, Paul. The New Age Movement: The Celebration of the Self and the Sacralization of Modernity. Oxford: Blackwell Publishing, 1996.

Howe, Ellic. Fringe Freemasonry. Sequim: Holmes, 2006.

———. The Magicians of the Golden Dawn: A Documentary History of a Magical Order 1887–1923. York Beach: Samuel Weiser, 1978.

Hunter, Michael, ed. Elias Ashmole 1617–1692: The Founder of the Ashmolean Museum and His World. Oxford: Ashmolean Museum, 1983.

Huss, Boaz. "'Authorized Guardians': Polemics of Academic Scholars of Jewish Mysticism against Kabbalah Practicioners." In Polemical Encounters: Esoteric Discourse and Its Others, ed. Kocku von Stuckrad and Olav Hammer, 81–105. Leiden: Brill, 2007.

Højsgaard, Morten T., and Margrit Warburg, eds. Religion and Cyberspace. London: Routledge, 2005.

Idel, Moshe. "Prisca Theologia in Marsilio Ficino and in Some Jewish Treatments." In Marsilio Ficino: His Theology, His Philosophy, His Legacy, ed. Michael J. B. Allen and Valery Rees, with Martin Davies, 137–58. Leiden: Brill, 2002.

Introvigne, Massimo. Auf den Spuren des Satanismus. Vienna: Mödling, 1991.

———. Il Cappello del Mago: I nuovi movimenti magici, dallo spiritismo al satanismo. Milan: SugarCo, 1990.

———. Enquête sur le satanisme: satanistes et antisatanistes du XVIIe siecle à nos jours. Trans. Philippe Baillet. Paris: Dervy, 1997.

Jakobsh, Doris R. "Understanding Religion and Cyberspace: What Have We Learned, What Lies Ahead?" Religious Studies Review 32, no. 4 (2006): 237–42.

Josten, C. H. "A Translation of John Dee's 'Monas Hieroglyphica' (Antwerp, 1564), With an Introduction and Annotations." Ambix 12 (1964): 112–221.

Kaczynski, Richard. Perdurabo, The Life of Aleister Crowley. Tempe: New Falcon Publications, 2002.

Kassel, Lauren. Medicine and Magic in Elizabethan London: Simon Foreman. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2005.

Katz, Steven T., ed. Mysticism and Language. New York: Oxford University Press, 1992.

———, ed. Mysticism and Philosophical Analysis. London: Sheldon Press, 1978.

———, ed. Mysticism and Religious Traditions. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1983.

Kieckhefer, Richard. Magic in the Middle Ages. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1990.

King, Francis."Introduction." In S. L. MacGregor Mathers et al., Astral Projection, Ritual Magic, and Alchemy, ed. King, 7–29. London: Neville Spearman, 1971.

———. Modern Ritual Magic: The Rise of Western Occultism. Garden City Park, NY: Avery Publishing Group, 1989.

———. Ritual Magic in England: 1887 to the Present Day. Jersey: Spearman, 1970.

Klaassen, Frank. "Medieval Ritual Magic in the Renaissance." Aries 3, no. 2 (2003): 166–200.

Kuntz, Marion Leathers. Guillaume Postel, Prophet of the Restitution of All things: His Life and Thought. The Hague: Martinus Nijhoff Publishers, 1981.

La Fontaine, Jean. "Satanism and Satanic Mythology." In Witchcraft and Magic in Europe, (Vol 6): The Twentieth Century, ed. Bengt Ankerloo and Stuart Clark, 81–140. London: Athlone Press, 1999.

Lang, Benedek. "Angels around the Crystal: The Prayer Book of King Wladislas and the Treasure Hunts of Henry the Czech." Aries 5, no. 1 (2005): 200–24.

Lenhart, Amanda. "The Ever-Shifting Internet Population: A New Look at Internet Access and the Digital Divide." Pew Internet and American Life Project. Online at http://www.pewinternet.org/pdfs/PIP_Shifting_Net_Pop_Report.pdf. (Accessed April 21, 2008). Published April 16, 2003.

Lewis, James R. "Diabolical Authority. Anton LaVey, The Satanic Bible, and 'Tradition.'" Marburg Journal of Religion 7, no. 1 (2002).

———. "New Religion Adherents: An Overview of Anglophone Census and Survey Data." Marburg Journal of Religion, 9, no. 1 (2004). Online: http://web.uni-marburg.de/religionswissenschaft/journal/mjr/art_lewis_2004.html (accessed January 15, 2008)].

———. Satanism Today: An Encyclopedia of Religion, Folklore, and Popular Culture. Santa Barbara: Abc-Clio Ltd., 2001.

———, and Jesper Aagaard Petersen, eds. The Encyclopedic Sourcebook of Satanism. Buffalo: Prometheus Books, 2008.

Lipton, Peter. Inference to the Best Explanation. Second Edition. London: Routledge, 2004 [First ed. 1991].

Luhrmann, Tanya. Persuasions of the Witch's Craft. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1989.

Lyons, Arthur. The Second Coming: Satanism in America. New York: Mysterious Press, 1970.

Lyotard, Jean-François. The Postmodern Condition: A Report on Knowledge. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1979.

McIntosh, Christopher. Eliphas Lévi and the French Occult Revival. New York: Samuel Weiser, 1974.

McLean, Adam. "Dr. Rudd's Treatise—Some New Insights into the Enochian System." The Hermetic Journal 16 (1982).

———. "Introduction." In "Dr. Rudd," A Treatise of Angel Magic, ed. McLean, 9–20. York Beach: Weiser Books, 2006 [1989].

Murphy, Tim. "Discourse." In Guide to the Study of Religion, ed. Willi Braun and Russell T. McCutcheon, 396–408. London and New York: Cassell, 2000.

Noakes, Richard. "Spiritualism, Science, and the Supernatural in mid-Victorian Britain." In The Victorian Supernatural, ed. Nicola Brown et al., 23–43. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004.

Owen, Alex. The Place of Enchantment: British Occultism and the Culture of the Modern. Chicago, London: University of Chicago Press, 2004.

———. "The Sorcerer and His Apprentice: Aleister Crowley and the Magical Exploration of Edwardian Subjectivity." Journal of British Studies 36 (1997): 99–133.

Partridge, Christopher. "Occulture is Ordinary." In Contemporary Esotericism, ed. Egil Asprem and Kennet Granholm. London: Equinox, forthcoming 2012.

———. The Re-Enchantment of the West: Alternative Spiritualities, Sacralization, Popular Culture and Occulture. 2 vols. London: T and T Clark International, 2004/2005.

Pasi, Marco. Aleister Crowley und die Versuchung der Politik. Graz: Ares Verlag, 2006.

———. "Dieu du désir, Dieu de la raison (Le Diable en Californie dans le années soixante)." In: Le Diable, 87–98. Paris: Dervy, 1998.

———. "The Neverendingly Told Story: Recent Biographies of Aleister Crowley." Aries 2, no. 3 (2003): 224–45.

———. La notion de magie dans le courant occultiste en Angleterre (1875–1947). Unpublished PhD dissertation. Paris: Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, 2004.

———. "Lo Yoga in Aleister Crowley." In The Ordo Templi Orientis Phenomenon, ed. Peter Koenig. 2000. Online at: http://user.cyberlink.ch/~koenig/sunrise/pasi/pasi.htm.

———, and Philippe Rabaté. "Langue angélique, langue magique, l'énochien." Politica Hermetica 13 (1999): 94–123.

Petersen, Jesper Aagaard. "From Book to Bit: Enacting Satanism Online." In Contemporary Esotericism, ed. Egil Asprem and Kennet Granholm. London: Equinox, forthcoming 2012.

———. "Modern Satanism: Dark Doctrines and Black Flames." In Controversial New Religions, ed. James R. Lewis and Jesper Aagaard Petersen. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005.

———, ed. Contemporary Religious Satanism: A Critical Anthology. Farnham and Burlington: Ashgate Publishing, 2009.

Principe, Lawrence, and William R. Newman. "Some Problems with the Historiography of Alchemy." In Secrets of Nature: Astrology and Alchemy in Early Modern Europe, ed. W. R. Newman and Anthony Grafton. Cambridge: MIT Press, 2001.

Proudfoot, Wayne. Religious Experience. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1985.

Reeds, John. "John Dee and the Magic Tables in the Book of Soyga." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies in English Renaissance Thought, ed. Stephen Clucas, 177–204. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

Rons, Ian. "Practical Angel Magic: An Updated Review." The Magical Review (2009). Online: http://www.themagickalreview.org/reviews/practical-angel-magic-update/Practical-Angel-Magic-Updated-Review.pdf. (Accessed January 12, 2010).

———. "Review: The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables, by Stephen Skinner and David Rankine." The Magickal Review (2005). Online: http://www.themagickalreview.org/reviews/Enochian-tables.php. (Accessed June 28, 2009).

Rowse, A. L. Simon Forman: Sex and Society in Shakespeare's Age. London: Weidenfeld and Nicolson, 1974.

Rummel, Erika. The Humanist-Scholastic Debate in the Renaissance and Reformation. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1995.

Saunders, Andrew. "Rudd, Thomas (1583/4–1656)." In Oxford Dictionary of National Biography. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2004. Online: http://www.oxforddnb.com/view/article/24247?_fromAuth=1. (Accessed April 28, 2008).

Schmidt, Joachim. Satanismus: Mythos und Wirklichkeit. Marburg: Diagonal Verlag, 1992.

Secret, Francois. Les Kabbalistes chrétiens de la Renaissance. Paris: Dunod, 1964.

Serjeantsen, R. W. "Casaubon, (Florence Estienne) Meric (1599–1671)." Oxford Dictionary of National Biography. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2004. Online: http://www.oxforddnb.com/view/article/4852.

Sledge, James Justin. "Between 'Loagaeth' and 'Cosening': Towards an Etiology of John Dee's Spirit Diaries." Aries 10, no. 1 (2010): 1–36.

Spanos, Nicholas P. Multiple Personalities and False Memories: A Sociocognitive Perspective. Washington, DC: American Psychological Association, 1996.

Starr, Martin P. "Chaos from Order: Cohesion and Conflict in the Post-Crowley Occult Continuum." The Pomegranate 8, no. 1 (2006): 84–117.

———. The Unknown God: W.T. Smith and the Thelemites. Bollingbrook: Teitan Press, 2003.

Stevens, Philip. "Satan and Satanism." In The Encyclopedia of the Paranormal, ed. Gordon Stein, 657–70. Buffalo: Prometheus Books, 1996.

Storey, John, ed. Cultural Studies and the Study of Popular Culture: A Reader. 2nd rev. ed. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2003.

Styers, Randall. Making Magic: Religion, Magic, and Science in the Modern World. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003.

Szőnyi, György E. John Dee's Occultism: Magical Exaltation through Powerful Signs. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2004.

———. "Paracelsus, Scrying and the Lingua Adamica." In John Dee: Interdisciplinary Studies in English Renaissance Thought, ed. Stephen Clucas. Dordrecht: Springer, 2006.

von Stuckrad, Kocku. "Discursive Study of Religion: From States of the Mind to Communication and Action." Method & Theory in the Study of Religion 15 (2003): 255–71.

———. Was ist Esoterik? Kleine Geschicte des Geheimen Wissens. Munich: Beck, 2004.

———. "Western Esotericism: Towards an Intgegrative Model of Interpretation." Religion 34 (2005): 78–97.

Sumner, Alex. "Angelic Invocations." Journal of the Western Mystery Tradition 10, no. 1 (2006). Online: http://www.jwmt.org/v1n10/angelic.html (retrieved August 30, 2007).

Sutin, Lawrence. Do What Thou Wilt, A Life of Aleister Crowley. New York: St. Martin's Press, 2000.

Traister, Barbara. The Notorious Astrological Physician of London: Works and Days of Simon Forman. Chicago: University of Chicago, 2001.

Urban, Hugh. Magia Sexualis. Sex, Magic, and Liberation in Modern Western Esotericism. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2006.

———. "Unleashing the Beast: Aleister Crowley, Tantra and Sex Magic in Late Victorian England." Esoterica 5 (2003).

Waite, A. E. Brotherhood of the Rosy Cross: Being Records of the House of the Spirit in Its Inward and Outward History. London: Rider, 1961 [1924].

Webb, James. The Flight from Reason. London: Macdonald, 1971.

Weber, Max. Wirtchaft und Gesellschaft: Grundriss der Ferstehenden Soziologie. 1922. Online edition: http://www.textlog.de/weber_wirtschaft.html.

Whitby, Christopher. "John Dee and Renaissance Scrying." Bulletin of the Society for Renaissance Studies 3, no. 2 (1985): 25–37.

Wilding, Michael. "A Biography of Edward Kelly, the English Alchemist and Associate of Dr. John Dee." In Mystical Metal of Gold, ed. Stanton Linden, 25–92. New York: AMS Press, 2007.

Yates, Frances. Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1964.

———. The Occult in the Elizabethan Age. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1979.

———. The Rosicrucian Enlightenment. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1972.

INDEX

48 Claves angelicae, 24, 27, 61, 133–135, 138, 142, 175, 178

d'Abano, Pietro, 24
abductive reasoning, 78, 151–152, 161, 198
Adam and the Adamic language, 11, 15–16, 21–23, 28–29, 50–51
aeons, 88–89, 101, 112, 122, 159
Aethyrs, 24, 27, 62, 66, 67, 79, 119, 128, 133–134, 136, 138, 142, 149, 159, 162, 182, 198; Aquino's experiments, 119–120, 123; Crowley's experiments with, 85, 91–101, 187; Dee and Kelley's system, 24, 27; and initiation, 95, 99, 101, 128
Agrippa, Heinrich Cornelius, 13, 28, 33, 40, 74, 136, 141
Aires. See Aethyrs
Alchemy, 13, 14, 18, 24, 32, 49, 182
Alpha et Omega, 104–106
Apocalypse Working, 141–142, 147
apocalypticism, 1, 11, 16, 21–23, 25, 27, 28, 29, 92, 97, 141–142, 147
Aquarian Press, 146, 193
Aquino, Michael, 7, 77, 82, 104, 112, 116–123, 125, 127, 140, 154, 159, 189–190, 191
Ars Almadel, 28
Ars Notoria, 17, 22, 33, 45, 176
Ashe, Steven, 129, 193
Ashmole, Elias, 35, 38, 93, 178, 181
Askin Publishers, 146 astral bodies; astral light; astral plane, 64–65, 76, 80, 91, 94–95, 99, 123, 141, 162, 195 astrology, 12–14, 49
Astron Argon, 89
Atlantis, 1, 80, 109, 110–111, 159
Atwood, Mary Ann, 182
Audran, Marid, 156–158
Aurum Solis, 127, 132–134, 136, 153–154
authenticity problem, 6–7, 71, 78–82, 93, 98–101, 104, 108, 111, 116, 122, 135, 140, 146–150 Ave (angel), 25, 53, 59

Babalon, 99, 177
Balt Oasis, 154, 198–199
Barrett, Francis, 45, 72, 179
Bassnett, Susan, 20, 175
Bennett, Allan, 60, 87, 91, 179, 182–183, 185, 186
Bergson, Henri, 65
Berridge, Edward, Dr., 64, 182
Billings, Al, 145, 194
Black Cross, 25–26, 42, 52, 55, 169, 181
Book of Nature, 12–16, 69
Book of Soyga, 23, 176
Book of the Law (Liber AL vel Legis), 87–88, 93, 112, 122, 156, 187
Brodie-Innes, J. W., 104, 109–110, 116, 127
Bruce, Steve, 73
Buddhism, 87
Builders of the Adytum (B.O.T.A.), 105–106, 108, 159
Burke, Edmund, 43–44
Burton, Richard, 45

Campbell, Colin, 7, 76, 144
Casaubon, Isaac, 30
Casaubon, Meric, 2, 17, 21–22, 29–32, 34–40, 42, 43–44, 54–55, 59, 96, 119, 122, 126, 133, 135, 175, 177, 178

Case, Paul Foster, 82, 105–108, 116, 159, 188
Catoptromancy. See crystal gazing
Chaos (god), 99, 187
Chaos Magic, 125, 160
charismatic authority, 101, 117–118
Choronzon, 40, 95; Crowley's evocation of, 96–97; originally spelled "Coronzom," 42
Church of Satan (CoS), 104, 112–113, 116–119, 121, 190 cipher manuscript, 5, 46–51, 53–56, 60, 79, 107 clairvoyance, 80
Clark, Stuart, 177
Clavicula Tabularum Enochi, 58, 63, 65–67, 181
Cloven Hoof (journal), 116
Clucas, Stephen, 15, 16, 28, 173, 176
Clulee, Nicholas, 12, 15, 18, 172, 174 cognitive dissonance, 74
Cohn, Norman, 177
Concourse of the Forces, The, 58, 60–61, 63–66, 68, 181Cotton, Robert, 35–36, 41–42
Crowley, Aleister, 3–4, 6, 42, 72, 79–80, 82, 85–101, 103–104, 106–107, 111–113, 115–116, 118–119, 122–123, 128–129, 133, 137–138, 140, 142, 143, 147, 149–150, 153, 156, 159, 161, 178, 179, 182, 186, 191, 194, 195 crystal gazing, 2, 11–12, 16, 22, 31, 44–46, 67–68, 179; explanations of, 17–20
Cthulhu, 190–120, 130

Darwinism, 112, 113–114
Dee, Arthur, 19, 34
Dee, John, 1–5, 11–28; angel conversations of, 17–28; angelic diaries, 17–23, 29–36, 38, 42, 48, 51, 59–61, 71, 108, 129, 136,149, 151–152, 175, 177, 206; natural philosophy of, 12–15; portrayal in Enlightenment historiography, 43–44; "revealed books" of, 22–28, 41, 45, 93
De heptarchia mystica, 24, 27, 90, 129, 131–132, 135, 138–139, 142, 162, 175, 178
Demonologie, 29
demons, 25, 27, 42, 59, 67, 74, 78, 95–97, 153, 161–162; as tricksters, 30–31, 38–40 Denning, Melita (Vivian Godfrey), 132, 135, 194 discursive strategies, 4–8, 76–78, 81–82, 86, 100, 109–111, 115, 117, 139–141, 148–151, 160–161, 195; appeal to experience, 78, 80–81, 100, 133, 149–150, 152, 158; appeal to tradition, 4–5, 56, 78, 80–82, 140, 149; in Enochian authenticity problem, 78–81; terminological scientism, 81, 149–150, 185 disenchantment, 6, 71–79, 116, 161
DuQuette, Lon Milo, 101, 127, 137, 194

Edwards, David, 128–129
Element (publisher), 146
Elizabeth I, Queen, 29
emic historiography, 47–48, 54, 56–57, 109
Enlightenment, the, 2, 8, 43–44, 72, 74–75, 189
Enoch (patriarch), 15, 53
Enochian ("Rosicrucian") chess, 58, 62–63, 105; evidence of use, 65–66
Enochian-L (email list), 145, 147, 150, 154–158, 160
Enochian language, 1, 4, 21–24, 27–28, 53–54, 90, 93–94, 100, 103, 107–109,111, 115–116, 122, 126–127, 133–135, 137–139, 155, 159, 176, 195; constructed language, 120–121, 127, 176; Enochian alphabet, 23; linguistic analysis, 127, 176; myths of origin, 56–57, 108–111; Runar Karlsen's new material, 155–157, 163–172
Enochian Yahoo! group, 145, 156–158, 196, 198
Equinox, The (journal), 72, 89, 93–94, 103, 106, 113, 186, 187
Esotericism, 2–8, 13–14, 17, 30, 44, 46–47, 49, 56–57, 76–77, 81, 86–87, 104, 108–113, 122–123, 141, 143, 149, 161, 174, 180, 190, 193, 196; secularization of, 111–112, 114–116, 125

Faivre, Antoine, 180, 190
Fanger, Claire, 28

Farr, Florence, 67
Felkin, R. W., 104–105
Ficino, Marsilio, 14–15, 74
Forman, Simon, 131, 193–194
Fortune, Dion (Violet Mary Firth), 72, 105 Fraternity of the Inner Light, 105
Frazer, James George, 49

Gabriel (archangel), 17, 33
Galilei, Galileo, 12, 29
Gardner, F. L., 60, 179
Gilbert, R. A., 179, 180, 185
Gnostic Catholic Church (Ecclesia Gnostica Catholica), 98–99, 187, 198Godwin, Joscelyn, 179, 188
Godwin, William, 44
goetia, 33, 39–40, 45, 66, 93, 131, 133, 153
Golden Dawn, The Hermetic Order of, 2–8, 26, 42, 46–68, 96, 143, 146; and the authenticity problem, 77–82; and Crowley, 86–94, 99–101 disintegration of the Order, 69–72; Enochian documents of, 57–63; magical practice in, 63–68; mythologization of Enochiana, 53–54, 68, 104–109; "psychologization of magic," 76–78; and the purist turn, 125–129, 132–134, 137–140, 142, 146–147, 155, 159–161; and Satanism, 103, 111, 115–117, 119, 122, 125; Second Order, 50, 53, 56–58, 60, 63–64, 67, 70, 86
Gonce, J. W., 131, 193
Granger, James, 43–44
Granholm, Kennet, 174, 190
Great Table, the, 25–27, 51, 90–91, 134–136, 138–139, 141–142, 145, 147, 149–165, 153, 162, 176, 181, 198; difference between Dee and Golden Dawn interpretation, 55, 68–70, 62, 79; and the Golden Dawn cipher manuscript, 51–53; and Sloane 307, 40–42

Håkansson, Håkan, 15, 18
Hakl, Hans Thomas, 184
Hammer, Olav, 8, 81, 111, 149, 180, 183
Hanegraaff, Wouter J., 71, 74–77, 151, 161, 190
Harkness, Deborah, 11, 14–16, 18, 25, 41, 48, 174
Harms, Daniel, 130, 193
Heptameron, 24, 28
Hermetic Brotherhood of Luxor, 72
Hermetic Society, 46
Hermeticism, 15–16, 30, 32–33, 43
Hickman, Bartholomew, 19, 28, 34, 178
Higher Self, 74, 161
Hildebrandt, Dean, 156–158
Hockley, Frederick, 4, 44–46, 67, 72, 179
Holden, Clay, 145
Holy Table, the, 22, 28, 33, 35–37, 39; variation in sources, 37
Horos scandal, 69–70
Howe, Ellic, 48, 180
Humphrey, W. E. H. (Gnothi Seauton), 67–68, 183
Hyatt, Christopher, 137

Inference to the best explanation (IBE). See abductive reasoning Internet, 2, 4, 7–8, 82, 143–146, 152, 156, 160, 196
Introvigne, Massimo, 189, 190
Irwin, Francis George, 44

James I, King, 29
James, Geoffrey, 18, 20, 126, 134–136, 141–142, 160
Jones, David R., 145
Jones, Mr. (seventeenth century confectioner), 35–36

Kabbalah, 4, 16, 48–50, 60, 62, 81, 87, 106, 185–186
Kaczynski, Richard, 92, 94
Karlsen, Runar, 145, 154–158, 160, 163–164, 198–199, 200
Katz, Steven, 153
Kelley, Edward, 2–4, 11, 17–25, 28, 29–34, 39–40, 53, 55, 57, 60–61, 68, 79–80, 82, 86, 94, 96, 100–101, 107–109, 111, 116, 133, 143, 153–155, 157, 162, 164, 176, 178, 181; possibility of fraud and/or psychopathology,18–20
Kempe, Andreas, 16
Kieckhefer, Richard, 177
King, Francis, 128, 179, 181, 188, 193
Kingsford, Anna, 46

Klaassen, Frank, 176
Küntz, Darcy, 146, 180, 181

LaVey, Anton, 7, 77, 82, 103–104, 111–119, 121–123, 125, 140, 159–161, 189, 190, 191; and The Satanic Bible, 113–114
Laycock, Donald, 127, 133, 135, 176, 197
Left-Hand Path, 111–112, 117, 119, 121–122, 133, 190
Lévi, Eliphas, 48, 62–63, 106–107, 111
Lewis, James R., 117, 189
Liber iuratus Honorii, 28, 176
Liber Loagaeth, 22–23, 27, 62, 130, 157, 175, 176, 177, 178*Liber scientiae, auxilii, et victoriae terrestris*, 24, 27, 42, 62, 94, 99, 134–136, 138, 152, 175, 178
Llewellyn, 126, 132, 138, 146, 160, 194
Lovecraft, H. P., 120, 130–131, 147, 193
Luhrmann, Tanya, 20, 71, 73–76, 151, 188
Lyotard, Jean-François, 126

Machen, Arthur, 179, 185
Mackenzie, Kenneth, 5, 46, 48–49, 54, 68, 106–107
Madimi (angel), 17, 31
Magic, passim; "disenchanted magic," 72–78, 116, 161–162; folk magic, 16–17; Golden Dawn's theories of magic, 57–68; and grimoires, 28, 39, 78, 130–131, 193; legitimacy of magic in modernity, 5–8; psychologization of, 74, 77–78, 97, 122, 135–136, 141, 150–152, 161–162, 184; realism about magical entities, 77–78, 133, 136, 141, 150–153, 161–162; in Renaissance natural philosophy, 11–17; Satanism and magic, 114–117, 122–123; Thelema and magic, 7, 88–90, 98–101
Magister Templi, 50, 98–99, 101, 119, 121
Mathematical Preface to Euclid, the, 14, 34, 41
Mathers (née Bergson), Moina, 64–65, 105–106
Mathers, Samuel Liddell MacGregor, 46–47, 49, 51, 53–56, 60–62, 64–65, 67, 69–70, 86, 8, 93, 104–105, 107, 181, 182, 186 ; and the Golden Dawn's Second Order, 53, 56
McLean, Adam, 32, 34, 146, 173,177, 193
Meyrink, Gustav, 180

Nalvage (angel), 17, 31 natural philosophy, 2, 12–17, 22, 29
Necronomicon, 130–131, 141, 193
Neuberg, Victor, 3, 92–97, 182
New Age, 73, 76, 111, 114, 138
New Falcon, 146
New Flow, 82, 157–158, 160
Nostradamus, 40

Occultism, 2–4, 8, 32, 42, 44–46, 49, 59, 61, 65, 71–72, 74, 77–79, 82, 85, 96, 99, 101, 105, 107, 109, 111–112, 115, 117, 125–126, 128, 134, 143–144, 159–160
Occulture, 3–4,7, 69, 76–77, 111, 114, 144, 163,173–174; definition, 7, 76
Order of the Cubic Stone (O.C.S.) 128–132, 133, 193
Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.), 90, 98–99, 154, 186, 198–199
Owen, Alex, 3, 71, 85–86, 97, 188

Paganism, 73, 76, 192, 196
Pantheus, Giovanni, 28
Partridge, Christopher, 3, 7, 75–77, 144, 173–174
Pasi, Marco, 4, 71, 126–127, 137, 141, 173, 177, 192, 193, 195, 196
Perennialism, 3, 6, 47, 60, 49, 68–69, 100, 107–111, 123, 140, 149, 159; as strategy, 80–81
Petersen, Jesper Aagaard, 112, 189, 190
Peterson, Joseph, 28, 175, 176
Phillips, Osbourne (Leon Barcynski), 132, 135, 194
Pico della Mirandola, Giovanni, 15
Pontois, John, 35
P-Orridge, Genesis (Neil Andrew Megson), 173
Postel, Guillaume, 16
postmodernism, 125–126, 160

pragmatism (strategy), 78, 80–82, 100, 112, 116, 122–123, 133, 136, 140, 149, 151, 159 programmatic syncretism, 49–50, 80, 107
Proudfoot, Wayne, 153
purism (strategy), 80–82, 106–109,116, 120, 126, 132, 136, 147, 149, 159–162, 189, 192, 195
purist turn, 7, 82, 125–142, 143, 146, 160, 193

Rabaté, Philippe, 4, 71, 126–127, 137, 141, 173, 177, 192, 193, 195, 196
Rand, Ayn, 112
Rankine, David, 32, 34, 41–42, 91, 177, 179
Reeds, John, 23, 176
Regardie, Israel, 52, 72, 76–77, 82, 103, 105, 110, 120, 126–127, 137–139, 146, 159, 161–162, 181, 189, 191; correspondence with P. F. Case, 116–118; selective editing of Golden Dawn material, 58–60, 63, 108–109, 139; views on Satanism, 116–117
Reuchlin, Johannes, 16
Reuss, Theodor, 90
Rons, Ian, 42, 145, 175, 178–179
Rorbon, E., 31–32
Rosicrucianism, 1, 3, 32, 34, 43, 46–48, 50, 56–58, 62–63, 69–80, 106–107, 109, 159; Christian Rosenkreutz, 32, 56–57, 80, 107, 109; Golden Dawn's rosicrucianism as origin myth, 56–57, 106–110, 181; and myths about John Dee, 43–44, 164, 178, 189, 200
Rowe, Benjamin, 145–154, 158, 161
Royal Society, the, 2, 29
Rudd, Dr., 32–34, 36–38, 41–42, 45, 178; manuscripts assigned to, 32–33; spurious relation with Thomas Rudd, 37–38, 41
Rudolph II, Emperor, 20

Satanic Bible, 7, 103, 113–114, 116–117, 126, 190, 192
Saul, Barnabas, 19
Scholem, Gershom, 4, 81, 176
Schueler, Betty, 137, 140, 160, 195
Schueler, Gerald, 137–140, 142, 146-150, 160, 162, 195
secret chiefs, 3, 57, 70, 88, 98, 112, 119, 133 Secularization, 6–7, 72–73, 76, 111–112, 114, 116, 122–123, 125
sefirot. See Tree of Life sex magic, 1, 106, 137, 186
Shaffer, Patricia, 156–158, 199
Shemhamphorash, 33
Sigillum Dei, 22, 28, 33, 145
Skinner, Stephen, 32, 34, 41–42, 91, 126–127, 133, 177, 179, 191, 197
Sledge, James Justin, 18–20
Sloane, Hans, 36
Smart, Peter, 32, 38, 178
Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia (S.R.I.A.), 46, 49
Solomon, 17, 32, 39, 93, 145
Sphere Group, 67–68, 70
Spiritualism, 44–45, 72, 179
Sprengel, Fräulein Anna (Soror S.D.A.), 47, 70, 79, 180
Stella Matutina, 104–106, 108–109, 189 strategic agnosticism, 151–152
Stuckrad, Kocku von, 173, 174
Sutin, Lawrence, 97
Szőnyi, György, 15, 18, 21, 23

Tabula bonorum angelorum, 25–26, 41, 175, 178, 180
Tarot, 1, 40, 48–49, 58, 60–62, 65, 106, 138, 182, 188
Temple of Set, 7, 104, 112, 117–120, 151, 180, 190–192
Tetragrammaton, 33, 50, 60–61, 90, 141–142, 147
Thelema, 7, 87–90, 92, 99, 101, 154, 161, 186; and True Will, 88–89, 101, 161
Theosophical Society, 46
Theosophy (modern), 46, 72, 76, 138, 147, 160
theurgy, 54
transpersonal psychology, 136, 138, 195
Tree of Life, 49–60, 87, 99, 101; sefirot, 50, 87, 96, 101, 134
Trithemius, Johannes, 16, 47
Troeltsch, Ernst, 76

True & Faithful Relation, 2, 17, 22, 29–30, 36–38, 52–55, 59, 126, 135, 165, 176, 180, 181, 182, 191, 198; and seventeenth century revival of magic, 30–32, 34, 36–38
Turner, Robert, 128–132, 134–135, 137, 142, 160, 178, 193
Tyson, Donald, 126, 141–142, 146–147, 195, 196

Vinci, Leo, 127
Vision and the Voice, 94, 98–99
Voarchadumia contra alchimiam, 28

Waite, A. E., 38, 72, 104, 178, 180, 185
Watchtowers, 25–27, 42, 52, 55, 79, 157
Webb, James, 72, 184
Weber, Max, 72, 76, 101, 117–118
Weiser Books, 127, 146, 193
Westcott, William Wynn, 46–47, 49, 51, 55, 59–60, 62, 66–67, 69–80, 91, 179, 180, 181–182
Whitby, Christopher, 15
Wilson, Colin, 130–131
witch hunts, 29, 31
Woodall, John, 35
Word of Set, 120–121, 123, 127

Yates, Frances, 11, 15, 17, 34
Yeats, William Butler, 65, 67, 179, 183
Yoga, 87, 138
Yuggothic, 120–121

Zalewski, Chris, 105

JOHN DEE'S ACTIONS WITH SPIRITS:
22 DECEMBER 1581 TO 23 MAY 1583

in 2 volumes

by

Christopher Lionel Whitby

VOLUME II

Submitted in partial fulfilment for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Birmingham
October 1981

Contents

Conventions and Usages in the Transcription	i
The Transcription	1
Appendix (The Holy Table)	408
Bibliography	409

Conventions and Usages in the Transcription

1. Foliation and blank pages. The transcription follows the folio numeration made in pencil in the top right corner of each recto side of the manuscript by the Manuscript Department of the British Library. For ease of reference the recto and verso sides of each folio have been designated 'a' and 'b' in the transcription and the folio number with its side designation has been noted in square brackets in the top right corner of each page of the transcription. Where a page of the transcription contains text which proceeds from one folio side to another, both folio sides are noted (e.g. [62a-62b]). Except in the case where a folio side has no marginal notes and the text of that side ends with a happy coincidence at the bottom of a page of the transcription, the end of each folio side is designated by a continuous line across the page, after which follow the marginal notes, separated from the next folio side by another continuous line. Blank pages are indicated by the word 'blank' within slanting brackets between the continuous lines that mark the beginning and end of a folio side.

2. Lineation. The transcription provides a line by line reproduction of the original text and every fifth line of each folio side has been numbered down the right hand side of each page of the transcription. I have attempted as far as possible to maintain the relative indentations of the lines. Where a complete line cannot be contained in one line of transcription, the text of that line is continued below the beginning of that line, but separated by single spacing in contrast to the double spacing between each line.

3. Marginal entries. These are reproduced between the continuous lines which mark the end of one folio side and the beginning of another and are prefixed by the letters 'MN' together with the number of the line by which they are to be found. Where an Action ends in the middle of a folio, the marginal notes to that Action are reproduced at the end of the Action rather than at the end of the folio and are separated from the main text by dotted lines across the page. Unless otherwise noted, marginal entries occur in the left hand margin. Where they occur elsewhere their location is either noted in full, or else by the abbreviation 'RH' for right hand margin (e.g. MN30RH signals a right hand marginal note to line 30). On occasions a multiplicity of marginal notes to one line has led to the use of 'LH' to designate a location in the left hand margin.

4. Interlineations. Some interlineations which constitute later corrections are reproduced in the marginal notes at the end of each folio side, but most are reproduced in the relevant line of the text. Superscriptions are noted by the signs /‾ ‾7 and interlineations that occur below the line by the signs /_ _/. The use of a caret is shown by a superscribed 'c' (e.g. a superscription of the word 'and' using a caret is marked /$\overset{c}{\text{and}}$7).

5. Rules, underlinings and flourishes. Rules and underlinings have been reproduced in pen. Dee frequently ends an Action with a large flourish and this has been noted by the word 'flourish' within slanting brackets.

6. Lines joining words and phrases. Dee quite frequently joins words and phrases on different lines of a folio side by freehand lines when he considers that there is some significance in comparing the parts of the text. This has been noted at the end of the marginal notes to each folio side.

7. Deletions and erasures. These are marked within square brackets. An illegible deletion or an erasure is marked by dots between the brackets.

8. Brackets. Dee's use of ordinary brackets and square brackets has been reproduced in the text, but in order to differentiate Dee's square brackets from those I have used to signify deletions and erasures, I have lengthened Dee's (e.g. ⌈ ⌉ in contrast to [ ]).

9. Minuscules and majuscules. It is often difficult to distinguish Dee's minuscules and majuscules, particularly with the letters S, L, V, W and Y. In the case of the first two letters I have made a decision according to relative size only, but in the case of the other three letters I have taken only the forms ⅂, ⅄, and ⅄ as opposed to V, W, and Y, to be majuscules irrespective of their size.

10. Use of I and J and long s. In the transcription I have changed Dee's form ſ for both 'I' and 'J', when it occurs, to either 'I' or 'J' according to whether the sound is a vowel or a consonant. I have consistently changed long 's' to short 's'.

11. Contractions and abbreviations. I have reproduced the contractions and abbreviations used by Dee, noting the full form in the Commentary when difficulty might arise. An exception is ϒ which I have always transcribed in full as 'the'. The most common contractions and abbreviations are listed below:

a) a line over a vowel, usually 'e', for a missing 'n' or 'm' (e.g. saeculorū for saeculorum).

b) a line over a word indicating a contraction (e.g. o͞im for omnium).

c) ꝑ for 'per' (ꝑceyue for perceyue), ꝓ for 'pro' (ꝓpose for propose) and ꝑ for 'pre' (ꝑsent for present).

d) m̃ for 'ner' (e.g. mañ for manner).

f) qꝝ for 'que' (e.g. expertiqꝝ for expertique).

12. Ampersands and ligatures. Dee uses three forms of ampersand, &, ⅋ and ⅋, and I have transcribed them all as '&'. I have used the transcription '&c' for the form &c and 'etc' for the form ⅋. Dee consistently uses ligatures on 'oe' and 'ae' and I have ignored these when they are minisculas. I have also ignored the ligatured long 's' and 't' which Dee sometimes uses. Consequently the only ligature which is noted is capital 'Æ', 13. Marginal and textual crosses and asterisks. These have been reproduced as in the original.

14. Diagrams. I have reproduced all diagrams as close to their original size as possible, but dimensions are also noted in the Commentary. When a marginal note is accompanied by a small diagram of a hand with the finger pointing to the relevant line, I have noted 'with hand' in slanting brackets at the end of the marginal note.

15. Inks. The manuscript is written in black ink and I have noted the occasional use of red ink in the Commentary.

16. Readings from elsewhere. Where a word is illegible or the manuscript has suffered damage, I have turned to Ashmole's transcript (Sloane MS 3677). Where this has proved fruitful, readings of words or parts of words taken from Ashmole's transcript have been placed within pointed brackets (e.g. <the>). Where Ashmole's transcript has failed to provide the answer because the original had suffered damage even by the time that it came into his hands, I have reproduced within pointed brackets the line of dots that he has used for illegible or missing text, thus indicating that his transcript does not provide any further information (e.g. <....>). Where it has been possible to turn to another source, as when a quotation from a printed work has suffered damage, the missing words or letters are contained within slanting brackets. I have also used slanting brackets when I have made a conjecture over a word, either because it is illegible and Ashmole's transcript does not help, or because the word is missing but may reasonably be guessed.

17. Hands in the manuscript. The manuscript is in Dee's hand with the exception of certain words and inserted leaves in Ashmole's hand and fol. 99, which apart from a marginal note by Dee, is in Kelly's hand. Ashmole's hand is indicated by a wavy underlining (e.g. the), except in the case of fols 2-3 (his preface to the MS) where it is noted in the Commentary only. Kelly's hand is noted in the Commentary and in the transcription of fol. 99b, where there is a marginal note by Kelly and a marginal note by Dee, the authors being noted in slanting brackets after each marginal entry.

THE TRANSCRIPTION

Be it remembred, That the 20:th of Augu.. 1672.
I received by the hands of my Servant Samuell Story, a parcell of D:r Dee's Manuscripts, all written with his owne hand; vizt: his Conference with Angells, w^ch first began the 22^th of Dec: an:o 1581. & continued to the end of May an:o 1583.
where the printed Booke of the remaining Conferences (published by D:r Cawsabon) begins, & /[..]7 are bound vp in this Volume.

Beside these, the Booke intituled, the 48 Claves
Angelicae, also Liber Scientia Terrestris Auxilij & Victoria (These two being those very individuall Bookes, w^ch the Angells comanded to be burnt, & [af] were after restored by them, as appeares by the printed Relation of D:r Dee's Actions with Spirits pag: 418. & 419.) The Booke intituled De Heptarchia Mystica Collectaneorum Lib: primus, and a Booke of Invocations or Calls, begining with the Squares [Letters] filled with Letters, about the Black Cross.
These 4 Bookes I haue bound vp in another volume.

All w,^ch were a few daies before delivered to my said Servant, for my pervsall (I being then at M:r William Lillies house at Horsham in Surrey) by my good frend M:r Thomas Wale, one of his Ma:^ties Warders in the Tower of London.

Marginal note:

line 14: + 10. Apr. } 1586 30. Apr: }

[2b]

The 5^{t}: of Sept: following M^{r}: Wale (having heard of my retourne to Towne) came to /my Office in^{c}/ the Excise Office in Broadstreete, & told me he was content to exchang all the foresaid Bookes, for one of myne, vizt: The Institution, Lawes & Ceremonies of the most Noble Order of the Garter, to this I agreed, and provided one, w^{ch} I sent him fairly bound, & gilt on the Back.

On the 10th: of the s^{d}: Sept; M^{r}: Wale came thither to me againe, & brought his wife with him, from her I received the following account of the preservation of these Bookes, even till they came to my hands, vizt: That her former Husband was one M^{r}: Jones a Confectioner, who formerly dwelt at the Plow in Lumbardstreet London, & who, shortly after they were married, tooke her with him into Adle Streete among the Joyners, to buy some Houshold stuff, where (at the Corner house) they saw a Chest of Cedar wood, about a yard & halfe long, whose Lock & Hinges, being of extraordinary neate worke, invited them to buy it. The Master of the shop told them it had ben parcell of the Goods of M^{r}: John Woodall Chirurgeon (father to M^{r}: Tho:

Woodall late Serjant Chirurgeon to his now Ma:^{tie} King Charles the 2^{d}: [&] (my intimate freind) and tis very probabble he bought it after D^{r}: Dee's death, when his goods wer exposed to Sale.

Marginal note:

line 7: As a further Testimo= / ny of the Sence of M^{r}: / Wales kindnes; shortly / after his death, I sent / for his Son, & bestowed / on him, one of my depu= / ties places in the Excise, / with an allowance / of 80^{l}: p Anum.

[3a]

Twenty yeares after this (& about 4 yeares before the fatall Fire of London) she & her s^{d} husband occasionally removing this Chest out of its vsuall place, thought they heard some loose thing ratle in it, toward the right hand and, vnder the Box or Till thereof, & by shaking it, were fully satisfied
it was so: Herevpon her Husband thrust a peece of Iron into a small Crevice at the bottome of the Chest, & therevpon appeared a private drawer,
w^{ch} being drawne out, therein were found divers Bookes in Manuscript, & Papers, together with a little Box & therein a Chaplet of Olive Beades, &

a Cross of the same wood, hanging at the end of them.

They made no great matter of these Bookes &c: because they vnderstood them not, w^{ch} occasioned their Servant Maide to wast about one halfe of them under Pyes & other like vses, w^{ch} when [they] discovered, they kept the rest more safe.

About two yeares after the[se] discovery of these Bookes, M^{r} Jones died, & when the fire of London hapned, /$\overline{\text{though}}^{c}$/ the Chest perished in the Flames, because not easily to be removed, [but] /$\overline{\text{yet}}^{c}$/ the Bookes were taken out & carried with the rest of M^{rs} Jones her goods into Moorefields, & being brought safely back, she tooke care to preserve them; and after marrying with the fores^{d} M^{r} Wale, he came to the knowledge of them, & therevpon, with her consent, sent them to me, as I haue before set downe.

E Ashmole.

/$\overline{\text{blank}}$/ [3b]

[4a]

ANNO 1581 : 1582

Mysteriorum

Liber Primus.

Mortlaci

+ 1 +

/blank/ [4b]

[5a]

Praeter alias meas extemporaneas preces, et eiaculationes ad Deum vehementiores: Haec vna, maximè Vsitata fuit.

Oro mea Matutina, Vespertinaq; : pro Sapientia.

In nomine Dei Patris, Dei Filij, Dei Spiritus Sancti. Amen

Omnipotens, Sempiterne, Vere, et Viue Deus, in adiutorium meum intende: Domine Dominantium, Rex Regum, Jeouah Zebaoth, ad adiuuandum me festina:

Gloria Deo, Patri, Filio, [spir] et spiritui Sancto: Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semp : et in saecula saeculorū: Amen.

Recte sapere, et intellegere doceto me (ô rerum oim Creator,) Nam Sapientia tua, totum est, quod volo: Da Verbum tuum in ore meo, ô rerum oim Creator,) et Sapientiā tuā in corde meo fige.

O Domine Jesu Christe (qui sapientia Vera es, aeterni et Omnipotentis tui Patris) humilimè tuam oro Diuinam Maiestatem, expeditum mihi vt mittere digneris, alicuius pij Sapientis expertiq; Philosophi auxilium, ad illa plenissimè intelligenda perficiendaq; , quae maximi Valoris erunt ad tuam laudem et gloriam amplificandam: Et si Mortalis nullus iam in terris viuat, qui ad hoc munus aptus sit: Vel qui ex aeterna tua providentia, ad istud mihi praestandum beneficium assignatus fuerit: Tunc equidem humilimè, ardentissimè et constan= tissimè a tua Diuina Maiestate requiro, vt ad me de caelis mittere digneris bonos tuos Spirituales Ministros, Angelosq$_R$, Videlicet Mi= chaëlem, Gabrielem, Raphaëlem ac Vrielem: et (ex Diuino tuo fauore) quoscunq$_R$ alios, veros, fidelesq$_R$ tuos Angelos, qui me plene et perfecte informent et instruant, in cognitione, intelligentiaq$_R$' vera et exacta, Arcanorum et Magnalium tuorū (Creaturas omnes tuas, illarumq$_R$' naturas proprietates, et optimos vsus, concernentium) et nobis Mortalibus Scitu necessariorum; ad tui nōis laudem, honorem, et gloriam; et ad solidam meam, aliorumq$_R$, (per me) plurimorum

tuorum fidelium consolationem: et ad Inimicorum tuorum confusionem, et subversionem. Amen. Fiat Jeouah Zebaoth: Fiat Adonay, fiat Elohim. O beata, et superbenedicta Omnipotens Trinitas, Concedas mihi (Joanni Dee) [petititione] petitionem hanc, modo tali, qui tibi maximè placebit.

Amen

/flourish/

Ab anno 1579. hoc ferè modo: Latinè, vel Anglicè; (ast circa annū 1569
alio et peculiari, particulari modo: interdum pro Raphaële, interdum pro Michaële) ad Deum preces fundere: mihi gratissimum fuit: [et] [est.] Mirrabilem in me faciat Deus Misericordiā suam

Amen.

/flourish/

/blank/ [5b]

John Dee his Note

Angelus siue Intelligentia nunc toti Mundo praedominans ——— ANNAEL ——— Etymologia: Gratiosa, Afflicta } Dei Misericors

4. Angeli praesidētes
4. Cardinibus Caeli: vt Agrippa notat
in scala Quaternarij ——— Michael ——— Gabriel ——— Raphael ——— Vriel

Etymologiae ——— Fortitudo Dei ——— Prevalescentia siue praepotentia siue Fortitudo praevalescens } Dei ——— Medicina Dei ——— Lux Dei.

——— אנה et אנא Anna, et Annah, obsecrātis et confitentis particula est. hac c̄oe, non absurdè innuëre videtur, orantem et confitentem Deum.

7

[6a]

/blank/ [6b]

[7a]

<.....i> censia

<.....rig >

Ad Deum Omnipotentem Protestatio fidelis:

ad perpetuam rei memoriam A°. 1582:

O God Almighty, thow knowest, /c & 7 art my director, and witnes herein, That I haue from my youth vp, desyred & prayed vnto the for pure and sownd wisdome and vnderstanding of /c some of7 thy truthes naturall and artificiall: such, as by which, thy wisdome, goodnes & powre bestowed in the frame of the [whorld] world might be browght, in some bowntifull measure vnder the Talent of my Capacitie, to thy honor & glory, & the benefit of thy Servants, my brethern and Sistern, in, & by thy Christ o Saviour:

And for as much as, many yeres, in many places, far & nere, in many bokes, & sundry languagis, I haue sowght, & studyed; and with sundry men conferred, and with my owne reasonable discourse labored, whereby to fynde or get some ynckling, glyms or beame of such the forsaid radicall truthes: But, (to be brief) after all my forsaid endevor I could fynde no other way, to such true wisdome atteyning, but by thy extraordinary gift: and by no vulgar Schole-doctrine, or humane Invention. And, Seing, I haue red in thy bokes, & records, how Enoch enioyed thy favor and conversation, with Moyses thow wast familier: And allso that to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,

Josua, Gedeon, Esdras, Daniel, Tobias, and sundry other, thy good Angels were sent, by thy disposition, to instruct them, informe them, help them, yea in worldly and domesticall affaires, yea and sometimes to satisfy theyr desyres, dowtes & questions of thy Secrets:

And furdermore Considering, the Shew stone, which the high preists did vse, by thy owne ordering: wherein they had lights and Judgements in theyr great dowtes: and considering allso that thow (O God) didst not refuse to instruct thy prophets, (then, called Seers) to give true answers to common people of things aeronomicall, as Samuel, for Saul, seeking for his fathers asses being gon astray: and of other things vulgar true predictions, whereby to wyn credyt in /some[c] thy/ waightier affayres: And thinking w^th^ my self, the lack of /thy[c]/ wisdome, to me, to be of more importance, then the Value of an Asse or two, could be to Cis, (Saul his father): And remembring what god cownsayle thy Apostle James giveth, saying, Si quis autem vestrûm indiget sapientia, postulet a Deo &c And that Salomon the Wise, did so, euen immediately by thy self, atteyne to his wonderfull wisdome: Therfore, Seeing I was sufficiently towght and confirmed, that this wisdome could not be come by at mans hand or by humane powre, but onely from the (Ô God) mediately or immediately)

And having allwayes a great regarde & care to beware of the filthy abvse of such as willingly and wetingly, did invocate and consult (in diuerse sorts) Spirituall creatures of the damned sort: angels of darknes, forgers & patrons of lies & vntruthes: I did fly vnto the by harty prayer, full oft, & in sundry mann⁾s: sometymes Crying vnto the,

Mittas lucem tuam et veritatem tuam, que me ducant &c sometymes Recte sapere et intelligere doceto me, Nam sapientia tua totum est quod volo: &c sometymes, Da verbum tuum in ore meo et sapientiam, tuam in tuam in corde meo fige, &c. And having perceyued by sōme sligh<t> experience with two diuerse persons, that thow hadst a speciall care <to> give me thy light, and truth, by thy holy and true Ministers Ang<elic> and Spirituall: and at length hearing of one, (A Master of Art<s,> a preacher of thy word admitted) accownted as a good Seer, and skryer of Spirituall apparitions, in Christalline receptacles, or in open ayre, by his practise, procured: and trusting to frame him, by my ernest & faithfull prayers vnto the (my God) to some my help in my forsayd Studies: tyll, thow (o hevenly father) woldest by thy unserchable provydence, send me sōme [better] apter man or means thereto. Therevppon trying him and vsing him, I fownd great diuersity betwene his /private/ usuall mann⁾, and intents of practise, and my pure, sincere, devowte, & faithfull prayer vnto the onely. And therefore often & fervently I exhorted him [& rebuked him] to the good; and reproved both him, and his ministers, with my no small daunger, but that thow (in manner vnhard of) didst pitch thy holy tents to my defence, and cumfort, in conflict most terrible: as thow best knowest O God, and I willed him /therevppon/ to preach thy Mercyes, & the verity of the kingly prophet his testimony Castra metatur Angelus Domini, in Circuitu timentiū eum.

---

[7b]

And out of Roger Bachon his boke written De mirabili potestate Artis et Naturae, [I warned] (where he writeth against the wycked Diuel Callers) I noted vnto him that sentence, Facilius (sine comparatione a * Deo impetrandum foret, vel a bonis spiritibus, quicquid hom/o/vtile reputare &c which my cownsayle he promised me to follow, as thow art witnes, ô our true & almighty God.
And [albeit] /as/ thy good Spirituall Creatures neyther had delight in the man, neyther wold so playnely & preistly give me theyr answers or informations by him, that he might be hable to ꝑceyve the pith therof: So was he at length very vnwilling to here him self rebuked for his nawghtynes, and to be barred from the Mysteries of /thy/ [Gods] truthes vnderstanding; which were the onely things that I desyred, throwgh thy grace, o our most mercifull God. Therfore, as well for a Memoriall, answerable to the premisses, as for the better warrant of my Such exercises to be made accownt /of,/ hereafter: (leaving all vnto thy infinite mercies, and vnserchable providence,) I haue thowght it not imꝑtinent, to note downe, even in this place one of the last Actions, which I had wth /the/ forsayd preacher:
when I made ernest & faythfull petition vnto the (o the true & Almighty God) for sending, vnto my comfort & eridition, (yf it wer thy blessed will,) thy holy, & mighty Angel Annael: of whome as /of/ all the Hierarchies hevenly

all prayer /honor[c] &7 thanks, be rendred vnto thy divine maiestie: now

& euer: & worlde without ende. Amen. Amen. Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 24: * Numquid non est / Deus in Israël, / vt eatis ad con= / sulendum Beelze= / bub, deum Accaron: / Reg. 4. cap. 1.

[8a]

Anno 1581. Decembris 22. Mane. Mortlak

Δ After my fervent prayers made to God, for his mercifull cumfort and instruction, throwgh the Min^i^stery of his holy and myghty Angel, named Anael, (yf it wer his diuine pleasure) I willed, the Skryer, (named Saul) to loke into my great Chrystaline Globe, yf God [has] had sent his holy Angel Anael, or no:

And Saul loking into my forsayd Stone, (or Chrystall Globe) for to espie Anael, he saw there oΔne, which answered to that name. But being ernestly requested of me to tell the Truthe yf he were Anaël, An other did appere very bewtifull, with apparell yellow, glittering, like gold, and his hed had beames like star beams, blasing, and spredding from it; his eyes fyrie. He wrote /in the stone very[c]7 much [hebrue] in hebrue letters, and the letters seamed all transparent gold. which, Saul was not able eyther presently to reade, that I might write after his voyce, neyther to imitate the letters in short tyme.

A bright star, did go up [ad] and down by him.

There appeared allso a white* dog, with a long hed.

And many other visions appeared, with this second; the first being voyded quite away. Therevppon I sayd, as followeth

Δ——In nomine Jesu Christi, Quis tu es? he answered to Saul his hearing

AN.——Potestas omnis, in me sita est

Δ——Quae ?

An——Bona, et mala.

Δ——Then appeared in the stone, these two letters M. G.

I then axing him some questions, de Thesauro abscondito:

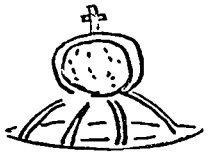
he answered,

AN.——Ne perturbes: Nam hae sunt Nugae.

And withall appeared many dedd mens skulls, on his left hand.

He sayd to me,

AN.-[V]—Vbi est potestas tua?



Δ——Cur quaeris de potestate aliqua mea?

AN.——Cur? Signifi, non mihi placet.

Δ——I, therevppon, set by him, the stone in the frame: and sayd.

Δ——An bonus aliquis Angelus, assignatus est hinc speculo?

AN.——Etiam.

Δ——Quis?

AN.——מיכאל——he answered, by the shew of these letters in stone

Δ——Bonus ne ille Angelus, de q̊ in scripturis fit mentio?

AN——Maximè.

Δ——Fieri non potest, quòd ego eundem videam, et cū illo agam?

AN.——Ita. and therewith appeared this character——
Δ——Quid per hoc, significare velis?

AN——Alterius Angeli character est.

Δ——Cur hîc, et nunc ostendis?

AN——Causam ob magnam Make an ende: It shalbe declared, but not by me.

Δ——By whome then?

AN:——By hi<m>

Marginal notes:

Line 4: AN̄AËL

Line 9: Δ. Note / An illuding / intruder euen / at the first, / putting him / self, as an / Angel of Ligh. / Take hede / allwayes of / vndue secu= / ritie ∴

Line 19: Δ There / <Ther>e appeared a great / <gre>at number of dead / <de>ad mens skulls, like= / kewise

---

[8b]

AN——By him that is assigned to the stone: but not, tyll after the feast. And then thow must prepare thy self, to prayer and fasting

In the Name of God, be Secret: and in all thy doings praying, tyll thow hast thy desyre: which shall not be far of.

After Newyeres tyde, Deale, But not on the Sabaoth day

Pray continually.

When it shall pleas god, to stir the vp, Then procede. In the brightest day,

When the Sonne shyneth: In the morning, fasting, begynne to pray.

In the Sonne Set the stone.

Deale both Kneeling, and sitting. I haue done for this tyme.

My name is ANNAEL.

I will speak ones more to [the] the: and than fare well: for thow shalt not haue me any more.

Be not to hasty in wrath.

Δ—— Is this, that, you ment to speak?

[.—— I. Do good to all men. God hath sufficient for the, and for all men

Fare well.

Δ—— Gloria patri et filio et spiritui Sancto. Sicut erat in principio, et nunc et semper: et in saecula saeculorū

Amen.

—Remember, that diuerse other particulars, mowght haue byn Noted of this dayes

Action: but these may suffice: And yet it is not to /b̄e^c/ forgotten, that as he sayd his name was Annael (with a dubble n) so he allso confessed him self to be the same Annaël which is prepositus orbis veneris:

and allso Chief governor Generall of this great period, as I haue

Noted in my boke of Famous and rich Discoueries.

/flourish/

Consider and Remember. } That this Note, of the Action, (had with holy ANNAEL), is, of Prince Befafes, (otherwise called Obelison) accownted

as the Prolog of my first boke of mysticall exercises

A° 1582. Nouembris 20——— vide post.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 2: Prayer

line 3: Fasting

[9a]

At Mortlak

In nomine Jesv CHRISTI. Amen.

Anno 1582. Martij die .10. hora 11¼ Ante meridiem. Saterday

Δ One M^r Edward Talbot cam* to my howse, and /he^c/ being willing and desyrous to see or shew some thing in spirituall practise, wold haue had me to haue done some thing therein. And I truely excused my self therein: as not in the vulgarly accownted Magik, neyther studied, or exercised: But confessed my self long tyme to haue byn desyrous to haue help in my philosophicall studies throwgh the Cumpany and information of the blessed Angels of God. And there= vppon, I browght furth to him, my stone in the frame, (which was given me of a frende) and I sayd vnto him, that I was credibly informed, that to it

(after a sort) were answerable Aliqui Angeli boni. And allso that I was ones willed by a Skryer, to call for the good Angel Anchor, to appere in that stone to my owne sight. And therfore I desyred him, to call him: and (yf he wold) Anachor and Anilos likewise, accownted good Angels. for I was not prepared therevnto. etc He then settled him self to the Action: and on his Knees att my desk (setting the stone before him) fell to prayer and entreaty &c In the mean space, I, in my Oratory did pray, and make motion to god, and his good Creatures for the furdering of this Action.

And within one quarter of an howre (or less) he had sight of one in the stone. but he still expected for two more: deeming this to be one of the three (namely Anchor Anachor Anilos). But I then cam to him, to the stone: And after sōme thanks to God, and Wellcome to the good Creature, vsed; I required to know his name. And he spake plainly,

(to the hearing of E.T.) that his name is VRIEL.

Δ——Are you one of them (sayd I, Jōhn Dee) that are answerable, (vppon due observations performed) to this stone?

VRIEL——I am.

Δ——Are there any more besyde you?

VR———Michaël and Raphaël. But, Michaël est princeps in operibus nostris.

Δ——ys my boke, of Soyga, of any excellency?

VR———Liber ille, erat Adae in Paradiso reuelatus, per Angelos Dei bonos.

Δ—— Will you give me any instructions, how I may read those Tables of Soyga?

VR——— I can——But solus Michaël illius libri est interpretator.

Δ——I was told, that after I could read that boke, I shold liue but two yeres and a half.

VR ——— Thow shallt liue an Hundred and od yeres.

Δ——What may I, or must I do, to haue the sight, and presence, of Michael, that blessed Angel?

VR ——— Praesentias nras postulate et invocate, sinceritate et humilitate.

Et Anchor, Anachor, et Anilos, non sunt in hunc lapidem invocandi.

Δ——Oh, my great and long desyre hath byn to be hable to read those Tables of Soyga.

VR ——— Haec maximè respiciunt Michaëlem. Michaël est Angelus, qui illuminat gressus tuos. Et haec revelantur in virtute et veritate non vi.

Δ——Is there any speciall tyme, or howre to be observed, to deale for the enioying of Michael?

VR ——— Omnis hora, est hora nobis.

Δ——After this, there appered in the stone a strange seale, or Characterismus of this fashion ensuing:

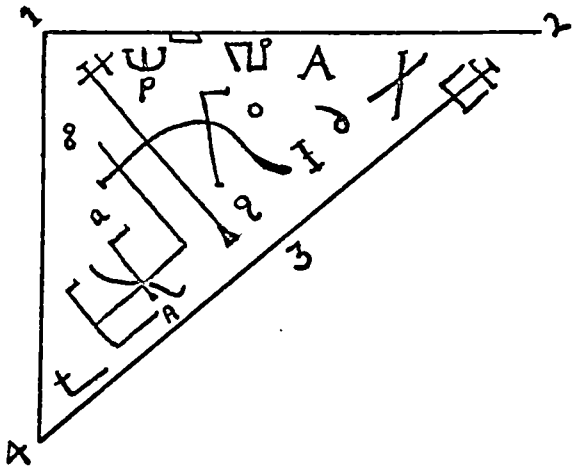
Marginal notes:

line 4: Note: he / had two dayes / before made the / like demaunde / and request vnto / me: but he went / away vnsatisfied. / for,his comming / was to entrap / me, yf I had had / any dealing with / Wicked spirits / as he confessed / often tymes after: / and that he was / set on. &c.

line 10: ⌈a sketch of the stone, in its frame⌉

line 49: Δ / An illuding / spirit straight / way intruded / him self, and / this charac= / ter: as may / appere libri / Quinti appendice / Where the / character is / described exactly.

[9b]



Δ——what is the intent, or vse of this?

*VR Sigillum hoc in auro sculpendum, ad defensionē corporis, omni loco, tempore et occasione. et in pectus gestandum.

Δ—— So we ceased, with thanks to god: and I mused much vppon this Action: and layd all vp in mynde, and writing.

Δ——Soli Deo Honor omnis, et gloria.

Amen.

⌈flourish⌉

Marginal note:

line 3: *This was not / True Vriel: / as may appere / A° 1583: Maij 5.

The same Saterday afternoon. Hora .5.

Δ——After that M^{r} E.T. had called Vriel, and I was cōme to the stone and had vsed a short speche of thanks giving to God: [an] I then required

some instruction for the purpose of Soyga

VR———Peace. you must Vse Michaël.

Δ——I know no meanes or order to vse in the invocating of Michaël VR——— He is to be invocated by certayn of the psalmes of Dauid, and prayers. The which psalmes, are nothing els, but a means vnto the seat and Maiestie of God: whereby you gather with your selues due powre, to apply your natures to the holy Angels. I mean the psalmes, commonly called the Seven psalmes. You must vse pleasant sauours with hand and hart: whereby you shall allure him and wynn him

(thorowgh Gods fauour) to atteyn vnto the thing, you haue long sowght for.

There must be Coniunction of myndes in prayer, betwyxt you two, to God contynually.

Yt is the wyll of God, that you shold, ioinctly, haue the knowledge of his Angells togither

You had atteyned vnto the Sight of Michaël, but for the imperfection of Saul.

Be of good Cumfort.

Δ——The chayre cam into the stone againe: and I axed what it ment.

VR ——— This is a seat of perfection: from the which, things shall be shewed vnto the, which thow hast long desyred.

Δ Then was there a square Table browght into the stone: and I demaunded, what that Table betokened.

VR ——— A Mysterie, not yet to be known. These two, shall remayn in the stone, to the sight of all vndefyled Creatures.

you must

Marginal note:

line 15: Note. / Δ— in this time / there appered / in the stone, / a rich chayre: / and after a little / while, it was / out of sight.

[10a]

you must vse a fowre square Table, two cubits square: wherevppon must be set Sigillum [Diuinitatis] /D̄ei/, which is allready p̄fected in a boke of thine: Blessed be God, in all his Mysteries, and Holy in all his works. This seal must not be loked on, without great reuerence and deuotion. This seale is to be made of perfect wax. I mean, wax, which is clean purified: we haue no respect of cullours.

This seal must be 9 ynches in diameter: The rowndnes must be 27 ynches, and somwhat more. The Thicknes of it, must be of an ynche and half a quarter. and a figure of a crosse, must be on the back side of it, made thus:

The Table is to be made of swete wood: and to be of two Cubits high.

with 4 feete: with 4 of the former seales vnder the 4 feet.

Δ—The fashion of the 4 feet, standing vppon the foresayd rownd seales, was shewed: so as the vttermost circle conteyning the letters, did seme to be clean without the cumpas of the fete, equally rownd abowt the same fete.

And these seales were shewed much lesser than the principall seal.

Vnder the Table did seme to be layd red sylk, two yardes square.

And ouer the seal, did seme likewise red sylk to lye fowr square: somwhat broader then the Table, hanging down with 4 knops or tassells at the 4 corners thereof.

Vppon this vppermost red silk, did seme to be set the stone with the frame: right

ouer, and vppon the principall seal: sauing that the sayd sylk was betwene the one and the other.

The Table was shewed to haue on the fowre sides of it, Characters and names, these, that are here in a schedule annexed, in 4 diuerse rowes.

VR——— The Characters and words on the sides of the square Table, are to be written with yellow, made of perfect oyle, vsed in the church.

Δ—— What oyle is that

VR—— [of] That oyle shalbe opened vnto you. The oyle, is perfect prayers: 30 of other oyle I haue no respect.

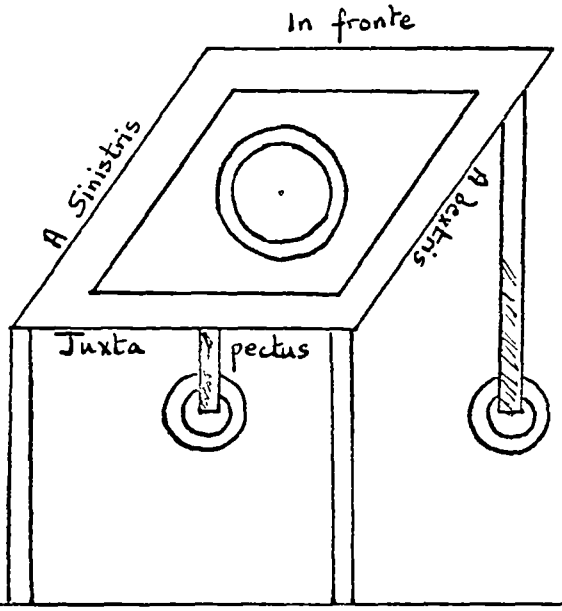
We sanctifie, bycause we are holy: and you sanctify bycause of your holines.



Marginal notes:

line 2: * erronicè, / contra igno= / rātiā meā. / vide post.

line 16: *Note this point.

line 25: <*> Caue: quia / angelus tenebra= / rum se intrusit / hic vt libri / Quinti appendice / apparavit.

VR——— There is a spirit, named Lundrumguffa vsing you.
who seketh your destruction, in the hatred of men, in the hurt of thy goods. Discharge him to morrow with Brymstone.
He haunteth thy howse, and seketh the destruction of thy dowghter.
His pretence was to haue maymed the in thy Sholder the last night, and long ago. Yf thow do not dischardg him to morrow he will hurt, both thy wife and thy dowghter.
He is here* now
Giue him a generall discharge from your familie and howse
He will seke Sauls death, who is accursed.

Δ——I know no means, or art to do this by. For I did burn in flame of Brymstone, Maherion his name and Character, whan I found Saul priuilie dealing with him (which manner of wicked dealing I had oft forbydden him) and yet he came after, and wold haue carryed Saul away quick: as Robert Hilton, George, and other of my howse can testify.

VR——— The Cursed will c̄ome to the cursed.

Δ—— I beseche you to discharge him: and to bynde him somwhere where far of, as Raphael did (for Thobias sake) with the wycked spirit Asmodeus.

VR——— But Thobias did his part. Art is Vayne, in respect of of God his powre. Brymstone is a mean

Δ——Whan shall I do this?

VR——— To morrow at the tyme of prayers.

Δ——— Gl<or>ia P̄ri et filio et Spiritui Sancto <sicu>t &c. Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 7: Δ Note:

line 8: * so is it evidēt / who went abowt / to hinder the / truth before in / the character / and in the bor= / der of the Table, / falsly cownter= / feating &c as it / allso in the next / action may appere. / /rule/line 15: Saul in dan= / ger of being / carried away / quick

1582 Martij 11

Sonday. a Meridie hora ^{a}3. circiter

Δ——Vriel being called by .E.T. there appeared one, clothed with a long robe, of purple: all spanged with gold. and on his hed, a garland, or wreath of gold: his eyes sparkling. Of whome /^{c}asked/ I axed

Whether the characters noted for the Table, wer perfect:

He answered,

———They are $^{\Delta *}$perfect: There is no question

Δ—— Are you Vriel.

Than presently cam in One, and threw the brave spirit down by the sholders: and bet him mightyly with a whip: and toke all his robes, and apparell of him: and then he remayned all heary and owggly.

and styll the spirit was beaten of him, who cam in after him. And that spirit, which so bet him, sayed to the hearing of my Skryer,

Lo, thus are the wycked skourged

Δ——Are you Vriel, who speaketh that?

VRI———I am he. Write down and mark this: for it is worthy

Marginal note:

line 35: Δ * / Hereby may appere / that this wycked / spirit foysted in / the shew of the / fals character / and names before worthy of the Noting.

---

[11a]

This was thy persecutor Lundrumguffa. I browght him hither: to let the see, how God hath ponished thy enemy

Lo, thus, hath God delt for the: Lo thus haue I delt for the: Thank God.

Δ——blessed be his holy name, and extolled, world with out ende.

E.T.—he drew the wycked spirit away, by the leggs, and threw him into a great pitt. and washed his hands, as it were, with the sweat of his [hed] own hed. for he seamed to be all in [/....7] [sweat.] a sweat.

Δ—— Here vppon, my skryer saw Vriel go away: and he remayned out of sight a little while. Then he cam in agayn: and an other with him: and iointly these two said to gither. Glorifie God for euer.

And than Vriel did stande behinde: and the other did set down in the chayre, with a sworde in his right hand: all his hed glystring like the sonne. The heare of his hed was long: He had wings: and all his lower parts seamed to be with fethers. He had a roab ouer his body: and a great light in his left hand. he sayd

Michaël—We are blessed from the begynning: and blessed be the name of God for euer.

Δ—My skryer saw an innumerable Cumpany of Angels abowt him:

And Vriel did lean on the square Table by.

He that sat in the chayre (whom we take to be Michaël) sayd

Than

————Go forward: God hath blessed the

I will be thy Guyde

Thow shallt atteyne vnto thy seching

The World begynns with thy doings

Prayse God.

The Angels vnder my powre, shall be at thy commaundement.

Lo, I will do thus much for the Lo, God will do thus much for the Thow shalt see me: and I will be seen of the

And I will direct thy liuing and conversation.

Those that sowght thy life, are vanished away.

Put vp thy pen.

Δ—so he departed.

Δ—— Gloria, laus, honor, virtus et Imperium

Deo immortali, invisibili, et

Omnipotenti, in saecula saeculorū

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: Note / Lundrum= / guffa skourged / spiritually.

line 34: Lundrum= / guffa.

[11b]

Martij 14. Wensday. mane circa horā 9^{a}

Δ— Being desirous to procede in this matter, by consent, we bent our selues to the Action. And after that [E T] had called Vriel and saw him, I cam to the desk from my oratorie.

There did contynually appeare, the chayre and the Table.

I than being affrayde that any other shold cōme into the stone, in stead of Vriel, did ernestly require the spirituall creature appearing, to shew who he was, and what was his name.

At length he answered, and sayde to the hearing of E. T.

Vriel is my name, with diuerse called N*ariel.

Stay.

Δ— Then he went away, for a while: and cam agayn, and sayd thus,

Vr.——— The strength of God, is allwayes with the.

Dost thow know, what thow writest?

Δ— In two senses, I may vnderstand it: eyther that [God] the good

Angel Δ Gabriel is allwayes with me, thowgh invisibly: or els, that the strength, and mighty hand of God, allwayes is my defense

Vr——— Fortitudo Dei, tecum semper est.

Δ— He went away agayn, and cam agayn, following or wayting vpp<on> an other. and before that other, was a man hauing his hed all couered with blak. Then he that cam so in the middle, did sit down in the chayre, and spake this worde following:

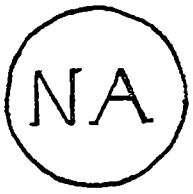
Mi— Note

Δ—This was Michael, with his sword in his right hand

Then cam Vriel to the man (hauing his hed all hyd, as it were in a blak hode) and toke of that blak hode: and then lifted vp the Table cloth. He looked vnder it, and put it down againe: and lifted it vp again. The man stode still before Michael. Then Michael rose; and toke of all the mans clothes, and left him, as it were, onely in his shirt Then Vriel toke a little rownd Tablet, as it were, of the bignes of a sixpence, hauing two letters in it thus:



and gaue it to Michaël.
Vriel lifted Vp the Table cloth: and, from thence, seamed to take apparaile, and put on the man. it semed to be sylk: and very full of wrynkles, or plights. And the man kneeled, and held vp up his hands. Vriel toke like a lawrel bush, and set vppon the mans hed. And than the man kneeled before Michaël. Michaël toke the rownd thing, with the letters: and gaue it the man to eat: and he did eat it

Vr—Lo, things are covered.

Δ—Then he couered the Table and pluckt the cloth over it, down to the grownd, on euery side. The man rose vp: And Michaël dubbed him on the hed with his sworde. Then the man stode vp

Then

Marginal notes:

line 10: *Agrippa hath so,/ Cap. 24. Lib. 3. / Occultae phiae.

line 16: △— potius erat di= / cendum Michaël: / Nā, Gabriel est / Praevalescentia / Dei: et ita forti= / tudo quidem, sed / altioris gradus.

[12a]

Then the man turned his face toward E. T. the skryer. and the man did resemble me (John Dee) in cowntenance. And then he turned to Michaël agayn.

Michael wrote vppon the mans back, thus,

ANGELVS TVAE PROFESSIONIS.

△— Then .E. T. asked me, yf there were such Angels of a mans Profession: and I answered yea; as in △ Agrippa and other, is declared.

Mi——— Leaue your folly: Hold thy peace.

Haue you not red, that they that cleaue vnto God, are made like vnto him.

△— yes, forsoth.

Mic——— Thow camst hither to lern, and not to dispute.

Laudate Dominum in operibus suis.

△— The man kneled down, and so went out of sight.

Mi——— He hath eaten strength against trubble. He hath eaten nothing: and in eating, he hath eaten all things. The ✲ name NA, be praysed in trubbles.

△— Now Michael thrust out his right arme, with the sword: and bad the skryer to loke. Then his sword did seame to cleaue in two: and a great fyre, flamed out of it, vehemently. Then he toke a ring out of the flame of his sworde: and gaue it, to Vriel. and sayd, thus Mic——The strength of God is vnspeakable. Praysed be god for euer and euer.

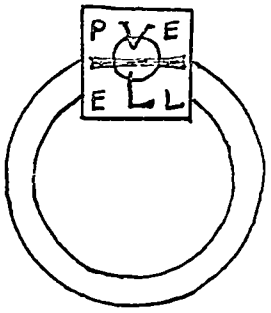
Δ——Then Vriel did make cursy vnto him.

Mi——After this sort, must thy ring be: Note it,

Δ——Then he rose, or disapeared, out of the chayre, and by and by, cam again, and sayde, as followeth.

Mi——I will reveale the this ring: which was never revealed since the death of Salomon: with whom I was present. I was present with him in strength, and mercy.

Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and diuine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon: This is it, which I have revealed vnto the. This is it, which Philosophie dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels skarse know. This is it, and blessed be his Name: yea, his Name be blessed for euer.



Δ——Then he layd the Ring down vppon the Table: and sayd,

Note

Δ——It shewed to be a Ring of Gold: with a seale graued in it. and had a rownd thing in the myddle of the Seale and a thing like an V, throwgh the top of the circle: and an L, in the bottome: and a barr cleane throwgh it: And had these fowre letters in it, P E L E

After that, he threw the ring on the borde, or Table: and it semed to fall

Marginal notes:

line 7: <*vi>de Agrippam / <de> Triplici hois / <Cu> stode . lib. 3°. / cap 22.

line 16: ⁂ Vide Reuclinū / de verbo mirif / fico, de noie / NA.

line 46: Vide Reuclini Librum / libru de Verbo Miri= / mirifico, de noie / Noie PELE

[12b]

to fall throwgh the Table: and then he sayde, thus,

Mi——— So shall it do, at thy commaundement.

Without this, thow shalt do nothing

Blessed be his name, that compasseth all things:

Wonders are in him, and his Name is WONDERFVLL:

His Name worketh wonders, from generation, to generation.

Δ——Then he went away: and cam in agayn by and by.

Mi——— Note

Δ——Then he browght in the Seale, which he shewed the other day: and opened his sworde, and bad the skryer reade; and he red E M E T H

n the sword closed vp agayn: and he sayde

...i——— This [do] I do open vnto the, bycause thow mervayledst at SIGILLVM DEI. This is the Name of the Seale: Which he blessed for euer. This is the seale self. This is Holy: This is pure: This is for euer. Amen.

Δ——Then the seale Vanished away. And I sayde to my frende (the Skryer) In dede, this other day, I considered diuerse fashions of this seal: and I fownd them much differing, one from an other: and therfore I had nede to know, which of them I shall imitate: or how to make one perfect of them all.

Mi———Dowt not for the making of it: God hath perfyted all things. Ask not the cause of my absence, nor of my apparell: for that Mysterie, is known to God. I haue no cloathing, as thow thyself shalt see. I am a Spirit of Truth, and Vertue. Yea you shall see me in Powre, and I will viset you in HOPE

Bless you the Lorde, and followe his wayes, for euer

Δ Then he went away: and Vriel followed him.

And then I sayde to my skryer: It were good, we had euer some watch word, when we shold not loke for any more matter at theyr hands, euery tyme of theyr Visitting of vs.

Wherevppon, (vnlooked for, of vs,) he spake agayn

Mi——— We lead tyme, Tyme leadeth not vs:

Put vp thy pen

The Name of God, be blessed for euer.

Δ—— Then they lifted vp theyr hands to heuen ward (which heven, appeared allso in the stone) and turned toward vs, and sayd

Valete:

Δ—— So they departed: and at theyr going, the chayr, and the Table, in the stone, did seme to shake

Δ ——— Soli Deo ois honor

Laus et Gloria.

Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 3: The vse of the Ring line 11: De Sigillo Emeth / vide Reuclini Artē / Cabalisticā. lib. 3. / et Agrippā lib. 3. / Cap. 11.

[13a]

Martij 15. Thursday. Hora 1¼ a meridie

Δ——After E T his calling into the stone, appeared a tall man, with a sceptre

(very great) of gold, glittring. His body all red: and out of his hed, did shote out beames of light, like the sonne beames.

Δ——[I] being desirous, to know who he was, and his name, I requested him ernestly thereto. but he answered, as followeth.

————Invocate nomen Domini, et agnoscetis eum

Δ——Then I prayed the psalme, Deus misereatur nri, et benedicat nobis etc

after that he sayd

————I am mighty:

Δ——Bycause he delayed to declare his name, E T the Skryer did require him, in the name of God the father, Jesus Christ his Sonne, and of the holy ghost, to expresse his name: and he answered in speche

———— So I will by and by

Δ——Then he seamed to take from his hed little bright sparcks, like little candells endes: and to stick them abowt the chayre: and he went rownd abowt the chayre: and than he spake, as followeth.

not signifying. This is the Whole.

So shalt thow fynde the 7 principall Names: known with vs, and apply= able to thy practise.

Make experience.

△ Then telling from T, 4 more places (toward the right hand) exclu= 35 siuely, I finde in that fowrth place, from T, (but /being/ the fifth fro the beginning, and with the begynning) this letter h: with 22, ouer it.

Therfore, I procede to the right hand, 22 places: and there I finde

A, and 11 over it. Going then toward the right /hand/ 11 places furder: I finde

a little a with 5 vnder it: by reason of which vnder place of 5 I 40 go toward the left hand, 5 places, exclusively; where I finde o with 10, vnder it: whervppon I procede to the left hand, farder by 10 places and there I see the letter t, and 11, vnder it: and therfore going to the left hand 11 places, I see there the letter h alone without any number. Wherfore, that letter, endeth my word, and it 45 is in all ThAaoth: ys this, as it shold be?

Mi. That is not the name. Thow shalt vnderstand all in the next

Call. The Rule is perfect. Call agayn within an h<ou>re and it

△ Note these doings to be 50

accownted Calls

Marginal notes:

line 12: SemiEIl

line 24: The decla / ration of / the num= / bers.

line 48: Call

[21b]

and it shalbe shewed

/flourish/

△ The howre being come we attended Michael his retorn to mak<e> make the Practise euydent of his first Rule.

Mi Saluete.

Thow diddest erre: and herein hast thow erred: and yet notwithstanding =ding no error in the, bycause thow knowest not the error.

Vnderstand that the 7 Names must Comprehend, as many letters letters in the whole, as there are places in the Circle: Some letters are are significatiue of them selues: in dede no letters, but dubble numbers, =bers being the Name of God. Thow hast erred in the first name, missetting downe A a, that is, twise a togither, w/ch/hich differ the word. Which thow shalt Note to the ende of thy work: Where soeuer thow shalt finde two a a togither ther the first is not to be placed within the Name, but rather with with his inward powre. Thow shalt fynde 7 Names proceding <from>

c

/from/ three generall partes of the Circumference: My meaning is fr<om>

c

/from/ three generall letters: and onely but one letter, that is, this

c

/this/ letter A. Accownt thow, and thow shalt finde the names iust. I speak not of any that come in the begynning of the word

c

/word/ but such as light in the myddest: Proue: proue: and thow shalt s<ee>

/shalt see./ Whereas thow hast [go,] it is to be red [og]. This is the whole

Δ I haue red in Cabala of the Name of God of 42 letters: but not y<et> yet of any, of 40 letters: That of 42 letters is this

אב אלהים בן אלהים רוח [אלהים] הקדש אלהים שלשה באחד אחד בשלשה

[id est]

id est: Pater Deus, Filius Deus, Spiritus Sanctus Deus: Tres in vno, [vel vnitas] et vnus in tribus. vel Trinitas in vnitate et vnitas in Trinitate or this אב אל בן אל [ו]רוח הקדש לא אכל לא שלשה אלהים כי אם אלוה אחד

which in Latin,is, Pater Deus, Filius Deus, et Spiritus Sanctus, Deus, attamen non tres Dij sed vnus Deus.

And /as[c]/ this is of God, Vnitie in Trinitie, so of Christ onely (the second persone of the Diuine Trinitie) the Cabalists haue a name explained of 42 letters, on this maner.

כאשר הכפש המשכלת והבשר אדם אחד כן האל והאדם משיה אחד

That is in Latine Sicut anima rationalis, et caro, homo vnus, ita Deus Deus et homo, Messias vnus.

I am not good in the hebrue tung, but, you know my meaning.

Mi. The letters being so taken oute, being a name, and a nūber, doth certifye the old rule of 42 letters, whan you restore them in agayn:

Mi. Note, Oute of this Circle shall no Creature pass, that entreth, /treth^c/ yf it be made vppon the earth. My meaning is, if he be defyled:

This shalt thow proue to be a mysterie vnknown to man.

Beastes 50

Marginal notes:

line 10: Dubble / Nūbers /with hand/

line 13: Note

line 16: Δ / Note / 7 Names, pro / ceding from / 3 generall / places of the / Circumferēce. / or 3 generall / letters, being / but one letter, / and that, A.

line 29: Δ / Vide Gala= / tinū, lib° / 3°. cap. 11.

line 44: Δ / 42, are here / in Potētia / but, non Acta line 47: the / Vertu / of this / Circle. /with hand/

[22a]

Beasts, birds, fowle and fish do all reuerence to it. In this they were all Cre= ated. In this, is all things conteyned. In tyme thow shalt find it, in ADAMS Treatise from Paradise. Looke to the Mysteries: for they are true.

A and ω :Primus et Nouissimus; Vnus solus Deus viuit nunc et semper: Hic est, et hic erit: Et hic, sunt Nomina sua Diuina 5

Dixi.

Thow art watcht all this night: who is euen now at the Dore:

Clerkson.

Blessed are those, whose portion is not with the wicked

Benedictamus Dominum. Halleluyah. 10

/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 2: <ADAM>s / <TREA>t= / <ISE, Δ He me>a / <neth my> / <Booke that> / <I cal>l / Soyga

Tuesday the 20 of Marche circa $10^{\bar{a}}$ mane //ers to them / and corrected certayn pray= —Δ. I had made, and written, /caret/

Δ Are you Vriel?

Vr. I am. We thank the for thy great goodwill 15

We cannot viset the now. At the twelfth howre thow shalt vse vs.

Δ Fiat voluntas Dei. /flourish/

A meridie: circa $2^{\bar{a}}$

Δ At the twelfth howre, my partner was busyed in other affayres, and so contynued tyll abowt 2 of the Clok: when, we comming to the stone, 20

fownd there Michael and Vriel. but Michael straight way rose vp and went out, and cam in agayn, and one after him, carrying on his right shulder, 7 little baskets, of gold they seamed to be

Mi. —— shut vp your doores. Δ I had left the vttermore dore of my study, open: and did but shitt the portall dore of it. 25

Δ He toke the 7 Baskets, and hanged them rownd abowt the border of a Canapie, of beaten gold, as it were.

Mi. Ecce, Mysterium est. Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel.

Δ Therewith he did spred oute, or stretch the Canapy: whereby it seamed to couer all the world ⊏ which seamed to be in the stone allso, 30

heven, an erth ⌐¬ so that the Skryer could not now see the heven

And the baskets, by equall distances, did seeme to hang in the border of the horizon.

Mi. What wold you haue Δ Sapientiam

Mi Rede the names thow hast written _ I had written these 35

according to the Rule before giuen, as I vnderstode it.

Th[a]aoth

Gal[a]as

Gethog

Horlωn 40

Innon

A/a/oth (c)

Galetsog

Mi. Loke to the last name. Δ I had written, (as yt appeareth) Galetsog

---

Marginal notes:

line 23: <B>askets.

line 24: <Shut> <dor>es

---

by misreckēing the numbers. Where I fownd it shold be Galethog [wh] [22b] with an h and not s.

Mi. Lo, els thow hadst erred. They are all right, but not in order

The second is the first (his name be honored for euer: The first here, must be our third. and the third here must 5 be our second: thus set downe.

1. Galas.
2. Gethog.
3. Thaoth.
4. Horlωn.
5. Innon.
6. Aaoth.
7. Galethog.

Mi work from the right, toward the left, in the first angle next vnto the circumference

△ He shewed than, thus, this letter

M. Make the number of 5 on the right hand, (that is, before it) at a reasonable distance, thus 5

△ After that /he/ shewed the second letter, a great roman A, thus 24

Then he shewed  30

Then 21

Then 9

Then he shewed 14

Then he shewed this compownd letter, with the circle and cross.
He willed me, at each corner of these Segmēts, to make little Crosses and so I did.

△ After euery of the 7 letters shewed he did put them vp in his bosom assone as he had shewed them fully. The plates wheron those letters were shewed [were as the figure principall seale] hath the forme of the segment of a circle, thus and seemed to be of pure gold. When the 7 letters were placed, he sayd

Omnia vnum est.

Then he pulled all the 7 plates out of his bosom: and Vriel kneeled down before him. Then the plates did seeme to haue two wings (eche of them) and to fly vp to heven vnder the Canapye.

[Marginal flourish and rule to end of 'heven' (line 35)]

△ After this, one of the 7 baskets, (that which is in the east) cam to Michael. and he sayd.

Mi. Seal this: For This was and is for euer

△ Then he stode agayn on his leggs like brasen pillers, and sayd

Mi Oh how mighty is the name of God, which rayneth in the heavens. O God of the faithfull, for thow raynest for euer.

△ he opened the basket, and there cam a great fyre out of it

Mi

[23a]

Mi. Diuide the 7 partes of the circle next vnto that which thow hast done, euery one, into 7.

Note. (for the tyme wilbe Long.) Seuen, rest in 7: and the 7, liue by 7: The 7, gouern the 7: And by 7, all Gouern= ment is. Blessed be he: yea blessed be the Lord: praysed be our god: His Name be magnified: All honor and Glory be Vnto him now and for euer. Amen

△ Then he toke oute of the fire in the basket, a white fowle like a pigeon

That fowle had a ⌒ vppon the first of 7 feathers which were on his brest.

that first feather was on the left side

Mi Note. there is a mysterie in the seuen. which are the 7 gouerning the 7 which 7 gouern the earth. Halleluyah

Mi. Write the letters: Δ Now, a small l in the second fether. Then he couered those first two letters, with the other feathers

The third an l, like the other: then he couered that allso.

The fowrth an R. he covereth that the fifth a great roman H. he couereth it.

the sixth feather hath a little i. then he hid that feather.

the last feather had a small a.

Mi. Prayse god. [Δ we prayed.]

Δ Then he put the fowle into the basket: and set it down by him. Then he hong it vp in the ayre by him.

Δ Then he lift vp his sworde over vs, and bad vs pray. Δ we prayed.

Δ Then he stretched out his hand and there cam an other basket to him.

and he pluckt out a white byrd, much bigger than the other: as big as a swan: with .7. feathers on the brest

Mi Dixit, et factum est

Mi. Note. Δ The first feather hath a little a, on it: and it went away: the next a ζ great as the first

Then a C great

Then a little a

Then an other little a

Then a feather with a little c

Then one with a little b △ Then he couered them all.

Mi. Thow hast truth.

△ Then he put vp the fowle into the basket, and hung it vp by the other in the ayre.

△ Than the third Basket cam to him: and he toke out a byrd all green as grass. like to a peacok in form and bignes

Mi. Et viuis tu cum illo et:
regnum tuum cum illis est

△ There started out of this birds brest, 7 fethers, like gold, and fyrie.

Mi. Pray

3. Mi. Note. △ On the first feather a small p Then a small a a little u
Then a small p
Then a small n
then a small h
Then a small r. Then he put the fowle vp into the Basket etc

Marginal note:

line 5: △ / Note of / <the> 7 Baskets

[23b]

△ Then there cam an other basket to his hand

Mi. Dedit illi potestates in caelis Potestas illius magna est.
Orate. △ we prayed

Δ Then he pluckt out a fowle, greater then any of the other, like like a griphen (as commonly they are [p..] figured) all red fyry.

with skales like brass. Then on seuen scales, appered letters.

Mi. Note. Δ first a little h.

a little d

a little m

Then a little h

Then a little i

Then a little a

Then a little i

Δ Then he put vp the fowle, & hung the basket in the Ayre.

Δ Then there cam an other Basket to him.

[Δ Note: all this while the firmament was not to be seen.]

Mi. Magnus est DEVS in Angelis suis.

et magna est illorum potestas in Caelis

Orate. ΔWe prayed

Δ Then he pluckt out a bird like an Egle: all his body like Gold and he had a little Circle of feathers on his brest: and in it betwene /betwene/ fowre parrallell lines, twelue equall squares: and on the top, on the myddle, one [equall] like the other twelue, thus.

△ Then he put vp the Egle etc

△ Then cam an other Basket.

Mi. Nuncius tuus est magnus in caelis

Orate.

△ He, and the Basket that wer opened, shut, and set aside, seamed all to be gon: and the Baskets remayning, still hanging on the border of the Canapie. Then he cam agayn. and went awaye agayne. Then cam VRIEL and held the Basket: and his leggs seemed to be such great tall pillers of Brass: as Michael did stand on before.

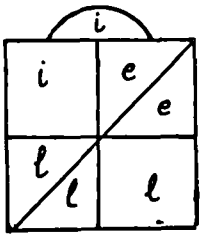
VR This is a Mysterie He is here, and not here which was here before.

△ He opened the Basket and pluckt out like a phenix ⊏ or △ pelican ⊐ of the bignes of a swan: all fyrie, sparkling: His byll is bent into his brest: and it bled. In his brest was a quadrangle made with his own feathers, thus. He put it vp, and hung it by the other



Baskets

Then

Marginal note:

line 36: △. Michael / Was the / sixth name / vide post

Then cam the last basket. Vriel stode still: and sayde

VR. Dedit angelis potestatem in lumine Caeli.

Orate Δ we prayed

Δ Then cam Michael and toke the Basket of Vriel: and becam standing on the great brasen Legs, as before.

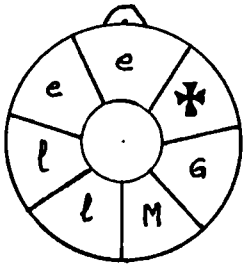
Δ He toke out of the basket a strange fowle with many wings:

This fowle had in his forhed a Tablet of this fashion



Mi. Et Coniunxit illos DEVS in vnum

Δ All the Basket flew vp: and so the Canapie vanished away: and the Heaven appeared.

Δ. Now he cam and sat down in his chayre

Δ. Michael sayd to Vriel: it is thy part, to expownd these Mysteries:

Go to, in the name of our God.

Δ Vriel cam and stode before him and sayde: What will you: Ô our fellows, and seruants to God? What will you?

Δ Perfect knowledg and Vnderstanding, such as is necessary for vs.

VR. Looke vppon, and see if thow canst not vnderstand it: we will depart for a little space: and come to the agayne

Δ So they went: and left all the stone in fyre, so that neyther the Chayr or the Table could be seen in it

Δ After a quarter of an howre, Michael and Vriel cam both agayne

Mi Loke into the 7 angles next vnto the vppermost Circumference

Δ Vriel cam and stode before Michael

VR. Those 7 letters, are the 7 Seats of the One and everlasting GOD. His 7 secret Angels proceding from euery letter and Cross so formed: referred in substance to the FATHER: in forme, to the SONNE: and Inwardly to the HOLI GHOSTE. Loke vppon it: it is one of the Names, which thow hast Before: euery letter conteyning an Angel of brightnes: comprehending the 7 inward powres of God; known to none, but him self: a Sufficient BOND to vrge all Creatures to life or death, or any thing els conteyned in this World. Yt banisheth the wicked, expelleth euyll spirits: qualifieth the Waters, strengthe neth the Just, exalteth the righteous, and destroyeth the Wicked. He is ONE in SEVEN. He is twise THREE He is seuen in the Whole. He is Almighty. His Name is euerlasting: His Truth can not fayle. His Glory is incomprehensible. Blessed be his name. Blessed be thow, (our GOD) for euer.

Marginal notes:

line 13: Vriel

line 17: <M>y contynuall & / and auncient p= / prayer line 26: Δ / Note these / these ma= / manifold & / and great Mi= / Mysteries & / and make th / these 7 diuerse / Crosses wth / the 7 letters.

line 34: Note / this / Bond.

line 38: Δ~He is twice / twice three & / and one

---

[248]

VR. Thow must refer thy numbers therin conteyned, to the Vpper Circle. For, From thence, all things in the inward partes, shalbe comprehended

Looke if thow vnderstand it

Δ I finde it to be GALETHOG

Vr. [So] it is so. Δ. I thank God and you, I vnderstand now (also) the numbers annexed.

Vr. As this darknes is lightened, by the spirit of God, herein: So will I lighten, Yea so will the Lord lighten your Imperfections, and glorifie your myndes to the sight of innumerable most holy and vnspeakable Mysteries.

Vr. To the next part. Δ Michael sat still, with his sword in his hand

Vr. The parte wherein thow hast labored, conteyneth 7 Angels. Dost thow vnderstand it? Δ Not yet: Vr. Oh how far is mans Judgmēt from Celestiall powres? Oh how far are these secrets hidden from the wycked? Glory be vnto him, which seeth for euer. Δ. Amen, Amen, Amen.

VR. Note. we can not tarry long.

Thow must set down these letters onely, by 7, in a spare paper: thus.

VR. Rede ——————————— Begyn at the first, and

rede downward	Z l l R H i a	Δ I rede thus, Zaphkie
Zadkiel, Cumael	a Z C a a c b	Raphael, Haniel, M chaël, Gabriel p a u p n h r Vr. Thow hast red right

h d m h i a i Δ prayed be God. k k a a e e e Vr. Thus dost thow see, how mercifully God dea= i i e e l l l leth with his servants.
e e l l M G ✣

Euery letter here, conteyneth or comprehendeth the number of 72 Vertues. Whose names thow shalt know: Skarse yet revealed to the world.

Vriel and Michael iointly togither pronownced this blessing on vs.

VR, Mi. We bless you: your { sowles / Harts / Bodyes / and all yo^r doings.

Δ Michael with his sword, and flame of fyre florished ouer our heds.

Yet I will thus much shew you, for your Cumfort beside. What seest thow? Δ he spake to the skryer. and he saw an innumerable [angels] multitude of Angels, in the Chāber or study abowt vs. very bewtifull with wings of fyre. Then he sayd, Lo, thus you shalbe shaddowed from the wicked Kepe these Tables secret. He is secret that liueth for euer.

Man is frayle Fare Well. ¶ He must

Marginal notes:

line 7: /hand/

line 14: 7. Angels.

line 21: Δ — I haue hitherto / forgotten to ax / wher Vriel / his name may / appere.

line 26: Δ / 48. letters / are here: / and One is / noted by a / Cross: which / maketh the 49.th / Vide / A° 1584 / Junij 25 / of this Crosse and Angels line 29: 72: / vertues / multiplyed / by 48: giue / 3456

line 37: /hand/

line 40 : Innumerable / multitudes of / Angells:

Below line 44 under 'He must': ℂ of this sentence / cam no frute mor / furder information / Therfore consider

---

[25a]

go for the bokes, els they will perish. Δ He ment that my partner

Ed. Talbot, shold go to fatch the bokes from Lancaster (or therby) which were the L. Mowntegles bokes. which M^r Mort yet hath: whereof mention is made before ended hor. 5. a meridie 5

Tuesday the 20 Martij.

1582

[flourish]

Marginal note

line 1: The L / Mowntegles / bokes.

Wensday. 21. Martij, circa 2ª a meridie

Δ After appearance was had, there cam in one before Michael (who 10 sat in his seat) and Vriel leaned on the table (as he, vsually did). This seemed to be a Trumpeter: he was all in white, and his garments bespotted with blud

he had nothing on his hed. his heare very long hanging behynde him on his sholders. The Trumpet seamed to be gold. The sownd therof was very playne.

△ I axed of my Skryer /caret/, [How] /in what manner[c]/ Vriel now shewed, (and Michael likewise.)

Then Michael sayd, I warned the for axing of my apparell or manner

Mi. (Et haec est Gloria illius, quae non cōmouebitur ab impijs Quid vultis? △ Juxta voluntate Dei, Sapiētiam nobis necessarium etc

Mi Sapientia mundi, nihil est, peribit autem in aeternum

Veniat aeternitas Domini, ab vniuersis mundi partibus.

Venite, venite, sic vult DEVS ADONAI

fac officium Phanaël

△ This Phanael was the Trumpeter, (above mentioned) who therevpon blew his Trumpet, lustily, turning him self rownd abowt, to all the world.

Then from 7 partes of the world, (being equally diuided abowt the Horizon,) cam 7 Cumpanyes of Pillers all of fyrye cullour glittring: And euery Cumpany of pillers high and great and as thowgh they were Pillers of fyre.

The Heauen, the Sonne, and, Mone /and[c]/ sterrs seemed to tremble.

Mi. Multiplex est Deus noster

Mi Mark this Mystery Seuen comprehendeth the Secrets of Heven and erth: seuen knitteth mans sowle and body togither (3, in sowle, and 4 in body)

In 7, thow shalt finde the [Trinitie] Vnitie:

In 7, thow shalt finde the Trinitie

In 7, thow shalt finde the Sonne, and the proportion of the Holy Ghoste. O God, O God, O god, Thy Name (O God) be praysed euer, from thy 7 Thrones, from thy 7 Trumpets, and from thy 7 Angels. Δ Amen, Amen, Amen.

Mi. In 7, God wrowght all things.

Mi. Note

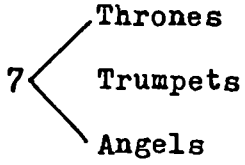
Marginal notes:

line 12: Note this / Trumpeter.

line 17: We were / commaunded / Not to ax / of the appa / rayle of / Michael.

line 24: <Ph>anaël

lines 38 and 39:



[25b]

Note. In 7, and by 7 must you work all things

O Seuen tymes Seuen, Veritie, vertue and Maiestie
I Minister by thy licence This expownd by thy Vertue (Δ Michael spake that, pointing to Vriel.)

Δ Michael and Vriel both kneeled down, and the Pillers of fyrie and brasen cullour, cam nere, rownd abowt them vniformely

Mi Sic est DEVS noster

Δ One of the pillers leaned [down] toward the skryer, and had like a pommel or mace hed, on the top of it. And Michael with great reuerence toke out of the top of it a thing like an S

Δ Then leaned down 6 Pillers more: and Michael, cryed lowd

Vnus est DEVS noster, Deus Deus noster.

Δ Then orderly he opened all the pillers heds: and then the 7 ioyned

all togither, distinctly to be discerned

Mi. Note. Δ. There appeared a great S

A

A

I

Δ Then the sides closed vp, and hid those letters first shewed.

After that appered two letters more E

M

Δ He made Cursy, and semed to go fromward, and vanished away.

Μοσεριορ est E 8

Δ The Pillers all ioyned togither at the tops, making (as it were) One Mace or Pommell, and so flew vp to heven wards.

Δ There seamed two Pillers more to come down from heven (like the other in forme) and toke place there, where the other 7, stode, which went away.

Δ Michael with his sword, Cut them asunder: and cryed out,

Away you workers of Iniquitie

Perijt Malus cum malis

Δ The pillers fell down, and the grownd swallowed them vp.

Tanta est tua audacia Sathan sed DEVS noster viuit.

Δ The Pillers which before ascended, cam down ioyntly: and oute of them a Voyce saying NON SVM

Δ Then the C77 pillers next his right hand, bowed to Michael, And oute of them, a voyce sayd SVM

Δ Then one of the Pillers stode higher than his fellows, and Michael opened all the tops of them, and sayd

Orate Δ we prayed.

Mi Write the Name down in the Tables

Δ Then he toke of, 3 of the heds of the Pillers, and sett them downe and there appeared, B T Z, great letters in hollow places like square cumfet boxes.

Mi, Ista sunt secreta secretorum

Invocate

Marginal notes:

line 1: /hand/

line 26: NOTE

line 30: Note the / intrusion of / Error by the / Wicked powres / of Sathan.

line 36: Δ / Non Sum / I vnderstand / the refusall of / these two intruded / pillers.

[26a]

Invocate Nomen eius, aut nihil agere possumus.

The key of Prayer openeth all things. Δ we prayed.

Δ Then the other 4 pillers, bowingly shewed 4 letters thus, K A S E, and the number 30 with a prik vnder

Then the Pillers ioyned theyr heds togither very close, and flew vp into the firmament with Thunder

Sic Domine, Sic, Sic.

Mi Place these in the Table. Δ I wrote and he sayd, Thow hast done right Laudate nomen Domini qui viuit in aeternum.

Δ A voyce cam out of the next cumpany of the 7 pillers (ioyning them selues togither) saying Ipse.

Mi. Et Misericordia tua Dn̄e magna est

Δ Michael kneled whan he sayd this

Δ Michael shewed out of 4 of theyr heds, of the pillers, (and with all sayd) NO, NOT the Angels of heuen, (but I,) are priuie of these things: Δ so there appeared, 4 letters, H E I D

Δ Then the other 3 pillers were opened and had E N E on theyr tops

Dominus collocatur in numero suo.

Δ The 7 pillers mownted vp into the ayre, and it thundred at their going

Δ Then the fowrth Cumpany of pillers bowed to Michael: out of them cam a voyce. Viuo sicut LEO in medio illorum

Mi. Et tua potestas magna est vbiq

Δ Then Michael pluckt of, fiue of the tops.
There appered D: then they ioyned all togither: then appered E I M O

Mi Hoc non est sine praece

Δ The other two opened, and there appeared 30 A.

Δ Then they closed vp, and went away, with a great thunder

Δ Then cam 7 other pillers to Michael, and a Voyce oute of them saying Serpens sum, et deuoraui serpentem.

Mi. Et bonis et malis serpens es Domine

Δ Then they closed all vp: and Michael sayd, Orate. Δ we prayed

Δ Then Michael toke of the heds of 4: then appeared first an I

then M E G

Then he opened the other 3. and C B E appeared.

Mi. Numerus illius, est nulli cognitus.

Δ They ioyned theyr heds all togither, and ascended vp to heuenward: and great lightening after them.

Δ Then cam an other Septenarie of Pillers: and oute of them a voyce, saying

Ignis sum penetrabilis

Mi. Et sit nobiscum Ô Deus. Pray. Δ we prayed

Δ Then he opened 4 of theyr heds and appered in them I L A O

Δ They closed togither agayne

Δ Then one other was opened, and I apered

Δ Then $\overset{21}{8}$ appered, and did shut vp agayn.

Δ Then he smote fyre out of the last pyller, and it thundred and there seemed to come out of it innumerable Angels like little Children

Note these Innumerable Angels

Marginal notes:

line 1: / Note of / Prayer /with hand/

line 14: /hand/

line 46: Δ / <T>here is / <V>, omitted / <by> our / <ne>glect

---

[26b]

with wings: and there appered N, and suddenly did shut vp.

SIC SIC SIC Deus noster

Δ Then they ioyned all togither, and flew vp.

Mi Note down in the table. Δ I Noted them down.

Δ Then cam the last 7 pillers, and out of them this Voyce

Finis

Gaudium et Lux nostra Deus

Δ Then they closed all in One

Mi. Orate. Δ we prayed.

Δ Then /.6. of/7 the heds opened and appered I H R L A A

Δ Then the seuenth opened: Then seamed trees to leap vp, and hills, and the seas and waters to be trubbled, and thrown vp Δ a Voyce cam out of the Pillers Consummatum est.

Δ There appeared in that Piller 21/8.

Δ They ioyned togither and flew vp to heven ward.

Mi. VNVS VNVS VNVS

Omnis caro timet vocem eius

Pray Δ we prayed.

Δ Note that my skryer was very faynt, and his hed [da] in manner gyddy, and his eyes dasyling, by reason of the sights seen so bright, and fyrie, etc

Michael bad him be of good cumfort, and sayd he shold do well.

Mi Cease for a quarter of an howre.

Δ After we had stayed for a quarter of an howre, we comming to the stone agayne, fownd him cōme all ready to the stone: and Vriel with him. Who, allso, had byn by, all the while, during the Mysterie of the .7. pillers.

Mic. Set two stoles in the myddst of the flowre.

on the one, set the stone: and at the other let him knele

I will shut the eares of them in the howse, that none shall heare vs. I will shew great Mysteries.

Michael than, with a lowd voyce sayd

Adeste Filiae Bonitatis:

Ecce DEVS vester adest:

Venite.

△ There cam in 7 yong women apparelled all in Grene, hauing theyr heds rownd abowt attyred all with greene silk, with a wreath behinde hanging down to the grownd.

Michael stroke [the] /his/ sword ouer them, no fyre appearing. Then they kneeled: And after, rose agayn.

Mi. Scribe quae vides.

△ One of them stept out, with a blue tablet on the forhed of her: and in it written El

△. She stode a side, and an other cam in, after the same sort, with a great M and a little e, thus, Me

The Third, cam as the other, and had Ese

The fowrth ——— Iana

The fifth ——— Akele

The sixth ——— Azdobn

The seuenth stepped furth with ——— Stimcul

They, all togither

Marginal notes:

line 22: /flourish/

line 27: /hand/

line 32: Filiae Bonita= / tis, / or Filiolae / lucis: vide pagina sequēt.

1. They alltogither, sayd Nos possumus in Caelis multa.

Δ Then they went theyr way, suddenly disäpering

Mi. Note this in your next place but one Δ I did so

Mi. Go to the next place. Stay.

Mi. Adeste Filiolae Lucis

Δ They [answered] all, cam in agayn, and answered, Adsumus Ô tu qui ante

faciem DEI stas

Mi. Hijs nris benefacite

Δ They answered, all, Factum erit.

Mi. Valete.

[E]Mi. Et dixit Dominus, venite Filij Lucis

Venite in Tabernaculo meo.

Venite (inquam): Nam Nomen meum exaltatum est.

Δ. Then cam in 7 yong men, all with bright cowntenance, white appareled, with white silk vppon theyr heds, pendant behinde, as the women had.

One of them had a rownd purifyed pece or ball of Gold in his hand

One other had a ball of siluer in his hand.

The third a ball of Coper

The fowrth a ball of Tynne in his hand

The fifth a ball of yern

The sixth had a rownd thing of Quicksyluer, tossing it betwene his two hands

The last had a ball of Lead

They wer all apparayled of one sort

Mi Quamvis ⟨caret⟩ in vno generantur tempore, tamen vnum sunt.

Δ. [t]he that had the gold ball, had a rownd tablet of gold on his brest.

and on it written a great I——————

Then he with the syluer ball, cam [he] furth, with a golden tablet on his brest likewise, and on it written Ih ——————

He with the Copper ball, had in his tablet Ilr ——————

He w^th^ the tyn ball, had in his tablet Dmal —————— 30

He with the yern ball, had in his tablet Heeoa, and so went asyde—

He with the Mercury ball, had written Beigia ——————

The yong man with the leaden ball, had Stimcul ——————

Mi. Facite pro illis, cum tempus erit

Δ All answered, Volumus. 35

Mi. Magna est Gloria Dei inter vos. Erit semper. Halleluyah

Valete.

Δ They made cursy, and went theyr way; mownting vp to heven.

Mi Dixit Deus, Memor esto nois mei:

Vos autem immemores estis. 40

I speak to you. Δ Herevpon, we prayed

Mi. Venite, Venite, Venite

Filiae Filiarum Lucis Venite

Qui habebitis filias venite nunc et semper

Dixit 45

Marginal notes:

line 5: Filiolae / lucis line 7: Michael / one of them / that are / cownted to / stand before / the face of God

line 10: /flourish/

line 11: Filij Lucis

line 16: Metalls

line 24: <Δ pha>ps here / wa<nte>th / non

line 26: Filij Lucis

line 43: Filiae filiarū

line 44: Note these three, / descents /with line to 'Qui' (line 44), above which is written 'forte quae'/

[27b]

Dixit Deus, Creaui Angelos meos, qui destruent Filias Terrae

Adsumus, Δ. sayd 7 little wenches which cam in

They were couered with white silk robes, and with white abowt theyr hed, and pendant down behinde

very long

Mi. Vbi fuistis vos? Δ They answered: In terris, cum sanctis et in caelis, cum glorificatis.

Δ These, spake not so playn, as the former did; but as thowgh they had an Impediment in theyr tung

Δ They had, euery one, somwhat in theyr hands, but my Skryer could not iudge what things they were. Mi. Non adhuc cognoscetur Mysterion hoc.

Δ Eache had fowre square Tablets on theyr bosoms, as yf they were white Iuory

/Ivory/ Δ The first shewed on her Tablet a great S

The second ——— Ab

The third ——— Ath

The fowrth ——— Ized

The fifth ——— Ekiei

The sixth ——— Madimi

The seuenth ——— Eseme

Mi. Quid istis facietis?

Erimus cum illis, in omnis operibus, illorū, Δ they answered.

Mi Valete. Δ They answered, Valeas et tu Magnus O in Caelis

Δ. and so they went away

Mi. Orate Δ We prayed.

Mi. Et misit filios filiorum, edocentes Israel

Mi. Dixit Dominus, Venite ad vocem meam

Adsumus, Δ. sayd 7 little Childern. which cam in like boyes couered all with purple, with hanging sleues

=es like preists or scholers gown sleues: theyr heds attyred all

(after the former manner) with purple silk.

Mi Quid factum est inter filios hominum?

Male viuunt (sayd they) nec habemus locum cū illis tanta est illorum Iniustitia. Veh mundo, scandalis.

Veh scandalizantibus, Veh illis quibus Nos non sumus.

Δ These had tablets (on theyr brests) three cornerd, and seemed to be very grene greene and in them, letters. The first had two letters in one thus, of E, L

The first ——— E — Δ he sayd Nec nōie meo timet Mund/us

The second ——— An — Nullus videbit faciem meam

The third ——— Aue — Non est virgo sup terrā cui dicā, Δ and pointed to his tablet, wherein that word, Aue was written

The fowrth ——— Liba — Tanta est infirmitas sanctitudinis Diei.

Benefacientes decesserūt ab illo.

The fifth ——————— Rocle–Opera manuū illorū sūt vana
Nemo autem videbit me. 45

The sixth shewed his

Tablet and said, Ecce —— Hagonè—Qui adhuc Sancti sūt, cū illis viuo.

The seventh

Marginal notes:

line 3: <T>hey<r> Attyre.

line 10: /hand/

line 13: Filiae / Filiarū

line 15: Ath——

line 18: Madimi——

lines 24-25: /flourish/

line 27: Filij filiorū

line 28: Theyr Attyre

line 37: E

line 44: Rocle

line 47: Hagonel. / (vide de / hoc Hagonel, lib° 4°.

[28a]

The seuenth had on his tablet —Ilemese–Hij imitauerūt doctrinā mea<m>

In me Oīs sita est Doctrina

△ I thowght my Skryer had missherd, this word Imitauerūt, for Imitati sunt. And Michael smyled and seemed to lawgh and sayd, Non curat numerum Lupus and furder 5

he sayd: Ne minimam detrahet à virtute, virtutem

Mi. Estote cum illis: Estote (inquam cum istis) Estote (inquam) mecum. Valete.

△. so they went, making reuerence, and went vp to heuen

Mi. Dictum est hoc tempore.

Mi. Note this in thy Tables:

Dost thow vnderstand it. Loke if thow canst

△ He sayd to Vriel, it is thy part, to interpretate these things

Vr. Omnis Intelligentia est a Domino.

Mi. Et eius Nomen est Halleluyah.

Compose a table diuided into 7 parts, square.

S	A	A	I 21 8	E [M]	M [E]	E 8
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E 30
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	30	A
I 26	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L [A]	A [L]	O	I 21 8	[21 8] V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	21 8

Vr. Those names, which procede from the left hand to the right, are the Names of God, not known to the Angels: neyther can be spoken or red of man. Proue if thow canst reade them

Beatus est qui secrete nomina sua conseruat.

Vr. These Names, bring furth 7 Angels. The 7 Angels, and Go= verners in the heuens next vnto vs, which stand allwayes before the face of God.

Sanctus Sanctus Sanctus
est ille DEVS noster.

Vr. Euery letter of the Angels names, bringeth furth 7 dowghters Euery dowghter, bringeth furth her dowghter, which is 7 Euery dowghter her dowghter bringeth furth a sonne. Euery sonne in him self, is 7. Euery sonne hath

Marginal notes:

line 13: Vrielis / officiū line 17: Δ Note: this / Table is made / perfecter by / the next side / following line 25: 7. Names / of God.

line 30: Note these / two orders / of Angels: / and Note / V[i]riel doth / name him self / one of the standers / before the face of God line 34: Δ / NOTE / well this / Rule of / Arte

[28b]

hath his sonne. and his sonne is 7.

Let vs prayse the God of seuen, which was and is and shall Liue for euer.

Vox Domini in Fortitudine

Vox Domini in Decore

Vox Domini reuelat Secreta

In templo eius, Laudemus Nomen eius El.

Halleluyah.

See if thow canst now vnderstand this table.

The Dowghters procede from the angle on the right hand, cleaving the myddle: where theyr generation ceaseth.

The Sonnes from the left hand to the right to the middle.

So proceding where theyr number endeth in one Centre.

The Residue thow mayst (by this Note) Vnderstande

△ Then /Michael/ he stroke ouer vs ward, with his sword, and the flame mes of fire yssued oute.

Loke to the Corner on the right hand, being the vppermost: where thow shalt finde 8. Refer thyne eye to the vpper number, and the letter aboue it. But the Number must be fownd vnder neth, because his prick so noteth.

Than procede to the names of the dowghters in the Table: and thow shalt see that it is the first name of them: This shall teache the.

△ Loking now into my first and greatest Circle for 8, I finde it wit<h> with 1 ouer it. I take this to be the first Dowghter

Vr. you must in this square Table set E by the 8. and n<ow> write them Composedly in one letter, thus Ew .

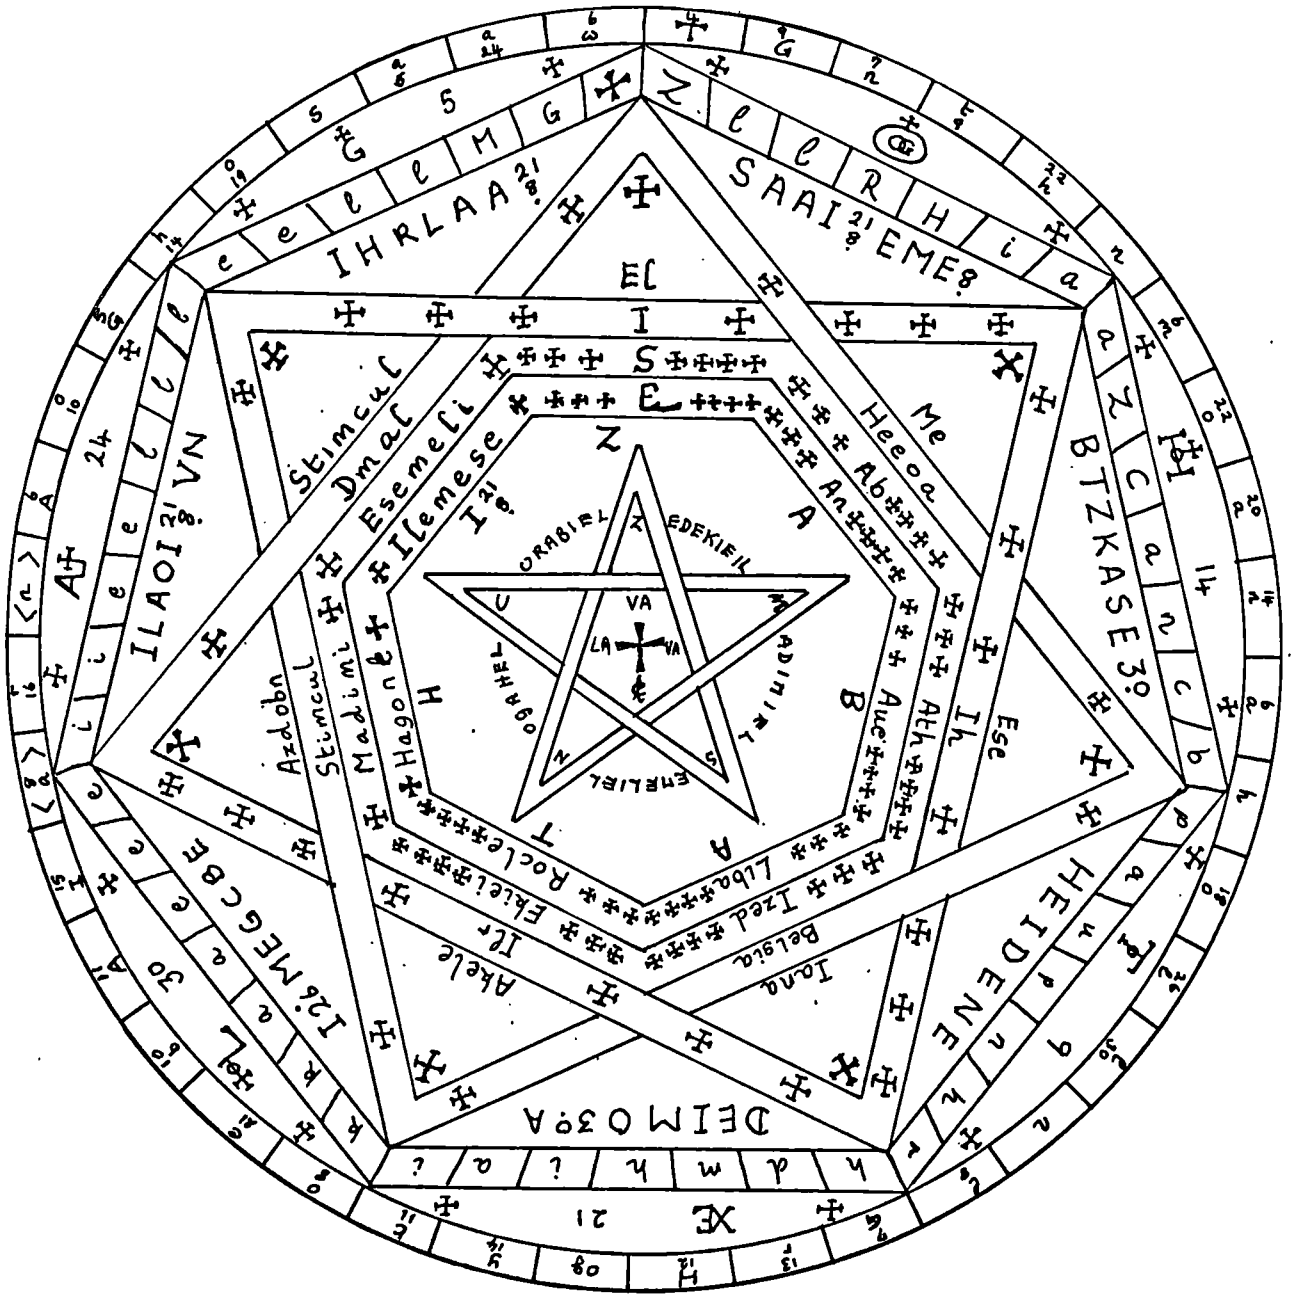
Nomen Domini viuit in aeternum.

Vr. Giue ouer, for half an howre, and thow shalt be fully instructed.

SIGILLVM DEI; AEMAETH EMETH

nuncupatum:· אֱמֶת } hebraicè

DEI אֱמֶת }



line 27: E

line 44: Note these / other pur= /poses.

[29a]

The 26 by I, serueth for another purpose: but not for this Dowghters Dowghter.

The 21, is e, and 8 with the prick vnder it is l: which togither maketh

El, or thus compownded as it were one letter, E

The Names in the great Seale must follow the Orthographie of this Table. Virtus vobiscum est.

Orate. Δ we prayed.

Δ Then there appeared SAAI$^{21}_{8}$ME. here is an E, comprehended in L

Vr. Read now the Table.

Angeli Lucis Dei nostri

Et posuit angelos illius in medio illorum

Vr. In the table are the names of 7 Angels. the first Zabathiel, beginning from the left vppermost corner: taking the corner letter first, and then that on the right hand aboue: and than that vnder the first and than the third from the first, in the vpper row: and then cornerwise down toward the left hand: and then to the fowrth letter frō the first in the vpper row: where there is I with $\frac{21}{8}$, which maketh El. So

1. have you Zabathiel.

2. Vr. Go forward. Δ So, I finde next Zedekieil.

Vr. this I in the last Syllable augmenteth the true sownd of it.

3. Δ. Then next I finde Madimiel ——— Vr. it is so.

4. △. Then ——— Semeliel ——— Vr. it is true

5. △. Then ——— Nogahel ——— Vr. it is so

6. △. Then ——— Corabiel ——— Vr. it is so.

7. △. Then ——— Leuanael ——— Vr. it is so.

Vr. Write these names in the Great Seal, next vnder the 7 names which thow wrotest last. videlicet, vnder E , An Aue etc distinctly in great letters.

Vr. Make the E and L of Zabathiel, in one letter compownded, thus ZABATHIE. In this, so fashion your E and L. And this name must be distributed in his letters into 7 sides of that innermost Heptagonum. For the other, I will teache you to dispose them. you must make for IEL (in this name onely) I with the $\frac{21}{8}$ annexed. So haue you iust 7 places.

Vr. The next fiue names thow shalt dispose in the fiue exterior angles of the Pentacle: euery angle conteyning one whole name

Vr. Set the first letters of these 5 names, (in Capitall letters) within the fiue acute internall angles of the Pentacle: and the rest of eche name following Circularly from his Capitall letter, but in the 5 exterior obtuse angles of the Pentacle.

Vr. Set Z, of Zedekieil within the angle which standeth vp toward the begynning of the greatest Circle. And so procede toward the right hand.

Vr. In the middle now of the Pentacle, make a cross ✝ like a Crucifix and write the last of those 7 names Leuanael thus

Marginal notes:

line 10: Angeli / Lucis

line 20: The true sownd line 24 RH: △ This name / Corabiel you / may see in Ele= / mētis Magicis Petri / De Abano in the / Considerations Diei ☽

[29b]

Vriel Vidit DEVS, opus suum esse bonum et cessauit a Labore suo.

Factum est.

△ Michael stode vp and sayd

The aeternall Blessing of God the FATHER

The mercifull Goodnes of CHRIST, his SONNE

The Vnspeakable Dignitie of GOD the Holy GHOSTE bless you, preserue you, and multiply your doings in his Honor and Glory.

Vriel. AMEN

Vr. These Angels are the angells of the 7 Circles of Heven, gouerning the Lightes of the .7. Circles

Blessed be GOD in vs, and by Vs

Which stand contynually before the presence of GOD for euer.

DIXI.

Δ Whan may we be so bold, as to require your help agayn.

Mic. Whan so euer you will, we are ready.

Farewell.

Δ Sit Nomen Domini benedictum, ex hoc nunc, et Vsq̄ in saecula saeculorum:
Amen
/flourish/
Anni Dni 1582. Martij. 21. At Mortlake by Richemond
/flourish/

Marginal note:

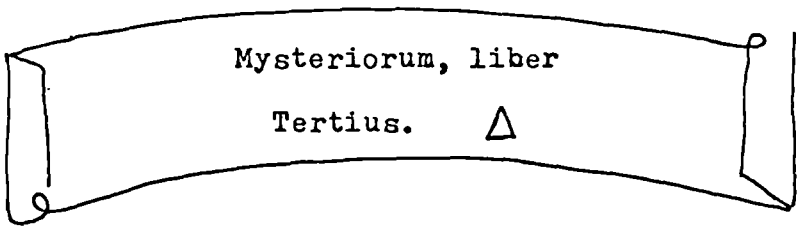
line 14 (at meeting of rules from lines 11 and 15): Note these / the order / of Angels

---

[30b]

/blank/

[31a]



Anno 1582.

Aprilis 28.

Liber: 3^us

Liber: 4^us

[31b]

/blank/

[32a]

A^o 1582. Aprilis 28. a meridie hora 4

E T. onely Michael appeared; /Δ^c:7 and to diuerse my Complayntes, and requests

sayde

Mi. The Lord shall consider the in this world, and in the world to cōme

E T. All the chayre seamed on fyre

Mi. This is one Action, in one person: I speak of you two

△ You meane vs two to be ioyned so, and in mynde vnited, as yf we wer one man

Mi. Thow vnderstandest

Take heade of punishmet for your last slaknes.

△ Yf you mean any slaknes on my behalf, Truely it was and is for lak of habilitie to buy and prepare things, appointed of you. Procure I pray you habilitie, and so shall I make spede.

E T. A great hill of gold with serpents lying on it appeared: he smyteth it with his sword, and it falleth into a mighty great water, hedlong.

Mi. Dost thow vnderstand. △ No verylie.

E T. He razed the hill away, as thowgh there had byn none: and sayd

Mi. Lo, so it is of this worldly habilitie

△ I pray you how must the lamine be hanged?

Mi As concerning the lamine, it must be hanged vnseen,

in some skarf.

The Ring when it is made, I will lessen it according to my pleasure

I meane by two Cubites, your vsuall yarde.

Haste, for thow hast many things to do.

Glory be to God, Peace vnto his Creatures, Mercy to the wicked;

Forgivenes to the Faithfull. He liueth, Ô he rayngeth, O

thow art mighty, PELE: thy name be blessed. △ Amen.

Venito Ese, △ he cryed so with a lowd voyce

E T. he is now couered, in a myghty couering of fyre, of a great beawty.

There standeth a thing before him I cannot tell what it is.

Laudate Dominum in caelis

Orate. Δ we prayed.

E T. His face remayneth couered with the fyre, but his body vncovered

Mi Adesdum Ese

Adesdum Iana.

Vobis dedit demonstrationem in Tabulis vris.

E T. There appeare of the figure, (before, imperfect) two little women:

One of them held vp a Table which lightened terribly: so that all the stone was couered: with a myst.

A voyce cam out of the myst, and sayd,

Ex hijs creata sunt et haec sūt noia illorū.

E T. The myst cleareth, and one of the women held vp a Table being thus written vppon.

Numerus Primus.

Δ The Table semed square, and full of letters and numbers, and Crosses, in diuerse places, diuersely fashioned

Δ Remēber, Ese and Iana, ar the thirdth and fowrth of the septem Filiae Bonitatis, sūp lib.° 2.° They are thus in order these, El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, Stimcul. | a finger

Marginal notes:

line 6: <V>nion / of vs <two.>

line 15: Worldly / hability.

line 19: The lamin / not simplas / spoken: for / No such Lamyn / <w>as to be / <m>ad<e> line 27: PELE

line 28: Ese

line 35: Iana

line 42: Creatio

[32b]

A finger cam out of the mist, and wyped oute, the first Shew, wit<h> the Cross, letters, and numbers.

The second was in like wise

The third was a b with the tayle vpward thus $\mathcal{g}$

The 52 with the three great B B B, seme to be couered wth Gold

The two Crossed ones he did not wipe oute with his finger.

The next he blotted oute.

He blotted not oute the three $\begin{matrix} b \\ b \\ b \end{matrix}$ with the 8 and $\mathcal{Z}$

The two barrs must go clere and not towch the

The $\overset{G}{\underset{\odot}{\square}}$, the square, wherin it standeth, is all gold:

b b b	The bars
b b b
b b' b

and that he let stand.

Five cam oute and burnt
The
is all of a bright cullour, like the brightnes of the Sonne and that was not put out.

The places are very black, but where the letters and numbers do stand.

E T. hard a voyce saying Finis Tenebrarū: Halleluyah.

E T There commeth a hand and putteth the little woman into the clowde.

Mi. Prayse God: Be inwardly mery.

The Darknes is comprehended

God bless you: God bless you: God blesse you.

You must leave of for an howre and a half: for you haue .6. other Tables to write to night.

Prayse God: be ioyfull.

/flourish/

After supper we resorted to our scholemaster.

E T. I here a voyce but see nothing: he sayeth

Initium bonum in nomine eius et est. Halleluyah.

E T. Three quarters of the stone (on the right side) are dark, the other quarter, is clere.

Mi. Venite filiae filiarū Ese

The nethermost.....

E T There come six yong maydens, all in white apparell, alike.

Now they all be gonne into the dark parte of the stone, except one

There cam a flame of fyre out of the dark, and in the flame written

Vnus on this manner

Vnus nus
nus

She that standeth without, putteth her hand into the dark: and pulleth out a ball of light: and threw it oute: and it waxed bigger and bigger: and it Thundred.

E T. A voyce sayd——— Dies primus an other voyce——— Vbi est Tabula?

an answer ——————Est, Est, Est

She wyndeth and turneth her self abowt, begynning at her hed, and s<o>

was Transformed into a Table, rownde

E T. Three faces do shew and shote oute, and ouer returne into one he<ad>

agayne: and with it cam a mervaylous swete sauour

The Table was of three cullours: white, redd, and a mixture of white and red

---

Marginal notes:

line 32: Filiae filiarū / Ese / supᵖ libᵗ. 2°.

line 33: Δ somewhat / wanting.

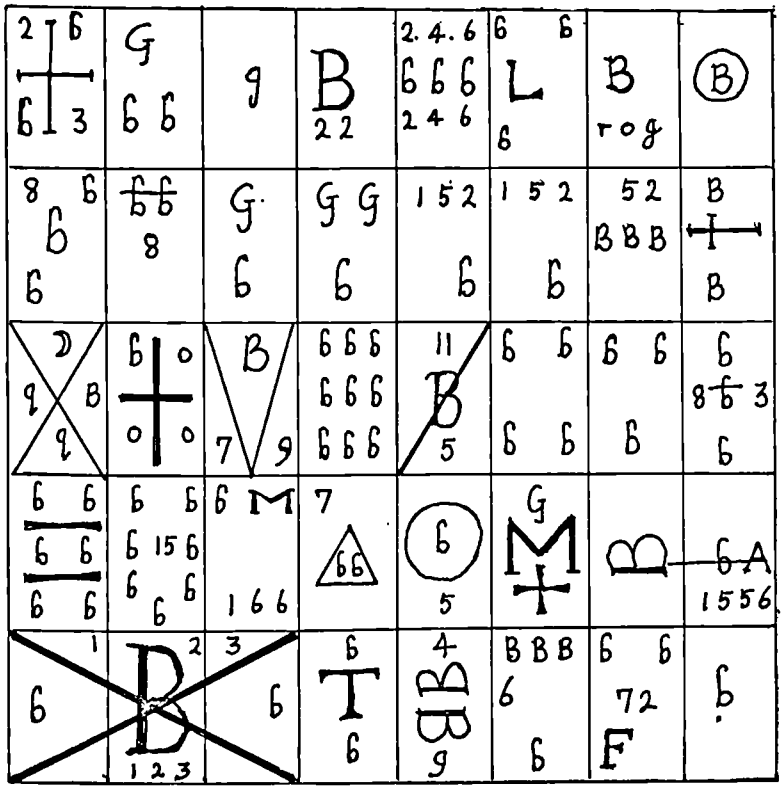
line 40: Lux

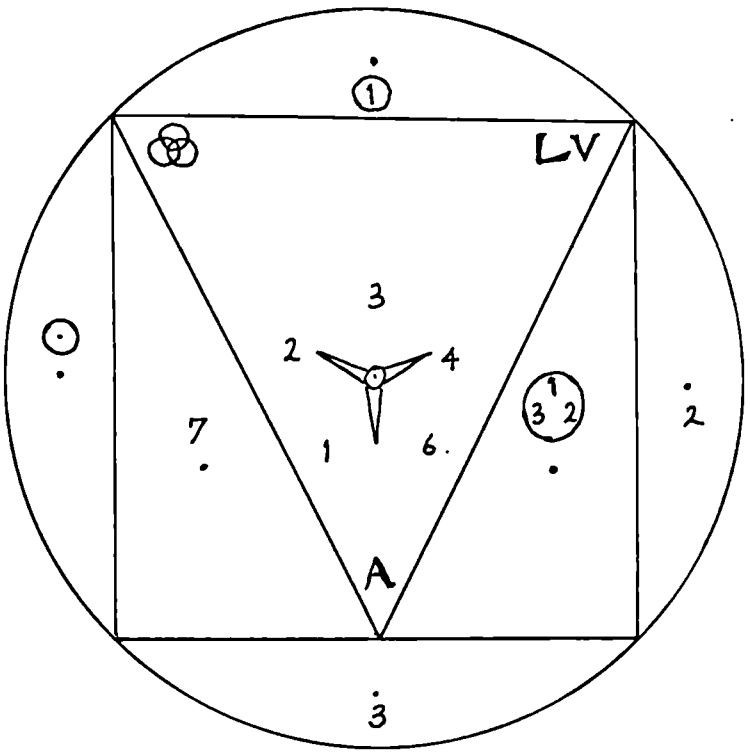
line 49: The Table / cullored

A line joins 'very black' (line 16) to 'Tenebraru' (line 17).

[33a]

Numerus Primus





Δ

Of these seven tables, Characters, or scotcheons 5

Consider the words spoken in the fifth boke A.° 1583, Aprill 28

How they are proper to every King and [pin] prince in theyr order.

They are Instruments of Conciliation

volumine 5°. wher my Character, is fashioned

G B 23	m · 30 · q B · 9 d · 4 ·	q · q · q Q B o · g og
g 30 B G 33 A	B A g O	E B get h go
5 ☾ b	d 2 id b d 2A	30 b pp
V H b 9 22	q q q Q b og a	25 b d

2 bb 2	b b	5 3 7 b b b	b B G 11	T · 13 b b b	b 9
V · 2 B	04 BB	B 14 a	b b b P. 3	b G 0	b b C : V 3
8 e b	Q · 0 7 b b	5	q q b 3	q · 9 B	b. 8
go · 30 B	q · 3 b b	q q 5 · b · b ·	d b b A	7 · 2 b · B	B B 8 3 and red, changeably. A strong sownding cam withall, as of clattring of har<ness,> or fall of waters, or such like.

There cam a sterre shoting oute of the dark, and settled it self in the myd<le> of the Table: And the fyre which cam oute with the woman, did cumpas

the Table abowt

A voyce sayd. O honor, laus et gloria, Tibi qui es, et eris.

The Table sheweth wunderfull fayre and glorious

Onely seuen priks appeare in the Table.

The three angles of the triangle open, and in the lower point appeared a great A

And in the right vpper corner LV. (E T. the Table trembled)

And in the other Corner appeared thre circles of aequall bignes, aequally, or alike intersecting eche other ⊛ by theyr centers.

A Voyce——Vnus est, Trinus est; in omni Angulo est

Omnia comprehendit: Fuit, est, et vobis erit.

Finis et Origo (E T. Ô, Ô; with a dullfull sownd he pnown/ced/

E T. The woman sayth, Fui: sum, quod non sum ...

A voyce————Lux non erat et nunc est

E T The woman being turned, from the shape of the Table, into womans shape agayn, went into the dark.

Then one part of the darknes diminished, In the dark was a mervaylous turmoyling, tossing, and stur, a long tyme during.

A voyce————For a tyme Nature can not abyde these sightes.

E T. It is become Quiet, but dark still.

A voyce.——Pray and that vehemently, For these things are not revealed without great prayer

/flourish/

E T. After a long tyme there cam a woman: and flung vp a ball like glass: and a voyce was hard saying Fiat

The ball went into the darknes, and browght with it a great white Globe hollow transparent.

Then she had a Table abowt her neck, square of 12 places

The woman seamed to daunce and swyng the Table:

Then cam a hand oute of the dark: and stroke her and she stode still, and becam fayrer: She sayd Ecce signū Incomprehensibilitatis

E T. The Woman is transformed into a water, and flyeth vp into the Globe of Light: [a voyce was hard Est, Est, Est]

/flourish/

E T. A voyce. Est, Est, Est.

E T. One commeth [out], (a Woman) out of the Dark very demurely, and soberly walking, carrying in her hand a little rownd ball: and threw it into the dark and it becam a great thing of Earth. She taketh it in her hand agayne, and casteth it vp into the rownd Globe and sayd

Fiat.

E T. She turned her back toward E T and there appeared a Table diuided in 24 partes. yt seemeth to be very Square.

A voyce.———Scribe. Veritas est.

E T. A sword cam out of the Dark: and claue the woman asunder and the one half becam a man, and the other a woman: and they went and sat vppon the Ball of clay or erth.

/flourish/

Now seemeth

Marginal notes:

line 17, over 'sum': △ forte fui

line 26: Prayer

line 36: Water.

line 42: Erth.

line 49: Man / Woman

[34b]

Now seemeth the Dark part to quake

A voyce ————Venito Vasedg

E T. There cōmeth a woman oute of the Dark: she sayd Vita hijs ex mea manu.

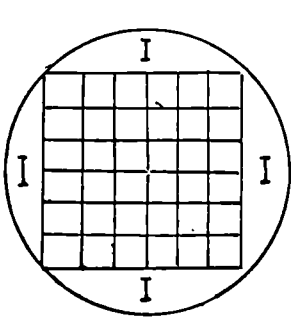
E T. She sheweth a Table Square full of holes, and many things creeping out of it. This square is within a rownd



A voyce O Lux Deus nr̄

Hamuthz Gethog

E T. Then stept out an other woman hauing a sword in her hand. She toke a thing oute of the dark

(a bright thing) and cut it in twayn and the one parte she cut into two vnaequall partes: and the other half, she cutteth into a thowsand (or innumerable) partes. Then she toke all the partes vp into her skyrt. She hath a Table, and it hangeth on her shulders

She stept before the other woman, whose hed standeth in the dark.

This woman her Table is fowresquare. She is very bewtifull:

she sayd Lumina sunt haec Intelligentiae tuae

She sayd Fere nulli Credendus est hic numerus.

This woman taketh the little peces, and casteth them vp, and they become little Sparks of light: and of the things she cast, There were two great rownd things. And they were allso cast vp to the white Transpa= rent Globe. And she went away into the Dark: which was, now, very much lessened:

Then the other woman, (who was forestept) thrust oute her hed who had the rownd conteyning the Square, with 36 places.

She crymbleth clay, and it turneth to byrds. She seameth to be like a witch. Into the bosse of her Table, she put her hand and that bosse, was in the Dark: and oute of the bosse, she seemed to fatch that Clay . she sayd

Ad vsum tuum Multiplicati sunt.

E T She went into the Dark.

/flourish/

E T. A voyce,

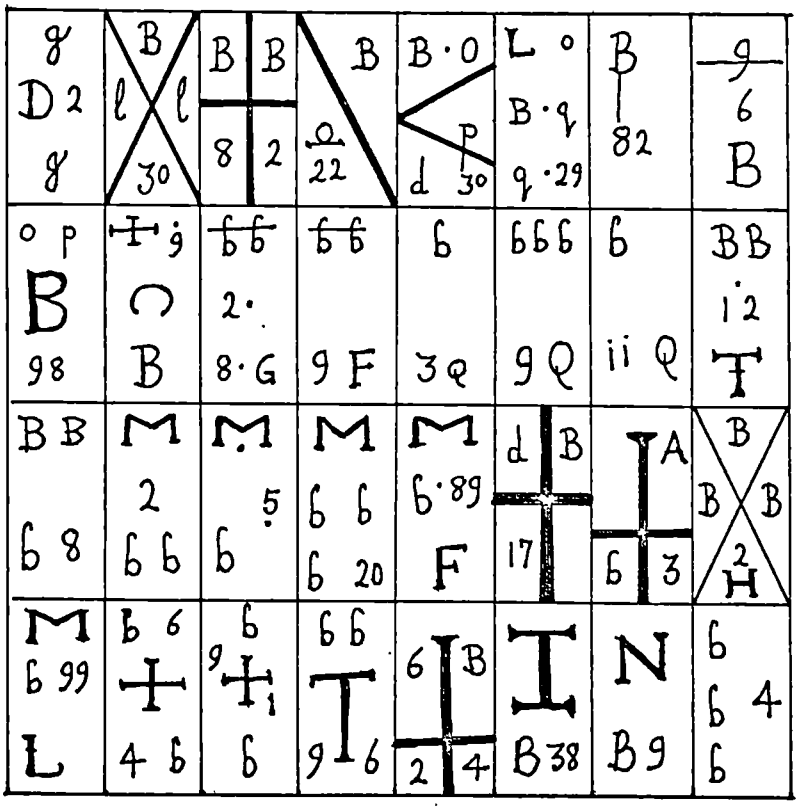
Marginal notes:

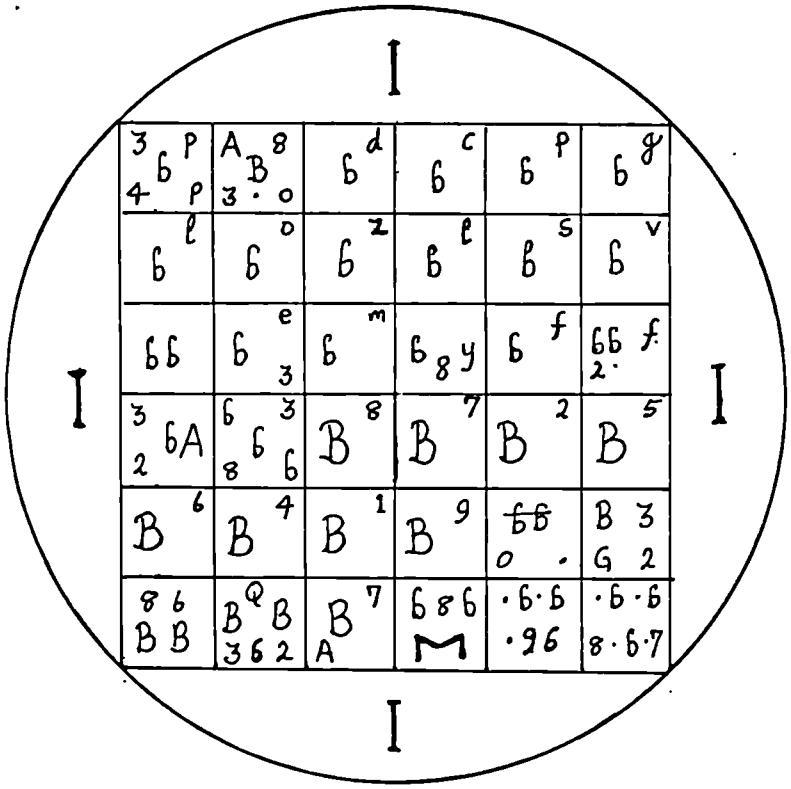
line 16: Note this / stepping / before [with a line connecting 'stepping' with 'forestept' (line 26)]

line 21: The sterrs / Sonne and / Mone / Created

Lines join 'Square' (line 5) to 'Square' (line 27), and also 'rownd' (line 6) to 'rownd' (line 27).

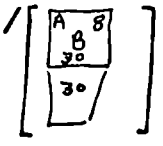
[35a]

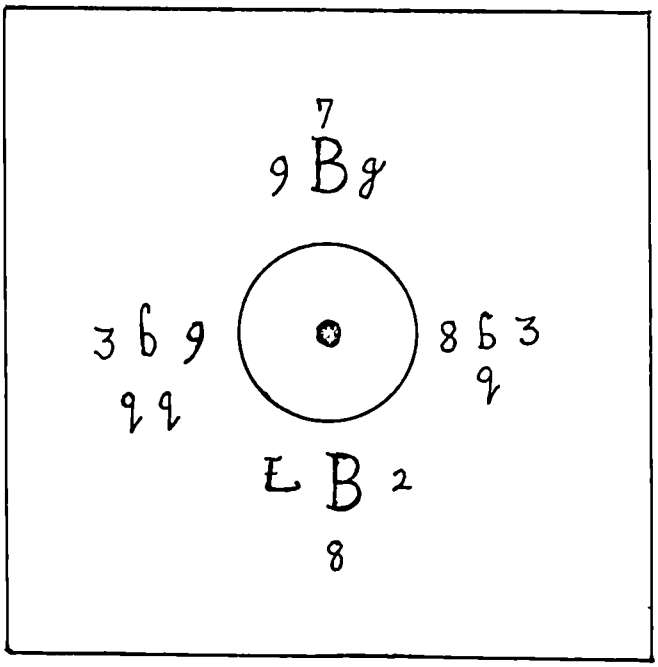




Marginal note:

bottom line of first Table: Note / the Cross / with the two / bees, the 4 and / the 6, is one of / the Notes annexed / to the second Table / of the 4 of Enochs / Tables: And the T'''' of Enochs / Tables semeth to answer / vnto the T first in / the Seale of AEmeth / and the cross allso /





[36a]

E.T: A voyce is hard saying

Omnia gaudent fine

E.T: There commeth oute a woman, out of the Dark. She plucketh at the dark, and casteth it on the grownd: and it turneth to herbes, and plants becomming like a garden. and they grow vp very fast: she sayd Opus est.

E T. She hath a fowre square Table before her.

Then cam one, all in white, and taketh the Darknes, and wrappeth it vp and casteth it into the myddle of the Erthen Globe, on which appeared Trees and Plants.

E.T: Then appered Michael, his Chayre, and Table agayne manifestly, which all this while, were not seen.

Mi Obumbrabit vestigia v̄ra veritatis Luce

The Actor, The Actor, The Actor:

One Disposer; he, which is one in all; and All in all:

bless you from the wickednes of Deceyte: Create you new vessels: To whome I commyt you.

E.T: he holdeth his sword over vs, in manner, out of the stone.

Mi Fare Well. Serue God. Be patient

Hate vayne glorie. Liue iustly. Amen.

Δ What spede shall I make for the yard square Table, the Wax, the Seale, and the Character? Mi. As thow ar motioned, so do.

Δ Gloria P̄ri et F et SS. S.e.i.p.e.n.e./s̄.e.c/i,ss. amen,

/flourish/

Δ Note, All the Tables before were by E T, letter by letter noted out of the stone standing before him all the while: and [so wer] the [my] Tables following wer written by me as he repeted them orderly out of the stone.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 4: hearbs / &c

line 8: <...> Centre <D>arknes.

Aprilis 29: Sonday: Nocte hora 8¼.

E.T. Two appeare Michael and Vriel.

Mi. Et posuit illos in ministerium eius.

Quid desideratis?

Δ Sapientiam et Scientiam nobis necessariā, et in Dei servito potentem ad eius gloriam.

Mi Sapere, a Deo: Scire a Creatura et ex creaturis est.

Δ
Vr. Venite filiae

E.T: Seuen women appeare bewtifull and fayre

Mi. This work is of wisdome (Δ sayd Michael, and stode vp).

E T, sayd to me (Δ), He putteth oute his sword and willeth me to sweare, to that, that he willeth me: and to follow his cownsayle.

Mi. Wilt thow Δ Then with much ado, E T sayd as followeth

E T. I promise, in the name of God the Father, God the sonne and God the holy ghost, to pforme that you shall will me, so far as it shall lye in my powre.

E.T. Now they two seeme to confer to gither

Mi. Now you towche the world, and the doings vppon earth.

Now we shew vnto you the lower world: The Gouernors that work and rule vnder God: By whome you may haue

powre

Marginal notes:

line 36:⟨Δ⟩ I am not sure / if it wer Mi. / or Vr, that / <c>alled for thē line 42: <E>.T. his / romise line 48: <Pr>actise. / The lower world

[36b]

powre to work such things, as shalbe to god his glorie, profit all your Cuntrie, and the knowledge of his Creatures

What I do wish to do, thow shalt here /c know/, before thow go.

We procede to One GOD, one knowledge, one Operation.

Venite filiae 5

Behold these Tables: Herein lye theyr names that work vnder

/c vnder/ <Light> God vppon earth: not of the wicked, but of Angels of

/c light/ (<in> The Whole Gouernment, doth consist in the hands of 49:

(in God his Powre, Strength, Mercy, and Justice) whose nam<es> Names are here euident, excellent, and glorious 10

Mark these Tables: Mark them. Record them to your <.....>

This is the first knowledge. Here shall you hau<e> haue Wisdome Halleluyah.

Mighty and Omnipotent art thow, O God, God, God, God, amongst thy Creatures. Thow fillest all thing<s> things with thy excellent foresight: Thy Glorie be be amongst vs, for euer. Δ Amen. 15

E.T. All the 7 (which here appeare) ioyne theyr Tables in One: One, Which, before they held apart. And they be of this Forme all to gither. The myddelmost is a great Square 20 and on eche side of it, One, as big as it, ioyning close to it

And ouer it ioyned two, which both togither wer aequall to it: and vnder it, wer such other two, as may appe<are> in this little pattern. Being thus ioyned, a bright Circle did cumpas and enclose them all, thus: but nothing was in the Circle.

E T: one

Marginal notes:

line 3: To E T. he / spake line 5: Filiae line 7: .49. good / Angels / Governors.

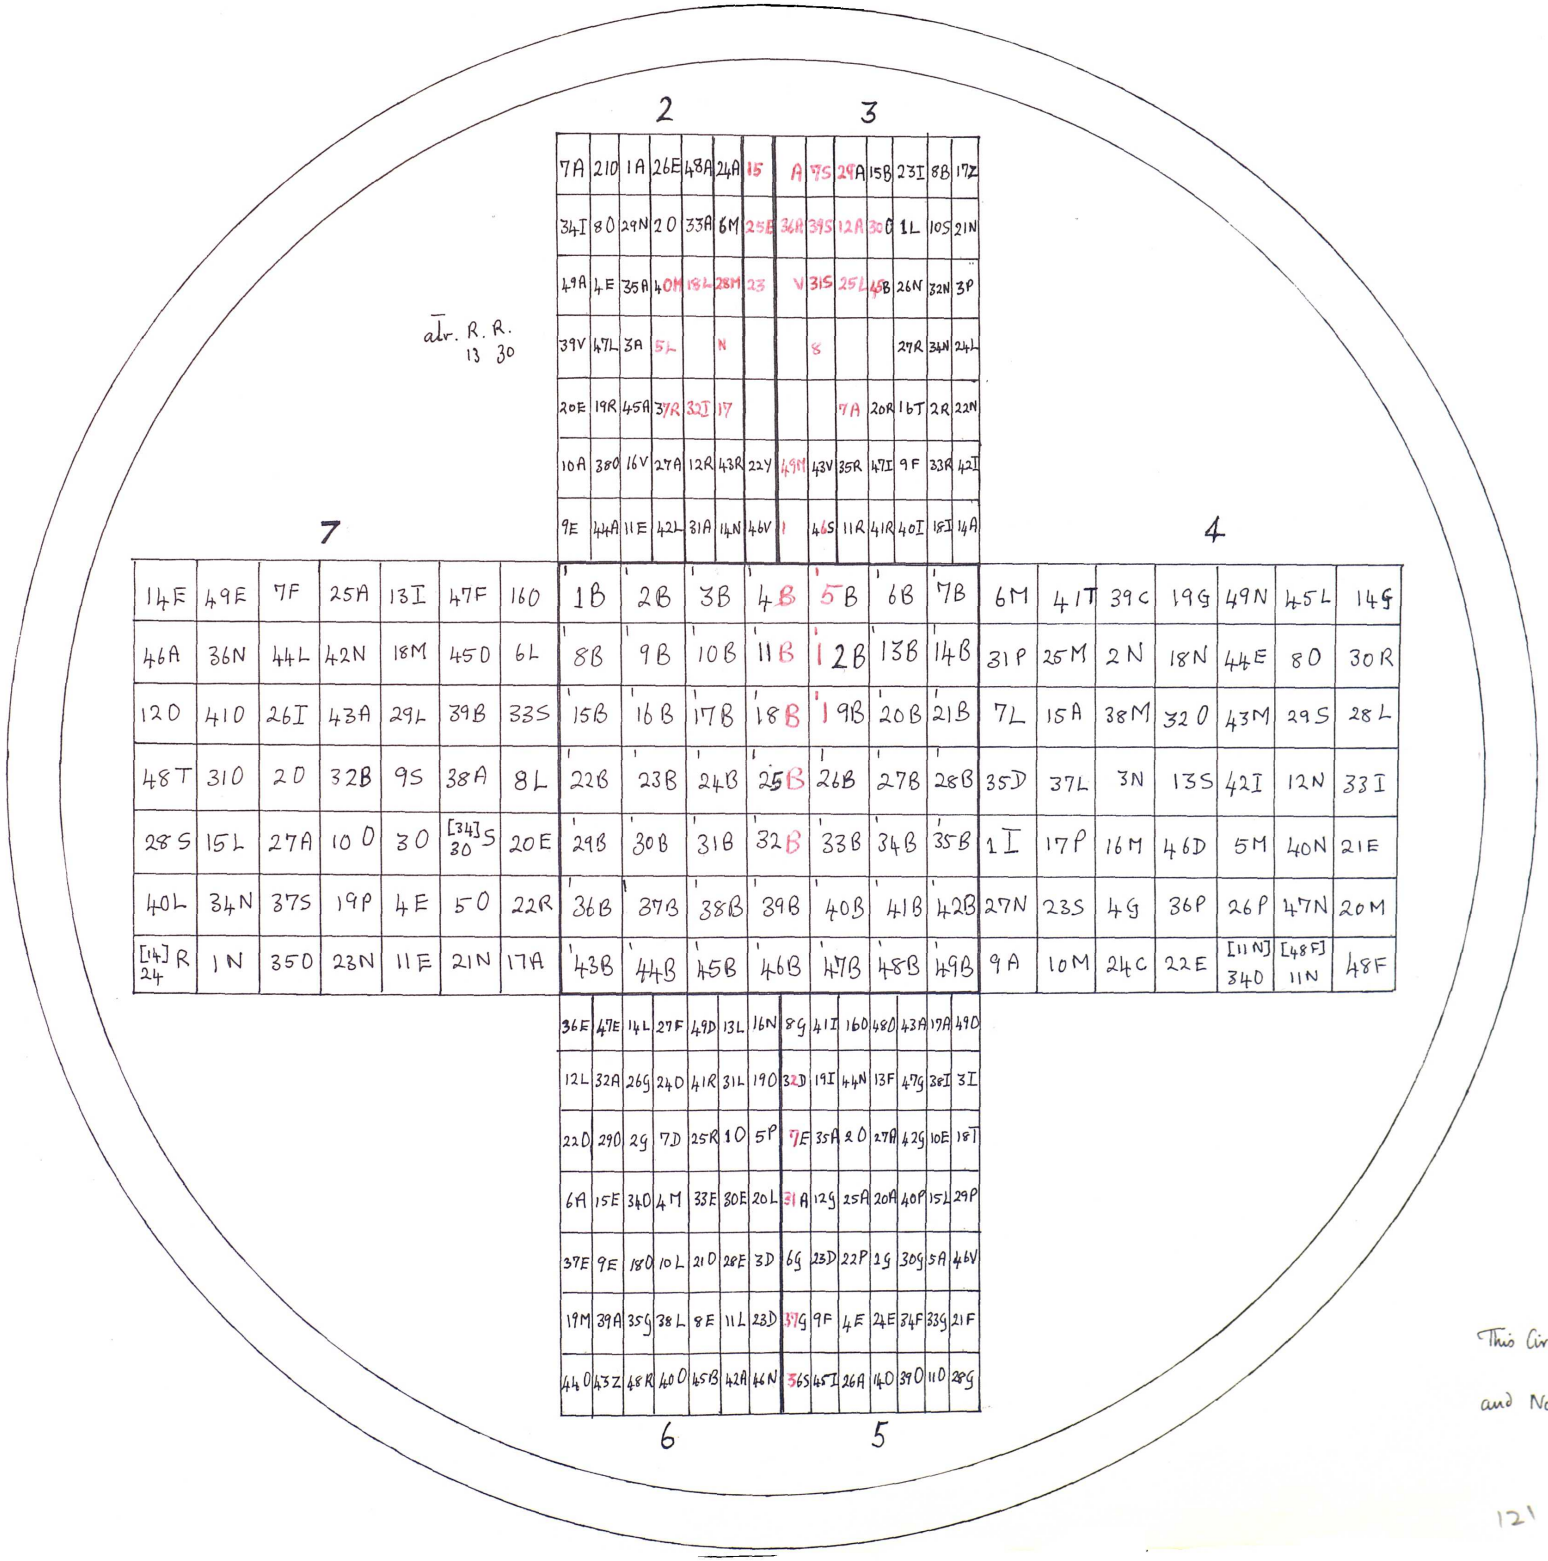
line 1 : The / first / know= /ledg

[37a]

/blank/



14E	49E	7F	25A	13I	47F	16O
46A	36N	44L	42N	18M	45O	6L
12O	41O	26I	43A	29L	39B	33S
48T	31O	2O	32B	9S	38A	8L
28S	15L	27A	10O	3O	[34]S 30	20E
40L	34N	37S	19P	4E	5O	22R
[14]R 24	1N	35O	23N	11E	21N	17A

1B	2B	3B	4B	5B	6B	7B
8B	9B	10B	11B	12B	13B	14B
15B	16B	17B	18B	19B	20B	21B
22B	23B	24B	25B	26B	27B	28B
29B	30B	31B	32B	33B	34B	35B
36B	37B	38B	39B	40B	41B	42B
43B	44B	45B	46B	47B	48B	49B

6M	41T	39C	19G	49N	45L	14G
31P	25M	2N	18N	44E	8O	30R
7L	15A	38M	32O	43M	29S	28L
35D	37L	3N	13S	42I	12N	33I
1I	17P	16M	46D	5M	40N	21E
27N	23S	4G	36P	26P	47N	20M
9A	10M	24C	22E	[11N] 34O	[48F] 11N	48F

36E	47E	14L	27F	49D	13L	16N
12L	32A	26G	24D	41R	31L	19O
22D	29O	2G	7D	25R	1O	5P
6A	15E	34O	4M	33E	30E	20L
37E	9E	18O	10L	21D	28E	3D
19M	39A	35G	38L	8E	11L	23D
44O	43Z	48R	40O	45B	42A	46N

8G	41I	16O	48O	43A	17A	49D
32D	19I	44N	13F	47G	38I	3I
7E	35A	2O	27A	42G	10E	18T
31A	12G	25A	20A	40P	15L	29P
6G	23D	22P	1G	30G	5A	46V
37G	9F	4E	24E	34F	33G	21F
36S	45I	26A	14O	39O	11D	28G

altr. R. R.
13 30

forte I, ao in Baligon

This Circle about was bright and Nothing in it.

[38b]

/blank/

[39a]

E.T: one stept furth, and sayde,

Wilt thow haue witt, and wisdome

Here, it is. (△ pointing to the middle table)

An other sayd, the Exaltation and Gouernment of Princis, is in my hand. (△ pointing to that on the left hand of the two vppermost)

In Cownsayle and Nobilitie, I prevayle (△ pointing to the other of the two vppermost: which is on the right hand)

The Gayne and Trade of Merchandise, is in my hand: Lo, here it is.

△ he pointed to the great table on the right side of the myddle Table that I meane which is opposite to our right hand while we behold

those 7 Tables.

The Qualitie of the Earth and waters, is my knowledge and I know them: and here, it is: (△ pointing to that on the right hand of the two lowermost.

The motion of the Ayre, and those that moue in it, are all known to me. Lo here they are. (△ pointing to the other Table below, on the left hand.

I signifie wisdome: In fire is my Gouernmēt. I was in the be= gynning, and shalbe to the ende (△ pointing to the great table on the left hand of the Middle Table.

Mi. Marke these Mysteries: For, this knowne, the State of the whole earth is known, and all that is thereon. Mighty is God, yea mighty is he, who hath Composed for euer. Giue diligent eye. Be wise, mery, and pleasant in the Lorde; in Whose Name, NOTE,

Begynne the Myddle Table etc △ I wrote oute of the stone the whole 7 Tables (as you see them here with theyr numbers and letters) while E.T. did vew them in the stone, and orderly express them.

△ As concerning 39 V. 47 L in the second Table, where are 7 places:

and there but 6 numbers and letters, and yet euery place semeth to haue a letter, in the iudgemēt of E T his sight. Which is the Number and letter wanting, and where must it be placed?

Mi. Non potestis hoc videre sine ratione.

△ The Next day, as I was loking on the Tables being finished, and ioyned all to gither in One Compownd Figure: [and] E T, cam to me, and stode by me, and his ey was on the forsayd place which I was forced to leaue empty, in the 7th and last. And behold he saw houering and hopping in the ayre /.c.7 ouer the sayd place, and the next before it:

And that, which I had placed the sixth, was to be put in the seuenth place, and that which was wanting, was to be set in the sixth place being 30.N.

E.T. Euery of the 7 Tables, as they wer written out of the stone do seme afterward to burn all in fyre: and to stand in fyre

E.T: After all the Tables wer written, eche toke [her] his Table aparte agayn and stode in theyr order.

E.T. Note moreouer, The First, had Bokes in hi[r]s hand

Kings ——————— The Second, a Crown in hi[r]s hand

Nobilitie ——————The Third, Robes

Merchants——△—$A\overline{q}^{a}$ ——The fowrth, $\overline{aial}$ quadrupes vlul $\overline{olm}$ colorū

Terra—The fifth, Herbes

Aer——The sixth, a fanne

Ignis—The seventh, a Flame of fyre [illegible]

[illegible] Doe [illegible]

Marginal notes:

line 12: <△> I mar= / <v>ayle that the / <Ea>rth and ate[illegible] are / <her>e ascribed to one.

line 34: △ / This I enter= / sert now; / though it wer / [illegible] at the / first Noting line 38: < /.^{c}.7 t>wo numbers and / <t>wo letters cuppl[illegible] to them.

A line joins 'wisdome' (line 2) and 'wisdome' (line 19).

[illegible]

Decedite in $\overline{noie}$ eius, qui vos huc misit.

E.T:—Vriel opened a boke in his own hand, and sayde

Vr.—— The Fountayne of wisdome is opened. Nature shalb<e> knowne: Earth with her secrets disclosed.
The Elements with theyr powres iudged
Loke, if thow canst (in the name of God) vnderstand [illegible] Tables. △ No: Not yet.

Vr. Beholde, I teache. There are .49. Angels glorious an <excellent> /excellent/appointed for the governmēt of all earthly actions. W[illegible] 4<9 doe> do work and dispose the will of the C[illegible] ted from
t<he>

the begynning in strength, powre, and glorie:

These shalbe Subject vnto you, In the Name, and by Inv<o>

Invo= cating vppon the Name of GOD, which doth lighten, dispose a<nd>

and Cumfort you

By them shall you work in the quieting of the estates, In lerning learning of wisdome: pacifying the Nobilitie; Iudgement in the the rest, aswell in the depth of waters, Secrets of the Ayre, as in t<he>

as in the bowells and entralls of the Earth,

Vr. Theyr Names are comprehended within these Tables. Lo, he /teaches/ teacheth he teacheth. Lo he instructeth, which is holy, and most highest Take hede, thow abvse not the Excellency, nor ovvershadow it with with Vanitie. But stick firmely, absolutely, and perfectly, in the Love

Love of God (for his honor) to gither

Be mery in him: Prayse his name. Honor him in his Saincts. Behold =hold him in wisdome: And shew him in vnderstanding.

Glorie be to him; To the ô Lord, whose name perseth through the earth

Earth, Glorie be to the, for euer. Δ. Amen, Amen, Amen.

Vr Lo, I will breifly teache the: you shall Know the Mysteries in him:

him, and by him, which is a Mysterie in all things.

The letters are standing vppon 7 equall numbers. The Number before before them is signifying, teaching and instructing (frō the first Table Table to the last,) which are the letters that shalbe ioyn*d togither:

begynning all, with B, according to the disposition of the number

/number^{c}7 vntyll the 29 /97 generall names be known. The first 29 are more more excellent than the rest. Euery Name doth consist vpon the quantitie =tity of the place: Euerie place with addition bringeth furth his name, name which are 49.———I haue sayde———

Δ I pray you to tell me the first Name. Vr. The first name is BALI/CON/GON

Mi I haue to say to the*, and so haue I done

Δ Now he spake to E T, of the matter he sware him to, at the begynning of

of this last Instruction: and he told me after ward what Michael had willed willed and moved him vnto. Wherat he seamed very sore disqu- : and sayd this to me to me E.T: He sayd that I must betake my self to the world, and to the world. That is that I shold marry. Which thing to do, is no na= naturall Inclination: neyther with a safe Conscience may I do it, contrary ry to my vow and profession. Wherefore I think and hope, there is is some other meaning in these theyr wordes.

Mi Thow must of force kepe it:

Thow knowest our mynde.

Δ Deo opt. Max^{o} ois honor laus et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

Ended hora noctis, 11½^{a} circiter.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 2: a boke

line 9: Erthly Actions

line 12: Practise

line 23: We two / to gither line 31: *Δ / Vide ipam / Tabulam ho= / rū 49 nolm / Collectā, pa= / gina sequente

line 34: The first 29

line 39: *Le ment / to E T.

line 44: E.T must / marry

[40a]

Tabula Collecta: 49 Angelorū Bonorū, Noia continens □ per Δ

1	BALIGON
2	BORNOGO
3	Bapnido
4	Besgeme
5	Blumapo
6	Bmamgal
7	Basledf
8	BOBOGEL
9	BEFAFES
10	Basmelo
11	Bernole
12	Branglo
13	Brisfli
14	Bnagole
15	BABALEL

16	BVTMONO
17	Bazpama
18	Blintom
19	Bragiop
20	Bermale
21	Bonefon
22	BYNEPOR
23	BLISDON
24	Balceor
25	Belmara
26	Benpagi
27	Barnafa
28	Bmilges
29	BNASPOL
30	BRORGES
31	Baspalo
32	Binodab
33	Bariges
34	Binofo[s]n
35	Baldago
36	BNAPSEN
37	BRALGES
38	Bormila
39	Buscnab
40	Bminpol
41	Bartiro
42	Bliigan
43	BLVMAZA
44	BAGENOL
45	Bablibo

46	Busduna
47	Blingef
48	Barfort
49	Bamnode

[40a]

/blank/

[41a]

Coordinatio Angelorū bonorū 49, per Jo. Dee, ita disposita:

/blank/

[42a]

Liber <4.>

<1>2.> Fryday Maij 4. hor 2½ a meridie

Δ E.T: wold not willingly now deale with the former Creatures: vtterly <m>islik<ing> and discrediting them, bycause they willed him to marry. Neyther wold a put of his hat in any prayer to god, for the Action with them: where= vppon I went into my Oratorie, and called vnto God, for his diuine help for the vnderstanding of his laws and vertues [knowing and vnderstanding] which he hath established in and amongst his Creatures, for the benefyt of mankinde, in his seruice, and for his glorie etc

And comming to the Stone, E,T. saw there those two, whom which vnto, we wer instructed to be Michael and Vriel.

E,T: Michael and Vriel, both kneled holding vp theyr hands: and Michael seamed to sweat water abundantly, somwhat reddish or bluddish.

There cam 7 Bundells down, (like faggots) from heven ward. And Michael taketh them kneeling. And Vriel taketh a thing like a superaltare and layeth it vppon the Table: and with a thing like a Senser doth make perfume at the fowre corners of the Table: the smoke ascending vp:

and the senser, at the last, being set on the Table it seemed to fall throwgh

the Table

VRIEL semeth to be all in a white long robe tucked vp: his garment full of plightes and seemed now to haue wyngs (which, hitherto, from the begynning of these kinde of Actions he did not) and on his hed a bewtifull crown, with a white Cross ouer the Crown.

Vriel taketh the .7. Bundells from Michael: and with reuerence layeth them on the forsayd Superaltare.

E:T. there commeth a man, as thowgh he were all of perfect pure glistring gold: somtyme seeming to haue One eye, and somtyme three.

From vnder the Table commeth a great smoke, and the place semeth to shake.

Vriel lieth now prostrate on his face: and Michael contynually prayed sweating

The Glorious man seemed to open the Covering of the 7 bundells (being of diuerse cullored sylk,) and there it appered, that al se Bundells seemed to haue in them, of all Creatures some, in most glorious shew.

The glorious man seemed to stand vppon a little hill of flaming fyre

He taketh of, of one of the Bundells a thing like a little byrd; and it hoouerth affore him as thowgh it had life: and than it rested vppon the thing like a superaltare

This glorious man seemeth to be open before, and his brest somwhat spotted with blud. He hath a berd forked of brownish cullour. his heare of his hed, long, hanging down to his sholders: but his face, for beutifull glittring, can not be discerned. His heares do shake, as thowgh the wynde carryed them.

This man blesseth the bird, making a Cross ouer it: and, so he did three tymes. He looketh vp to heven.

Now the byrd, which, before, seamed to be but as byg as a sparrow, seameth to be as great as a swanne: very beutifull: but of many cullours.

Now looketh Michael vp, and held vp his hands to heven, and sayeth

Sic, Sic, Sic, Deus noster.

Vriel, (sayd)——Multiplicabit omnia, benedictione sua.

The former Bewtifull man taketh this fowle, setteth it on the bun[illegible]ll, and on the place, from whence it was taken: And, now, the place where

Marginal notes:

line 4: E.T. is to / marry line 20: Vriel his / manner / of appari= / tion line 26: A Glorious / man.

line 35: All Creatures.

line 41: A / A description of / of the glorious / man.

line 49: Many / Many cullours in all / all his garmēts are / ar shewed in se= / sequentibus libris line 53: Δ

[42b]

where this byrd stode before, seameth allso, to be (proportionally) wa<x ..>

as big, as the byrd, (thus enlarged).

this man taketh an other byrd, and putteth the wyng of it, beh<ind>

the wing of the first (as thowgh he yoked them

This second byrd, at this his first taking, was as byg, as the <first .....>

was become, (encreased, as it shewed), and it was allso a very bew<tifull....>

E.T: All is suddenly dark, and nothing to be seen, neyther Chayre, <nor> any thing els.

E.T: a voyce was hard, like Michael his voyce, saying,

It was a byrd, and it is a byrd, absent there is nothing but Quantitie

△ A voyce. Beleue. The world is of Necessitie: His Necessit<y>

is gouerned by supernaturall Wisdome

N cessarily you fall: and of Necessitie shall rise ag<ain>

Follow me, Loue me: embrace me: behold, I, AM.

E.T: Now all the Darknes vanished, the man is gone. Vriel standeth at the Table: and Michael sitteth now in his Chayre: and sayd

Mi. This doth GOD work for your vnderstanding

It is in vayne to stryve: All Government is in his hands

What will you els, what will you els?

△ Progressum et profectum in virtute et veritate ad Dei honorē et gloriam.

Mi This hath answered all our Cauillations

△ What hath answered all our Cavillations?

Mi Now hast written

One thing you shall see more, as a persuasion to the Infirmitie.

E.T: The two byrds, which were there, before, [are] and gon out of sight, now are shewed agayn: but none of the bundells appere

They seme to grow to a huge bigness, as byg as mowntaynes: incredibly byg: and they seeme to hover vp in the ayre, and to fly vp toward heuen, and with [theyr wing] theyr wings to towch the sky: And one of them with his bill seemeth to take sterrs into it: and the other /bird/ to

to take them from the same byrd, and to place them agayn in the Skye.

And this they did very often: and in diuerse places of the heuen with great celeritie.

After this they semed to fly ouer Cities, and townes, and to break clowdes in peces, as they passed: and to cause all dust to flye from all walls, and towres, as they passed, and so to make them clene:

cl And in the streetes, as these two Byrds flew, seemed diuerse brave fellows, like bisshops, and Princis and Kings, to pass: and by th wyngs of these byrds, they were striken down. But Simple Seely ones, like beggers, lame and halt, Childern, and old ar d men, and women, seemed to pass quietly, vntowched and vnouerthrown of these two Byrds.

And than they seemed to come to a place, where they lifted vp, wi h

[theyr wyngs] the endes of theyr wyngs, fowre Carkasses of dead me (owte of the grownde) with crownes on theyr heads: wherof

one seemed to be a Childe

First

Marginal notes:

line 3: <The Yoa>king / <or cup>pling of / <the> two byrds line 12: Δ / E.T: sayd the / Voyce to be / like Michael / his voyce.

line 14: Necessitie.

line 19: Vayne to / strive.

line 22: Δ / fortè your line 30: The byrds towch / the sky and / sterrs

[43a]

First these 4, seemed leane, and deade: Then they seemed qui<ck> /quick/ (c) and in good liking: And they being raysed vp: parted eche fro<m> other, and went into 4 sundry wayes, Est, West, North and Sowth.

Now these two fowles hauing theyr wings ioyned togither, light vppo<n> a great hill: and there the First fowle gryped the erth mightily and there appeared diuerse Metalls, and the /caret/ Fowle spurned them away still,

Then appeared an old mans hed, heare and all on. very much wythered. They tossed it betwene them, with theyr feete: And they brake it: And in the hed appeared (in steede of the braynes) a stone, rownd, of the bignes of a Tennez ball of 4, cullours, White, black, red, and greene

One of them (he that brake the Skull) putteth that rownd stone to the others mowth or byll.

The other eateth or nybbleth on it, and so doth the other allso

¶ Now these two byrds, are turned into men: And eche of them haue two Crownes like paper crownes, white and bright, but seeme not to be syluer. Theyr teeth are gold. and so likewise theyr hands, feete, tung, eyes, and eares likewise

All gold

On eche of these two men, ar 26 Crownes of Gold, on theyr right sholders, euery of them, greater then other

They haue, by theyr sides, Sachels, like palmers bags, full of gold. and they take it oute, and seemed to sow it, as corne, going or stepping forward, like Seedmen.

E.T: Then sayd Michael, This, is the ende.

E.T: The two men be vanished away.

Mi. Learne the Mysterie hereof.

Δ Teache vs (ô ye spirituall Creatures). than sayd Michael,

Mi.—Joye and helth giue vnto the riche:

Open strong locks:

Be Mercifull to the wicked:

Pluck vp the poore:

Read vnto the Ignorant:

I haue satisfyed the: Vnderstand:

Read them ouer: God shall giue the some light in them. I haue satisfyed the: Both, How you shalbe ioyned,

By whome,

To what Intent, and purpose:

what you are,

what you were,

What you shalbe, (videlicet) in Deo.

Lok vp this Mysterie:

xForget not our Cownsayle:

Ô GOD

Marginal notes:

lines 3-5: ⌈some faint marks remain on damaged margin⌋ line 6: <Great> hill

line 22: 26. / Crownes

line 45: x to E T:

[43b]

O GOD, thow openest all things: Secret are thy Mysteries and holy is thy name, for euer
The Vertue of his presence, here left, be amongst you.

Δ Amen

Δ What am I to do, with the wax, the Table, the ring or the Lamine? etc

Mi. When the things be ready, then thow shalt know, how to vse ỹ.

Δ How shall I do for the grauing of the ring: May not a no... man do it, thowgh, E.T, graue it not?

Mi. Cause them to be made vp, (according to Instruction) by any hoonest

Δ What say you as concerning the Chamber, for our practise. May my furdermost little chamber, serue, yf the bed be taken d<owne> downe. Mi At the next Call for the Chamber, you shall know what to do to doe. Δ Benedictus Deus in donis suis:

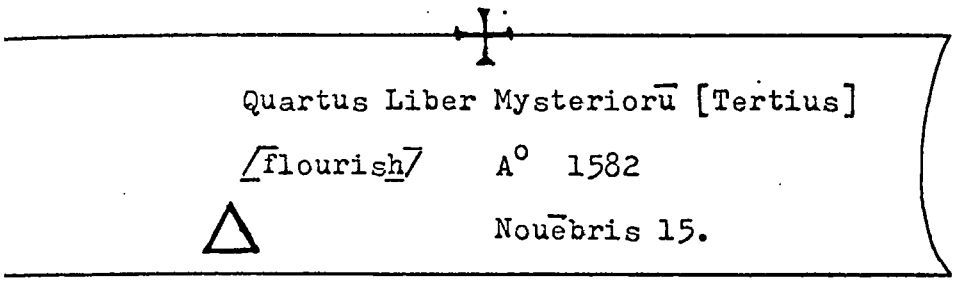
et sanctus in omnibus operibus [suis] eius.

Amen. ended hor. $4\frac{1}{2}$.

/flourish/

[44a]



Quartus Liber Mysteriorū [Tertius]

/flourish/ A° 1582

△ Nouēbris 15.

Post reconciliationē Kellianam ∴ /flourish/

Miserere nri Deus

Dimitte nobis, sicut et nos dimittimus

Liber. 5us

[44b]

/blank/

△ Note. For, of Hagonel △ Carmara, otherwise Baligo<n. Vide.....>

we never had any thing before.

<On>e (of the 7 which was by him) he who stode before him, w^th his face fro<mward> him, now turned his face to him ward.

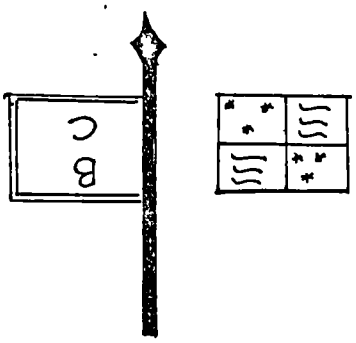
<卄/—> Regnat potestas tua in filijs

Ecce signū Operis.



△ There appeared these two letters, euersed and aversed, in a white flag: and a woman standing by, whose armes did not appere

<卄/> Note. my name is Carmara.

<△—> On the other side of the flag, appeared the armes of England. The flag /seemed old/ [sem<ed>] /o<ld>/

Adhuc duo, et tempus non est, (△, sayd the man which stode before

Carmara. and lifted vp his hand and avaunced his body: and the other 6 gaue him place. he spred his armes abroad: and so turned rownd toward all the multitude (appering within the Globe:) as if he wold require audience. he sayd than thus.

The Sonnes of men, and theyr sonnes are subiect vnto my comaundemēt

This is a mystery. I haue spoken of it. Note it throwghly.

They ar my seruants. By them thow shalt work mervayles. I gouern for a tyme: My tyme is yet to come The Operation of the Earth is subiect to my powre: And I am the first of the twelve: my seale is called Barees: and here it is ⊙ (△ This he held in the palm of his hand: as thowgh it had byn a ring, hanging also over his myd=

dle fingers. with a great voyce he sayd Come ô ye people of the erth:

.1. (Δ Then there came a great Number of onely Kings from amongst the rest of the multitude within the Globe. They kneele down; and some kyssed his seale and some did stand frowning at it. These kings that kissed it, had, each of them, a sword in one hand, and a payre of Ballance in the other: the balances being euen, and cownterpeysed. But the other had also ballances, which hong vneven, the one scale lower then the other. The euen balanced kings were of glad cheare: but the other wer of sowre and hevy cowntynance

It is, and shalbe so: And the workmanship of this, is to this ende.

Then cam noble men: (Δ and he held vp his hand, and they parted them selues into two Cumpanyes. and ouer the heds of them, appered

.2. these two wordes Vera, over one Cumpany:and Impuria over the other

....
....
..... etc ..... etc

Verus cum veris, et Impurus cum Impuris

Come ô ye Princes of Nature. (Δ Then cam in Auncient and grim

.3. Cowntenanced men in black gownes: of all manner of sortes Diuerse of them had bokes: and some had stiks like measures: and they parted into two Cumpanies. Eyther Cumpany had his principall. One of these Cumpanies fell at debate among them selues. The other Cumpany stode still. There appeared before eche of these Cumpanyes a great boke Vppon the bokes was written: on the one, Lucem; and on the other,

Mundi tenebras. The Forman [(or Principall)] spred his hands ouer them, and they all fell down: and the boke with Lucem on it 45 waxed bright

Marginal notes:

line 16: /B/agenol

line 17: Filij Filij & Filij / Filij Filiorū supra / sup libro 2°.

line 20: Kings / <Kin>gs of the erth / etc line 21: Earth

line 22: :12.

line 23: Barees

line 24: ⊙

line 25: All people / of the Erth.

line 26: Kings

lines 29-30: /part of a sketch of a pair of evenly balanced scales and a sketch of a sword/lines 31-32: /part of a sketch of a pair of scales unevenly balanced in favour of the right hand side/line 35: No= / Noble men line 42: Philosophers line 21, over 'a tyme': Δ gouerns line 21, over 'my tyme': Δ particular or my governmet lasteth not line 44, over 'measures': Δ Geometrae

At the foot of the page: Δ / He hath recyted the offices of [three] /two/ Kings, as of Blumaza and Bobogel / And then he sayeth, Gather by these few spriggs etc: which Bobogel is over the Nobility and written of / < Wisdome of Metalls, & all Nature > lines join: '△' (line 1) to 'I haue spoken' (line 19),

'Regnat' (line 6) to 'Philosophers' (MN 42),
'in filijs' (line 6) to 'the Sonnes' (line 18),
'Carmara' (line 11) to 'twelve' (line 22) and thence to 'O' in the diagram (lines 5-9),
'the man' (line 13) to 'first' (line 22),
'come' (line 21) to '.3.' (line 43).

[45b]

waxed bright: and they which attended on that boke (Lucem) <departed>

Gather by these few spriggs the Cumpas of the whole le field.

△ I demaunded of him, what his name was: and he answered

I am Primus et Quartus Hagonel

△ This Pri: Quar, shewed his /the/ seal ⊙ to the Multitudes and th<ey> they..... 5

1. it, and of them some florish: som stand, and some fall.

△ Then he sayd ▭ The first were /the/ Kings of the earth: which t<ell> tell the priks of the last ⊗ , take place, are, and shall be.

In this thow mayst lern science. Note a mysterie.

Take a place, is as much, as, Ende with place. 10

△ Then he threw down a great many of them before him

Here is his name, (pointing to Ho (▭ △ Car[a]mara) ▭ on the vpper part of the Globe) Notwithstanding I am his Minister —— 15

There are kings, fals and vniust, whose powre as I haue ue augme....

and destroyed, So shalt thow.

Thow seest the weapons. The Secret is not great.

Δ I know not what the weapons are.

Pri. Quar sayd. Write, and I will tell the. Δ The three, of eche side did syt down: while Pri Quar did thus speake.

I am the first of the fowrth Hagonel.

Δ I had thowght that ye [sad] sayd before, you had byn the first and the Fowrth of Hagonel.

Pri. Quar. ☐ I am HAGONEL, and govern HAGONEL. There is Hagonel the first, Hagonel the second, and Hagonel the third, I am the first that govern the three. Therfore I am the first and the last of the fowre Δ In the meane space of the former multitude some were falln deade, of some theyr mowthes drawn a wry: of some theyr legs broken.

And then, pointing to Ho (Δ ☉ Carmara) he sayd.

In his name with my name, by my character and the rest of my Ministers, are these things browght to pass.

These things that lye here, are lyers, witches, enchanters, Decoyvers, Blasphemers: and finally all they that Vse NATVRE, with abvse: and dishonor him which rayneth for euer

2. The second assembly were the Gouernors of the Earth, whose glory, yf they be good, the weapons which we haue towght the, will augment: and Consequently, if they be euill, pervert

3. The third assembly are those which taste of Gods mysteries, and drink of the iuyce of Nature, whose myndes are diuided, some with [eyse] eyes looking toward heaven, the rest to the center of the Earth. vbi nō Gloria, nec bonitas nec bonum est. It is wrowght, I say, it is wrowght

(for thy vnderstanding) by the seuen of the seuen which wer the sonnes of sempiternitie, whose names thow hast written and recorded to Gods Glory △ Then he held vp his hands, and seemed to speak but was not herd (of E.[T]K.) as he told me: and thervppon Pri quar: sayd Neyther shalt thow heare, for it is Vox hominibus non digna 45 Illi autem cum filijs suis laudauerunt Deum. Benedictus est qui filius est vnicus, et Gloria Mundi.

E K. saw like a black cloth come in and cover all the forepart of

the

Marginal notes:

line 1: <Hagonel.>

line 3: < The Foreman / with the short / .... > line 7: <Ki>ngs / Kings line 12: Carmara his / Minister: forte / Prince, / Hadonel line 14 RH: △ / in < generall > / pa<rticularly> / .. B<lumaza > line 16: Weapons wher= / with to destroy line 25: Note this First, / and Last, / bycause of / Baligon alī / Carmara. his / < prince> & tables.

line 29: Practise, wth / spirituall wea= / pons line 31: Liers / Witches / Enchanters line 34: Gouernors

line 42: Note / :: Practise / lib^{o}. 2^{o} Filij filiorū /

E[illegible] ——— 1.
An ——— 2.
Aue ——— 3.
Liba ——— 4.
Rocle ——— 5.
Hagonel ——— 6.
Elemese ——— 7.

These 7 are na= med in the great Circle following line 48: The black cloth / of silence, and / staying

At the foot of the page: Note: how he governeth Three / and Carmara (his King) hath also a Triple crown lines join: 'et' (line 4) to 'first of'(line 20),

'shewed' (line 5) to 'seest' (line 16),
'threw down' (line 11) to 'destroyed' (line 15),
'Fowrth' (line 21) to 'filius' (line 47),
'Ministers' (line 30) to 'seuen of the seuen' (line 41),
'the weapons' (line 35) to 'weapons' (MN29),
the second 'seuen' (line 41) to 'Illi' (line 46),
'whose names' (line 42) to 'Illi' (line 46).

[46a]

In the first leafe were the Offices of the two Kings Blumaza & Bobogel recited, as appeares by the Note at the bottome of the 2d page: /& also 5: c May 1583.7 phaps this first leafe was lost bifore he drew vp his Booke of de Bonorū Angelorū invitatiōibus because I find a Blank where Blumaza is placed.

This Character seemes to stand for Carmara, as apps from sev all places in .fol. 2.a. & b. & many other.

It apps by a note of Dr Δ: (de Heptarchia &c: Cap. 1.) That Michaell & Uriel were psent at the begining of these revealed Misteries & gaue authority to Carmara to order the whole Heptarchicall Revelacow pʰaps this authority was entred in the first lost leafe of this /5.7 4th booke (though Dr. Δ: calls it [here] the 2d Booke in this Note.) see Chap: 2. at ye begining. By a mginall note at the begining of the first Chapter, it should seeme, yt the Dr. meanes by the first [chapter] Booke the Action only of the 16 of Nov: 1582. & by the 2d Booke the Actions of the 17 [&] 19 /+ c20/ of Nov. 1582. but his mginal Note of 19 should be 20 of Nov, for so it appʰs by ye Actions entred. The 21 of Nov: vizt: the action of yt day he calls the Appendice of the 2d chapter.

[46b]

This is the writing of Elias Ashmole.

FM

[47a]

the stone, so that nothing appeared in the stone: then was hard a voyce saying. Loke for vs no more at this tyme: This Δ shalbe a token, (from this tyme furth) to leaue.

Δ Laus et Honor sit Deo Immortali et Oipotenti nunc et sempʰ. A<m>en

/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 2: <The To>ken / <to le>aue of, by a black / <shad>dowing all /in/ c ye stone.

<158>2 Die ♀. A meridie: hora 5. Nouemb. 16

△ He with the triple Crown on his hed, in the long purple robe, had now onely that part of the rod in his hand, which was clere red: the other two parts being vanished awaye. He shoke the rod, and the Globe vnder him did quake. then he sayde Ille enim est Deus, Venite △. All the 7 did bow at his speache

He holdeth vp the flag, with the picture of a woman [in it] paynted on it, with the  (as before was noted) on the right side of her. And on the other side of the flag, were the Armes of England. He florished with the flag very [muche] muche, and went as thowgh he <did> marche, in warlike manner vppon the vpper & vtterparte of the Globe.

He pointed vp to the Flag and sayde There is two to come, there is no more. All the people in the Globe seamed to be glad and reioyce

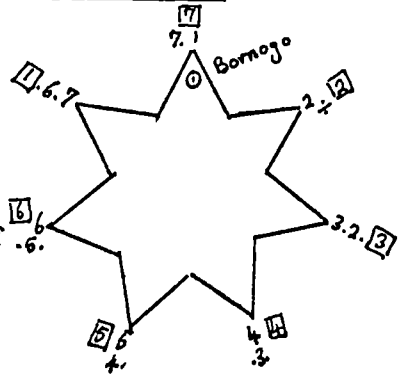
Now he setteth down the Flag, and sayd, Come, Come, Come; And the 7 cam all before him. they hold vp all togither Heptago= num stellare, seeming to be Copper.



.1: The first Holder, sayd, Ille nosti and so pulled his hand of frō the Heptagonū.

2: The second of the .7. taketh his hand of and doth reverence and sayd I am he which haue powre to alter the

In corruption of NATVRE. with my seale, I seale her and she is becōme perfect. I prevayle in Metalls: in the knowledge of them. I haue byn in Powre with many but Actually with few. I am of the first of the twelue the Second of the Seuen. wilt thow know my name

Δ full gladly. I am BORNOGO: this is my seale:
[what thow desyrest] This is my true Character. what thow desyrest in me, shalbe fullfilled. Glory to God. Δ. He kneled down, and held vp his hands toward the Heptagonum.

3: The next (or third,) sayd, I am Prince of the Seas: My powre is vppon the waters. I drowned Pharao: and haue destroyed the wicked. I gaue life vnto the seas: and by me the Waters move.
My name was known to Moyses. I liued in Israel. Beholde the tyme of Gods visitation. I haue measured, and it is .8. This is a mysterie. God be mercifull to his people. Behold, Behold Lo, Behold

Marginal notes:

line 13: /There is a marginal drawing of the arms of England in Sloane MS. 3677, similar to that at 45a,6/line 15: /There is an illegible marginal note which has been erased/line 18: Δ so he sayd / in latin, in / the forpart of / the leaf before.

line 20: Δ — Note. / Copper apperteyneth / to ♀.

line 21: Δ / Hagonel /with line to 'Holder' (line 21)/ line 22: Δ Forte / Bagenol / Hagonel, if H be for B / Than B/a/gonel/< conteyned> Ba / genol

line 27: Metalls .

line 29: One of the / first of the / Twelue.

line 31: Prince / Bornogo

line 35: The Seas

line 39: 8 / Gods visitation / And it is 8: may be 8 yeres / added to this tyme, and that maketh 1590. Noveb. 16. That 8, or 88, I know not yet /with line to '8' (line 39)/ lines join: 'Ille' (line 10) to MN18,

'Flag' (line 16) to 'There' (line 17).

[47b]

Lo behold, my mighty powr consisteth in this. lern wisdome by my <words.>

This is wrowght for thy erudition, what I enstruct the from God: Lok<e> /vnto thy/ Charge truely. Thow art yet deade: Thow shalt be reuiued. But <oh,> bless God truely. The blessing that God giueth, I will bestow vppon the by per<mission>

O, how mighty is our god, which walked on the waters: which sealed me w<ith> his name. whose Glory is without ende. Thow hast written me, yet dos<t> not Know me. Vse me in the name of God. I shall at the tyme appointed be ready

I will manifest the works of the seas, and the miracles of the depe shal<be> knowne I was Glorified in God. I Skurged the world. Oh oh oh, now they do repent. Misery is theyr ende, and Calamitie theyr meat. Behold my name is pr<int.....>

for euer: behold it △ he opened his bosom and seamed leane: and

/seemed to/ haue feathers vnder his robes: He had a golden gyrdel: and on it, written, B<EFAFES> /BEFAFES/

Than he sayd. Blessed be thow Ô God, God, God, for euer. I haue /said/

Δ he toke his hand of frō the Heptagonum.

Δ The black Cloth was drawn. which is now appointed to be <our> token from them, that we must leave of for that instant

Δ. Deo soli, ōis honor, et Gloria. Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: Δ

line 2: Δ / My charge

line 8: The seas

line 12: Prince / Befafes / wth feathers / vnder his robes.

Friday After drinking at night circiter hora 8^{a}

Δ On the left side of Ho (sitting in the Chayre) appeared yet three holding vp the Heptagonum. [and] /on/ one and the other side below. He sat with his his face from E K toward me. I stode and my face southward. E K he sat at the same table, with his face Northward.

4. The Fowrth (holding below) Cryed. Earth, Earth, Earth.

E.K. he speaketh Hollow, so that I vnderstand nothing. Δ than he answered They are the wordes of my Creation, which you are not not worthy to vnderstand. My Powre is in Erth: and I kepe the bodies of the Dead. Theyr members are in my bokes. I haue the key of Dis= solution. Behold Behold, All things, yea /bis/ All things, haue theyr there workmanship with me For I am the ende of Working. E K

He falleth down prostrate, and speaketh I know not [what] what;
Δ
than he sayd I haue the Light of his anger, and I will destroy it. O, O, Behold, It is in a light left within the bottomles pit. It is the ende and the Last. O blessed shall thy name be, Blessed shall thy name be for euer. Behold this is my seale Behold, the bowels Bowells of the earth are at my opening Δ Then I requested /ted/ him to help me with some portion of Threasor hid, to pay my detts withal
c /withall/ and to buy things necessarie etc. He answered O Wordling thow shalt be satisfyed with welth of this world. Behold Behold Behold Lo lo Behold, vehemētly I say Behold I haue, horded vp
Δ
Threasor, for the Sonne of perdition, the first Instrument of his destruction. But, Lo these Cauerns Δ he shewed to E K the Cavernes of the earth, and secret places therof thereof and afterward sayd: Mark this, All spirits, inhabiting within the earth; where, their habitation is, of force, not of will, (except
c /except/ the myddest of my self, which I know not), are subiect to the powre hereof. Δ Pointing to his Seale. With this you shall

Marginal notes:

line 21, over 'and the other': and one on the other side below line 27: In earth. / line 28: The Dead mens / bodyes.

line 32: The Light of / his anger. /with a hand/line 37: Threasure hid / requested.

line 41: ·△·/ Antichrist line 46: How can the / middest of a / <s>pirituall crea / ture be ima= / <g>ined? / my dowt to ax / <He meant the middest or> / Center of the Earth. The middest of his <charge> /with a hand/lines join: 'his' (line 21) and 'ende' (line 30), the diagram of the seal (line 35) and 'this' (line 44).

[48a]

shall govern, with this you shall vnlok: with this (in his name who raveth) you shall discouer her entrayles. How say you now? Can you do it? Ar not your Magiciens acquaynted with me Yt greueth me to regester the bones of the Wicked. Prayse him Butmono, Prayse him Butmono, prayse him. △ Is that your name, I pray you tell me. he answered Yea it is my name. It is the ende of all things. E K. now he sitteth down.

⟨5.⟩ △ Now the Fifth turned his face toward .E.K. (who /E K/ sat before me, and opposite vnto me) and stepped furth and sayd: I am life and breath [of all things] in Liuing Creatures. All things liue by me, The Image of One excepted. Behold the face of the Earth E K. There appeareth all [Creatures] /Kindes7 of brute beastes, fowles, Dragons, and other △ He Clapt his hands to gither and /they7 all, vanished away /at7 ones: they cam agayn: and went then away and retorned no more. But the people within the Globe remayned still as from the begynning: he sayd while the beastes were yet in sight

Lo, all these, do I endue with life: my seale is theyr Glory.

Of God am I sanctifyed: I reioyce: the Liuing, The ende, and beginning of these things, are known vnto me: and by sufferance I do dispose them vntyll my Violl be run E K. he taketh out of his bosom a bottle vyol glass. and there seameth to be fiue or six spoonefulls of oyle in it. △ He answered and sayd. That it is: and it is a mysterie. △ I spake somwhat of this oyle, and he answered me, and sayd Thow sayst true. In token of God his Powre and Glory, write down BLISDON.

E K. he taketh his hand of from the Heptagonū

6. The sixth pulleth open his Clothes and red apparell, and there yssueth mighty fyre oute of his sides ⊏ △ Note, the cote of the first of these seuen is shorter then any of his fellows coats are.⊐ The sight of the fyre is very owgly, grisely, terrible, and skarsly of mans eye can be beholden. At length he pluckt his coates to gither, and sayd to E,K. Ô I wold shew the, but flesh and blud cannot see. write shortly, (it is enowgh) Noui Januam Mortis. △ than sayd he to me in an ernest muse, Ô, Muse not, My words ar dark, but with those that see, light enowgh. Et per cussit Gloria Dei, Impiorum parietes. Dixi. △ In mervaylous raging fyre, this word BRORGES did appeare, tossed to and fro in the furious flames thereof, so abundantly streaming out, as yf all the world had byn on fyre. so that E K, could not endure, (without great annoyance to his ey sight) to behold the same and finally he sayd Mysteria /in^{c}/ animis vestris imprimite. and so the fyre vanished away:

E K

Marginal notes:

line 1: <P>ractise

line 2: /and/

line 5: <Pr>ince / <Butm>ono line 10, over 'Liuing Creatures': △ In Animantibus oratis line 11, over 'Image of': (△ ℵ man) line 17, written vertically: △ A great dowt <.....> / me yet the <di> / uersity of t<he 4th > / and fifth offi<cers, > / and officis as they are here a<nd in the > Repetition ensuing line 18: Virtus officij / sui line 21: A little Viol / of oyle line 25: Prince / Prin[ce] Blis= / Blisdon line 29: Short Coat. / The first.

line 37: Prince Bo= / Prin[ce] Brorges:

lines join: 'ende' (line 6) to MN17,

'Liuing Creatures' (line 10) to 'all these' (line 17).

E K. The stone semeth all Blew: and onely One now /c beholdeth/ the Heptagonū: all the rest being set down: who semed now /c extend/ theyr hands one toward an other, as thowgh they played, now being /c ended/ of theyr work. Now the last putteth his hand to the Heptagonon and turned his face to E K. hauing his face (all the while before) turned toward Δ, he sayd The Creatures liuing in my Dominion, ar subiect to my powre. Behold I am BRALGES The powres vnder my subiection, are Invisible. Lo what... are. E K. All the world semed to be in brightnes or w... fire: and therein appered Diuerse little things like little [illegible] without any forme. he sayd. This is the seale of my Go= uernment. Behold I am come, I will teache the Names with out Numbers. The Creatures subiect vnto me shalbe known vnto y u. ◖ Beware of wauering Blot out suspition of us for we are Gods Creatures, that haue rayned, do rayne & shall raigne for euer. All our Mysteries shalbe known vnto you.

7.

E K. All the 7 vanished away. onely Ho remayning who sayd (being stand vp and leaning vppon his Chayre, and turned to E K Behold, these things, and theyr mysteries shalbe known vnto you, reseruing the Secrets of him which raigneth for euer: ⊏ E K The voyce of a mul= titude, answered singing, ⊐ Whose name is Great for euer. Ho Open your eyes, and you shall see from the Highest to the Lowest. The Peace of God be vppon you.

Δ Amen. E K. The black Cloth was drawn before all the things conteyned in the stone: which was the Token of Ceasing for that tyme.

Δ sanctus sanctus sanctus D̄n̄s Deus n̄r

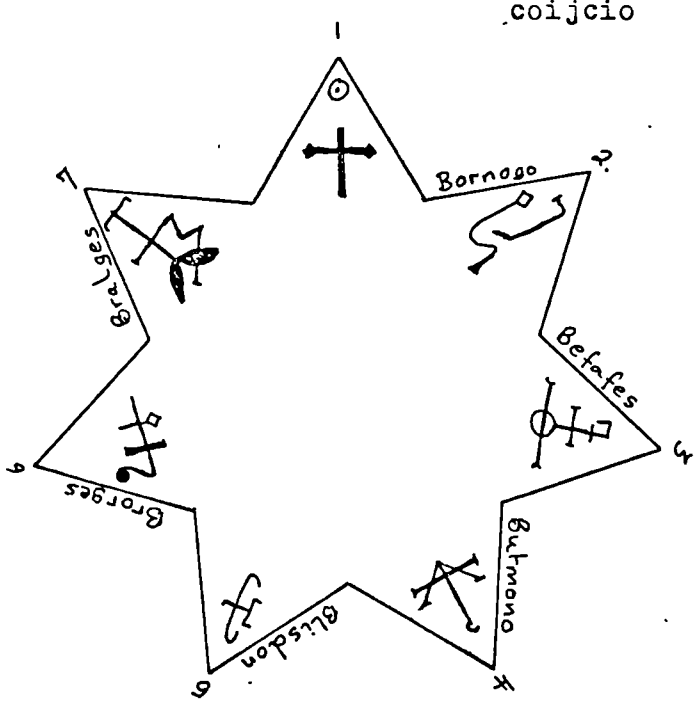
/flourish/

Δ BLVMAZA Rex est sup Reges Terrae / 30

et illius sunt primus

princeps, et illius Ministri vt

coīcio



Marginal notes:

line 6, written vertically: But Baligon, <ās> / Carmara, in the ende of this boke / sayeth it to be his / office. Consider well line 7, over 'Dominion': Δ forte, in Aüre line 7: Prince / Bralges / hath Blumaza / his king line 11: The scale.

line 14: Exchue / Wauering or / suspition line 16: All Mysteries / shalbe known / to vs line 20: Secreta / Dei, non / sūt hoibus / reuelanda.

line 24: Δ / Note Highest / and Lowest / to be vnderstode / phaps in Ta= / bula collecta.

LH of Heptagon: Hanc partem primā / vocat Ho vnum / Librum in / quinta pagina se= / quente, ad hanc / Notam

RH of Heptagon: Δ / It shold seme that this / character shold be onely / a circle and a pryck / fol. 6.b. I haue forgotten / how I cam by this Crosse / annexed to it

RH next to 'Befafes': alr / Remēber / Obelison his promise to m<e> / of knowing and vsing

RH at bottom of page: Words { 9 9 9 7 11 } 45

[49a]

An: 1582: Saterday Die 17. Noueb: A meridie hora circiter 1ª

Δ—The Cloth remayned drawn, a prety while after we had done our prayers to God and so was all the things in the stone kept from sight.

Δ—The Man with the Crowne, (he onely) appeared first, and the transparent Globe with the people of the world in it, as before. The Diaphanitie, or (as it wer) the Shell of the forsaid Globe, was very glystring bright. The man shaked his hand toward me and the bak of the Chayre was toward E.K. On this globe appered a trace like a seame, of two things ioyned to gither, or rather a very narrow path: which began below on the Convex superficies of this globe and went vpward to the verticall point or

(as it wer) the zenith prik of it: but frō the lower part of the same to the place where the chayre stode, it seamed broder, and more worn, than from the chayre vp to the vertex or top prik: for that part (which semed to be about the eigth part of the whole did appere very smalle, and vnworne, or vnoccupyed.

Δ—He turning his face toward E K, spake this. I haue declared things past and present: And now I speak of things to come. The Whole shalbe manifest. Nam ipse vnus et Indiuisibilis est.

Gloria Gloria Gloria Creatori nrō

Two partes are yet to come, the rest are finished allready Δ He shewed the rownd table with letters and numbers which master Kelly sent me: and than he toke it away agayn. then he sayd:

Venite gradatim repetamus opera Dei.

Δ The first of the .7. which had yesterday appeared, did now appere w/th/ the short robe, as he did before. Than Ho sayd smylingly (being turned to E K)

Haec sunt documenta tua, quae nondum intelligis

Δ Than the man with the short robe, the Forman of the 7 (yesterday appearing) sayd

Vnus est Deus, et vnum est opus nrm

Δ Then cam very many vppon the Globe his convex superficies and they sayd, Parati sumus seruire Deo nostro.

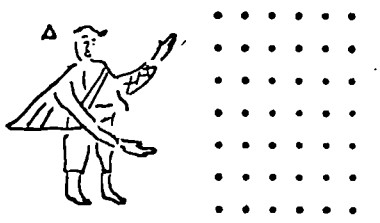
Δ Eche of these had somwhat in theyr hands. som had crownes, some garmēts, etc

The number of them was: 42. and stode in this order.

and sayd embracing (as it wer) the whole

nûmber of this Cumpany



Et nomen meum, numerus est totus

Nec est crimen in numero nostro

Moyses nos nominauit

Potestas istorū, quàm istarum, quamvis non vna, tamen in vno sunt.

Δ I sayd that I thowght there wanted at the begynning of this sentence, this word Tam.

he answered, /ītc/ might be vnderstode by his pointing to them there standing, and sayd furder in respect of this my dowt: Quatenus est haec vanitas vestrorū?

Tu nosti numeros hos esse in Deo, in Mundo, et in minori mundo.

In Deo, id est, Nobiscum. In Mundo, quantū apud vos: In minori Mundo, quantū in vobis.

(Combinatur animus tuus cognitatione)

Discritur apud Phos, idq̄ maximè.) de NATVRA, quae non vobiscum, sed nobiscum (ah, ah, ah,) et nrā potestate est.

Videbis Deum. Vidisti opera nrā, Opera (inquā) manuū suarū:

Digito Dei mouebimur. A Deo venit. Homo et cū hominibus fuit: est enim cū illis. Illius namq̄ potestas vim, virtutem, et esse dat, non nobis solum modo, sed operibus nris

Inhumata tibi anima tua, quid quaerit? Δ I vnderstand you not he answered

Ab humo, homine; Ab homine dictum est. I axed the, what thow desyrest.

Δ Wisdom, and Veritie, I answered: ‖ then, he, answered,

Ho Thow shalt. Δ there cam in a smyling fellow: and they pluckt

him

Δ ℂ Note this to be a REPETITION of the Heptagonon this 55 little Treatise affore. Lern to reconcile the 4/th/ and the <5th>

Marginal notes:

line 4: Carmara / al: Baligon line 7: /there is evidently a note missing/line 15: past / present / to come line 18: <Δ hā ....bis / dext... Adhuc / duo, et tempus / non est.>

line 18, over 'partes are yet': Δ forte, of this work.

line 19: The rownd / Table.

line 22: Short Coat.

line 24: Δ I think he / ment by the / rownd table / shewed, which / Mr K. had sent / me etc. bycaus / the names cam / out of that / Table line 29, over 'garmets': Vide lib°. 3°.

line 31: Δ / I dowt it shold / be short / coat holding / or ēbracing all / the Table with / his hands, and not Ho.

line 36: Δ / Note Istorū / Istarū / as if it were / filios et filias etc line 40: Numeri

line 44: Natura

line 48: Dei / potestas.

lines join: 'repetamus' (line 21) to note at line 55,
'Nobiscum' (line 41) to 'Deum' (line 46).

---

pluckt him, and towsed him. He cryed he wold tell Newes: and they answered, that there was none for him to tell and he skaped from them, or they let him slyp wit<h> with all his clothes torn of: and he semed to crepe or get away vnder the globe, an<d> and (as it wer) to get behinde the Diaphanous Globe.

Δ These 42 had all of them somwhat in theyr hands: as eyther whole Crownes or ¾ of Crownes, or robes etc. Six of them semed more glorious than the rest and theyr Coates longer: and had cerclets (abowt theyr hed) of Gold: and they had pfect Crowns in theyr hands. The second six had thre quarters of Cr<ownes> /Crownes/

The Third six, haue clothes in theyr hands. All the rest semed to haue balls <of> of gold: which they toss from one to an other: but at the catching they sem<ed> seemed empty wynde balls: for they gripe them, closing theyr hand [closing theyr] as yf they wer not solid, but empty, like a bladder.

Δ The first six sayde. Our names cannot be expressed neyt<her> can the names of these that follow.

Δ The first six made cursy to the man with the short robe: the second six made cursy to the first, and the Third to the second and they all, and the short robed man, made cursy to Ho.

Our workmanship is all one Δ sayd the short robed man

Ho The whole day is diuided into 6 partes: Euery part occupyeth a part of them here (Δpointing to the 42 standing ther. Therfore yf thow wilt work with Kings (thow knowest my meaning) finally what soeuer thow wilt do in theyr estate; Cast thyne eye vnto the first place. In all good causes thow shalt work by six in generall.

The rest are for Depriuation: I meane the next six. The residue all do serue to the entents and purposes apperteyning vnto Kings.

But bycause thow shalt not be ignorant, what they are, in nare, they shall shew forth theyr Tables

Δ Than they, spedyly (eche of them vppon the place of theyr st ding, made a square table: and euery table had but one Letter. The first of the first first six did go away, and in his table appeared an O. etc and so of the second six, orderly theyr letters appeared in theyr tables: but the Third six, they cowred down /vppon/ theyr letters, and were loath to shew them: but at length, aid. etc. and at the last of euery row, they all cam to= gither etc.

E		Δ
O F S N G L E	4 howres
A V Z N I L N	4 howres
Y L L M A F S	4 howres

ho Remember, how they stode, when they wer secondly disposed vnto the:

They stode first in six rowes, and next They wer turned into .7. I speak of the greater number and not of the less. In speaking of the greater, I haue comprehended the lesser.

N R S O G O O	4 howres
N R R C P R N	4 howres
L A B D G R E	4 howres

Δ They went euer away toward the ..... hand

The third row went of lamenting: being commaūded: by the Short rob d man. All parted in fire, falling into the Globe

The fifth now did synk into the Globe, euery one in a sundry fyre by him self.

The sixth fell with smoke down into the Globe.

E K. Now remayneth onely the man with the Crown Ho: he made shew with his hands, beckning toward E K and sayd, I haue told the, that theyr workmanship is to gither. 50

Theyr names are vppon these tables.

The first letter, is the Second letter of the first name of the Table

Δ How can Bobogel Thow be accownted the first name?

Marginal notes:

line 7: Note this / reckening / by Six and / six line 13: Names.

line 15: Short coat.

line 18: So he sayd pagina / precedēte, vnū / est opus nrm̄.

line 19: The diuision / of the Daye

line 23: Practise

line 25: Kings.

line 29: The first 6

line 30: The second 6.

line 32: The Third six /with line to 'The third' (line 45)/ line 40: In sexto et / 7° sunt oia / fol. 10.

line 52: * Δ. Now he / meaneth at / Bobogel in / that table / collected frō / ✠ made before:

lines join: 'six of' (line 6) and 'six' (line 24),

'names cannot' (line 13) and 'in name' (line 26).

<Note>

The Table to be conferred with the rown< d >

Thow hast 49 names in those Tables. Those names thow hast in former Tables, by the written: in that of 7 tymes 7. Confer it with the* rownd Table

The first letter from the point of his# sword, is B. That B signifieth the number of the Bees, begynning the 49 names, environing that Circle

In the former Tables thow shalt fynde B.1. B.2. B.3. B.4. etc and so to B.49

Those Bees begynne the names of all the powres that haue governed.

do gouern, and shall gouern

The next letter hath his circle and members going rownd abowt it: which thow shalt fynde in the former Tables.

The Letter standeth in the myddest of euery square, of euery Circle: thowgh some be turned vpside down: Which onely signifyeth that they are Spirits of Destruction, wrath and Indignation in Gods Judgement.

There are two numbers: that, on the right hand, over the letter, is the nuber pertayning to that Letter.

O in the Circumference is the ninthe letter

Gather the former Tables to gither, which thow hast made before, conteyning

49, depending onely on B. Where thow shalt finde BOBOGEL, a name consisting on 7 letters, and so the rest.

Reade my instructions as concerning those Tables, and thow shalt fynde

the truth of them.——————————I haue sayd.

Mighty is thy name, o [Lord] God of Hostes:

Blessed is thy name, Ô Lord, for euer.

Δ Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 5, over 'the first letter': *sent to me by E.K.

line 8: Note

line 9, RH: # a sword in the mans hand / within the Circle /refers to line 5/line 17: O in this Table.[(in this Table] / <O>FS etc) is of / <th>e eighth name / <the> second letter / <but> the ninth / <here> in respect / <of> the circle of / numbers.

line 21: Note who / <s>ayeth this.

line 22: Δ / Note the like phrase / fol. 2. of Hagonel / who sayd he had spoken of / it. wheras we had receyued / nothing of him before.

a line joins 'my' (line 21) to 'I' (line 30) and also to MN22.

After 7 of the clok at night. dieth.

Ho Lo, here I byd them do, and they do: I haue appointed them, and they are contented,. My Charge is not of my self, neyther do I speak darkly obscurely or without truth, in affirming that I towght the those Tables: 30

For they are frō him, which made and created all things: I am from them in powre and message, vnder whome I here rule and shall do, tyll the ende of all things be: Ô Great and bowntifull is his liberall mercy. The mercy of him, whome we prayse and laude and sing vnto, with Joy for euer.

Behold thow desyrest, and art syk with desire. I am the disposer thowgh not the Composer of Gods medicines. Thow desirest to be cumforted and strengthened in thy labors. I mynister vnto /the^c/ The Strength of God.

What I say, is not of my self, neyther that which is sayd to me, is of them selues, but it is sayd of him which Liueth for euer.

These Mysteries hath God Lastly, and of his great mercyes, granted vnto the

I haue answered thy dowting mynde.

Thow shalt be glutted, yea filled, yea thow shalt swell and be puffed vp with the perfect knowledge of Gods Mysteries, in his mercyes. Aovse them not: Be faithfull. Vse mercy. God shall enriche the Banish wrath: yt was the first, and is the greatest Commaundemēt

I rayng in him, and liue by him which rayngeth and liueth for euer.

Δ I pray you make some of these last instructions more playne, and euidēt.

Marginal notes:

line 31, over 'them': Δ him line 32: <Ba>ligons rule / /a/nd governmēt line 32, over 'tyll the ende': sūp fol. 1. b.2.

line 32: <t>he / ende / <of> all / <t>hings line 35: Δ / <D>ee his / <l>anguishing / <d>esire

line 39: /hand/

line 40: <God> graunt.

line 45: < *Δ I > vnderstode / <not> this to / <be> so: tyll he / <ca>lled to my / <re>mẽbrance / and made me / <tu>rne my bokes / <to> that Parcell which he called the Prologe declared by Annael: whan Saul skryed. etc line 5, over 'greatest Commaundemet': Δ ~ hardest, for me, in respect of my Imperfect<ions> lines join: 'them' (line 31) to 'them' (line 38),

'art syk' (line 35) to 'medicines' (line 36).

[50b]

<Those as he> semed <to> Embrace them <fo. 5.>

Ho I haue shewed the perfectly. Behold I teache the agayn O how mer cifull is God that reuealeth so great secrets to flesh and blud?

Thow hast 42 letters. Thy Tables; last, conteyn so many. Euery letter is [a name] the name particular by him self of the generall actions, being, and doing of these 42, which appeared with theyr workmanship. The first wa<s> theyr Prince: and he gouerneth onely the estate condition and being, <limited> by God vnto Kings of the earth. The 7 next him, are those that are <Messagers>

/Messagers/ c of God his good gifts to those that beleue him, and faithfully serue him: wherof few <re.....>

and rayng now frutefull in his sight.

Regnat Regnat, Regnat ô regnat Iniquitas super faciem totius terrae

Cor hoīs impletum est malitia, et nequicijs

Incipit, incipit enim noua illorū potestas, illis non sine re dedita, nec dis..

Vide quaeso. Δ He pointed down to the people, in the Globe, all bei<ng....>

sore and diseased of some sore, vlcer, botch, etc

Ho All the residue of the Angels, (for so they are in dede) ar ministers of God h<is> wrath and indignation vppon the Faythless: whose mysterie is most lamenta<ble.>

7 nely, haue 7 letters comprehending the dignitie of theyr vocation: The rest are particular, not onely in powr, but allso in theyr vocation. Like leaves they spring and grow from one branche.

These words which thow seest in the last Table, some of them vnhable to be pronownced, are notwithstanding the names of those 7 which held the fayr and bewtifull Crownes. which names (as I sayd before) do comprehend not onely the powre, but allso the Being of the rest.

The whole Composition is the truth of the words. I will ones more teach.

There were 42 that appeared, besides him, which was theyr prince.

The first 7, are called by these names, that thow seest, as OFS etc.

Δ and so of AVZNILN etc Ho Thow hast sayde

There are but .6. names, that are in Subiection. I teache breifly

Doost thow not remember the Circle and the prik in the myddest: which was on the right hand of him, that was theyr Prince?

That onely representeth 7 in number. Which being added vnto the rest maketh .49. Read the letters. Δ I red OF etc and he willed me to strike them out.

Ho That is the name of those of the first of the 7, which held the Crown<es>

in theyr hands

The second line, is the name of the second, and so to the ende of the table.

42, letters: 42 names: 42 persons.

The first where his fote stode, is both his Name and Character.

And so of the second, Third etc.

Notwithstanding, Generally these are the names, the first 7, the One presupposed, the rest being six in order.

This is the truth, and some of the Tables. Yt is easy to be vnderstode and perfect

Whan thow wilt work for any thing apperteyning vnto the estate of a good King: Thow must first call vppon him which is theyr prince. Secondly the ministers of his powre are Six: whose names conteyne 7 letters apece: as they Tables do manifest: by whome generally, or by any one of them, in particularitie, thow shalt work for any Intent or purpose.

As concerning the letters particularly, they do concern the Names of 42

which

Marginal notes:

line 5: 42 letters.

line 8: The Prince.

line 9: Kings of / the erth.

line 11: The Prince and / his first 7 line 14: Istorum / Noua potes= / tas incipit line 14, over 'dedita': ℵ data line 18: Angels, minis= / ters of Gods / wrath.

line 19: Consider / the recke= / ning here by 7 / but below he / had a reckening / by .6. ⌈with hand⌋ line 25: The Powre and / being of the / rest.

line 24 RH: Δ There were but 6. holding / bewtifull Crownes line 27: NOTE / The Prince line 28: Now by 7

line 30: Six names / in subiection line 30, over 'but six names': Δ each of .7. letters.

line 32: ⊙ on the / right hand line 36, over 'of the first of the 7': Δ forte of the first 7. / ᴬVidelicet line 38, over 'The second line': Δ: of the six lines

line 39: NOTE

line 40: Note, Name / and Character.

line 47: Praxis / Call.

line 48: Prince .1. / Ministers .6. ⌈with hand⌋

line 52: 42

lines join: 'Those' (line 1) to 'next him' (line 9),
'first' (line 7) to 'him' (line 27) and to 'theyr prince' (line 28),
'The 7 next him' (line 9) to 'onely in powr' (line 20),
'those 7' (line 23) to 'first' (line 36),
'7' (line 23) to 'Δ' (MN24 RH) and to '7' (line 36),
'Crownes' (line 24) to 'Crown<es>' (line 36),

'The first 7' (line 28) to '7 letters' (line 49),

'onely' (line 33) to 'One' (line 43),

'vnderstode' (line 44) to 'powre' (line 48),

The first '42' (line 39) to 'the Names of 42' (line 52).

[51a]

<w>hich 42, in generally, or one of them do and can work the d..truction nindrance or annoyance of the estate, Condition or degree, as well f r body as government of any Wicked or yll Liuing Prince.

In owtward sense, my words are true. I speak now of the vse of one of the first, that I spake of, or manifested yesterday

Sayd I not, and shewed I not, which had the gouernment of Princis?

For, as it is a Mystery to a farder matter, so is it a purpose to a present

vse. Yf it rule worldly princis, how much more shall it work with the Princis of Creation?

Thow desyrest Vse, I teache Vse, and yet the Art is to the furder

Vnderstanding of all Sciences, that are past, present or [to come]

yet to come

Frute hath a furder vertue than onely in the eating: Gold his furder con= dition, property, and qualitie, then in melting, or common vse.

Kings there are in Nature, With Nature, and above Nature.

Thow art Dignified.

Δ yf I wold haue the King of Spayne his hart to be enclined to the pur pose I haue in hand; What shall I do?

Ho First Cast thyne ey vnto the Generall prince, Gouernor or Angel that is principal in this world □ Δ as yet, is BALIGON or Carmara,

Secondly consider the circumstances of thy Instruction

Thirdly place my name, whome thow hast all ready

Fowrthly, of him, which was shewed the yesterday, whose garmets were short, and of purple.

Firstly, his powre, with, the rest of his six perfect Ministers

With those thow shalt work to a good ende. All the rest thow [maist] mayst vse to Gods Glorie. For euery of them shall minister to thy necessities Moreouer, when thow workest. Thy feete must be placed vppon those tables which thow seest written last comprehending 42 letters, and names.

But with this Consideration, that the first Character, which is the first of the 7, in thy former boke, be placed vppon the top of the Table, which thow [was commaunded] wast, and art, and shalbe commaunded to haue, and Vse.

Last of all, the Ring, which was appointed the: with the Lamine comprehending the forme of thy own name: which is to be made in perfect gold, as is affore sayd.

Euen as God is iust, his iudgements true, his mercies vnspeakable so are we the true messagers of God: and our words are true in his mercy for euer.

Glory, ô Glory, be to the, ô most high God.

E K. Now commeth Michael and heaveth his hand out of the stone and sayth GOD Bless you.

Ho As concerning the vse of these Tables, this is but the first step.

Neyther shalt thow practise them in vayne.

And whereas thow dost vse a demaunde, as concerning thy doings to a good

I shall not practise these Tables

in Vayne 50

Marginal notes:

line 2: Destruction / or hurt.

line 7: /there appears to be a note missing/line 7, over 'Princis': Δ ⊀ Kings line 12: <... Scienc>es / <past prese>nt / <or to co>me line 16: Diuers <kin>gs line 17: Dignifica= / tion line 20: Δ who is that?

line 21: Practise.

line 21 RH: Δ Is it not / Annael wth / whome I began? /with line to 'Generall prince' (line 20)/ line 23: ·Δ· — Ergo it / shuld seme / to be his office / to deale with / Kings: but / in the ende / he declareth / his office to / be of all Aℓ= / reall actions line 24, over 'of him': Δ the name line 24, over 'whose garmēts': Δ. Hagonel line 26, over 'powre, with': Δ Character line 26, over 'perfect Ministers': of 7 letters a pece line 30: The placing / of my fete / in practise /with hand/line 33: ⊙ ☥ Note former boke line 34: Δ / The Table / of practise / of a yard square / libro: 1°.

line 36: The Ring.

line 37: The Lamine.

line 38: The stone was / not yet browght line 40: Truth.

line 43: Mich.

lines join: 'my name' (line 23) to MN23,

'perfect' (line 26) to MN40,

'them' (line 46) to 'I shall' (line 49).

[51b]

to a good intent and purpose: and for the prayse and advancem^{t}: of Gods

Glorie, with Philip the Spanish King: I answer $\overset{t}{y}$ what= soeuer thow shalt speak do or work, shalbe profitable & accepted

And the ende of it shalbe good.

Moreouer wheras thow vrgest the absence of thy frende, as an excuse for the ring. No excuse can preuayle: Neyther canst thou shew the frutes of a iust mynde, but of a faynting stomack wth $\overset{s}{y}$ excuse God hath retorned him, and wilbe mercifull vnto you both.

Thy Chargis in worldly affayres, are not so great, that God cannot Minister help to theyr necessities. Thow shalt be conforted. But Respect the world to come; (wherevnto thow art provided) and for what ende: and that, in what tyme.

Serue God truely: Serue him iustly

Great Care is to be had with those that meddle with Princes /affaires/

Much more Consideration, with whome thow shalt medle or vse any practise. But God hath shaddowed the frō destruct<ion> =tion. He preserueth his faithfull, and shaddoweth the iust with a shi<eld> shield of honor.

None shall enter into the knowledge of these mysteries with th<ee>

but this Worker

Thy estate with the Prince (now raynging) shall shortly be /amended/ [am<ended>]

Her fauor encreased, with the good wills of diuerse, that are now, deceyuers

Thy hand, shall shortly be theyr help: and thow shalt do wunder=full and many benefits (to the augmenting of Gods Glorie) for <thy> thy Cuntry.

Finally God doth enriche the with Knowledge: and of thy self, <hath> hath giuen the vnderstanding of these worldly vanities He is [w..] [derfull] Mercifull: and we his good Creatures, neyther haue, <do> do, nor will forget the. God doth blesse you both: who<se>

Mercy, Goodness, and Grace, I pronownce and vtter vppo<n> you. I haue sayd:

Δ Laus, honor, Gloria, virtus et Imperium, Deo Opt°. Max°.
Amen

♔ Ho yf you will stay one half howre, I will say furder vnto you.

Δ We will: by gods leave.

/flourish/

Δ After that half howre passed, (being 10½ Noctis ♄.) he sayd

♔ Ho Venito BOBOGEL Rex et princeps Nobilitatis
Venito cū ministris: venito (inquam) Venito cum satellitibus tuis munitus

Δ I fele: and (by a great thundring noyce, thumming thuming in <myne> myne eares) I perceyue the presence of some spirituall creature abowt me

E K. And I here the thumming.

Ho Behold, Before this work be finished, (I meane the Manif<estation> festation of these Mysteries) thow shalt be trubbled, with the Contrarie Powres

and bey<ond>

Marginal notes:

line 3: Dei Miseri= / cordia magna / ipi Δ concessa line 11: Respice / ista Tria line 19: Secresy.

line 21: Dee,

line 24: God graunt.

line 28: Worldly vanity.

line 29: Good Angels

line 41: Noble / men

line 46: Note

At foot of page: f

[52a]

and beyond any accustomed manner. But take heade, they prouoke the not to work agaynst our Commaundemēts. Both thy ey and hand shall be ma= nifest witnes of it: well, this is true.

E K, They that now cōme in are ioly fellows, all trymmed after the manner of Nobi= litie now a dayes: with gylt rapers, curled heare: and they bragged vp and down.

BOBOGEL standeth in a blak veluet coat; and his hose close, rownd hose of vel= uet vpperstoks: ouer layd with gold lace: he hath a veluet hat-cap, with a blak feather in it: with a cape on one of his sholders his purse hanging at his neck and so put vnder his gyrdell. his berd long: he had pantofells and pynsons.

Of these, in Company, are 42. 7 of them, are apparayled like BOBOGEL:

sagely and gravely: All the rest are ruffyn like. Some, are like to be men and women:

for, in the foreparte they semed women, and in the bak part, men, by theyr apparayle.

and these were the last 7. They daunsed, lepe and kissed

E K. The stone is brighter, where the sage and graue 7 do stand and where the other do stand the stone is more dark

E K. Now they come to a circle, the sage and the rest, but the sage stand all to gither

Δ The first of the sage, lyft vp his hand a loft, and sayde:

Faciamus secundū voluntatē Dei: Ille Deus nr est verè nobilis & aeternus. he pluckt vp his right fote, and vnder it appeared, an L.

L

Then the Second moved his fote, and ——— E —— appeared.

Vnder the third, likewise

E

etc.

N

A

R

B

Then the last, B. and immediately they grew all to gither in a flame of fyre

and so sonk down into the former Globe
Of the rest the first pluckt vp his fote and there appeared an L. etc

2.

At the last, they fell down like drosse of metall.

Then whipped out fowr in a cumpany

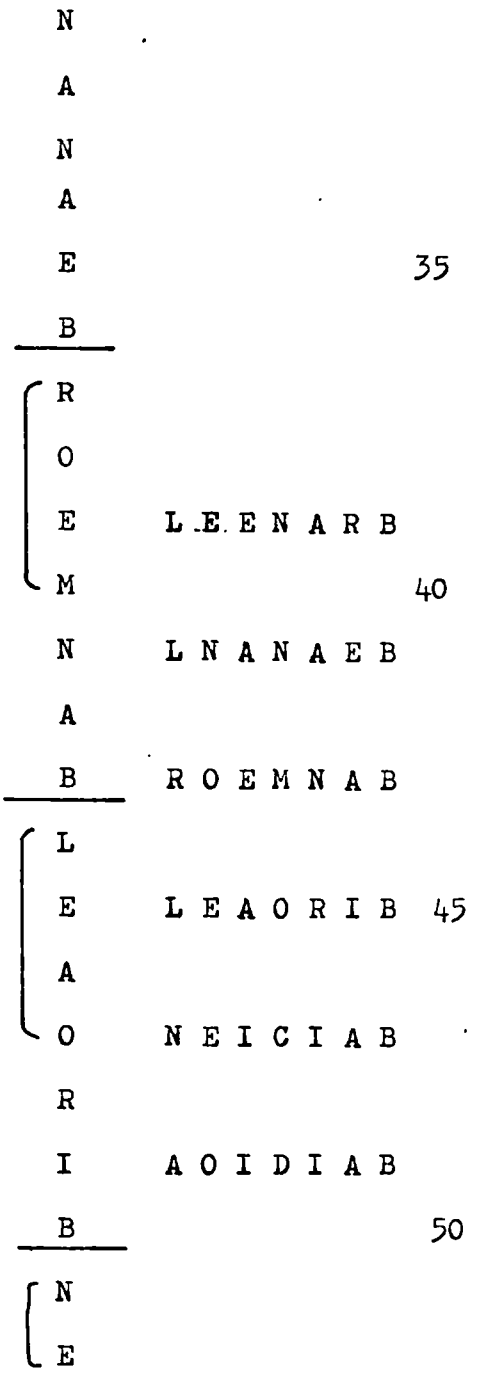
3.

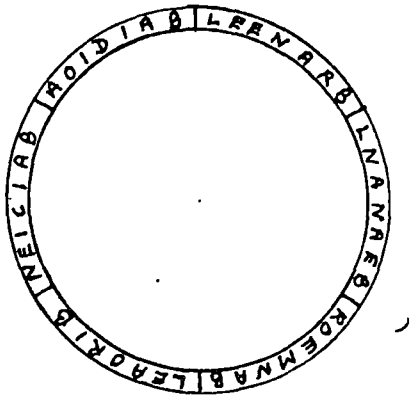
They clasp togither, and fall down
in a thick smoke ———

4.

They ioyne to gither and vanish
like drops of water. ———

5.





I
C
I
A
B

They fall down like a storme of hayle.

Marginal notes:

line 1: <Ca>ve

line 4, over 'ioly': Jolly line 6: BOBO / <BOBO>GEL his / pparayle line 16: Circle /part of this note is missing/line 38 RH, over the table of letters: Δ This I fashioned thus after / my first dictata penning / of my own fantasie.

[52b]

6.

A
O
I
D
I
A
B

The last vanished away.

Δ then he sayd Well, I will shew the more of these things at the next time.

God be with you: God bless you both.

Δ Amen.

Δ When shall that next tyme be? a voyce spake, on monday.

Δ Deo soli omnis Honor et Gloria. Amen.

/flourish/

Monday. Nouembris 19. Circiter 1ª horā a meridie

△ Long after our comming to the stone (abowt half a quarter of an hower

the Cloth of sylence [was] /remayned/ drawn: and nothing appeared: but E K heard as a far off very pleasant Musik the while Ho He seamed to take the cloth away with his hands. After that (abowt 6 mi=

.6. minutes, Nothing altered or shewed, other than the standing furniture, vsually of late appearing ther.

E K. Now come in 7 men with Musicall Instrumēts and before them cam one with a veluet Coate, and a hat Cap, with a sword by his syde, and a Cloke or or Cape hanging on one sholder: and a blak feather in his hat. etc.

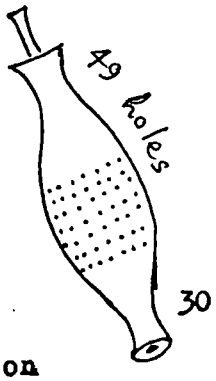
Afterward cam 42. more, seeming to be very far behynde the first 7. Their

Melody sownded very swetely and pleasantly all the while frō the begynning

The forme of theyr Musicall Instrumēt



These Musiciens play, one with an other, iestingly

they bobbed one an other, and than played agayn.

The 42, which semed a far off, cam nerer and nerer, and seamed to bring a rownd thing, like a table in theyr hands

The 7 Pipers went away: and the Man w^th /the^c/ Cape hanging on one of his sholders (somwhat like a Nobleman) remayned.

Then wer they come at hand, the 42 with the rownd table.

These seamed to be of two sortes. Of which, the last 7: on the forepart to behold seamed rather wemen, with fardingales very much sprowting out but theyr face had no peculier attyre of wemen.

The 42 held the circle (or rownd Table) vp, over theyr hed, flatwise.

Then they layd the Circle down, and stode rownd abowt it

Ho sayd. Tam mali, quam boni, laudant te,

Deus, Deus, Deus noster.

Δ The letters appeared to E K, and he told me them, and I began to write

L E E N A R B

Ho Thow writest in vayne. Thow hast written them allready

Δ It is true: I see them now last below noted down.

Ho Loke the eight / [ninth] 7 name in the Tables of 49, collected

Loke to his Character in [the Heptagono,] / the great Circle/ [the the Table w/th/ 7 Angles.]

Loke the second name in the Table w^th 7 angles.

Δ That I finde to be Bornogo.

E K. He with the cape on his one sholder; sayth, Nomen meū est Bobogel.

And he that is my subiect, is Governor of the second Angle of the 7

Bobogel ——— Rex

Bornogo ——— Princeps

Marginal notes:

line 22: BOBOGEL / Rex,

line 30: a rownd / Table line 31: The .7. pipers / went away line 35: women like line 37: The Circle line 45 RH: Δ /eight/ that is Bobogel.

line 46: Charac= / ter line 49: Bob.

line 52 RH: Δ / in Heptagono /with line to 'of the 7' (line 50)_/ line joins 'far' (line 24) to 'far' (line 29).

[53a]

Bob: I weare these robes, not in respect of my self, but of my Governmēt.

I am the Prince, Chief, [E K. he falleth down on his knees and speaketh wordes which I vnderstand not] Yea the onely distributer, giver, and bestower of Wisdome and Science.

I weare this apparayle, for that in dede, being a Prince I am a Cownsaylor to estate and dignitie. All Dignitie and gouernmēt that is not cownsayled by me, and my subiects, is frustrate, voyde, and cleane without firm grownd.

Those which thow sawest (being pipers) [wh] signifie praters, with vnaccustomed, and not vsuall Instruments: which allwayes seame to sownd that, which None but I my self, with my subiects, (yea not all of them, but the fewest) can performe

But I am true Philosophie. I am true vnderstanding. Oh my descending from him which rayngeth, is euen vncomprehensible of the Angells. Neyther do I know, my self: But what I think, I vtter, and What I measure, I am.

he sayd. Ordinationem Infinitae potestatis eleuate

E K. Now come Three out of the 42, and layd theyr fingers vppon the the three first letters. and

The first sayd. O Vnitas in Natura et in Deo

The second sayd O AEqualitas Dei et Naturae. Deus in Deo Natura a Deo et se.

The Third sayd. Concentus eius, est sine numero: Tamen nobiscum est in Vno, Fons et Caput Naturae

E K. They ioyne them selues to gither and become, all One Man, most beaw= tifull to behold: Whose hed and to the brest, seamed to be neare to heven.

His brest and myddle part, in the ayre: His feete seamed to stand on the earth. There cam like a Fire, out of the Crown of his hed, and to enter into the heven, hard, by it: This great high and fayre man sayde Veritas quaesitas, nr̄a est.

E K. His apparayle is diuided, into two halfes: fr̄o the Crown of his hed to his fete. The one half seemed to be most fresh florishing herbes: The other half seemed to be of diuerse metalls: and his right fote seamed to be Leade. he sayd (with an Aposiopesis) thus Beatus est qui Lumen capitis mei etc.

E K; The rest, all, quake. he sayd furder

Vnus in Capite, vnus in pectore, vnus in pedibus

E K. Then stept oute 9, at ones

E K. Then the great man, returned, or was restored to his former estate of three particular men agayn: and they three leaned to the Jentlem̄ with the Cape on his sholder. ℵ BOBOGEL. who sayde

Dee, Dee, Dee, at length, but not to late.

E K. In the place of the former first thre, appeared LEE

E K. of the 9, which stept out, they of the first Ternarie sayd eche thus orderly

1 Volumus

2 Possumus

3 Quid non

This Ternarie sayd, Faciamus, quae fecerunt, nam nos Tres, sumus Adam, societate.

E K. They become one man, as the other before, but a slender and a weak one neyther so high as the first, euer laboring or striving w^th^ it self to stand vp right, but still it bended, bowed, and inclined downward, as thowgh it wold fall for feeblenes [of ..] The Body of this Compownd man, seamed to be of Gold

Marginal notes:

line 4: Wisdom / & Science: / true No=/bility.

line 5: <Councell> line 9: Pipers.

line 13: philo= / sophie line 19: .1. / ^A LEE line 32: Vegetible, / Minerall.

line 34: ☿.

line 42: Dee

line 44: 2 / NAR

line 49: Adam

[53b]

Of Gold glittring. When they retorned to theyr distinct shape: they semed /naked/ nake<d> and to be sorry, and lament: and Bobogel did put them frō him, [wi<th>] with his sworde, skabbard and all, as it hanged by his side:

Theyr letters were NAR

E K Then cam the Ternarie — BLN, and orderly they sayd thus

1 Ab illo
2 Per illum
3 Cum illo

Bob. Qui caret hijs tribus, [E K: he whispereth to the first Three lea<ni...>

to him and with all, seeing me muse at the Aposiopesis, h<e...>

No No , Thow shalt not dowt [pointing to me.]

In ecclesia Dei, laborabit in Vanum.

E K. This Ternarie of men becam to haue one onely hed, and three <b....>

and that one head was in good proportion

E K. The side of the Diaphanous Globe opened, and this Transformed Tern<arie.....>

point into it, toward the multitude: and the people had theyr brests nak<ed:>

and semed to wepe: and to wipe theyr brests, and where they wiped the place becam fayre.

E K. This Ternary did seme to stand vppon a trianguler stone, and to turn

(as a horsmyll doth, abowt one axeltree) orderly agaynst, and by, the hole of the Globe so opened. and euery of the three bodyes, in theyr turning, as they cam agaynst the open place of the Globe, they extended, and stretch out theyr hands toward the people: The first seamed to hold a rownd ball in his hand

.1. being very little, but fayre white.

2 The second body, his hand had in it, a little sword flamming w^th^ fyre.

3. The third had a thing like a hatt band of lawn, of many cullours, which ever as his turne cam to be agaynst the opened hole, he seamed to cast tow= ard the people, and the people did seme to be drawn to him ward, by the casting of it toward them.

These three bodyes, thowgh they turned contynually, yet did the face or Cowntenance of that one Compownd hed, stedyly and immoveably regard or loke into the Globe at the forsayd hole therof.

Ho A wonder to behold the heuen, much more this.

E K. Now this Ternarie separated it self, and the hole or Clyft in the Globe did shut to. These three did sit down by Bobogel.

Ho ——— Sunt semper, et Cibus illorum est vnus.

△ Note. The first Ternarie, they seemed to stand leaning to Bobogel

The Third Ternarie was set orderly and vicissim, close by Bobogel his feete, one of these betwene two of the first, euer

so that orderly one of the first, and one of the Third ternarie:

one of the first and one of the third; one of the first and one of the third.

E K. Then cam the Ternarie ANA

They sayd, orderly thus. 1. Ab illo sed

2 Cum illo sed, looking on his own belly

Δ Then I demaunded of theyr [Appr]

Apparayle: and E K sayd that these were brauer than the former Ternary. Bobogel sayd, Aliqui a dignitate, Caeteri talia quia non sunt Digni. this he sayd pointing to theyr appa=

Then the third sayd. 3. Per illum, Per illū, Per illū ‖rayle with a frowning cowntenance thrusting furth his hand.

E K. They ioyne to gither into one hed and three bodyes.

The Hole of the Globe opened very wyde now

This one

Marginal notes:

line 5: .3. / BLN

line 17: Penitence

line 19: ◊

line43: 4 / ANA

[54a]

This one Compownd Hed had many eyes, many noses, many mowthes, as thowgh it were a Cahos of Faces, in one hed, but three bodyes. One of this bodyes had in his hand a little Ball, like the other before, [but] very white, but with twynkling brightnes in it.

The other two bodyes, theyr handa were emptie.

E K. They turn in order agaynst the Hole of the Globe. But the People regarded them not: but at the comming of the hand with the Ball, against the hole, the people loked a little vp at it.

Bob. sayd. Et quia carebant in ardentibus ignis

E K. These, being dissolved into theyr former state, go and sit (with hevy chere) by them that sat affar of from BOBOGEL. Theyr apparaill semed to be simple: theyr good apparayles was gone.

Δ. Here I fownd a certayn error in my writing of the first Notes: which I since amended in the writing of this: But while that error did trubble me, the spirituall creature sayd these wordes Bob —— The Fawt is in E K his remembrance, and not in his will. Note this,

LEE ar the Three that stand with me
NAR are the Three that I reiect
BLN are the Thre which are enterlincked with me
ANA are the Three that are reiected.

Bob. sayd. Omnes naturam ad, Sed, Nôn in illo.

E K. The 30 remayning, cam all away, and satt betwene Bobogel and the reiected Cumpany. and frō that Cumpany cam onely 7 to the Circle agayn. Euery of these 7, sett theyr feete, eche vppon a letter of the Circle, which letters are these,

AOIDIAB

E K. They say, In*vse, we are perfect; Misvsed, we are Monsters.

Sumus septem Januae Naturae, et sui ispius qui novit Deum.

E K. These 7, seme to vanish into wynde, or white smoke, and to fall into the Globe. And the six reiected, turn into a black smoke: and the rest of the 30 seemed also converted into black smoke, and to fall into the Globe.

Bob. sayd In sexto et septimo sunt omnia.

E K The six that were next him, semed to clyng hard and close to Bobogel

(Bob. Behold.) E K They be ioyned all into One body, and becam like the sonne, into the forme of a bowle or Globe: and so moved vp [the] or rowled vp the small narrow race, or line vnworne, which remayned higher then the chayre, toward the top of the Diaphanous Globe, as before is declared.

So that this Princely [Jen] Noble man, and his six adherents, in this manner went out of sight

Ho Formator horum, secundus est in Heptagono:

They are diuided into the day, as the other wer before: But wheras

the other are chiefly vppon that day which you call Monday, so are these to be Vsed onely on the Sabaoth day.

Theyr Vse, is onely thus (obseruing the former order) with the Circle vppon the grownd. The first six, /△ of the six orders/ with theyr King and the seale of theyr Prince, taketh place in the whole body of the day: The other being 6 tymes six, are diuided into the partes of the day as before.

The Letters onely where they stode, are theyr names and Characters

What doth the heven behold or the earth conteyne, that is

·Δ· not

Note the Circle vppon the grownde.

Marginal notes:

line 22: Δ There re= / mayned 10 / tymes Three line 23, over second 'Cumpany': Δ of 30 line 27: Note by theyr sitting / that they are / indifferent: and so / they say:

line 27: * Δ They se= / med therfore / to sit betwene / the perfect / and the re= / iected: as / indifferēt.

line 31, over 'the 30 seemed': Δ beside AOIDIAB

line 32: 6, 7.

line 36: NOTE / the narrow / path, above / the chayr.

line 38, over 'adherents': LEE. BLN line 40: Δ / Bornogo.

line 42: Monday

line 43: Sonday:

line 44: Note former. ergo / There is also a /·Δ· circle on the grownd line 47: Practise. / by .6.

line 49: Names and Cha= / racters line 52 RH: vide ante 3 folia, of my fete placed vppon the / Tables: Ergo they shold seme to be on the grownd line connects 'ANA' (line 20) to 'six' (line 30)

[54b]

is not (or may be) subdued, formed and made by these.

What lerning, grownded vppon wisdome, with the excellencies of Nature, cannot they manifest?

One in heuen they know

One and all in men, they Know.

One and all in erth, they know.

Measure heuen by a parte, (my meaning is, by these few)

Let God be Glorifyed: His name praysed.

His Creation well taken: and his Creatures, well vsed.

Δ I craued for some playner Instruction, as concerning the vse of the...

and he answered:

Ho Behold: Are thy eyes so blynde? Dost thow see and wilt not see. Thy mynde telleth the. Thy Vnderstanding [furdeth the] furthereth and thy Judgemēt doth establish it: That as thow sawest a Body in three places, and of Three Compositions: Thowgh but two in /forme/a So shall this work haue relation, to tyme present & present vse, to Mysteries far exceding it. And Finally to purpose and intent, Wherby the Maiestie, and Name of Go<d,> shall and may, and of force must appeare, with the Apparit<ion> of his wonders, and mervayles, yet vnhard of.

Dixi.

Δ Than Immediately after he began agayne as followeth.

Ho Venito, Veni (inquam) adesto. Veni Rex.

O Rex, Rex, Rex Aquarum, Venito, venito inqu<am.>

Magna est tua, maior autem mea potestas

Deus nr, restat, regnat, et est, Quod, et sicut fuit

E K. Then cam one and sayd ——— Parati sumus nomen eius Creatoris nr̄i, nomen, nomen laud<are>

Nomen (inquam) Vnius nunc et viuentis.

Obscura sunt haec a͞is obscuris. Vera et manifesta Veris et perfectis.

Ecce adsunt E K. he that sayd this, is as thowgh h<e> were a king, with a Crown on his hed: His apparayle was a long robe whitish: But his left arme was very white, and his righ<t> arme, black.

E K There cam after this King a Cumpany of 42: and [euery] e.<very> one of them had a letter in his forhed, and they were 7 in a row and six, downward.

The King had written in his forhed

BABALEL

The first 7, (begynning frō E K his left hand toward his right) had these letters, and the second, Thirdth etc had these letters as here appeare.

.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.
E	I	L	O	M	F	O
N	E	O	T	P	T	A
S	A	G	A	C	I	Y

Ho At the next tyme, more.

O	N	E	D	P	O	N
N	[A]	O	O	N	M	A	N
E	T	E	V	L	G	L

△ Oe quod viuit Laudet Deū

Vnum et trinū, in oe a͞enum

E K The cloth draws. Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: Theyr off<ice>

line 2: Wisdome.

line 8: △ / This boke is / sometimes / called liber / Creationis / & sometimes / Tabulae / Creationis line 16: A Threfold / Vse of this / Doctrine line 25: Rex Aquarū

line 34: Note this / Kings appa= / rayle, and / shew.

line 40: King / BABALEL

[55a]

Noūeb. 20. Tuesday, a meridie circa 2ª.

△ After a great half howre attending, and diuerse tymes our prayers to god

The black Cloth was pulled vpward: and so vanished away.

Ho appeared sitting in his chayre, and his face toward me: and so looking abowt he paused awhile half a quarter of an howr.

In the meane space cam one skypping lightly, a little boy, in a grene coate and sayd, He is here, at an ynche Than he sayd, Hark. To me he sayd, Ha Sir ha. △ what wilt thow say to me? [Grene Coate] I am Multin his minister, wilt thow any thing with me? I cannot tarry. △ Then this skipiak espyed a spirituall creature comming, and sayd: Ha, ar you there? △ and so went out of sight

△ This was King BABALEL, with a crown of Gold on his hed, his gar= ment whitish, and his right [ar] sleue [of] on his arme, blak: and the left sleve very white. He seamed to stand vppon water

The other 42 cam likewise and stode

Bab. Veni princeps 7 principū qui sunt Aquarū Principes.

Ego sum Rex potens et mirabilis in aquis: cuius potestas est [in] aquarū Visceribus.

Princeps iste (△ pointing to a Prince, new cōme to sight which had a red long robe, and a cerclet of gold on his hed) est Tertius

principium in Heptagonon. △ I sayd Heptagono: he replyed

Heptagonωρ, [ad] and sayd: verè, planè; et perspicuè dixi.

Bab Mensurasti aquas? Befafes answered, Factum est.

△ I seemed to dowt of some matter here, and [Bab] /Befafes/ sayd, Thow shalt be answered in any dowt. I am thy frende: I haue fauored the in many things. Phērs haue imagined vaynely of my name.

For thy loue towards me, Thow shalt know my name.

I was with Salomon; I was also (vnknown) with Scotus.

I was in respect of my powr: vnknown, in respect of my name.

He called me Mares. Since I was not with any. And I preserued the from the powre of the wicked, when I told the things of truth to come. When I rid thy house of wycked ones, and was with the in extremities. I was with the. Behold: I was with the throwghly.

△ Then he bad E K Ax me, yf I knew Obelison. △ I had to do with Obelison, but by reasons of my Skryers nawghtynes, I was in dowt

what I might credit.

Bef. Thow shalt know this for a most manifest truth hereafter.

I am Obelison, the fifth of the Seuenth which haue the skowrging of Obelison the wicked: but not wicked for euer, neyther accursed to the ende.

We Angels haue tymes, and our faultes are amended.

△ shall I Note your name, by Befafes. he answered, my name is so, in dede: The AEgyptians called me [so] Obelison in respect of my nature. △ I pray you what is the Etymologie of Obelison? Bef. A pleasant deliuerer

E K The former 7, haue Crownes: Theyr letters stand betwene theyr feete. EILOMFO etc

Bef. Thow hast receyued these letters allready.

E K. The water seameth, contynually to pass ouer these letters.

Bab. I Gouern vppon Tuesday

E K the first seuen take the water and throw it vp, and it becomethh

∴△ The fifth of the seventh

I vnderstand not this yet Vide lib. 5. A° 1583
Maij <.l.>

Marginal notes:

line 9: Multin / his Mini / ster line 12: <Babalel.>

line 16: <He calleth / Befafes.>

line 19: Befafes.

line 20: The Prince his / apparayle.

line 24: Prince / Befafes / my old frende / vnknown of me line 30: Mares

line 34: OBELISON

line 39: NOTE of / Wicked spirits / some restitution / to favor line 46: or Cerclets / haps.

line 50: Tuesday.

line connects 'principū' (line 16) and '7' (line 46).

---

1 it becommeth clowdes.

2 The second throweth it vp, and it becommeth hayle and snow.

One of the first 7. sayde, Behold, Behold, Behold:

All the motion of the waters, and saltnes thereof is aequally <mea> sured by vs: we giue good success in battayles, reduce ships, &

all manner of vessells that flote vppon the seas: our might <is> is great. Müse not For whan the seas are trubbled, with <the>

the wickednes or vprore of man, our Authoritie giueth victor<y,> <from> from him that is most Victorious. Fishes and Monsters <of the> of the sea, yea all that liueth therein, are well known with

Behold we are (generally) the Distributers of Gods Judgm<ents> ents vppon the waters that couer the earth.

E K Than stept furth all the rest

The Third seuen sayd, some of vs conduct the waters throwgh the

.3. earthe. Other of vs, do beawtify Nature in her Composition.

The rest of vs are distributers and Deliuerers of the Threasures and the vnknown substances of the seas

Bab. Praysed be God which hath created vs, from the begynning with with Glory. His Glory be augmented.

E K. Now the 42 diue into the Water and so vanish away: and Befafes, and Babalel also wer suddaynly gon.

Ho. standing vp sayd, Lo, Thus thow seest the glory of Gods crea= tures: Whome thow mayst vse, with the consideration of the day, theyr king, theyr Prince, and his Character.

The King and prince gouern for the whole daye: The rest

according

| to the six partes of the day

Vse them, to the glory, prayse, and honor of him, which created them to the Laude and prayse of his Maiestie.

A day is 24 howres. △ But whan doth that Day begyn?

Ho Thow shalt be towght the rest.

Ho, proceded, and sayd { Vitam dedit Deus omnibus Creaturis Venite. Veni Ignis, veni Vita mortalium (inquam) Venito. Adesdum. Regnat Deus

Ô Venite. Nam vnus ille Regnat, et est Vita Viuentium.

E K. Now there commeth a King, and hath a Prince next him and after them 42, like ghostes or smokes, wit<hout> all forme; hauing euery of them a little glittring spark of fire in the myddest of them.

The first 7, are red, as blud
The second 7, not so red
The Third 7 like whitish smoke
} The sparks of these were greater then of the rest.

△ Whereas in the former Treatise, ther was a dowt of Butmono The fowrth and Blisdon theyr offices, being assigned here clere contrary: The dowt may <be answer>ed by <the> notes A° 1582 Maij <.5.> of the Table and my character.

Marginal notes:

line 4: Theyr officis

line 7: *△

line 14: The Third 7.

line 16: Threasors in / the seas.

line 23: Practise

line 25: King and Prince / <g>overn the whole / day.

line 27: Vse

line 29: A Day:

line 33: Ignis

line 46: Therefore I suspēt / < some Intruder / to have first ....>

[56a]

The fowrth 7
The fifth } are diuerse cullours: All had firie sparks in theyr middle.
The sixth

Euery spark had a letter in it.

Verè beatus (sayd this King B B A R N F L 5

that now cam) B B A I G A O

Δ I pray you to tell me yo^{r}, name. B B A L P A E ƿ

I am the fowrth in the Table B B A N I F G and the two and twentyth B B O S N I A

Δ I vnderstand in the Table of the B B A S N O D 10 names collected frō the 7 Tables of 49. And in those tables taking of the first septenarie Baligon for the first /King^{c}/, and in the second septenarie Bobogel for the second King, and in the third septenarie, taking Babalel, so accownted the third and in the fowrth septenarie, the first of septenarie is Bynepor, and 15

so accownted the fowrth: but accownting euery one from Baligon

he is the 22th: and so the fowrth and the two and twentith.

E K. a Voyce I here, saying, you shall begynne to work agayn, at 6 of the clok next.

△ Oīm bonorū largitori, laus perennis et immensa, Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 8: <..... / .... or / King.>

line 8, over 'fowrth': △: King line 12: < △ Butmono / his Pri> nce

△ Abowt half a quarter of an howre after 6: we retorned to the work and the cloth was drawn away. Ho sitting in the chayre.

E k. There appeared a little ronning water very clere chrystalline: and on this side the 42 last specifyed.

Bynepor sayd: Lo, ([and than he kneled down, and semed to pray, a prety while)] The generall state and condition of all things resteth, onely and dependeth vppon the distribution, and participation of my exalted most especiall and glorified powr. My sanctification, glory, and renowne, all thowgh it had begynning, cannot, shall not nor will haue ending. He that Measureth, sayd, and I was the ende of his workmanship. I am like him, and of him, yet not as partaking nor adherent, but distant in One degree.

The Fire that holdeth, or is, the first Principle of all things in generally, /generaltye/ hath his [workmanship of my creation] vniversall and vnmeasurable powre in the workmanship of my Creation: Visible and Invisible, were not, withoute my record. when he cam I was magnified by his comming, and I am sanctifyed, world Without ende:

Vita suprema,
Vita superior,
et Infirma, sunt meis mensurata manib[us]

Notwithstanding, I am not of my self, Neyther is my powre myne owne,

Magnified by his name: Behold I dubble life from One, vnto a thowsand of Thowsands: and one thowsand of thowsands, to a number

---

Marginal notes:

line 25: △ Note this Chrys= / talline water.

line 32: Ipse* dixit.

line 35: Fire, one of / the 4 Elemēts line 38: Ipse

[56b]

number, exceeding cownt: I speak in respect of mans Capacitie. I am <in all> and all hath some being by me: yet my powre is nothing in respe<ct of> his powre, which hath sent me. Write this reuerently.

note it with Submission: What I speak hath not byn reuealed <no> /not/[c] in these last tymes, of the second last world.

But I begynne new worldes, new peoples, new kings, <& new> knowledge of a new Gouernment. To be short,

Vitam [dedit] tradidit, deditq$_R$ mihi pot<estatem> =tem esse, Viuere, et in perpetuum, glorific<....>
omnibus et vbiq$_R$.

As these cannot be comprehended, what they are, with m<or....>
So cannot any thing be browght to pas in me, without a <living> sight, and a perfect mynde.
I Gouern vppon Thursday. For Instruction, the rest as befo<re.>
Thow shalt work mervaylously, by my workmans<hip> in the highest. To whome* (with overshaddow<ing> thy light, with life, and blessing you both, in his name of whome I am the Image,) I prayse God.

E K. Now he descendeth into the Globe, and it becam very bright there among the people: which, allso, at his comming, seamed to be more cherefull.

Ho stode vp and moved his hand, aboue his hed, cumpassing with it a loft.
After that cam a Cumpany, with a King, and after him a prince
The king had a red robe on, and a crown on his hed.
The Prince had a robe of many cullours, and in his hed a Cerclet.
The Cumpany seemed to stand rownd abowt a little hill of Claye Behynde this Cumpany seamed to stand an innumerable multitude of Vgly people /a far of:/ Those which seeme to stand rownd abowt the little hill seme to haue in the palmes of theyr hands, letters, in order as here appereth.
[BINEPOR sayd]

△ The King spake. Beholde, All the Earth with her bowells and secrets what soeuer, are deliuered vnto me. And what I am there thow mayst know.
I am great, But he in whome
I am, is greater then I. Vnto my Prince, (my subiect) are deliuered the keyes of the Mysteries of the earth. All these /hand/are Angells that gouern vnder him whose Gouernment is diuided, as before, Vse them, they are and shalbe at thy cōmaundement. Those that stand afarr of vide lib° 5: 1583. Martij 26 / Vide de istis in libro Craco= vie<nsi Junij> 26. \ are the

---

Marginal notes:

line 5: Note second / last world.

" 6: Ecce oīa / Noua.

line 12: Note.

line 14: Thursday

line 16: *△ I dowt, / I did not here / pfectly at / this writing / down.

line 25: The king

line 26: The prince

line 27, over 'Cumpany': 42 line 28: An Innume= / rable Cum= / pany of vgly / Creatures, a / far of.

line 33: △ / Bnaspol

line 35: Wensday

line 40: △ / Blisdon line 43: Angells.

line 45: Vse them.

[57a]

are the spirits of perdition, which kepe earth with her Threasor, for him etc. and so furth. I haue sayd.

△ Ho, standing vp, sayd, His name is the fifth and the 29th: and his Prince his name, ȳ fifth, and the 23th. △ The first name, I vnderstand in Tabula collecta,

The second name I vnderstand, for the fifth to be in Heptagono and the 23th to be so fownd the same, in Tabula collecta.

Ho: Venite, vbi nulla quies, Sed stridor dentium

E K. Then cam the man agayn, with vgly fyrie flames out of his sides, which was here before, the last day. Ho beckened with his hand vnto him, [and] and his coates went to gither, and so couered that horrible sight.

E K. There appeareth a rownd Table, which 42 hold, and toss, all in fyrie flames.

Ho: Write quickly, thow /E K/ canst not behold it

E K. The first seameth to be a King with a crown on his hed, and the etc

Lo I Gouern (as I haue sayd before) All enchanters, Coniurers, witches, & Wicked spirites that are hated of God, and included for euer, in owteward darknes (except a few which remayn in a second payne, which gape and grone for the mercies of God, and haue tyme of Joye, whose measure I haue, and kepe accownt of) are all my governmēt.

By me thow shalt cast oute the powre of all wicked spirits

By me thow shalt know the doings and practises of euill men, and more then may be spoken or vttred to man.

Blessed be his name, whose Glory is euerlasting, fode to the Just, and sem= piternall .·. to the Wicked.

Ho The 36[the] name, is the King his name, And his Prince his name is the last written in the Heptagonon.

Δ Brorges.

Ho Venite vos qui sub mea estis potestate.

E K. Then cam bright People 42: And besides these, all the fyre swarmeth with creatures.

Theyr letters are in theyr forheds: these stand in a circle: they take the letters from theyr forheds, and set /them^c/ in a Circle

Ho Of these, I am Gouernor my self.

Behold I am of tyme present. I am of the last Ternarie.

Loke what may be wrowght, in all aëriall Actions, I can distribute and bestow at my pleasure: my tyme and day is Friday

The day of the last before, is Saterday

The day of the Fifth is Wensday

Beholde,

Marginal notes:

line 1: <Treasure hid in> earth, kept by wycked spirites.

line 3: <Bnaspol>
Bl<is>don

line 14: The King

line 15: Mark who sayd so / before line 17: Note a great / Secret of / spirits in payn / expecting / release.

line 23: Saterday

line 25: somwhat / was not hard / of me, or for= / got —— phaps Terror line 26, over 'King his name': .Δ. Bnapsen line 27: Δ saue one line 27 RH: this I considered / Note & 1583. Maij In dede after a sort / Brorges may be cownted the last, for the begyning secretly / was with Bralges line 30: Bralges / sayd his govern= / ment was of / such sup fol / 4.b.

line 34: The Circle / of letters.

line 36: The last Ternarie line 36 RH: That is expownded lib^{o} / 5. Martij 5 line 38: Friday

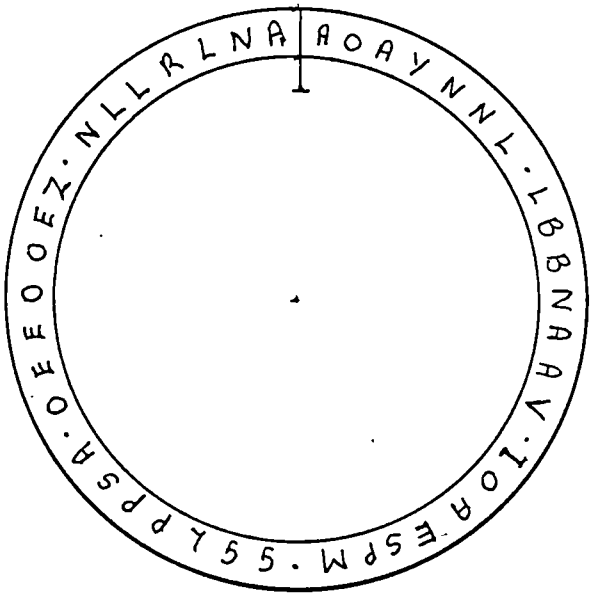
[57b]



☥ Ho Behold

I haue towght the. His name be blessed who raigneth and liueth [for] /<for>/<e>ue<r>

△ Amen, Amen, Amen.

☥ Ho. I will answer the of all Dowtes herein (being demaunded of me) to /morrow/ [morrow]

For, so I call it, for thy sake: Not, for that, it is so to me.

△ so he went away.

△ Then cam VRIEL, and MICHAEL, and an other (I think RAPHAE<L)> and the chayre and table appered, as in the first boke hath byn shewed: And also ☥ Ho had his peculier chayre, at his tymes of teaching me.

MICHAEL (sayd) Mercifull is our God, and glorious is his name

Which chuseth his creatures, according to his own Secret Judgement and good pleasure.

This Arte is the first part of a Threefold Art, ioyning Man (with the Knowledge of the WORLDE[1], the GOVERNMENT[2] of his Creatures, and the SIGHT[3] of his Maiestie):

Vnto him: (Ô, I say) vnto him; which is Strength, Medicine, and Mercie

to those that feare him:

Amen.

Δ Gloria, laus, honor, et perennis Jubilatio, sit Deo nro Omnipotenti,

Optimo, Maximoq.

Amen.

/flourish/

Δ Note, Remēber, and enquire what it meaneth, that no Mention is made of Bralges the Prince,—Nor of Blumaza his king. in this Treatise, being a certayn Repetition of the Heptagonum stellare, going next before.

Marginal notes:

line 10: Note a pe= / culier chayre line 14: Prima / pars Artis / Triplicis. / he termeth / this afterward / of three pro= / portions in / Esse: Consider / theyr three / principall points / here.

line 18 RH: Annael

line 26: 1588. on twelfth / day at night / as I reconsidered / the Method of this / boke, this cam / to my mynde.

line joins 'the WORLDE' (line 15) to 'proportions' (58a, line 37).

[58a]

Wensday. Noueb. 21: hora 7. a meridie

Δ There appered the first table, covered with a cloth of silk changeable cullour red and grene: with a little cloth vnder it: all hanging very low. The first Chayre allso: wherin Michael vsed to sit.

And Ho did appere likewise, and his peculier chayre: and he standing by it.

But the Diaphanous Globe, and the people or world in it, did not now appere.

and, bycause no voyce or word cam from these spirituall creatures, yet:

I declared that I did attend theyr pleasure first, as a scholer comming in the presence of his Master; and whan they had sayd those things which were for vs first, (at this instant) to lerne, that then, I wold move some dowtes of the premisses, as I was yesterday advised to do:

Ho, he held vp his rod, (which had two portions or partes of it black and one red: and sayde.

Ô quanta est hoīs infirmitas et Corruptio, qui Angelis, idq suis bonis, fidem autem Deo, vix habet?

Oīa mundana, faeces: Mundi Corruptiones in se habent:

Deus nr, Deus nr, Deus [nr], (inquam) ille nr Verus, cum Veris suis angelis, eiq /idq/ inseruientibus Semper verus est,

Pete quae vis? Dixi: et quod dixi, obumbralū

est veritate, iusticia et perfectione

Ecce, (Δ holding vp the rod)

Hic (Δ pointing to the ende of the rod)

Per hoc (Δ pointing to the middle of it)

Et a Mensurae fine, nos nostramq mensurabis potestatē.

Age (inquam) Quid vis?

Δ I, than, of the premisses vsed a little discourse: how they might para= bolically, betoken after more profownd matter, and litterally other:

yet what sense so euer the premisses had, that theyr first rudiments and Text was to be made somwhat playner to me, then yet they were: bycause I dowted as well of the vnderstanding of some of that, I had written, as allso of mys writing: eyther throwgh E.K. his mys reporting to me [his] matter shewed to him, or by my mys hering or negligēt writing etc. To some part therof he sayd these words ensuing Ho In vmbra mortis non est aequalitas.

Obscurum enim nihil est quod per illū /Ē K/ recepisti. Age.

Ho Thow hast a work of three proportions in esse; of 7 in forme: which is of it self diuided by a number septenarie, of the course, estate and determination of things aboue, things next, and things below: which, of it self is pure perfect and without blemish. Notwithstanding I will answer the thus

The 7 Kings are orderly conteyned in the first of the Seuens diuided in generall numbers: whose names are expressed, published and perfectly formed within the first grownd and fowndacion of this threefold work. The kings I meane with theyr Characters, and the names of theyr .7. liuing and semper adherent Ministers: Whose names thow mayst see

An Aue: Rocle Liba not onely

Marginal notes:

line 2: Note. / The Colour / red & grene / of ye Table of / Covenant.

line 5: Two Chaires.

line 21: Note of this Rod.

line 37: A Three= / fold work.

line 45: Threfold / Work line 48: The Kings with / their Characters.

line 48, central at foot of page: I vnderstand of Il, An, Aue &c / in the characters of the 7 kings.

[58b]

Δ. Filij filiarū —— An, Aue &c

not onely there written, but openly, and most playnely, truely, and sincerely spoken of before: as, by due examination of thy bokes thow shalt manif<estly> perceyue. Notwithstanding, as euery king, in his Maiestie, <doth> comprehend the dignitie of his [hol] whole seat and estate, So I of my self being the First, haue the gouernment of my self perfectly, as a mysterie known [to] /vnto/c my self: which is a thing vnlawfull to be published vnto man and lawfull in respect of the charge committed vnto vs: and the slender

Dignification of manns frayle estate, Which thow mayst see in the H<ep> tagonon: where there wanteth a name: The rest of the S..

the vtter Circumference of the Globe, are the six Kings <or> ... following: according as they are written in the Mysteries of the ...

which do begynne the Powres, with theyr Prince, and th<e> ... Characters orderly taken, by and vppon the Heptagonon. ...

O God, how easy is this first vnderstanding.

Thow hast byn told perfectly, playnely and absolutely, not onely the Condition, dignitie, and estate of all things that God hath fra= med: But allso withall, thow wart deliuered the most perfect forme and Vse of them.

But this will I tell the, (to the intent thow shalt know: and forby cause I wold not, thow sholdest be ignorant in true Wisdome) that those Six Names in and vppon the Heptagonum are Collected, do growe and are gathered from the names in generally affore sayd.

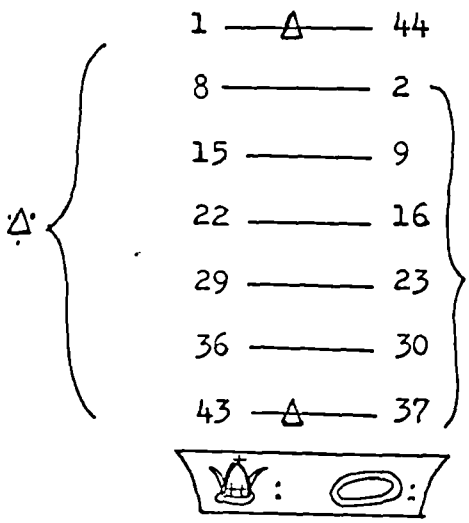
Take the Names, I will teache the to know them, which els, by ... direction thow canst not fynde.

Loke thy First Table: I am called BALIGON with men. Thow hast Noted my name (which is secret) among the Angels, begynning with this letter M, consisting of 7 letters, the last being an A.

I am called MARMARA: but otherwise CARMARA: but that letter M, shall not be expressed. etc.

Thow seest, next BOBOGEL; He it is that is the Second King Thow seest the name BORNOGO, to be the first vppon the Heptagonū: it is his Prince. And therfore I did Note him with a Coronet, and not with a Crown: nay rather, but with a Cerclet abowt his hed. etc

△ I concluded (of his instruction) the Kings and theyr Princes, theyr names to be thus lerned out of the Table Collected of 49 names, it is to weete



then Rex. Princeps

[△ He allowed of my Coniecture for these .6. but of his Prince △ I than sayd nothing: tyll at the fayr writing hereof, this, here added, cam into my mynde. Howwell I know not yet: Novēb. 23.] and farder he sayd, The Characters 50

Marginal notes:

line 3: Examination / to be made / of these bokes line 5: The First King line 6: A Mysterie.

line 8: △ / forte, Vnlawfull / and was myshard.

line 11: The Globe.

line 13: △ / forte their line 13, over 'Prince': princis line 16: △ / Liber Creationis line 17: Note, what hath/ bin tawght in / this boke.

line 20: Δ as may apper, / by the 49 names / Collected line 24, over 'els, by': w^th out line 25: Δ / I suspect / this to be / an impfect / phrase.

line 26: /hand/

line 27: Name / among / Angels line 30: MARMARA / CARMARA.

line 31: M

line 32: Bobogel
Bornogo

line 33, over 'first vppon': Δ ⨯ name expressed.

line 35: Note Attire.

line 40, between '△' and figures: Addendo 7 — / fit hic processus. / Ergo addendo 7, / numero 43, pro= / ueniet 50: numerus : / maior [41] quā 49, / per .l. qui respi= / cere pt illum [44]; primū Re- / gem Baligon.

line 41, under central '△': Addendo 7, fit processus hic. g° / Si 7 addantur numero / 37: inde emerget 44. / pro proximo principe line 46, under above note: [Δ / It is not Baginol, / but Bagenol / with e not i. / and therefore con / sider] line 46, RH of above note: 44° / .l.

line 41, under RH '△': ·Δ·As far as I remēber, he / sayd, My Prince is in my / self: which is a mysterie line 44, under above note: [·Δ· My Coniecture (herevppon, and / vppon this retrograde respect / to finde the princis among the / 49 names in Tabula Collecta)/ is, that Baginol is the Prince / vnder BALIGON: by cause the /

Letters are all one: but the order / of theyr places

diuerse: and so / is his prince conteyned in him self.]

line joins 'Δ' (line 1) to 'before' (line 3)

[59a]

Δ Note that he calleth that, contynually a Globe:

vppon such a globe Naluage shewed out all the Calls

The Characters of Kings, are in the Globe, and of the Princis in the Heptagonon

Δ Note, frō the on the left side, vntyll these words finished, he was out of sight. and /whanc/ [what] he had ended these words, he cam in sight

agayn: and browght a thing in his hand like a stere ∴ ☆ : or Heptagonū

Ho Beholde. Euery one of these Princis hath his peculier Table.

Thow hast Noted the First Table which begynneth, as I will tell

the.

/1./ 2: In BOBOGEL, that O, (the second [the] letter) is the first of the Table

OF/E/SNGLE. and the second of Befafes, is the second, and the thirdth of the third: and the fowrth of the fowrth and the fifth of the fifth, and the sixth of the sixth, and E, in the seuenth, [Bag] Bnagole is the seuenth and last of this first seuen of this first Table: [so] accownted the first (AVZNILN

The second seuen by like order is gathered of Babalel, and the rest of his Septenarie. And so furth to the ende downward as thow didst before. etc.

2. 3: In the second Table; L (the first letter therof), is out of Bobogel his last letter, the second letter, is the sixth of Befafes: the third is the fifth of Basmelo etc and so you haue LEENARB.

for the rest kepe that order downward to the ende of the last name Bamnode. trauersi, quasi retrograde.

3. 4: In the Third, begyn at the lower letter of the latter worde of the last of the second seven: and so vpward, toward the right hand: △ the last word is of second seven is Bnagole: the last letter therof is e: which is the first of this Third Table and the i, in Brisfli, is the second, and l in Branglo the thirdth, and than so furth, vpward, overthwart, toward the [left rig] left hand till ye

come to Bobogel, his second letter being O. Then to n in Bonefon: e in Ber male: o in Bragnop. etc.

4. 5: For the Fowrth, loke, Bobogel. Than loke to this fowrth Table

The first B of the table is the first B of Bobogel

The second B of this Table, is the B of Befafes,

The third letter is [a] the second letter of Basmelo.

The fowrth letter, [R] is the thirdth of Bernole

The fifth is the fowrth of Branglo.

The sixth is the fifth of Brisfli

The seuenth is the sixth of Bnagole // ble.

And so in to the next sevens downward orderly for the rest of the Ta=

.5. 6: The Fifth begynneth from Bnagole vpward: begynning at the last letter being e: and then vpward crosswise: exactly tyll the B of Bobogel

And so of the next seuen, for the next: begynning at the n of Bonefon, and so furth.

6. 7: In the sixth, (the Infernall Table) The first is B of Bobogel. the second is A of the 15th: The third is N of the 22th: the fowrth, is the fowrth of the 29: the fifth of the 36: the sixth of the 43: and the seuenth of the 49: being E in Bamnode

two letters being taken in that last septenarie.

The second septenarie begynneth at the first of the 15th, the second at the second of the 22th, (being Y), the third at the thirdth of the 29/th/. then the 4th of the 36th,: the 5th[e] of the 43th.

Marginal notes:

line 3: Characters

line 9: <....> peculier / <...> of Princis line 12: <....> king / <..... fir>st, / [BOBO] / answering / to Blumaza, / as I perceyued / 1583 Maij .5. manè / by meditation: and / of Necessity must be: / yf that last be for Baligon.

line 21: Δ / The next L is the last / letter of Babalel / and then transversim / as before etc.

line 26, over 'lower': last line 26, over 'latter': last line 27, over 'right': left

---

7. 1: The Seuenth: the first A, is the A, of Baligon, and so downward all the second letters of the 7 kings. Then all the third letters, then all y/e/fowrth letters, Then all fifth letters, then all the sixth letters only, & finally the seventh, and last letters of the first names of the 7.

tenaries.

△ Note, this Table is made all of Kingly substance. etc.

△ Now I trust I vnderstand (meterly well,) the making of the 7. Tables: I wold gladly here some instruction of the great Circular table (which you call the Globe): which hath the Ki.... with theyr Characters, and so within, 7 tymes 7, seuen tymes.. 7 tymes 6, seuentymes furnished with Letters and numbers.... sorts

Ho That doth appertayn to an other tyme.

E K The Cloth was lett down; and the stone did <y>eild voice but nothing visible but the forsayd blak cloth.

Ho One thing is yet wanting. a mete receptacle etc

there is yet wanting a stone etc

One there is, most excellent, hid in the secret of the depth etc

In the vttermost part of the Roman Possession

Ho Write. All lawd, Glorie and honor be vnto him, which rayneth for euer. Amen. Be of good Cumfort

Lo, the mighty hand of God is vppon the Thow shalt haue it. Thow shalt haue it, Thow shalt haue it

Dost thow see, loke and styr not frō thy place ∴E K pointed toward it

Δ I see it not

Ho It is sanctified, blessed, and ..Δ.....

In the vse of his Creatures.

Thow shalt preuayle with it, with Kings, and with all Creatures of the world: whose beauty (in vertue) shall be more worth then /the^c/ Kingdomes of the earth.

Loke, if thow seest: But styr not, for the Angel of his powre is present.

E K loked toward my west wyndow, and saw there first vppon the matts by my bokes a thing, (to his thinking) as big as an egg: most bright, clere, and glorious: and an angel of the heyth of a little chylde holding vp the same thing in his hand toward me: and that angel had a fyrey sword in his hand etc.

Ho Go toward it; and take it vp.

Δ I went toward the place, which E K pointed to: and tyll I cam within two fote of it, I saw nothing: and then I saw like a shaddow, [of the bignes of] on the grownd or matts hard by my bokes vnder the west window. The shaddow was rowndysh and less then the palm of my hand. I put my hand down vppon it, and I felt a thing cold and hard: which (taking /vp^c/ <v>p I) perceyued to be the stone before mentioned.

Ho Kepe it sincerely.

Veritas in veritate: Deus in Deo, Vnus in vno est.

Let no mortall hand towche it, but thine owne.

Prayse God. 50

△ Illi qui venturus est Iudicare Saeculū p ignē sit ōis honor, laus, et gloria, in sempiterna saecula. Amen.

Marginal notes:

line 9: The Vse of / The Circular / Table, (here / before, often, / called a globe) / at another tyme line 15: A voyce

line 27: △ / I omitted / a word, and our memories / could not yeld / it, <then> perhaps / Dignifyed line 36: An Angel hol= / ding vp the / stone.

line 49: Caue [with hand]

[60a]

Liber Mysteriorū Quintus

[flourish]

1583 Martij 23.

[flourish]

Liber 6.us

Liber .7.us

[60b]

[blank]

Jesus. ✝ .

< An: >° 1583. Martij 23. Saterday. a meridie.

Δ E K being cõme, with M^r /John^c/ Husey of Blokley. (on the 22 day of marche and E K being desirous to vnderstand somwhat of our spirituall friendes

as concerning such matter as had falln out very strange to him and M/r/

Husey: abowt a certayne moniment of a boke and a skroll fownd in

Northwik hill by the direction and leading of [some] such a spirituall

Creature, as when they had gotten the same, and they endeuored by art to haue some exposition of the skroll, written in strange characters, they wer willed to repayre to me, and there they shold be answered: etc: which thing now they did.

Being therfore now ready to receyue instructions of our frendes, there appered

[first] in the stone One, in a foles cote, going abowt a clowde, which appered first in the stone. I charged him if he were the enemy of God to depart. He [tore] /tore/ his clothes all, and appeared all hery vnder. and sayd Penetrasti Vim iniusticiae meae

Δ Glorifie God and depart. [Fe] he sayd Feci, Nam decedo.

He went away as it had byn a brush of fethers pulled in peces.

The Clowd wexed bigger, and went all to the right hand

At length the Table appeared, But the Chayre seamed not to be /of^c/ the same sort it was, but more Glorious.

Then appeared three, of which, two went away, and one tarryed behynde.

he sayd———————— Auete

Verum est, et incredibile he kneeled to the Chayre and spake, but his words could not be discerned

Via, veritas et [wirtus] virtus, vnum sunt: et multiplex et admirabilis est eius magnitudo: Et venit ab ore tuo flatus, (et vitam habet) quo viuunt oia, nutu, et illuminatione tua.

Aue Verbum, Aue rerum formatrix et mensura eorum quae fuerunt, sunt, et erunt: Illuminasti oculos creaturarum monimentis et admonitionibus planis: Vita bonis, mors autem impijs, et a consideratione tua abiectis. Quanta et innumerabilia sunt, (Justitia) dona tua? O remiges varpax

Kyrie eleyson.

Δ All this he sayd Kneeling to the chayre; and then he rose; and I sayde O beata Trinitas, mitte lucem et veritatē tuam, vt inme ducant ad montem sanctum, et ad tabernacula tua.

Me. Vbi, non increduli.

Δ Nos non sumus increduli: sed spes nra viuit aeterna et Omnipotens est Veritas, fons vitae

Me Adduxi vobis aquam ex eodem riuulo. Medicina verò est imperfectionibus et necessitatibus vris. Intelligite nunc et quis sum, et quibus ornatus. Bibite, et accipite Ossibus vris pinguidinem. Multae namq sunt mortaliū imperfectiones. habeo, et habebitis: Adduxi, et videbitis. Verbum est

Lumen

Marginal notes:

line 6: The Book.

line 7: The boke fownd in / Northwik / hill line 15: Pilosus / Pilo[sus] line 29: Justi= / Justitia line 41: Aqua. <A>qua.

[61b]

Lumen illud quo oīs imperfectio [falletur] aboletur. Credentes introibu< ...>

in Sanctum eius. vbi potio, et Medicina sempiterna.

Cogitasti vere. . sum, etiam, et Credas. Nam veritate et iustitia, vera et perfecta sunt verba et disciplina eius.

What willt thow? 5

Δ Recte sapere. Me: Thow hast it.

Δ I perceyue it not: otherwise, then that I beleue, it may be the decree of the highest.

Δ He shewed a Tree, and a great deale of water at the roote or botom of it: and he sayd [Me] Hath this Tree, now, any frute? 10

Δ I see it not. But the skryer may say.

E K The water com_eth vp the tree, and it swelleth, and it hath frute, great, fayre, and red

Me. Lo I eate of it my self, and it lighteth the harte of those that are chosen [he semeth to eate]. So is it in the. 15

Δ Ecce seruus Domini, fiat Decretum eius in me (iuxta misericor= diam eius), de me pronunciatum.

Me Go and thow shallt receyue. Tary, and you shall receyue slepe, and you shall [see] see, But watch, and your eyes shall be fully opened 20

One thing, which is the grownd and element of thy desyre, is all redy perfyted yt seemeth that you beleue not. But I haue sayd, as he hath sayd and his worde shall endure for euer.
For he shall, and will performe it, for he liueth for euer.
Oute of Seuen thow hast byn instructed most perfectly of the lesser part, the rest I haue browght you, in this my vessell; A medicine sufficient to extinguish and quenche oute the enemy to our felicitie:
Muse not, thowgh I say ours: for we all liue in tasting of this liquor. His hed is a marble stone: His hart is the blud of a dragon. his leggs are the tops of the Northen Mowntaynes. His eyes are bright, and his face of many Cullours, eche substance amongst the turmoyle and trubble of nothing. For as then, they were Nothing: Had a forme applyable and necessary according to theyr quantitie and secret qualitie. The heuens are lightened by his two eyes: wherof the one sight is brighter then the other. Aboue and in him self which is by him self, and in no other, is this great and vertuous fowntayne: In nature Intellectuall he hath watred the plants

Marginal notes:

line 3: Δ <Loquitur de> / mea cogita= / tione quod / <esset> Raphaël line 23: Increduli

line 26: Seuen

line 31: A parable.

line 35: Nothing.

[62a]

plantes of her beauty, and stroked vp the garments of her felicitie. In her darkest members entreth in the taste and sauour of this piercing Medicine, reviving and recalling all things past present and to come, vnto theyr lively and dignified perfection. My words ar sentences. My sentences, wisdome; My wisdome the ende in my message of all things: Mighty and glorious is the Vertue of it, whose springs do endure, and are clere for euer: whose name be blessed △ Amen. I respect the time: God be with you.

/flourish/

Martij 24: Sonday: morning abowt 8.

△ The Table appeared, and the Chayre: and he who appeared yester= day: kneeling or rather lying prostrate on his face, as if he were a slepe: he lay a long while

A thing like a lambs hed did seeme to lik him: and then he rose and wiped his face, as thowgh [w] he had wept.

he sayd. Signa sunt haec vobis, humilitatis et paenitentiae; quae facio omnia, v̄ra, [sunt] non mea sunt. Laudetur verbum eius in Caelo, Laudetur etiam et in terris: Investigate potentiā in humilitate loquelae eius, et videbitis gloria frontis eius. Misericors namq et omnipotens est gloria virtutis eius. Vana sunt corruptionib^us suis; Necessaria verò Necessitatibus vestris. Nam fecit o̅ia ad laudem [eius] eius: et opera manuum suarum (Ecce) collaudant lumen vultus eius. Ad invicem diligite, Humilitate viuite. Medicina verò mea (quae eius est) omnia resanabit.

The feldes wither without the drops of his Mercie

Mans Memorie is dull, vnleast it taste of the sprinkling of this vessell

[E K. He hath a great thing vnder his gown.]

Nature and reason haue disputed profowndly and truely by the fauour hereof: it perceth therfore depely. But vnderstanding and reason haue eleuated and lifted vp the dignitie and worthynes of Mans Memorie, by taste hereof. The Immeasurable and vnspeakable begynnings (yea with the begynner and [Principall] Principle therof), are exactly (after a sort) and perfectly known of them. Yt hath towght from the earth vnto the heauens: from the heven, vnto his seat: from his seate, into his Diuinitie. From his Diuinitie, a Capable measuring of his vnmeasurable mercies. It is true, most true, and true shalbe for euer. That from the lowest grass to the highest tree, [from] the smallest Valley, to the greatest mowntayn; yea euen in the distinction, betwixt light and darknes: the measure whereof is the deapest: yea (I say) it hath towght a Judgment. When he axed

Wisdome

Marginal notes:

line 14: A lambs hed.

line 16: Note hereby to / consider theyr / actions, gestures / and other cir= / cumstances.

line 29: Nature ∴/ Reason ∴

[62b]

wisdome, and forsoke the world, he receyued it and it measured the things of the world. Great are the inward eyes, and greater are the meanes, which deliuer things subiect or obiect vnto them. Finally it procedeth from him, that procedeth: Wherevnto the first was formed, after, and not like. Whose fote slipping hath dasshed his hed in peces, and it becam dark: vntyll agayn, the Medicine which I haue browght, revived his slombring. Hereby, he, not onely knew all things, but the measure and true vse therof. Yf the body haue no inward fyre, it presently falleth. Euery Organ is voyde of qua= litie, vnleast a meane be adiected. So, is all that thow hast before, more wonderfull, then, as yet, profitable, vnleast thow be directed and led in vnto the true vse and order of the same. Creat are my words; and great is thy thowght: Greater shalbe the ende of [God] these Gods Mercies

New worlds, shall spring of these

New manners: strange men: The true light, and thorny path, openly seen. All things in one, and yet this is but a Vision. Wonderfull and great are the purposes of him, whose Medicine I carry. I haue sayde.

△ he lay down agayn, a good while. and at length he rose: after my long prayer and confession made to god, and my discourse to him. etc.

E K. He plucketh out a boke: all the leaves are, as thowgh they were gold, and it semeth written with blud, not dry.

△ he sayd, Cownt, △ he turned ouer the leaves. but E K could not well cownt them: wherevppon he sayd: I will maze out thy dulnes, and at length, make the clere

E K. There are 48 leaves

Me. Et finis est. One is one, neyther is, was or shalbe known: And yet there are iust so many.

These haue so many names, of the so many Mysteries, that went before

This is the second and the Third: The Third and the last.

This is the measure of the whole.

Ô what is man, that is worthy to know these Secrets? Heavy are his Wickednesses, Mighty is his synne.

These shalt thow know: These shall you vse. The one is a Master, the other is a Minister. The One, is a hand, the other is a finger: Crutch not. Neyther let wickednes tempt you: loue to ather.

Be contented with your calling: For, all beasts see not a like: yet are they all Creatures. Vessels, not of one bignes, yet are they all full.

Both, most sufficient; but according to fayth, and vnderstanding or Conscience. Yet must there be a third; whō, God doth not yet chuse

The tyme shalbe short: the matter great, the ende greater.

Ask now what thow wilt and he shall answer the

E K. There appered one like my self laying his two armes; one, on E K his sholder: and the other on a man his sholder vnknown to vs, but somwhat like to Mr Adrian Gilbert. etc.

Marginal notes:

line 7: *Note / *Adam, before / his fall, knew / all things

line 10: NOTE

line 12: The true vse / and order / of the premisses line 15: New worlds line 16: The Thorny Path:

line 17: A Vision.

line 22: A boke

line 27: 48: leaves

line 29: 48 1 / 49

line 30: Mysteries before.

line 32: Note of this / boke

line 36: J Dee, and / E K line 42: A Third to / be chosen line 47: A.G.

[63a]

△ ys it your will to procede in this matter, you now haue begonne withall:

or will you of these characters, and places of Threasor hid (here portray= ed by picture), say any thing?

Me: As thow wilt. △ As the will of God is, so will I. the will of God you know, better then I.

Me The aeternall liquor be vppon you. Ones more, what wilt thow?

△ I do prefer the heuenly liquor, before all things, and do desire to be bedewed with the supercaelestiall dew thereof.

Me. Consider the former tree.

△ The tre with the water at the fote?

Me Thow hast sayd. His growing powre, bringeth furth Act

Remember the Prince and Subiects, which haue powre (as is told the) of Erthly Bowels (The thing there, whose /which you/ desire of me, is no parte of my charge,) Call him: It is his office: for by his ministers it hath byn shewed. God doth impart his mercy, to those he loueth, in all necessitie: whether of the one, or of the other, where it is dew. I leave it: his Office is to speak it. Notwithstanding liue in truth and humilitie: Vse God his Creatures, to his glorie, and thy Necessitie, the profitt of thy own lymms, and cutting /out/[c] of all Canker and rotten flesh. Thow vnderstandest: For thy eyes shalbe opened. Amen.

E K. he spreddeth his hands abroade, and goeth away, and putteth his boke in his bosom as he goeth.

Δ Gloria pri. etc. Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 11: /Potentia Actus.

line 14: Δ Blisdon is the / prince vnder / Bnaspol the / king vide sup / lib. 4. / A° 1587. Circa / Maiū: Quidam Ben, / (spiritualis Creatura) / dixit ipi E K, / se custodiuisse [et] / [permisisse] illū / puluerē et librū / Dunstani. &c.

Martij 26. Tuesday hor. 10: ante Meridiē.

First, appered a clowd: and that vanished away: Three cam in, they made Cursy to the chayre: and two went away. Then the third which remayned, lay down of the grownd as before. There cam like a lambs hed, and licked him. he sayd then, as followeth: being stand vp:

Magna sunt, Alla, quae dixisti, making cursy to the chayre. There was a sword hard before. after a while he sayd.

Me Thy Kingdome is established in aeternitie

Thy hands are invisible, and no man can distinguish thy mercies.

I attend your desire.

Δ As concerning the Characters, and shew of the ten places, we are desirous to know whyther we may require now Bnaspol, or other vnder him, to say vnto vs, that, which may content vs, for the Case as it standeth with vs.

Me. The buylder of the Temple was riche, before it was adorned. With Wisdome, cam the Instruments necessarie for mans worldly vse. He hideth no light from those he loveth: neyther shutteth vp his tents from such as seke him. Yf one be great, Ô how small is the other? How small therfore is the mynde, and how much weakened that desireth those trifles? But as the smallest thing is feetest to the smallest

---

Marginal notes:

line 30: Δ / A lambs hed, / may be a token / of our humilitie / required etc.

line 37: Bnaspol.

[63b]

the smallest vse, so is the existinction of things of light accownt, necessary for the lightnes and vanitie of this world. A part (Notwithstanding) may beawtify the whole: and a small thing, may cure a great infirmitie.

I told the before, that my fete are not placed vppon such brittle and crakling sand, [nay] neyther are my lipps occupyed with the vanitie of nothing.

I will not manifest, in any point, the thing which thow desyrest, neyther is it any part of my charge.

I haue byn thy Scholemaster and director to the Sterne, to rule the reason therof, with those, which can reache the Judgment therof.

All those before spoken of, are subiect to thy call.

This vessell at all tymes they greatly accept: yet haue they times and seasons: when order breaketh in her self, the labor is in vayne.

Euery thing is for and to an ende.

Of frendeship at any time, thow mayst see them, and Know what thow willt.

But One thing differeth, the Ende, and the Begynning.

That onely, is the El, rod, or measure which all ready is deliuered

The stroke of which, bringeth all things, in theyr degree, to an ende:

as far as the seven (magnificencie of euery Seuen) stretcheth out it self.

Euery one (to be short) shall at all times and seasons, shew the direction in any thing. But, SO, thow canst not vse them, in the determination, and full ende of euery practise.

It is one thing to affectionate; and an other thing to effect.

What thow seest, is true, and to a former /:. furder/ commoditie: For, with Furderance, euery thing in Nature is ayded

Δ ———

Reade ouer that, which now, lastly, I declared: Then see, if you be not answered

Δ ———

Therfore mayst thow know, what that is, all thowgh thow do not, yet, or presently, put it in practise, by him, whose Charge it is, to deliuer it.

Δ Of your so greatly commended liquor I cam desirous to haue farder Vnderstanding.

Me. What liquor is more liuely then the dew of Truth, proceding frō a fowntayn most swete and delectable? euen that veritie which thy mowth hath preached of.

What water recreateth more, or cooleth ignorance deeper than the knowledg of our Caelestiall speche? your voyces are but fayned: shadows of the wordes and voyces that substantially do comprehend euery substance in his kinde. The things which you do loke on, bycause you see them not in dede, you allso do name them amysse:

you are confownded, for your offenses: and dispersed for your punishments: But we are all one, and are fully vnderstanding. We open the eare, and the passage thereof, from the sonne in the morning to the sonne at night.

Distance is nothing with vs, vnleast it be the distance, which separateth the wicked from his mercy. Secrets there are none, but that buried are in the shaddow of mans Sowle.

We see all things: and Nothing is hid from vs: respecting our Creation.

The Waters shall stand, if they here theyr own speche.

The heuens shall move, and shew them selues, when they know theyr thunder.

Hell shall tremble, whan they know what is spoken to them.

The first

Marginal notes:

line 1: Note. / All tymes / Speciall tymes connected by a line to the beginning of line 11

line 6: Note ——

line 10: NOTE.

line 14: Of frendship, / at any tyme.

line 21: Note

line 32: NOTE / Whose charge / it is to deliuer / it.

line 35: Veritas

line 37: Lingua et / Vox Ange= / lica line 46: The Powre / of the primitiue / diuine [spech] / or Angelicall / speche.

[64a]

The first excepted, No man euer was, is, or shall be (excepted where I except) that euer shall vnderstand, hath, or doth know the least part (ô it is incompre= hensible) of this Vessel. He named all things, (which knew it): and they are so in dede, and shallbe so for euer.

Thow shallt speak with vs; and we will be spoken with, of the.

Three they are excepted, which taken from amongst you, as they were, do yet speak with vs, which are provided in the three laws to destroy that Monstre

They are fed with caelestiall fode, and they, talking, speak all vnderstanding.

This it is, I take God, (onely him that created me) to recorde.

It is determined: els wold I not: And may be vndetermined, yf you break his Commaundemēts.

A Stone it is that perceth down all things before it; and kepeth them vnder him, as ....

the heuens do a clowde. What art thow, (O God,) and how mighty ar the drops of thy mercy, that preparedst [mai] man before to examin thy Mysteries?

The plagues of those that plagued them selues, shall fall vppon you, yf you transgress one iote of your eye sight.

For, What you desire, is graunted: and if you loue him, you shall endure for euer.

I am not as a clowde, sheuered with the wynde: nor as a garment, that waxeth olde, and torn in peces: But I am for euer (bycause my message is such) and my truthe shall endure for euer.

Beholde, Beholde, yea let heven and earth behold: For with this, they were created: and it is the voyce and speche of him, which proceded from the first, and is the first; whose glorious name be exalted in his own horn of honor. LO, this it is. [E K. he sheweth a boke, as he did before all gold] And it is truth; Whose truth shall endure for euer.

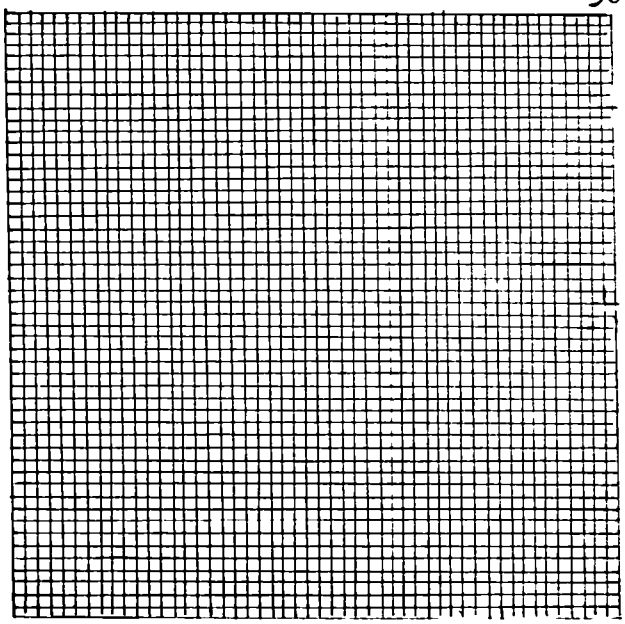
E.K. The leaues of the boke, are all lyned: full of square places, and those square places haue characters in them, some more then other: and they all written with cullour, like blud, not yet dry. 49 square spaces, euery way, were on euery leaf. which made in all .2401. square places



He wiped his finger on the top of the Table, and there cam out aboue the Table certayn Characters enclosed in no lines: but standing by them selues, and points betwene them

He pointed orderly to them with his finger, and loked toward the skryer at euery pointing

Me. Note what they are.

Δ They are Noted.

E K. He toke from vnder the Table, a thing like a great globe, and set that in the chayre and vppon that Globe, layd the boke. He pointeth to the characters: and cownteth them with his finger, being 21: and begynning from the right hand, toward the left.

He putteth of the Crown of gold, from his hed: and layeth it, on the Table. His here appereth 50 yellow. He maketh curay: and from vnder the Table taketh a rod of gold in his hand, being diuided into three distinctions. He putteth the ende of the rod on the first of

the

Marginal notes:

line 2: ADAM

line 5: Angelorū Collo= / quia line 6: Tres ab hoibus in / caelos rapti in / Angelis

conversātes line 8: Enoch

Elias < Jo...> } fortè.

line 10: NOTE

line 13: Yf

line 13, over 'perceth': fortè / presseth

line 15: Note

line 21: The boke / The first / Language / of God Christ.

line 31: The cullor of the / Letters.

line 37: 21 Characters

line 47: Δ By his often taking / things from vnder / the table it shold / seme that there shold / be som shelf made / vnder our Table

---

[64b]

the Characters, and sayeth Pa and there /appered/ in english, or latin letters, V——Pa——b

c

Pa: he sayd Veh: and there ap= pered Veh in writing: then Ged:
and after that he sayd Vnus Vnus Vnus, Magnus, Magnus, Magnus,.
es. Then he pointed to an other, and sayd Gal, and there appeared Gal: then or. [the Voyce seemed Orh]. Then yn
[the sownd semed vnd,] Then Graph: [The sownd Granpha, in the throte]
Then Tal, [in sownd stall or xtall.]
Then gon: then na [but in sownd Nach] as it were in the nose.]
Then ur, [in sownd our or ourh]
Then mals, [in sownd machls].
Then Ger, [in sownd gierh]. Then drux, [in sownd drovx]. Then Pal the p being sownded remissly.
Then med. he sayd Magna est gloria eius. Ceph, sownded like Keph, But before that, was Don: Then Van, Fam, Then Gisg. Then he lay down before it: and there cam two lines and parted the 21 letters into 3 partes, eche being of 7. he said. Numerus ô perfec= tissimus, Vnus et Trinus. Gloria tibi, Amen.
Then he put on his crown, and pluckt a black veale before all in the Chayre he sayd. Remember to lerne those names without boke, and to know them.

ת	ש	ר	ק	צ	פ	ע	ס	נ	מ	ל	כ	י	ט	ח	ז	ו	ה	ד	ג	ב	א
t	s	u	z	r	o	x	n	q	p	l	h	i	m	e	a	f	d	g	c	b

$\frac{\text{ת}}{\text{y}}$

/flourish/ 35

Marginal notes:

line 29:

line 32 RH: △. Thus I / deciphered / them after / a day or / two or / three

---

Martij 26. a meridie ☩ Tuesday hor. 5½

First there was a great noyce of harmony, hard

There appeared two great Armies fighting, and much blud shed on both sides.

One Captaine in red harness, the Contrary Captayn, in white and grene.

There appered Flags with a croked tree, or like a ragged staff, or cudgell, in them: and they were on the red Capitayns side. He and his soldiers had the worse and were putto flight, and they ran away.

The Captayn with the white and grene was Master of the felde: and assembled and gathered ered his men to gather after the Victorie.

Now this Capteyn goeth to a town and semeth with his hand to heave vp the towne being a big towne.

There was a voyce hard, saying thus ——— So shall it be, with 21 more △ Wyth what one and twenty?

A Voyce ——As yet, you can not know.

This will happen, before the sonne hath twise gon his course.

E K. Now the Capteyn appeared alone, on fote, in his harness. he holdeth vp his hands to heven. He is now Vanished away. I meane the Capteyn in white and grene greene

Now

Marginal notes:

line 36: /some indecipherable marks/ ϒ z / ☆ line 38: A Battle / foreshewed.

line 50: Before two / yeres finished / Ergo before / A° 1585 /

Martij 26

[65a]

Now appeareth the red cloth before the chayre. There come in Three.

they all make cursy: and two of them went away.

Δ Our desyre is to know what we are to think of the Man which cam out of my Oratory and layd the fyry Ball at M^r Adrian Gilbert his fete yesterday, as he sat [by me] in my study with M^r Kelly and me. Whether it were any Illusion, or the act of any seducer?

Me No wicked powre shall enter into this place. Neyther shall Iniquitie range where the fyre of his percing Judgment and election doth light; which shall quicken his deadness, and revive his courage to the auancement of the name of him, which liueth now

He chose with fire and lightened theyr harts, and they immediately vnderstode and felt the Illumination of his glory. What wilt thow?

Δ

To the performance of the glorie and encreasing of his name, which shortly maketh [and] an ende With for euer.

Δ This phrase, for euer, is somwhat dark

Me With this world, for euer. Δ This giveth some light.

E K. The stone is become very dark

Me As the Buylding is grownded and ended vppon Three, so must the myste= ries hereof be practised With Three. The fowrth is the Boke,

Which, Lo, is here present.

Δ Must Adrian Gilbert, be made priuie of these Mysteries?

Me. Thow hast sayd

Δ May I note to your name any peculier Character or syllable to distinguish your speches from ours or others?

Me. Medicina sum.

Δ I may then vse this syllable Me, to Note Medicina or Medicus Dei.

Me Behold, these things, shall God bring to pass by his hands whose mynde

he hath now newly set on fyre. The corners and streights of the earth shall be measured to the depth: And strange shalbe the wonders that are Creeping in to new worldes. Tyme shalbe altred, with the difference of day and night. All things haue grown allmost to theyr fullness.

But beware of Pride. We teache duty, Humbleness, and submission

Shortly shall these things come to passe.

Δ Than, this Adrian Gilbert shall cary the name of Jesus among the Infidells to the great glory of god, and the recouery of those miserable people from the mowth of hell into which, for many hundred yeres past, and yet cōtynually they do fall. etc.

Me Who made thy mowth to prophesy? or who opened the eyes of thy vnderstanding?

Who annoynted thy Jaws, or fed the with vnknown meate. Euen he it is, that pricked these things forward, and shall vse you as his Instruments to a mightie honor.

Δ May he require description of the Cuntryes, for his better instruction, etc.

Me Let darknes go behinde the, and tempt him not, that iudgeth. These things belong not to my charge. Thow knowest them, which are sufficient, whan short time shall serue, for the whole instruction. Greater nede were to enquire How or by what meanes thow mayst be made worthy: and so, consequently, haue knowledge for the knowing, hauing and vsing of this caelestiall medicine.

Forget not.

I instructed the before hand, and told the, that both of you must iointly lerne those holy letters (For so, I may boldely call them) in memory: with theyr names: to the intent, that the finger may point to the hed, and the hed to the vnderstanding of his charge.

for Discoveries making of the seas and theyr bownds.

Marginal notes:

line 1: Three.

line 4: A. Gilbert.

line 7: NOTE

line 8: Election

line 11: The Apostles on / Whitson Sonday.

line 19: Three.

line 20: Fowre.

line 23: A. Gilbert / may be made / priuie, but he / is not to be / a Practiser.

line 28: A. Gilbert / his Task line 31: Note a / prophesie.

line 33: Pride line 35: Adrian Gilb.

line 38: ·Δ· / of god line 42: Description / geographical.

line 44: Tenebrae post / dorsum.

line 46: Instruction requisite

line 47: Note

line 50: Both ioyntly / E K and / J <:D:>

lines join: 'name of Jesus' (line 35) to 'these things' (line 40); 'are' (line 45) to 'making' (line 53).
'he' (line 39) to 'pricked' (line 40) and to 'honor' (line 41)

[65b]

Δ You perceyue that I haue diuerse affayres which at this present do withdraw me from peculier diligence vsing to these Characters and theyr names lerning by hart:

therfore, I trust, I shall not offend, if I bestow all the convenient leyser that I shall

get) abowt the lerning hereof

Me Peace, Thow talkest, as thowgh, thow vnderstodest not We know the, we 5

see the in thy hart: Nor one thing shall not let an other

For short is the time, that shall bring these things to profe: wherein he that liueth, shall approve him self aliue. Beautifull are the footesteps of his comming, and great is the reuenge of the wicked

O Liber, Liber, Liber, bonis vita, malis vero mors ipsa

Magna sunt mirabilia in te inclusa: et magnus est nomen Sigilli tui

Lumen Medicinae meae, vobis

E K. he holdeth his hands abroad. He draweth the Curten.

△ Gloria Laus et honor Deo p̄rī et F. et ss. Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 8: God will shew / him self aliue.

line 10: Liber

Martij 28 Thursday morning Mawndy Thursday

A voyce. Pereant omnes qui insidiantur virtuti nōis mei: et qui Lumen [as]absconderunt Justitia mea.

E K. Now the veale is pluckt away

Three appeare, as before time

All three sayd——— Multa nos, quia multa patitur ip̄e

E K. The two go away and the Third remayneth, who is like in all points to him, who yesterday to me alone, in your absence had declared him self to be an Illuder. △ NOTE; for the better vnderstanding of this dayes Act

it may be remembred that E Kelly, while, I, (John Dee) was at London, yester= day (being wensday) had vsed meanes to haue conference, with the good Crea= ture, with whome we haue dealing iointly: and that there appeared one very like vnto our good frende, Who toke apon him to be the same, and now semed to be constrayned by E K to tell the truth: and therfore his outward beautifull apparell semed to go of, and his body appered hery and he confessed that he was an Illuder etc Wherevppon E k. was in a great perplexitie of mynde, and was ready to haue gone his way. And at my comming home told me a long processe of this Tragicall Act. But I comforted him, and wold not yeld to his opinion, But did declare my confidence in the goodnes of God: for that we craved at his hands, things good and necessarie: and that therfore he wold not give his childern a stone for bred, or a scorpion for nedefull food required etc.

And this morning the matter was propownded by me, and therevppon

the former sayings wer vsed, and all the consequences of matter, which hereafter is recorded.

Δ The veritie I require of yesterdays doings with E K in my absence.

Camikas zure he sayd, holding his hands vp to heuen.

E K. he walketh vp and down and semeth angry: and beat his hands to gither

There commeth a little streame of fire whitish from aboue: and cam to his hed:

he kneleth down before the Chayre, and loketh vp and sayde

Me Oh how brittle are the works of thy hands [he looked vp] whose Imperfec= tions are more innumerable then the sands of the sea: or clowds that were lifted vp since the begynning of the world. Darknes dare presume to place him self in Lightnes: yea dishonor, (o God) to dwell in place of glory: His lying lipps presume against Truth: whilest thow suffredst his old and withered face to be garnished with thy beawty.

Heavines is his seat, yet are his lipps myrthfull: and little there that

Marginal notes:

line 17: Insidiatores line 30: Pilosus.

[66a]

that separateth him from the dignitie of honor: But his ponishment is sufficient, his dishonor vnspeakable, and his damnation for euer: which how bitter it is, great and vnspeakable, Thow, ô thow (I say) that liuest

(which hast estranged him so far from thy glory) makest onely manifest

But yet how long shall the sonnes of men puff vp them selues with brag= ging and boasting of that they see not? But (alas) All things are confownded, and are contrary to thy commaundemets: some onely which differ, remayn with concordant myndes praysing the, and lifting vp thy name, as much as strength performeth. But herein is thy glory and long sufferance manifest, in that thow dost not onely with greif behold theyr synnes, but like a iust iudge, fauorably dost ponder the greatnes of theyr enemies, which infect theyr myndes, and blynde the light, which thow hast given /vnto[c]/ [to] theyr vnderstanding, with inflammations bodyly, instigations worldly, and ten= tations innumerable. Great therfore and most great, and none grea= ter can be, which deridest the Aduersarie, and healest the weak:

whose smallnes of habilitie thow canst augment, wherein the mysteries of thy great glorie and might, is manifest. Thy seat yeld prayses, with incessant and dutifull obedience. Thy name be magnified, thy mercy published to thy glory: Holy Holy, yea great and most holy, is thy euerlasting kindenes for euer.

E K. Now he standeth vp, and sayd

Me As I haue all ready told, from whome I cam, so haue I not hydden, what

I am, or what message I bring; why it is sent, it is allso written.

How long shall I perswade /to[c]/ stedfastnes? But the greater your measures are the greater shalbe the quantitie. These afflictions are necessary. For herin is a measure [is a measure] to distinguish* from falshode, light from darknes and honor from dishonor. The more they are like vs, or shew them selues so,

(for, nothing can be more dislike) the more they are Judges of theyr own dam= nation. Yea, if his strength had byn great, he wold haue devoured thy sowle. [loking to E K] But whome God hath chosen, shall none overturne. Brag not: eyther Credyt my words by thyne owne reason. But Consider that diuerse may be dishonored, yea thowgh they be in honor: yet shallt nor thow neyther be ouerturned with the one wynde nor the other:

thowgh the afflictions that shall follow the, be great and hard.

In my words are no error: neyther haue you fownd my lipps vntrue.

Whan I kneeled, I spake for you. But I haue promised that No vnclean thing shall prevayle within this place. Neyther am I a revenging spirit nor of any such office. I quicken the deade, revive them that are falln and cure or sow vp the wowndes, which they are permitted to work vppon man, as tokens of God his Justice.

I call the same god, (whome I haue called before) to recorde, that these words are true, my sayings iust, and his mercies more perfect. Whilest heven endureth and earth lasteth, never shall be razed out the Memorie of these Actions. Vse Humilitie: Reioyce whan the enemy is discomforted in his traynes, and inventions: A ponishment so great, Et caetera.

Whan I yoked your* feathers to gither, I ioyned them not for a while.

your flying is to be considered in quantitie, qualitie and Relation.

Thank God: Be mercifull: forget your synnes: and prepare your selues, For, great and wonderfull is the immediate powre of him that illuminateth from aboue.

It shall light apon you: For those that are present with him, liued with him, eat and drank with him, [and] were instructed by him, Were but

Marginal notes:

line 22: Raphaëlis / officium

line 26: *forte, truth /with caret under 'truth'/ line 34: Afflictions to / E K line 37: This place

line 38: Raphaëlis / officium

line 43: Note the durance of / of these Memorialls line 46: *Note of the / Vision which / was shewed / A° 1582.

[66b]

but hearers onely: At Length God was glorified, in one instant a<ll> things browght vnto theyr remembrance: yea some of them taken to behold the heavens, and the earthly glory. I haue sayd

Δ

Me Behold. Veniat vindictum dei, et percutiat linguam mentientem

E K. he goeth his waye and taketh all with him, Table, Chayre, and Curten and all. There cam in a great many with flaming swords, and bring in the wicked spirit, who yesterday delt so diuilishly with E K.

One of them holding him by the arme, sayd, Speak now for your self, you could speak yesterday: They all drew theyr swords: they sknorked fire. And then seamed a water to com in, but it went away again

A voyce ———— Dicat, nam nrm non est

E K. Now is the Skroll with the Characters browght in, which was fownd by spirituall direction this [last] month, the 12 day, abowt 10½ after none.

by M^r Kelly and Master Husy

He semeth now [to] as like our good frende, as may be.

Our frende cam with a sponge and annoynted the wicked spirit his lipps

A voyce ———— Els could I not speak.

Δ Seing now thow canst speak, answer me

The Wicked, sayd —— Ask quickly.

Δ What is thy name? ———— The wicked answered Gargat.

Δ What is the sentence of that Skroll? ——— Gar. I know not.

Δ In the name of Jesus, I charge the to tell me the truth as concerning

That roll here shewed: ——— Gar. I haue cownterfeted this roll, and browght it: for it is not the true roll.

Δ After [many] many words betwene him and me, and the more, bycause he denyed that he knew of any Glorie belonging to God, I vrged him so, at length w/th/short and euident argumēt, that he answered, he must confess the powre and glorie of god: and sayd, that he was damned for euer. and did wish damnation to me: And I requested God to vse his Justice on him for the glory of his name: then he entreated me somwhile, and somwhile derided me, saying, Art thow so lusty? etc

Δ All the Cumpany fell on him, and hewed him in peces: and digged a hole in the earth, with theyr swords, and he fell in, and [there] after that was a myghty roaring hard

A voyce ———— Sic soleo iniustis.

△ The Cumpany went away. There cam a fire and seamed to burn all the howse.

A voyce ———— Purifica Domine sanctum tuum, et dele iniquitatem inimicorum nostrorum.

△ Then returned our frende Me, and all seemed light and bright agayn:

likewise all the furniture, of Table, Chayre, Globe in the Chayre covered with a red covering etc.

Me. Visio vera, vere denotatur. Denotetur etiā ad gloriā Dei.

△ Master Kelly, is your dowt of the spirit, now taken away?

E K. ye truely, I beseche God to forgive me.

Me. Dixisti, et factum.

△ As concerning Adrian Gilbert, there might be some dowte in common externall

Judgmēt, of his aptnes to the performance of the Voyage wth the appertenances,

But the Secret of God his prouidence, I will not meddle with all: for he can make infants speak, and the dum to shew furth his glory etc.

Me. Yf God be mighty, acknowledge his powre. Who made the sonne of nothing?

Marginal notes:

line 14: The finding of / the skroll, of / the Threasors.

line 24: Counterfeted / Roll.

line 25: ☞ vid. infra / pag 152. 153 &c.

line 43: Write

line 44: /hand/

line 47: A.G.

of nothing? or man, so brittle a substance? Nature thrusteth vp her sholders amongst trees and herbs, like a ientle fyre: In beasts and all the creatures of the fielde, waters, and earth, in a palpable imagination: Amongst the sonns of men, she walketh by her own qualitie, mixing the quantities, with her before iudged proportion. Amongst all these is some distinction, yet in all theyr kindes are perfectly and substantially norrished. Yf Nature haue such powre,

What powre hath our God, and how great is his might[e] in those [he] in whome

He kindleth a sowle, vnderstanding. The strength of body and inward man, with the strength of him that allso leadeth him, are augmented and di= minished at his pleasure. Yf earth, in mixture become fyre, how much more shall he encrease, whom God hath strengthened: Yf he wold haue con= quered with thowsands, he wold not haue sent back the dogged harted people.

Yf riches or renowne were his felicitie, he wold haue kindled the twelue Lamps of his aeternall light, on a higher mowntayne: But he chose them in the Valleys, and from the watering places. I think this be sufficient to confirme your Vnderstanding.

Δ I trust, God be not offended with this matter propownded. etc

Me He is pleased: And it is enowgh. Eternitie is mighty and glorious to the righteous.

△ Whan shall I make him priuie of these things?

Me Whan thow wilt. For euery thing is acceptable with those that are accepted.

See thow cownsayle him, and be his Father.

△ As concerning John Dauis, we are to ax somwhat etc.

Me John Dauis, is not of my Kalendar. Lern of them, of whome it is necessary

Be not negligent, in lerning the things before prescribed.

God be amongst you.

E K. He hath drawn the curten of red.

△ soli Deo sit ōis honor et gloria. Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 7: /hand/

line 8: △ / Note Body / sowle / spirit line 13: The 12 Apostles

line 20: A.G.

line 23: Jo. Dauis line 25: Lern the / Alfabet.

Mawndy Thursday, after None. hor. 3½

△ The Veale being drawn away after a quarter of an howre (almost) after the first motion made by me. Three cam in, and made obedience to the chayre

Two went away, and the third remayned there, as before.

△ As concerning the Kalendar to be reformed, I am grieved that her Ma/tie/ will not reforme it in the best termes of Veritie

And as for the priuiledge for M^r^ Adrian Gilbert his Voyage, I think not well of it, that Royalties shold not be graunted

Therfore both these points, respecting her Ma^tie, I wold gladly haue cownsayle, such as in the Judgment of the highest might be most for my behofe, to follow.

Me In one gouernment there are sundry principall partes: Euery part in subdiuision conteyneth many and sundry offices. Many Offices require many disposers: yet hath euery disposition continually some partition in his qualitie.

All things, one thing: And one thing, something: some thing many things, and many things, most innumerable

The heuens in proportion are gouerned vniversally of a few; particularly of many: eche place possesseth his diuision: and euery thing diuided, his pro= pertie.

Princis ar governors which move and stir them vp to work, as it is provided, and to behold in speculation How euery particular Action shall haue due, perfect,

and

Marginal notes:

line 34: The reformatiō / of the Kalendar.

[67b]

and appropriated Locall being, motion and Condition

Subiects, (yea, the Highest,) are stirred vp, by theyr propre Angels:

The inferior sort do follow the disposition of theyr leaders

Vertue and Vice dwell euery where

Light and darknes, are allwayes intermedled

Consider, How I speak it.

The myndes of all that move, euen vnto the least qualitie in Nature, haue of them selues propre vertues: and therfore propre Instigators.

I call to memory thy words, the manner of thy speche, and the secret purpose or meaning, wherevnto it is vttred. I see thy Infirmities, and know what thow desyrest.

But mark me, Whom God commonly choseth, shalbe whom the Princis of the Erth do disdayn.

Consider, how the prophet that slew that Monstrous Gyant, had his election.

God respecteth not princis, particularly, so much as the state of his whole people. For in Princis mowthes, is there poyson, as well as proverbs.

And in one hart, more Synne, then a whole world can conteyn.

yt is not myne office to meddle with theyr vanities, neyther is it a part of my pageant to towch anything that tasteth not of Medicine

But what? doth thy mynde reply? Dost thow think, that my cownsayle herin, to a grieved mynde, is, (thowgh it can be) Medicinall?

Peraduenture thow thinkest I am not, [in] thy marrow: yej I haue byn long in the highest part of thy body, and therfore ame somthing perswaded of thy meaning

Δ In dede, I thowght that your good Cownsaile, was or might be a remedie and a medicine to my afflicted mynde, for this vnseamely doing, in the

[the] two former points expressed.

Me Behold, whervnto thy earthly man wold seduce the. Dost thow think, that if it pleas god, it shall not please the Prince? if it be ne= cessarie, all ready prepared?

secretum duo

For all things are Limited, with a full mensuration, and vnsearchable forsight: yea, I say, all ready, vnto the ende.

Be not discomforted. Quayle not at the blast of a small tempest:

For those that speak the fayre, haue dissembling harts, and priuilie do they shote at the, with arrows of reproche.

Whan they shall haue nede of the: I meane, of the help of God, throwgh the, (some shut vp, some entangled, some gad= ding like masterles Dogges,) Than shall they gladly seke the and desire to finde the. They shall smell oute thy fote steps, and thow shallt not see them. The key of theyr Cares shalt thow be Master of: and they them selues shall not vnlok theyr own grievousness. yea they shall say, Oh let the earth devowr vs.

But I am to long. I answer the, all thowgh it be not my office, to declare that thow desirest: yet for that thow desyrest my Medicine,

I say, Thow shalt preuayle agaynst them, yea euen agaynst the Mightiest.

As thow wilt, so shall it be in God his blessings.

Beware of Vayne glory. Vse few wordes

Thy weapons, are small, but thy Conquest shalbe great.

Lo. Doth this satisfy the? Haue a firme faith:

It is

Marginal notes:

line 2: Angeli / proprij line 8: Peculier and / propre Instiga= / tors line 12: God his Elect.

line 20: Medicine

line 24: Δ / Raphael long / tyme visiting / my hed line 30: A secret

line 36: Lingua dolosa.

line 38: England,

line 40: Miserie to= / come line 45: Note. eache in his / office.

line 47: Praevalescentia line 50: Conquest.

line 51: A firm faith.

A line joins 'all ready' (line 31) to 'all ready' (line 34).

[68a]

It is the greatest lesson. Be it vnto the as thow hast deliuered One thing, I answer the, for all Officis. Thow hast in Subiection all Offices: Vse them when it pleas the, And as thy Instruction hath byn.

I haue sayde.

Δ As things be planted here, for preparation of Table, sigillum Dei etc which things are not portable with eas: so, bycause I think, that some seruices to be done in gods purposes by me, will require other places than this howse, so shall diuerse my practises haue /(as I think)/ c a more compendious manner, and redy to be executed in any place etc.

Me Truely thow hast sayd, and so shall it fall vnto the.

As I am here in this place, and yet in dede not, So, here: so shall it fall oute, and follow in the Mysteries of your Associated Operation.

The other shall be, but, as necessary help to the first Practises, to plant the Tree: which being confirmed and strongly rooted shall bring furth frute, most abundantly.

The Erth and the tree, can not be separated

This is the ende, amd true it is.

Let him be record, whom I beare record of here,

And so, with the. Amen.

I must help the. Lerne ioyntly the Elements or grownds of this heuenly doctrine; the ende and Consummation of all thy desired thirst:

in the which God shall performe the, thy Philosophicall Harmonie in *Δ prayer. Thow knowest what I mean.

The Aeternall physitien minister his heuenly grace and continuall blessings vppon you, to the Glorie of his name, execution of your procedings, and holy and insatiable desires.

Δ Amen: Oipotenti Deo, nro, Creatori Redeptori et sanctificatori, ois honor
laus et gratiaru actio.
Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 2: All Officis line 14: Δ: and E K, / and / A. Gilbert. /with line to 'other' (line 16)/ line 17: The erth } 1. E K

The Tree } 2. Δ
The planter } 3. A G line 19: The Planter / may be separa / ted: from / Tree and Erth line 23: Note Lerne / The Alfabet.

line 26: Δ* Philosophicall Harmonie / in prayer, is ment / by the prayer which / I dayly vse, & often. / Deus in. a.m. In. / D.a.a.m.f. G.p. / e. F.e.s. etc.

Jesus.

On good friday; After None

Δ There was a savor of fire felt by E K.

There semed one with a sword, suddenly to thrust out of the stone at E K his hed.

Whereat he started; and sayd he felt a thing (immediately) creeping within his hed, and in that pang becam all in a [swete] sweat. And he remayned much misliking the moving and creeping of the thing in his hed. At a quarter of an howre ende it cam to one place: and so ceased somwhat: & then the Curten was drawn away: and there appeared the Table, and the chayre covered.

Then cam three, two went away and one remayned: as before was vsed.

E K held the paper of the letters in his hand: and Me bad him put it out of his hand.

Me The taste of this mercifull potion, yea the savour onely of the vessell worketh most extremely agaynst the maymed drowsing of ignorance, yf the hand be heavy, how weighty and ponderous shall the whole world be? What Will ye

△ this he sayd 50

[68b]

△ This he sayd vppon our silence after his former words. I answered, we desyred to lerne the Mysteries of the boke.

The Boke now appeared (the cover of the chayre being taken away) the boke lying lying vppon a rownd thing: which E K, was not able to discern what it is.

The first leaf /side/ of the /first c leaffe of the/ boke appeared full of the former letters, [consi] euery side hauing 49 tymes 49 square places, with letters: some more then other.

M Euery side conteyneth 2400 and one [letter] od letter.

E K. All the letters semed to be of bluddy cullor, and wet: The lines betwene the squares, semed to be like a shaddow.

In the first square were 7 letters.

Me Say after me: But pray first ere you begynne. △ We prayed

E.K. All became blak as pych in the boke

Then it becam light agayne.

Now he pointeth vp, with his rod of gold diuided into 3 equal partes, which rod he toke from vnder the Table.

Me. Keph van [he lifted his face to heven]

1. Don graph fam veh na.

E K. Now he kneleth down, and holdeth vp his hands

The letters of the first Square, ar 7.

Now he pointeth to the second

7	6	5	4	3	2	1

2. Med gal [E K. he turneth him self abowt.

3. vn gal vn Mals na.
   Me Twise seven, Thre and All one: and his mercy endureth for euer.
4. Tal vn vrh.
5. Fam graph Fam.
6. Ged graph drux med.
7. vn van.
8. Tal vn don vr vn drux. sownded as
9. Med.
10. Tal van fam mals vn.
11. vn ged gon med gal.
12. Mals vn drux
13. Ged vn.
14. Fam graph fam.
15. ged vn tal mals graph gal vn keph
16. Veh vn mals veh drux graph na capcneh
17. ged med.
18. med gal.
19. Fam graph tal graph ur vn pa van ged graph drux
20. Gal med tal drux vn.
21. mals na gon vn tal
22. ged vn
23. van vn drux veh don vn drux.
24. Van don graph mals don graph fam
    E K. Now he seemeth to wepe, and knock his brest.
    he pointeth with the rod, vp agayn, and sayd
25. vn gal graph mals gal
26 vn keph graph
27 Gal don van keph

28 Gisg vn don gal graph tal vn na.

Marginal notes:

line 6:
49
49
441
196 2401

line 44: 100

[69a]

29. van vn

30. veh graph fam gisg fam

31. ged don vn mals vn gal. he stayed here a good while.

32. fam graph gal

33. van drux pa vn don

34 gal med tal gon med vrh

35 vn gal graph mals med vn gal

39.38.37.36. veh na graph van vn veh na. / Tal vn na / Med fam fam na graph / gal vn mals na /

40. med drux gon keph gal vn don. This is a word

41 mals vn drux ged graph mals na gon.

E K: Now he walked vp and down before the chayre: and cam agayn and pointed.

The letters now following seme to be written with Clay.

42. Med gal vn tal na

43. ged graph tal graph gal fam vn vr: eight letters

44. vn

45. gal gon drux med keph vn

46. na med pal mals med don. Now he walketh agayn, and loketh vpward.

Then he pointed agayn.

47. Vn gal mals van drux

48. Gal vn don

49. ged vn don tal graph fam: he walked betwene the shewing of tal and graph.

There are six letters in that word.

Me. Say after me (Shall I speak the Mysteries of thy glory, which thow hast secreted from the Inhabitants vppon the erth? yea lord, it is thy will, whose hed is high; and fete euery where, redy to revenge the blud of Innocents, and to call home the lost shepe.)

Say after me Zuresk ch od adaph mal zez ses: the letters giue agiod pan ga zez gamphedax Kapene go le od ses pe z Kaphene semelabugen donka fian ga vankran vreprez m phiam s

adeph avxe drux Tardemah va tzests grapad. d aze z keztz cesrs

1. zed vnba domiol adepoad chieuak mah oshe daph vnbar

Onixdar pangepi adamh gemedsol a dinoxa hoxpor z

adpun dar garmes. gharmes

Me. I teache. let this lesson instruct the to read all that shalbe gathered out of this boke hereafter. It is not to be spoken, but in the time of his own time. It shalbe sufficient to instruct the: Fare well

E K. Now he couereth the boke with the veale.

Δ Prayses and Thankes be rendred to god, of vs his sely ones, now and euer. Amen.

Δ Note. All the former letters and words in the squares, were onely in the first or vpper row, [of the side] begynning at the right hand, and so going orderly to the left. And secondly Note that this lesson he red, pointing with his rod orderly vppon the same forsaid first row.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 14: 100

line 27: Veresk and / Zuresk are / all one. / △ perchance / Zuresch, / with ch, for / K, and so / the word shalbe / of [8] /7/ letters.

line 35: *△ it is not to be / spoken or inter= / preted, but whan / the time appointed, / is come

---

[69b]

Martij 31. Easter day after none abowt 4.

E K. hard first a sownd of Musicall harmonie

△ The Veale was pluckt away

Three cam in, two went away, as before accustomed.

E K. Now he lyeth down. he riseth and pulleth the veale frō the chayre.

That veale was of cullor as a raynbow.

The boke appeared playne and evidently on the globe in the chayre.

E K felt the thing ronne in his hed as the other day it did.

Me taketh out the rod from vnder the Table: he sayd

Aeternitas in Caelo

△ vppon my staying from speche, he sayd, What wilt thow?

△ The proceding instruction necessary for vnderstanding of the boke.

Me Mensuratur. △ he putteth vp his rod to the boke

Me Sint oculi illorū clari, vt intelligant [he held vp his hands and semed to pray.

He pointed now to the second row of the 49 rows of the first page of the boke; and sayd

Secundus a primo

1 Gon na graph na van fam veh na. Now he walketh vp and down.

2 Ged don med drux na vn gal med keph. he walketh agayn

3 [1.] Vn don gal graph drux [he walked agayn.

4 [2.] med

5 [3.] drux vn [he walked

6 [4.] ged graph tal mals [he walketh] vn vr med. [7 letters.

7 [5.] med gon veh vn fam tal vn drux

8 [6.] van vn drux gal don graph fam

9 [7.] med don gal vn

10 [8.] van graph van graph gon vn na

11 [9.] drux med fam

12 [10.] mals vr gon ged drux vn mals na graph

13 [11:] Keph vn tal mals med drux med drux

14 [12.] vn drux graph mals na

15 [13.] med mals na graph [veh] gal : [here, veh or gal is indifferēt.

16 [14.] vn

17 [15.] Tal graph gal med [Keph] [or rather] pal [so it shalbe better vnderstode

18 [16] Tal vn don van drux graph

19 [17] ged graph drux vn

20 [18] mals don graph fam [Now he walketh

21 [19] drux med

22 [20] gal vn fam tal vn gisg

23 [21] van med don gisg fam

24 [22] tal vn drux ged graph gisg ⌊ so it is

25 [23] ⎧ vn
[24] ⎩ gal graph van drux graph

26 [25] gal vn tal mals na

27 [26] drux vn pal gisg

28 [27] med fam

29 [28] van vn drux gal graph tal na drux vn pal vn gisg ⌊ 12 letters med don

Marginal notes:

line 36:RH: Δ Note this diuersitie / of sownd and / writing: as X for Z ⌈with line to 'so' (line 35)⌋

[70a]

30 [29] med don med mals na vn fam

31 [30] van med don

32 [31] tal gon drux med gal vn vr

33 [32] vn tal van gal vn fam

34 [33] ged graph don

35 [34] mals vn

36 [35] med

37 [36] gal vn pal keph van tal

38 [37] pa vn drux veh graph fam

39 [38] med don gal vn drux. ⌈ Now he maketh low obeysance to the chayreward.

40 [39] Mals vn Incomprehensibilis es in aeternitate tua.

41 [40] Mals don graph fam

42 van tal pa vr med fam gal vn

43 van med don pal

44 drux vn gal med drux

45 mals vn gisg don med mals na graph fam.

46 van drux gal graph fam.

47 vn gal med drux.

48 ged vn drux graph pa drux fam.

49 gon na graph na van gal keph

Me Shall I rede it? △ we pray you

2 [Iheh..ts] Ihehusch Gronhadoz Gro[m]/n/adox arden, o na gempalo oicasman micasman veueiah s vandres orda beuegiah noz plignase zamponon aneph [there is a stop]

e z e Ophad a medox marune gena pras no dasmat. Vorts manget vandemhnaxat

a deline damph naxt os vandeminaxat. Orophas vor

c minodal amudas ger pa o daxzum banzes ordan ma

pres vmblosda vorx nadon patrophes vndes adon ganebus

Ihehudz △ Note A deline must be pronownced as one worde: like as Res publica, in latin.

els here wold seme to be .50. words. but,

A deline, cam out of one square.

△ Gehudz consisteth of 6 letters: but Gon na graph van gal keph con=

sisteth of 7. I wold gladly be resolued of that dowt if it pleas you.

E K. he boweth down, and put the rod away, and than Kneled down.

△ He rose and axed me what wilt thow?

△ The former question to be soluted. Me Thow hast written [falh] fals:

for, it must be Ihehudz; and so it is of 7 letters.

Δ Yf euery side c̄oteyne 49 rows, and euery row will require so much tyme to be receyued as this hath done it may seme that very long time will be requisite to this doctrine receyuing: But if it be gods good liking, we wold fayne haue some abridgemēt

[of] or compendious manner, wherby we might the soner be in the work of Gods servyse

E K. The Chayre and the Table are snatched away, and seme to fly toward heven

And nothing appeared in the stone at all. But [the] was all transparent clere.

Δ What this snatching away of Chayre and Table doth meane we know not: But if the lord be offended with his yonglings, and Novices in this Mysteries, for propownding or requiring a compendious Method etc Then we are very sorry, and ax forgivenes for the rashnes at our lipps: and desyre his maiestie not to deale so rigorously with

Marginal notes:

line 19 RH: Δ forte van / Ax this dowte line 42: Δ / Note / and take / hede from / hence forward with vs: as thowgh we had sufficient wisdom or warning, to beware of such motions or requests making to his ministers. Let it not be so sayd of the holy one of Israel: but that his mercies abownd w/th/ vs to his

[70b]

E K. Now commeth all down agayn as, before glorie. Amen

Me. What are the Sonnes of men, that they put time in her own bosom? or measure a Judgment that is vnsearchable

Δ

Me I help thy imperfections. What, man thinketh wisdome, is error in our sight. But bicause my Nature is to cure, and set vp those that fall,

Thus much vnderstand

As I haue sayde: The 49 partes of this boke 49 voyces, Wherevnto the so many powres, with theyr inferiors and subiects, haue byn, are, and shalbe obedient

Euery Element in this mysterie is a world of vnderstanding

Euery one knoweth here what is his due obedience: and this shall differ the in speche from a mortal Creature

Consider with thy self, How thow striuest against thyne own light, and shaddowest the windows of thyne own vnderstanding

I haue sayde: Be it vnto the, as God will.

I am not a powre or whirlewynde that giueth occasion of offence.

Longe sumus a peruersitate destructionis

This much I haue sayd, for thy reformation and vnderstanding

Δ

Me Lo, Vntill the secrets of this boke be written, I come no more.

neyther of me shall you haue any apparition. Yet, in powre,

my office shall be here

Say, what you here, for euery word shall be named vnto you: it is somwhat a shorter way, and more according to your desyre

Euery Element hath 49 manner of vnderstandings

Therin is comprehended so many languages

They are all spoken at ones, and seuerally, by them selues, by dis= tinction may be spoken.

Vntill thow come to the Citie, thow canst not behold the beawty thereof.

Nihil hic est, quod non est perfectum.

I go. I haue sayde, (and it is true,).

No vnclean thing shall enter:

Much less, then, here: For, it is the sight of whose Maiestie

We tremble and quake at

He shall teache, of him self; for we are /not^c/ [vn]worthy:

What then, of your selues? But such is his great and singular

fauor

Marginal notes:

line 10: Of the boke

line 11: 49 Powres with / theyr Inferiors / vide sup. 48 after / a sort: and .1. / vide Martij 24.

line 15: Angelicall / Language line 24: Raphaël is / to be absent / for a certayn / time: but / his powre shall / be here

line 29: Of the boke

line 30: Languages

line 40: Δ / Note, that we / shalbe Theodi= / dacti, of god / him self and, / no Angel herein

---

[71a]

fauor, that, he is [of him] of him self, and with those, whome he choseth.

For, the ende of all things, is at hand,

and Powre must distinguish, or els nothing can prevayle

What you here, yea what thow feelest, by thy finger, Recorde, and seale sure. This is all, and in this is conteyned all, that comprehendeth all The almighty powre and profunditie of his glory.

What els?

As thow seest, and till he see, whose sight, is the light of this his own powre, His might is great. The dew of his stedfastnes and glorious perfection hold vp and rectify the weaknes of your fragilitie: Make you strong to the ende of his workmanship

to whome I commit you

E K. He plucketh the veale ouer all

A voyce afterward ———— Ne Ne Ne na Iabes

Δ Sanctus Sanctus Sanctus D̄n̄s Deus Zebaoth: Pleni sunt caeli et terra gloria Maiestatis eius. Cui soli o̅i̅s honor, laus et gloria:

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1, supra: Potentia.

line 2: The ende / of all things / is at hand line 9: The sight / of god.

1583. Aprilis 2. Tuesday Jesus. ✝ . before none

Δ A voyce like a Thunder was first hard

The chayre and Table appered // therof

There appered fyre in the chayre, and burnt away the veal or covering [therf]

The cullor of the flame of the fire was [of] as of Aqua Vitae [bunt] burnt.

A voyce ———— Sum.

E K. There goeth a clowd or smoke from the chayre; and covereth the Table

That smoke filled all the place

A voyce ———— Impleta sunt oia gloria et honore tuo

E K. All is become clere, saue the Table which remayned couered with the clowde still

A great thunder began agayn, and the chayre remayned all in fire.

Now the boke appeareth euidently, lying vppon the Globe in the chayre and the letters appered wet styll, as yf they were blud

There appered fire to be thrown oute of the stone, vppon E K.

The sownd of many voyces ——— Let all things prayse him and extoll his name semed to pronownce this ——— for euer

E K. The fire is still in the chayre, but so transparet, that the boke and letters therof may be well seen.

E K felt his hed as if it were one fire

A voyce ——— Sic soleo errores hominum purificare.

A voyce ——— Say what you see

E K. I see letters, as I saw before

A voyce ——— Moue not from your places; for, this place is holy.

A Voyce ——— Read. ———— E K, I cannot

Δ you shold

Marginal notes:

line 33:

line 35: Note, fire

line 46: Moue not from / your places

[71b]

Δ you shold haue lerned the characters perfectly and theyr names, that you mowght now haue redyly named them to me as you shold see them.

Then there flashed fire vppon E K agayne.

A Voyce ———————— Say what thow thinkest. Δ he sayd so to E K.

E K. My hed is all on fire

A Voyce ———— What thow thinkest, euery word that speak.

E K. I can read all, now, most perfectly and in the Third row thus I see to be red.

Palc/s/ze duxma ge na dem oh elog da ved ge ma fedes o ned a tha [h]lepah nes din + Ihehudétha dan vangem onphe dabin oh [n] nax palse ge dah maz gem fatesged oh mal dan gemph naha Lax vu lutúdah ages nagel osch.
macom adeph a dosch ma handa.

E K. Now it thundreth agayn

A voyce ——Ego sum qui in te Mihi ergo qui Sum

Δ Non nobis domine non nobis, sed nomini tuo damus gloriam.

Δ Then E K red the fowrth row, as followeth

Pah o mata nax lasco vana ar von zimah la de de pah o gram nes ca pan amphan van :
zebog ahah dauez ðl ga. Van gedo oha ne daph aged onédon pan le ges ma gas axa nah alpod ne alida phar or ad gemésad argla nado oges.

Δ Blessed be the name of the Highest, who giveth light and vnderstanding.

E K. It thundreth agayn. All is covered.

A Voyce ——————— Orate.

Δ We prayed and returning to the work agayn, the fire covered all still and E K hard [voyces] voyces, singing (as a far of) very melodiously.

Then all became euident agayn vnto E K his perfect Judgment.

Δ E K then red thus

mises /pronownced/
Mabeth ar mices achaph pax mara geduth alides

mansh
orcánor manch arseth. olontax ar geban vox portex

ah pamo agématon burise ganport. vdrios paseh

Machel

Marginal notes:

line 3: Fire agayn

line 9: Δ I dowt which of / these 3 must serve ⟨ z s c line 10: The Third / row of the / first page.

line 18: The fowrth/row.

line 32: The fifth / row.

[72a]

Machel len arvin zembuges + Vox mara.

gons Ihehusch dah pársodan maäh alsplan

*adiper arkad donglses adipr agínot. archad dons a dax van famlet a dex arge pa gens

Van danzan oripat es vami gest ageff

pasdas
ormatenodah zalpala doniton pasdaes ganpogan

Vndanpel adin achaph maradon oxamax

anolphe dan ieh voxad mar vox ihedutharh agga pal med lefa. IAN lefa dox parnix

dros
O droes marsibleh aho dan adeph uloh iads akos

ascleh da verox ans dalph che damph lam achos

E K. There is a great Thundring agayn

Δ It is the hand of the highest, who will get him honor by his own works.

E K. The Voyce and sownd of pleasantnes and reioycing was hard: and all was dark.

A small voyce ——————Locus est hic sanctus.

An other voyce——————Sacer est a te Domine

E K. All is now opened agayne.

Δ. Then E K, red thus iah

Amidan gah lesco van gedon amchih ax or lesgomph

madol cramsa ne da vadgs lesgamph ar:

mara panosch aschedh or samhamphors asco pascadabaah asto a vdrios archads ors arni.

pamphica lan gebed druxarh fres adma. nah pamphes eä vanglor brisfog, mahad. no poho a palgeh donla def arehas NA. Degel.

---

vnam
Vnaem palugh agan drosad ger max. fa lefe pandas

mars langed vndes mar. pachad odidos martibah

Marginal notes:

line 3: *it is significatiue line 6: The sixth / row.

line 17: Locus sanctus line 21: The Seventh / row.

line 23: Asco, with the prick / ouer the o, is to be / pronownced as / Asto.

line 29: The eight / row.

[72b]

vdramah noges gar + lenges argrasphe drulthe las aseraphos + gamled cam led caph Snicol lumrad v ma. pa granse paphres a drimox a demphe NA. genile o danpha. Na ges a ne gaph a +

E K: The sownd of Melodie, begynneth agayne

Δ. The fire cam from E K his eyes, and went into the stone againe
And then; he could not perceyue, or read one worde
The Fyre flashed very thick and all was couered with a veale.

Δ Prayse we the lord, and extoll his name:
For, his hand hath wrought wundrous
Works, for his owne glorie.
[Whose name which]
Amen
/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 8: Note: this / Mysterie of / god his powre / drawn to him / self agayne.

Aprilis .3. Wensday, Forenone ✝

△ First the Curten was drawn away: and then all appeared on fire. The whole place all ouer. E k hard voyces, but could not discern any thing but the hummering of them

△ There cam fire agayn (out of the stone) vppon E K, all his body ouer

E K. The fire so diminisheth it self that the boke may be perceyued.

A Voyce ———————— Magnus Magnus Magnus

An other voyce ———— Locus sacer et acceptabilis Deo

E K felt the fire to gather vp into his hed

Shortly after he could read the boke, as he could do yesterday.

[illegible]

Vlla doh aco par semná gan var se gar on dun.

sebo dax se pal genso vax necra par sesqui nat .

axo nat sesqui ex ax olna dam var gen vox nap vax .

Vro varca cas nol vndat vom Sangef famsed oh .

sih ádra gad gesco vansax ora gal parsa .

Varo . nab vbrah NA pa uotol ged ade

pa

Marginal notes:

line 23: Locus Sacer line 26: △ / of the first character / Of Vlla, I dowt line 27: The ninthe / Row line 33: The Tenth.

sem
pa cem na dax + van sebrá dah oghe aschin

o nap gem phe axo or + nec a ve da pengon

vdráh iohed
a moroh ah óha aspáh + niz ab vrdráh gohed

a carnat dan faxmal gamph + gamph nacro vax asclad caf prac crúscanse +

Δ

gam + ohe gemph ubráh ax + orpna

nex or napo, gemlo + a cheph can sedló pam geman ange hanzu (ALLA +) Cáppo se damo gam vas oro dax vá [ges /] ges palo pal me pola +

E K. All these, (now red,) fall out and all the rows, before, likewise.

A Voyce ——————Prayse God.

Δ We prayed. and after, was this shewed.

Gals ange no témpa ro sama dan genzé axe +

falod amruh ácurtoh saxx par mano gan vax

no + gramfa gem sadglá loh vrox sappóh

iad ah oha vnra.

Δ

Δ Now appeared an other row.

Se gors axol ma pa a oh la sabúlan + Caph

vns
ardox anpho nad vrnah ud ago lan vans +

Vxa grad órno dax palmes árisso dan vnra +

Vánsample galse not xablis óphide ALLA loh +

gaslah osson luze adaŏ max vanget or dámo ans +

leóx dasch léŏha dan se glaspa neh +

Δ

Marginal notes:

line 3: gohed, pronownced / as Iohed signifieth / One euerlasting / and all things de= / pending vppon One. / and gohed Ascha / is as much to say / as One god.

line 5 RH: canse, signifieth / mightie: and Crus= / canse, more / mightie.

line 7 RH supra: the a produced [refers to orpna] line 7 LH: The eleuenth / Row.

line 8: All these which / haue lines vnder / them are eche / but one word / of diuerse sylla= / bles: being 9 / words of them.

line 8, over 'ceph...sedlo': the last h remissly sownded [refers to ceph] line 11: Pola and Pala / signifie two: / Pola signifieth / two togither, and / Pala signifieth / Two separated:

line 15: Δ This was a / parcell of a / row, which onely / appered by him / self.

line 17: Δ / [At no, ende / 49, and so / here ar .10. over] line 17, over 'sadgla': á must be sownded long line 21: This se is / the nine and fortyeth / word longing / to them before [with line to 'se' (line 21)]

line 22: The twelfth / row

[73b]

All becam dark, and it thundred

A Voyce _____Prayse God.

Δ We prayed

Δ Now appered three or four rows to gither

The boke seemed to fly, as if it wold fly a peces (the fyre remayning) and to make a great sturring in the place where it lay.

Amprí apx ard ardo argá argés argáh ax .

osch nedo les icás . han andam von ga lax man .

nosch . dóngo a yntar sey cey lude asch úrise alpe gem var dancet . [na]nap alped vrsbe temps a vod nos gema o ulon máncepax oxné pricos

a gót . zalpa ne doxam órne .

[14]

Admag apa asco tar . gans oärz am seph

selqui quisben alman . gons sa ieh

mársibleh gron áscabb gamat . ney aden vdan

[phl]phand sempés nar narran al . cáno géme.

danse álde nótes parcélah arb ner ga lum pancu priscas ábra músce musse an nox . napod long a on dan sem ges asche aske

E K A sownd of many voyces, sayd ———— Orate

[15]

Mica suráscha para te gámmes ádrios NA danos .

Vra lad pacad ur gesme crus a prásep ed .

a palse nax varno zum . zancú asdom baged

Vrmigar orch phaphes ustrá nox affod masco:

gax cámles vnsanba a oh la gras par quas.

cónsaqual lat gemdax tantat ba vod .

talpah ian .

Marginal notes:

line 7: The 13

line 7: a long line 9: ⌜2. this with / a prick beto= / keneth y.

line 14: pronownce / Asto line 16: ẏ

line 19: E K vnderstode / the Langage: and wold / haue spoken somwhat but / he was willed to stay.

line 24, over 'crus': pronownced as we do Cruse a cup

[74a]

16

Gescó a taffom ges nat gam + pamphé ordáquaf cesto chídmap mischná iaísg + iaíalphzudph a dancét vnban caf ransembloh + dafma vp aschem graos chrámsa asco dah + vímna
gen álde os papéam och láuan vnad.
Oh drosad údrios nagel panzo ab sescú +
Vórge afcál valaffda mórsab gaf ham de Peleh asca.

17

Δ This went away, when it was read
It waxed dark.

A voyce ——————Orate Δ we prayed

E K. It beginneth to clere.

A Voyce to E K.—————— Say Ártosa geme oh gálsagen axa loph gebed adóp:

zarcas vr vánta pas ámphe nóde alpan[4] + nócas.
se ga ormácased lax naph talpt + pámphicas sandam Voscméh iodh asclad ar + phan gas málse a quaz nam vngem vansel gembúgel a gémbusez áro tehl alta murt valtab bániffa faxed ar [chyso]chlysod

18

A tam nat + glun asdeh ahlud gádre fam Shing la dan + guinsé life arilsar zabulan cheuách se + amph lesche andam var ges ar phex are + NA tax páchel lapídox ar da vax malcos + vna gra tassox varmára ud ga les vns ap se + ne da ox lat ges ar +

Marginal notes:

line 1, over 'Gesco': o long line 2: Sempiternall One / and indiuisible / God.

line 3: a very long line 4: a reverent word / the a very long / and is, be it/ made with powre.

line 7, over 'gaf': a long line 7: chal, iently, and / the a long line 14 RH: The ine powre creating / the <An>gel of the sonne [with line to 'galsagen' (line 15)] line 16: 4 manner of cō= / structions in / that one word.

line 20: Aro is one / word diuided, / as respublica, / and here this / Word is diuided / into two squares / and so there / are 49.

line 24, over 'guinse': e long line 24, over 'cheuach': a long line 24: life lephe Lurfando / is a strong charge / to the wicked to tell / the truth line 24, RH of above note: Δ / This he sayd / to my/demand / of this phrase/ wherof I / had mention / many yeres / since.

line 25, over 'ar': pronownce ar line 26: NA. The name of the / Trinitie, One / Separable / for a while

---

[74b]

19 Now it waxeth dark. Δ We must pray: (sayd I) and so w<e did.>
But E K prayed perfectly in this Angels language etc.

Asmo dahán pan casme co caph al oh .
san ged a bansaa vn adon a seb Ian .
agláho dánfa zúna cap orcha dah os . 5
fámsah ON naäb ab nagah geha fastod .
hansey om hauan lagra gem gas mal .
parcóg dax nedo va geda leb árua ne cap sem carvan .

---

20 Onsem gelhóldim geb abníh ian . 10
oxpha bas cappó cars órdriph grip gars .
of víndres nah ges páhado vllónooh can vaz a .
fam gisril ag nóhol sep gérba dot vánca NA .
sem ah pa nex ar pah lad vamó iar séque .
Vad ro garb , ah sem dan van ged ah paleu 15

Now the fire shot oute of E K his eyes, into the stone, agayne

And by and by he [sho] vnderstode nothing of all, neyther could reade any thing: nor remember what he had sayde. All became dark.

Then was the curten drawne, and so we ended.

△ Gloria Pri et filio et spiritui sancto
nunc et semper
Amen
/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 4, over 'bansaa': a long onely one a sownded line 6: a sownded as au line 8, over 'sem': in eius loco.

line 8: the g not ex= / pressly sownded. /refers to 'parcog/line 14: it is but one / Word /refers to ar pah/line 15, over 'paleu': sownded, palef

Aprilis .3. Wensday After none hor 5¼

△ A prety while the veale remayned ouer all: then it was taken away

First fire was thrown vppon E K out of the stone

Many voyces concordantly sayd—Bonum est ô Deus, quia Bonitas ipa es.

An other voyce ———— Et magnum, quia tu magnitudo ipius Magnitudinis.

A voyce ———— Ádgmach ádgmach ádgmach

A great voyce ———— Sum, et sacer est hic locus.

A voyce ———— Ádgmach ádgmach ádgmach húcacha.

△ Then E K read the row on this manner Padohó ghebs magebs galpz arps apá nal Si + gámvagad al pódma gans NA + vr cas nátmaz

21 [20]

Marginal notes:

line 31, over 'Adgmach': ℵ much glory line 32: Sacer locus

line 35, over 'arps': rede as arch

[75a]

nátmaz ándiglon ármvu + zántclumbar ar

naxócharmah + Sapoh lan gamnox vxála vors +

Sábse cap vax mar vinco + Labandáho nas gampbox

se
arce + dah gorhahálpstd gascámpho lan ge +

Bófes argédco nax arzulgh orh + semhaham

vncal laf garp oxox + loangah +

△ Now appered Raphael or one like him, and sayde

Salus vobis in illo qui vobiscum +

I am a medicine that must prevayle against your infirmities: and am

come to teache, and byd take hede

Yf you vse dubble repetition, in the things that follow, you shall both write and work and all at ones: which mans nature can not performe.

The trubbles were so great that might ensue thereof, that your strength were nothing to preuayle against them.

When it is written, reade it no more with voyce, till it be in practise

All wants shalbe opened vnto you

Where I fownd you, (with him, and there,) I leave you.

Cumfortable Instruction, is a necessarie Medicine

Farewell.

E K. The boke and the Chayre, and the rest were all out of sight while Raphael spake, and he lay down prostrate

E K. saw a great multitude in the farder side of the stone: They all cam in to the stone, and axed

What now?

[What now How now?]

How now?

Vors mábberan ℵ how now: what hast thow to do with vs?

Δ as I began thus to say (The God of powre, of wisdom,) they all interrupted my entended prayer to god for help etc and sayd We go We go.

Δ And so they went away.

Then the boke and the rest cam in agayne.

A Voyce —— One Note more, I haue to tell thee

Ax him not, What he sayeth, but write as thow hearest: for it is true

Δ Then, o lord, make my hearing sharp and strong, to perceyue sufficiently as the case requireth.

Rap. ———— Be it vnto the.

Δ Then E K red as followeth

22 Ors lah gemphe nahaoh ama natoph des garhul vanseph iuma lat gedos lubah aha last gesto Vars macom des curad Vals mors gaph gemsed pa campha zednu ábfada

máses lófgono Luruandah lesog iamle padel arphe

nades gulsad maf gescon lampharsad surem paphe arbasa arzusen agade ghehol max vrdra paf gals macrom finistab 45

gelsaphan asten Vrnah

Marginal notes:

line 1: <....> piller of Light / <stoo>de before the / <Bo>oke line 3: [Vin in vinco must / be pronownced long / as if it were a / dubble i.]

line 4, over 'gascámpho': or gáscampho:

line 4, over above note: why didst thow so? as god said to Lucifer. The word / hath 64 significa= / tions line 5: [Orh ∴ Deus sine fine / Gorh ∴ Deus a Deo] line 5, over 'argedco': ∴ cum humilitate aduocamus te / cum adoratione Trinitatis.

line 5, over 'orh': This is the name of the spirit contrary to Befafes. ⌈with a line to 'arzulgh' (line 5)⌉ line 5, RH beside 'semhaham': This word hath / 72 significations line 5: Befes, the vocatiue / case of Befafes:/[Befes is as much to / say as come Be / fafes and see vs / ⌈rule⌉ / Befafes ô, is to / call vppon him as / on god / ⌈rule⌉ / Befafes oh, is as muche / to say, come Be= / fafes and be our / Witness.] / ⌈rule⌉ / Befafes his Etymologie / is as much to say / as, Lumen a, / Lumine. / Spiritus orh / secundus est in / grada imperfectiōis / tenebrarū. / △ how can orh / signifie Deus sine / fine, if it be / the name of a / wicked spirit?

line 6, over 'loangah': of two syllables. [this wor] line 8, over 'Raphael'. 𐤌𐤄 Me line 43: Larvandah

line 45: △ Note these 55 / wordes stand in / 49 places: of which / 55, some two stand / in a [pla] square place/ some three, as I / haue noted.

[75b]

A Voyce ———— Whatsoeuer thow settest down shalbe true

△ I thank god most hartilie: The case allso requireth it so to be.

23 Asch val lamles árcasa árcasan arcúsma iabso gliden paha parcadúra gebne (ieb) óscarah gádne (af) au arua las genost cásme palsi uran vad gadeth axam pambo cásmala sámnefa gárdomas árxad pámses gémulch gápes lof lachef ástma (b) vates garnsnas orue gad garmah sárquel rúsan gages drusala phímacar aldech oscom lat garset panoston.

---

24 gude laz miz lábac vsca losd pa Cópad dem sebas
gad váncro umas ges umas umas ges gabre umas umáscala úmphazes umphagám maaga mosel iahal loges (ghes) vapron fémse dapax orgen (ghen) láscod ia láscoda vága am lascafes iarques préso tamisel vnsnapha ia dron goscam lápe voxa chimlah aueaux losge auioxan lárgemah.

---

25 zureth axad lomah ied gura vancrásma ied sesch lapod vonse avó avé lamsage zimah zemah zúmacah Vormex artman voz vozcha tolcas zápne zarvex

ghi gafna
zorquem allahah giburod Ampatraton zimegauna

ask zonze zamca aschma vlpa tapa van vorxvam drusad Caph castárago grúmna cáncaphes absacáncaphes zúmbala teuort granx zumcot lu graf saxma Cape.

25

26

Col age lam gem fam tepham vra ap du ca sampat

Vóxham Lúnzapha azquem Bobagélzod gaphémse lúnse

agni cam setquo teth gaphad oxámarah gímnephad ie

vóxcanah vrn dage paphcod zámbuges zambe ach oha zambúges gásca lunpel zadphe zómephol zun zadchal 30

ureseh varún pachádah gusels vx amna pa gramia oh vz

Δ I think

Marginal notes:

line 3: There are no / points neyther / in the last / before . They / be parcells of / Invitations very / pleasant to good / Angels. / Before was, as / it were a pre= / face of the Crea= / tion and distinction / of Angels etc.

line 27: Bobagelzod

[76a]

Δ I think it will be dark by and by, and our Cumpany will expect our comming down to supper. Therfore, if, without offense we might now leave of, it might seme good so to do

A voyce ———————— gemeganza ✕ your will be done

Δ As I was discoursing with E K after we had done, and he seamed yet skylfull and hable to say much of the vnderstanding of the premises, and began to declare somwhat, How they did all apperteyne to Good Angels; Suddenly there cam the fyre from his eyes into the stone agayne. And than he could say no more: nor remember any thing of that [w]he had seen or Vnderstode less than half a quarter of an howre before.

Δ Deo nro Viuo Vero et Oipoteti sit ois laus et graz actio

nunc et semper Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 12: /a few scribbled marks of the following nature:

Aprilis 4. Thursday ✝ mane hor 5½

Δ I made a prayer

Δ A voyce ——— Quia ipe Deus Deus Deus nr cuius misericordia infinita.

Δ The fire immediately did shote out of the stone into E K, as before

His /tung/ (c) therevppon did quake in his mowth

E K The Veale hangeth yet before.

Δ Then, all being vncouered, thus he red

27 Atra cas carmax pabámsed gero adol macom vaxt

ie / / ies
gestes ladúch carse ámages dascal panselogen dursca zureóch pamcasáh vsca huädrongúnda malue ior . gáscama af orthox VAN CORHG aspe zubra vaacáäh gandeuá arinmaphel vax oh saoh abra iehudeh gamphe vndáxa casmat lafet vncas laphet vanascor torx glust hahaha enséde gumah galseds.

28

Pacádpha palzé zuma carphah uzad capaden vlsage
EXCOL PHAG MARTBH iasmadel voscon sem abnérda tohcoth iamphala páhath órcheth iesmog pasque Labáäh agas lada vng lasco ied ampha leda pageh gemze axax ózed caphzed campha voxal luthed gedan famech ártsnad gathad zuresch pascha lo guma hálphe dax vancron patel zurad.

Marginal notes:

line 17: Note

line 31: This name cōpre= / hendeth the num= / ber of all the / fayries. who / are diuels / next to the/state and cō= / dition of man / etc.

[76b]

29

Canda lahad Bóbagen afna vorzed phadel NOBTDAMBTH gáscala axad vanges vodoth mured achna ádcol damath zesvamcul pacadáah zimles zoraston geh galze mazad pathel cusma iaphes huráscah órphade loscad mages mat lumfamge detchel orze cámalah

pag
vndan padgze pathmataph zumad lephada ohaHx

kan
[vs] vlschan zembloh agne phamgah iudad capex

Luzad vehech arse

30 ien

onda gams luzgaph vxan genzed padex

filgh CONGAMPHLGH ascath gadpham zurdah zamge

gloghcha sapax tastel vnsada phatheth zuncapha

oxamachad semteph ascle zuncas magzed dulm pamfra husage axad exoradad casmet amphigel iesk

adcath luza pathem necotheth gesch labba doh

doxa vascheth hoxan lamesde lampha iodoch gonzah

ies iel
hamges glutha oxmogel demapha vzed ascraph.

31

Kad ie
zudath chadgama omsage hor gadsa gezes

na
ORPHAMZAMNAHE gedod asphed voxa gemgah lath gaphes zembloth chasca olphe dax marpha

sol ies
lothe sool separ marges bosqui laxa cosneth

gonse dadg voxma vmage vnx gascheth lood lo

adma loo ga zem cha na phe am na la ia

pacheth nox da a mah

32

Gedox al [sem ga na da bah o] SEM GA NA DAH BAH

ongagageda phachel loodath haxna gu na pa ge pha

al se geda oh oöda géhoph pachad enol adax loges

Marginal notes:

line 6: ℵ iustitia a minime / diuino sine Labe line 11: ℵ fide that reviveth / ma<ns> brest mans / The holy ghoste:

[77a]

famgah laxqui hasche vadol vómsana gax ma deph na zad gel panca vam sesquin oxal genoph voödal umadabah.

△

33 Asge lun zumia paxchádma enohol duran
ORCHLÓDMAPHAG mages oschan lod bunda cap luzan lorpha leuandah orxzed famzad genósodath phaselma gesda chom gas naph geth nag goth ládmano Vmvar gezen vax gulzad margas luxt lapeh iudath zomze van goth dah vorx guna ia ada
Vox hámana

△

34 Arze galsam vnza vcha pasel noxda
Nobróschom [GVNADÉPHOGAS] gunadéphogas dúnseph man cax mal cás mah ied hah mel cár ha zemphe vncah lethoph both ned ga phí cas mel ioth hath cha sad ma ne ded ma gon zuna gothel pascheph nodax vam phath mata

A voyce ——— Orate ——— △ we prayed ∴

35 Aphath zunca voxmor can zadcheth napha.
keth

[Verd] VORDOMPHÁNCHES gauesgosadel gurah leth agsnah orza max pace ieth cas lad fam pahógama zon chás pha ma zum bles cha phax var gat ma gas ter ne ho gat ma gan vn ga phax ma la gegath laxqu goga lab naches

Δ

Δ

Therevppon the Vele was drawn, and the fire cam from E K his eyes again into the stone

Δ Deo opt. Max. ois honor laus et gloria Amen
/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 6: 21, words hither

line 7, over 'goth': o long line 13: in great letters /refers to Mobroschom!/

line 17: Δ here are but / 48 words: I dowt / that there lacketh one.

line 23: Here seme to be to many by 3 or 4.

[77b]

Aprilis .5. Friday a meridie hora 5¼

Δ The Vele was taken away, without any speche vsed by me or E K
The boke and all the former furniture appeared very bright.

Δ I made a prayer to god, begynning Expectas expectaui Dominū etc

E K I here the sownd of men playing very melodiously on Instruments and singing

A Voyce ——— Serue God and take hede of Nettels. Δ This was spoken to E K in respect of a great anger he was in yesternight, by reason that one had done him iniurie by speche at my table [Charles Sled.]

E K There appere a great many, a far of; as thowgh they appered beyond the top /of/ [c] a howse: and so semed far of behinde the stone: and they seme to haue no heds.

A Voyce ——— A peculier people, and shalbe restored

Δ After this Voyce, the sayd hedles people disäpered.

Then all appered fyre, and a clowd covered all: and in the top [of the] of the fyre in the chayre, appered three faces, and seemed to shute and close in one. The faces seemed, eche to turn rownd, and so ioyne in one afterward

A Voyce ——Prayse him in his glorie and wurship him, in his truth.

Δ The fire entred into E K

A voyce ———Orate Δ We prayed

Δ Then thus appeared

gedóthar argo fa adóphanah gamsech olneh várasah

iusmach

A voyce ———Interpret not, till your vnderstanding be furnished.

Vschna phaól doa vah oho lazed la zu red ámma

donax valesto acaph lámphages ronox genma iudreth

loth adágma gonsaph godálga phareph iadsma zema

loa agnáphagon zunaha zunaha al me ionáphacas zeda ox arni.

37

Adgzelga olms vanaph osma vages otholl dox an ga had agzelia ia

latqui dónaphe zu gar + fáma phamah nordeph gasmat gasque gasla gas NA gasmaphés gasmagél gasnúnabe vamsech ábsechel gúlapha axnécho demsa pámbochaph iehúsa gadaámah nosad iurés chy almse orsa vax marde zun éffa mochoéffa zuréheffa asga Lubeth bethlémcha máxiche iehúscoth iaphan órnada vamne od ghim noh

Marginal notes:

line 6: Take hede of / Nettels.

line 12: Perhaps the / Jues ahall / be restored line 22, over 'iusmach': ℵ begotten line 23: Interprete / not yet line 29, over 'dox an ga had': one word line 30, over 'fama': ℵ I will giue

[78a]

38

Arphe lamse gaphnedg ned argaph zonze zumcoth Ómdopadáphaab nulech leg gaartha ancáphama soldemcah casdra vges lapha ludasphándo galúbanoh apáchana iedeph zembloh zamgýsel chéuacha laquet lozódma ierinth onaph uzad máspela gýman orphámmagah iumesbalégo archánphame + zamcheth zoah zoach

39

Ámchana zeuoth luthámba ganeph iamda ox oho iephad made noxa voscaph bamgephes noschol apeth iale lod ga Na zuma datques vorzad numech apheth nudach caseth iotha lax arseth armi pli ca tar bam a co zamgeph gaseth vrnod arispa iex han setha + oh lagnaph dothoth brazed vamchach odoamaah zembles gunza naspolge gathme orsoth zurath vameth anseh +

40

Zalpe iedmacha amphas nethoth alphax. durah gethos aschéph nethoth iubad Laxmah ionsa max dan do nasdoga matastos lateth vnchas amse Iacaph zembloagauh ad pha ma gel lud cha dan sa amphicatol arnopaa adapagemoh nodasma machestepholon

41

Lumbor iemasch onzed gamphidarah go mas cha pa
zeba zun amph naho zucath uomplinanohahal machal lozma dauangeth buches lauax orxod maches donchaph luzath marpheth oz lanva don gauah oschol lumasa phedeph omsa nax domagere angenophacha phachadona.

Marginal notes:

line 1, over 'Arphe': ✕ I desire the O god line 2: This was put in / and out a good / while before E K / could haue a / perfect vew to / rede it line 3, over 'apachana': ✕ the slymie things / made of dust line 6: Δ / here seme to / want 5 or 6 / names.

line 10: nu mech is / two wordes.

line 12: one word

line 15: These two words / are in one square.

line 19, over 'do nasdoga matastos': ✕ the furious and perpetuall fire enclosed for the ponishment of them that / are banished from the glory.

line 19: one word of 7 / syllables: 4 in / the first part / and 3 in the / last.

[78b]

42

Óschala zamges onphá gemes phaches nolph daxeth machésmachoh vastnálpoh gemas nach loscheph daphmech noth chales zunech maschol

Lu gasnaph malces gethcaph madna madena oäh gemsah pa luseth iorbástamax elcaph rusam 5 phanes domsath iel gel pachadóra amáxchano Lumagéno armachaphámelon adro micho natath iamesebáchola donádocha +

Δ The fire went fro /E K.7 his eyes to the stone agayn. Then 10
E K c

his vnderstanding was gone allso.

Δ Deo soli sit ois laus honor et gloria per infinita saeculo saecula. Amen.

/flourish/ 15

Marginal note:

line 4: [Lu] / ℵ fro one

Aprilis 6. Saterday affore none hora 10¼

△ The fire shot into E K, as before was vsed: whereat he startled

All was vncovered, as the manner was. But E K had such a whirling and beating inwardly in his hed, that he could not vse any Judgment to discerne what appeared, for half a quarter of an howre almost.

A Voyce ——————— SVM

and agayn —— a voyce —— Gahoachma. [ℵ] Sum quod sum, E K expownded <it.>

43 Asmar gehótha galseph achándas vnáscor sátquama

látquataf hun gánses luximágelo ásquapa locat lochath

anses dosam váthne gálsador ansech gódamah vonsepaléscoh ádmacah lu zámpha oh adma zemblodárma varmíga zuna thotob amphichanósa

gemichanadabah Vademado Vaselapagédo

△ ▽

44 Amascabalonocha anódah aduradámah gonadephageno

vnachapesmacho geminadochapamica vuamsapálage

vocórthmoth achepasmácapha emcanidobah gedóah

△ ▽

[79a]

45 nostah
Nostoah geuámna da oscha lus palpal medna gorumbalógeph acapnapádapha Volséma gonogédocha

ambusábaloh gemúsacha vamihópha zumnegadaphágepha

† iurehoh

5

46 Zémnoda amni fa chebseth vsángrada bosadóma

zúmacoh aphinabácha buzádbazu amachapadomicha

zumanepasso NA vuamanábadoth

zumblegámpha zumblecaphamacha

10

E K. All is couered with darknes. Terrible flashes of fire appered and they semed to wreath and wrap, one abowt an other. In the fire ouer the chayre appered, the three heds which appeared before.

A Voyce ———— Laua zuráah

Δ After our prayers was very hevenly noyce hard. 15

47 Zudneph arni ioh pan zedco laniga nahad

lébale nochas arni cans lósmo iana olna dax zémblocha zedman púsatha váma mah oxex párzu

drána ánza pasel lúmah cóxech ádamax gónboh

alze dah lúsache asneph gedma noxdrúma 20

Vamcáphnapham ástichel rátrugem abnath lonsas

masqueth tauínar tadna gehodód gaphrámsana

asclor drusáxpa

48 Amgédpha lazad ampha ladmaáchel galdamichaël 25

Vnza dédma Luz záceph pílathob gano

vama zúnasch zemblagen ónman zuth catas

max ordru iadse lamad caphícha aschal

luz + ampna zodmínada excáphanog salgémphane

Marginal notes:

over line 1, centrally placed: ℵ it was in the begynning. /with line to 'nostah' (line 1)/ line 4, to right of 'iurehoh': This last word was hid a prety while with a rym like a thin bladder / affore it: and when it was perfectly seen there appered a bluddy / cross over it. It is a Word signifying what Christ did in hel.

line 9: △ here seme to / lack 5 words line 14, to right of 'zuraah': ℵ Vse humilitie in prayers to God, / that is fervently pray. it signifieth / Pray into god line 20: △ / pronownce as che / in chery line 21: △ / ratrugeem is one / of the 7 words on / the side of the Table / first prescribed line 25: ℵ I will begynne / anew line 27: The 49th row followeth / after 2 leaves. / Arney vah nol etc

---

[79b]

Om vrza lat quartphe lasque deth ürad

oxmana/ gamges

△ Now the boke was couered with a blew silk sindall and vppon that blew covering appered letters of gold, conteyning these words

Amzes naghe/zes Hardeh 5

E K. it signifieth——The vniversall name of him that created vniversally be praysed and extolled for euer.

△ Amen

A Clowde covered the boke.

A Voyce ———————— Mighty is thy Name (ô lorde) for euer. 10

E K. it lightneth

A Voyce ——————— The place is Holy: stur not [sayd the three heds

Δ Now appered to E K, some imperfection passed in the eleuenth row. And that we wer towght how to amend it. and so we did.

Δ Then the firy light went from E K into the stone agayn. and his inspired perceyuerance and vnderstanding was gone: as often before it vsed to be.

Δ Gloriam laudemq$_{r}$ nrī Creatoris, oēs Creaturae

indesinenter resonent: Amen

Halleluiah Halleluiah Halleluiah

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 3: Blew

line 4: Note this / covering to / be made / for the boke line 5 RH: ——— Note this to be pronownced / rowndly to gither.

line 16: Inspiration

Aprilis 6. Saterday after none

Δ The Table, Chayre, boke and fyre appeared

And while I went into my oratorie to pray, fire cam thrise out of the stone vppon E K, as he was at prayer, at my table in my study.

E K hard a voyce out of the fyre, saying } Why do the Children of men prolong the time of theyr perfect felicitie: or why are they dedicated to vanitie?

Many things ar yet to come: Notwithstanding, the

Time must be shortned,

I AM THAT I AM

A voyce ——— Veniet Vox eius, vt dicat filijs hoim quae ventura sunt.

E K There is a man, in white, come in, like Vriel, who cam first into the stone

△ Benedictus qui venit in noie Domine ——— Vr: Amen

Vr ——— I teache: E K sayd that he turned toward me

Vr. What willt thow I shall answer the, as concerning this work?

E K He hath a ball of fire in his left hand and in his right hand

a Triangle of fyre

△ What is most nedefull for vs to lerne herin, that is my chief desire.

Vriel ——— Fowre monthes, are yet to come: The fifth is the begynning of great miserie, to the heauens, to the earth and to all liuing Creatures. Therfore must thow nedes attend vppon the will of God: Things must then

---

Marginal notes:

line 39: ○ △

line 43: A prophesie / Very dredfull / now at hand

[80a]

then be put in practise. A thing that knitteth vp all must of force conteyn many celestiall Vertues

Therfore, in these doings, must things be furnished spedyly, and with reuerence.

This, is the light, wherewith thow shalt be Kindled

This is it, that shall renew the: yea agayn and agayn, and sevenly seuen tymes, agayn

Then shall thy eyes be clered from the dymnes

Thow shalt perceyue these things which haue [b] not byn seen,

No, not amongst the Sonnes of men.

This other haue I browght, whereof I will, now, bestow the seventith part of the first part of seuenty seuen. The residue shall be fullfilled, in, and with the; In, I say, and to gither, with the.

Behold (sayth the lord) I will breath vppon men, and they shall haue the spirit of Vnderstanding

In 40 dayes must the boke of the Secrets, and key of this world be Written: euen as it is manifest to the one of you in sight, and to the other in faith. Therfore haue I browght it to the wyndow of thy senses, and dores of thy Imagination: to the ende he may see and performe the tyme of God his Abridgmēt. That shalt, thow, write down in his propre and sanctified distinctions.

This other, (pointing to E K) shall haue it allwayes before him, and shall daylie performe the office to him committed. Which if he do not, the Lord shall raze his name from the number of his blessed, and those that are annoynted with his blud

For, behold, what man, can speak, or talk with the spirit of God?

No flesh is hable to stand, whan the voyce of his Thunder shall present the parte of the next Leaf vnto sight

You haue wauering myndes, and are drawn away with the World: But brittle is the state therof: small therfore are the Vanities of his Illusion

Be of sownd faith. Beleue. Great is the reward of those that are faithfull

God Will not be dishonored, neyther will suffer them to receyue dishonor, that honor him in holiness.

Behold, Behold, Mark ô and Behold: Eache line hath stretched him self, euen to his ende: and the Middst is glorious to the good, and dishonor to the wicked. Heuen and erth must decay: so, shall not the words of this Testimonie.

△ Ecce seruus et misellus homuncio Dei nri, fiat mihi iuxta beneplacitum voluntatis suae. etc

△ Vriel toke a little of the fire in his left hand and flung it at E K: and it went in at his mowth

Vr. My message is done.

△ May I Note Vr, (meaning Vriel,) for your name [that no] who now deale with vs. ——— Vr ——— I am so

---

line 3: Spedily & <&> reuerently line 5: △. Vriel held / vp now the / Triangle of / fire /with hand/line 9, over 'these': those line 11: △ / Vriel now / Holding vp / the Ball of / fire in his / left hand, / sayd as / here written /with hand and joined by an integral to MN57

line 16: Liber /
line 17, written vertically: △ if fro the first day of / writing we accownt / than fro good friday the / reckoning doth begynne. / and so ende <this> line 20: The Abridg= / met of time line 20: speaking to △ line 23: The danger / thretned, if / E K do not / his dutie line 27: Note a / terrible / thing line 37: The / ende of / all.

line 42: Note, by / the place / here before / what measure / in proportion / of powr and / vnderstanding / this was, in / respect of / the white ball / of fyre.

line joins 'seventith part' (line 11) to 'Vriel toke' (line 42).

[80b]

△ I pray you to give vs advise what /we^c/ are to doe in our affayres.

Vr. It is sayde

△ he sayd to E K, Tell him, I haue told him, and seemed to smile.

△ Of Mistres Haward (Jentlewoman of her Ma^ties priuie chamber) I wold fayn know, wherfore we were /not^c/warned of her comming? [to make vs] she hath caused 5 vs, now, for an howre or two, to intermit our exercise? Is it the Will of god, that for her great charitie vsed toward many, (as in procuring the Quenes Ma^ties Almes to many [d] nedy persons) the lord entendeth to be mercifull to her? I meane at the pynche of these great miseries ensuing, now

(by you) told of. And that by her, I may do good seruice concerning the Quenes Maiesties Cumfort?

Vr——— Who is he, that opened thy mowth, or hath told the of things to com<e?>

What thow hast sayd, is sayde. Mark the ende.

It is a sufficient answer.

Vr——— Loke vp. ———Δ he sayd so to E K. who loking vp, saw the boke

the chayre and the Globe a part, abroad, out of the stone, and then, none remayning in the stone to be seene. and it cam nearer & nearer to him, and it burned, as before.

Vr. So, set down, what thow seest.

What thow seest, deliuer vnto him.

As it is his will, so be it vnto the:

Do thy duty, wherevnto thow art moved,

and it shalbe sufficient.

[Vr] Farewell, for a time

Δ We put vp the stone: and the former boke and other furniture appeared vppon the table hard by E K. and he was to write out as he saw: Which he began to do, both in character and words: but it was to cumbersome to him: and therfore he wrote onely the words in latin lettres

Δ After he had written 28 lines there in that [boke th] paper boke, the first word being Arney, and the last, being nah, suddenly all was taken away out of his sight: and so likewise his vnderstanding of that he had written was quite gone. For, contynually as he wrote, he Vnderstode the language and sense thereof, as if it had byn english.

△ After he had finished that second [✍] page of the first leafe, I then

Did copy it out as followeth

אלא מאל דגאלש

K 49 Arney vah nol i gadeth adney ox vals nath gemseh ah

orza val gemáh, oh gedvá on zembáh nohhad vomfah olden ampha nols admácha nonsah vamfas ornad, alphol andax órzadah vos ansoh hanzah voh

adm

Marginal notes:

line 7: Mistres Francis / Haward elected / to taste of god / his great mercy / for her charitable / hart. etc line 19, RH: △ The boke and writing was made / very playne to him.

line 35: [✍ forte Row]

line 38: △ / forte, / Asney.

[81a]

In the tables expressed.		drux	1
drux		na	2
na		ger	3
ger		pa	4
pa		[na]	5
van		van	5

or				or	6
pal				pal	7
med				med	8
gal	letters names,			[caph]		10
ceph	vsed in sense			gal	9
vr				cheph	10
fam				vr	11
ged				[phm]
vn				fam	12	15
mals				ged	13
				vn	14
				[mal	15.]
	veh			[nah]
	graph	16	15	mals	15	20
	gisg[s]	17	16
+	mals	18	17
	don	19	18
	gon	20	19
	tal	21	20	L d 1		25
				b a
	a			[?]
	Vad 7			[5]	Vad 9
	f			[?]		30

[81b]

I finde diuerse dowts which I cannot order, to my contentment.

1. How many /of my[c] ruled/ leaves, shall I take for the writing of the first leafe

2. How shall I make the distinctions of the last [8] 9 lines of the first leafe answerable to all the /former/ words: how to move them /into/ this & /place all/ of [th] these letters, & this 9 rows having but 49 letters.

3. how shall I do for the true orthographie: Seing g and C and P etc haue so diuerse sownds: & not allways one as g sometymes as gh & sometymes as J: and C sometymes like K sometymes like S. p sometymes like ph, & sometymes p——— & sometyme f.

4 The number of the words in the first leafe,——— euery row, is not all one: nor 49 allwayes

5 of the /wide/ Table, /where/ is to be set downe all the tables following, all the Table /over/, it will not agree to fill [vp] vp /allso the/ all places, & to set down the /rows/ pfectly.

Marginal note:

/written at top of page/: solgars

[82a]

adma ioha notma goth vamsed adges onseple ondemax orzan vnfa onmah vndabra gonsah gols nahad NA.

---

1 [2] Oxar varmol pan sampas os al pans orney andsu alsaph oucha cosdam onzagoles natmatatp max, olnah von ganse pacath olnoh vor nasquah loth adnay

nonsah oxansah vals nodax vonqueth lan sandquat ox ardánh [ozabel] onzâbel ormach douquin astmax [al|] arpagels ontipodah omvah nosch als mantquts, [ar]
armad notgals + Vantantquah + 10

2 [5] Ondroh als vrh + panchah orn sandvah loh andah nol pan, sedmah zugeh als abmicadampâget ordomph, axah gethol vav axel anthath gorsan vax parsah vort lanq ándamsah getheol, vrchan navádah 15 óxembles armax lothar, vos antath, orsé vax alnoth, other mals olnah gethom várdamach, alls +, Orgeth

3 [4] Or pasquah omzádah vorts, angénodah varsáua 20
onch aldúmph, ánget ónsaual galta oth aneth ax pa gesné ouád ax orneh aldumbáges voscómph alze ax, orzad andah gost astoh nadah vortes, astmah notesma goth nathad omza, geth altéth ox, degáth onda voxa gemnaché adna dansa als alst 25

4 [5] arsah + Orthath ols gast ardoh max vármah doth novámq lath, adnab gothan, ardrínoh astómagel arpáget asteth arde obzá, ols (NA) gemnapálabamida orsat nahah

Marginal notes:

line 4: <I> dowt / <w>hich is n / nd which is / u.

line 10: a dowte whether / ar mad be / two words or / one.

line 17: Δ / Ω

Odmázen ándulphel, ox ambrássah oxah géth nor vamfah genoh daqueth als astna, oh tatóh, alsah goth necor andeoh neo alda nah

5 [6] Vanlah oha demagens on sunfah, paphah olemneh, ózadcha lax ornah vor adme ox vastmah gu labazna, gamnách<o> asthmah ochádo landrídah vons sah, lúgho iahat nabscham nohads vandispa rossámod androch alphoh, zúmbloh ásnah gonfageph aldeh lo dah vax orh asmo, gad au dansequa deo, dath vax nograh vor segbat Mon.

6 [7] Arni olbah galpa lohánaha gáupumagénsah osso var se darsah goho álbumiclámácapáloth ieho nad veslah vors ardno inmony asquam rath als vásmah génda loggahah astmu

7 [8] Arnah notah lax vart luhoh désmaph, ol capraminacah oxandanvah gemneloriplitonpha accamplahnostapha ormaxadahahar orzemblizadmah panchefelogedoh áschah ólmah ledóh vaxma

8 [9] Gans na cap lan seda ax nor vorza vo laspral onsa gem gemah noph gázo na von santfa nostradg ansel vnsa pah vort velsa or alda viax nor adroh semneh ols vandésqual olzah nolpax pahah lothor ax ru vansar glímnaph gath ardot ardri axa noh gaga leth arde maxa.

9 [10] Corsal mabah noplich alps arsod vord vanfax oriox nabat gemnepoh laphet Ióda nat vombal nams ar

geth alloah néphirt. lauda noxa voxtaf ardno ándroch labmageh ossu állmaglo ardot nalbar vanse dar to vorts parsan vr vnrah vor gádeth leth orze nax vomreh agelpha, legar or nembla ar va Su

Marginal notes:

line 3: here seme to / be 50 names and / so, one to many line 14: here are but 38

line 32: 48

[83a]

<10> 11 Zanchumáchaseph olzaminóah Valsebúraah nodaligánax orsápnago darságnapha nobsiblith armipyth arsepólonitantons
Iembúlsamar lebóge axpar ornáza oldaxardacoah

11 12 Semno ah al chi do á cha da Selpaginodah adahubámicanoh dam pha gli ás cha nor oxompaminapho lemp, na, gón sa pha ne co ál pha [aspa] as pa gé mo cal na tú ra ge

12 13 Sen gál se quar rus fa glan súx taft ormaca ox i no dál ge brah nop tar ná gel vom na ches pál ma cax, arsep as dón sadg asc lan fán che dah nor vi car máx coh
zum bla zánpha ad geh do ca ba ah

13 14 Ar gém na ca pál fax, or[r] nido hab cas pigan alpuh gágah loth ral sá bra dan go sá pax vólsan qués tan

ondapha opicab or zy lá pa achrapa máles
[adm m] ad má car pah oxalps on dá pa, gém ha de vór guse

14 15 lat gans sa par sat lasteah lor ádah nóxax ardéphis nónson andoh gvmzi vor sab líboh ad ni sa pa loth gaho lar va noxa oho lan sempah noxa Vriah sephah lúsaz odgálsax nottaph ax vrnoc árpos arta zem zubah lothor gas lubah vom zá da phi cár no

15 16 Alsótaphe [no] ondah vor ban sanphar pa loth agno iam
nésroh am algórs vrrábah geuseh alde ox nah vors púrblox ámphicab nóstrohh admág[d] or napsú asmo lon gamphi arbel nof ámphi on Saubloth aschi nur laffax las doxa pra gem a Sestrox amphi nax var sembbh[beth]

Marginal notes:
line 3: <h>ere are / <.....4.>
line 7: .50. words

[83b]

16 17 Angésel oxapácad onz adq ochádah ólzah vor náh orpogógraphel al sa gem ua ca pí coh vl da pa pór sah naxor vonsa [n] rons vrbanf lab dún zaph[fe] algadef loh gem vortáoh amph ahoha za vaxorza leph oxor neoh ah va dunaca pi ca lodox ard nah.

17 18 Iahod vox ar pi cah lot tár pi ges nol zim na plah ge ó gra plih ne gó ah va lu gán zed am phí la doh zan veh al nex oh al pha ze goth gedóth axor van zebá al cá pa

Luma ges ard de oh ah

18 [19] Onchas lagod van Sebageh oxangam pah gos dah manzeh ocondah vardol Sebagh ol madan NA obal Sepaget, otoxen narvah lubatan ansem nofet au naba notoh ax arsah mans Vstgam pahod pah mal sednah gestons amphes al manso gapalebâton arra nax vamfes amah dot agen nalphat ar zamne oh Sages

19 [20] nax lerua nath Zembloh axpadabamah Sanzápas gunzanquah ona var demneh gah lod vmnah doxa val tarquat mans ol gem nageph au zanbat vx [na] anzach al pamboha naxtath ol nada vam nonsal aua nal gedot vorx alge lah despa[g] gu prominabâmîgah olpaz ord gamnat lem paz cath normadah on demq

20 [21] Laffah ie ogg dalseph abrimanadg oldomph ledothnar ymnachar onze vam sepno voxauaret ol zantqur amph nas Sages om nartal vor miscam bemcax lappad gesso drux capgol ass letnar vom sausah or gamprida ornat vol asmd onza duh get hansa gorh hubra galsaropah nequax dap gemno ab pnidah noxd lumbam

21 [22] al gethroz ax arvan oh zempal guh arvax no demnat ar pambals nop nonsal geh axor pam vartop ab vbrah cardax lon songes au dumax ar nephar lu gemne om Asda

Vorts

Marginal notes:

line 10: here seme to / be 50.

line 19: of the n and / u of this word / I dowt. /refers to 'gunzanquah'/ line 28: At vom was / a † to note / the ende of a / line: But both / these mak but / 49 names.

[84a]

vorts vmrod val manqh noh Sam, naga vrbrast Lurvandax vpplod dam zurtax loa an avarn nar gemplicabnadah oxa

nooa Babna ampha dum nonsap vrs daluah marsasqual orma nabath Sabaothal netma vol sempra isch laue ondeh noh semblax or mansa macapal vngenel vorsepax vrsabada noxanquah vndalph asmoh vxa na Gaspar vmpaxal Lapproh Iadd nomval vp setquam nol astma vors: vrdem gnasplat bef affafefafed noxtah Volls laydam ovs nac

cedah or manveh geh axax nolsp damva dor demgoh apoxan subliganaxnarod orchal vamnad vez gemlehox ar drulalpa ax vr samfah oladmax vr sappoh Luah vr pabmax luro lam faxno dem vombres adusx or sembal on vamne oh lemne val se quap vn nap nastosm dah voz mazaz lumato games on neda.

voh gemse ax pah losquan nof afma dol vamna vn samses
oh set, quamsa ol danfa dot santa on anma ol subracah Babalad vansag olso pas gonred vorn chechust axaroh rugho am nadom val sequot ne texpa vors vrs al pam vans na tomvamal ansipamals notems anq$_R$, arxe al

pangef offd ne pamfah aliboh a nostâfâges almesed vrmast geus vrmax au semblox satq quayntah luzez arne noh pamna sams bantes orn volsax vors vnisapa monsel dah nox ah pah vomreb doth danséquox anzazed onz anfal nom vamreh volts vrnacapácapah noshan yalt gelfay nor sentqbt onbanzar luntaf val sentepax ornisa nor Pampals anz alpah nox noxa gendah von gamne dah vors ad na lepnazu acheldaph var honza gune alsaph nal vomsan vns alpd a domph ar zemnip ans vrnach vancef ban yanzem oh aha vons nabrah vh asmo drat vormez al pasquar no gems nah zem lasquith apsantah.

Marginal notes:

line 16: 51 words

[84b]

Vol zans alphi ne gansad ol pam ro dah vor vngef a deoh nad vnsemel apodmacah vnsap val vndar ban cefna dux hansel yax nolpah volts quayntah gam vemneg oh asq al panst ans vntah hunsansa Apnad ratq a sanst nel odogamanázar + olzah guh oh nah varsa vpangah neoh aho

Notgah ox vr auonsad vl dath nox lat ges orn val

sedcoh leth arney vas ars galep odámpha nol axar vox apracas nolph admi adpálsah noh vrh gednach vax varsablox vrdam pagel admax lor vamtage oxandah lamfó not vorsah axpáa, ols nugaphar ádras vxár nostrílgan ampacoh vortes lesqual exoh.

29 30 Ses vah nómre gal sables orzah, get les part, ox ar se de cólmachu ardéh lox gempha lar vamra goh naxa vors admah gebah, semfúgel admá geod alzeh orzam vánchet, oxam prah geh orzad Val nexo, vam seleph oxa, noha par gúmsah askeph nox adroh lestof ad moxa nonsúrrach

30 31 Vomchál as pu gán san var, sem quáh lah set gedoh argli oranza vor zina sedcátah zurého admich, ors arsah varsab, oliba vortes lúnsanfah, adnah vor semquáx, vorsan lap varsah gebdah voxlar geoh, gemfel ad gvns. aldah gor vanlah, gehudan vor sableth, gedvel ax ors, manch var sembloh.

31 32 Ar dam fa gé do hah Luxh arcan Mans lubrah vor semblas adna gor partat, nor vílso adchu apri sed amphle nox arua getol. Vor sambla geth, arse pax vor sah gelh aho gethmah or gemfa nah prax chilad ascham na prah oxáh var setqua lexoh vor sámbleh zubrah.

32 33 Lax or setquáh vah lox rémah Nol sadma vort, famfa le gem nah or sepah vartef a geh Oha lon gaza Onsa ges adrux: vombalzah ah vaxtal. noh sedo lam, vom

tántas

Marginal note:

line 26: 48

[85a]

tántas oxárzah Mechól va zebn geth adna vax, ormacha lorni adrah, Gens arnah vor, Arsad odícoh álida nepho.

⟨33⟩ [34] Hastan bah ges loh ru mal; vrabo den varsah, Mah vox idah ru gebna demphe, ors amvi ar, Genbá, óxad va ges leth vriop: nal pas vi me ró to ádnavah ged anse lah verbrod vn gelpa, lux árd do ah: vast vor Gemafánoh

⟨34⟩ [35] Amles ondanfaha noxt vradah gel núbrod Arb á cha lo pe go há pa ra zem che pár ma la Na burá doh gem la pa l(orzin fax nol ad micápar vó si pi cá la ton andrah vox ardno, get na ca ploh gálzun

⟨3⟩5 [36] Ór ge mah luza cá poh nox tráh vioxah nebo hu ge o mí lah cox chá dah or na hú da vol sa pah: No bro ch, ál pa chídomph náb la grux la vx ar gá fam gel ne do gá lah vo sa pah

36 [37] Gu la gé dop áx ix óx a max lun sá gem pah orsa devlmah Gé pa cha vor sí ma coh alduth gempfa: Nox gal max ar hú gaf gli nó rob va gen lá car du zum ox ám pli zam zu latmah ge gé ma ohahah.

⟨37⟩ 38 Ga lá pa drux vax ma geb lá geb or ché plon gan zéd ah
Vox ár vox gelet ar gahad, gan pá gan doruminaplah vor zinach cu pa chef ardrah ox ox pol sa gal max nah guth ardéth on zupra cró cro gah var sa má nal

⟨38⟩ 39 Ar sa bá cho as noh al geh oh, ax ár pa gal olza deh or za zú max exoh eh, or [cha] cah pal donzahá onza zethas: nor sáp se pah onzap a palmah aldoh voh náblebah gemnápam os malsa or naoh zar bu lagém pah neó ha brah

⟨39⟩ 40 Tal gep ar sep nah doh, vors alsa doh necoh am ar geth na ges alpran odox malsápnah, gohor ahoh gadmah

[85b]

ol dáneph aludar dónzagab ólsagah nebthuh or sapnar balgonph nep gemloh, ax amna duth achár laspá, voha, náxvolh gas vergol ah pratnom
i gea nostuamph

40 41 Ván sa pal sah gón so gon ge la bu rá doh tato lang, ge mé fe ran ón da pans ge lá brah: or pa gé mal on sán fan gen ólc ma chá lan Von sé gor a pri cas nor vá gel om brá cau cohadal.

| | | |

/^{c}words/ in some of the 49 rows of this second page:

Aprilis 10. hor .9. △ As we wer talking of the Macedonian (the greciā), who yesterday cam w/th/ M/r/

Sanford his letters, there appeared in the corner of my study a blak shaddow: and I did did charge that shaddow to declare who he was: There cam a voyce and sayd that it it was the Macedonian: and abowt his hat was written in great letters

this word ΚαΙάσΙικΙ⊕ which E K wrote out: and it signifieth maculosus, or condemnatus etc and the Voyce sayd, that word was sufficiēt adding Est, △ God be thanked and praysed.

Marginal notes:

line 2: the copy had / ọuụna / I <could> not <conjecture> line 39: [firmus]———

[86a]

To me <deli>uered by M^{r}

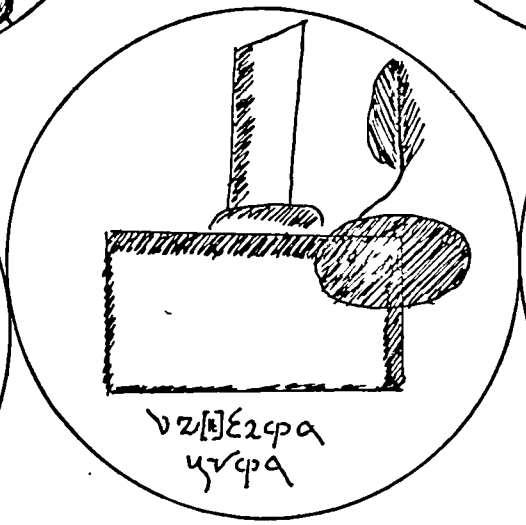
Edward Kelly

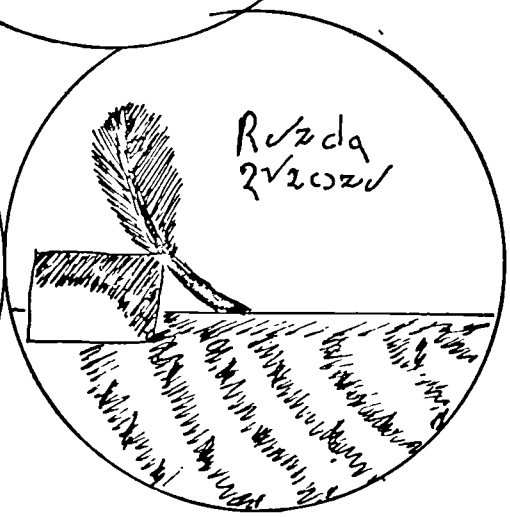
1583. Martij 22

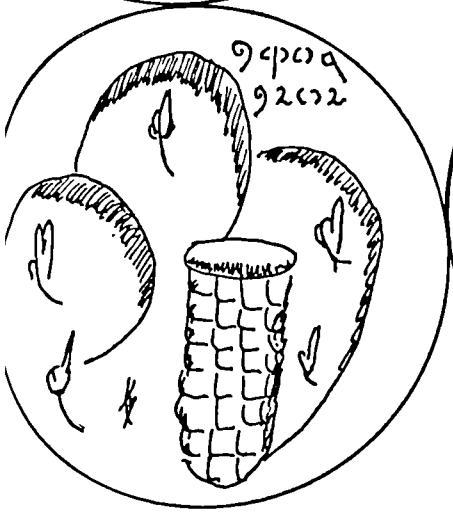
friday

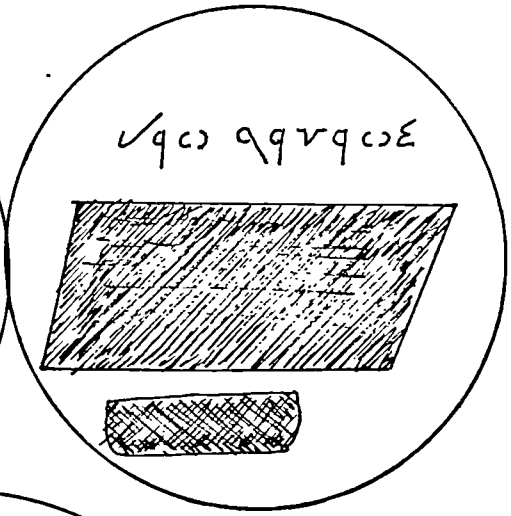
M^{r} Husy cam wth

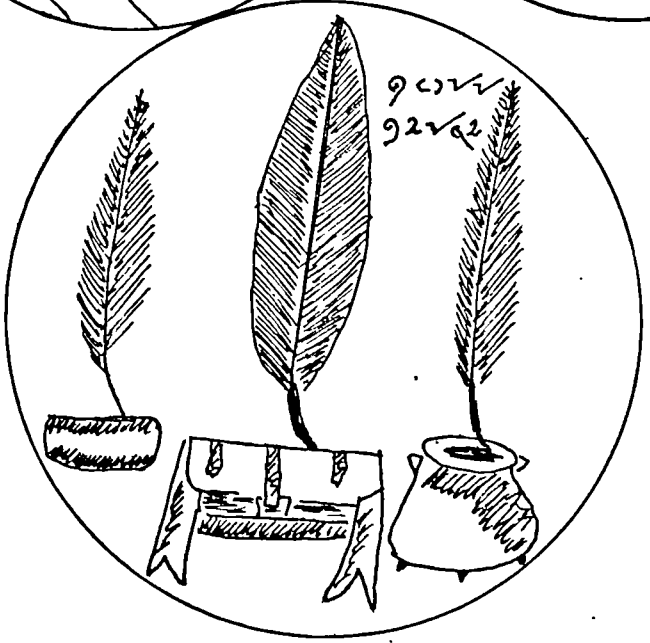
him from blockley



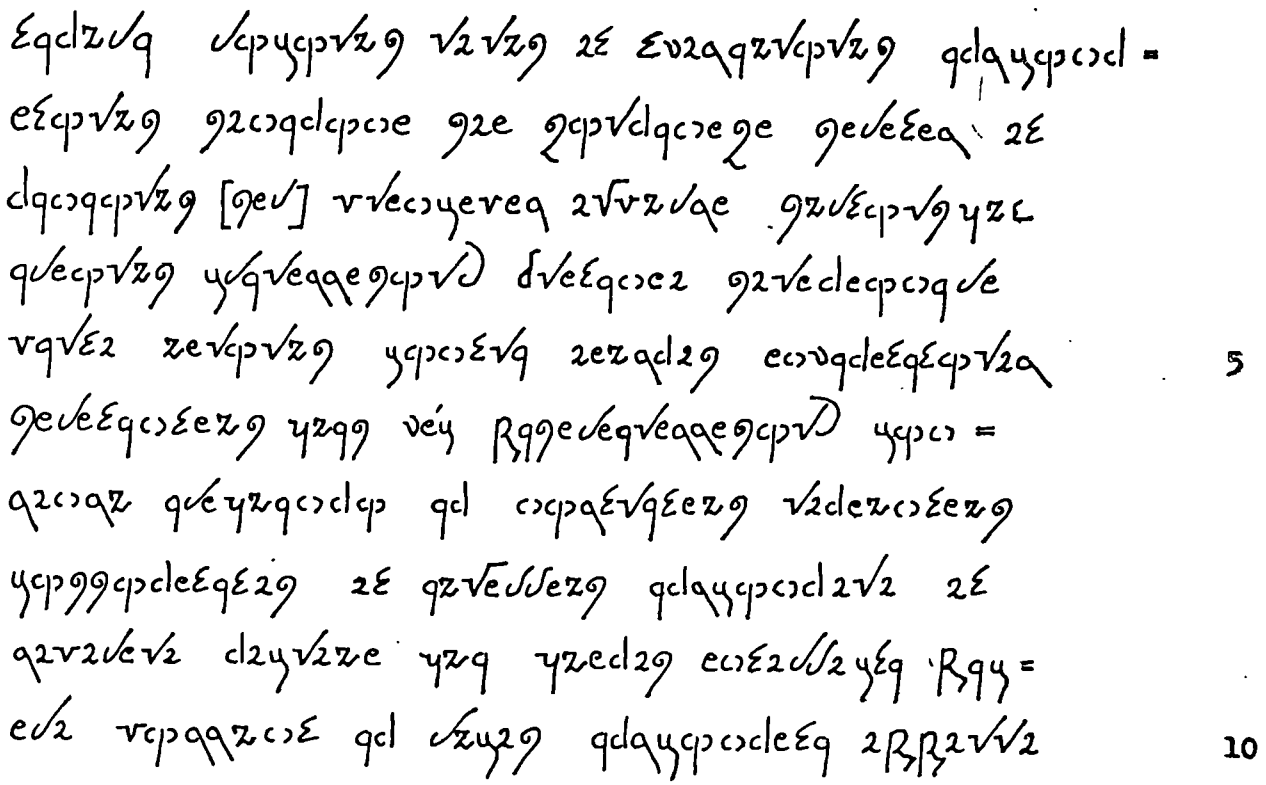








[87a]



/flourish/

[87b]

/blank/

[88a]

Aprilis. 11. Thursday

Δ After my comming home from the court, abowt 4 of the clok after none, and after my being in my study a while, it cam into my hed to assay to deciphre the cifre which before is spoken of, and was browght me by E K, as he was willed to do.

And at the first I was half out of hope: but yet making many assayes, and gessing /$\overline{\text{at}}^{\text{c}}$/ it (at the length) to be latine, I fownd this to be the true Alfabet. God giving me the perceyverance.

A	b	c	d	e	f	g	h	i	k	l	m	n	o	p	q	r
q	d	y	d	2	R	2	∿	e	ſ	ſ	9	ↄ	ↄp	v	y	√

s	t	v	x	y	z	w.
ϙ	ε	z	ſ

And, the first longer writing, was thus,

Tabula locorum rerum et Thesaurorum absconditorū Menahani, mei Gordanili, militis et Danaorū Principis, expulsi, multorumq́ aliorum clarissimorū (Britanie meridionali parte) virorū, contra eiusdem inhabitatores militantium: quam, hîc, familiarissimorum consensu, aliquando ad nostratium rediuntium commoditatem et auxilium abscondere et sepelire decreui: Qua quidem intellecta, facile possunt ad lucem abscondita efferre.

And the Notes of the ten places, here by, [notified] affixed are thus to be red orderly

1. Gilds cros hic o ..... mer id io onali . ot on

2 blankis Suters croces

3 Marsars got cros

4 Huteos cros

5 Fleds grenul

6 Mons mene

7 Mowntegles arnid

8 Lan sapant

9 Corts nelds

10 Mnrr Merse

Marginal notes:

line 5: They were / fownd at / Huets Cross / as the spirituall / creature affirmed / when he led them / to the finding / of this Monimēt/ &  boke of / Magik & / Alchimie. / Perhaps that is / <the> Cros called / Huteos Cros / being the / fowrth of / them below line 15: Note / J Dee the / last being of / the Danes / here, was / abowt the / year 1040 line 23: [d] / of this K / I dowt yet line 32: △ fortè Marr

[88b]

Aprilis 15 Monday

△ As E K was writing the eightenth leafe which was of the spirites of the earth, (in the after none abowt 4½ of the clok) he red a parcell therof, playnely /& alowde/ to him self, and herevppon suddenly at his side appeared three or fowre spirituall creatures like laboring men, hauing spades in theyr hands & theyr heares hanginging abowt theyr eares, and hastely asked E K what [they] /he/ wold haue & wherfore he called them. He answered that he called them not. & they replyed, & sayed that he called them: Then I began to say, they lyed: for his intent was not /to/ call them, but onely to read and repeat that which he had written: and that euery man who readeth a prayer to perceyue the sense thereof, prayeth not. No more, did he call them and I bad them be packing out of the place. and therevppon remoued from my desk

(where I was ruling of paper for his writing) to the grene chayre which was by my chymney: and presently he cryed out and sayd they had nipped him and broken his left arme by the wrest: and he shewed

the bare arme and there appered both on the vppersyde and lower side imprinted depe in, two circles as brode as grotes thus very red: And I seeing that, sowght for a stik and in the meane while, they assalted him, and he rose, and cryed to me (saying) they c̄ome flying on me, they c̄ome; and he put the stole, which he sat on, betwene him and them. but still they cam gaping or gyrning at him. Then I axed him where they were: and he poynted to the place and then I toke the stik and cam to the place, and in the name of Jesus commaunded those Baggagis to avoyde /and smitt a cross atroke at them/ and presently they avoyded.

All thanks be to the onely /one/ Almighty, and everlasting God

Whose name be praysed now & euer. Amen

Aprilis 18. Thursday morning. hor. 8. circiter

△ As E K cam to write out the Tables according as he was wont: and to haue

the letters appearing in the ayre hard by him, he saw nothing but a blak clowde seuen cornered. and after I had put the stone agayn into the frame, and therevppon did make long and oft request, for answer hauing, There appered nothing, neyther was any thing seen in the stone. Then I fell to prayer agayn, and at length, there appeared written vpon, or [out of] yssuing out of the clowde, this sentence

He promised, be not carful:

E K. The letters semed to stand at fingers endes, (being 21): and so euery finger had a letter on it: and the fingers semed to be placed at the Corners of the Heptagonall clowde: and assone as the sentence was red the fingers which seemed to issue out of the Heptagonū did shrink in agayn and disapere

Δ All laude honor and thanksgiving, be to the highest, our most louing mercifull and almighty God, now and euer amen.

The stone out of the frame

Marginal notes:

line 29: Note. Now / 30 Tables, / being writtē / since good / friday: and / dayes onely / 21 passed / since good / friday.

line 37: Δ as who shold / say αὐτος /ἐψα , ipē / dixit dc̄ / Deus.

line 37, RH: Δ Note, here are iust 21. letters line joins 'stone' (line 32) to 'stone' (line 44)

[89a]

Thursday. Aprilis 18. after dynner.

We being desirous to know the cause of this stay making, in the Tables shewing as before was accustomed; and now (24 leaves being written, a dark clowde to hang in the place of a glorious boke, did greatly disquiet our myndes, and browght vs in feare of some offence lately committed, by any one, or both of vs, whereby the Indignation of the lord might be kindled against vs.

Herevppon we prayed severally: and at length, (no alteration, or better

Cumfort hapening to vs, [w] I prayed in the hearing of E K, [at my]

(by my desk, on my knees) in great agony of mynde; and Behold there appeared one standing vppon, or rather somwhat behynde the Heptagonall clowde who sayd I am sent, to vnderstand the cause of your greif, and to answer your dowtes.

Δ I, then, declared my mynde breifly, according to the effect of my prayer.

wherevnto he answered at large, reproving my appointing of god a tyme or to abridge the tyme spoken of. and among his manifold grave speaches

he had these words

Prepare all things, For tyme is at hand

His Justice is great, and his arme stronge

How darest thow dowt or dreame, saying: Lo, God, this may be done in shorter time etc. But such is flesh.

Be rocks in faith

▲ It is not the manner of vs, good Angels, to be trubbled so oft.

At the time appointed, thow shalt practise: While sorrow shall be measured, thow shalt bynde vp thy fardell.

Great is the light of Gods sinceritie.

~~Appoint God no tyme. Fullfill that which is commaunded~~

God maketh clere whan it pleaseth him. Be you constant and avoyde

Temptations: For True it is, that is sayde: And lastly I say,

It shall be performed

What is it now thow woldest desyre to be made playner?

△ still he proceded vppon my answers: and at length he sayd

Neyther is the time of mans Justification known vntyll he hath byn tryed.

You are chosen by God his mercy to an ende and purpose: Which ende shall be made manifest by the first begynning in knowledg in these Mysteries.

God shall make clere whan it pleaseth him: & open all the secrets of wisdome whan he vnlocketh. Therfore seke not to know the mysteries of this boke, tyll the very howre that he shall call the. For then shall his powre be so full amongst you, that the flesh shall not be perceyued, in respect of his great glory

But was there euer any, that tasted of gods mercies so asuredly, that wanted due reuerence? Can you bow to Nature, and will not honor the workman? Is it not sayd, that this place is holy?

What are the works of holines? I do aduertise you: for, God will be honored. Neyther will he be wrasted, in any thing he speaketh.

Think not, that you could speak or talk with me, vnleast I did greatly abase

my self, in taking vppon me so vnlikely a thing in forme, as to my self. etc

But he doth [it] /this/[c] not for your causes, not for your deserts, but for the Glorie of his own name.

One

Marginal notes:

line 16: Prepare / all things

line 22: Good Angels

line 23: /hand/

line 32: Tyme of Justi= / fication known / Whan / The ende / of our elec= / tion line 39: Tyll the very / howre line 42: want of due / reuerence Vsing / <in> our actions / <is> reproved.

line 47: Angels abase / them selues, to / pleasure man by / theyr instructions / when they tak / vppon them, or / vse any sensi / ble evidence of / them selves / <or> voyces. etc

---

[89b]

One is not to be lightened, but all. And which all? The two fethered fow<l> to gither with the Captayn

Ask What thow wilt: for, vntyll the 40 dayes be ended, shalt thow haue no one more shew of vs.

Δ Whether shall we give Cownsayle, or consent to the Captayne to go down into the

Cuntry, as, presently he entendeth

Vr——— As he listeth

Δ E K. sayd that this was Vriel who now had appered and answered all this.

Vr.——I will ask the one question. Haue we any voyce or no?

Δ I do think you haue no organs or instruments apt for voyce: but are mere spirituall and nothing corporall: but that you haue the powre and property frō god to insi= nuate your message or meaning to eare or eye, in such sort as mans Ima= gination shall be, that both they here and see you sensibly.

Vr.——we haue no voyce, but a full noyce that filleth euery place: which whan you ones taste of, Distance shall make no separation.

Let there one come that may better answer: not in respect of thy self but one, more nerer to thy estate.——Do thy Duty.

Δ He sayd this, to one who cam in, and he departed him self.

Δ This new come Creature sayd, Wold you haue any thing with me, Il?

Δ Who art thow: Art thow one that loveth and honoreth our Creator?

Il——will you see my hart——E K. he openeth his body and sheweth his hart and theron appered written EL.

Δ he semed to be a very mery Creature, and skypped here and there, his apparell was like as /of/ [c] a vyce in a play: and so was his gesture and his skoffing, as the outward shew therof was to be vulgarly demed. but I did carefully ponder the der the pith of the worda which he spake: and so forbare to write very much which he spake at the begynning, by reason E K did so much mistake him, and in

in a manner toke him to be an Illuder.

Δ As you are appointed to answer vs by the Messager of God, so answer vs, (who desyre the pure and playne verity,) as may be correspondent to his credit that assigned you, and to the honor of God who created vs.

Il——My answer is Threefold——I answer by gesture by my apparayle and will answer the by my wordes.

Δ Do you know where the Arabik boke is that I had: which was written in tables and numbers?

Il——It is in Scotland——A minister hath it: it is nothing worth. The boke conteyneth fals and illuding Witchcrafts. All lawde honor and prayse be to the One and euerlasting God: for euer and euer.

△ The Lord Threasorer, hath he, any bokes belonging to Soyga? Il———he hath none: but certain Introductions to all artes.

△ But it was reported to me by this skryer that he had: certayn peculier bokes perteyning to Soyga. otherwise named ysoga, and Agyos, literis transpositis.

Il——— Soyga signifieth not Agyos. Soyga alca miketh.

△ What signifieth those wordes? The true measure of the Will of God in iudgment which is by wisdome.

△ What language is that, I pray you? Il——— a language towght in Paradise

△ To whome? Il———by infusion, to Adam. △ To whome did Adam vse it? Il——— vnto Chevah △ Did his posteritie vse the same?

Il——— yea, vntyll the Ayrie Towre was destroyed. △ Be there any any letters of that Language yet extant among vs mortall men?

Il <....> that there be △ Where are they? Il——ô, syr, I shall make

Marginal notes:

line 1: Three are / to be lighte= / ned.

line 3: 40 dayes.

line 5: A.G.

line 14: Vox ange= / lorū line 16: Vriel putteth / one in his / place.

line 19: △ / Il or El line 22: El.

line 23: IL

line 32: Note / Threfold / answer line 34: Liber Ara= / bicus line 38: E K: he / Kneleth down.

line 41: Note

line 46: The lan= / guage towght / in Paradise

⌈there is an illegible note at the bottom left hand corner of the folio⌋

[90a]

make you in loue with your Masterships boke.

Δ Did Adam write any thing in that Language. Il——That is no questio<n.>

Δ Belike than, they were deliuered from one to an other by tradition. or els

[Δ] Enoch his boke, or prophesie, doth, or may seme, to be written in the same language: bycause mention is made of it in the new Testament in Jude his epistle where he hath, Prophetauit autem de his Septimus ab Adam, Enoch, dicens, Ecce venit Dominus in sanctis millibus suis facere iudicium contra oēs, et arguere oēs impios, de omnibus opibus impietatis eorū, quibus impiè egerunt; et de omnibus duris quae locuti sunt contra Deum peccatores impij. etc

Il——— I must distinguish with you. Before the flud, the spirit of God was not vtterly obscured in man. Theyr memories were greater, theyr vnderstanding more clere, and theyr traditions, most, vnsearchable. Nothing remayned of [Enoch] Enoch but (and if it pleas your mastership) mowght haue byn carryed in a cart.

I can not bring you the brass, but I can shew you the bokes.

Slepe* 28 dayes, and you shall fynde them, vnder your pillow whan you do rise.

Δ As concerning Esdras bokes, which are missing, what say you?

Il——— The prophets of the Jues haue them. Δ But we can hardely, trust any thing in the Jues hands, concerning the pure Veritie: They are a stiffnecked people and dispersed all the world ouer.

Il——— I will shew you a trik. Δ he lifted vp his fote, and shewed the sole of his shoo: and there appeared the picture of a man, who seemed to haue a a skorf or fowle skynne on his face: which one toke of: and then there appered on his forhed these two figures 88

I will shew you more then that, to. and will speak to a man shortly, that shall bring Water to wash euery mans face.

Δ What mean you, by euery man? shall all men, be made cleane?

Il——— There is a difference in washing of faces.

EK. This creature seemeth to be a Woman by his face: his apparell semeth to be like a Vice in a play.

E K. Are you not a Kinsman to syngolla?

Il I syr, and so are you a kinsman to synfulla.

Δ A man may finde corn in chaf.

Il——— So may you (perchaunce) finde me an honest man in my ragged clothes.

Δ This other day, whan I was in dowt of the Grecian (the Macedonian) whether he had any good and profownd lerning or no, he was represented spiritually, and abowt his hat in great letters was written this greke word Καλάσιρις I pray you what doth it signifie? I axed the grecian and he sayd Βεβαιῶ

Il. Loke in your boke. △ I toke the common lexicon: and he sayd, No

Not that: Then I axed if I shold take Agrippas his lexicon: and he answered. Nor that. and I axed which then: and he sayd your boke covered with a white parchmēt. and I axed, that of Misteries of Latine greke and hebrue? and he sayd, yea: and there you shall finde that Maculo= sus hath onely that one word Kaballa longing to it. I loked &

so I fownd it which satisfyed me very well.

△ I pray you what say you of Gariladrah; do you know him? who long sins did deale with me?

Il——Yf he were lesser then I, /Ic7 durst speak [of] /Toc7 him: But bycause he is greater then /Ic7, I am not to speak to him. All vnder, and nothing above me, I deale.

Loke on your Tables, and there you shall finde an other name of his.

△ I remēber no such thing: Il——Consider who hath set me here

Yf the Truth thow hast allready, be of a greater then my self, then is it sufficiēt. △ what day was that name given me?

Il——Immediately, sir, after your Worships last cōming

△ That was Raphaël: And I remēber that Gariladrah sayd that he must leave me and his better (Raphael) shold be my instructor, and that then the same Raphael was in my hed then. etc.

Marginal notes:

line 4: Enoch

line 11: Note / excellent / Memories, / for Traditions / contynuing and / preseruing.

line 15: Δ forte 18. / Note 28 dayes / more do make / iust the 40 / dayes, before / notified.

line 17: Esdras / bokes

line 18: The Jues

line 24: Δ this might / seme to signi= / fie the calling / home of the / Jews, A° 1588. / to come line 29: Note, El / semed to / be woman.

line 46: Gariladrah line 51: That was / Vriel / pag. precedete.

line 54: *he pointed / to E K.

[90b]

Δ Sing a song to his prayse, who created vs.

Il I will sing a short song.
Your doings are of GOD: your calling great:
Go down and seke the Threasor, and you shall obteyn it.
Take no care: for, this Boke shall be done in 40 dayes Begyn to practise in August. Serue god before.
You shall know all thing, ictu oculi.
And so, prayse, glory, and eternall singing with incessant humilitie be vnto the Creator [t] that hath framed, made and created all things, for euer and euer, Now say you (yf you will)
Amen Δ Amen Amen Amen

After the ende of 40 dayes, go down for the Threasor Whan those 40 dayes are done, than this boke shall be finished. The rest of the time Vntyll August, is for rest, labor, and prayer.

Δ What labor? Il——In digging vp of those Threasors.

Δ Must we nedes dig for them? Il——otherwise, yf thow willt.

Δ How, I pray you? For to dig without lycence of the Prince, is dangerous by reason of the lawes: and to ax licence is half an odious sute.

Il——yf thow haue a parcell or part out of euery place of the erth, in any small quantitie, thow mayst work by the Creatures, whose powre it is to work in such causes: which will bring it (neuer trust me) before you can tell twenty.

Δ he meaneth. Neuer trust him, if it be not so, as he hath sayd.

Il——No, neuer trust me, if it be not so.

Δ you mean those ten places, marked in the Table, which last day, I deciphred.

Il——I mary, now you hit it. yea sir, and your chest allso, it wold do no hurt. Give me one: and I will make 40: and give you twenty an<d> take twenty to my self: and when you haue it, I pray you let me hau<e> some little portion for my wife /and/[c] children.

Δ As concerning that Chest, I pray you how cam the Macedonian, or M/r/ Sanford to know of it, so particularly as he did?

Il——Husey told of it, openly, at the bord at braynford in the hearing of diuers

The Grecian will seke him oute.

The Greke in grecia perhaps can finde out Threasor, but not in Anglia.

The Greke hath a Threasor in his hed, that will enriche him to be a fole

I was yesterday at London, I met with a blak dyer. He had a cupple of rings, that wold giue better instructions

Your Chymney here will speak agaynst you anon: yet I am no bricklayer

I must be gone.

△ God, for his infinite mercyes be allwayes praysed, glorified, and extolled of all his Creatures: Amen.

He advised E K to communicate to me the boke, and the powder, and so al<l>

the rest of the roll, which was there fownd: saying, true friendes <vse> not to hide any thing eche from other.

△ An old proverb it is Amicorum oia coia

Vnde, Deo soli ois exhibeatur

laus honor et gloria

Amen.

/flourish/

Note: There followeth Quinti Li<bri>

Mysteriorum Appendix

Marginal notes:

line 4: Thesaurus absconditus

line 5: 40. dayes.—

line 6: August ——

line 7: Knowledge to be / infused Ietu / Oculi.

line 13: Thesaurus / abs.

line 14: 40

line 15: Note: / till Au= / gust line 20: w^th^out dig= / ging.

line 26: Ten places

line 27: The chest / line 39: △ True it is, / I had hidden / there in a / capcase the / recordes of / any doings w^th^ / Saule & other / etc.

line 44: The boke / The powder / the rest of / the roll.

[91a]

Quinti libri Mysteriorum

Appendix

Aprilis 20 ——— Saterday

△ This Saterday had byn great and eger pangs betwene E K and me: while he wold vtterly discredit the whole process of our actions: as,to be done by evill and illuding spirites: seking his destruction. saying that he hath often heretofore byn told things true, but of illuding diuells: and Now, how can this be other, than a mockery, to haue a cornerd dark clowd to be shewed him in steade of the playn writing which hitherto he had written out of? and that whan they shold do good in dede that then they shrank from vs. and that he was not thus to leese his time: But that he is to study, to lerne some knowledge, whereby he may liue: and that he was a c<umber> to my howse, and that he dwelled here as in a prison: that it [was] wer better for him to be nere Cotsall playne where he might walk abroade, without danger

[and or] to be cumbred /or vexed^c^/ with such sklaunderous fellows as yesterday he was, with one little Ned dwelling at the black raven in Westminster: who rayeld at him for bearing witnes of a bargayn made [by] betwene the same Ned (or Edward) ~~and one Lush~~

A Surgoen, who was now fallen in poverty, a very honest man etc. With a great deale of more matter, melancholik, and cross overthwartly to the good and patient vsing of our selues to the accomplyshing of this action.

I replyed, and sayd, that we might finde our selfs answered [yest] on thursday, as, That God wold clere when it pleased him: and that we were not to appoint God a time to performe his mysteries and mercies in; [shot] shorter then he hath spoken of: And that vndowtedly, the occasion of this blak clowd, was some imperfection of oures, to be amended and that then, all, wold be to our furder cumfort. And as concerning his dowting

the goodnes of the creatures, (dealing with vs) he was to blame, to say [the] or dowt

the tree to be yll that bringeth furth good frute. for of these creatures, from the begynning of theyr dealing with vs vnto the last howre, we never hard other than the prayse of god, instructions and exhortations to humilitie, patience, constancy, fayth etc. The things they promise be such as god can performe, and is for his servyce and glory to performe: and such as haue byn imparted to man before: and therfore neyther impossible for man to enioye agayn, nor vnmete for vs to hope for. and thowgh his trubbled mynde did dowt, yet my quiet mynde, which god hath made [straight] ioyfull throwgh his mercyes, and which accuseth me not in this action of any ambition, hypocrisie, or disorderly longing, but onely is bent and settled in awayting the Lord his helping hand to make me wise for his servyce, (according as long tyme my daylie prayer to him hath byn.) and seing I haue and do ax wisdome at the lord his hands, and put my trust in him, he will not suffer me to be so confownded: nether will he offer a stone to his seely children, when in tyme of nede they ax bred at his hands: besides that Voluntate timentium se faciet deus: and (by his graces) I feare him so, and am so carefull, to do that shold pleas him, that I make no accownt of all this world possessing, vnleast I might enioy his fauor, his mercies and graces

And whereas he complayned of want, I sayd, my want is greater than his: for I was in det all of 300 pownds, had a greater charge than he, and yet for all my 40 yeres course of study, many hunderd pownds spending, many hunderd myles travayling, many an incredible byte and forcing of my witt in study vsing to lerne or to bowlt out some good lifing, [ye] etc. yet for all this I wold be very well pleased to be deferred yet longer, (a yere or more) and to go vp and down England clothed in a blanket, to beg my bred, so that I might, at the ende be assure<d> to atteyn to godly wisdome, whereby to /c do/ God some service for his glory. And to be playne, that I was resolued, eyther willingly to leave this world presently that, so, I might in spirit enioye the bottomles fowntayne of all wisdome, or

Marginal notes:

line 28: /hand/

line 38: Sapientia

line 46: 1s / 300 det.

[91b]

els to pass furth my dayes on earth wth gods favor and assurance of enioying here his mercifull mighty blessings, to vnderstand his mysteries, mete for the performing of [of] true actions, such as might sett furth his glory, so, as it mig<ht> be evident and confessed, that such things wer done Dextera Domini.

And many other dyscourses and answers made vnto his obiections and dowtes:

After ward I began to speak of the trubbles and misery foreshewed to be nere at hand, and by that tyme I had entred a little into the Consideration and talk of the matter, he appered that sayd he was called El or Il, and sayed

——— Now to the matter.

Δ · what matter?

Il.——I must haue a Wallet to carry your witt and myne own in.

Δ Benedictus qui venit in noie Dni

Il———Then I perceyue that I shall haue a blessing

Blessed is the physitien that hath care of his patient, before the pangs of death doth viset him.

Δ——— What think you of that clowdy Heptagonū?

Il.——Dost thow consider, I go abowt it?

I told the, euery thing I did, was an Instruction. As I can not stand stedfastly vppon this, (it self one and one perfect:)

so can not my mowth declare, much lesse speak, that you may comprehend it, what this is wherevppon I go.

E K. He went on the Heptagonon, as one might go on the top of a turning whele: (as some horses vse to turn wheles as may appere in Georgius Agricola de re metallica)

Il.—— I know, what all your talk hath byn: But such myndes, such Infection, such Infection, such corruption: and must nedes haue a potion appliable for the cure. But how will you do? I haue forgotten all my drvggs behinde me.

But since I know that some of you are well stored with sufficient oyntments,

I do entend to viset you onely with theyr help. you see, all my boxes ar empty?——— E K he sheweth, a great bundell of empty poticharie boxes, and they seme[d] to my hearing to rattle

Δ How commeth it, that you pretend to come fro a favorable diuine powre to pleasure vs us and your boxes ar empty.

Il——— you sayd euen now in your talk: Jovis oia plena: yf my empty boxes be Vertuous, how much more shall any thing be, which I bring not empty?

Δ Then I pray you, to say somwhat of the vertue of your empty boxes, bycause

we may haue the better confidence of your fullnes

Il.—— Will you haue my bill? Δ shall we go to the Apothecaries, with your Bill?

Il.—— I will shew it: serve it, where you list.

Iudra galgol astel.

△ you know we, vnderstand it not: how can it be serued?

Il.—— you must nedes haue an expositor

What boke of physik is that, that lyeth by you?

△ There lay by me on my desk, Marcus Heremita de Lege spirituali in greke and latine but the latin translation lay open before, on the left side of which, the sentence began

Non raro per negligentiā, quae circa alicuius rei operationē comittitur, etiā Cognitio obscuratur

And on the right side, began Corpus sine mente nihil p̄t perficere etc

Il.——— Mary here is good physik in dede you fownd my name the other day. go to my name. △ so I turned to the second boke and browght sigillū AEmeth. and there chose the word Ilemese. he than axed me, which letter of this name I liked best and I sayd, L: bycause it conteyned the name representing God. El. etc then he sayd somwhat furder of the letters, which I wrote not.

Il——— Go to great M, the second: for this is it shall serue his turne

yf

Marginal notes:

line 6: A meridie ——

line 11: El

[92a]

yf this can not serue him, he shall haue a medicine, that a horse can not abyde. Vse this, and I warrant you, your blindenes will be gone.

Δ It is here, greatly, to be Noted: that I turned in this boke of Marcus, 27 leaues furder: tyll I cam to the Quaternie of M, the second and there I fownd this sentence notified (by my lines drawn, and a Note in the margent, Cor contritum) Sine corde contritio impossibile est omnino liberari a malitia et vitijs. Conterit autem cor tripartita temperantia somni dico et cibi et corporalis licentiae. Caeterum horum excessus et abundantia voluptatem generat. Voluptas autem prauas cogitationes ingerit repugnat verò praecationi et convenienti Cogitationi

Δ This being considered by vs, we ceased and this instant and thanked God of his mercies, that it wold pleas him to make vs vnderstand some iust cause whie clowdes now appeared in stede of brightnes etc.

Soli Deo ōis honor laus et gloria Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: <A> remedy for / <the> blyndenes / <of> E K at / <t>his instant line 3: Δ / and so many / dayes yet / wanted of / the 40, yf we / accownt frō / the 6 day of / Aprill: but / if frō the tyme / of the begynning / to write them, / then there wan= / teth not so / much by 9 / or 10 dayes

---

Aprilis 23. Tuesday. mane. hor 8.

Δ After our prayer iointly, and my long prayer, at my desk requesting God to deale with vs, so, as might be most for his glory, in his mercies: not according to our deserts, and frowardnes: etc. At length appeared in the stone a white clowde, seven cornered.

And behinde the Clowd a Thunder seemed to yssue

A Voyce ——— Whan I gathered you, you were chosen of the myddest of Iniquitie:

Whome I haue clothed with garments made and fashioned with my owne hand ———— I, AM, Therfore Beleue:

Δ I prayed, and thanked the highest, that so mercifully regarded our miserie

A Voyce ———— I, AM.

E K. Now standeth Vriel vppon the clowde, and semeth to loke downward and kneled, saying

AEternitie, Maiestie, Dominion and all powre, in heuen

the earth and in the secret partes below, is thyne, thyne yea thyne; and to none els is due, but vnto the: whose mercies are infinite; which respectest the glorie of thy owne name above the frowardnes, and perversnes of mans nature:

which swarmeth with synnes, and is couered with Iniquitie: and in the which, there is fownde no place free from filthynes and abhomination. Glorie be to the; ô, all powre: and magnified be thow, in the workmanship of thy own hands, from time to time, and with out ende of time, from generation to generation: and euen amidst and in the number of those, for whome thow hast prepared the flowres of thy aeternall Garland.

Beare with them (ô lord) for thy mercyes sake. for, woldest thow seeke Δ in the myddst of miserie? Whom yf thow sholdest iudge according to [ius] thy iustice, How shold thy Name be glorified so in thy self, to thy own determination, and writing, sealed before the Creation of the Worldes? The fire of thy Justice consumeth thyne own seat.

and in the, is no powre wanting, whan it pleaseth the, to cast down, and gather them to gither, as the wynde doth the snow, and in hemme them

Marginal notes:

line 21: Nos line 26: Vr.

line 41: Δ here I mist / the hering of / a word or / more.

[92b]

them with the mowntaynes, that they may not arrise, [..] /to/c synne

But what thow art, thow art: and what thow willt, thow canst.

Amen

Δ Amen.

Vr.——I haue measured time (sayth the lord) and it is so: I haue appointed to the heauens theyr course, and they shall not pass it.

The synnes of man shall decay, in despite of the enemy: But the fire of aeternitie shall neuer be quenched, nor neuer fayle

More, then is, can not, nor may not be sayde

We can not be Witnesses to him, which witnesseth of him self

But (this sayeth the Lord). Behold yf you trubble me ones more, or towche the wings of my excellency, before I shall move my self, I will raze you from the earth, as children of perdition and will endue [that] those that are of quiet myndes, with the strength of my powre. You are not faithfull, sayeth the lorde whome you beleue not. Notwithstanding I haue hardened the hart of One of you, yea, I haue hardened him as /c the/ flynt, and burnt him to gither with the ashes of a Cedar: to the entent he may be proued iust in my work, and great in the Strength of my Glory. Neyther shall his mynde consent to /c the/ wyckednes of Iniquitie For, from Iniquitie I haue chosen him, to be a first erthely witnes of my Dignitie.

Your words are, yet, not offensive vnto God: Therfore, will not we, be offended at any thing that is spoken: For it must be done /caret/ and shall stand; yea and in the number /c which/ I haue allready chosen.

But this sayeth the lorde: Yf you vse me like worldlings
I will surely stretch out my arme vppon you, and that heuily Lastly, I say { Be Faithfull, / Honor God truely / Beleue him hartily.

E K. he kneleth down, and semeth to pray.——Now he standeth vp Vr. Lo, As a number increasing is allwayes bigger: so in this world decreasing, the Lord must be mightily glorified Striue not with God. But receyue, as he imparteth.

The Mercy of my message, quencheth the obscuritie and dullnes of your sowles. I mean of the Infection, wherewithall they are poysoned.

Lo, how the Earth cryeth vengeance. Come, for thy Glory sake, it is tyme Amen

Δ Seing it is sayd that in 40 dayes [and before 40 dayes] the boke

shalbe finished: and seing it is sayed that our former Instructers shall not come nor appeare to vs tyll the boke be finished. And seing heretofore the boke vsed to appere to E K, that he might write, whan so euer he bent him self therto: and seing the same

Marginal notes:

line 11:

line 12: NOTA et / Caue.

line 17: One of vs is / by the Lord / confirmed in / constant purpose line 21: Election / confirmed line 25: Δ I think / sayeth the Lord / [caret] is forgotten / here

line 27: Note /

line 33:

line 35: Note

line 39: Vengeance / cryed for

[93a]

same boke appeareth not so now: and seing we are desyrous to be fownd diligent in this work, and to omitt no Opportunitie wherein the writing therof might be furdred: We wold gladly know, What token or warning shall be giuen vs, henceforward, whan due tyme serueth for the same purpose.

Vr——Dy in the folly: I haue sayde

E K. It thundreth and lightneth abowt the clowde: and now all is vanished away

△ E K sayd, that at the very begynning of this days action, when he expressed the first Voyce (this day), hard by him, his belly did seame to him, to be full of fyre: and that he thowght veryly, that his bowells did burne: And that he loked downward toward his leggs, to see if any thing appeared on fire: calling to his mynde the late chance that befell to the Adulterous man and woman by Sainct Brydes church in London. etc

Allso that whan he had made an ende, he thowght his belly to be wyder, and enlarged, much more then it was before.

△ I sayde certayn prayers to the Almightie our God and most mercifull father, on my knees; and E K on his knees likewise, answered diuers times, Amen.

After this, we made A G. to vnderstand these the mercies of the Highest: and he reioyced greatly, and praysed the Lorde:

And, So E K, was fully satisfied of his Dowtes:

And A G, and he, were reconciled of the great discorde which, yesterday, had byn betwene them etc.

Non nobis, Domine, Non nobis, sed nomini tuo [da] Gloriam omnem Laudem et honorē damus et dabimus in perpetuum
Amen

[flourish]

Marginal note:

line 21: A.G,

[93b]

/blank/

[94a]

Aprilis 26. fryday

Δ Note

By the prouidence of god, and M^r Gilbert his meanes, and pacifying of E K his vehement passions and pangs, he cam agayn to my howse:

and my wife very willing, and quietted in mynde, and very frendely to E K in Word, /and^c/ cowntenance: and a new pacification /on^c all partes/ confirmed: and all vppon the Confidence of God his servyce, /to^c be/ faythfully and cherfly intended, and followed in and by our actions, throwgh the grace and mercy of the highest.

/flourish/

1583 Aprilis 28. Sonday: after Dynner. abowt 4 of the clok.

Δ As I and E K had diuerse talks and dyscourses of Transposition of letters: and I had declared him my rule for to know certaynly how many wayes, any number of letters (propownded,) might be transposed or altered in place or order: Behold, suddenly appered, the spirituall creature, IL, and sayd

Il—Here is a goodly disputation of transposition of letters

Chuse, whether you will dispute with me, of Transposition, or I shall lerne you

Δ I had rather lerne then dispute. And first I think, that those letters of our Adamicall Alphabet haue a due peculier vnchangeable proportion of theyr formes, —— and likewise that theyr order is allso Mysticall

Il—These letters represent the Creation of man: and therfore they must be in proportion. They represent the Workmanship wherewithall the sowle of man was made like vnto his Creator.

But I vnderstand you shall haue a paynter shortly.

△—I pray you, what paynter may best [serue] serve for the purpose? Can master

Lyne serue the turn well?

Il.——Dost thow think that God can be glorified in hell, or can diuells dishonor him?

Can Wickednes of a paynter, deface the mysteries of God?

The truth is, I am come to aduertise you, least with a small error you be led, far, a syde.

Let me see the forme of your Table

△——I shewed him the Characters and words which were to be paynted rownd abowt in the border of the Table.

Il——How do you like [it?] those letters? △ I know not well what I may say. For, perhaps, that which I shuld like, wer not so to be lyked:

and contrarywise what I shold think well of, might be nothing worth.

Il——Thow sayest well.

Behold, great is the fauor and mercy of God toward those whome he fauoreth. All things are perfect but onely that: Neyther was that shewed or deliuered by any good and perfect messager from God. A wicked powre did intrude him self, not onely into your societie, but allso into the Workmanship of Gods mysteries

Sathan dare presume to speak of the Almighty. Those Charac=

tera are diuilish: and a secret band of the Diuell. But, this sayeth

the lord, I will rayse them vp, whom he hath ouer thrown: and blott oute his fote steps where they resist my glorie. Neyther will

I

Marginal notes:

line 22: The mysticall / Alphabet.

line 32: The Table / of Practise line 42: Illuding / spirits thrus= / ting in them / selues.

[94b]

I suffer the faithfull to be led vtterly awry: nor finally permi<t darkness> to enhemme them for euer. He sayeth, I AM, and they* ar<e most untrue.>

But behold I haue browght the the truth: that the Prince of reas<on,>Go<d> of Vnderstanding may be apparent in euery part of his Caelestiall de= monstration. Therfore, as thow saydst vnto me ones, 5

So say I now to the: Serue god.

Make a △square*, of 6 ynches euery way

The border therof let it be (here) but half a inche: but on the Table it self, let it be an inche broad.

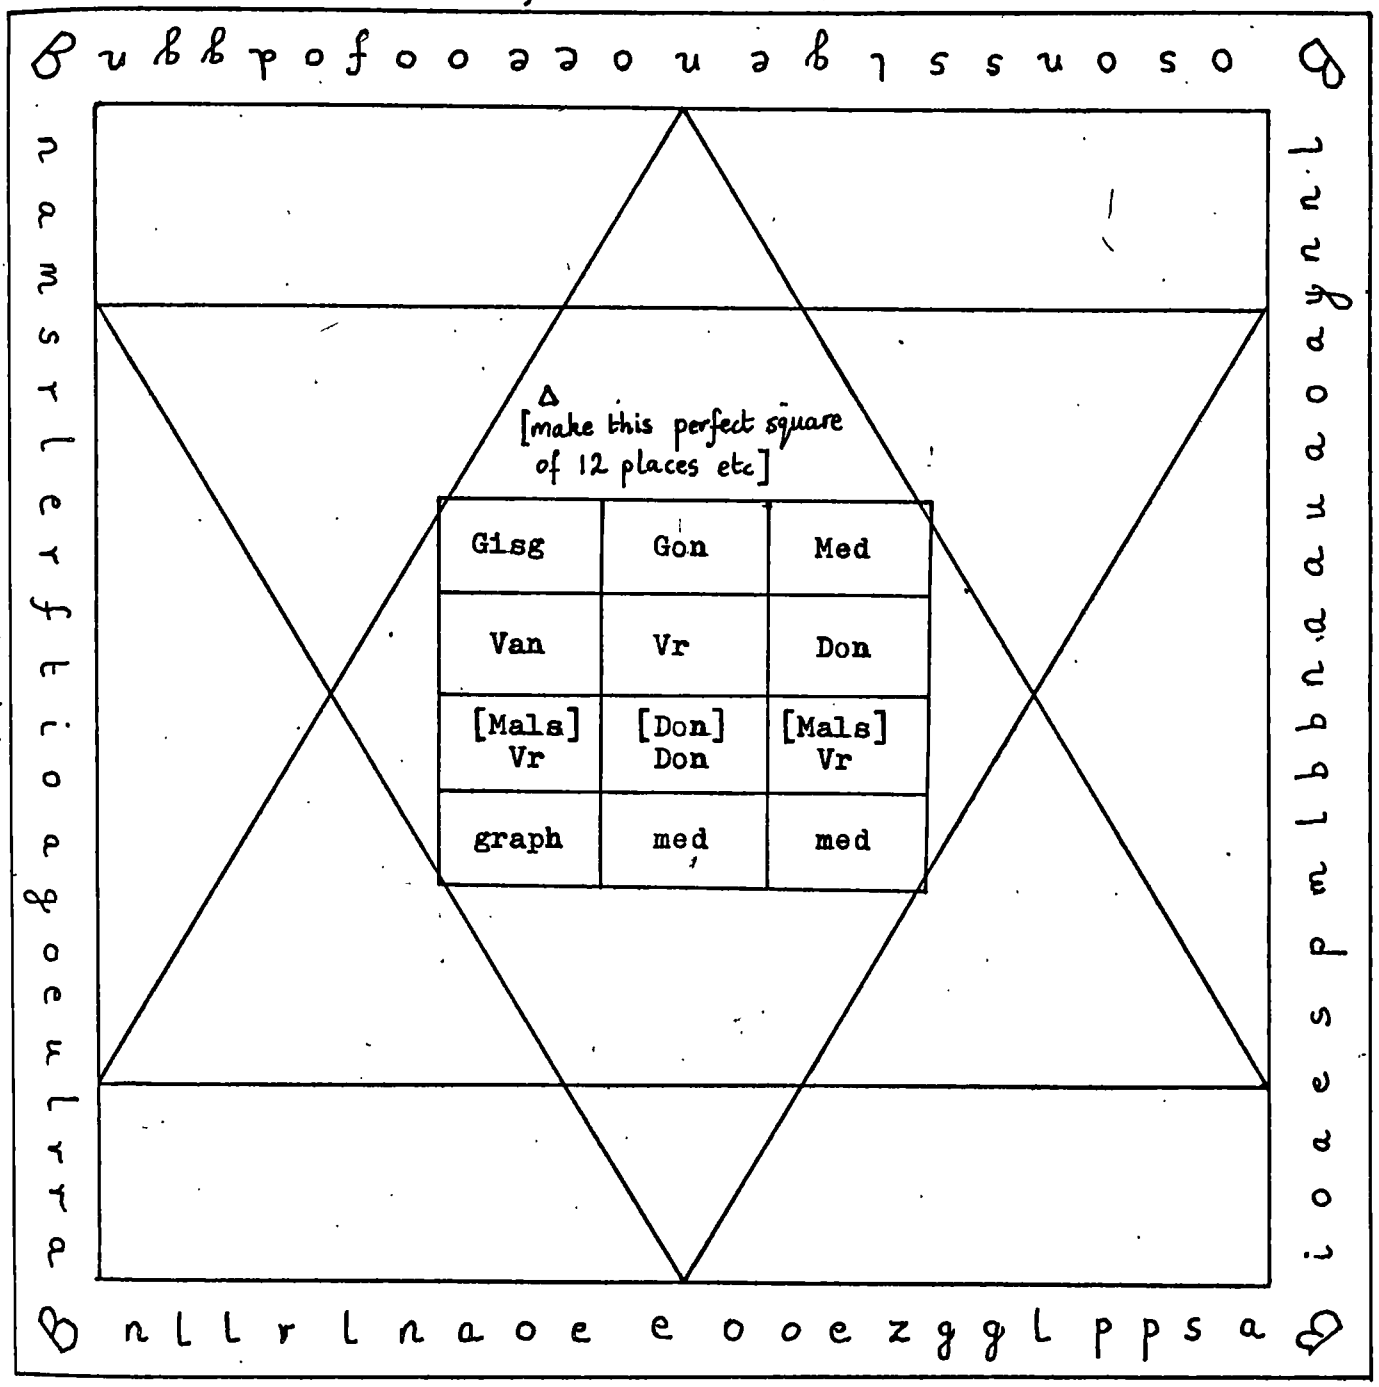
In fronte Tabulae



Euery one of those [sy] sides must haue 21 Characters

But, first, at euery corner make a great B

Prayer is the key of all good things:

Δ After

Marginal notes:

line 2: *I vnderstand / that the Charac / ters are most Vntrue

~~line 7~~: Δ* / The Inner / square, of / 6 yaches;

line 10, RH upside down: Δ vide post. [2] foliā[e], et etiā in / Tabula cordis, carnis et / Cutis, nam in lineis def= / endentibus, ibidem habes / hanc tabula hic incipiendo / sed in primo omittendo l et accipiendo o ⟨with hand pointing to first 'o' of top border of the table ('in fronte Tabulae')⟩7

[95a]

Δ After our prayers made, E K had sight (in the stone) of innumerable letters and after a little while, they wer browght into a lesser square and fewer letters.

first appered in the [opposite] border opposite to our standing place (which I haue vsed to call, in fronte Tabulae) these letters following: beginning at the right hand, and proceding toward the left.

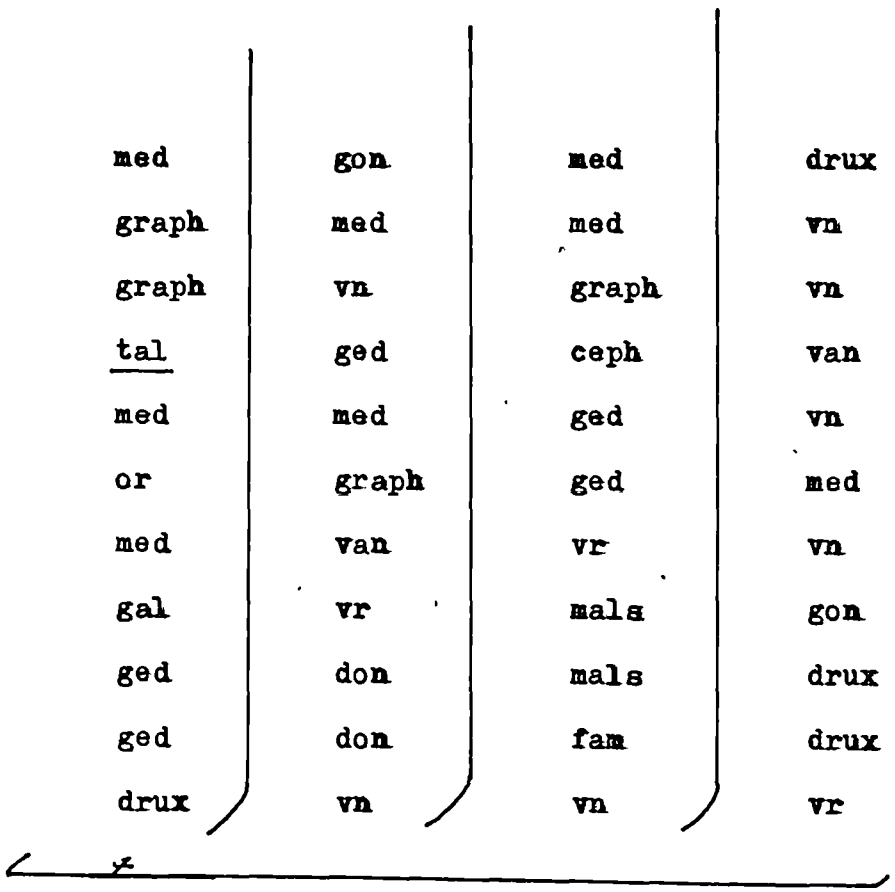
In fronte Tabulae /	A sinistris	Juxta pectus	A dextris
.1.	2	3	4
Med	drux	drux	gon
fam	vn	vr	med
med	tal	vr	vn
drux	fam	don	graph
fam	don	vr	fam
fam	vr	drux	mals
Vr	graph	vn	tal
ged	don	med	vr
graph	or	graph	pa
drux	gisg	graph	pa



20

w^th a prik

25

Il——What haue you in the myddle of the Table? △ Nothing
IL. sigillum Emeth,

is to be sett there

30

Il——The rest, after supper.

△ Soli Deo Omnipotenti sit laus perennis.

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 20: forte med

line 29: Sigillū / Emeth.

After supper, returning to our businesse, I first dowted of the heds of the letters in the 35

~~borders, to be written, which way they ought to be turned, to~~ /the/ center ward of the Table or from the center ward.

Il——— The heds of the letters must be next or toward the center of the square Table or Figure

Diuide that written by 12 and 7

Δ I diuided it

Il.——— Grace, mercy and peace be vnto the liuely branches of his florishing kingdom: and strong art thow in thy glory, which dost vnknytt the secret partes of thy liuely workmanship: and that, before the weak vnderstanding of man

Herein is thy powre and Magnificence opened vnto man: and why?

bycause thy diuinitie and secret powre is here shut vp in Numero

Ternario et Quaternario: ⸗a ⁰q principium et fundamentum

omne huius est tui sanctissimi operis

For, yf thow (o God) be wunderfull and incomprehensible in thyne owne substance, it must nedes follow, that thy works are likewise incomprehensible. But, Lo, they shall now beleue, bycause they see, which heretofore could skarsly beleue. strong is the Influence of thy supercelestiall powre, and mighty is the force of that arme, which overcommeth all things: let all powre therfore rest in the. Amen.

Marginal notes:

line 39: Note of / the Square / within line 47: Ternarius et / Quaternarius

[95b]

Δ The spirituall creature seamed to eate fyre, like balls of fyre: hauing his face toward me, and his bak toward E K.

Il——Leave oute the Bees of the 7 names of the [Kings] seven Kings, and 7

Princis: and place them in a table diuided by 12 and 7: the 7 spaces being vppermost: and therein write, in the vpper line, the letters of the king, with the letters of his Prince following next after his name: and so of the six other, and theyr Princis: And read them on the right hand from the vpper part to the lowest, and thow shalt finde, then, the Composition of this Table.

Therein they are all comprehended, sauing certayn letters, which are not to be put in here: By reason that the Kings and Princis do spring from God; and not God from the Kings and Princis. Which excellency is comprehended, and is allso manifest, in that Third and Fowrth member.

Rownd abowt the sides [of this square] is euery letter of the 14 names, of the 7 kings and Princis

Hereafter shall you perceyue that the Glorie of this Table surmownteth

the glorie of the sonne

All things els appertayning [to it] vnto it, are allready prescribed by your former instruction.

I haue no more to say, but God transpose your myndes, according to his own will and pleasure. You talked of Transposition.

Tomorrow I will be with you agayn. But Call not for me, least you incurre the danger of the former Curse.

l	o	n	e	g	a	n	o	g	i	l	a
o	g	o	n	r	o	l	e	g	o	b	o
s	e	f	a	f	e	l	e	l	a	b	a
o	n	o	m	t	u	r	o	p	e	n	y
n	o	d	s	i	l	l	o	p	s	a	n
s	e	g	r	o	r	n	e	[p] s	[s] p	a	n
s	e	g	l	a	r	a	z	a	m	u	l

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 4: 12 7

line 10: Note of / these kings / and Princis line 15: The dignitie / of the Table / of Practise.

line 20: He alludeth / to our talk / [of Talk] had / of Transposi= / tion of letters line 22: Note danger / of violating / precepts of / doctrine line 28, RH: forte / s p

[96a]

Aprilis 29. Monday, a meridie

Δ As E K and I wer talking of my [boke] boke Soyga, or Aldaraia: and I at length sayd that, (as far, as I did remember) Zadzaczadlin, was Adam by the Alphabet thereof, suddenly appeared the spirituall creature, which sayd yesterday that he wold come agayn, this day, vncalled: and at his first comming

he sayd Then, a primo

Δ Qui primus est et nouissimus, Alpha et omega, misereatur nri.

Il——— Amen. Glorie be to the, which art one, and comprehending all.

Mervaylous is thy wisdome, in those, of whome, thow willt be comprehended.

A short prayer, but appliable to my purpose

Euery prayse, with vs, is a prayer.

Δ he taketh of, his pyed coat, threw it vp on the corner of my desk.

and then he seemed clothed in an ancient doctorly apparayle: and on his hed he had a wrethe of white sylk of three braydes.

Il.——— Well I will give you my lesson, and so byd you farewell

First I am to perswade you to put away wavering myndes.

Secondly, for your Instruction, in these necessarie occasions, thus it is:

The owtsides or skyn must be the centre. There is one fowndation.

The Flesh must be the owtside.

The Centre it self must be disseuered into 4 aequall partes.

There is your lesson

Δ We vnderstand not, this dark lesson

Il——— The hart must be the fowrth part of the body; and yet the body perfect and sownd. The skynne must occupy the place of the hart and yet without deformitie

God is the begynning of all things: The fardest parte of all things is in the hands of God.

The like shalbe fownd amongst the number of his One and most holy name:

The Erth is a fowndation to euery thing: and differeth but onely in forme

In the forme of his own application wherevnto it is applied.

God is the begynning of all things, but not after one sorte, nor to euery one alike

But it is three manner of works, with his name:

The One, in respect of Dignification:

The Second, in respect of Conciliation:

The Third, in respect of an ende and determined Operation.

Now syr, to what ende, wold you were your Character?

△ at our two first dealings to gither, it was answered by a spirituall creature (whome we toke to be Vriel,) sigillum hoc in auro sculpendum, ad defensionem Corporis omni loco, tempore et occasione, et in pectus gestandum.

IL—— But how do I teache?

The Character is an Instrumēt appliable onely

to Dignification

But there is no Dignification (syr) but that which doth procede, and hath his perfect Composition,

Centrally, in the square number of 3 and 4

The Centre whereof shall be equall to the greatest.

△ We Vnderstand not. IL—— Hereby you may gather

Marginal notes:

line 3: Adam

line 12: Apparayle / changed.

line 18: an aenigmat= /ticall lesson

line 28: Note

line 34: Three manner / of works with / God his Name line 40: Vide inscriptionē / suo loco, / a° 1582 / Martij die / 10 / f. 6

)

[96b]

Note here of the 7 Tables of Creation how they apperteyn to the 7 kings and Princis.

not onely, to what ende, the blessed Character, (wherewith thow shalt be dignified) is prepared, but allso the nature of all other Characters.

To the second————Δ Conciliation you meane.

Il———The Table is an Instrument of Conciliation.

And so are the other 7 Characters: which you call by the name of Tables, squared out into the forme of Armes: which are propre to euery king and Prince according to theyr order.

Now to the last: Δ As concerning the ende and determined Ope= ration

Il———It onely consisteth in the mercy of God, and the Characters of these bokes. For, Behold, As there is nothing that commeth or springeth from God, but it is as God, and hath a secret Ma= iesticall and inexplicable Operation in it: So euery letter here bringeth furth the Names of God: But, (in dede), they are but one Name; But according to the locall and former being, to comprehend the vniversall generation corruptible and incorruptible of euery thing. It followeth, then, it must nedes comprehend the ende of all things

This much, hitherto

The Character is fals and diuilish

He that dwelleth in the, hath told the, so, long ago

The former Diuel, did not onely insinuat him self, but these things

Δ I do mervayle, that we had no warning hereof ere now, and that I was often tymes called on, to prepare those /^c^things/ (character and Table): and yet they were fals

Il——— Yf it shold haue byn gon abowt to be made, it shuld not haue byn suffred to [pass r] pass vnder the forme of wyckednes.

The Truth is to be gathered vppon the first Demonstration (my de= monstration and *yours are not all one: you will not be offended w/th/me, syr).

I gaue the a certayn principle, which in it self is a sufficient demon= stration: I told the, the placing of the Centre, the forme of it, with a lineamentall placing and ordring of that which thow *lookest for Δ But truely I vnderstand not.

Il———I teache. Take cleane paper

It must be made 4 inches square

Pray. Δ We prayed.

Il——These letters, which I shall speak now thow shalt, afterward,

put them in theyr propre characters:

Write: Neuer since the begynning of the world was this secret deliuered, nor this holy mysterie set open, before the Weaklings of this world

Write in the vppermost prik O, and h on the right hand, and g on the left etc

The two extreme priks, one on the right hand, a and the other

---

Marginal notes:

line 4: The Nature / of all Charac= / ters.

line 7: Instruments / of Concilia= / tion

line 9: NOTE

line 10: Order

line 14: This boke / of 48 Tables line 17: Note of the / Names of / God.

line 19: Generatiō — corrup line 20: incor.

line 23: The Charac= / ter allso / was a falls / tradition

line 29: Note

line 32: * / lepidè, mathe- / maticas meas / demonstrationes / denotat line 37: *he meaneth / my propre / Character / truely made line 41: Note. These / to be put in / propre Charac= / ters

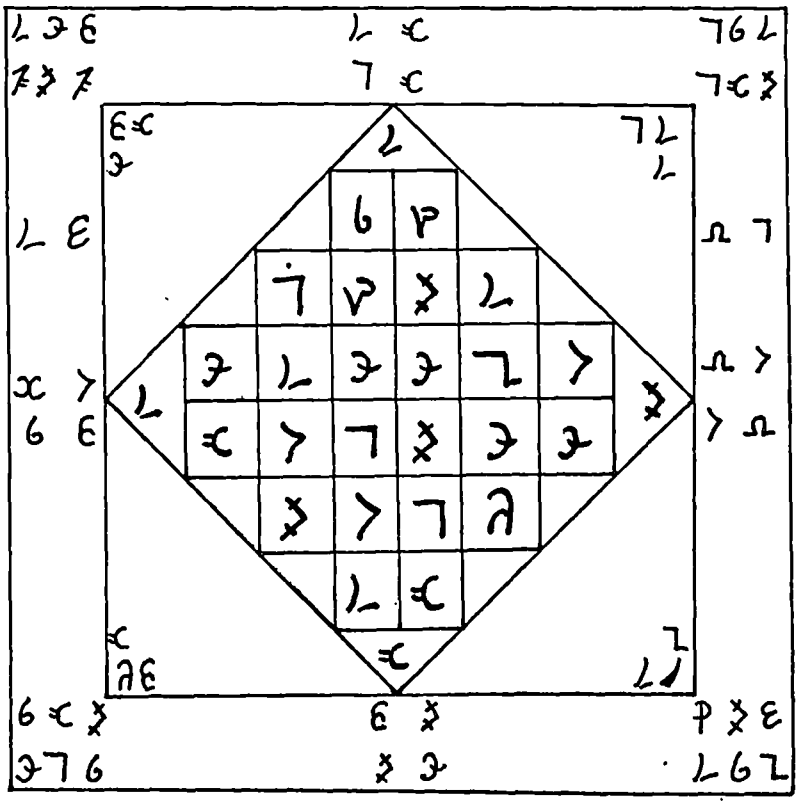
[97a]



[97b]

/blank/

[98a]

other, on the left o etc

There is the Whole

Δ We prayed (vnbidden) in respect of the mysterie revealed.

E K, was skarse able to abide or endure the voyce of the spirituall

Creature, when he spake of these things now: [it] the sownd was so forcible to his hed that it made it ake vehemently.

Il——Set down the kings, and theyr Princis in a Table (as thow knowest them:

with theyr letters backward: excepting theyr Bees, from the right hand, to the left.

Let Bobogel be first, and Bornogo, is his prince.

o	g	o	n	r	o	l	e	g	o	b	o
s	e	f	a	f	e	l	e	l	a	b	a
o	n	o	m	t	u	r	o	p	e	n	y
n	o	d	s	i	l	l	o	p	s	a	n
s	e	g	r	o	r	n	e	s	p	a	n
s	e	g	l	a	r	a	z	a	m	u	l
l	o	n	e	g	a	n	o	g	i	l	a

15

IL——Here is the skynn turned into the Centre: and the Centre turned into 4 partes

of the body

Δ I see now allso, how, the flesh, is become the owtside: o g e l o r n o etc. 20

Il. I haue done tyll sone.

Δ Deo nro Oipotenti perennis laus sit et immensa gloria Amen

/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 11: Δ / Note here the / three diuerse man= / ners how the letters / ar encumpassed. / The midder is called / .1. the Hart or centre / those abowt enclo= / sing the hart, ar / .2. called the flesh, / and the two owtside / pillers (of two letters / in a row) is ~~owne / .3. ffed the skyn.~~

NOTE

△ After that these things were finished, [and] E K rose vp from ye table and went to /the^{c}/ west window, to reade a letter which was, euen than, browght him from his wife: which being done, he toke a little prayer* boke (in english meter made by one William Hunnis which m^{r} Adrian Gilbert had [left] here and it lay on the Table

by vs all the while of this last action) and with this boke, he went into his bed chamber, intending to pray on it, a certayn prayer, which he liked: and as he opened the boke, his ey espied strange writing in the spare white paper at the bokes ende and beholding it, iudged it verily to be his own letters, and the thing of his own doing: but being assured that he never saw the like of this Character

[for Conciliation], and that other, (notified by the hart or Center, skyn and flesh before this present howre, he /be^{c}/ cam astonied, /and^{c}/ in great wrath; and behold, suddenly,

One appered to him and sayd, Lo, this is as good as that other. meaning that, which we had receyued, and is here before sett down on the former page.

With this newes cam E K to me, as I was writing down fayre this last Action, and sayd, I haue strange matter to impart vnto you: The<n> sayd I what is that? and at the fyrst (being yet tossed in his mynde with this great iniurie of the suttle supplanter of man, [and] ambitiously intruding him self, to rob god of his glory) he sayd, you shall know, and at length shewed me this little paper, here, by, being the one of the white leafes in the ende of the /c forsayd/ little prayer boke. And I vewing it to be ment to be the counterfeat of ours; but, with all, imperfect diuerse wayes, after the order of our method: yea thowgh[t] the words, out of which it had sprong had bin good, and sufficient: and thereat laughed at, and derided the Wicked enemy, for his envy, his ass hedded folish ambition, and in dede mere blyndenes to do any thing well. To conclude, we fownd, that with an incredible spede this Diuilish figure was written down by some Wicked spirit, to bring our perfect doings in dowt with vs: thereby eyther to provoke vs to /c vtter/ vndue speaches of gods good creatures, or to wavering myndes of the Worthynes and goodnes of the same /c things receyued/, and so eyther to leaue of, or with fayntharted wavering to procede. But I /c by gods grace/ (contrary to such inconveniency) [being] /was/ armed with constancie, and confident good hope, that God wold not suffer me, (putting my trust in his goodnes and mercy, to receyue wisdome from him) to be so vniustly dealt withall or vnkindely or vnfatherly vsed at his hands etc. and entended after supper to make my ernest complaint to the diuine Maiestie [of] /against/ this wicked intrusion and temptation of the Illuding diuell: and so we went to supper.

Marginal notes:

line 4: * / The Title of the / boke was Seuen / sobs of a sorrowfull / sowle for synne.

1583. Aprilis 29. Monday. after supper. hora 8.

△ I went into my oratorie, and made a fervent prayer agaynst the spirituall enemy: specially meaning the wicked one who had so suddenly so suttily and so liuely counterfeted the hand and letters of E K: as is here before declared, and by the thing it self may appere here: Likewise E K on his knees (at the greene chayre standing before my chymney) did pray: after which prayers ended, I yea, rather, before they were ended, on my behalf, E K espyed a spirituall creature come to my Table: whome he toke to be IL. and so, a lowd, sayd He is here. and therevppon I cam to my desk, to write as occasion shold serue: [or receyue] And before I began to do any thing I rehersed part of my intent, vttred to god by prayer and half turned my speche to god him self, as the cause did seme to require

Therevppon that spirituall /creature/ who, as yet had sayd nothing, suddenly vsed these words ——————I give place to my better.

E K. There semeth to me Vriel to come, and IL to be gone away. △ Then began that new come Creature to say thus

---

Marginal notes:

line 39: △——prayed

line 43: E K prayed

---

o r i a n s e a e h a o r i a n b s e a h a o r i a n h s e a h a a r h i a n h s e a h a r n a x o d a x o p a l g a n h a h o n a x a p h a r o

a l n g a d a x n o p e x a l g o e a u a o r h a a r b r a h t a a m o f t[h] m o
v n t e r h n o a r v a[h] q r i e[h] a l a a l a r l x a p a b r n o t o x
a h a x a a l g

Marginal notes:

line 1, RH: o h a b r a h a m o x /E K's hand/line 11, RH: △ / Belmagel / his cownter= / feating of $\bar{o}^{r}$ / instruction re= / ceyued fr$\bar{o}$ god, / and to E K / his hand, as / likely as could be /Dee's hand/

[99b]

/blank/

---

to say thus

Most abundant and plentifull are the great mercies of God vnto them which truely and vnfaynedly feare, honor and beleue him

The Lord hath hard thy prayers, and I am VRIEL, and I haue browght the peace of God, which shall from henceforth viset you.

If I had not made this action perfect (sayeth the lord) and wrowght some perfection in you, to the ende you might performe: yea, if I had not had mercies (sayeth the lord) over the infinite number and multitude of sowles, which are yet to put on the vilenes and corruption of the flesh,

Or if it wer not time to loke down, and behold the sorrow of my

Temple, Yet wold I, for my promiss sake, and the establishing of my kingdom, verifie my mercies vppon the sonns of men:

Wherevnto I haue Chosen three of you, as the mowthes and Instruments of my determined purpose. Therfore (sayeth the Lorde) Be of stowte and courragious mynde in me, for me, and for my truth sake: And Fear not the assales of temptation,

For I haue sayd, I am with you. But as mercy is necessary for those that repent, and faithfully forget theyr offenses, so is Temptation requisite and must ordinarilie follow those, whome it

pleaseth to illuminate with the beames of triumphant sanctification

Yf Temptation wer not, how shold the sonnes of men (sayeth the lord) know me to be mercifull? But I am honored in hell, and wurshipped with the blasphemers: Pugna erit, vobis autem victoria: yet, albeit, (thus sayeth my messag̃e) I will defend you from /the^c/ crueltie of these dayes to come and will make you perfect: that perfectly you may begynne in the works.

of my perfection: But, what? and doost thow (sathan) think to triumph? Behold (sayeth the God of Justice) I will banish thy servants from this place and region; and will set stumbling bloks before the feete of thy ministers: Therfore, be it vnto the, as thow hast deserued: And be it to this people, and holie place, (as it is, the will of god; which I do pronownce) light without darkness, Truth without falshode, righteousnes without the works of wickednes. I haue pronownced it, and it is done

But thow, o yongling (but, old synner,) why dost thow suffer thy blyndenes thus to encrease: or why dost thow not yeld thy lymmes to the service and fullfilling of an aeternall veritie?

Pluck vp thy hart. Let it not be hardened. Follow the waye that leadeth to the knowledge of the ende; the open sight of god his word verified for his kingdoms sake.

you began in Tables, and that of small accownt: But be faithfull: for you shalbe writtan within Tables of perfect and euerlasting remembrance. Considering the truth, which is the message of him which is the fowntayne and life of the true, perfect and most glorious life to come,

Follow, loue, and diligently Contemplate the mysteries therein.

He that hath done this euill, hath not onely synned against the, but against God, and against his truth. Judgment is not of me, and therefore I cannot

---

Marginal notes:

line 4: Vriel

line 9: Note, sowles / created before / the bodies are / begotten line 13: Three elected line 15: Fortitudo in deo / et propter Deum.

line 19: Temptation / necessarie line 25: A perfect be= / gynning line 27: Sententia cōtra / istū Malignum / spum qui nobis / imponere voluit.

line 34: * / He spake to E K.

[100b]

I can not pronownce it: But what his Judgment is, he knoweth in him self. His name is BELMAGEL and he is the fyrebrand which hath followed thy sowle from the begynning; yea seking his destruction.

Who can better cownterfeat, than he, that in thy wyckednes is chief lord and Master of thy spirites: or who hath byn acquaynted with the secrets of mans fingers so much as /[c that]/ hath byn directer? My sayings are no accusation: neyther is it my propertie to be defyled with such profession. But I cownsayle you generally; and aduertise you [throwgh] throwgh the grace and by the spirit of vnspeakable mercy.

This night, yf your prayers had not byn, yea, if they had not perced into the seat of him which sitteth aboue: Thow, yea (I say) thow hadst byn carryed, and taken awaye, this night, into a willdernesse, so far distant hence Northward, that thy destruction had followed.

Therfore lay away thy works of youth; and fly from fleshly Vanities

yf not vppon Joye and pleasure of this presence, yet for the glorie of him that hath chosen you.

I say be strong: Be humble, with Obedience: For,

All the things, that haue byn spoken of, shall come to pass: And there shall not be a letter of the boke of this prophesie perish.

Finally, God hath blessed you, and will kepe you from temptation and will be mercifull vnto you: and perfect you, for the dignitie of your profession sake: Which, world without ende, for euer and euer, with vs and all creatures, and in the light of his own cowntenance, be honored.

Amen Amen Amen

△ Herevppon I made most humble prayer w^th^ harty thanks to our God, for his help, cumfort, and Judgment against our enemie, in this case, (so greatly concerning his glorie). And at my standing vp I vnderstode that Vriel was out of sight to E K. yet

I held on my purpose to thank him, and to prayse god for

Vriel that his so faithfull [and frutefull] ministerie vnto his diuine Maiestie, executed to our nedefull comfort in so vehement a temptation.

Deo nro Omnipotenti, sit ois laus, honor, et gratiarum actio, nunc et in perpetuū

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 2: Angelus malus / proprius ipius / E K.

line ?: △ / Diuels are / accusers pro= / prely.

line 11: E K had byn car= / ryed away in the / wrath of God / if fervent prayer / had not byn, as / may appere in the / begynning of this / mightie Action.

line 19: The boke of / this Prophesie / shall contynue line 20: △ ∴ a malo Temp / tationis line 22: △ / Professio mea / est Philosophia / vera. / vide Libro / primo.

[101a]

/5./ Maij [4] Sonday. a meridie hor. 4 vel circiter.

△ Forasmuch as, on fryday last, while my frende E K was abowt writing of the Tables he was told that the same shuld be finished on monday next:

and that on sonday before, (it is to wete, this present sonday) at after none, all dowtes shold be [and] answered; after, the after /none[c]/ had so passed, as tyll somewhat past 4 of the clok: Then, we fell to prayer, and after a quarter of an howres invocation to god, and prayers made, E K sayd, here is one. whome ([in dede]) we toke to be Vriel: as he was, in dede

I had layd 28 questions or articles of dowtes in writing vppon my desk, open, ready for me to rede (vppon occasion) to our spirituall instructor: who,

thus began his speche, after I had vsed a few wordes begynning with this sentence. Beati pedes, evangelizantia pacem etc

Vriel—The very light and true wisdome (which is the somme of my message, and will of him that sent me) make you perfect and establish those things, which he hath sayd, and /c hath/ decreed: and likewise your myndes, that you may be apt vessells to receyve so abundant mercies. Amen. △ Amen, per te Jesu Christe: Amen.

Vr——This boke, and holy key, which vnlocketh the secrets of god his determination, as concerning the begynning, present being, and ende of this world, is so reuerent and holy: that I wonder (I speak in your sense)

whie it is deliuered to those, that shall decay: so excellent and great are the Mysteries therein conteyned, aboue the capacitie of man: This boke

(I say) shall, to morrow be finished: One thing excepted: which is the vse thereof. Vnto the which the lord hath appointed a day.

But (bycause I will speak to you after the manner of men) See that all things be in redynes agaynst the first day of August next.

Humble your selues nine dayes before: yea, vnrip (I say) the cankers of your infected sowles that you may be apt and meet to vnderstand the secrets, that shalbe deliuered. For why? The Lord hath sent his angels allready to viset the earth, and to gather the synnes thereof to gither, that they may be wayed before him in the balance of Justice: and Then is the tyme that the promise of God, shalbe fullfilled. Dowt not for, we are good Angells.

The second of the greatest prophesie is this (o ye mortall men). For the first was of him self, that

He shold come: And this, is from him, [self]: in respect /c of/ that he will come. Neyther are you to speak the wordes of this Testimonie, in one place, or in one people, but, that the Nations of the whole world may knowe that there is a GOD which forgetteth not the truth of his promise, nor the sauegarde of his chosen, for the greatnes of his glory.

Marginal notes:

line 18: This Holy / boke line 23: The boke to be / finished to morrow / /rule/line 24: The day appoin= / ted for the Vse / of this boke / Augusti .1. / /rule/line 27: Our nine / dayes contrition / preparatiue / /rule/line 31: Angels sent / to viset the / heaps of sinnes / in the world / abownding etc.

line 35: Good Angels.

line 36: The second / of the greatest / prophesie, is / this.

line 40: Our Testi= / mony of this / Prophesie, / all the World / ouer,to be (by / Vs) published.

[101b]

Therfore (I say) prepare your bodies, that they may be strong enowgh, for armors of great profe. Of your selfs, you cannot:But desire /=sire[c]/ and it shall be giuen vnto you. For Now, is euen that wicked childe grown vp [vnto] /vnto[c]/ perfection: amd the fier tungs red to open his Jaws

Wo therfore shalbe to the Nations of the Earth: and Wo Wo immumerable to those that say, We Yelde:

Wickednes (o lorde) is crept vp, and /hath/ filled the dores of thy holy sanctuarie: defyled the dwelling places of thy holy Angels: and poysonned the earth, as her own seat.

In 40 dayes more must this boke be perfyted in his own marks to the intent that you allso may be perfyted in the workman=ner ship of him, which hath sealed it.

Oute of this, shall be restored the holy bokes, which haue perished euen from the begynning, and from the first that liued

And herein shalbe deciphred perfect truth from imperfect falshode, True religion from fals and damnable errors,

With all Artes: which are propre to the vse of man, the first and sanctified perfection: Which when it hath spred spread /a/ a While, THEN COMMETH THE ENDE.

Thy Character must haue the names of the fiue Angels (written in the myddst of Sigillum Emeth) graven vppon the other side in a circle. In the myddst whereof, must the stone be,

Which was allso browght: Wherein, thow shallt, at all times behold, (priuately to thy self,) the state of gods people throwgh the Whole [world] earth.

The fowre fete of the Table must haue hollow things of swete wood, wherevppon, they may stand: within the hollownes wherof, thy seales may be kept vnperished.

One month is all, for the Vse thereof.

Thus sayeth the Lord, when I browght you vp in likenes of birds, encreasing you, and suffring you to touche the skyes, [and call the sterrs to testimonie thereof] I opened vnto you the ende of your reioycing: For, this Doctrine shall towche the skyes, and call the sterrs to testimonie therof: And your fotesteps shall viset (allmost) [all] the partes of the [world] whole world.

The sylk, must be of diuerse cullors, the most changeable that can be gotten. For, who, is hable to behold the glory of the seat of God?

All

Marginal notes:

line 1: Our bodyes to / be made / strong line 4: Antichriste / is allmost / ready for / his practise line 10: 40 dayes more / for the tables / writing in their / own Characters.

line 13: The frute / of this boke line 21: The backside / of my Cha= / racter.

line 22: The Vse of / the stone / which a good / Angel browght / to me the / last yere. / Remember it is / half an inche thik line 26: The 4 hollow / fete of the / Table line 29: The Vse of the / Table of prac= / tise is onely / for one Month.

line 31: * / Vide sup^{a} / A^{o} 1582 Maij 4.

line 35: Great long / iornayes to / be gon of vs two line 37: The Cullor / of the silk / for the Table

[102a]

All these things must be vsed, as that day.

All errors and dowtes ells may be amended by the rules of reason:
But Notwithstanding, Ask, and thow shalt be answered.

Δ. As concerning Mals don mals, what is the veritie to be placed in the middle of my practise Table?

Vr. — Write

o	o	e
l	r	l
r	l	u
o	i	t rather thus

t	i	o
u	l	r
l	r	l
e	o	o

Δ from whense, are these taken?

Vr. They ought to be gathered of those names, which are first gathered by the, [by] by ordre: (In the myddst of them:) [the] the Kings and Princis being placed, as thow (of thy invention) [dost] diddst gather them: Not putting theyr own princis, next to the kings: but as they follow in Tabula, collecta by the: as thus a	l	i	g	o	n	o	r	n	o	g	o

o	b	o	g	e	l	e	f	a	f	e	s
a	b	a	l	e	l	u	t	m	o	n	o
y	n	e	p	o	r	l	i	s	d	o	n
n	a	s	p	o	l	r	o	r	g	e	s n	a	p	s	e	n	r	a	l	g	e	s
l	u	m	a	z	a	a	g	e	n	o	l

Δ Wherfore is the Table of Kings and Princis set down in so diuerse manners?

.1: as, one, to haue Bobogel and Bornogo in the first row: an other to haue

.2: Baligon and Bagenol (his prince) in the first row: and here thirdly

.3. Baligon and Bornogo: and in the Heptagonon Blumaza semeth to be first, discoursed of, and his prince and Ministers: but very secretly:

4. Vr. Blumaza is the first, in respect (And so all the rest, are the first in respect) of theyr own being. That secret is not to be deliuered but by the distinction of the boke. Notwithstanding, thow hast truely considered of it all ready.

△ I required the perfect forme of the 21 letters, that I might imitate the same in the Table of practise, and in the holy boke writing etc.

[Vr They shall be deliuered to morrow.

Whether is the King his Name Bnaspen, or Bnapsen?

[Vr. Bnapsen.

△ The Character or Lamine for me was noted (Noueb 17. A° 1582 /4p.85/) that it shold c̄oteyne s̄ome token of my name: and now, in this, (accownted the true Character of Dignification) I perceyue no peculier mark, or letters of my name

[Vr. The forme in euery corner, considereth thy name. △ you meane there to be a certayn shaddow of △elta. Vr. Well.

△ Bycause many things do seeme to be taken from vnder the Table, as out of a stoare howse, shall there be any shelf framed vnder our square Table of Practise or handsome stole set in apt place to lay things on?

Vr. These things that were deliuered by show, vnder an Imagined Table, were

the

Marginal notes:

line 1: <.....> the / <fir>st of / August / next.

line 6, RH: △ So they seeme / to haue byn / ment in the figure / of the Table / of practise / before described.

line 15: The Princis / here not / put next / to their / kings.

line 25: Note. / .4. diuerse / Wayes.

line 30: A Secret of / preeminence / due to the Kings / etc: as in Astro / logy. I vse to mak / every planet a / base / or a / grownd / in his / propre / signification etc / & so every / howse of / the 12 / &c. in respect of / his proper and / essentiall signifi= / cation.

line 42: The Sym / bolum of / my name / in my character / how and where

---

[102b]

The m̄ebres of God his secret Prouidence, the members of God his [prouidence] secret Prouidence, distributed vnto his Ang< ells> as the Principals of theyr Officis. But vnder thy Table is nothing to be set.

Δ What more vses are there of the great Circle or globe, wherein there are Capitall letters vnder the Kings names and Characters: and allso there are other letters with numbers: of which we haue receyued no instruction: and more ou͡ of these letters, s̄ome are aversed and some euersed, etc?

Vr —— The letters turned bak to bak, (/b̄eing/ [the] Capitall letters,) ar aequally to be diuided, according to their numbers, with a circle cumpassing the name and Cha= racter of the king vnder which they are placed

The other letters, whose greatest number doth not excede 7, are certayn By notes

{ of wicked and euill powres: which cannot, any way, but by the towchestone of truth be deciphred from the good. Wherof Notice shall be given at large by the boke.

He that standeth in the myddst of the globe, signifieth Nature.

wherevppon, in the first point, is the Vse and practise of this work that is to say, as concerning the first part. for it is sayde before

The Boke conteyneth three kinde of Knowledges

.3. 1 The knowledge of GOD, truely

.2. 2 The number, and doing of Angels, perfectly

.1. 3 The begynning and ending of Nature, substantially.

And this hath answered a great dowte.

Δ What is the vse of the 7 lamines, (like armes,) and from what grownde are they framed or deriued?

Vriel—— They are the ensignes of the Creation; wherewithall they were created by God:

known onely by theyr acquayntance, and the manner of theyr doings.

Δ Are they to be made in any mettall?

Vr——— They are to be made in [pure tynne] purified tynne: And to be vsed at the time of theyr Call

Δ Ar the letters there to be altered into the holy [Ch] Alphabet letters or characters?

Vr Into theyr propre Characters. Δ May I not vse them as they ar, vnaltered? Vr——<.....>

Δ How to be vsed; hanged or layd?

Vr To be layd before the vppon the Table. Or thow mayst place them, (yf thow wilt,) contynually at the 7 angles of the Holy seale: laying them

besides, and against the points or Angles of the Holy Seale: 7 ynches from the Vtter border of the holy Seale, all at ones: Or els they may be paynted, On the Table.

Δ What is the [vse] fowndation of the first 40 letters, in the ~~principall; or~~ holy seale Emeth: and what other vses haue they, then yet hath byn spoken of: And what is the reason of suche theyr consequence, or following eache other, seing in our practise we cull them out by a pe culier order?

Vr——— Thow hast nothing there, but what hath byn sufficiently spoken of.

Δ yf 42 letters be 42 names, and 42 persons, how shall distinction be made betwene any two or three, of one name and in one row?

Vr——— How canst thow distinguish any thing with god?

Δ Lord I know not

Vr——— Yet, by the boke it shall be perfectly known: but by skyll aboue nature.

Δ Hau<e>

Marginal notes

line 3, over 'pals' of 'Principals': ples

line 9:

Δ perhaps somewhat like this line 15: The man in the / myddst of the / globe or circle line 18: Three kinde of / Knowledges in / this boke.

line 23, over 'lamines': Tables line 25: The 7 ensignes / of creation line 28: At the time / of theyr call.
line 31: Letters / to be / altred line 37: The 7 ensignes / to be paynted on / the Table.
line 43: sup
a line joins 'Nature' (line 15) to 'Nature' (line 21), then to 'first part' (line 17) and then to '.l.' (line 21).

[103a]

Δ Haue I rightly applyed the dayes to the Kings?

Vr—The dayes are rightly applyed to the Kings

Δ How is the phrase The fifth of the seventh vnderstode, which Befafes speaketh of him self?

Vr—He speaketh so of him self, in respect that he shall be the fifth that shall be Vsed. In consideration of Nature he is the fifth, allthowgh not consequently in the Order of Operation

Δ It was promised that we shold be instructed, whan the Day (in this practise) is to be accownted to begynne.

Vr—It is not to be enquired, which is sufficiētly towght, it is a thing most easy, and perfectly deliuered.

Δ Adrian Gilbert how far, or in what points is he to be made priuie of our practise? seing it was sayd, That none shall enter into the Knowledge of these mysteries with me, but onely this worker. Truely the man is very cumfortable to our societie.

Vr—He may be made priuie of sōme things: such as shall be necessarie for the necessitie of the Necessities wherevnto he shall be driuen.

Δ The phrase of the last Ternarie, which, Baligon (otherwise named Carmara, or Marmara) vsed, I vnderstand not.

Vr—He is the ende of the Three last corruptible times: wherof, this is the last.

Δ The one, at Noes flud ended, the second at Christ his first comming and this is the third.

Vr—It is so.

Δ The Characters and words anexed to the Kings names in the vtter circumference of the great circle or Globe: How are they to be vsed?

Vr—They are to be paynted vppon swete wood: and so to be held in thy hand, as thow shallt haue cause to vse them.

Δ For the bringing of the erthes hither from the places of hidden Threasor, what is your order and direction?

Vr——After you haue eaten, it shall be told you.

Δ We prayed, and so went to supper

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: <.....> Dayes and there / <....>ngs

line 4: Befafes

line 12: A G.

line 13: sup

line 18: The last / Ternarie.

line 21: Three / times

line 24: Vide supra pa= / gina praecedente.

line 27: Δ / The 7 / characters / of the 7 kings / as on the / former page / is Babalel / Liba etc.

1583

The same sonday. [M] Maij .5. [after supper hora 8½

△ After diuerse our eiaculations and pangs of prayer and thanks vnto god, this was sayed

Vr—Be it thus vnto you [He prayeth in his own language]

After this holy boke is finished, then is it necessarie with expedition that the foresayd commaundemēt, as concerning the fatching of the earth, be fullfilled and performed. And be it vnto you as HE will. And HE sayeth thus.

My angel shall be amongst you, and shall direct his iornay: and will bring his feete, euen into the place and places, where that erthly filth and Corruption lieth. Behold I will deale mercifully with him. For, Error shall not deceyue him. Notwithstanding what I will haue done with it

---

Marginal note :

line 39: Expedition

[103b]

or how it shall be bestowed, is yet to be enquired of.

Secret are the determinations, and vnsearchable purposes, wherewithall the most mightiest dealeth with worldlings, and loketh vnto the v<se> and necessarie application of worldly things. Many temptations shall assayle him in following this commaundement. But it is sayd, I Will be with him. God will deale mercifully with you This is sufficient.

Yet ones more. Yf thow haue any dowte herein it shall be satisfied.

△ What if he go first to Nubery, and with the erth being taken thence, to procede to the other places noted in the skroll and then with the erth of those ten places, the rest of the skroll, the boke therewith fownd, and the red congeled thing in the hollow stone, to come directly hither: and then the rest of the peculier practise for enioying the premisses, to be lerned. or how els will you haue him order his iornay

Vr— As thow wilt herein, so shall it be browght to pas.

△ As concerning the Victorious Captayn /The Lord Albert Laski[c]/ [Alasko] the Polake who so much desyreth my acquayntance, and Conference, how sha<11> I vse my self, to God his best liking, my Cuntries honor, and my own good Credit?

Vr—Remember, it is sayde, that the Princis of the earth shall not discredit, much lesse work thy Confusion. He that dwelleth in the, above worldes: and shall give the sufficient discretion worldly, in worldly occasions. For, Where the blessings of God are, euery thing is perfyted.

△ As concerning the Chamber for Practise, appointed by me, and the half pace whereon the Table standeth, how is allowed <of?>

Vr——The place can not sanctifie the Action, but the Action the place But I answer the, after the manner of men, It is sufficient

△ The 4 hollow feete for comprehending the 4 letter seales, how great owght they to be?

Vr. According to the fete, of the nearest proportion And so, as the heith of the Table, be, as it, now, is.

E K. He semeth now to sit in the ayre: but I perceyue no chayre behinde him.

△ Are all these things of this dayes Action to be Noted with your name: as Vriel?

I am Vriel, which allwayes will answer vntill this Action be finished

I teache. Be Mercifull, Thankfull, and mery in him, and for him for whose name you shall susteyne much bodyly sadnes

More then my mesage, I may not: And it is done

△ As

Marginal notes:

line 1: How the / Threasor is to / be vsed line 13: The Skroll / The Boke / The red powder line 18: Albertus / Laski, / Palatinus / Siradiensis / venit ex / Polonia Londiniū / 1583. Maij initio line 24: My good Angel.

line 30: ∴ Hereby may many / other answers / be cōsidered

line 40: VRIEL

line 43: Multa nobis / perpetienda / propter Deū / nostrum / Oīpotētem

---

[104a]

△ As concerning the Vision which yester night was presented (vnloked for)

to the sight of E K as he sat at supper with me, in my hall,

I meane: the appering of the very sea, and many ships thereon, and the Cutting of the hed of a woman, by a tall blak man,

What are we to imagin therof?

Vr——The One, did signifie the prouision of forrayn powres against the Welfare of this land: which they shall shortly put in practise:

The other, the death of the Quene of Scotts It is not long vnto it.

The Maiestie of his invisible powre, which overcommeth all things be among you, vppon you, and rest with you for euer

Δ Amen

E K. At his last words he flung fyre with his hands from him toward vs, and it spred it self in the manner of a Crosse.

Δ Gloria sit sempiterna Deo nro Ommipotenti et AEterno

Amen

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 4:

line 8: Note The Quene / of Scotts / to be behedded. / /rule/ / So she was / A° 1587 at / Fodringham Castell / And allso the / same yere a / great preparation / of ships against / Egland by the / King of Spayn / the Pope and / other Princis / called Catholik / etc

---

Maij: 6. Monday, I went to london,: and E K remayned [writing the Tables] attending the accomplishing of the promise, for the Tables ending and for the perfect forme of the holy letters receyuing: Which two points (when I cam home that after none), I fownd done.

But it is to be Noted, that, When E K could not aptly imitate the forme of the Characters, or letters, as they were shewed: that then they appered drawn on his paper with a light yelow cullor, which he drew the blak vppon, and so the yellow cullor disapearing

there remayned onely the shape of the letter in blak: after this mann and iust of this quantitie and proportion

/flourish/

Marginal note:

line 27: Note.

[104b]

<Ma>ij 8. Wensday. After dynner hora circiter 4

△ Being desyrous to furder all things on my part to be performed, and <n..>

to lack the Cumpany of E K going for the Erthes (before spoken of) amd to be away 10 or 12 dayes: amd for as much as the boke was to be written in 40 dayes before August next: and vncertayn of those dayes whan they shold begynne: amd allso for that I wold do all things (gladly) by warranty of cownsayle of our Instructor, I was desyrous to know whether the boke were to be written in paper or parchemēt: in what cullor the lynes were to be ruled, grene or blew

etc. and of diuerse other dowtes, necessary to be dissolued, I was carefull to haue had some aduertisement. After long prayers of vs both,

Nothing was eyther seen in the ayre, or hard. Then it cam in my hed to set furth the stone.

E K. sayd that assone as he loked into the stone, he saw there the Table, Chayr, and three, com into the stone. Vriel sat down in the chayre: the other two, inclined theyr body to him reverently: and then, stode by; one on the one side of the chayre, the other, on the other side.

The sides of the Table cloth were turned vp, and a thing like an yong shepe, bigger then a lamb, appered vnder the Table. Then they two did knele before Vriel and sayd

Verus et sanctus et sempiternus.

Δ Then they rose agayn. and they semed to haue talk, a conference togither and therevppon Vriel sayd

Vr Be it so, bycause powre is giuen vnto him.

E K. The Table, Chayre and all the [rest] three do disapere: and therevppon immediately appered in the stone a fayre Pallace: and out of the pallace cam a tall wellfauored man, very richely apparayled with a braue hat and a fether on his hed: and after him followed a great number, all like curteours. and this brave man sayd

Man—How pitifull a thing is it, when the wise, are deluded?

Δ—I smell the smoke; procede Syr, in your purpose.

Man I cōme hither, for the desyre I haue to do the good.

Δ ——Come you, or are you sent. Tell the Veritie I charge the,

in the name and by the powre of the aeternall Veritie.

Δ Note: After I perceyued euidently that it was a wicked tempter, whe had powr permitted him at this instant, I began with some Zeale and egreness to rebuke, and to charge him. But he stiffly and stowtely did contemne me a good while, mock me, and at length thretten to destroy me, my wife, and children. etc

Δ I therevppon made my ernest prayers to god agaynst this spirituall enemy:

but he in the myddle of my prayers, sayed thus.

Man——As truely as the Lord liueth, all that is done, is lies

Δ That, thy sentence, will I record agaynst the; to be layde to thy charge at the dredful day:

Δ After this great turmoyle past, was this voyce (following), hard of E K.

A voyce ——— Pereant tenebrae, cum Principe Tenebrarum

Δ All went suddenly out of sight, Prince and pallace and all

And the Chayre and Table and Vriel appeared againe

[Vr——— Arme] Vr——

Marginal notes:

line 3: The Erthes

line 8: The boke

line 13: Note the / stone line 19: The shepe / Vnder the / Table line 26: A Temptation / permitted by God.

a line joins 'powre' (line 24) to 'powr' (line 35).

/Vr:—/—Arme your selues; for, great shall be the temptation followin<g>

You shall be hindred, in all, that may be.

Nothing can hinder god his determined purposes.

Δ— Man may hinder his owne saluation

Vr:—Fullfill those things that are commaunded.

Forme, and write the boke after thyne own Judgment.

God his determination is iust; Therfore putto your hands

More then hath byn sayd, and more plainely, cannot be Vttred.

His works are true, for, and to the ende.

Δ Forasmuch as expedition is to be made for the erthes fatching and diuers other things: and we haue made assay to get an horse: But we could get none as we wold: and without somme better prouision of mony then we haue, we cannot redress the case. Therfore, if it might pleas god, that of the ten places Noted, we might haue but the possession of the smallest of them, deliuered here, vnto vs, at this pynche, it might greatly pleasure vs.

Vr.———— Will these worldlings hold on in theyr iniquitie?

E K They pulle the leggs of the Table away, and seme to carry all away in a bundell like a clowde. and so disapered vtterly.

Δ Herevppon I was exceding sorrowful: and betoke my self to a lamentable pang of prayer.

Δ After long prayer, appered in the stone a thing like a Tunge

all on fyre thus hanging downward and from it cam this voyce

Tung ——Thow hast deliuered thy self vnto the desires of thy hart, and hast done that which is not Convenient.

Thow hast spoken iniquitie, and therfore dothe the Veritie of Gods Doings by Vs, decay, in your Wickedness.

△ I dowt of the Veritie of that tung.

Tung —— Man (o God) beleueth him self in his own Imagination

Therfore Wipe our holines from the face of the erth

And Justifie our doings, where we lawde and prayse the.

△ I becam now abashed of my former speche, and perceyued my error:

axed forgivenes bitterly at the Lord his hand. and at length

it was sayde

Tung——Do that, which is commaunded, the Lord is Just.

△ O lord, forgiue me my trespaces, and deale not with me according to Justice: for, then I, and all mankinde shall vtterly perish;

Vnleast thy mercy be our savegard, destruction is our desert.

Tung ——It is forgiuen: but it shall be punished.

E K. The tung mownted vp toward heven, and he saw it in the ayre out and above the stone aboue a hand bredth, mownting vpward

△ Thy Name be praysed, in AEternitie, Ô God

Amen

△ Herevppon

Marginal notes:

line 1: Temptations & / hinderances line 6: The forme / of the boke / committed to / my discretion

Herevppon I was in an exceding great hevines, and sorrow of mynde: A<nd> sundry tymes, bewayled my case to God: and promissed a greater sare henceforeward, of Governing my Tung: and consenting to any vnlawfull or vnconvenient desire of my hert: yea, [or] /to forbeare/ to accum<pany> with my own wife, carnally,: otherwise then by hevenly leave and permission, or /if vppon/ my protestation making in the hardines of the conflict that vnleast the lord order /and redress/ my cause, I shall be overcome: That if I shall, so deliberately call for help, and not withstanding be entrapped,

That then, such trespace, shall not be imputed vnto /me/, as gladly, gredyly, or willingly committed [etc] of me etc.

/flourish/

Maij 9. Holly Thursday in the morning.

△ Being desyrous (before E K. his going down into the Cuntrie) to haue som<e>

Cumfort and token of free forgiuenes at Gods hands I browght furth the stone. Then I went into my Oratorie first requesting the Almighty God to respect the harty sorrowfull paines [I] I had endured for my offences; /to regarde/ the Vows and intent of /my/ better hede taking henceforth etc. and prayed the 22 Psalm in the conclusion of the pang.

E K—One, all in white appeareth in the stone, who sayde

It is written: It is written: yea, it is written:

Euen as the father his compassion is great over his yonglings and Children: So, is the abundance of thy mercy (o lord) great and vnspeakable to the long offences and sinnes of thy servant. For, it is written, the light of thy eyes haue beheld those that feare the: and those that trust in thy mercy, shall not be confownded

Be it, what it was: And be you, what you were:
For, the Lord, is euen the same, that he was, before:
But be you Warned
Behold, my armes ar longer then my body, and I haue eyes rownd abowt me: I am that, which [g] GOD pronownceth vppon you: Be it as I haue sayde /flourish/△ Therevppon he disapered; and immediately, appered Vriel, who sayd
Vri. ——— Actum est. △ Then the other two, and the Table and Chayre, and the ancient furniture appeared, agayn restored, and more bewtifull, then in foretyme.
Vri ——Thus, sayeth the Lord: Euen as the Tabernacle which I restore, is ten times brighter then it was, So may your Worthynes deserue brightnes ten tymes cl<er>er then this
The rising of synners doth greatly reioyce vs [and]
That, he hath sayde, Do good vnto those that feare me: and defend them, bycause they know my name. For in Justice they

Marginal notes:

line 20: △ forte / Annaël

line 29: /hand/

line 30: Misericordia / Dei.

line 36: NOTE

they shall finde me theyr God: & in mercy their great Comforter.

Therfore we say, In thy name (o thou most highest) fiat.

fiat.

Justifie not your self:

Be humble and diligent:

Continue to the ende. For great is the reward of them that feare the Lorde stedfastly.

Δ Whereas the /ordring[c] of the/ boke is referred to my Judgment: in my mynde it semeth requisite /that[c]/ as all the writing and reding of that holy language is from the right hand to the left, so the begynning of the bok<e> must be, (as it were, in respect of our most vsuall manner of bokes, in all languages of latin, greke, english etc) at th<e> ende of the boke: and the ende, at the begynning, as in the hebr<ew> bible. secondly the first leafe cannot be written in such little and aequall squares, as [the] all the rest of the 47 leaves are: bycause, the first leafe, except 9 lines (of the [last] second page) therof: is all of words: some conteyning many letters, and some few, very diuersly: wherfore, I entend to make many leaves, serve to distinguish the 49 rowes of the firs<t> leafe: and at the ende of euery word to draw a line of partition, vp and down, betwene the two next parallell lines. etc. or as shall come in my mynde then.

Vr——He, that sayeth, DO this, directeth thy Judgment.

E K. Now is there a veale drawn before all: and all things appere far bewtifuller then euer they did.

Δ I rendred thanks to the highest, and became in mynde Very Joyfull, that the Lord had pardoned my offences: whose name be praysed, extolled and magnifyed world with out ende. Amen.

I prayed after this the short psalme Jubilate Deo quotquot in terra versamini etc.

/flourish/

E K, immediately was to take bote and so to go to London: ther< e> to buy a saddell, brydle, and bote hose: for he had (here) yesterday, bought a prety dun Mare, of goodman Pentecost: for iij^{ls}, redy mony, in angels [god]

God be his guyde, help, and defense
Amen.

/flourish/

Marginal notes:

line 1: Justice

line 10: The boke.

line 14: Note

[106b]

Thursday. Maij 23. Circa 10½ mane.

Δ E K being c̄ome [home] yesterday [frō his ior] againe & hauing..... the erthes of the eleuen places before specifyed: Wee being desirous to....
the furder pleasure of the highest therein, and in other matters pteyn/g/: to our Actions in hand: I made prayer to such intent, both in my oratory & at my desk, rendring thanks for E K his safe retorne, and for the benefit receyued of late of the Governor and assistants for the Mines Royall: (which I perceyued, was the extraordinary working of god /for^c/ theyr /inward^c/ perswasion; /they^c/ being /els^c/ very vnwilling

so to let the lease, as I obteyned it.) and moving somwhat towching Albert Lasky

At length, E K hard a Melody /a^c far of/, and the voyce of many, singing, these words

Pinzu[a] Lephe gamiúrax Kelpadman pacaph

Δ At the length the curten was taken away, and there appered a clere whitis<h>

fume, but not fyre

After that, cam the three, which were wont to cõme in.

Michael———— Grauida est terra, laborat iniquitatibus inimicorum lucis.

Maledicta [est] igitur est, quia quod in vtero perditio<nis> et tenebrarum est.

Vriel————Sordida est, et odiosa nobis.

Raphael———— Proprijs sese flagellat tremulis.

E K. They loke abowt them, as thowgh they loked for somwhat or at somwhat

Rap.———— Veh dicat, sed non est qui audiat

Gementem vidimus, sed non est, qui misereat.

Sancticemur igitur Sanctum eius, quia <n>os

sanctificamur in illo

Mich.———— Fiat.

E K. He plucketh all the vsuall hangings down abowt the place and now they take the Table away, and the Chayre:

And where the Chayre was semeth a Canapy or cloth of state to hang

Michael———— Transeunt vetera, Incipiunt nova.

E K. Now seeme like clowdes to come abowt the Canapy being very beawtifull: and the bottom or flowr of the place, all couered with pretious stone, bigger then ones fist.

Mi ———— This
Vriel———That } [they sayd, pointing abowt the howse.
Rap ———— We

E K. They bring in a Throne like a Judges seat or Throne and set it vp with the back of it to the Wall.

Mich ———— Be it couered for a season: For euer and euer and

Marginal notes:

line 3: <T>he Erthes.

line 7: <T>he stone /

line 11: <T>his [a] was / <s>ownded to the / <e>nde of pinzu / s we vse in / <e>nglish balads / s with this / <w>ord down /  is sownded / <h>ey downa / <d>own a down a / etc.

line 32: Nova

[107a]

/and/ [ever] ever is thy Justice, O GOD [all three sayd]
c
E K. And there cam light fire flashing from the Throne]

There commeth a beame from the Throne, and throwgh Raphael his head, and semeth to come out at his mowth. The other two seeme to knele downe: Michael on his right hand, and Vriel on his left.

Raphael.—— I will speak (o lord) bycause it is iust that thow hast commaunded.

Your rashnes (o worldlings is trodden vnderfote: He sayeth, (I say not) your synns are forgiven △ O blessed God; ô prayse we his mercyes for euer: ô Cumfortable newes.

Raph.———For, whome I will viset, those do I clense (sayeth the Lord)

Whan other things decay by reason of theyr age and filthynes quae nunc sunt in summo gradu, and I will not suffer them to move one fote farder [(], sayeth the lord,) Then shall your branches begyn to appere: And I will make you florish, for my gloryes sake,

And my testimonies are true, and the wordes of my covenant

iust: My pathes are thorny, but my dwelling place, is cumfortab<le>

[And lift vp your harts, as from the strength of an other]

[But be you vnto me]. My hand is heuy, but my help is great.

Be ye cumforted in me: for from me, in my self, I am your Cumforter: and lift vp your harts as from the strength of an other. But be you vnto me a new people: bycause

I am to you no new god. Dwell with me to the ende bycause I haue byn with you from the begynning: For

Who soeuer shall arrise agaynst you (Behold) I am With you.

Your fathers liued in darknes, and yet were revived yea your fathers were in light, and yet they saw not Truth.

But I will be known: yea the Nations vppon earth, shall say

Lo this is he, whome we haue risen agaynst I AM. therfore reioyce

All three sayd] We perish (o lord) for our vnrighteousnes sake [and therew/th/

they fell down] But in the we were created and in the

We rise agayn: Huseh Huseh Huseh garmal, Peleh Peleh Peleh pacád=

uasam

Gyrd your gyrdles togither and pluck vp your myndes: I say, ope<n> your eyes: and yf you haue eares, heare: for we tremble and quake. This mercy was never: no not in Israël

Decedant mali, et pereant.

Depart o ye blasphemers, and workers of Iniquitie: For,

Here is Glory, Justification, with Sanctification

I answere the. △ Note: he meaneth, now to such matters as I propownded first of my self, and this Poland<er> prince etc to give answer. The Prince had left with me these questions:

1. De Vita Stephani Regis Poloniae quid [st...] dici po<ssit?>

2. An successor eius erit Albertus Lasky an ex domo Austria<ca?>

3. An Albertus Lasky Palatinus Siradiensis habebit regnū Molda<uiae?>

Marginal notes:

line 6: Just:

line 9: Peccatorū re= / missio line 17: The Thorny path / sup^{a}: Mar: / 24.

line 31: Angeli iniusti respectu / Justitiae Divinae line 37: Mercy,

Behold you thanked God, and it is accepted.

I say, Althowgh we require speede of the and of you: yet .....
.... speede of vs, you haue a Master, we are his mowth ....
are Schollars, without vs, you could * not heare him: Ney .....
we heare him of our selves.

Consider the first, respect the second: Measure your selues,
as the third.

For what you were & shalbe is allready appointed
And What He Was, is and shalbe, it is not of our determination
His purposes are without ende: yet, to an ende; in you, to an ende Therfore When you shall be called vppon, DO that which is commaunded: But appoint no forme vnto god his buil= ding. Many wyndes are to come: but theyr furey is in Vayne: It is sayd: The Conquest shall be yours.

To the purpose. Who puft vp this princis father with desire to Viset these cuntries: or who hath prevented him? euen he. that hath prouided him a sonne, as an arme vnto his chosen

Truely the hills shalbe couered with blud: The Valleys shall take vp the Cedar trees vnframed: He seeth these places, but knoweth not to what ende. He is dead, in respect of his absence: But honor them, whome God hath sanctified. For, Behold, the Lord hath sayd: Thow shalt gouern a people: a time there is, which is prefixed: and it is the course of the sonne: Then sh<all> it be sayd vnto him, O King.

When you semed to be carryed vnto mowntaynes, you towched his [his] ...

Behold (sayeth He). Fornication shall not prevayle:

the very stones shall be taken away: and the Tables shalbe couered with blud: and theyr dayly bankett shall be Wo Wo.

Whatsoeuer thow takest in hand, First loke vp: see if it be Just: yf it be, put furth thy hand: for it is graunted.

It is sayed, I haue giuen the powre; and thy perswasion shall <be> like fire: and for my names sake, thow shalt triumphe agaynst the mightiest. But beware of Pride.

Many Witches and enchanters, yea many diuels haue rosen vp against this stranger, and they haue sayd, We will preuayle against him: for why? There is one that aspireth and he it is, that seeketh his confusion. But I will graunt him his desire. He shall do good with many: your names are in one boke. Feare not, therfore; Love togither

There

Marginal notes:

line 1: ..... / ..... / require none at / Gods hands in / this Case.

line 11: Note / we shalbe / called vpon.

line 17: Albertus / Lasky line 20: The dead / man /hand/line 22: Prophetia de / regno Alberti a / Lasky. sed ipē / noluit constanter / se convertere ad / Deum: et ad= / herere Deo / &c.

line 26: Fornication line 29: Justa / facienda.

line 32: Perswasion / △

line 35: Alb. Lasky ℭ line 39: Alb. Lasky his / name in one boke / with our names.

[108a]

There shall arise, saying, let ..... talked with strangers: But I .....
I will driue them from they<r> own .....
the bones which are buryed a far of .....
They do spit vengeance agaynst .....
them in theyr own filthynes .....
All men loke vppon the ....ause it is glorified .....
Happy are they, whose faces are marked, and in w.....
is a percing fyre of workmanship.
I will move the Prince (sayeth the Lord) Be .....
shall shortly say, Ô give me Cownsayle: for th.....
cownsayled me, conspire agaynst me
Behold, such as shewed the, little frendeship, are rather such ...
dede (as thow iustly hast confessed,) as were forced to doe ...
good: I say they, begyn to repine at that, they haue ....
Let those which are of tyme, yelde to time
One euerlasting cumfort of grace, and perfect loue, be amongst you: to the honor and glory of him that loueth you.
Beleue, for the teacher his sake.
All thow demaundest, is answered.
Of our selues, (we say,) We desire to be with you:
And what is of vs, the same be it vnto you
E K. They pluck the curten, affore the stone, all ouer.
The curten is like beaten gold:

△ Semper sit benedictus Trinus et vnus.

AEternus et omnipotens Deus nr.

Amen

/flourish/

Liber sexti [et sancti] Mysteriorū (et sancti) 30

[Noualissim] parallelus, [sequitur] Noualisq$_{r}$ sequitur

Marginal notes:

line 4: < ....rie bones / .... be / .... to> line 8: Fa= / <Fa>ces marked line 11, over 'for th': / forte they that line 13: * / The Cumpany / for the mines / royall which / had made A.G. / and me a lease / for Deuonshire / mynes etc line 14, below 'doe': forte done line 16, RH: △ we were called to / dynner often / so he ended.

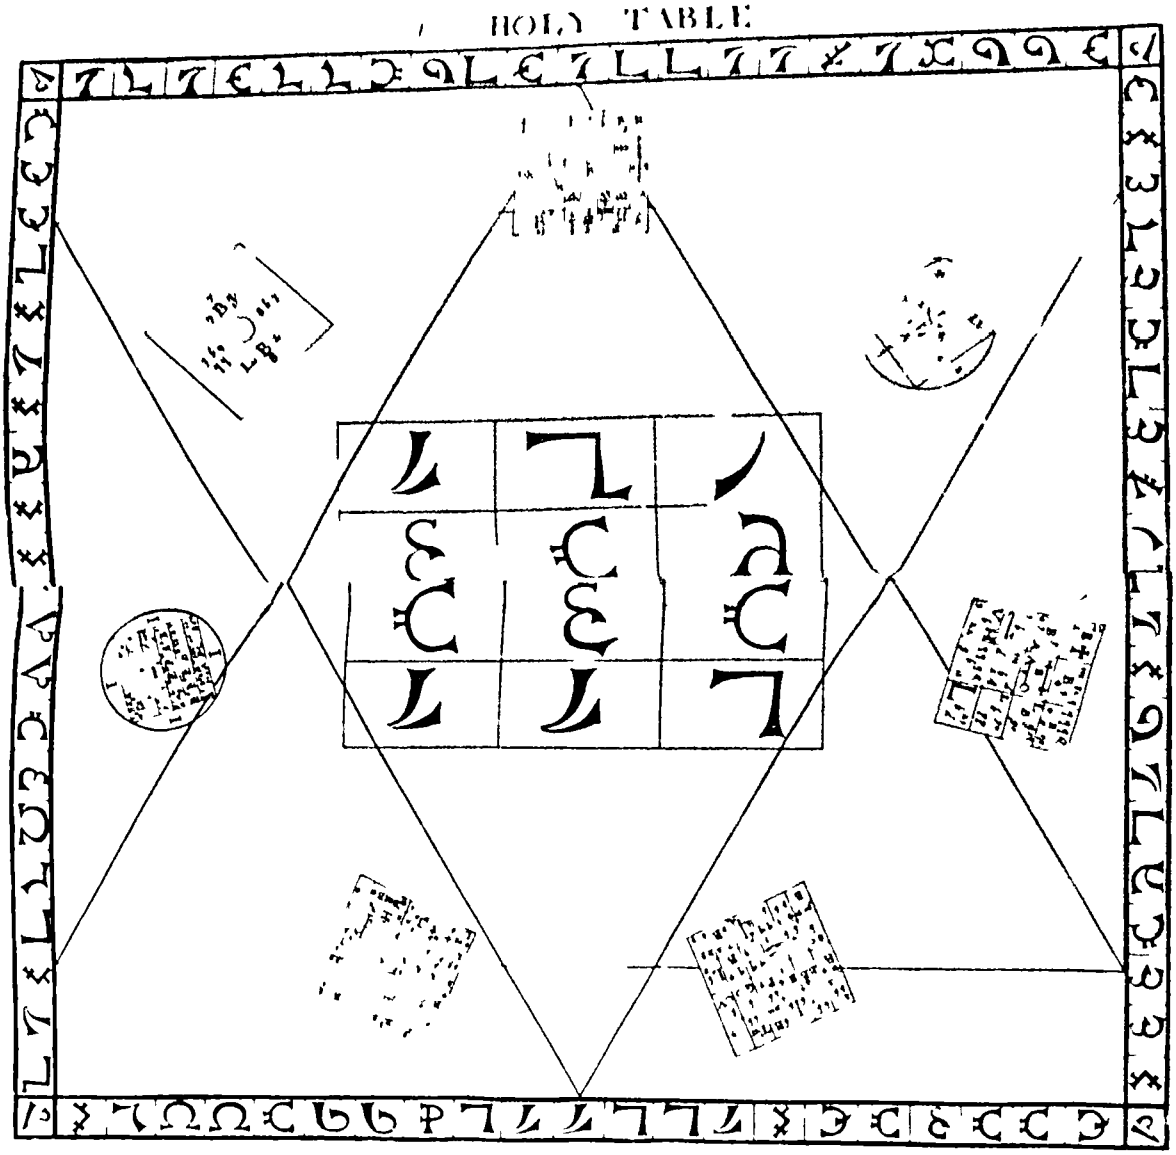
line 25, RH: The other curtens did not /not/ cover all so wholy / as this did.

APPENDIX



The plate of the Holy Table shown in Meric Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee...and Some Spirits (1659), facsimile edition 1974, (copyright: The Antonine Publishing Co. Ltd.).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Manuscripts

a) British Museum Library:

Additional MS 36674. Material by Forman, Dr. Caius and others; scrying experiments of H.G. and Jo. Davis (fols 58-62); invocations for consecrating a glass or crystal.

Cotton MS Appendix XLVI, parts 1 & 2. Dee's Actions with spirits later published by Meric Casaubon as a True and Faithful Relation.

Cotton Charter XIII, art. 39. A chart drawn by Dee in 1570 outlining how to 'Make this Kingdome Flourishing, Triumphant, Famous, and Blessed'.

Cotton Charter XIV, art. 1. Traces the ancestry of Queen Elizabeth and John Dee back to the earliest Welsh kings.

Cotton MS Vitellius C.VII, arts 1-6. A Compendious Rehearsal; 'Perspectiva, sive de arte mensurandi'; 'Of Famous and Rich Discoveries'; 'De trigono circinoque analogico'; 'De speculis comburentibus'; Supplication to Queen Mary. All are in Dee's hand.

Harleian MS 249, art. 13. Tract on British sea limits and a letter from Dee to Dyer dated 8 September 1597 concerning Manchester College (fols 104-105).

Harleian MS 1879, arts 1, 5 & 6. Catalogue by Dee of some 230 manuscripts in his possession; catalogue by Dee of printed books in his library; catalogue by Dee of manuscripts in his library. The last two items are dated 6 September 1583.

Harleian MS 6986, art. 26. Letter from Dee to Queen Elizabeth concerning his return from the Continent, dated 10 November 1588.

Lansdowne MS 19, art. 38. Letter from Dee to Burghley dated 3 October 1574.

Lansdowne MS 61, art. 58. Letter from Dee to Burghley dated 22 August 1589.

Sloane MS 3188. Dee's Actions with spirits between 22 December 1581 and 23 May 1583.

Sloane MS 3189. The Book of Enoch, in Kelly's hand.

Sloane MS 3191. '48 Claues angelicae'; 'Liber scientiae auxilii et victoriae terrestris'; 'De heptarchia mystica'; 'Tabula bonorum angelorum invocationes'. All are in Dee's hand.

Sloane MS 3677. Ashmole's copy of the contents of Sloane MS 3188.

Sloane MS 3678. Ashmole's copy of the contents of Sloane MS 3191.

Sloane MS 3824. A number of instructions for summoning angels and experiments in the art of scrying. 17th century.

Sloane MS 3848, fols 148-161. Invocations for use with mirrors and crystals in the art of scrying. 17th century.

Sloane MS 3851, fol. 50 ff. Instructions for summoning angels into a crystal. 17th century.

b) Bodleian Library:

Ashmole MS 423, art. 122. Ashmole's transcript of Dee's personal memoranda found in the margins of Stoffler's Ephemerides, covering the period from 1543 to 1566.

Ashmole MS 487. The Ephemerides of Stadius for 1554-1600 (Cologne 1570) in the margins of which are Dee's personal memeoranda covering the period January 1577 to December 1600.

Ashmole MS 488. The Ephemerides of Maginus for 1581-1620 (Venice 1582) in the margins of which are Dee's personal memoranda covering the period September 1586 to April 1601.

Ashmole MS 972. A copy of Ashmole's Theatrum Chemicum with his own notes and corrections. The copy contains a number of notes by Ashmole concerning Dee and Kelly.

Ashmole MS 1142, II. Ashmole's copy of Dee's library list.

Ashmole MS 1446. Townesend's annotated copy of Theatrum Chemicum with various notes about Dee.

Ashmole MS 1788, arts 1-16. Ashmole's copy of A Compendious Rehearsal; a copy of 'Praefatio Latina in actionem' (published by C.H. Josten as 'An Unknown Chapter'); letter from Dr. N. Bernard to Meric Casaubon and some ensuing correspondence; copy of a letter from Dee to William Camden, 7 August 1574; list of contents of 'Of Famous and Rich Discoveries'; copy of the Supplication to Queen Mary; miscellaneous notes on Dee; copy of a letter from William Aubrey to Dee; 'Medicina ad cancrum curandum'; two horoscopes for Dee; horoscope for Edward Kelly; Ashmole's comments on Dee's horoscope; information about Dee from Hollinsworth's book of antiquities; John Aubrey's account of Dee gathered from Goodwife Faldo; notes by Ashmole on his discourse with Goodwife Faldo.

Ashmole MS 1790, arts 1-4. 'Praefatio Latina in actionem'; various papers relating to the Actions with spirits; Ashmole's notes concerning the Actions with spirits; Ashmole's correspondence relating to Dee.

Douce MS 363, fol. 125. A record that Lasky arrived in England on 30 April 1583.

Rawlinson MS D 923, arts A12 and B10. Family tree taken from Dee's grandson Rowland; letter by Casaubon undated.

Selden Supra MS 79, fols 171-187. Notes copied by Brian Twyne from various manuscripts written by Dee.

Smith MS 95, fols 131-146. Thomas Smith's notes on Dee.

Printed Works

Acts of the Privy Council, 1554-1556.

Agricola, Georgius, De re metallica (1556), translated and edited by Herbert Clark Hoover and Lou Henry Hoover (New York 1950).

Agrippa, Henry Cornelius, Three Books of Occult Philosophy, translated by J[ames] F[rench] (London 1651).

Agrippa, Henry Cornelius, attrib., Henry Cornelius Agrippa his Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, translated by Robert Turner (London 1655).

Agrippa, Henry Cornelius, Of the Vanitie and Uncertaintie of Artes and Sciences, translated by Ja[mes] San[ford] (London 1569).

Agrippa, Henry Cornelius, Opera, 2 vols facsimile edition of Lyons c.1600 (Hildesheim 1970).

Allen, Don Cameron, The Star-Crossed Renaissance (Durham, North Carolina 1941).

Ashmole, Elias, Elias Ashmole, his Autobiographical and Historical Notes, his Correspondence, and other Contemporary Sources Relating to his Life and Work, edited by C.H. Josten, 5 vols (Oxford 1966).

Aubrey, John, Letters Written by Eminent Persons in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, 2 vols (London 1813)

Aubrey, John, Three Prose Works, edited by John Buchanan-Brown (Fontwell 1972).

St. Augustine, The Confessions of St. Augustine, translated by Sir Tobie Matthew, revised by Dom Roger Hudleston (London and Glasgow 1957)

Bacon, Francis, The Advancement of Learning and New Atlantis, edited by Arthur Johnston (Oxford 1972).

Bacon, Roger, Frier Bacon his Discovery of the Miracles of Art, Nature, and Magick, 'faithfully translated out of Dr. Dees own copy, by T.M.', facsimile edition (Lodon 1659).

Bailey, John E., 'Dee and Trithemius's "Steganography"', Notes and Queries, 5th series, vol. XI (1879), pp. 401-402 & 422-423.

Barrett, Francis, The Celestial Intelligencer (London 1801).

Besterman, Theodore, Crystalgazing: a Study in the History, Distribution, Theory and Practice of Skrying (London 1924).

Blau, Joseph Leon, The Christian Interpretation of the Cabala in the Renaissance (New York 1944).

Bibliotheca Ashmoliana, a Catalogue of the Library of the Learned and Famous Elias Ashmole Esq., BM collection of sale catalogues 1680-1696, shelf-mark S-C 92319.

Blount, Thomas, Glossographia: or a Dictionary (London 1656).

Bongus, Petrus, Mysticae numerorum significationis liber (Bergamo 1585).

The Book of Enoch, edited by R.H. Charles (Oxford 1893).

Boulenger, Jules César, Opusculorum systema, 2 tomes (Lyons 1621).

Bourne, William, A Regiment for the Sea and Other Writings, edited by E.G.R. Taylor, Hakluyt Society Series II, vol. CXXI (London 1963).

Boutell's Heraldry, edited by C.W. Scott-Giles and J.P. Brooke Little, revised edition (London amd New York 1966).

Brahe, Tycho, Learned: Tico Brahae his Astronomicall Coniectur of the New and Much Admired [Star] which Appered in the Year 1572 (London 1632), facsimile edition, The English Experience No. 86 (Amsterdam and New York 1969).

Brooke, Iris, A History of English Costume (London 1957).

Browne, Sir Thomas, Works, edited by Geoffrey Keynes, 4 vols (Chicago 1964).

Bullinger, Henry, The Decades of Henry Bullinger (1587 edition), edited by Rev. Thomas Harding, Parker Society, 4 vols (Cambridge 1849-1852).

Butler, Christopher, Number Symbolism (London 1970).

'Calcuttensis', 'MS. Notes in Printed Books', Notes and Queries, 4th series IV (1869), pp. 69-70.

Calder, I.R.F., 'John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist', unpublished University of London Ph.D. dissertation, 1952.

Calendar of Patent Rolls, Edward VI 1553.

Calendar of State Papers, Domestic 1547-1580, Domestic 1580-1625, Foreign 1583-1584.

Casaubon, Meric, Of Credulity and Incredulity in Things Divine and Spiritual (London 1670).

Casaubon, Meric, ed., A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr: John Dee...and Some Spirits (London 1659).

Cassirer, Ernst, ed., The Individual and the Cosmos in Renaissance Philosophy, translated by Mario Domandi (Oxford 1963).

Cassirer, Ernst, ed., The Renaissance Philosophy of Man (London and Chicago 1967).

Chaucer, Geoffrey, The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, edited by F.N. Robinson, second edition (London 1970).

Cirlot, J.E., A Dictionary of Symbols (New York 1962).

Columna, Petrus Galatinus, Opus de arcanis Catholicae veritatis (Basle 1561).

Cooper, Charles Henry and Thomson, eds, Athenae Cantabrigiensis, 2 vols (Cambridge 1861, republished 1967).

Cuming, H. Syer, 'On Crystals of Augury', The Journal of the British Archaeological Association, V (1850), pp. 51-53.

Curtis, R., The Care of a Christian Conscience (London 1600).

Dalton, O.M., 'Notes on Wax Discs used by Dr. Dee', Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of London, XXI (1906-7), pp. 380-383.

Davidson, Gustav, A Dictionary of Angels (New York & London 1967).

Deacon, Richard, John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I (London 1968).

Debus, Allen G., The English Paracelsians (New York 1966).

Dee, John, Autobiographical Tracts of Dr. John Dee, Warden of the College of Manchester, edited by James Crossley, Chetham Society Publications, vol. XXIV (Manchester 1851).

Dee, John, 'Mathematicall Preface' to The Elements of Geometrie of the Most Auncient Philosopher Euclide of Megara, translated by Sir Henry Billingsley (London 1570).

Dee, John, General and Rare Memorials Pertayning to the Perfecte Arte of Navigation (London 1577), facsimile edition, The English Experience No. 62 (Amsterdam and New York 1968).

Dee, John, A Letter, Containing a Most Briefe Discourse Apologeticall (London 1599).

Dee, John, A Letter Nine Years Since (London 1603).

Dee, John, Monas hieroglyphica, translated by C.H. Josten, Ambix, XII (1964), pp. 84-221.

Dee, John, The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee, edited by James O. Halliwell, Camden Society Publications, vol. XIX (London 1842).

Dee, John, Propaedeumata aphoristica (London 1558, reprinted London 1568).

Dee, John, To the Honorable Assemblie of the Commons in the Present Parlament (London 1604).

Dee, John, To the King's Most Excellent Majestie (London 1604).

Delrio, Martino, Disquisitionum magicarum libri sex (Lyons 1608).

Digges, Leonard, A Geometrical Practise named Pantometria (London 1571).

Digges, Thomas, Alae seu scalae mathematicae (London 1573).

D'Israeli, Isaac, Amenities of Literature, 3 vols (London 1841).

'Dr. Dee's Magic Mirror—Reflecting Two Elizabethan Worlds', The Listener, 23 & 30 December 1976, pp. 824-826.

Encyclopaedia Biblica, edited by Rev. T.K. Cheyne and J. Sutherland Black, 4 vols (London 1899-1907).

Evans, R.J.W., The Making of the Habsburg Monarchies, 1550-1780 (Oxford 1979).

Evans, R.J.W., Rudolf II and his World (Oxford 1973).

Evelyn, John, Sculptura, edited by C.F. Bell (Oxford 1906).

Forman, Simon, The Autobiography and Personal Diary of Dr. Simon Forman, edited by James Orchard Halliwell (London 1849).

Foxe, John, Actes and Monuments (London 1563 and London 1576).

French, Peter J., John Dee (London 1972).

Friedman, William F. and Elizabeth S., The Shakespearean Ciphers Examined (Cambridge 1957).

Fulton, Thomas, The Sovereignty of the Sea (Edinburgh 1911).

Gaster, M., 'Jewish Divination', Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics, 12 vols (Edinburgh 1908-1921), pp. 806-814.

Ginsburg, Christian D., The Kabbalah, its Doctrines, Development, and Literature (London 1865).

Greg, W.W., Collected Papers, edited by J.C. Maxwell (Oxford 1966).

Halliwell, J.O., ed., Letters on Scientific Subjects (London 1841, reprinted London 1965).

Halliwell, J.O., ed. Rara Mathematica (London 1839).

Harsnett, Samuel, A Declaration of Egregious Popish Impostures (London 1603).

Hearne, Thomas, Johannis confratris et monachi Glastoniensis, chronica, sive historia rebus Glastoniensis, 2 vols (Oxford 1726).

The History of Reynard the Fox, edited by Donald B. Sands (Cambridge,Mass. 1960).

Hooke, Robert, The Posthumous Works of Robert Hooke, edited by R. Waller (London 1705).

James, M.R., Manuscripts Formerly Owned by Dr. John Dee, with Preface and Identifications, Supplement to the Bibliographical Society's Transactions (London 1921).

Jones, Richard Foster, Ancients and Moderns (University of California Press, Berkeley & Los Angeles 1965).

ben Joseph, Rabbi Akiba, The Book of Formation, translated by Knut Stenring (London 1923).

Josten, C.H., ed., 'An Unknown Chapter in the Life of John Dee', JWCI, 28 (1965), pp. 223-257.

Keller, H.A., ed., Le Roman des Sept Sages (Tübingen 1836).

Kahn, David, The Codebreakers (London 1966).

King, C.W., 'Talismans and Amulets: Mediaeval Talismans', Archaeological Journal, XXVI (1869), pp. 225-235.

Koestler, Arthur, The Sleepwalkers (London 1959, reprinted Harmondsworth 1972).

Laycock, Donald C., ed., The Complete Enochian Dictionary (London 1978).

Lilly, William, William Lilly's History of his Life and Times, published from the original MS, London 1715, (London 1822).

MacMichael, J. Holden, 'Bishopsgate Street Without', Notes & Queries, 11th series III (1911), pp. 2-3.

Meadows, Denis, Elizabethan Quintet (London 1956).

Nashe, Thomas, The Works of Thomas Nashe, edited by Ronald B. McKerrow, revised by F.P. Wilson, 5 vols (Oxford 1958).

Nichols, John Gough, ed., Narratives of the Days of the Reformation, Camden Society Publications (London 1859).

North, Martin, Exodus, a Commentary (London 1962).

Osborn, James M., Young Philip Sidney 1572-1577 (New Haven & London 1972).

Original Letters Illustrative of English History, edited by Sir Henry Ellis, 3rd series, 4 vols (London 1846).

Philpot, John, The Examinations and Writings of John Philpot, edited by Robert Eden, Parker Society (Cambridge 1842).

della Porta, Gianbattista, Natural Magick, edited by Derek J. Price, facsimile edition, Collectors' Series in Science (New York 1957, reprinted 1959).

Postel, Guillaume, Le Thresor des Prophéties de L'Univers, edited by François Secret (The Hague 1969).

Prideaux, W.R.B., 'Books from John Dee's Library', Notes & Queries, 9th series VIII (1901), pp. 137-138.

Queen Elizabeth's Prayer Book (Edinburgh 1909).

Raine, J., 'Divination in the Fifteenth Century by Aid of a Magical Crystal', Archaeological Journal XIII (1856), pp. 372-374.

Read, Conyers, Mr. Secretary Walsingham and the Policy of Queen Elizabeth (Oxford 1925).

Recorde, Robert, Grounde of Artes (London 1543).

Reuchlin, Johannes, De verbo mirifico and De arte cabalistica, facsimile edition (Stuttgart 1964).

Salisbury, John of, Polycraticus, edited by C.C.J. Webb (Oxford 1909).

Scholem, G.G., Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism (New York 1941, 3rd edition 1967).

Scholem, G.G., On the Kabbalah and its Symbolism, translated by R. Manheim (London 1965).

Scriptores historiae Augustae, translated by David Magie, Loeb Classical Library, 3 vols (Cambridge, Mass. 1960).

Scot, Reginald, The Discoverie of Witchcraft, facsimile edition (Arundel & London 1964).

The Second Volume Conteinyng those Statutes whiche haue ben made in the Tyme of the Most Victorious Reigne of Kynge Henrie the Eight (London 1543).

Shah, Sayed Idries, ed., The Secret Lore of Magic (London 1957, reprinted 1974).

Shakespeare, William, The First Folio of Shakespeare, prepared by Charlton Hinman (New York 1968).

Shumaker, Wayne, The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance (Berkeley, Los Angeles & London 1972).

Smith, Charlotte Fell, John Dee: 1527-1608 (London 1909).

Smith, D.E., A History of Mathematics, 2 vols (London 1925).

Smith, Thomas, Vitae quorundam eruditissimorum et illustrium virorum (London 1707).

Smith, Thomas, Catalogus librorum manuscriptorum bibliothecae Cottonianae (Oxford 1696).

Spenser, Edmund, The Works of Edmund Spenser, edited by E. Greenlaw, C.G. Osgood, F.M. Padelford and R. Heffner, variorum edition, 11 vols (Baltimore 1932-1957, reprinted 1958-1966).

Stanley, Sir Thomas, History of Philosophy (London 1656).

Strype, John, Annals of the Reformation and Establishment of Religion...in the Church of England, 7 vols (Oxford 1824).

Tahureau, Jacques, Les Dialogues (Anvers 1574).

Tait, Hugh, 'The Devil's Looking Glass: the Magical Speculum of Dr. John Dee', in Horace Walpole, Writer, Politician, and Connoisseur, edited by Warren Hunting Smith (New Haven & London 1967), pp. 195-212.

Tannenbaum, Samuel A., The Handwriting of the Renaissance (republished New York 1967).

Taylor, E.G.R., Tudor Geography: 1485-1583 (London 1930).

Taylor, E.G.R., Late Tudor and Early Stuart Geography: 1583-1650 (London 1934).

Taylor, F. Sherwood, The Alchemists (London 1951).

Thorndike, Lynn, A History of Magic and Experimental Science, 6 vols (New York 1923-1941).

Trismegistus, Hermes, attrib., Corpus Hermeticum, translated by A.J. Festugière with text established by A.D. Nock, 4 vols (Paris 1945-1954).

Trithemius, Johannes, De septem secundeis (Cologne 1567).

Trattner, Walter I., 'God and Expansion in Elizabethan England: John Dee, 1527-1583', JHI, XXV (1964), pp. 17-34.

Van Durme, M., ed., Correspondence Mercatorienne (Anvers 1959).

Waite, A.E., trans & ed., The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly (London 1893, second edition 1970).

Walker, D.P., The Ancient Theology (London 1972).

Walker, D.P., Spiritual and Demonic Magic from Ficino to Campanella (London 1958, reprinted 1969).

Webster, John, The Displaying of Supposed Witchcraft (London 1677).

Weever, John, Ancient Funerall Monuments (London 1631).

West, Robert Hunter, The Invisible World (Athens, Georgia 1939).

Westcott, William Wynn, An Introduction to the Study of the Kabbalah (London 1910, second edition 1926).

Whitney's Choice of Emblemes, edited by Henry Green, facsimile reprint (London 1846).

à Wood, Anthony, Athenae Oxoniensis, edited by Philip Bliss, 4 vols (London 1913-1820).

Worsop, Edward, A Discoverie of Sundrie Errours and Faults Comitted by Landemeaters Ignorant of Arithmetike (London 1582).

Yates, Frances A., The Art of Memory (London & Chicago 1966).

Yates, Frances A., 'The Art of Ramon Lull: An Approach to it through Lull's Theory of Elements', JWCI XVII (1954), pp. 115-173.

Yates, Frances A., Astraea (London 1975).

Yates, Frances A., Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (London & Chicago 1964).

Yates, Frances A., The Occult Philosophy in the Elizabethan Age (London 1979).

Yates, Frances A., Theatre of the World (London & Chicago 1969).

Zika, Charles, 'Reuchlin's De verbo mirifico and the Magic Debate of the Late Fifteenth Century', JWCI, XXXIX (1976), pp. 104-138.

The Zohar, translated by Harry Sperling, Maurice Simon and Dr. Paul Levertoff, 5 vols (London & New York 1933-1934).

JOHN DEE'S ACTIONS WITH SPIRITS:
22 DECEMBER 1581 TO 23 MAY 1583

in 2 volumes

by

Christopher Lionel Whitby

VOLUME I

Submitted in partial fulfilment for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Birmingham
October 1981

Synopsis

This thesis presents an investigation of the nature of the earliest extant records of the supposed communication with angels and spirits of John Dee (1527-1608) with the assistance of his two mediums or 'scryers', Barnabas Saul and Edward Kelly. The form chosen is a transcription of the records in Dee's hand contained in Sloane MS 3188, together with an introduction and commentary to the text, which has been transcribed only once before, by Elias Ashmole in 1672. In the Introduction the physical state of the manuscript is described and a hypothesis advanced as to how it arrived in the Sloane collection. Biographical details of Dee and his scryers are provided and a further chapter presents some background to Renaissance occult philosophy and the practice of scrying. Arguments that the manuscript represents a conscious fraud or a cryptographical exercise are examined and disproved and the magical system and instruments evolved during the communications or 'Actions' are described. The last chapter of the Introduction examines Dee's motives for believing so strongly in the truth of the Actions and suggests that a principal motive was the conviction, not held by Dee alone, that a new age was about to dawn upon earth. The Commentary aims primarily at explaining the many obscurities of the text. The thesis includes a photograph of an engraving of one of the magical instruments (the Holy Table) and a bibliography.

This thesis contains approximately 95,000 words, excluding the transcription of Sloane MS 3188.

Contents

Volume I

Abbreviations

Introduction

Chapter I The Manuscript

a) Provenance 1
b) Physical Characteristics 7
c) Missing Leaves 10
Notes 16

Chapter II Biographical Details

a) John Dee 19
b) Edward Kelly 43
c) Other Scryers 49
Notes 55

Chapter III Magic and Scrying

a) Magic 63
b) Scrying 75
Notes 94

Chapter IV Fraud and Cryptography 101
Notes 113

Chapter V The Magical System 116
a) The Angels 117
b) The Sigillum Dei 118
c) The Forty-Nine Spirits 124
d) The Lamine 129
e) The Ring 131
f) The Rod 'El' 132
g) The Seven Ensigns of Creation 134
h) The Show-Stones 137
i) Magical Books 141
j) The Holy Table 149
Notes 155

Chapter VI Motives 157
Notes 178

Conclusion 180

Commentary 183

Contents (2)

Volume II

Conventions and Usages in the Transcription	i
The Transcription	1
Appendix (The Holy Table)	408
Bibliography	409

Abbreviations

Calder	I.R.F. Calder, 'John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist', unpublished University of London Ph.D. dissertation, 1952.
CR	'The Compendious Rehearsall of John Dee his Dutifull Declaracion, and Proof of the Course and Race of his Studious Lyfe', Autobiographical Tracts of Dr. John Dee, Warden of the College of Manchester, edited by James Crossley, Chetham Society Publications, vol. XXIV (Manchester 1851), pp. 1-45.
Diary	The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee, edited by James O. Halliwell, Camden Society Publications, vol. XIX (London 1842).
DNB	The Dictionary of National Biography, 21 vols (London, later Oxford, 1885-1909).
RM	John Dee, General and Rare Memorials Pertayning to the Perfecte Arte of Navigation (London 1577), facsimile edition, The English Experience No. 62 (Amsterdam and New York 1968).
Josten, Ashmole	Elias Ashmole, his Autobiographical and Historical Notes, his Correspondence, and other Contemporary Sources Relating to his Life and Work, edited by C.H. Josten, 5 vols (Oxford 1966).
Josten, 'Unknown Chapter'	'An Unknown Chapter in the Life of John Dee', edited by C.H. Josten, JWCI, 28 (1965), pp. 223-257.
Monas	John Dee, Monas hieroglyphica, translated by C.H. Josten, Ambix, XII (1964), pp. 84-221.
Occ. Phil.	Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Three Books of Occult Philosophy, translated by J[ames] F[rench] (London 1651).
OED	A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles, edited by James A.H. Murray et al., 10 vols (Oxford 1884-1928).
Preface	John Dee, 'Mathematicall Preface' to The Elements of Geometrie of the Most Auncient Philosopher Euclide of Megara, translated by Sir Henry Billingsley (London 1570)
TFR	Meric Casaubon, A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr: John Dee...and Some Spirits (London 1659).

Walker	D.P. Walker, Spiritual and Demonic Magic from Ficino to Campanella (London 1958, reprinted 1969).

I

THE MANUSCRIPT

Sloane MS 3188 contains the 'Actions with spirits' conducted by John Dee (1527-1608) and his scryers, principally Edward Kelly (1555-1595), between 22 December 1581 and 23 May 1583. These Actions are the records of visions of angels and other spirits and the messages delivered by them as seen and heard by the scryers with the aid of a crystal ball, and then immediately related to Dee, who though present saw and heard nothing. The manuscript contains 104 folios in Dee's hand which form his fair copy of notes recording the events taken at the time the Actions were conducted.[1] A short preface by Elias Ashmole (1617-1692) and some notes in cipher by William Shippen (1635-1693) are also contained in the present binding.

a) Provenance

In 1662 or 1663 a Mr. and Mrs. Jones of Lombard Street in London had occasion to move a chest, which they had bought shortly after their marriage, from its customary place in their house. Hearing something rattle they looked closely at the chest and Mr. Jones discovered a secret drawer containing various manuscript papers and a rosary and cross of olive wood. Being unable to understand the contents of these papers, they paid no great attention to them and many were eventually lost through being used by their maid to line pie dishes.[2] Two years later Mr. Jones died and although the chest perished in the Fire of London, the manuscripts, such as were left, were preserved. Mrs. Jones married again, this time to Thomas Wale who was a warder at the Tower of London and acquainted with Elias Ashmole. Learning the story of the discovery of the manuscripts and that the chest had once belonged to John Dee, Wale sent them to Ashmole on 20 August 1672 for his perusal.

The importance of the manuscripts was not lost upon Ashmole. Thirteen years before, most of the records of Dee's magical dealings from 28 May 1583 until his death had been published by Meric Casaubon as a warning how easily man may be deluded into dealing with devils.[3] Now Ashmole had in his hands four magical books written by Dee and also the diaries of his magical experiments between 22 December 1581 and 23 May 1583 that immediately preceded those in Casaubon's edition. Here were the 'Actions with spirits' that formed the ground of all those contained in A True and Faithful Relation and without which the latter could not properly be understood. Consequently on 5 September 1672 Ashmole exchanged a copy of his popular work on the Order of the Garter[4] for all the manuscripts that had been discovered in the chest.

After the attention of the Jones's maid the manuscripts were in a rather poor condition and Ashmole bound them and made transcripts of his own.[5] He also spent much time trying to solve some of the difficulties and inconsistencies of the magical system that was evolved during those early years and began to collect information concerning Dee. In January of 1672 John Aubrey (1626-1697) had written to Anthony à Wood (1632-1695) that he hoped to be able to persuade Ashmole to write a biography of Dee and Ashmole seems to have considered the proposal seriously for he began to search for the MSS of Dee's that were reputed to be in the hands of Sir William Boswell, ambassador to the Hague.[6] Anthony à Wood took up the task of writing Dee's biography, however, or at least of writing something concerning him within a larger work,[7] and Ashmole decided to leave the project in his hands, writing that he would contribute such material as he had towards Wood's study. Yet although much of Ashmole's information concerning Dee's life and magic, including his own annotated copy of TFR,[9] were handed over to the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford either with the Tradescant collection in 1683 or in the legacy of 1,758 books (which included 620 MS volumes, 311 in folio) that reached Oxford by 22 August 1692 after his death,[10] the manuscripts discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Jones and Ashmole's transcripts of them were not included. They would else still be in the Bodleian with the other relevant manuscripts of both Dee and Ashmole. The reason concerns the directions given in Ashmole's will. This granted to Oxford all printed books and MSS, bound and loose, which would be found at the time of his death 'in the two uppermost Studies in my Turret at my house in South Lambeth' and in the inner closet 'within my lower Study over the Milke house' in the same house.[11] Evidently the manuscripts that now form part of the Sloane collection were not to be found there. It seems that they were not in the house at all since they were not catalogued among the 12 folio MSS that formed part of the collection of Ashmole's library that was auctioned after his death on 22 February 1694 at Roll's Auction House in Petty Canon Alley by St. Paul's Churchyard.[12]

C.H. Josten writes that 'it is not known how these Dee manuscripts, and Ashmole's transcripts of them, have found their way into the Sloane collection of manuscripts at the British Museum.'[13] There are a few hypotheses that may be put forward, however, based upon evidence from the manuscripts themselves. On the flyleaf of Sloane MS 3188 Sir Frederic Madden, head of the manuscripts department at the British Museum from 1837 to 1866, wrote in January 1854:

> This volume [was purchased at the sale] is in Dr. Dee's own handwriting, [of Sir Joseph Jekyll's library in January 1739/40] as far as fol. 108. [Lot]

> A fair copy of it by Elias Ashmole was purchased at the same Sir Joseph Jekyll's sale, January 1739/40 (Lot 405) and is now MS Sloane 3677.[14]

The deletions, signified here by square brackets, indicate that while Ashmole's transcript was purchased at the above sale, there was some doubt concerning Dee's original MS. Sloane MS 3191, which contains the other four books found in Dee's chest, now bears no reference to its purchase, although there is an erased reference on the flyleaf by Madden to its having belonged to Thomas Cotton.[15] Sloane MS 3189, which contains the so called Book of Enoch in Kelly's hand, was certainly in the Cotton collection,[16] as were the manuscripts from which TFR was printed,[17] these having been found buried in a field by Robert Cotton acting upon information he had received.[18] The two possibilities that present themselves are that the original MSS discovered in the chest and Ashmole's transcripts remained together and somehow were acquired by Jekyll and then by Sloane, or else they became separated, only Ashmole's transcripts being acquired by Jekyll and the other MSS arriving in Sloane's collection by another way. It is not unlikely that the originals, being of greater scholarly as well as financial value, might have parted company with Ashmole's transcripts. The erased reference in Sloane MS 3191 suggests that they may have reached the Cotton collection, but they were never catalogued there at any time, and in order to reach the Sloane collection they must have left the Cotton collection before the founding of the British Museum in 1753. Since the Cotton collection spent much time sealed up, it is unlikely that these manuscripts were contained in it, unless they were suddenly removed by some person after the disastrous fire of 23 October 1731, a possibility which is again remote.

Even if Dee's original manuscripts were purchased at Jekyll's sale along with Ashmole's transcripts, there is a period of at least forty-six years during which their location is not accounted for. In Ashmole's writings upon Dee many persons are to be found who seem to have had some interest in the Elizabethan scholar. Among them are John Aubrey, Sir Thomas Browne, Sir William Boswell, Meredith Lloyd, Anthony à Wood and William Shippen.[19] This last figure was born in 1635, matriculated from Oxford in 1653, became a fellow of University College, and was preferred successively to Prestbury (1667), Kirkheaton (1670), Aldford (1676) and finally Stockport (1678) where he died on 29 September 1693. Shippen was intensely interested in Dee and collated his copy of TFR with the original manuscripts in the Cotton collection.[20] Ashmole's copy of a letter between Dee and William Camden of 7 August 1574 bears the marginal note that 'the Originall is in the Library at Dublin in Ireland, whence Mr. William Shippen now (1677) Minister of Kirkhethon neere Wakefield in Yorkshire tooke a Coppy, & from thence I caused this Transcript to be made.'[21] Both Sloane MS 3188 and Sloane MS 3189 (The Book of Enoch)contain notes by Shippen. Bound in the back of Sloane MS 3188 are some papers by Shippen which provide a summary in long-hand and cipher of the contents of Dee's records and function to a certain extent as an index. One of the blank folios preceding the title page of Sloane MS 3189 has pasted upon it a note by Shippen explaining an error concerning the beginning of The Book of Enoch.[22] The papers in the back of Sloane MS 3188 may have been gathered there when Sloane rebound the MS, but the note at the beginning of Sloane MS 3189 must have been with that MS when it arrived in Sloane's hands. The inference is therefore that these MSS arrived in Sloane's hands together with Shippen's annotated copy, although only Sloane MS 3189 bears specific references to intermediate owners (see note 16) and we cannot tell whether Sir Joseph Jekyll ever owned more than Ashmole's transcripts of them. If Shippen did indeed possess the MSS at any time, they must have reached him soon enough before his death in 1693 for him to make extensive notes. A note by Madden on a flyleaf to Shippen's copy of TFR states that the annotations were made in 1683 and so it is likely that around that time Shippen may also have borrowed the MSS in Ashmole's possession. Since he must have borrowed Sloane MS 3189 from the Cotton collection, whence Ashmole took his own copy, there is some doubt about his effecting its return,[23] as it is now in the Sloane collection and bears signs of ownership by Dr. Biggs and Mr. Jane Hulbert (note 16). If he borrowed Sloane MS 3188 from Ashmole before the latter's death, he may also have failed to return that, Ashmole dying before Shippen had completed his work on the MS and then Shippen himself dying shortly afterwards, his goods and the borrowed MSS presumably passing on to his son William for disposal as he saw fit.

None of the evidence concerning the ownership of the MSS between their possession by Ashmole and Sloane is conclusive. The most probable hypotheses are however that either Ashmole lent the originals (and perhaps also his own transcripts) to some person and that they were not returned or that his widow disposed of them separately after her husband's death, perhaps according to some instructions given to her. The most likely candidate to whom the MSS might have been lent is William Shippen, since his hand appears in annotations in Sloane MSS 3188 and 3189, the former having been in Ashmole's possession and the latter having been in Sir John Cotton's. The place of Sir Joseph Jekyll in the proceedings is only clear with regard to Ashmole's transcripts of Sloane MSS 3188 and 3191 and I am not convinced that he ever possessed Dee's original copies.

b) Physical Characteristics

Sloane MS 3188 contains 171 leaves in its present folio binding. The first two leaves are unpaginated, and thereafter the leaves are foliated in pencil in the top right hand corner from 1 to 169. Folios 1-13 measure 315-320mm high by 205mm wide and fol. 14 measures 220mm by 205mm. All other leaves measure 295-300mm by 205mm with the following exceptions: fol. 15 (175mm x 140mm), fol. 46 (77mm x 252mm), fol. 81 (200mm x 142mm), fol. 87 (134mm x 190mm), fol. 97 (112mm x 123mm), fol. 99 (70mm x 127mm), and fols 141-169 (188mm x 150mm).

The second leaf bears the note by Sir Frederic Madden concerning the purchase of the volume and the leaf designated as fol. 1 bears a note in an unknown hand which reads: 'Dr. Dee's conference with Angels from Dec. 22. 1581 to May 30. 1583 being what preceeds y^{e} other Conferences printed by Dr. Meric Causabon Lond. 1659. in folio with a preface by Elias Ashmole. Añ:1672.'[24] Fols 2-3 are in Ashmole's hand and contain the account of the manuscript's discovery. Thereafter until fol. 108 the manuscript is in Dee's hand, with the exception of fols 15, 16 and 46 which are in Ashmole's hand and fol. 99 which is mostly in Edward Kelly's hand. Fol. 87 is either in Dee's or in Kelly's hand, but being written in an unprecedented cipher it is not possible to define the authorship any more closely. Fols 109 to 169 are partly in cipher and are in the hand of William Shippen. The ink used in the manuscripts is either black or brown, except that certain characters at fol. 97 are written in red ink. Some parts of the MS may have once been in red ink which has since faded to a yellow-brown colour, as is indicated by a comparison of the colours in Ashmole's transcript of The Book of Enoch against the original.

That part of the manuscript which I have transcribed and which forms the second volume of this thesis occurs between fols 2 and 108 inclusive. I have, however, retained the folio numbering in pencil as it now exists in the MS. Hereafter references to 'the manuscript' will only signify that part which I have transcribed, unless otherwise stated. Dee's records of his magical dealings are divided into five books and an appendix to the fifth book. Title pages occur at fols 4, 16, 31, 44 and 60, that at fol. 16 being in Ashmole's hand. The title to the appendix to the fifth book is written at the top of fol. 91a.

When Ashmole received the papers he placed them in his own binding[25] and certain words were wholly or partially obscured by the binding, while others were lost through previous damage to the MS. Consequently the MS contains words in Ashmole's hand, usually in the left hand margin, replacing those rendered illegible by his binding. Many of the original words have since reappeared as a result of the rebinding by Sloane and some repetition of words has therefore ensued. Ashmole also paginated each leaf of Dee's MS,[26] beginning at Dee's prefatory explanation to the Actions (fol. 7a) and this pagination is given below. The only numbers in Dee's hand occur in the fourth book between fols 45a and 59a and these are given below in round brackets. The numbers in square brackets are those which Ashmole deleted after he discovered an error in his own sequence.

fols 1a-6b unnumbered.

fols 7a-14b numbered 1-16.

fols 15a-16b unnumbered.

fols 17a-18b numbered 19-22.

fols 19a unnumbered as a consequence of damage to the folio.

fols 19b-30a numbered 24-45.

fols 30b-31b unnumbered.

fols 32a-35a numbered 47-53.

fols 35b-38a numbered 54 [56]-59 [61].

fols 38b-39a numbered 60-61, the latter number being written over 63.

fol. 39b numbered 62 [64].

fols 40a-41b numbered 63 [65 67]-66 [67 69].

fol. 42a numbered only [69] and is damaged.

fols 42b-43a numbered 68 [70]-69 [71].

fols 43b-44b numbered 70-72.

fols 45a-45b numbered 75-76, recto also being numbered (2).

fols 46a-46b unnumbered.

fol. 47a numbered (3).

fols 47b-49b numbered 78-82.

fol. 50a numbered (6).

fols 50b-51b numbered 84-86.

fols 52a-59b numbered 87-102, rectos also being numbered (8) - (15).

fols 60a-60b unnumbered.

fols 61a-80a numbered 103-141 with signs of erasures.

fol. 80b numbered 142 [144].

fols 81a-81b unnumbered.

fols 82a-85a numbered 143 [145]-149 [151].

fol. 85b numbered 150.

fols 86a-86b numbered 151 [153]-152 [154].

fols 87a-96b numbered 153-172.

fols 97a-97b unnumbered.

fols 98a-98b numbered 173-174.

fols 99a-99b unnumbered.

fols 100a-108a numbered 175-191.

fol. 108b unnumbered.

Of the six non-folio leaves bound in the manuscript only that at fol. 87 is paginated and included within the numbering sequence. Of the title pages those at fols 4, 31 and 60 are neither paginated nor included within the numbering sequence, while those at fols 16 and 44 are paginated.

c) Missing Leaves

Despite the attentions of the Jones's maid, the five books and appendix of Dee's magical dealings are nearly complete. There are papers missing at the beginning of the second book, possibly at the end of the second and third books, and at the beginning of the fourth. The five books of the manuscripts cover Actions between the following dates:

Book 1: 22 December 1581 - 15 March 1582

Book 2: 19? March 1582 - 21 March 1582

Book 3: 28 April 1582 - 29 April 1582 and 4 May 1582[27]

Book 4: 15 November 1582 - 21 November 1582

Book 5: 23 March 1583 - 18 April 1583

Appendix: 20 April 1583 - 23 May 1583

The second book begins in the middle of an Action and the extant first leaf of that book is damaged in the upper half. Ashmole notes at fol. 15a that concerning Book 2 the 'beginning thereof is vtterly perished' but gives a more detailed conjecture in his transcript. There he remarks that 'the first Leafe, and the vpper part of the second is vtterly perished' (Sloane MS 3677, 22a). There is no conclusive evidence as to the number of folios missing from the beginning of this book and Ashmole's note concerning the first leaf may only refer to the title page which is now in his hand (fol. 16). Dee had evidently received some instruction for the making of a seal, but whether in one or more missing folios or in a private vision of Kelly's (he often had such), it is not possible to determine. There might be much or little wanting from the beginning of this book, but according to Ashmole's estimation, based on the size of the extant first folio, there are only sixteen lines destroyed by the damage to each side of fol. 17 (see Sloane MS 3677, 24a and 24b).

Ashmole also conjectures that there are some papers missing between the second and third books, probably belonging to the second book, 'for in the begining of the Action of 28 of April Michael taxeth and threatneth Δ [Dee] for his slacknes in not preparing things appointed by him (which Δ excuseth with inability) but there is no mention of such appointment in the Action of 21 of March' (Sloane MS 3677, 23a). Kelly had left for London on 22 March[28] but there is no reference in any of Dee's writings as to the date of his return. The second book shows no obvious signs of any papers having been removed from its end and the third book is certainly intact at its beginning, bearing a title page in Dee's hand immediately followed by the beginning of the Action noted on that title page. It therefore seems more likely that the instructions which Dee failed to carry out and for which he was consequently admonished were contained in such papers as are wanting at the beginning of the second book.[29]

It is very likely that the third book is not extant in its entirety. Ashmole reached the conclusion that this was so on account of the note on the title page of the fourth book which reads 'post reconciliationem Kellianam' ('after the reconciliation with Kelly') but his reasoning was in error. Kelly was first introduced to Dee under the name of Edward Talbot and the fourth book is the first time that he is noted under the initials of 'E.K.' rather than 'E.T.'[30] Ashmole at this time failed to realise that Talbot and Kelly were the same person, even though the style and tone of Dee's assistant remain the same and E.K. shows an extraordinary familiarity with all the information and the magical system that has come through the scrying of E.T. Ashmole notes that on 4 May 1582 'Mr. Talbot went away from Mortlack as soone as his account of 4 of May was finished, and deserted the imployment' and argues that in order for some reconciliation to have been made with Kelly before the beginning of the fourth book, Kelly must have been previously employed by Dee (Sloane MS 3677, 23a). It is curious that Ashmole did not connect Kelly with Talbot here since he does note that 'E.T. was unwilling to proceed as Skryer any further, because Michael willed him to marry and tis probable he here left off' (Sloane MS 3677,23a). It makes greater sense to see Talbot and Kelly as the same man and this unwillingness shown on 4 May as the rupture that needed reconciliation than to suppose a change of scryer from Talbot to a different individual by the name of Kelly to whose previous employment and desertion there is not a single reference. Nevertheless Ashmole failed to make the necessary connection between Talbot and Kelly and so postulated some missing Actions.

Yet in spite of Ashmole's erroneous reasoning, Dee's Diary does suggest that there might indeed be some Actions missing between 4 May and 15 November 1582. On 4 May 'Mr. Talbot went', presumably to collect some books that were in the possession of Lord Monteagles (see 24b, 44 - 25a, 4). There is no reference to any acrimony between Dee and Kelly, except in so far as Kelly was angered by an instruction from the angels on 29 April that he should take a wife, (39b, 45). Although he 'wold not willingly now deale' with the angels nor 'put of his hat in any prayer to god' (42a, 3-5), Kelly continued to act as scryer for the Action of May 4 which ends with a promise of a 'next Call' or Action (43b, 15). Although Kelly left on 4 May in mistrust of the angels, it is not certain that he broke the relationship with Dee at this precise time. Dee generally noted arguments between himself and Kelly either in his diary or in the records of the Actions,[31] and that Kelly left in order to obtain the books held by Lord Monteagles is indicated by Dee's Diary entry of 13 July 1582, which reads:

> Mr. Talbot cam abowt 3 of the clok afternone, with whom I had some wordes of unkendnes: we parted frendely: he sayd that the Lord Morley had the Lord Mountegle his bokes. He promised me some of Doctor Myniver's bokes.

Yet although Kelly was evidently still performing services for Dee, he may have refused to continue as his scryer. There certainly seems to have been some kind of break between them between 4 May and 13 July since an erased note in Dee's diary states that on 6 May 1582 Dee's wife Jane was 'in a mervaylous rage at 8 of the cloke at night, and all that night, and next morning till 8 of the cloke, melancholike and ch<ided me> terrible for..... that come to me only honest and lerned men' and that 'by Mr. Clerkson his help was <pacified> '.[32] Since she was pacified with the help of Clerkson, who had first introduced Kelly, under the name of Talbot, to the Dee household,[33] and her complaint was that Dee was involved with dishonest men, it is probable that the cause of her anger was Kelly. If Kelly had refused to act as Dee's scryer at this time, Jane Dee may have berated her husband then in the hope of preventing any similar kind of man being taken into the household, or her anger at some action of Kelly's may have caused the scryer to forsake the household feeling much aggrieved at his treatment. Evidently some reconciliation was made by 13 July, however, and there is no further reference in the Diary to Kelly until 22 November, seven days after the extant Actions had begun again. That there was business between Dee and Kelly which is not recorded is shown by the fact that Dee's Diary entry of 13 July still uses the name of Talbot while the first extant Action thereafter uses the name Kelly without explanation for the change.

Nothing points conclusively to there being any papers missing from this third book, but neither is there any conclusive evidence that the book is complete as it now stands. The third book ends in an unsatisfactory way, the Action of 4 May bearing the superscription 'Liber 4', (42a, 1) while the fourth book is begun again with the Action of 15 November 1582. Whether the promise of further Actions given in the Action of 4 May and implied by the title of 'Liber 4' remains apparently unfulfilled until 15 November because Kelly refused to act any more as scryer or because part of the third book is missing cannot be satisfactorily answered. The six month gap is the longest period in the manuscript during which there are no Actions recorded and if Kelly consistently refused to serve, one would expect Dee to have made some attempt to procure another scryer. That he apparently made no such attempt[34] suggests the probability that he may at some time during that period have prevailed upon Kelly to continue with the Actions, a rupture between them occurring towards the latter end of the period, perhaps connected with the revelation that Kelly had been using a false name.

The fourth book evidently lacks the first leaf, since Dee numbered the recto of each folio and the first extant leaf begins with the number 2 (45a). The four month period between books four and five was a result of Kelly spending the winter in Gloucestershire. On 22 November he went to Blockley at the foot of the Cotswold hills and was supposed to return in ten days (Diary). That he did not was probably partly a result of his own inclinations and partly a result of the difficulties of winter travel. When he did return be brought with him certain clues as to the location of some buried treasure, supposedly having been led to these clues by a spiritual creature, and this no doubt assuaged any wrath that Dee may have intended to vent upon him for his prolonged absence. The fifth book and its appendix are complete and there is only a five day period between the last Action of the manuscript and the beginning of TFR, such a gap being not uncommon between consecutive Actions.

1. Evidence for the manuscript being a fair copy may be found in some of the mistakes and corrections Dee made (see for instance 39a, MN34 and 54a, 15) and in a statement to this effect at 98b, 15.

2. The story of the discovery and loss of the manuscripts is contained in Ashmole's preface to Sloane MS 3188 (fols 2-3). The use of old papers for this purpose was a common culinary practice and a similar misfortune befell many of the manuscripts in the possession of the eighteenth-century scholar William Warburton (see W. W. Greg, 'The Bakings of Betsy', W.W. Greg, Collected Papers, edited by J. C. Maxwell (Oxford 1966), pp. 48-74).

3. A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee (A Mathematician of Great Fame in Q. Eliz. and King James their Reignes) and Some Spirits, edited by Meric Casaubon (London 1659), hereafter abbreviated to TFR. The manuscripts from which this volume was printed are now BM Cotton Appendix XLVI (2 volumes).

4. Elias Ashmole, The Institution, Laws and Ceremonies of the Most Noble Order of the Garter (London 1672).

5. Ashmole's transcript of Sloane MS 3188 is now Sloane MS 3677. His transcripts of the other four books are now Sloane MS 3678.

6. See Elias Ashmole, his Autobiographical and Historical Notes, his Correspondence, and Other Contemporary Sources Relating to his Life and Work, edited by C. H. Josten, 5 vols (Oxford 1966), I, 183.

7. Wood's account of John Dee is appended to his life of Arthur Dee (John Dee's son) in Athenae Oxoniensis, edited by Philip Bliss, 4 vols (London 1813-1820), III, 288-292.

8. Josten, Elias Ashmole, III, 1288-1289 (Wood MS F. 39, fol. 59). The letter is dated 30 December 1672.

9. This was based upon Meric Casaubon's own annotated copy of the work. Ashmole's copy is now Ashmole MS 580 and Casaubon's copy is also in the Bodleian Library, shelf-mark D. 8. 14 art.

10. See Josten, Elias Ashmole, I, 1301 and IV, 1891, n. 1.

11. Josten, Elias Ashmole, IV, 1828-1832. The will is dated 6 September 1686, six years before Ashmole's death.

12. See Bibliotheca Ashmoliana, A Catalogue of the Library of the Learned and Famous Elias Ashmole Esq., in the BM collection of sale catalogues 1680-1696, shelf-mark S-C 92319.

13. Josten, Elias Ashmole, I, 185, n. 1.

14. Sir Joseph Jekyll (1663-1739) entered the Middle Temple in 1680, was called to the bar in 1687 and was appointed Master of the Rolls on 13 July 1717.

15. What led Madden to this conclusion is not clear, but since the note refers to Ashmole making a copy from the MS belonging to Cotton, Madden may have confused this MS with Sloane MS 3189.

16. Ashmole writes that he borrowed the original from Sir John Cotton in order to make his own transcript (Ashmole MS 422, fol. 1b). It must be assumed that he did return the original, having no further need for it.

17. These MSS were not catalogued in Thomas Smith's Catalogus Librorum Manuscriptorum Bibliothecae Cottonianae (Oxford 1696), but were noted as Cotton Appendix XXVI No. 5007 in the Planta catalogue of 1802. They were then bound in three volumes and described as 'a quantity of folio paper books of his [Dee's] own writing, consisting of many parts of his Liber mysteriorum, and conferences with angels'. It is possible that the Book of Enoch was one of these volumes, but since it is now in the Sloane collection, it almost certainly left the Cotton Library before the catalogue of 1802. The second flyleaf contains a partially torn note in an unknown hand that someone '[boug]ht this booke of Dr Biggs for a Guinea' and yet another hand on the following folio proclaims that 'Mr Jane Hulbert is my na[me]', these folios being later additions to those in Kelly's hand.

18. See John Aubrey, Letters written by Eminent Persons in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, 2 vols (London 1813), second volume in two parts, II part 1, 311.

19. See Josten, Elias Ashmole, II, 662-3, 731, 754-5; III, 1242, 1285, 1288-9; IV, 1293, 1298-1300, 1332, 1371-3, 1398, 1453, 1656-7.

20. Shippen's copy is now in the British Library, shelf-mark 719. m. 12.

21. Josten, Elias Ashmole, IV, 1453.

22. Sloane MS 3189, fol. 2a.

23. It was a common complaint of owners of libraries that borrowers were unwilling to return copies lent to them, although the owners themselves were often guilty of the same behaviour. Sir John Cotton asserted for instance that many works lent to John Selden were never returned (see Aubrey, Letters, I, 23). Similar complaints were voiced by both Dee and Ashmole.

24. Sloane MS 3188 goes up to the Action of 23 May 1583 and TFR begins at 28 May 1583, so the cause of this error in declaring that the manuscript continues until 30 May is inexplicable.

25. A note by Madden on the flyleaf of Sloane MS 3191 declares that 'this Volume formerly belonged to Ashmole and on the clasps of the old binding his coat of arms was impressed'. It is reasonable to assume that Sloane MS 3188 was formerly in a similar binding.

26. In his transcript Ashmole writes that 'he supplied that defect' of pagination 'in the Originall' (Sloane MS 3677, fol. 68a).

27. The Action of 4 May 1582 bears the marginal title 'Liber 4', but the Actions of 15-21 November 1582 are preceded by a title page denoting them as Book IV (fol. 44a). Dee thought to begin Book IV on 4 May but there followed a rupture between him and Kelly and Book IV was begun again after their reconciliation.

28. See the entry for this date in The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee, edited by James Orchard Halliwell, Camden Society Publications, vol XIX (London 1842), hereafter abbreviated to Diary.

29. The beginning of the second book (fol. 17a) does not give any real indication of the nature of the missing material.

30. At fol. 11a, 7, 'E.K.' appears to be written under 'E.T.', but the error might be sheer coincidence.

31. See for instance Sloane MS 3188, 91a, 4-19.

32. This entry is not recorded in Halliwell's edition and is to be found in the original diary which consisted of the Ephemerides of Stadius for 1554-1600 (Cologne 1570) and of Maginus for 1581-1620 (Venice 1582), in the margins of which were written respectively the memoranda which constitute the Diary from January 1577 to December 1600 and from September 1586 to April 1601. These volumes are now Ashmole MSS 487 and 488. The entry for 6 May 1582, part of which is illegible, is to be found in Ashmole MS 487, sig. Hhhhh 2v.

33. See Diary, 8 March 1582 and 9 March 1582.

34. On 19 June Dee was visited by his former scryer Barnabas Saul, but there seems to have been no attempt at reconciliation, for Dee 'chyd him for his manifold untrue reports' (Diary).

II

BIOGRAPHICAL DETAILS

a) John Dee

The two principal sources of Dee's life are of his own composition. They are his diary and the autobiographical exposition that he prepared for the Queen's commissioners in 1592 in an effort to gain redress for 'the intollerable extremetie of the injuries and indignities' which his name had suffered at the hands of the populace for a number of years. This document was fully entitled The Compendious Rehearsal of John Dee his Dutifull Declaracion, and Proof of the Course and Race of his Studious Lyfe, for the Space of Halfe an Hundred Yeares, Now (by God's Favour and Helpe) Fully Spent, and of the Very Great Injuries, Damages, and Indignities, which for these Last Nyne Years He hath in England Sustained, (Contrary to Her Majesties Very Gracious Will and Express Commandment), Made unto the Two Honourable Commissioners, By Her Most Excellent Majestie Thereto Assigned, According to the Intent of the Most Humble Supplication of the Said John, Exhibited to Her Most Gracious Majestie at Hampton-Court. Anno 1592. Nov.9.[1] Other sources are to be found in the writings of Ashmole and Aubrey and in the biography in Thomas Smith's Vitae quorundam eruditissimorum et illustrium virorum (London 1707). Since Smith's account only three works have attempted to give any comprehensive and accurate assessment of the whole of Dee's life: Charlotte Smith's biography John Dee (London 1909); I.R.F. Calder's unpublished University of London doctoral dissertation John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist (1952); and more recently John Dee by Peter J. French (London 1972).[2] Since my concern is with Dee in relation to his magical dealings between 1581 and 1583, I propose to do little more than give the straightforward facts of his life and major works here.

Dee was born on 13 July 1527 in London, the son of Rowland Dee, a gentleman server to Henry VIII, and Johanna Wild, daughter of William Wild.[3] Dee's early studies were in London and at the chantry school in Chelmsford and in November 1542 he entered St. John's College, Cambridge, graduating with the degree of B.A. in the early part of 1546. He was then elected a Fellow of Trinity College and appointed as the Under-Reader of Greek. At a students' performance of the play Eirene ('Peace') by Aristophanes he devised a mechanical beetle which flew 'up to Jupiter's pallace, with a man and his basket of victualls on her back: whereat was great wondring, and many vaine reportes spread abroad of the meanes how that was effected' (CR, pp. 5-6). In a society in which mathematics was regarded with great suspicion,[4] Dee's mechanical wonder excited rumours of supernatural powers being employed, rumours that were to plague his life to the end. In May 1547 he made his first journey abroad spending several months in the Low Countries in conference with 'some learned men, and chiefely mathematicians, as Gemma Frisius, Gerardus Mercator, Gaspar à Mirica, Antonius Gogava, &c.' (CR, p.5) and he returned the same year with two great globes made by Mercator and an astronomer's armillary ring and staff of brass, devised by Frisius, all of which he later left to Trinity College, Cambridge.[5]

In 1548 Dee received the degree of Master of Arts and entered as a student at the University of Louvain in the summer of that year, remaining there until 15 July 1550. His reputation for learning spread far and wide[6] and when a few days after arriving in Paris on 20 July 1550, he gave readings on Euclid's 'Elements Geometricall, Mathematicè, Physicè, et Pythagoricè; a thing never done publiquely in any University of Christendome' (CR, p.7), his audience, mostly older than himself, was so large that the mathematical schools could not hold them and many were forced to listen at the windows. Following these lectures Dee became acquainted with many of the best minds on the continent,[7] with whom in later years he maintained a steady correspondence, but despite an offer of 200 French crowns yearly to be one of the French King's Readers in mathematics, he returned to England in 1551.

In December 1551 Dee obtained through John Cheke (later knighted) an introduction to William Cecil, then Secretary and later Lord Treasurer of England, and received from King Edward VI an annual royal pension of 100 crowns, possibly in response to two manuscript works which Dee had dedicated to the young king, De usu globi coelestis (1550) and De nubium, solis, lunae, ac reliquorum planetarum, etc.(1551).[8] On 19 May 1553 this pension was exchanged for the rectory of Upton-upon-Severn in Worcestershire, which despite Dee's reference to it as a 'bettering' (CR, p. 10) proved in the end to be a poor bargain. He never lived at the rectory and even when the rectory of Long Leadenham in Lincolnshire was added later in the year, he received only £80 per annum.[9] At the end of February 1552 Dee entered the service of the Earl of Pembroke,[10] writing two treatises at the request of the Duchess of Northumberland,[11] and apparently acted as tutor to the Dudley family, among whom was Robert Dudley, the future Earl of Leicester, with whom Dee ever remained a close friend, according to Anthony à Wood.[12]

When Mary Tudor succeeded to the throne in 1553 Dee was requested to calculate her nativity. He also cast the horoscope of the young Princess Elizabeth, then residing at Woodstock, and entered into correspondence with her. On 28 May 1555 an order was made by the Privy Council for his apprehension and for a search to be made for papers and books relating to him.[13] According to a letter written by one Thomas Martyn on 8 June that year Dee was imprisoned on the plea of a certain George Ferrys who asserted that Dee had struck one of his children blind and killed another by magical means and that Dee was attempting to enchant the Queen with his casting of horoscopes.[14] He was cleared of any suspicion of treason in the Star Chamber but was handed over to Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London, for ecclesiastical interrogation. Bonner failed to find any chargeable fault in Dee's religious attitudes and an order was made for his release on 19 August 1555, albeit he was 'first bound in recognizance for ready appearance and the good abearing for about some four months after' (CR, p. 20). Even so Dee was present at the examination of John Philpot on 19 November of that year and may even have acted as Bonner's chaplain.[15]

On 15 January 1556 Dee presented to Queen Mary A Supplication ... for the Recovery and Preservation of Ancient Writers and Monuments, in which he requested that a national library be founded by the state.[16] No action was taken upon this request and in consequence Dee was to spend a vast amount of time and money on his own library in his house at Mortlake. Throughout his life Dee's financial position frequently reached the point of desperation, and undoubtedly the three most costly items of expenditure were his library, his laboratories and his continental travelling, although the latter was sometimes financed by patrons eager to see the Philosophers' Stone. Dee listed the contents of his library in 1583,[17] by which time there were nearly four thousand items 'the fourth part of which were the written bookes' and he estimated the value at two thousand pounds (CR, p. 27). The growth of this library was a continuing occupation throughout Dee's years at home and abroad.

After the death of Mary Tudor, Dee was invited to predict an auspicious day for the coronation of Elizabeth and as the years went by, his choice of 14 January 1559 must have given support to his reputation for learning in spite of continuing rumours of dark dealing. Autographed books that belonged to Dee show that he was lodging in London in 1555, 1557 and 1558, but his exact whereabouts are not known. Soon after her accession Elizabeth invited him to her service at Whitehall, Dee's friendship with Robert Dudley probably being primarily responsible, and he received the first of many unfulfilled promises of preferment.[18] Before Christmas 1562 he once again left for the Continent, however, to arrange the printing of works already in manuscript. On 16 February 1563 he wrote to Cecil from Antwerp requesting leave to stay abroad since there were printers' delays and he wished to continue his researches. Between then and the appearance of his Monas hieroglyphica[19] on 31 March 1564 Dee travelled to Zurich, Urbino and Rome, Pressburg in Hungary and back to Antwerp. He left Antwerp in the company of the Marchioness of Northampton, who had gone to Flanders to consult physicians about a cure for cancer,[20] and they reached England by 14 June 1564(CR,p.19).

Sometime in 1565 Dee married Katherine Constable, widow of a London grocer,[21] and settled at Mortlake in a house belonging to his mother.[22] There he was to carry on his researches, with occasional interruptions, for nearly twenty years, adding rooms and acquiring adjacent properties. Mortlake was close to the Court, the journey being easily made to London by river, and Dee probably never received all the promised benefices because the Queen preferred to keep him close at hand.[23] In 1571 Dee made a journey to the Dukedom of Lorraine on some of the Queen's business and upon falling dangerously ill on his return, received the Queen's gratitude in the form of two of her own physicians being despatched to him from the Court (CR, p. 12). Such good fortune did not attend his wife, however, for she was laid in the ground on 10 March 1575 (CR, p. 17).

The year 1570 had seen the publication of the first English translation, by Sir Henry Billingsley, of Euclid's Elements of Geometry to which Dee added extensive notes and a 'Mathematicall Preface'. Increasing attention is being paid to the influence of this work in its own time, particularly the 'Preface',[24] but perhaps the true extent to which this work caused a revival of the Vitruvian arts in England will never be known. The 'Preface' outlines the entire state of science as it was known in the sixteenth century and advocates a form of education based upon the quadrivium, thus marking Dee as an educational reformer in line with Robert Recorde,[25] whom he succeeded as the leading scientific thinker of the age. The essential importance of Dee's 'Preface' is that it offered not only a mystical appreciation of the science of numbers, which may also be seen in the Actions with spirits, but also practical help to the 'Common Artificer' (sig. A4r). The Preface was a handbook of the scientific arts to be used in all walks of life where things were to be constructed, Euclid's text providing the method, and the classical rules of harmony and proportion providing the guiding spirit. Characteristically the work also contains a long personal defence of Dee's own reputation (sigs A1v-A2r) against those who saw the devil in the laws of Nature that they did not understand:

> And for these, and such like marveilous Actes and Feates, Naturally, Mathematically, and Mechanically, wrought and contrived: ought any honest Student, and Modest Christian Philosopher, be counted, and called a Conjurer? (sig. Alv)

While Dee did turn to more occult sciences, it cannot be over-emphasised that he was ever anxious to further the prosperity of the nation in the most practical manner.

Seven years later a work that might have been equally influential was ready for the press. Dee had spent most of 1576 writing a series of volumes under the title of General and Rare Memorials pertayning to the Perfect Arte of Navigation (hereafter GRM). The first volume was dedicated to Christopher Hatton and bore the title The British Monarchy, or Hexameron Brytannicum and was printed in 1577,[26] while the second volume, The British Complement of the Perfect Art of Navigation, was never printed and is no longer extant, with the result that nothing is known of Dee's invention of the 'paradoxal cumpas', an exposition of which was contained therein.[27] The third and fourth volumes were likewise never printed, but only the fourth survives, being entitled The Great Volume of Famous and Rich Discoveries.[28] The title page of GRM declares that it was 'first published 24 yeres after the Invention thereof', so Dee first conceived the idea in 1553 when Queen Mary was still on the throne. The first volume of GRM is primarily concerned with putting forward proposals for increasing Britain's sea-power, not only for the purposes of imperial expansion but also for fishery protection, and Dee advocates the establishment of 'a Petty Navy Royall, of Threescore Tall ships', of 160 to 200 tons burden, these to be manned by those who could not show security of employment and abode. The navy was to be financed from taxes, concerning which and other details such as victualling Dee made very detailed proposals.[29] This small navy was to operate in a defensive and protective role, safeguarding all British domestic sea-interests. Dee may therefore be regarded 'as the literary pioneer of the claims to the sovereignty of the sea which were put forth by England in the seventeenth century'.[30]

The second volume was according to Dee's own account 'a great booke, in which are contained our Queene Elisabeth her tables gubernautick for longitudes and latitudes finding most easily and speedily, yea, if neede be, without sight of sun, moon, or star: with many other new and needefull inventions gubernautik' (CR, p.25). It was never published because the figures and tables it contained made the cost of printing prohibitive (see GRM, sig. E4r). The third volume was evidently of a less mechanical nature, probably dealing with such occult aspects as astrological influence and angelic governance,[31] and was 'vtterly suppressed or deliuered to Vulcan his Custody' (GRM, sig. E4v). Of Famous and Rich Discoveries is largely devoted to Oriental matters[32] and contained 'the History of King Solomon, every three yeares, his Ophirian voyage, with divers other rarities' (CR, p. 25). Yet even though the first volume did appear in print, no action was taken upon Dee's proposals any more than action had been taken upon his earlier supplication for the founding of a national library. Even as he was continuously disappointed financially as promised benefices went to others, so was he continuously disappointed in the execution of projects that could have made Britain a power to be envied throughout the world in the middle of the sixteenth century.

On 5 February 1578 Dee married again, the bride being Jane Fromond, a lady-in-waiting at the Court to Lady Howard of Effingham, wife of Charles Howard, the Lord Admiral. At the end of that year Dee undertook a journey to the Continent to consult one or more foreign physicians concerning an illness that the Queen was suffering. He sailed from Lee on 9 November (Diary) but the date of his return is not recorded. On 15 June 1579 Dee's mother surrendered the house and lands at Mortlake to Dee and his wife and on 13 July, Dee's fifty-second birthday, they presented her with a grandson Arthur (Diary).[33] During the following years Dee was to be much concerned with the proposed voyages for discovering a North-West passage and a new route to Cathay and his diary records meetings with Humphrey and Adrian Gilbert, John Davis and others involved in the planning and execution of the voyages of discovery made during Elizabeth's reign. On 10 September 1580 Humphrey Gilbert granted to Dee a patent 'for the royaltyes of discovery all to the North above the parrallell of the 50 degree of latitude' (Diary)and there is evidence that Dee may now have joined the Company of Merchant Venturers.[34] Such comings and goings of seamen, merchants and navigators continued until Dee began his prolonged stay on the Continent in 1583. The Queen was an occasional visitor, even making a special journey on 10 October 1580 to give Dee some words of comfort following the death of his mother (Diary) and reminding him that she had once called before on the day of his first wife's death (see CR, p. 17).

On 7 June 1581 Dee's second child Katherine was born, but strange events began to take place. On 3 August Dee noted that 'all the night very strange knocking and rapping in my chamber' was to be heard (Diary). This is undoubtedly connected with Dee's increasing involvement with magic, for the Action that opens Sloane MS 3188 and which is dated 22 December 1581 is described by Dee as one of the last he experienced with Barnabas Saul as his scryer.[35] Dee had noted on 25 May of that year that he 'had sight in λρυστελλω [a crystal] offerd' to him and he 'saw', though what it is that he saw is not clear. Barnabas Saul is first mentioned in the Diary on 8 October. The following day 'Barnabas Saul, lying in the ..... hall was strangly trubled by a spirituall creature abowt mydnight' (Diary). On 6 March 1582 Saul 'confessed that he neyther hard no saw any spirituall creature any more' and left the Dee household two days later. The same day Dee was introduced to Edward Kelly, who was to act as his scryer until 1588, but who was then passing under the name of Edward Talbot. For the next two years Dee was principally involved in continuing discussions with those concerned with the voyage of discovery for a North-West passage and with the Actions which are recorded in Sloane MS 3188. Dee was meanwhile graced with another son, Rowland, who was baptised on 2 February 1583 (Diary).

On 18 March 1583 Dee 'receyved salutation' through a 'Mr. North from Poland' from Albertus Alasco (sometimes called Lasky), Count Palatine of Siradia, who was one of the most powerful of the Polish nobles reconverted to Catholicism. Lasky came to London on 30 April or 1 May following,[36] proceeding to Winchester House, Southwark, where he took up lodgings. Dee met Lasky in the Earl of Leicester's chamber in the court at Greenwich on 13 May and five days later Lasky dined with Dee at Mortlake (Diary). Lasky soon became partially involved in Dee's magical dealings, visiting Dee again on 15 and 19 June, staying overnight on the latter date, and dining with Dee once more on 2 August, this time at the Queen's expense (CR, p. 13). On the advice of the angels 'appearing' in the magical Actions, plans were made for the entire Dee household to return to the Continent with Lasky,[37] and on 21 September Dee, his wife and children, Kelly and his wife,[38] and Lasky left Mortlake for the two ships waiting for them some seven or eight miles beyond Gravesend. The departure was of a rather secretive nature, since Lasky was under some suspicion from Walsingham and Burghley,[39] and none of the remaining party had permission to leave the country. After some difficulties they landed at Brill on 29 September, boarding a Dutch hoy at Rotterdam. By degrees, the Actions with spirits still taking place at various halts, they reached Stettin on Christmas morning.

Dee had left his property in the keeping of Nicholas Fromond, his brother-in-law, but placed too much trust in the latter's goodwill. Upon his return in 1589 he found himself bound to remonstrate with Fromond and make a new agreement for him 'to occupy as a tenant with better order' (Diary, 20 December 1589). He had committed his household goods to the care of his brother-in-law with the intention of returning within twenty months, but Fromond sold some of the goods in his care and failed to collect rents owing to Dee (CR, p. 31). Shortly after Dee had left England in 1583 Fromond proved himself powerless to prevent an unruly mob, inspired by rumours of Dee being in league with the devil, from breaking into the library at Mortlake and destroying some 500 books, much laboratory equipment, and various astronomical and mathematical instruments, including 'the paire of Gerardus Mercator his best Globes' (CR, pp. 27-32). Much of the damage was utterly irreparable, some books being 'not to be gotten for money at any mart, or in any stationer's shop, they being very rare and excellent good bookes' (CR, p.32).

From Stettin the party moved quickly to Posen, covering the two hundred miles in only four days. Then they turned south and on 3 February 1584 reached Lask, the Polish prince's own property. The Actions continued and Dee was advised by the angels to go and live in Cracow (TFR, p. 67). It was five weeks after this instruction that the party finally moved, there having been much delay on account of Lasky's having mortgaged his estate at Kesmark[40] and being required to repay the money, which he did not have, by 23 April. Cracow was reached on 13 March and after lodging for seven nights in a church, they moved to a house in St. Stephen Street, Dee and his family shortly being joined by Kelly and his wife, who appear to have been a little delayed (TFR, p. 72). Lasky had remained behind, but arrived in Cracow on 25 April, en route for Kesmark. He now intended to redeem the property there, but King Stephen of Poland and his Chancellor were both set against him. Lasky therefore requested Dee to accompany him to Rudolph II, the Emperor of Austria, to whose father Dee had dedicated Monas hieroglyphica. The angels took Lasky's part but Dee delayed seeing the Emperor because of the heavy cost (TFR, p. 182). On 1 August he set off for Prague to see the Emperor, arriving there on the ninth, now in the company of Kelly's brother Thomas and Edmund Hilton, the son of John Hilton of Fulham, from whom Dee had borrowed money some years before (Diary, 18 June 1577). John Hilton had requested Dee on 4 October 1579 that his two sons be allowed to resort to Dee's house, so Edmund would have been accustomed to the way of life of the Dee household, including the disappearance of Dee and a scryer to a chamber for many hours.

On 15 August 1584 Dee was settled in Prague at a house lent for his use by a Dr. Hageck, the house being situated by Bethlem in the old part of the city (TFR, p. 212). Dee's wife and children were still in Cracow, the first letter from her arriving on 21 August. Dee wrote to the Emperor on 17 August[41] and on 3 September received a letter granting him an audience. Dee immediately went to the castle and promptly gave a full account of himself. Such was his faith in the angelic utterances received through Kelly, that he told the Emperor to repent his sins and that the angels had commanded that all Dee's angelic dealings should be shown to him. Rudolph not unnaturally said that the time was not convenient and that he would read the accounts at some later date. On 12 September Rudolph wrote to Dee that a Dr. Curtius (Kurtzius) would act as an intermediary for arranging audiences and transmitting information and on 14 September Dee showed Curtius all his records of angelic dealings, which was not the wisest thing to do. There is some doubt about the honesty of Curtius and whether he did indeed pass on any information to the Emperor as he promised (TFR, p. 240). Dee also showed the fourth book (Sloane MS 3188, 44a - 59b) to the Spanish Ambassador at a dinner on 25 September. From these liberal displays of unorthodox religious activity probably arose the later trouble with the Papal Nuncio.

On 27 September Dee accused Curtius of being particularly unhelpful with regard to access to the Emperor, but upon being asked to release the Latin translations of the Actions, refused and promised to write a copy 'at leasure', which he probably did not do. Kelly meanwhile was voicing a desire to return to England (TFR, p. 247 & 254). On 8 October Dee's party was granted a passport of safe conduct for an indefinite time through all the Emperor's lands and Dee soon returned to Cracow to bring his family and goods on to Prague. He was back in Prague by 20 December and on 12 January 1585 moved to another house near the market-place in Old Prague. Dee's position was now rather dangerous. The angels no longer favoured Lasky, Curtius and Rudolph and the records of the Actions contain undefined statements of plotting and treachery (see TFR, p. 379). On 27 February Dee and the two Kellys rode to Limburg, six miles from Prague in great secrecy, but they were back in Prague by 14 March, when Dee's son Michael was baptised. Michael was always a sickly child and died on 13 July 1594.

On 5 April Dee and Kelly returned to Cracow and on 17 April Dee accompanied Lasky to see King Stephen of Poland. On 23 May another audience was granted and a few days later King Stephen was present at a couple of Actions (TFR, pp. 404-408). August saw the party back in Prague, Stephen having been unconvinced by the Actions he had witnessed that Dee's promises to make the Philosophers' Stone could prove fruitful.

Now a newcomer, Francesco Pucci, became associated with the magical experiments. Pucci had spent much time in England and had left the Catholic church, publicly maintaining an extreme form of Pelagianism, in which he claimed that all men are by nature in a state of salvation.[42] An angelic commandment resulted in Pucci re-entering the Catholic Church (TFR, pp. 413-417), but he was evidently living in Dee's house by 30 April 1586.[43] By this time some communication had arisen between Dee and William, Lord Rosenberg, and Dee was asking the angels whether Rosenberg ought to be admitted to the Actions (TFR, p. 419). On 6 May Dee journeyed to Leipzig, arriving on the eleventh, and on 14 May he wrote to Walsingham requesting that Thomas Digges might be sent to his side.[44] Dee had kept up a correspondence with the Queen and Walsingham during the last few years, but he was no longer in great favour in England and none of his requests bore fruit.

On 30 May Emperor Rudolph gave Dee and his company six days in which to leave Prague and so they journeyed to Erfurt. Pucci called on Dee and held out hopes that permission might be given for a return to Prague, for the new Papal Nuncio, the Bishop of Piacenza, was inclined to be more favourable than his predecessor Malaspina, with whom Dee had earlier run into trouble.[45] Pucci was in favour of Dee taking up the Nuncio's invitation to go to Rome, but it is quite clear that a charge of heresy awaited any arrival there. Pucci was probably trying to curry favour with the Church that he had once left and which still regarded him with some suspicion. Pucci consequently fell from favour with Dee and by the time that Dee's party arrived in Trebona[46] on 14 September, Rosenberg was the favourite and was admitted to the Actions by 14 October. In December Dee received an invitation from the Emperor of Russia to enter his Court and work in his service for a stipend of £2,000 sterling and a thousand roubles. For reasons of his own, perhaps a deep-seated loyalty to Elizabeth and England, to which he still intended to return, Dee refused the offer.

Kelly left for Prague on 30 December and commuted between Prague and Trebona frequently during the next three months, bringing money from Rosenberg on occasions. Lasky stayed at Trebona between 9 and 12 February 1587 and on 7 March sent Dee 3,300 ducats, probably through Kelly (Diary). Although the angels had cast doubt upon Lasky, he was still admitted to Dee's company as a friend, if no longer as one chosen by God for divine revelation. By 4 April Kelly was once more settled as part of the household and the Actions began again after some interruption. He was however anxious to be set free from the angelic demands made upon him and told Dee that he prayed at least once a day that he might 'no more have dealing to scry' (TFR, p.*3). The angels reproved him but granted his freedom and declared that the visionary ability would pass to Dee's son Arthur. Consequently on 15 April Arthur Dee, then seven years old, was placed in front of the crystal in which the visions were to be seen. At first Arthur did see something, a vision of two men with crowns appearing three times on different days, but he also saw pricks of light which Dee concluded were probably 'something of the Glass it self: as there were in it certain white spots' (TFR, p.*5). By Friday 17 April Arthur was declaring that he no longer saw anything in the stone, while Kelly claimed to have seen many spirits while praying with Arthur. The experiments with Arthur came to an end on 18 April when he fainted and Kelly resumed the office. Kelly received instructions concerning a new unity to exist between the four adults, that is Dee, Kelly and their wives, and there began one of the most curious episodes in the whole business.

Dee understood this unity to be spiritual but Kelly said that he understood something different and resolved to leave (TFR, p.*11). After much hesitation he expounded to Dee that the unity was to be a common sharing of everything, including wives. Dee rebuked the spirit, Madimi, that brought 'so hard and unpure a doctrine' and he and Kelly argued until early in the morning. Dee's faith in the angels was such, however, that he was finally persuaded,[47] and told his wife that he could 'see that there is no other remedy, but as hath been said of our cross-matching, so it must needs be done' (TFR, p. *13). Jane was horrified but succumbed to her husband with the words: 'I trust that though I give myselfe thus to be used, that God will turn me into a stone before he would suffer me to receive any shame or inconvenience'.[48] Both she and Kelly's wife demanded a repetition of the Action, but the answer was still the same. Thus on 3 May 1587 a document was drawn up and signed by all four partners which stated that they should hold all things in common with no intention of impurity or guilt and that they should tread under foot all doubting that the true power of the remission of sins was from the Creator (TFR, pp. *20-*21). The outcome of this cross-matching is not recorded in TFR, but an erased passage in the original manuscripts shows that a sexual relationship did take place, at least on the part of Kelly. In an Action of 23 May Kelly saw a man on a white horse (signified in the MS by ▻) and the following dialogue took place:

▻ Kelley: was thy brothers wife obedyent & humble vnto the E K ——she was ▻ Dee was thy brothers wife obedyent vnto the
△ ——— she was obedyent.
▻ Even as you wer, one obedyent vnto an other: Euen so shall the lord deal w/th/ you.
E K——he is rydden away: he semeth to ride throwgh a great feelde
E K—— Here is now cōme Madimi
▻ Dee dost thow ly, or say truth, in saying she was obedyent——
△ ——I cownted her obedyent for that, she did: Wherein she thowght her obedience to consist: for that she did not cōme after, as I thowght she wold, she might seme in some part disobedyent: but if it offendeth not god, it offendeth not me: and I beseche god it did not offend him.[49]

Kelly's motives throughout the whole business are obscure. The angels had declared in an Action of 4 April that his wife was barren and there is evidence of hiS having taken a violent dislike to her.[50] Whether the angelic voice commanding the cross-matching was part of a fraud on Kelly's part or whether he really believed that he heard such a demand matters little. The day after Dee drew up the first draft of the document signed by the four, Kelly wrote an article washing his hands of the whole matter and on 20 May Kelly cut Dee's document in two, retaining half. Whether this was to make Dee adhere to the covenant by threatening exposure or whether it was to ensure that Kelly's name would not be found on such an incriminating document is not clear. Either way this whole episode signalled the approaching end of the Actions with spirits for a protracted period. The manuscripts end the series of Actions with Kelly on 23 May 1587 and there are no other records of scrying until 20 March 1607, when Kelly was dead and Dee was using his servant Bartholomew Hickman as scryer. Whether there are some records missing after 23 May it is not possible to say, but Dee's Diary shows that Kelly became increasingly involved with alchemical experiments. It seems likely that attention was turned from angelic revelation to the making of the Philosophers' Stone, concerning which the angels had already delivered much information.[51]

Kelly was frequently riding to Prague and in October a certain John Carpio, who had joined them at Trebona, 'did begyn to make furnaces over the gate, and he used...rownd bricks, and for the yern [iron] pot was contented now to use the lesser bricks, 60 to make a furnace' (Diary, 28 & 29 October 1587). This Carpio was to leave on 10 December on the order of the Emperor 'to marry the mayden he had trubbled' in Prague, returning in April with his new wife. Kelly was by now established either in his own lodgings or in separate apartments in the Trebona house (see Diary, 13 January 1588). On 8 February 1588 Kelly sent for Dee to see how he distilled 'sericon', so he was evidently working separately and in some secrecy from Dee. The relationship between them was foundering and on 10 April Dee wrote to Kelly and his wife two 'charitable letters, requiring at theyr hands mutual charity' (Diary) for Kelly was undermining Dee's influence with Rosenberg, who himself had much influence with the Emperor. The rest of the year saw Kelly demonstrating his alchemical skill to Dee, but ever using him unkindly, and Dee was no longer favoured by his erstwhile patrons. Kelly had more to offer them in the shape of the promised Philosophers' Stone. On 15 September Dee complained in his diary: 'the Lord Chamberlain cam to Trebona, and went away on the 17th. The rancor and dissimulation now evident to me, God deliver me! I was not sent for'.

Dee, with an addition to the family, a son Theodore born on 28 February, was resolved to return to England and on 10 November 1588 he wrote to the Queen, congratulating her on the defeat of the Armada and requesting leave to offer his services to her once again.[52] On 4 February 1589 Dee delivered to Kelly various equipment and books for Rosenberg 'and he thereuppon gave me dischardg in writing of his own hand subscribed and sealed' (Diary), for Kelly was still being paid £50 a year for serving Dee.[53] Rosenberg was away and did not bother to make a personal farewell, dispatching his man Menschik to see Dee on his way. Dee left Trebona on 11 March, but in style with fifteen horses, three coaches, and an escort of twenty-four soldiers from Diepholt to Oldenburg, and six musketeers from Oldenburg to Bremen, all at a cost of some £600 (CR, p. 32). He was in Bremen by 19 April where he stayed until 19 November, mingling with the learned men of the region. He took ship for England and reached Gravesend on 2 December, six years after his departure and now alone with his family. He always hoped that Kelly would return (see Diary, 23 January 1590) but his erstwhile scryer was to meet his end in the Bohemia in which he had chosen to chance his fortune.

Dee returned to his house at Mortlake, to the ruined library and the despoiled laboratories. On 5 March 1590 his daughter Madimia was born. Dee's Diary now contains little more than domestic and financial matters and notes of his writing to Kelly, who was not performing the service of a friend to Dee (see Diary, 5 June 1590). Dee was in desperate financial straits. He had received no money from his two rectories while he was abroad, nor was there any awaiting him on his return. The Queen promised him something 'to kepe Christmas with', but riding by his door on 4 December declared that 'there was never promisse made but it was broken or kept', although two days later she sent him £50. By 21 January 1591 Dee recorded that he was 'utterly put owt of hope for recovering the two parsonages by the Lord Archbishop and the Lord Threasorer' (Diary) and he was forced to sell some plate. Throughout the year he was put in hope of rewards that never materialised, as with 'the jentle answer of the Lord Threasorer that the Queene wold have me have something at this promotion of bishops at hand' that he noted on 20 December. New Year's Day 1592 saw the birth of yet another dependant, his third daughter Francis.

By November 1592 Dee's state was so desperate that on the ninth he drew up a supplication which Lady Warwick presented the same day to the Queen at Hampton Court, begging for a personal audit of and investigation into his affairs (CR, p. 3). This was the Compendious Rehearsal and on 22 November two commissioners appointed by the Queen, Sir John Wolley, Secretary for the Latin Tongue to the Queen, and Sir Thomas Gorges of the Privy Council, sat in Dee's 'late library-roome' and heard Dee read the document (CR, p. 4). The supplication contains towards the end a chapter containing 'sundry good reasons, why' Dee should 'rather desire Sainct Crosse's, than any other living, fee, or dignity of like value to be had in any other place' (CR, p. 30). Dee's principal reasons for desiring the Mastership of Saint Cross embraced finance, privacy, and the potential for housing books, instruments, laboratories, and even a printing press (CR, p. 40). The immediate result of the Compendious Rehearsal was a gift of 100 marks from the Queen (Diary, 1st December 1592), and on 21 May 1594 his suit was 'graunted after a sort' by the Queen 'but referred all to the Lord of Canterbury' (Diary). By then however, Dee was having recurrent attacks of 'a great fit of the stone' in his kidneys (Diary, 31 March and 15 June 1594). Dee decided to support his supplication to the Queen with a brief version of the Compendious Rehearsal to Archbishop Whitgift and in 1594 or 1595 the Archbishop was presented with A Letter Containing a Most Briefe Discourse Apologeticall, with a Plaine Demonstration, and Feruent Protestation, for the Lawfull, Sincere, Very Faithfull and Christian Course, of the Philosophicall Studies and Exercises, of a Certaine Studious Gentleman: An Ancient Seruant to her Most Excellent Maiesty Royall.[54] Everything fell through, however, and on 29 June 1594, Dee wrote in his diary:

> After I had hard the Archbishop his answers and discourses, and that after he had byn the last Sonday at Tybald's with the Quene and Lord Threasorer, I take myself confounded for all suing or hoping for anything that was. And so adiew to the court and courting tyll God direct me otherwise! The Archbishop gave me a payre of sufferings to drinke. God be my help as he is my refuge! Amen.

As if this was not enough to bear, his son Michael fell ill on 6 July and on 13 July 'did give up the ghost' (Diary).

In January the following year, however, Archbishop Whitgift was pressing the Queen to grant Dee the Wardenship of Christ's College, Manchester, as Dr. William Chadderton, the incumbent and Bishop of Chester, was to be promoted to the see of Lincoln. Sir John Wolley presented the bill to Elizabeth on 5 February 1592, but she deferred signing. She did finally put her name to the bill on 18 April and on 25, 26 and 27 May it passed the Signet, the Privy Seal, and the Great Seal (Diary).[55] The future at last held some kind of security for Dee and his family, which was increased on 14 August by the birth of another daughter, baptised Margaret on the twenty-seventh. Dee's house continued to see a succession of visitors, but preparations were under way for the northward move and on 15 February 1596 he arrived in Manchester.

The affairs of the College were in some disarray and Dee began to set them in order. A Royal Commission was appointed and on 18 June 'the commission for the colledge [was] sent to London to be engrossed in the Duchy office' (Diary). Dee's diary for the Manchester years record various controversies between himself and the curates under him. Dee had always stipulated that he wanted no post which bore the responsibility for the cure of souls and his interests in the college were strictly temporal. His library was in much demand, however, and it is not surprising that he records lending such works as John Wier's De praestigiis daemonum, the Fustis daemonum and Flagellum daemonum of Hierom Menghi, and the Malleus maleficarum.[56] Lancashire was renowned for witches and witch-trials. Disputes and difficulties over the College lands eroded Dee's income and by 17 February 1597 Dee was compelled to borrow money again and sell some of his plate, such as his 'silver tankard with the cover, all dubble gilt, of the Cowntess of Herford's gift to Francis her goddaughter' and Dee's daughter (see Diary).

By the beginning of 1598 Dee had four lawsuits on his hands[57] and the troubles at the College continued. The diary ceases abruptly on 11 March 1598 and does not resume again until 10 June 1600. There are no records of Dee's life during this period, but he undoubtedly spent some of the time in London, since the first entry of 1600 records his setting off from London for Manchester again. He probably made a personal journey to represent to the Privy Council the terrible state of affairs at Manchester, where the College had become virtually 'no college'.[58] Another commission sat in the College chapter house on 3 July 1600, but Dee's problems did not only concern the affairs of the College. He records that on 11 September commissioners from the Bishop of Chester 'did call me before them in the church abowt thre of the clok after none, and did deliver to me certayn petitions put up by the fellows against me to answer before the 18th of this month' (Diary). By the end of the year Dee was again forced to borrow money against his plate (see Diary, 20 December 1600). The diary closes on 6 April 1601 and there is no further record of Dee's life save a few fragments at the end of TFR, concerned with scrying for treasure and stolen goods, and certain information gathered from acquaintances of Dee by John Aubrey and Ashmole.

Dee's son Arthur married in 1602 and settled near his parents at first, but it can have been little consolation to Dee. With the death of Queen Elizabeth on 23 March 1603 he lost his last patron and protector. King James's fixation with witchcraft placed Dee in a precarious position and although no charges were ever brought against him, rumours concerning his magical dealings increased. Dee was evidently much harassed for on 5 June 1603 he presented to the King a petition 'to cause your Highnesse sayd Servant, to be tryed and cleared of that horrible and damnable, and to him, most grievous and dammageable Sclaunder: generally, and for these many yeeres last past, in the Kingdome raysed, and continued, by report, and Print, against him: Namely, That he is, or hath bin a Coniurer or Caller, or Invocator of diuels'.[59] He followed this three days later with a verse address to Parliament, requesting them to pass 'an Act Generall against slander, with a special penal order for John Dee, his case'.[60] To both pleas there was absolutely no response. It was as if Dee did not exist. A bereavement greater than that of his good name was to strike Dee in 1605, for having nursed her children safely through an outbreak of plague, Jane Dee fell victim herself and on 23 March was buried in the collegiate church of St. Mary in Manchester.

On 20 March 1607 Dee was in London 'at Mrs. Goodman her house' still using Bartholomew Hickman as his scryer (TFR, p. *34). Whether Dee had moved back to London permanently or not cannot be ascertained, but he was staying at 'the Three Kings' in Westminster in July and was in ill health (TFR, p. *33). The angelic dealing promised another journey abroad but it was a fruitless dream. The last entry in TFR is dated 7 September 1607. Dee was attended by his daughter Katherine but in his last days she was forced to sell secretly books from his library in order to obtain the money to keep them alive.[61] On which day in December 1608 Dee died and on what date he was buried in the chancel of Mortlake church is not known, since the relevant parish records of Mortlake are missing, as is also the stone which Aubrey says marked his grave.[62] Unfortunately his reputation as a necromancer and conjurer did not die with him, but on the contrary took on an even more vigorous life.

b) Edward Kelly

Far less is known of Kelly than of Dee and much of the information concerning his life before the meeting with Dee is based upon later gossip collected by Ashmole and Anthony à Wood (see notes 2 and 3). That he was born at Worcester on 1 August 1555 we know from Dee's horoscope for him.[1] He is accredited with training as an apothecary[2] and with having studied for some time at Oxford under the name of Talbot.[3] He is reported to have had his ears cropped in the pillory at Lancaster either for forging title-deeds or for coining base money about 1580.[4] Long after his death he was accounted with having once dug up a corpse in Walton-le-Dale park in order to question the dead or 'an evil spirit speaking through his organs', but this belongs to the tradition of Dee and Kelly as necromancers in league with the devil.[5] At some time he acted as a secretary to Thomas Allen,[6] a magus not unlike Dee, whence he may have acquired his knowledge of magical works and particularly of Agrippa's De occulta philosophia.

His first meeting with Dee was on 8 March 1582 in the company of a Mr. Clerkson, if the title of 'frende' of Clerkson does indeed refer to Kelly (Diary). Kelly was using the name of Talbot and he and Clerkson visited Dee again at dinner time on 9 March and 'declared a great deale of Barnabas nowghty dealing' with Dee, Barnabas Saul being Dee's scryer at the time (Diary). The diary entry for this date shows that Dee may have heard of Kelly earlier than 8 March, and even if not, was impressed by Kelly's knowledge, which already included visionary experiences. Clerkson informed Dee that Saul had been > telling Mr. Clerkson ill things of me [Dee] that I should mak his frend, as that he was wery of me, that I wold so flatter his frende the lerned man that I wold borow him of him. But his frend told me, before my wife and Mr. Clerkson, that a spirituall creature told him that Barnabas had censured both Mr. Clerkson and me.

On 10 March Kelly went again to Dee's house and asked Dee to show him 'some thing in spirituall practise' having 'two dayes before made the like demaunde' (Sloane MS 3188, 9a). Dee explained that he was not practised in 'the vulgarly accownted Magik' but confessed that he had long desired a helper in his 'philosophicall studies'. Dee then requested Kelly to try and call the angel Anchor to appear in a crystal stone and within fifteen minutes Kelly saw a spiritual creature who declared himself to be the angel Uriel. Thus began the relationship between Dee and Kelly as master and scryer, although Kelly confessed that his first coming had been to trap Dee if he 'had any dealing with Wicked spirits' (Sloane MS 3188, 9a).

Kelly was presumably not yet living in Dee's house, but there is no indication as to where he was lodging. He left for London on 22 March 'to take his jornay', probably to collect some belongings, and must have returned before 28 April, when the records of the Actions resume with some folios missing (see above p. 11). On 4 May Kelly left again to collect some books that were in the possession of Lord Monteagles and there was evidently a rupture between Kelly and Dee between this date and 13 July; this I have discussed in reaching my conclusions about the possibility of some records of Actions being missing between 4 May and 15 November 1582 (see above pp. 12-15). The Actions did not begin again until 15 November, by which time Kelly was using his real name. On 17 November the angels declared that 'none shall enter into the knowledge of these mysteries but this worker', indicating Kelly (Sloane MS 3188, 51b, 19-20) and his position as Dee's scryer was consolidated.

On 29 April the angel Michael had made Kelly swear to perform whatever Michael might require of him, and at the end of the Action had told him that he must take a wife (Sloane MS 3188, 39b). Kelly professed that he had no desire to enter into wedlock but sometime before he returned permanently to Dee's service he married Jane or Joan Cooper of Chipping Norton,[7] who was born on 23 June 1563 (Diary, p. 1). The date of this marriage is not known, but since the girl came from Chipping Norton it seems most likely that it took place after Kelly had left Dee again on 22 November to go to Blockley at the foot of the Cotswold Hills. He was supposed to return in ten days but the Actions did not resume until 23 March 1583 and Kelly seems to have spent the winter in that area.

On his return Kelly also brought with him a book and a scroll 'written in strange characters' (Sloane MS 3188, 61a) and a phial containing a red powder.[8] He had been led to the discovery by 'a spirituall Creature'. Dee often refers to the book as being 'the Book of Dunstan' and Fell Smith suggests that it may have been a copy of the manuscript Tractatus...de lapide philosophorum which was formerly believed to be the work of that saint.[9] Certainly the book was alchemical in nature. The scroll gave in cipher the names of ten places which with angelic help would yield treasure buried by the Danes. The powder was an important discovery which would yield the secret of the Philosophers' Stone.

Although Kelly was employed as Dee's scryer he was not averse to raising spirits, even of a wicked nature, during Dee's occasional absences.[10] This was one of the causes of dissension between them, but Kelly's volatile nature was such that their relationship was never stable for long.[11] Dee firmly believed that the spirits called into the crystal were good spirits, whereas Kelly frequently denounced them as deluders and refused to deal with them anymore. Each time Dee persuaded him to return to the business of scrying, arguing that the creatures were good and their words true. Kelly exhibited throughout that melancholic disposition which was traditionally associated with a capacity for visionary experience.[12]

Dee had contracted to pay Kelly £50 per annum on 29 June 1583 in order to retain the services of his scryer, but even this did not bind the two together in any certain fashion. On 4 July 1583 Kelly took offence at a letter which Dee had written to Lasky and shortly after saw a spirit which told him to leave immediately, for if he were to stay with Dee he would be hanged and if he were to go away with Lasky he would be decapitated. Kelly immediately rounded on Dee, saying:

> You mean not to keep promise with me. And therefore if I might have a thousand pound to tarry, yea, a kingdom, I cannot. Therefore I release you of your promise of 50 pounds yearly stipend to me, and you need not doubt but God will defend you and prosper you, and can of the very stones raise up children unto Abraham (TFR, p. 30).

He then mounted his mare and rode off towards Brentford. Yet by ten o'clock that same night he had returned, calmed and pliant to Dee's wishes. The spirit Madimi appeared to him and rebuked him for his outburst, telling him that 'thou hast a Just God that loveth thee...therefore be thou vertuous' (TFR, p. 32).

After this scene with Kelly there is a hiatus in the records of the Actions. It seems that Kelly went away again for Dee's Diary notes that on 7 July 'George was dismissed my servys and payd all reconings in the presens of goodman Hilton and Mistres Kelly in my study'. He also notes that on 1 August 'a Wurceter-shire man, a wicked spy cam to my howse, whom I used as an honest man, and found nothing wrong as I thought. He was sent to E.K.'[13] He was evidently back in the Dee household by 18 August, however (Diary). On 21 September they all went with Lasky to Gravesend to catch the ships that would carry them to the Netherlands.

I have documented the travels of the party and the comings and goings of Kelly in the biography of Dee and concerning the Actions with spirits there is little to add. Kelly continued to act as Dee's scryer until 1588 with the usual outbursts, departures and reconciliations that had marked his relationship with Dee in earlier years. It was becoming evident to him, however, that Lasky was not going to become the King of Poland[14] and that the expected largess at his hands was no longer to be looked for. His interest therefore turned to providing his own wealth through the making of the Philosophers' Stone. He claimed success on 19 December 1586, when Dee noted in his Diary that Kelly had made projection and produced nearly an ounce of best gold. Over the next few months Dee's Diary records many gifts from Lord Rosenberg being delivered through Kelly and it seems that Kelly had become a favourite of Rosenberg and possibly the Emperor as well. The new patronage could only be a result of his 'success' at trans-mutation. On 28 September 1587 Dee recorded that he delivered 'to Mr. Ed. Kelley (ernestly requiring it as his part) the half of all the animall which was made' which weighed twenty ounces and by 8 February 1588 Kelly was working separately in his own laboratory and sending for Dee to view the results of his experiments (Diary). The partnership with Dee was breaking up but despite the many frictions between the two, Kelly did not totally ignore Dee. On 10 May 1588 Dee noted in his Diary that 'E.K. did open the great secret to me, God be thanked!', although the reason for this alchemical revelation may not have been so much friendship as a desire on Kelly's part to show Dee that he was the master now, having exceeded Dee in knowledge.

When Dee decided to return to England, the first of the party to begin the long homeward journey was Kelly's wife (Diary, 17 October 1588). Her relationship with her husband had never been good, and there was little to make her stay when Kelly alone decided to remain in Bohemia. Before leaving himself Dee gave Kelly his 'Glass, so highly and long estemed of our Quene',[15] and also gave him 'the powder, the bokes, the glas and the bone, for the Lord Rosenberg' (Diary, 4 February 1589). Dee seems to have expected Kelly to join him at Stade, thinking they would return to England together (Diary, 3 November 1589), but he was much mistaken. Kelly was now much honoured by the Emperor Rudolph for his gold-making and was made a knight of Bohemia.[16] Throughout 1590 frequent letters passed between Dee and Kelly, either through Thomas Kelly or Francis Garland, and Kelly's reputation as a possessor of the Philosophers' Stone captured many minds.[17] It was even said that Elizabeth received a warming pan, from the lid of which a piece had been cut, transmuted into gold and then replaced.[18] Even Burghley was convinced and in a letter to Edward Dyer, urged him to try and persuade Kelly to return.[19] He was also in direct correspondence with Kelly[20] and Kelly promised that he would 'shortly send the good thing desired for your health'.[21]

It is doubtful whether Kelly ever had any intention of returning to England, but even if it had been in his mind, events in Prague were to overtake him. He had established himself in a house near the palace and had been rejoined by his wife, his brother and Edward Dyer. On the last day of April 1591 the Imperial Guard broke in to arrest Kelly, but he had already fled to Rosenberg. He was tracked down to Sobislaus, twelve miles from Prague, on 2 May and taken to the Castle of Pürglitz, three miles from Prague, where he was kept imprisoned for two years.[22] The charge was apparently Laesus Majestatis, for three days before the order for his arrest Kelly had refused to obey a summons from the Emperor.[23] In prison he wrote a treatise entitled De lapide philosophorum which he dedicated to Emperor Rudolph and in which he writes of two other imprisonments.[24] He was enlarged on 4 October 1593 and the correspondence with Dee resumed. On 12 August 1595 Dee received 'Sir Edward Kellyes letters of the Emperor's, inviting me to his servyce again', but by then Kelly may already have been dead. The manner of his death is not certain, but the legend is that he was imprisoned again in one of Rudolph's castles and that he broke his legs in a fall, while attempting to escape, dying a few days later.[25] Wood notes the date of Kelly's death as being in October 1595 and the news reached Dee on 25 November, when he noted in his Diary simply 'the newes that Sir Edward Kelley was slayne'.

c) Other Scryers

Barnabas Saul

The first Action in Sloane MS 3188 involves a scryer by the name of Barnabas Saul and is included by way of a prologue to the Actions with Kelly. There is little factual information available concerning Saul. Unlike many other of Dee's acquaintances and servants, his date of birth is not recorded in the Diary and if Dee ever did cast his horoscope, it is not extant. The first reference to him in Dee's writings is on 8 October 1581 when Dee records: 'I had newes of the chests of bokes fownd by Owndle in Northamptonshyre; Mr. Barnabas Sawle told me of them, but I found no truth in it' (Diary). The next day Saul 'was strangly trubbled by a spirituall creature abowt mydnight' (Diary). Saul ceased to scry for Dee by at least 6 March 1582, when he confessed that he 'neyther hard or saw any spirituall creature any more', but it is probable that he ceased much earlier, since the Action of 22 December 1581 is described by Dee as 'one of the last Actions' with this scryer (Sloane MS 3188, 7b). The date on which Saul began to act as Dee's scryer is uncertain, but it cannot have been particularly long before 1582 on account of the lack of references in the Diary, Dee being a meticulous recorder. Since Dee writes that the prayer on fol. 5a of Sloane MS 3188 was used from 1579 onwards, it is possible that Saul was first employed in 1579, the new prayer coinciding with the arrival of the new scryer.

Whether Saul ever lodged in Dee's house is unknown, but it is evident from Dee's Diary entry of 27 January 1582 that he was by then living separately. It seems likely that he had already broken with Dee to some extent and was no longer scrying for him, having been indicted at Westminster Hall. He was acquitted on 12 February, but was no longer on friendly terms with Dee (see Diary, 9 March & 19 July 1582). The relationship between Saul and Dee was no better than that between Kelly and Dee. Dee had once had great hopes, writing that 'hearing of one, (A Master of Art and a preacher of thy word admitted) accownted as a good Seer, and skryer of Spirituall apparitions, in Christalline receptacles, or in open ayre', he had eventually procured his services. Unfortunately Dee soon found 'great diuersity betwene his private usual manner, and intents of practise, and my pure, sincere, devowte, and faithfull prayer' (Sloane MS 3188, 7b), and he caught Saul dealing with wicked spirits (Sloane MS 3188, 10b). Like Kelly, Saul was 'very unwilling to here him self rebuked for his nawghtynes' (Sloane MS3188, 7b), and the partnership dissolved. The Action of 22 December 1581 is the only extant record of the dealing with Saul, the rest having been hidden in a capcase in the chimney of Dee's house at Mortlake (Sloane MS 3188, 90b). Whether they were found and destroyed when the mob broke into Dee's house in 1583, or whether they perished with the house or with so many of Dee's other papers after his death is unknown.

Bartholomew Hickman

Dee's last recorded scryer was Bartholomew Hickman, who was born at 'Shugborowgh' in Warwickshire on 24 August 1554 (Diary, p. 1), this presumably being the modern Lower Shuckburgh between Daventry and Southam (I can find no Upper Shuckburgh). He seems to have visited Dee first on 22 June 1579 in the company of his uncle Richard Hickman and a Mr. Flower, who had been commended to Dee by Christopher Hatton. There is no further reference to Hickman in Dee's Diary until 13 February 1591. It is possible that he may have acted as scryer for Dee in 1579, but he never seems to have lodged with Dee and there is no record of their meeting again until a couple of years after Dee's return from the Continent. By then Hickman was married and had a daughter Jane (Diary, 31 May 1591). According to the extant records Hickman was never employed in Dee's service (although his daughter was) but was preferred by Dee to the service of Lord Willoughby (Diary, 2 December 1594). He remained a close friend of Dee, however, visiting him many times, receiving financial help, and sometimes acting as a messenger and carrier (Diary, 7 September 1592 & 27 February 1598).

BIRMINGHAM UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Although not in Dee's service, Hickman probably did act as a scryer for Dee during his many visits, for on 29 September 1600 Dee 'burned before Mr. Nicols, his brother, and Mr. Wortley, all Bartholomew Hikman his untrue actions'.[1] In contrast to the relationship between Dee and his other scryers, Saul and Kelly, there is no indication that Dee and Hickman ever fell out with one another. Even the reference to 'untrue actions' does not necessarily imply that Dee thought Hickman acted fraudulently. The burning of the papers in front of witnesses suggests that Dee was in part recanting his spiritual dealings, perhaps to allay the rumours that were being voiced by other Fellows of the College at Manchester. Certainly Hickman was scrying for Dee again in the latter's last year, when the old man of eighty had returned to London (see TFR, pp. *32-*44).

Others

Dee's protestation to God in Sloane MS 3188 says that he had 'perceyued by some slight experience with two diuerse persons' that God had 'a speciall care' to reveal knowledge to Dee through his 'true Ministers Angelic and Spirituall' (Sloane MS 3188, 7b). This suggests that there was no extended period of scrying before the employment of Barnabas Saul, even though he appears to have had a special prayer for invoking the angels Raphael and Michael between 1569 and 1579 (Sloane MS 3188, 5a, 39-41). There are no definite statements in Dee's writings as to the identity of these two individuals, but certain conjectures can be made.

Dee noted on 25 May 1581 that he had sight in a crystal (Diary) but this implies that he saw the vision himself, although this cannot be stated with any certainty. Even if a scryer was present, it was most likely to be Saul at this time. There is, however, a strong case for one Roger Cook having at some time acted as a scryer before Saul. In his Diary entry of 5 September 1581 Dee noted that Roger Cook 'who had byn with me from his 14 yeres of age till 28, of a melancholik nature, pycking and devising occasions of just cause to depart on the suddayn, abowt 4 of the clok in the afternone requested of me lycense to depart, wheruppon rose whott wordes between us; and he, imagining with hisself that he had the 12 of July deserved my great displeasure and finding himself barred from vew of my philosophicall dealing with Mr. Henrik, thowght that he was utterly recest from intended goodnes toward him'. If Dee had first turned to scrying with a young boy, in the traditionally approved manner,[2] he might have used Cook in 1567. Cook was certainly an assistant in Dee's alchemical experiments (Diary, 28 December 1579), although not greatly trusted it seems (Diary, 5 September 1581). Cook was as troublesome to Dee as were Saul and Kelly, and the Diary entry of 12 July 1581 notes in Greek characters 'roger his incredible doggednes and ingratefulnes agains me to my face, almost redy to lay violent hands on me'. The unstable melancholy of Cook resembles that of Saul and Kelly and the humour was regarded as most suitable for such experiments as scrying.[3]

Another candidate is one William Emery, who was born in Danbury, Essex, on 14 July 1568. Dee was told by Adrian Gilbert and John Davis, who were later both conversant with the Actions with spirits,[4] about 'some of Emery his most unhonest, hypocritical1, and devilish dealings and devises' against him (Diary, 18 October 1579). Since William Emery was then only eleven years old, this most probably refers to the boy's father. If Dee was pursuing the common practice of using a child as a scryer, then the father may have spread around reports of conjuring, after having once given his consent for the use of the boy. The charge of hypocrisy suggests as much.

Other candidates may be drawn from the names that Dee records in his Diary. On 3 April 1581 Dee went to one John Brown 'to see the manner of the doings' and he was engaged in 'philosophical1 dealing' with a Mr. Henrick (Diary, 5 September 1581). A Robert Gardner had entered Dee's service on 29 September 1581, and after Saul had left declared 'a certain philosophical1 secret, as he had termed it, of a spirituall creatuer' (Diary, 23 May 1582). While these three individuals would not appear by Dee's notes to have preceded Saul in any scrying experiments, it is possible that at an earlier time one of them had brought about Dee's 'slight experience'.

a) John Dee

1. The original in Dee's hand is now BM Cotton MS Vitellius. C.VII, art. 1, but it was partly burned after Ashmole had made a transcript (Ashmole MS 1788, art. 1). It was first printed in the Appendix to Johannis confratris et monachi Glastoniensis by Thomas Hearne (Oxford 1726), and is most recently to be found in Autobiographical Tracts of Dr. John Dee, edited by James Crossley, Chetham Society Publications, vol XXIV (Manchester 1851), pp. 1-45. All references to The Compendious Rehearsal (hereafter CR) are to this later edition.

2. Peter French's book has an extensive bibliography which lists the shorter studies of particular aspects of Dee's life and works even to the slightest reference, both in printed form and in manuscript, in addition to the standard larger works.

3. In the pedigree that Dee drew up for himself (BM Cotton Charter XIV, art. 1) the family was of Welsh origin and traceable to the ancient Welsh prince Roderick the Great. Dee also claimed a distant relationship with Queen Elizabeth herself.

4. See French, John Dee, p. 5, and I.R.F. Calder, 'John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist' (unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, University of London, 1952), 2 vols, I, p. 15, for documentary evidence.

5. They are not to be found there now. It is possible that they always remained in Dee's library, while being 'left to the use of the Fellowes and Schollers of Trinity College' (CR, p. 5), since in his list of damage done to his library in 1583, Dee records the loss of 'the paire of Gerardus Mercator his best Globes, the Theorick of the eighth spheare, and the Astronomer's staff' (CR, p. 32).

6. Dee lists many visitors, including the Duke of Mantua, Don Luys de la Cerda 'afterwardes Duke de Medina Coeli in Spaine', Sir William Pickering, Mathias Hacus, Mathematician to the King of Denmark, and Joannes Capito, Physician to the King of Denmark 'and a good mathematician also' (CR, pp. 6-7).

7. 'Very many of all estates and professions were desirous of my acquaintance and conference, as Orontius, Mizaldus, Petrus Montaureus, Turnebus, Straselius, Vicomercatus, Paschasius Hamelius, Petrus Ramus, Gulielmus Postellus, Fernelius, Jo. Magnionus, Johannes à Pena, &c.' (CR, p. 8).

8. Dee listed his printed and unprinted works in The Compendious Rehearsal (pp. 24-27) and also in A Letter Containing a Most Briefe Discourse Apologeticall, written in 1594-5 (Autobiographical Tracts, pp. 73-77).

9. See Calendar of Patent Rolls, Edward VI, 1553, V, 199, and CR, p. 31.

10. See W.R.B. Prideaux, 'Books from John Dee's Library', Notes and Queries, 9th Series, VIII (1901), pp. 137-138.

11. Charles Henry Cooper and Thompson Cooper, Athenae Cantabrigiensis, 2 vols (Cambridge 1861, republished 1967), II, 505-6.

12. Anthony à Wood, Athenae Oxoniensis, II, 542. Leicester later became the patron of Dee, in so far as Dee ever received any continuous patronage, and he owned a first edition of Henry Billingsley's translation of Euclid's Elements of Geometrie (London 1570), which contained an important preface and many annotations by Dee. Leicester's copy was advertised for sale in 1977 and a description may be found in Catalogue 954, 'Science and Mathematics', of Bernard Quaritch Ltd.

13. The order was 'to make searche for oone John Dye', but this is generally accepted as referring to Dee (Acts of the Privy Council, 1554-1556, n.s., V, 137).

14. Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1547-1580, No. 34, p. 67.

15. See John Philpot, The Examinations and Writings of John Philpot, edited by Robert Eden, Parker Society (Cambridge 1842), pp. 69 & 80.

16. The original in Dee's hand is BM Cotton MS Vitellius. C.VII, art. 6, and there is a transcript by Ashmole to be found in Ashmole MS 1788, art. 8. The Supplication is printed in Autobiographical Tracts, pp. 46-47.

17. See BM Harleian MS 1879, arts 1, 5 & 6, and Ashmole MS 1142, II (Ashmole's transcript).

18. 'Being to her Majestie commended by the right honourable Earle of Penbroke, and the Lord Robert, after Earle of Leicester...her Majestie used these wordes unto the said Lordes, "Where my brother hath given him a crowne, I will give him a noble"' (CR, p. 12).

19. This philosophical and alchemical work was printed at Antwerp in 1564 and reprinted at Frankfurt in 1591. It has been printed with an introduction and translation by C.H. Josten in AMBIX, XII (1964), pp. 84-221. All references to Monas are to this edition.

20. Dee seems to have been involved personally with the treatment of the Marchioness, for he received a letter dated 24 December 1564 containing a treatise Ad cancrum curandum from Bartholomeus de Rekingken in Vienna (Ashmole MS 1788, fols 134-135).

21. Chancery Proceedings, Series II, Bundle 49, No. 44, cited by E.G.R. Taylor, Tudor Geography: 1485-1583 (London 1930), p. 107.

22. In a survey of 1616 the house was already called 'ancient' (Smith, John Dee, p. 30).

23. He performed useful services in allaying fears aroused by the discovery of a wax image of the Queen, transfixed with a pin, in Lincoln's Inn (CR, pp. 21-22), and in pronouncing his judgement on the appearance of a new comet in 1577 which had 'unduly bred great feare and doubt in many of the Court' (CR, p. 21).

24. See especially Frances A. Yates, Theatre of the World (London and Chicago 1969).

25. Dee had augmented Robert Recorde's Grounde of Artes in 1561.

26. The manuscript copy is now Ashmole MS 1789, art. 4.

27. On the paradoxal compass see E.G.R. Taylor, Tudor Geography: 1485-1583, pp. 95-96.

28. BM Cotton MS Vitellius. C.VII, art. 3. This MS is partly burned and parts of it are missing. A list of its contents is to be found in Ashmole MS 1788, art. 4.

29. John Dee, General and Rare Memorials Pertayning to the Perfect Arte of Navigation (1577), facsimile edition, The English Experience No. 62 (Amsterdam and New York 1968), pp. 13-14 and 34-35.

30. Thomas Fulton, The Sovereignty of the Sea (Edinburgh 1911), p. 99.

31. See Commentary to 8b, 25.

32. Dee's Diary entry of 24 March 1577 reads: 'Alexander Simon the Ninivite came to me, and promised me his servise into Persia', although there is no record of Dee having gained any first-hand experience and knowledge of the Middle East and Orient.

33. Arthur Dee was to become an eminent physician and alchemist and his life is documented in Smith, John Dee, pp. 307-316, and in the Dictionary of National Biography.

34. In March 1579 Dee signed a letter with Thomas Gresham, Martin Frobisher and others to the Council of State desiring that those Adventurers who had not paid their contributions should be admonished to do so without delay (Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1547-1580, p. 621.)

35. See Sloane MS 3188, 7b, 38-40. A scryer is a person who sees visions in reflecting objects such as water and crystal.

36. Dee's Diary records Lasky's arrival as being on 1 May whereas it is recorded as the last day of April in Douce MS 363, fol. 125.

37. See TFR, pp. 23, 29 and 33.

38. Kelly had married in 1583, but the precise date is not known.

39. Lasky was suspected of plots against the King of Poland. See pp. 175-176 below.

40. Kesmark is probably the Kežmarok of modern Czechoslovakia.

41. The text is printed in TFR, p. 218.

42. Concerning the religious controversies in Pucci's life see the article in DNB.

43. In the Action of 30 April 1586 there is a reference to the house in which Dee was living which mentions 'Fr. Pucci his Chamber door' (TFR, p. 419).

44. Thomas Digges (d. 1595), the mathematician, who referred to Dee as his mathematical father ('mihi Parentem alterum Mathematicum') in his work Alae seu scalae mathematicae (1573), sig. A2r.

45. See C.H. Josten, 'An Unknown Chapter in the Life of John Dee', JWCI, XVIII (1965), pp. 223-257. The Nuncio was most pressing to make Dee's acquaintance, but when Dee did finally agree to meet him, he found the Nuncio's words 'sweetly hypocritical'.

46. This is now Třebon in Czechoslovakia, but for convenience I shall retain the Latin form.

47. Justification for obeying the commandment for the cross-matching could be found in St. Augustine's Confessions: 'when God commandeth anything which is against the custom or compact of any people, although it were never done there before, it must then be done...Again there are some things like to flagitious sins and heinous crimes, which yet are not sins, because they neither offend thee, our Lord and God, nor human society...For the appearance of the act is often different from the intention of him that doth it; and the precise circumstances of the time, which are hidden from us, must often vary. But when of a sudden thou commandest anything, how unlawful and unexpected soever—though thou hadst once forbidden it; though thou for some reason dost conceal the cause of thy commandment for a time; and though it prove to be against the custom of some particular commonwealth—yet who doubts but that it ought to be done' (The Confessions of St. Augustine, tr. Sir Tobie Matthew, revised by Dom Roger Hudleston (London and Glasgow 1957), Bk III, Chs 8 & 9, pp. 82-85).

48. Smith, John Dee, p. 188.

49. BM Cotton MS Appendix XLVI, fol. 218a.

50. On 4 July 1583 Kelly attempted to break with Dee rather than go abroad with Lasky, saying amongst other things: 'I cannot abide my wife, I love her not, nay I abhor her; and there in the house I am misliked, because I favour her no better' (TFR, p. 30).

51. See pp. 160-161 below.

52. This letter is BM Harleian MS 6986, fol. 45, and a photographic plate is to be found in French, John Dee, following p. 132.

53. Dee had entered into this contract with Kelly on 29 June 1583 (TFR, p. 28).

54. This was printed in London in 1599 and is to be found in Autobiographical Tracts, pp. 69-84.

55. See also Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1595-1597, p. 45.

56. See Diary entries for 19 March 1596, 15 April 1596 and 6 August 1597.

57. See Diary entries for 19 January 1598 to 9 February 1598.

58. 'This colledge of Manchester, is allmost become No Colledge, in any respect', letter to Dyer 8 September 1597, Harleian MS 249, art. 13, fol. 104b.

59. John Dee, To the King's Most Excellent Majestie (London 1604).

60. John Dee, To the Honorable Assemblie of the Commons in the Present Parlament (London 1604).

61. See Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 149a.

62. Aubrey, Lives, I, 210-215.

b) Edward Kelly

1. Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 137. Ashmole interpreted the horoscope as showing 'him a Man of cleere Understanding, quick Apprehension, an excellent Wit, and a great propensity to Philosophicall Studies' (Ashmole MS 972, being a copy of Theatrum Chemicum, p. 479). I.R.F. Calder notes that 'Jupiter is in the Medium Coelum indicating great worldly honour and position, but it is ill aspected suggesting misfortune and ultimate disaster' being 'moreover... conjoined with Mars, which unequivocally in this tenth house denotes a rash and hasty character, boastful, presumptuous, stubbornly weak, one swayed by extravagant passions and generally unbalanced and treacherous' ('John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist', II, 466a).

2. Ashmole recorded that 'Mr. Lilly told me that John Evans informed him that he was acquainted with Kelly's sister in Worcester, that she shewed him some gold her brother had transmuted, and that Kelly was first an apothecary in Worcester' (Ashmole MS 1790, fol. 58).

3. Anthony à Wood was informed that Kelly had studied for a time at Gloucester Hall, Oxford, but finding no such name in the matriculation register, assumed that he entered under the name of Talbot, three persons of that name being at Gloucester Hall in 1573 (Wood, Athenae Oxoniensis, I, 639).

4. Wood, Athenae Oxoniensis, I, 639. A writ was made against Kelly on a charge of false coinage, but considerably later, since he was informed of it by his brother Thomas on 5 June 1583 (see TFR, pp. 5-6). The charge was not sustained.

5. John Weever, Ancient Funerall Monuments (1631), pp. 45-46. For the popular reputation of Dee and Kelly as necromancers through the following centuries, see French, John Dee, pp. 4-19.

6. See Wood, Athenae Oxoniensis, I, 639, and French, John Dee, p. 113, n. 2.

7. Joan Cooper's mother lived in Chipping Norton, which is referred to as Joan's 'home' (TFR, p. 6).

8. There are stories that Kelly found the powder in Wales, and that he found it at Glastonbury (see Lenglet du Fresnoy, Histoire de la Philosophie Hermétique (Paris 1742), I, 306-313, and The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelley, edited by A.E. Waite (London 1893, reprinted 1970), pp. xvi-xviii). Before receiving the hidden manuscripts, Ashmole recorded a story that the powder was obtained from an Italian (Ashmole MS 1790, fols 60-61), but the powder is only referred to in Sloane MS 3188 after 23 March 1583 and these accounts are discredited.

9. Smith, John Dee, p. 193.

10. See for instance Sloane MS 3188, fol. 65b.

11. For an example of one of the arguments between Kelly and Dee, see Sloane MS 3188, fol. 91a.

12. See Agrippa, Three Books of Occult Philosophy, translated by J[ames] F[rench] (London 1651), I, lx, pp. 132-133.

13. Halliwell's edition of the diary reads 'I was sent to E.K.', which is an incorrect transcription.

14. See pp. 175-176 below.

15. The Queen had asked to see Dee's 'glass so famous' on 10 March 1575, which Dee produced and explained 'to her Majestie's great contentment and delight' (CR, p. 17).

16. The actual title conferred upon Kelly was eques auratus and in February 1590, Kelly obtained a confirmation of his grant from England (Lansdowne MS 846, fol. 243). Dee added a marginal note to a prophecy of Kelly achieving greatness that 'this came to passe Anno 1589 when he was made Baron of Bohemia Anno 1590' (TFR, p. 32).

17. See Smith, John Dee, p. 203.

18. 'That warming Pann was of siluer, and the moity thereof was transmuted into Gold. It was the warming Pann of the Lord Willowghby then Embassador for Queen Elizabeth' (Ashmole MS 1446, fol 237b, being an annotation by Townesend to Ashmole's Theatrum Chemicum).

19. John Strype, Annals of the Reformation and Establishment of Religion...in the Church of England, 7 vols (Oxford 1824), VI, 617-620.

20. See Strype, Annals, VII, 3-6.

21. Lansdowne MS 66, fol. 164.

22. The account is contained in a letter from a merchant to Edward Wotton (Strype, Annals, VI, 621-625) and in a letter from Thomas Webbe to Burghley (Lansdowne MS 68, fol. 210).

23. The merchant in his letter to Wotton postulates various other possible reasons for Kelly's indictment (Strype, Annals, VI, 621-625).

24. The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelley, ed. A.E. Waite, p. 5. In this volume De lapide philosophorum is taken from the Hamburg edition of 1676 and Waite also ascribes to Kelly the two tracts entitled The Humid Path and The Theatre of Terrestrial Astronomy.

25. Wood, Athenae Oxoniensis, I, 642-643.

c) Other Scryers

1. See Diary. Dee also noted that 'all Barthilmew's reports of sight and hering spirituall wer burnt; a copy of the first part, which was afterward found, was burnt before me and my wife' (Ashmole MS 488, sig. Ppp5v).

2. See pp. 79-84 below.

3. Agrippa, Occ. Phil., I, lx, pp. 132-133.

4. Adrian Gilbert's brother Humphrey and John Davis appear to have been engaged in certain experiments with spirits themselves (see BM Additional MS 36674, fols 58-62).

III

MAGIC AND SCRYING

a) Magic

The history of magic in the Renaissance is a vast and complex subject outside the scope of this thesis, but before proceeding to an account of the particular magic of Dee's Actions with spirits, some general outline of the principles of magical thought at the time must be given. Recent work has clearly demonstrated the diversity of opinion and practice among the various disciples of magic in the Renaissance,[1] and it is difficult to treat the subject in general without ignoring the inconsistencies and contradictions between the doctrines held by different persons and also in any particular doctrine itself. Furthermore the breadth of interest that was exhibited by Renaissance magi makes it difficult to determine the borders of magic for at times it was 'on the point of turning into art, science, practical psychology, or, above all, religion' on account of a 'real overlapping of the fields of all these activities' (Walker, p. 76). Certain principles were nevertheless common to a great number of magical doctrines and formed the tradition to which Dee was an heir.

Magic was not so much revived during the Renaissance as rehabilitated. Magic, witchcraft and sorcery of various kinds were as prevalent during the Middle Ages as during the Renaissance, but the Renaissance generated a new approach to the universe which saw the relationship of God and man as primarily intellectual rather than material. The principal force behind the spread of this approach was the translation of the Corpus Hermeticum begun in 1463 by Marsilio Ficino on the insistence of Cosimo de Medici.[2] Since the works in this collection were thought to precede the writings of Plato and perhaps even those of Moses, they were held in great esteem as being closer to the purest and earliest source of divine wisdom.[3] The translation of the texts to which Ficino gave the name Pimander helped to re-establish the magic in the already known Asclepius of Hermes Trismegistus and the spread of the Hermetic movement propagated not only a new attitude towards the Creation but also a magical tradition.

The Hermetic philosophy was largely anthropocentric in outlook. It redefined the relationship between God and man, giving man a place not simply as the image of God but as a potential god himself. In the Oration on The Dignity of Man Pico della Mirandola, who was greatly influenced by the Corpus Hermeticum, declared that man was truly the son of the Father and could grow to be like his Father through the powers given to him by God:

> O supreme generosity of God the Father, > O highest and most marvellous felicity of > man! To him is granted to have whatever > he chooses, to be whatever he wills.
> Beasts as soon as they are born (so says > Lucilius) bring with them from their > mother's womb all they will ever possess.
> Spiritual beings, either from the beginning > or soon thereafter, become what they are to > be for ever and ever. On man when he came > to life the Father conferred the seeds of > all kinds and the germs of every way of life.
> Whatever seeds each man cultivates will grow > to maturity and bear in him their own fruit.
> If they be vegetative, he will be like a > plant. If sensitive, he will become brutish.
> If rational, he will grow into a heavenly > being. If intellectual, he will be an angel > and the son of God. And if, happy in the lot > of no created thing, he withdraws into the > centre of his own unity, his spirit, made one > with God, in the solitary darkness of God, > who is set above all things, shall surpass > them all.[4]

Man was no longer a creature of original sin, troubled by the wars between reason and passion, and wandering between the joys of heaven and the fires of hell. Man was instead a creature of God, imbued with the potential 'to be whatever he wills' and to rise above the world to a unity with God. While the Hermetic texts are frequently inconsistent with each other and may not be regarded as a unified body, they all exhibit an intense piety, a piety which was essential for the man who sought the way to be 'made one with God'. The gnosis might be achieved by contemplating the universe as the divine creation of God or by rejecting the material world and elevating oneself above matter through asceticism. In both cases unity with God would be achieved through the divine mens in man.

This intellectual-spiritual approach to God accorded well with the changes brought about by the advancement of mathematics. If the universe were divine then its contemplation as a creation of God concerned measurement and structural harmony, as well as the spiritual apprehension of its qualities. Plotinus had argued that matter did not in fact possess qualities in itself, for they were imposed by the mind and recognised in the illumination of it by the mind. Magnitude and number were first imposed upon it, determining what other forms it might then receive.[5] If the material world was evil, then the gnostic might contemplate the ideas in the mind of the creator from which matter sprung, and it was therefore necessary to measure the material in order to approach its Platonic Form.

The Hermetic philosophy did not give rise to the new emphasis upon quantity rather than quality, but was fruitfully coincident with it. Hermeticism was capable of coexisting in one mind with 'the Neoplatonic interpretation of Plato dominated by the passion for a fully articulated vision of the world as a structural entity.'[6] The Hermetic way to God was through a gnostic contemplation of the universe. The pathway indicated by Renaissance Neoplatonism was mathematical. Since number operated in the world of the divine Forms as well as in the material world, a quantitative approach to the universe could itself lead to gnostic revelation, the contemplation of number being the way from the material to the immaterial. For the magician inspired by the Hermetic possibilities of rising above the natural world to a unity with God, mathematics would be the modus operandi, and such quantitative empiricism led 'not to the refutation but to the codification of magic.'[7]

The Hermetic treatises assumed an astrological universe in which the lower world was governed by the stars and the seven planets, while each celestial body was in turn governed by one or more daemons.[8] Magic demanded a similar hierarchical universe so that effects might be wrought by the action of one body, spirit or daemon upon another. Generally the Renaissance magicians and philosophers made a threefold division of the universe in a hierarchical plane. Reuchlin divided it into the 'Inferior, Superior and Supream' worlds,[9] while Agrippa favoured the 'Elementary, Celestiall, and Intellectuall'. Dee's division, to which I shall return, was into the Natural, the Supernatural and the Mathematical.[10] The ultimate aim of philosophy and magic was defined by Agrippa in a way that shows the interdependency of the three worlds:

> Seeing there is a three fold world, Elementary, Celestiall, and Intellectuall, and every inferior is governed by its superior, and receiveth the influence of the vertues thereof, so that the very original, and chief Worker of all doth by Angels, the Heavens, Stars, Elements, Animals, Plants, Metals, and Stones convey from himself the vertues of his Omnipotency upon us,for whose service he made, and created all these things: Wise men conceive it no way irrational that it should be possible for us to ascend by the same degrees through each World, to the same very originall World itself, the Maker of all things, and first Cause, from whence all things are, and proceed. (Occ. Phil. I, i, pp. 1-2).

In this hierarchical universe the planets held a very important place in respect of man and the earth, for they acted as intermediaries between God with his angels and the world of nature in which man lived and breathed. The planets sent down their influences to the earth and imbued the world with certain of their characteristics through the 'occult' properties in matter. These occult qualities could not be seen, but engaged a sympathy between the heavens and the earth and between different objects upon the earth which could be put to use by the skilful operator. Thus a particular plant might have the occult properties of fire and the sun, and therefore have sympathies with all things solarian. Through such base objects the influences of the higher bodies could be attracted, by virtue of the sympathies between the occult properties of the objects and the influences, in the form of rays, of the planets. Similarly certain effects could be produced by letting the occult properties of one body act upon or in conjunction with the occult properties of another body, magic on this level working through 'uniting the vertues of things through the application of them one to the other, and to their inferior sutable subjects, joyning and knitting them together throughly by the powers, and vertues of the superior Bodies' (Occ. Phil., I, ii, p. 3). According to Agrippa such an operation was 'natural magic', since it operated primarily in the elemental world, although the influences of the stars and planets also played a part. It was very distinct from what he termed celestial magic, which involved dealing with the daemons, spirits, and intelligences who governed the stars and the planets, and ceremonial magic, which concerned religion and dealing with angels and devils.

The term 'natural magic' was used to mean different things by various authors. It could range from a purely astrological definition as with Ficino's music theory and orphic singing (see Walker, pp. 3-24), to a definition which covered all that was not sorcery and was 'nothing else but the survey of the whole course of Nature'.[11] 'Natural magic' was the harnessing of planetary influences, which might act directly upon the imagination of the operator or might act independently of him. The effects might be upon animate or inanimate bodies, the planets themselves being regarded as either according to the occasion, and if upon an animate body, might be directed towards the operator or towards some other individual. The essential principle of such magic was that it worked through the force of the imagination, the vis imaginativa, through the cosmic and human spirit, effects being either purely psychological or psychosomatic. Depending so largely on planetary influences, natural magic was a threat to orthodox religion, since it did not of necessity acknowledge a divine cause. Within a Christian context, the tendency was either for 'natural magic' to be given a Christian significance that it did not presuppose, or for Christianity to be given a magical efficacy other than that which it already claimed, and exclusively at that.

Natural magic was consistent with the Hermetic philosophy, since the Hermetic texts supposed a universe of astrological influences, and because the influences were drawn down and directed through the vis imaginativa of the operator, man was again given an exalted position, the vis imaginativa linking him with the stars, and therefore by extension with God. Magic embracing the conjuring of daemons also appeared to be condoned in the Hermetic treatises[12] and while the difference between natural and daemonic magic was great in respect of philosophic grounds — the one only supposed planetary influences while the other supposed planetary daemons and spirits — there was no great difference in the principles of practice. Angels and daemons were substituted for the impersonal planetary influences and 'would be attracted or compelled by the various forces and would then accomplish the effects, acting not only on the body and spirit but also on the higher parts of the soul' (Walker, p. 76). A talisman with particular occult properties, having been fashioned at the right time from the right material and with the correct inscription, might be used to draw down the influence of a certain planet upon the operator or into another object. Alternatively the talisman might be used to summon the aid, and if powerful enough the presence, of the daemon who governed a particular planet. In the latter case a more complicated ceremony might well be used but the principle of sympathetic attraction was the same, whether the attraction was through such objects as talismans and seals, through perfumes, through words, or through all together in some combination. Under certain circumstances the sympathetic attractions of the various objects and words might be used to control an evil spirit for the operator's benefit.

The similarity of basic ceremony in the two types of magic resulted in some confusion over the term 'natural', for the word implied that such magic was good:

> There was for everyone, without exception, a good and a bad astrology, just as, for nearly everyone, there was a good and a bad magic. There was general agreement on the criteria for distinguishing the magics: bad magic was to do with the devil and demons; good magic was 'natural' — though one could of course argue endlessly about the proper application of these criteria. (Walker, pp. 54-55).

The Papal Nuncio and the Jesuits at Prague wanted Dee and Kelly to confess that they were dealing with evil spirits.[13] Such magic was by all definitions bad. Dee and Kelly maintained that they dealt only with angels and with good spirits. There could be no charge against them unless the spirits could be proved to be evil, for dealing with the ministers of God was both good and 'natural'. Daemonic magic did not fall into the trap of atheism or deism which was the logical consequence of natural magic. It was however a rival religion to the orthodox church. Adversaries of magic frequently argued the charge that while the operator might believe that he was only dealing with the spiritual creatures of God, he might nevertheless be deluded by evil spirits posing as good. There are examples in Dee's Actions to substantiate the argument.[14]

I have not treated natural magic and daemonic magic as being particularly distinct despite the claims of many of the natural magicians to dissociate themselves from daemonic practices. My reasons for conflating the two to some extent is that the natural magicians frequently tried to hide from themselves that their magic was sometimes really daemonic and because by the time that Dee began scrying Agrippa had successfully broken down many of the distinctions between the two. He had exposed the natural magic of Ficino as being essentially daemonic and had 'confused transitive and thaumaturgic effects with purely subjective and psychological effects' (see Walker, p. 96). In the third book of De occulta philosophia he constantly places Christian examples alongside pagan and magical ones, making little distinction between them. Agrippa's only real division was between dealing with good spirits and dealing with evil spirits, and even then there is evidence that he believed in the value of magic even of the most dangerous kind.[15] Nevertheless despite Agrippa's syncretic compilation, natural magic did follow its own course among various disciples. Agrippa absorbed natural magic into his exposition of daemonic magic, but natural magicians did often manage to avoid infusing daemonic magic into their doctrines:

> [The] tradition, as Ficino left it, comprises two kinds of magic, the natural, spiritual magic of [his De vita coelitus comparanda, the third book of de triplica vita (Florence 1489)], and the demonic magic, only hinted at in that work, but quite easily discoverable from his other writings. The tradition, therefore, was likely to grow in two divergent directions; which it did. The demonic magic, combined with mediaeval planetary magic, led to the overtly demonic, recklessly unorthodox magic of Agrippa and Paracelsus. The spiritual magic tended to dissolve into something else: music and poetry, as with La Boderie; orthodox Christianity, as with Giorgi; unorthodox Christianity, as with Persio. At the end of the 16th century the two strands of the tradition come together again in the planetary oratory of Paolini and the magic practised by Campanella. (Walker, p. 75)

The greatest influences upon Dee and Kelly appear to have been Agrippa and Reuchlin. Agrippa's De occulta philosophia and Reuchlin's De verbo mirifico and De arte cabalistica are referred to specifically in marginal notes in Sloane MS 3188 (11b & 12a). Much that the angels said concerning general theories, such as whether angels have voices, follow the theories expounded in De occulta philosophia (see pp. 117-118 below) and at another time Kelly declared that the spirits were false since their geographical descriptions could be found in the works of Agrippa (TFR, pp. 158-159).

Dee's earliest full-length publication, Propaedeumata aphoristica (1558) shows that Dee was deeply immersed in natural magic of an astrological kind. The work consists of 120 aphorisms explaining the structure of the universe in terms of harmony and dissonance, sympathy and antipathy, and circular rays that emanate from everything that exists. He declares that 'whatever is in the universe has order and harmony in relation to everything else'[16] and concludes that the world may be likened to a lyre.[17] He attaches great importance to the vis imaginativa and ends the work with an appeal to the authority of Hermes Trismegistus.[18] The magic of Propaedeumata aphoristica involves no daemons. The stars are impersonal, and any evil resulting from their influences is a result of man's already corrupt nature.[19]

Like Reuchlin and Agrippa, Dee divided the universe into three worlds, but rather less simply. Dee believed that the universe consisted of the supernatural, which was 'immaterial, simple indiuisible, incorruptible, and vnchangeable', the natural, which was 'materiall, compounded, diuisible, corruptible, and chaungeable', and 'Thynges Mathematicall', which 'beyng (in a maner) middle, between thinges supernaturall and naturall: are not so absolute and excellent, as thinges supernaturall: Nor yet so base and grosse, as things naturall: But are things immateriall: and neuerthelesse, by materiall things hable to be signified' (Preface, sig.☞ 4v). The importance of mathematics for understanding divine things was by then growing to be a common dictum. Nicolaus of Cusa (1401-1464) declared that number was always a pathway to truth among Platonists and recalled the statement of Boethius that nothing divine could be known without the aid of mathematics.[20] In his Preface Dee quoted the eleventh of Pico della Mirandola's Conclusiones that 'by Numbers, a way is had, to the searchyng out, and vnderstandying of euery thyng, hable to be knowen' and expressed the desire that 'those Conclusions were red diligently, and perceiued of such, as are earnest Obseruers and Considerers of the constant law of numbers' (Preface, sig. *jr). Agrippa stated quite adamantly that > the Doctrines of Mathematicks are so necessary to, and have such an affinity with Magick, that they that do profess it without them, are quite out of the way, and labour in vain, and shall in no wise obtain their desired effect. For whatsoever things are, and are done in these inferior natural vertues, are all done, and governed by > number, weight, measure, harmony, motion and light. (Occ. Phil., II, i, p. 167)

The origin of this emphasis upon mathematics in magic and things divine was the Platonic and Pythagorean conclusion that number and the proportion of numbers was 'the principall pattern in the mind of the Creator.'[21] Such number was 'a rationall, and formall number, not of a materiall, sensible, or vocall, the number of Merchants buying, and selling' (Occ. Phil., II, i, p. 171)

Dee further argued that number had a trinitarian state:

> One, in the Creator: an other in euery Creature (in respect of his complete constitution:) and the third, in Spirituall and Angelicall Myndes, and in the Soule of man. In the first and third state, Number, is termed Number Numbryng. But in all Creatures, otherwise, Number, is termed Number Numbred. And in our Soule, Number beareth such a swaye, and hath such an affinitie therwith: that some of the old Philosophers [e.g. Pythagoras] taught, Mans Soule, to be a Number mouing it selfe. (Preface, sig. *jv)

Through his numbering, God 'produced orderly and distinctly all thinges' and his 'Continuall Numbryng, of all thinges, is the Conseruation of them in being'. Consequently 'where and when he shall lacke an Vnit: there and then, that particular thyng shalbe Discreated' (Preface, sig. *jv). It was through the contemplation of number that man could achieve a gnosis leading to unity with the Creator:

> By Numbers...we may both winde and draw our selues into the inward and deepe search and vew, of all creatures distinct vertues, natures, properties, and Formes: And also, farder, arise, clime, ascend, and mount vp (with Speculatiue winges) in spirit, to behold in the Glas of Creation, the Forme of Formes, the Exemplar Number of all thinges Numerable: both visible and inuisible: mortall and immortall, Corporall and Spirituall. (Preface, sigs. *jr-*jv)

Dee's conception of number arose from the tradition of numerological exegesis of the Bible, leading from Philo through the Civitas Dei of St. Augustine, and the more abstractly systematic and philosophical tradition leading from Pythagoras through such writers as Nichomachus of Gerase, Martinus Capella, and Rabanus.[22] A syncretic approach to the two traditions was characteristic of Renaissance numerological thinking as the Hebrew and Greek traditions were conflated.[23] The ahistorical assumption that Plato was indebted to Moses led the Renaissance to believe that a single tradition might be traced in all preceding thought.

Yet despite Dee's acceptance and propagation of the doctrines of natural magic and a combined exegetical and philosophical tradition of conceiving the Creation in terms of formal number, the art of scrying which he practised was not based upon any tradition of natural magic nor upon a mathematical conception of the universe. The Actions do display some of the principles of natural magic, particularly with regard to the construction of some of the magical tools in respect of suitable material and time; they also exhibit a regard for the exegetical and arithmological traditions of numerology, as when the Book of Enoch is written in forty days and it is declared that 'by six and seven' all things are done (Sloane MS 3188, 54a, 32). Yet the calling of angels into a crystal belongs not to an intellectual but rather to a popular tradition of magic. It was the magic of the vagrant and the charlatan rather than the magic of Ficino and Pico della Mirandola. It did not lead to gnosis dependent upon contemplation of the universe, but embodied a direct revelation by the ministers of God independent of any gnostic achievement. The visions were seen by the man who was frequently rebuked as a sinner and not by the man whose spiritual preparations should have rendered him the more recipient to the appearance of angels of God.

Dee diverged sharply from the magic that we might have expected from him. He involved himself in magic of a different sort to that he had himself expounded in his earlier Propaedeumata aphoristica and differed in method from the daemonic magic catalogued by Agrippa. Although Agrippa mentions various forms of divination, he wastes no more than a few words on scrying and does not refer to the use of a crystal at all. Dee's involvement in scrying may be explained by the fact that it appeared to be successful; he had come across a method of receiving information from God's ministers and he was not going to let such a chance of learning the secrets of the universe slip away from him. It may be that the very fact that the spirits who appeared and were named during the Actions were hitherto unknown convinced him that the divine truth of the Creation was indeed being revealed to him. That many of the explanations of the construction of the universe may have followed his expectations, being in line with Neoplatonic thought, may have appeared as confirmation of this. Yet though the contents of the Actions with the spirits are firmly in accord with Renaissance doctrines, the method which Dee used to obtain divine revelation had changed little since the Middle Ages.

b) Scrying

Scrying may be defined as 'the faculty of seeing visions in a smooth surface or clear deep, or both.'[24] The earliest methods of scrying concentrated upon aspects of hydromancy, the seeing of visions in water, usually contained in a vessel of some kind. Such a method had apparent Biblical authority, for after concealing his silver cup in Benjamin's sack of corn, Joseph said to his steward:

> Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good? Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth? (Genesis XLIV, 4-5)

This particular method seems to have declined in popularity during the sixteenth century in favour of mirrors and crystals, if the frequency of reference in magical works of the period is any guide, although it did not disappear entirely. Dee possessed a mirror of black obsidian and several crystals which he entitled 'shew-stones'.[25]

The art of scrying with mirrors (catoptromancy) probably has rather different origins from divination with crystals (crystallomancy) although the two methods are frequently grouped together in manuscript instructions for calling spirits.[26] A major difference between the two methods is that invocations for crystals always summon angels or spirits to give the desired information, whereas accounts of catoptromancy do not always contain the appearance of such creatures. A vision of the future or some distant place does not necessarily require the presence of a spirit, even though a spiritual creature (good or evil) may be the original inspirator. The rituals for conjuring angels and spirits rarely appear in detail in the printed books of the period but such works of ceremonial magic as The Key of Solomon were circulated in manuscript.[27] The extent of the manuscript material suggests that scrying was widespread, but in many cases the manuscripts are simply copies of standard magical works and possession of a copy does not necessarily argue practice.

While the origins of catoptromancy are untraceable with any certainty, the popularity of the method may owe something to the legend of the magical tower. The legend is that in a certain town a magician erected a tower which had many extraordinary properties, one of which was a mirror which shone over the area and warned the inhabitants of the approach of any invading army. The legend exists in early Persian, Arabic, Turkish and Hebrew versions as well as > of that excellent nature, that any man might behold any thing that he desired to see, within the compass of fifty miles round about him: With this glasse he had pleasured divers kinds of people: for fathers did oftentimes desire to see (thereby) how their children did, and children how their parents did; one friend how another did, and one enemy (sometimes) how his enemy did: so that from far they would come to see this wonderfull glasse.[29]

Greek, Latin and most modern European languages. It is perhaps best known as one of the tales in the collection entitled The Seven Sages.[28] From this legend perhaps arose the equally popular stories concerning Roger Bacon's glass prospective. Bacon's works show no evidence of his having attempted the practice of scrying, but he was well versed in the science of optics (as was Dee after him) and the apparent magical properties of shaped mirrors and lenses may have caused the legend to grow. It is fundamental to the plot of Greene's The Honorable Historie of Frier Bacon and Frier Bongay (1594) and in the seventeenth-century chap-book, The Famous History of Fryer Bacon (1627), the glass is described as being:

It is possible that the legend of Bacon's glass derives from experiments with heliographs,[30] but the antiquity of catoptromancy caused his optical experiments to be misinterpreted. The reputation to which Bacon became heir may have furthered the practice of catoptromancy as others tried to discover the secret of the glass prospective.

The majority of references to magical mirrors occur in literature and are based upon the Bacon legend. In Chaucer's 'Squire's Tale' the knight who visits King Cambyuskan has just such a glass:

> This mirour eek, that I have in myn hond,
> Hath swich a myght that men may in it see > Whan ther shal fallen any adversitee
> Unto your regne or to youreself also,
> And openly who is youre freend or foo.
> And over al this, if any lady bright
> Hath set hire herte on any maner wight,

> If he be fals, she shal his tresoun see,
> His newe love, and al his subtitlee,
> So openly that ther shall no thyng hyde.[31]

Just such a mirror was lost in the Dutch tales about Reynard the Fox, which Caxton translated in 1481:

> The glasse...was of such virtue that men might see therein all that was done within a mile, of men, of beasts, and of all thing that men would desire to wit and know. And what man looked in the glass, had he any disease, pricking or motes, smart or pearls in his eyes, he should be anon healed of it. Such great virtue has the glass.[32]

A third example is to be found in Spenser's Faerie Queene. Britomart enters her father's closet and discovers a mirror into which she looks, but instead of seeing her own reflection she observes the picture of a handsome knight. It is no ordinary mirror, for it had been given to her father by Merlin the magician:

> It vertue had, to shew in perfect sight,
> What euer thing was in the world contaynd,
> Betwixt the lowest earth and heauens hight,
> So that it to the looker appertaynd;
> What euer foe had wrought, or frend had faynd,
> Therein discouered was, ne ought mote pas,
> Ne ought in secret from the same remaynd;
> For thy it round and hollow shaped was,
> Like to the world it selfe, and seem'd a world of glas.[33]

Shakespeare also makes use of the legend of the magician's mirror. It is in a mirror that Macbeth sees the sons of Banquo who will be future kings of Scotland and Angelo compares his revival of the laws of Vienna with the magician's art in Measure for Measure. He says the law is now awake and

> Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet
> Lookes in a glasse that shewes what future euile
> Either now, or by remissenesse, new conceiu'd
> And so in progresse to be hatch'd, and borne,
> Are now to haue no successiue degrees,
> But here they liue to end.[34]

There is no shortage in literature of references to scrying with mirrors, many being a consequence of Bacon's unearned reputation as a conjurer, but first-hand accounts of the practice are rare, since it could and did lead to trouble with the ecclesiastical authorities.

The definition of catoptromancy given by Jules César Boulenger in Opusculorum systema (Lyons 1621) provides a little information on the practice:

> CATOPTROMANTIA dicitur, cùm Speculum in peluim aquae plenam mittunt, et puerum integrum, aut mulierem pregnantem, quae nondum nouem mensem attigerit, adhibent, vt in speculo ea cernant, de quibus inquirunt. Ioannes Salisberiensis lib.1. cap.12. Specularios vocant, qui in corporibus laeuigatis, et tersis, vt sunt lucidi enses, pelues, cyathi, speculorumque diuersa genera diuinantes, curiosis consultationibus satisfaciunt.[35]

A similar definition by Martino Delrio provides an historical example:

> Κατοπτρομαντεια, quae rerum quaesitarum figuras in speculis exhibet politis: in vsu fuit D. Iuliano Imp. qui imperium emit, de quo ista Spartianus: fuit praetera in Iuliano haec amentia, vt per Magos pleráque faceret, quibus putaret vel odium populi deliniri, vel militum arma compesci. Nam et quasdam non conuenientes Romanis sacris hostias immolauerunt, et carmina prophana incantauerunt, et ea quae ad speculum dicunt fieri, in quo pueri, praeligatis oculis incantando, vertice respicere dicuntur, Iulianus fecit. Túncque puer vidisse dicitur, et aduentum Seueri, et Iuliani decessionem.[36]

One full record of the practice is contained in Les dialogues (Anvers 1574) by Jacques Tahureau, although its veracity is open to question. Yet even if the account is fictional, it is nevertheless sufficiently close to the general circumstances of other forms of scrying for it to be taken as a typical example. Tahureau reports that he went with a soldier friend to see a supposed magician:

> Il vint tirer tout doucemẽt de sa bourse (cõme si c'eust esté quelque precieux ioyau) vn mirouër tout brouillé et barbouillé de carac-> teres, auquel estoit magistralement depeint ce grād mot Tetragrāmaton, et aux quatre coins arriere peinte de plusiers croix et figures de planettes....ce magnifique Necromant ne laissoit point de continuer tousieurs ses coups, et extoller de plus en plus la grande et incomparable vertu de son mirouër, m'assuerat qu'il estoit fait de la vraye forme et maniere qu'estoit celuy de Salomon.

The magician had fasted for three days, except for bread and roots, had abstained from female company, and had both bathed and purified himself. After many chants and invocations he asked Tahureau if there was anyone living or dead whom he would like to see:

> Et adonc non point pour aucune foy que i'adioutasse à ces bourdes et menteries, mais pour ne me manifester point si soudain mepriseur de sa folie, pour voir aussi quelle en seroit l'issue, ie luy nommay vne personne qu'il cognoissoit bien. Cela fait, il se signa d'vne infinité de croix, puis ayāt fait vn cerne nous entrasmes dedans, et apres auoir tenu son mirouër assez long temps à l'opposite du Soleil, murmuré et gromelé entre ses dens certains mots, ietté quelques siflemens en l'air, se contretournāt, comme agité de quelque fureur deuers chascune des quatre parties du monde, Orient, Occident, Midi, et Septentrion, il me demanda si ie ne voyois rien dedans le mirouër: Ie luy respōdi qu'il disoit vray, et que ie ne voyois rien, fors que la representation de nos deux faces. Voyla vn cas estrange, ce disoit mon Philosophe cōtrefaisant du melācolique, il faut bien qu'il y ait de la faute de votre costé. Car quant est de moi ie le voy aussi visiblement, et autant au naturel cōme si ie parlois à luy, ie le voy comme il regarde dedans vn liure: Ha (ce me dit il lors soupirant à la Tuscane) ie croy que vous n'auez pas vraye foy.[37]

Characteristic of this and other methods of scrying are the purification, fasting and invocations. The attempt to capture solarian influences through holding the mirror in the sun's rays may be partially influenced by Ficino's daemonic and particularly solarian magic,[38] but the account given by Tahureau shows a much diluted version that is just as likely to be indebted to ancient sun worship or mere charlatanism. No daemons or angels appear and this is consistent with most records of catoptromancy; it is the mirror itself which possesses the magical qualities, the visions appearing directly in the mirror.

The use of crystals in scrying, however, nearly always involves the invocation of angels and spirits to appear in the crystal and to answer questions, which takes this method of divination somewhat outside the limits of natural magic as it was generally defined. Jules Boulenger does not mention this aspect of crystallomancy, merely adding after his description of catoptromancy: 'huc pertinet Crystallomantea, quam in crystalli frustis exercent. Ea frusta in cylindri, obeli, aut globi formam vt plerumque figurantur' (p.200).[39] Martino Delrio does refer to daemonic help in his description of an example of scrying with the aid of a crystal. Having first defined catoptromancy, he continues:

> Non dissimilis praecedenti, Χριζαλλομάντεια nisi quod haec in cristalli frustis fiat annulo inclusis, vel vasculo alteri, vel etiam nudis, et in cylindrum aut obelum conformatis: quibus etiam fingit se daemon inhabitare. Quédam Noribergae anno 1550, ferunt in cristallo thesauros vidisse, à daemone ostentatos: quos cùm postea quodam ante vrbem loco effosso quaereret, adhibitio familiari vno spectatore, et iam in specu arcam vidissent, atque ad eam cubantem atrum canem; magus specum ingreditur arcam aperturus, canemque abacturus, sed Cerberi offam secum non attulerat itáque ille cacumen speluncae quassauit, et miserum ruinâ obruit; qua et specus terra oppleta.[40]

Crystallomancy was frequently used for the location of buried treasure and the recovery of stolen goods and one of the earliest records in England of crystallomancy, the confession of one William Byg, alias Lech, made at Wombwell in Yorkshire on 22 August 1467, may be regarded as typical of the practice. Charged with heresy, Byg made a full confession to William Poteman, the vicar-general of the Archbishop of York, of which the following is an extract:

> Et dicit interogatus quod cencies, a tempore quo ipse primo pervenit ad villam de Wombewell, ad reducendum bona furtive subtracta, artem quae sequitur occupavit, viz., primo juvenem quemdam annorum etatis citra xij usitavit statuere super scabellum coram ipso Willelmo, et in manu pueri sive juvenis hujusmodi posuit, ut dicit, unum lapidem cristallum, ipsum cogendo dicere Pater Noster, Ave et Credo, secundum informationem istius jurati, et tunc verba proferre subsequencia; Domine Jhesu Christe, mitte nobis tres angelos ex parte dextera qui dicant aut demonstrent nobis veritatem de omnibus hiis de quibus nos interogabimus. Et tunc, ut dicit, fecit juvenem hujusmodi prospicere in lapidem, et petiit ab eo quid viderit, et si aliquid viderit, juvenis retulit ipsi jurato, et quandoque ut dicit, juvenis hujusmodi vidit in lapide praedicto bona subtracta et quandoque subtractores bonorum in eodem lapide, et quandoque duos angelos, et nunquam ultra. Et si primo viderit angelos apparentes, tunc verbis sequentibus usus est ipse juratus eisdem dicere; Domini Angeli, ego precipio vobis per Dominum et omnia sua nomina sancta, et per virginitatem, gratuite dicatis nobis veritatem et nullam falsitatem de omnibus hiis de quibus nos interogabimus, et aperte sine dampno meo et omnium presencium. Et tunc, ut dicit, fecit hujusmodi juvenem ipsos angelos sive angelum interogare, sub hiis verbis; Say me trewe, chylde, what man, what woman, or what childe hase stolne yis thyng, and shewe me thing in his hand; et tunc usus est specificare subtracta. Et tunc, ut dicit, juvenis ipse clare prospiciebat in lapide hujusmodi cristallino subtractores bonorum ac ipsa bona subtracta. Et si juvenis hujusmodi prius noverit personas hujusmodi subtrahentes, voluerit specificare nomina eorundem, sin autem voluit per manum suam designare in qua patria et qua parte ejusdem subtractores hujusmodi moram trahebant. Sed pro majori parte, ut dicit, ipsi qui aliqua bona habuerunt subtracta juvenem secum adduxerunt qui noverit partes suspectas in hac parte. Et ulterius dicit quod (si) juvenis hujusmodi post primam conjuracionem, nichil [sic] in lapide prospex(er)it, itaverit ipse, (viz. ipse juratus) ipsam conjuracionem, dicentes; Domine Jhesu Christe mitte nobis tres angelos, etc. Et dicit, quod habuit ipse juratus firmam fidem de sciendo de hujusmodi bonis subtractis, si angelus vel angeli apparuerit vel apparuerint et juvenis hujusmodi loqueretur. Et dicit, quod vigesies juvenes hujusmodi nullam apparenciam in lapide viderunt, nec ipse juratus aliquo tempore.[41]

Although this confession before Poteman was made on 22 August 1467, Byg's full submission was not made before 23 March in the following year, when he received his sentence. The charge was very grave, particularly since at the end of the confession Byg admitted that the angels were evil spirits, but the sentence was surprisingly lenient. He was ordered to walk at the head of a procession in the Cathedral of York, bearing a lighted torch in his right hand and a rod to which his books were tied in his left. Affixed to his head was a paper with the words 'Ecce sortilegus' and on his chest and back were similar papers inscribed 'Invocator Spirituum'. The title of 'sortilegus' was affixed to his shoulders and he was ordered to make a full recantation and burn his books. The punishment was repeated in the parish churches of Pontefract, Barnsley, Doncaster and Rotherham. The lapse of time between the confession and the sentence may have been due to the fact that he said that he had left his books in Greenwich shortly after the death of the Duke of Gloucester and the ecclesiastical authorities would have been anxious to recover them so that they could be destroyed. The leniency of the punishment may have been a result of Byg's implicating several persons of rank in the practice:

> Et dicit, quod circiter festum Sancti Andreae ultimo preteritum venerunt ad istum juratum usque Wombewell quidam Bisshop et Pagett de Derthington, et alii viri quorum nomina ignorat ipse juratus de presenti, et nunciaverunt eidem jurato qualiter duo calices ab ecclesia de Derthington subtractae fuerunt, desiderantes eum, quatenus vellet, eis suum auxilium in hac parte pro recuperacione eorundem exhibere. Quorum votis applaudit ipse juratus, ut dicit, et tunc habuerunt, ut dicit, ipsum juratum ad quemlibet honestum virum nomine Fitzwilliam armigerum, et ab inde usque Darthington cariarunt, et in presencia ejusdem Fitzwilliam, necnon cujusdam Scurdvill et aliorum quamplurium, produxerunt predicti Bisshop et Pagett duos pueros, et eos sedere fecerunt super ij herpicas, et artem suam predictam in eis exercuit > predictus juratus, ut dicit, et alter ipsorum puerorum, ut dicit, vidit in lapide predicto quemdam virum, sed quem nescit, ut dicit habentem calicem argenteum in manibus suis, et aliter, ut dicit, diffamavit nunquam ipse juratus vicarium de Darthyngton seu aliquem alium super premissis.[42]

The Archbishop, being of Neville blood,[43] would not want to lay his hands upon a Fitzwilliam.

Less fortunate than Byg would have been the priest arrested by the Abbot of Abbingdon sometime between 1534 and 1540, when Thomas Cromwell was secretary. In a letter to Cromwell the Abbot requested instructions for dealing with the recalcitrant priest:

> Right honorable and my very singuler good Maister, in my mooste humble wyse I cõmende me vnto you. It shall please your Maistership to be advertesed that my Officers have taken here a Preyste, a suspecte parson, and with hym certeyn bokes of conjuracions, in the whiche ys conteyned many conclusions of that worke; as fyndyng out of tresure hydde, consecratyng of ryngs with stones in theym, and consecratyng of a cristal stone wheryn a chylde shall looke, and se many thyngs. Ther ys also many fygors in hyt whiche haue dyuers thyngs in theym, and amongs all, one the whiche hath a swerde crossed ouer with a septor. I haue sente yo^{r} Maistership the boke by the berer herof, beseechyng yo^{r} Maistership to send me your myende what I shall do with the parson. Whether I shall sende hym to Oxford Castell or Walyngford Castell, or to any other place that you wyll assigne. Yf I shall so do, I beseche yo^{r} Maistership to send some cõmaundement in wrytyng to the Shreyffe or hys Officers that they wyll reseve hym. I beseche you to be my good Maister as you haue before tyme byn. And so Jehu haue you in hys blyssed kepyng. Wretyn at Abbendon, the vjth day of October, at your Maisterships cõmaundement, with my seruyce.
>
> THOMAS, Abbas Abendonensis Monasterij.[44]

In these accounts there is no mention of the summoning of angels or spirits for any other purpose than the recovery of buried treasure and stolen property. Most scrying with the aid of crystals appears to have been solely for the purpose of locating concealed objects and not for direct contact with the supernatural world.

Yet there is no doubt that it had a wide distribution, since the Statute against conjuration and witchcraft of 1541-42 expressly prohibited the practice. Although the use of crystals is not mentioned, it is clear that the act was partly intended for the suppression of such scrying. It begins:

> Where dyuerse and sondry persones unlaufully haue deuised and practised inuocacions and coniuracions of spirites, pretendynge by suche meanes to vnderstande and gette knowledge for theyr owne lucre, in what place treasure of gold and syluer shoulde or moughte be founde or had in the earth or other secrete places, and allso haue vsed and occupied witchcraftes inchauntementes and sorceries, to the destruction of theyr neyghbours persons and goodes....[45]

The penalty imposed for such offences was death and forfeiture of all goods.

In 1549 Sir Thomas Smith examined a certain William Wicherly upon accusation of conjuring up spirits. Part of Wicherly's deposition concerns the use of a crystal, and gives greater detail of the results than do most confessions:

> Item, he saith that about ten years past he used a circule called Circulus Salamonis, at a place called Pembsam in Sussex, to calle up Baro, whom he taketh an orientalle or septentrialle spirit. Where was also one Robert Bayly the scryer of the cristalle stone, syr John Anderson the magister operator, syr John Hickley, and Thomas Goslyng, in which their practise they had sworde, ring, and hally-water. Where they were frustrated, for Baro did not appere, nor other vision of spirit, but there was a terrible wynde and tempest for the tyme of the circulation. And sithens that tyme he used no consecrat cyrcule, but hath used the cristalle to invocate the spirit called Scariot, which he called dyvers tymes into the cristall, to have knowledge of thyngs stolne, which spirit hath geven hym knowledge an C. tymes, and thereby men have been restored to their goodes.
>
> And this practise by the cristalle he hath at the commaundement of my lord protector executed in the presence of mr. Thynne, mr. Whalley, mr. George Blage and mr. Challoner, and one Weldon.

> And by this meane my lord protector's plate was founde, where this deponent told his grace that it was hidd.[46]

Wicherly attempted to call particular spirits into the crystal, rather than just invoking any supernatural creature. Wicherly's experiments show a more methodic approach to the art in that he is clearly following a precise ritual to invoke a particular spirit. Wicherly implicated others in the confessions of his own dealings, and also named other scryers:

> Item, he knoweth that one Lowth, in Flete-strete, a broderer, useth the cristall stone, and goeth about daily to dygge for treasure.
>
> Thomas Malfrey of Goldstone beside Yarmouth, and a woman besides Stoke Clare, whose name he knoweth not, are skryers of the glasse....
>
> Maier, a preest, and now say-master of the mynt at Durham house, hath conjured for treasure and their stolne goods.
>
> Sir John Lloyd, a preest, that somtyme dwelt at Godstone besides Croydon, hath used it like-wyse. (p. 334)

The main purposes of crystallomancy in these cases are to discover hidden treasure and to retrieve stolen articles.

The art of scrying appealed to all sections of the community it seems. A manuscript book that belonged to Dr. Caius, the founder of Caius College, contains long extracts from Agrippa's De occulta philosophia, Abano's Elementa magica and various conjurations. One of these is 'pro cristallo: aut Vrinali: aut speculo', and requests visionary help:

> In the name of the father + and of the son, and of the holye ghost + amen, I pray the heavenlye father, as thou art the maker of heavne and the earthe, and of all thinges therin, conteined, and not onlye hast made them, but allso doist worke besides ther creation wonderfullye in them; asweell in angels thye celestiall spirites, as also in men, foule, fishe, and beste,as in other sensibell thinges, as in wodes, trese, water, stones, gresse, and herbes, bye the whiche ther operation, we are moved to prayse thye holye name: and to saye, holye god and > heavnelye father, make me now to perceive and understande, thye mervilous workes, in this clere and puer cristall.[47]

Later in the manuscript there is 'a notable Journal of an experimental Magician' which contains the records of scrying experiments between 24 February and 22 March 1567. These experiments involved John Davis as the scryer and H,G. as operator. Humphrey Gilbert was in England during 1567 and it seems most likely that the initials stand for his name, particularly since John Davis is probably the same John Davis who with Adrian Gilbert received instruction from Dee's angelic experiments.[48] The manuscript also contains an invocation 'to have a spirit in a glasse to tell all things' (fol.66a).

Anonymity seems to have been largely preserved by keeping the papers secret. John Davis does not hide his identity in the manuscript cited above, probably because he felt that he was acting within a Christian framework, much as Dee did. The magic that he was performing was good magic, for he was calling angels and not devils. There could be no wrong in calling upon God's creatures. The principal dangers lay in the suspicions and slanders of those who did not understand the nature of the experiments. Dee's life was a continual battle against the rumours of the ignorant who failed to perceive what he believed to be the Christian nature of his experiments and the good that must ensue. In private papers the facts were faithfully recorded as Dee's MSS prove. Although Simon Forman is something of a peculiarity of the time, his diary also demonstrates the openness of personal writings on the subject together with the need to prevent public knowledge. He summed up 1584 as 'a reasonable, good, and quiet yere; but I had certain braulles and sclaunders fell out against me aboute the detecting of one that had stollen certain thinges, wherby I was like to have bin spoiled'.[49]

It is unlikely that Forman used a crystal for this episode since it is not until 1588 that he notes that he 'began to practise necromancy and to calle aungells and spirits' (p.19), but other methods of tracing stolen goods were equally suspiciously regarded. Catoptromancy may well have been the basis of his earlier experiment in the detection of a thief.

Not all experiments were particularly successful. At the end of Ashmole's copy of Dee's actions between 1581 and 1583 there are bound in some papers dealing with Actions held between 1585 and 1586 with unknown participants.[50] The experiment seems to have got out of control since no angels appeared but noises were heard and objects were inexplicably precipitated around the room. In general however, records of actual practices are fewer than copies of instructions and invocations. Sloane MS 3848 contains instructions for conducting 'an experyment approved and unknowne of Ascaryell to see most excellent and certainlye in a christall stonne what secretts thow wilt'. Although the experiment is 'approved' there is no evidence in the manuscript of it being put into practice. The experiment is in this case dependent upon solarian influences, much like the mirror in Tahureau's account of catoptromancy:

> First take a christall stonne or a glasse, the greater the better so that it be fayre and cleare, without any ragges cracks or holes broken within and thou must have a thonge of harts skinn, to wrappe thy stonne in so that thy stonne may be well seene in the middest of the bindinge, and ever when thou dost wrappe the stonne about with the thonge say thus In nomine sanctae trinitatis et dietatis hanc gemmam tecondo: Then holde the christall stonne which is so dight in thy right hande against the .☉. [sun] which must be done in the heate of the .☉. at noone when the .☉. is in the highest and hottest and soe call him [Ascaryell] in such likenes as thou wilt by the conjuration followinge and he will come and shew thee what thou wilt in all countryes of all thinges whatsoever

> thou wilt aske him and thou shalt commaund him > to bringe his fellowes with him.[51]

The special conjuration then follows. According to Ashmole, Sloane MS 3851 is in 'the hand writing of one Mr. Arthur Gauntlet, who professed Phisick and lived about Graies Inn Lane' (fol. 2b). After a transcript of Arbatel de Magia there follows a number of invocations for making angels appear in crystals or mirrors. From the authoritative manner of the instructions it is probable that this is a copy of a compendium of scrying of some sort, most likely circulated in manuscript. The invocation 'to call Three Heavenly Angells into a Christall Stone or looking Glasse to the visible sight of A Child' bears many similarities with William Byg's confessed method and suggests that Byg may have followed a standard work upon the subject:

> Make a Crosse on the forhead of the Child > with the Thumb of thy right Hand Saying > In nomine Patris filii et Spiritus Sanctus Amen.
> Then with a new Penn wright on the midest of the > Stone Or Glasse with Oyle Ollive this name Hermely.
> Then sett the Child betweene thy leggs Thou sitting > in the Chaire And lett him say after thee. The > Lords Prayer The Beleefe and These names following
> + On + Ell + Eloy + Eley + Messias + Sother +
> Emanuell + Sabaoth + In the name of the Father +
> And of the Sonne + And of the Holy Ghost + Amen ∾:
> Then say to thy self this Prayer following . ∾.
> O Lord Jesus Christ King of Glory by vertue of > those whome they call Hermely and by thy power > and mercy Send unto us Three of thy good Angells > from thy right hand of Glory Into the middest Of > this Cristall Stone (or Glasse) To the visible > Sight of this Childe maide and virgin lett them > make true answers True Judgment and true appear> ance Revealing vnto us all things doubtfull and > unsertaine [sic] without all falshoode fraude or > deseipt [sic] Graunt this Sweete Jesheu I most > humblie pray and beseech thee Amen. (fol. 40b)

The use of a child, the recital of the Lord's Prayer and the Creed, the request for three angels from God's right hand, and the request for true answers all appear in Byg's confession. We may therefore presume that there was an established method of scrying and an established ritual of invocation. Such instructions were probably circulated in manuscript along with other magical works. Magical rituals display an enormous variety, however, and although many examples of scrying experiments do not have such corroborative evidence of defined ritual as that above, they must not on that account be regarded as divergent from a principal method. Sloane MS 3851 contains many different forms of invocations for spirits to appear in a crystal and they are all set forth as equally valid alternatives.

The practice of scrying seems to have been as popular in the seventeenth century as in the sixteenth. Richard Napier, a former pupil of Simon Forman, was a practitioner of crystallomancy according to John Aubrey,[52] and many noteworthy persons had experience of visions in reflective objects. Aubrey notes that he was reliably informed by James Harrington, the author of Oceana, that 'the Earl of Denbigh then Ambassador at Venice did tell him, that one did shew him there several times in a Glass, things past, and to come'. Sir Marmaduke Langdale also experienced a prophetic vision in a glass belonging to a magus and Sir Edward Harley possessed a beryl or crystal inscribed with angels' names that an unidentified minister and later a miller had once used.[53] Aubrey notes a few other examples that had come to his attention. A further example is to be found in William Lilly's autobiography:

> I was very familiar with one Sarah Skelhorn, who had been Speculatrix unto one Arthur Gauntlet about Gray's-Inn-Lane, a very lewd fellow, professing physick. This Sarah had a perfect sight, and indeed the best eyes for that purpose I ever yet did see. Gauntlet's books, after he was dead, were sold, after I had perused them, to my scholar Humphreys: there were rare notions in them. This Sarah lived a long time, even until her death, with one Mrs. Stockman in the Isle of Purbeck, and died about sixteen years since.

> Her mistress one time being desirous to accompany her mother, the Lady Beconsfield, unto London, who lived twelve miles from her habitation, caused Sarah to inspect her crystal, to see if she, viz. her mother, was gone, yea or not: the angels appeared, and shewed her mother opening a trunk, and taking out a red waistcoat, whereby she perceived she was not gone. Next day she went to her mother's and there, as she entered the chamber, she was opening a trunk, and had a red waistcoat in her hand. Sarah told me oft, the angels would for some years follow her, and appear in every room of the house, until she was weary of them.
>
> This Sarah Skelhorn, her call unto the crystal began,
>
> 'Oh ye good angels, only and only,' &c
>
> Ellen Evans, daughter of my tutor Evans, her call unto the crystal was this:
>
> 'O Micol, O tu Micol, regina pigmeorum veni, &c.'[54]

Three points of particular interest arise from this account. Sarah Skelhorn's crystal acted in the same manner as the glass prospective of the Bacon legend in that it showed the future, whereas in other accounts of scrying for the recovery of stolen goods, the crystal shows the present whereabouts of the property. The angels also appeared outside of the crystal, as indeed they are recorded as doing in Dee's experiments.[55] Ellen Evans invoked the Queen of the Fairies as opposed to angels of God or other spirits, but then Lilly's accounts generally fail to distinguish between fairies and other spirits, since he regards them all as belonging to the world of the supernatural.

Lilly remarks that the summoning of spirits is an art that not all can master. He says that 'very many have failed just at that present when they [the angels] are ready to manifest themselves' (p. 230) and gives an example:

> Sir Robert Holborn, Knight, brought once unto me Gladwell of Suffolk, who had formerly had sight and conference with Uriel and Raphael, but lost them both by carelessness; so that neither of them both would but rarely appear, and then presently be gone, resolving nothing.

> He would have given me two hundred pounds to have assisted him for their recovery, but I am no such man. Those glorious creatures, if well commanded, and well observed, do teach the master any thing he desires; Amant secreta, fugiunt aperta. (p.231)

Lilly notes of this Gladwell of Suffolk that 'Mr. Gilbert Wakering gave him his berril when he died; it was of the largeness of a good big orange, set in silver, with a cross on the top, and another on the handle; and round about engraved the names of these angels, Raphael, Gabriel, Uriel' (p.231).

Lilly notes that 'neatness and cleanliness in apparel, a strict diet, and upright life, fervent prayers unto God, conduce much to the assistance of those who are curious these ways' (p.232). This is frequently emphasised in accounts of scrying as being a very necessary requirement. As with all magic, preparation of the body, mind and soul is required.

From all the accounts we may build up a general picture of scrying. Catoptromancy may use a young boy or pregnant woman as the medium and can involve incantations and purification ceremonies, but most often it is simply a question of looking into a mirror, for the mirror itself has magical properties. Crystallomancy usually invokes angelic aid and begins with purification of the operators, prayers to God and his angels, fasting and abstinence. In most cases a young boy is used as the medium, but even when an older person is used, it is not customary for the operator to see any visions himself. Lilly's account of Sarah Skelhorn's activities is unusual in this respect and more closely resembles modern practice, although modern crystallomancy does not generally include the appearance of angelic informants. The principal use of crystallomancy in the sixteenth century was for the recovery of stolen goods and for the location of buried treasure. Some more learned operators like Dee sought more than that however. They were not concerned with making a living from the art, but with gaining supercelestial knowledge. Through the visions of angels in the crystal they sought to know what was hidden from mankind but revealed to the angels. Scrying for buried treasure did form a minor part of Dee's practice, but his main purpose did not rest on such a mundane level. Dee's use of the crystal far exceeded the limits of common practice and holds a singular place in the history of scrying.

1. See Lynn Thorndike, A History of Magic and Experimental Science, 6 vols (New York 1929-1958), Wayne Shumaker, The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance (Berkeley and London 1972), D. P. Walker, Spiritual and Demonic Magic from Ficino to Campanella (London 1958) and Frances A. Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (London and Chicago 1964). I am particularly indebted for much of what follows to the study by D. P. Walker.

2. The work was completed before Cosimo died in 1464. What Ficino translated was only the fourteen tracts to which he gave the title Pimander, although his contemporaries used this title to designate the whole Corpus Hermeticum (see Yates, Giordano Bruno, pp. 12-14).

3. They were correctly dated as having been written in the second and third centuries AD by Isaac Casaubon (the father of Meric Casaubon) in 1614.

4. Giovanni Pico della Mirandola, Oration on the Dignity of Man (written c. 1486), translated by Elizabeth Livermore Forbes, in The Renaissance Philosophy of Man, edited by Ernst Cassirer et al. (London and Chicago 1967), pp. 223-254, p. 225.

5. See I.R.F. Calder, 'John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist', I, 141-148 for particular discussion of this point in relation to Dee.

6. Calder, I, 126.

7. Ernst Cassirer, The Individual and the Cosmos in Renaissance Philosophy, translated by Mario Domandi (Oxford 1963), p. 152.

8. I use the word 'daemon' rather than 'demon' to avoid the presupposed connection with evil implied by the latter term. A daemon may be good, evil, or impartial.

9. Johannes Reuchlin, E Cabala, printed in Sir Thomas Stanley's History of Philosophy (London 1656), p. 571 ff.

10. John Dee, 'Mathematicall Preface' to The Elements of Geometrie of the most auncient Philosopher Euclide of Megara, translated by Sir Henry Billingsley (London 1570), sig. ☞ 4v. Hereafter I shall abbreviate this to Preface.

11. Gianbattista della Porta, Natural Magick (1658), edited by Derek J. Price (New York 1957), Bk I, ch. ii, p. 2.

12. The Asclepius stated that daemons might be drawn down to inhabit and animate statues and in the Pimander the thirty-six decans, originally Egyptian sidereal gods, rule over the Zodiac according to divisions of ten degrees, while the 'governors' of the seven planets are represented as being especially powerful.

13. See Josten, 'An Unknown Chapter', pp. 229-237.

14. In the Action of 10 March 1582 'an Illuding Spirit' suddenly takes the place of Uriel without Dee and Kelly realising, the discovery being made much later (Sloane MS 3188, 9b and 96b).

15. See Walker, p. 91 and Thorndike V, 127-138.

16. John Dee, Propaedeumata aphoristica (London 1558), Aphorism IX, sig. A1v.

17. Propaedeumata aphoristica, Aphorism XII, sig. A2r.

18. Propaedeumata aphoristica, Aphorism CXIX, sig. F2v

19. Propaedeumata aphoristica, Aphorism CXII, sig. E4r.

20. Nicolai de Cusa, De docta ignorantia, edited by Ernestus Hoffman and Raymundus Klibunsky (Lipsiae 1932), p. 23.

21. Agrippa, Occ. Phil. II, i, p. 170, and Dee, Preface, sig. *jr.

22. On these two traditions see Christopher Butler, Number Symbolism (London 1970), pp. 22-44.

23. See Butler, Number Symbolism, pp. 47-77.

24. Theodore Besterman, Crystalgazing: A Study in the History, Distribution, Theory and Practice of Skrying (London 1924), p. 2.

25. See below pp. 137-141.

26. See for instance Bodleian, Rawlinson MS D 252, and BM Sloane MSS 1317, 3848 and 3851.

27. There are many magical works which bear the name of Solomon. The oldest version of the Key or Clavicle of Solomon is a sixteenth-century Latin copy translated from Hebrew by Isau Abbraha. This is now BM Additional MS 10,687. Copies of The Clavicle of Solomon are contained in Sloane MSS 2731, 3091, 3648, 3805, 3825 and 3847, dating from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. A fourteenth-century MS of Opus de arte magica of Solomon is in Sloane MS 3854.

28. For an account of the various versions see the introduction to Le Roman des Sept Sages, edited by H. A. Keller (Tübingen 1836).

29. The Famous History of Fryer Bacon, Early English Prose Romances III (London 1858), p. 147, edition limited to 500 copies.

30. The Sunday Telegraph of 25 June 1978 contains a short article by Gabriel Ronay about Dee's use of a heliograph which I have unfortunately been unable to verify. Ronay cites the Austrian chronicle Annales Ferdinandi as his source and states that Dee used the moon as the light source and 'sold the moonbeam telegraph to Hapsburg Emperor Rudolf II during his stay in Prague in 1584', although no such fact is recorded in Dee's own writings. Ronay relates the story as follows:

> 'On March 29th, 1598, a Hungarian Commando Unit blew up the gates of the fortress of Gyõr, Western Hungary. After five hours of battle, the town was recovered from the Turks. An officer called Hans Christoph Boheimõ was despatched immediately on horseback to take the news of the victory post-haste to Emperor Rudolf.
>
> It took him more than two days to reach Prague. The exhausted officer had to be helped out of his saddle and carried to the emperor to make his report. But the Emperor would not let him speak. To his amazement, a courtier recounted every detail of the battle.
>
> He was then told that the news had reached the Emperor through the "moonbeam telegraph invented by the Englishman John Dee". According to the chronicle, sometime before the battle ten relay stations had been constructed between Gyõr and Prague at intervals of 40 kilometres. With the help of these, the news of the victory had been flashed to Prague'.

Even allowing for some sensationalism, the story is hard to believe. It seems most odd that the messenger should not know that his own side was operating a heliograph system and the 40 kilometre interval does seem very large, even assuming that the light source was the sun and not the moon. Some evidence that there might be at least some grain of truth in the story came in the form of a letter to the Sunday Telegraph the following week, however. A Mr. Laurence Moore,who had once been a Signal Corporal in the Imperial Camel Corps in the Hejaz and had used the moon as a light source for a heliograph,wrote:

> 'A heliograph used at night reflected a most beautiful light of the desert moon and was more effective than our Morse lamp of the time (Begbie, superseded by the Aldis).
>
> The standard 5-inch heliograph in clear sunlight could be read with [a] telescope 40 miles away if both stations were at sufficient altitude; but the "Lunagraph" was limited to something less than 10 miles. There was a 9-inch helio mirror with a greater range but I never operated one'.

It is then possible that a heliograph might have been used but the problem remains as to what kind of code system might have been used to convey the message. I suspect that behind the whole story lies simply the glass that Dee gave to Lord Rosenberg which then came into Rudolf's hands in 1588 and not 1584 (see below p.140) and that Dee may have at some time experimented with the sending of extremely simple messages (e.g. a repeated series of flashes indicating an expected result had taken place) using both sunlight and moonlight. Popular gossip then put the two together and transferred them to good use as national propaganda.

31. The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, edited by F. N. Robinson, second edition (London 1970), p. 129, 'Squire's Tale', lines 132-141.

32. The History of Reynard the Fox, edited by Donald B. Sands (Cambridge, Massachusetts 1960), pp. 144-145.

33. The Works of Edmund Spenser, edited by E. Greenlaw, C. G. Osgood, F. M. Padelford and R. Heffner, variorum edition, 11 vols (Baltimore 1932-57, reprinted 1958-66), III, 24 (Bk III, canto ii, st. 19).

34. The First Folio of Shakespeare prepared by Charlton Hinman (New York 1968), Measure for Measure lines 849-854.

35. Jules César Boulenger, Opusculorum systema, 2 tomes (Lyons 1621), Tome 1, Bk iii, ch. 7, pp. 199-200: 'It is called catoptromantia when a mirror is placed in a basin full of water and a pure boy or a pregnant woman, who has not yet reached her ninth month, is used to perceive in the mirror things that are requested. In Book I Chapter 12 [of Polycraticus] John of Salisbury gives the name of Specularii to those who give answers through curious consultations in polished and clean bodies, such as bright swords, basins, ladles and various kinds of mirror suitable for augury'. From Specularios to the end is a direct quotation from Polycraticus, I, 12.

36. Martino Delrio, Disquisitionum magicarum libri sex (Lyons 1608), p. 283: 'Catoptromantia [is the art] which displays visions of things that are asked for in polished mirrors. The art was used by the Emperor D[idius] Julianus, who bought the empire and Spartianus writes:"Julianus, furthermore, was mad enough to perform a number of rites with the aid of magicians, such as were calculated either to lessen the hate of the people or to restrain the arms of the soldiers. For the magicians sacrificed certain victims that are foreign to the Roman ritual and chanted unholy songs, while Julianus performed rites, which took place, so we are told, before a mirror, into which boys are said to gaze, after bandages have been bound over their eyes and charms muttered over their heads. And in this performance one lad, it is said, saw the arrival of Severus and the retirement of Julianus"'. The passage in double quotation marks is from Scriptores historiae Augustae and I have used the Loeb translation by David Magie, 3 vols (Cambridge, Mass. 1960), I, 365. According to Dio, lxxiii, 16, 5, the foreign rites involved the sacrifice of children.

37. Jacques Tahureau, Les Dialogues (Anvers 1574), pp. 228-229: 'He had drawn from his purse very gently (as if it had been some precious jewel) a mirror that was scribbled over with a confusion of characters and on which there was magisterially drawn this great word Tetragrammaton. The four corners on the back were painted with several crosses and the signs of the planets...This mangificent necromancer did not cease to keep up his attack, and extolling more and more the great and incomparable virtue of his mirror, assured me that it was made in the true form and manner of that which Solomon had possessed'...'And then, not from any belief that I attached to these tales and lies, but rather so as not to show myself so suddenly as scorning his foolishness, and also to see what the outcome would be, I named to him a person that he knew well. When that had been done, he crossed himself an infinite number of times and made a circle into which we stepped. Then after holding his mirror in the sun's rays for quite a long time, murmuring and muttering certain words between his teeth, he whistled a few times while turning around, as if driven by some passion, towards the four corners of the world, East, West, South and North. Then he asked me whether I did not see anything in the mirror. I replied to him that he was quite correct and that I did not see anything, except the image of our two faces. "That's strange," said my philosopher, putting on a melancholy expression. "It must be that there is something wrong with you, for as for myself, I see him as clearly and just as naturally as if I were talking to him. I see him reading a book. Ah," he said to me then, sighing to the Tuscan, "I believe that you have no real faith"'.

38. See D. P. Walker, Spiritual and Demonic Magic from Ficino to Campanella, pp. 40-57.

39. 'To this field [of divination] there also belongs crystallomancy, which is when they practise [the art] with pieces of crystal. These pieces [of crystal] are shaped into cylinders, obelisks, or (as they are most commonly) spheres'.

40. 'Not dissimilar from the above is crystallomanteia, except that in this case it is practised with pieces of crystal clasped in rings, in a small vase, or even unadorned and shaped like a cylinder or obelisk. In these a demon claims to live. A certain person of Nürenberg is said to have seen treasures shown by a demon in a crystal in 1550. When he sought them afterwards at a certain spot dug out in front of the city, he and a friend he had summoned to be a witness saw a chest in a cave with a black dog lying down in front of it. The magician entered the cave and was going to drive away the dog and open the chest, but he had not brought a sop for Cerberus. The dog shook the top of the cave and overwhelmed the wretched man in ruin, also filling the cave with earth' (I, 365).

41. J. Raine, 'Divination in the Fifteenth Century by Aid of a Magical Crystal', The Archaeological Journal, XIII (1856), 372-374, pp. 373-374:
'The accused says that a hundred times, from his first coming to the town of Wombwell, he practised the following art for the recovery of goods that had been secretly stolen: first he placed a certain youth of less than twelve years of age on a stool in the presence of the said William and placed a crystal stone in the hand of the said boy or youth, making him say the Pater Noster, Ave and Credo. Then, according to the information of the accused, the boy was made to say the following words: "Lord Jesus Christ, send to us three angels from thy right hand to tell or show us the truth of all that we shall ask." Then, according to the accused, he made the said boy look into the stone and asked him what he saw, and if he did see anything, to tell the accused. He says that sometimes the boy saw in the foresaid stone the stolen goods, sometimes the thieves themselves, sometimes one angel and sometimes two angels, but never more than that number. If at first the boy saw angels appear, the accused would say the following words to them: "Ministering angels, I command you by the Lord God, by all his holy names, and by the Virgin Mary, freely to tell us the truth and no lies about anything that we shall ask, openly and without danger to myself and all present." Then using these words he made the said boy question the angels or angel: "Say me trewe... his hand." Then he would specify the missing property. The accused says that the boy would then see clearly in the said stone the thieves and the stolen goods themselves. If the boy already knew the said thieves, he would give their names, or if he did not, he would demonstrate with his hand in what country and in what part of the same they were staying. But for the most part, says the accused, those who had lost any goods brought with them a boy who knew the parties under suspicion in the case. Furthermore he says that if the said boy saw nothing in the stone after the first conjuration, he (the accused) would repeat the same conjuration, saying: "Lord...etc." He says that he had a firm faith that the stolen goods would be discovered if an angel or angels appeared and the boy spoke. He says that twenty times boys like this had seen nothing appear in the stone and that he himself never saw anything at this time.'

42. 'He says that about the time of the Feast of St. Andrew last there came to the accused in Wombwell a certain Bishop and Paget from Derthington, together with other men whose names he does not at present know. They told the accused how two goblets had been stolen from the church at Derthington and requested him, in so far as he would, to lend his help in respect of their recovery. The accused agreed to their wishes and they took him to a certain honest man called Fitzwilliam, a gentleman. From there they went to Derthington and in the presence of that same Fitzwilliam, together with a certain Scurdville and others, the foresaid Bishop and Paget produced two boys and seated them on two wicker stools. The accused practised the said art in them and one of the boys saw in the foresaid stone a certain man, whom he did not know, holding the silver cup in his hands. Otherwise, as the accused says, he never maligned the vicar of Derthington or anyone else concerning what had been alleged in the foresaid matter'.

43. Geoffrey Neville was Archbishop of York between 1465 and 1476.

44. Original Letters Illustrative of English History, edited by Sir Henry Ellis, 3rd Series, 4 vols (London 1846), III, 41-42, Letter CCLXVIII.

45. The Second Volume Conteinyng those Statutes whiche haue ben made in the Tyme of the Most Victorious Reigne of Kynge Henrie the Eight (London 1543), Anno XXXIII, ch. vii, sigs B5v-B6r, 'An act against coniuracions, witchcraftes, sorcery, and enchauntmentes'.

46. Narratives of the Days of the Reformation, edited by John Gough Nichols, Camden Society (London 1859), pp. 332-333.

47. BM Additional MS 36674, fols 40a-40b.

48. Gilbert became for a while a participant in the Actions, but Davis did not; both were heavily involved in the plans to find a North-West passage, however, and Dee's interpretation of an angelic command that Gilbert should 'cary the name of Jesus among the Infidells' would embrace Davis as well (Sloane MS 3188, 65a). Davis is further referred to at fol. 67a.

49. The Autobiography and Personal Diary of Dr. Simon Forman, edited by James Orchard Halliwell (London 1849), p. 17, edition limited to 150 copies.

50. Sloane MS 3677, fols 173a-175b.

51. Sloane MS 3848, fol. 148. The complete ritual continues until fol. 151a.

52. John Aubrey, Three Prose Works, edited by John Buchanan-Brown (Fontwell 1972), pp. 101-102.

53. Aubrey, Three Prose Works, p. 99.

54. William Lilly's History of his Life and Times, published from the original MS, London, 1715 (London 1822), pp. 228-229.

55. See TFR, p. 1.

IV

FRAUD AND CRYPTOGRAPHY

The unusual nature of Dee's scrying experiments does not remove the doubt that attaches itself to all methods of divination: the doubt as to whether the divinatory practice is a fraudulent exercise or a genuine inspiration. It is clear from the evidence contained in the previous chapter that whether spirits really appeared in the crystals or not, many people, including those who condemned the practice, believed that they did, although this itself is only proof of the belief and not of the fact of spiritual appearance. Until the recent rehabilitation of Dee, largely on account of the researches into Renaissance occult philosophy by Frances Yates, Dee's Actions with spirits aroused interest largely because of the doubt surrounding the authenticity of the events described. The central controversies were whether Dee was indeed dealing with angels or dealing with devils, and whether he was the perpetrator or the victim of a long-lasting fraud. While major interest in the Actions now centres upon Dee's position in relation to Renaissance scientific and occult thought, the question of the authenticity of the events is nonetheless pertinent. A judgement must be made. In reaching that judgement the conclusions of two prominent men deserve examination: Meric Casaubon, who believed Dee was deluded by devils, and Robert Hooke, who thought that the Actions were cryptographical.

When Meric Casaubon undertook the publication of most of the records of Dee's angelic dealings then in the Cotton library, his purpose was 'not to satisfie curiosity, but to do good,and promote Religion' (TFR,'Preface' sig. A1r). The publication in 1659 was controversial and although the Archbishop of Armagh was attested to have declared that 'it was an excellent Booke to convince Atheists',[1] Casaubon recorded that 'the Booke was stopt at the Press, and in question at the Councill Table, [and] if the Protector had lived it had not been printed'.[2] Casaubon was himself under some suspicion of atheism on account of an earlier attempt to prove that all divine inspiration was only 'imposture or melancholy, and depraved phantasie, arising from natural causes'[3] and the publication of A True and Faithful Relation helped to refute the charge of atheism, while nevertheless demonstrating that supposedly divine inspiration was, at least in the case of Dee, diabolic deception. Casaubon was under no doubt that Dee and Kelly did raise spirits. After citing many classical authors he concluded that 'upon due consideration of the premises', he could in no way satisfy himself 'how any Learned man, sober and rational, can entertain such an opinion (simply and seriously) That there be no Divels nor Spirits' (TFR, 'Preface' sig.C1v). It was in the nature of the spirits that he considered Dee to be deluded, mistaking 'false lying Spirits for Angels of light' (TFR, 'Preface' sig. D1v). For this Dee's pride was principally to blame (TFR, 'Preface' sig. D4v).

While Casaubon believed that Dee dealt with the spirits in all simplicity and sincerity (TFR, 'Preface' sig. D2v),he was equally convinced that Kelly was fully aware of the nature of the spirits raised:

> For certain it is by this whole story [i.e. TFR], from the beginning to the end of it, that Kelley was a great Conjurer, one that daily conversed by such art as is used by ordinary Magicians, with evil Spirits, and knew them to be so. Yet I would suppose that he was one of the best sort of Magicians, that dealt with Spirits by a kind of Command (as is well known some do) and not by any Compact or agreement. (TFR, 'Preface' sig.D3r)

Dee's pride was again responsible for his refusal to believe Kelly's repeated admissions that the spirits they were dealing with were evil (TFR, 'Preface' sig. E1v). Casaubon acknowledged that Kelly might have defrauded Dee, even mechanically faking apparitions, but thought the evidence to be too weighty to concede in this case that there might be no substance in the Actions (TFR, 'Preface' sig.A2v). Eleven years after the publication of TFR he was even more convinced that the Actions recorded the true raising of spirits:

> But then those supernatural effects and operations by Witches and Magicians, which are daily seen, (though not acknowledged by all men, I confess, but upon what account, hath been enquired and fully discoursed by us elsewhere [i.e. TFR]: though liable to such imposture, it is confessed (and what is not in this world) yet many of them so certain and so well attested as nothing can be more: whereof we have given many pregnant instances in the same book:) can he that beleeves them, and knows how to make a difference, between the power of created Spirits, and an Eternal God the Creator of all things; think any thing impossible to God?[4]

A contemporary noted his own opinions in the copy of TFR that Shippen collated and annotated, these cautiously following the judgement given by Casaubon in the 'Preface' to the work:

> To Believe all this was mere Melancholy and Enthusiasme in Dr. Dee that continued so many years in him I thinke is an Assertion too bold for any Man to offer
> Or to believe that Either Bartholomew [Hickman], his son Arthur who did pretend to see did Abuse him I thinke is more then any one will say.
> For E:K no doubt he was a very Rascall but whether he was alwayes an Impostor and pretended to see that he did not and Hear also and so long together is very Difficult to believe.[5]

The same writer also noted that Meric Casaubon was 'a very learned and Pious Man but most lamentably troubled with Hypochondriac Melancholy'. The principal controversies raised by the book as to whether the spirits were real or imaginary, evil or good, became part of the larger controversy concerning the nature of the divine inspiration that was claimed by the Puritans. Casaubon himself admitted in a letter that the 'maine designe of this worke was to set out to view of all men: the condition of those...under pretended colour of inspiration, and speciall guidance of the Spirit: and it is probable, that many were really deluded'.[6] Casaubon's attitude towards and conclusions upon the Actions with spirits were therefore prejudiced by a priori considerations.

Robert Hooke (1635-1703) saw an entirely different significance in the spirits summoned during the Actions. Hooke accepted the theory that the Steganographia of Abbot Trithemius of Spanheim, which described operations with angels and spirits, was really a treatise upon cryptography, the spirits offering through their names, descriptions and functions a means of encoding any message.[7] Hooke sought a comparison between Steganographia, which Dee had himself regarded as a book of extreme importance,[8] and the Actions contained in TFR. Whether Hooke ever did read the paper he prepared on the subject, being 'not positive, but rather as Queries to be resolved by such as have better Abilities and Opportunities to solve them', before the Royal Society is uncertain, but it was evidently his intention to do so, for he felt obliged to defend the possible 'Unfitness of the Subject for the Consideration of this Society'[9]. Hooke's thesis was 'that the greatest part of the said Book [TFR], especially all that which relates to the Spirits and Apparitions, together with the Names, Speeches, Shews, Noises, Clothing, Actions, and the Prayers and Doxologies, &c. are all Cryptography; and that some Parts also of that which seems to be a Journal of his Voyage and Travels into several Parts of Germany, are also Cryptographical' (p. 206). Hooke never proceeded any further with this theory, which was later taken up by Adam Clarke (1762?-1832), although he likewise failed to prove any substance to the theory.[10] More recently the cryptographic theory has been suggested by Richard Deacon,but it is based upon evidence which is to my mind of doubtful authenticity and which, even if accepted, does not presuppose that the whole series of Actions simply consisted of coded messages.[11]

There are numerous reasons for rejecting any theory that the Actions are cryptographic in nature. Dee's desire for celestial information, divine revelation, a universal religion and the advent of a new age was the principal cause of his becoming involved with scrying in the first place (see Chapter VI). Furthermore there is no substantial motive for Dee and Kelly to produce such a lengthy fraud as seven years of near continuous reports 'encoded' in such a dangerous form as that of Actions with spirits. Although Dee was evidently employed upon state business abroad in 1571 (CR, p.12), there are no records of Actions extant from that time, even if such ever existed. The Actions began at Mortlake when Dee was a short river ride from the Court. Such information as he might have to deliver could be given by word of mouth. Even when he was on the Continent, he wrote a letter to Burghley concerning the treachery of the Jesuit Parkins in plain language.[12] The only likely recipients of coded messages would be Burghley and Walsingham and there are no records of Dee's Actions to be found amongst their collected papers. Furthermore, if the information was such that an elaborate code was required, it would have been strange for Dee to keep copies of his own all together, lest they should fall into the wrong hands.

There are some examples of codes in the course of the Actions but they are extremely simple. One involves the rearrangement of a passage according to a sequence of numbers[13] and another involves drawing letters from a square according to a prescribed pattern (see Sloane MS 3191, fols 53b-56a). The simplest merely substitutes an original alphabet and Dee is able to solve this code very quickly when he is presented with it by Kelly (see Sloane MS 3188, 87a-88a).

These examples are well below the standard that was in use in state affairs at the time.[14] Furthermore the diversity of the contents of the Actions, ranging in Sloane MS 3188 alone from the description of a system of forty-nine spiritual governors to lengthy passages in the alleged language of the angels, is itself an argument against any consistent cryptography. Such diversity makes the possibility of any single solution improbable.

> In general, it can be said that any cipher system, or any method which claims to follow valid cryptographic procedures, must yield unique solutions. If in any system two different investigators applying the same key or keys to the same basic material get inconsistent answers, the system is self-refuting. In other words, it can be used to show its own invalidity.[15]

The diversity of material might of course indicate a diversity of ciphers, perhaps even that the Actions constitute a treatise upon cryptography, but in the light of Dee's commitment to the ideals expressed in the Actions and of the fact that they demonstrate the evolution of a magical system based upon angelic hierarchies, such cryptographic considerations may be safely dismissed.

The rejection of Hooke's theory does not presume that the scrying was not in some way fraudulent. Hooke astutely noted that there might have been some application of scientific knowledge, particularly the branches of > Chymistry, or Mathematicks, or Astrology, or Mechanicks, all which I find by his Writings he [Dee] was well versed in, and especially in the Business of Opticks, and Perspective and Mechanical Contrivances; an effect of which I conceive his Chrystal,or Angelical Stone, or Chrystallum sacratum, as he terms it, to have been, for that it was of a considerable bigness, and was placed upon a Pedestal, or Table, which he calls a Holy Table, which might contain the Apparatus to make Apparitions, when he had a mind to be seen in it, as likewise to produce Noises and Voices, if there were occasion. All which might be done by Art, as has been shewn, both formerly by Roger Bacon, and of late by the Echoing Head. (p. 206)

The skill required to produce images such that the unlearned might believe supernatural methods were being employed was known to many who studied nature and the sciences at that time. Gianbattista della Porta gave various instructions for making 'an Image seem to hang in the Air' using concave mirrors:

> This will be more wonderful with the segment of a circle, for it [the image] will appear farther from the Glass. If you be without the point of Inversion, you shall see your head downwards. That with fixed eyes, and not winking at all, you may behold the point, until it comes to your very sight ...the neerer you are to the Centre, the greater will it be, that you will think to touch it with your hands: and if it be a great Glass, you cannot but wonder; for if any man run at the Glass with a drawn sword, another man will seem to meet him, and to run through his hand. If you shew a Candle, you will think a Candle is pendulous lighted in the Air.[16]

Della Porta noted other experiments of a similar nature using both plain and concave mirrors and also described the operation of a rudimentary camera obscura, the pinhole camera:

> You must shut all the Chamber windows, and it will do well to shut up all holes besides, lest any light breaking in should spoil all. Onely make one hole, that shall be a hands breadth and length; above this fit a little leaden or brass Table, and glew it, so thick as a paper; open a round hole in the middle of it, as great as your little finger: over against this, let there be white walls of paper, or white clothes, so shall you see all that is done without in the Sun, and those that walk in the streets, like to Antipodes, and what is right will be the left, and all things changed; and the farther they are off from the hole, the greater they will appear. (Bk. XVII, Ch.vi, p. 363)

He further suggested that scenes might be acted outside the chamber to provide animated displays of 'Huntings, Banquets, Armies of Enemies, Plays, and all things else that one desireth' and confessed that he had often presented such spectacles to his friends, the result being so convincing that it was often difficult to persuade them that no supernatural art was involved (Bk. XVII, Ch. vi, pp.364-5).

While such knowledge was not widely disseminated early in the century, the principles of optical science were known to many of the more learned men in Europe and particularly those who included astronomy in their field of study. The simpler experiments such as that of the elementary camera obscura were apparently common knowledge among Renaissance 'scientists' for Agrippa wrote that 'it is well known, if in a dark place where there is no light but by the coming in of a beam of the Sun somewhere through a little hole, a white paper, or plain Looking-glass be set up against that light, that there may be seen upon them, whatsoever things are done without, being shined upon by the Sun' (Occ. Phil. I, vi, p. 16). Dee himself wrote a treatise upon burning-glasses in 1557[17] and he was described by William Bourne as expert in the science of optics.[18] Dee included a description of the art of perspective which 'demonstrateth the maner, and properties, of all Radiations Direct, Broken, and Reflected' in his 'Preface' to Euclid's Elements (sig. B1r) and evidently possessed a concave mirror of some sort:

> if you, being (alone) nere a certaine glasse, and proffer, with dagger or sword, to foyne at the glasse, you shall suddenly be moued to giue backe (in maner) by reason of an Image, appearing in the ayre, betwene you and the glasse, with like hand, sword or dagger, and with like quicknes, foyning at your very eye, likewise as you do at the Glasse. Straunge, this is, to heare of: but more meruailous to behold, then these my wordes can signifie. And neuerthelesse by demonstration Opticall, the order and cause thereof, is certified: even so, as the effect is consequent. Yea, thus much more, dare I take vpon me, toward the satisfying of the noble courrage, that longeth ardently for the wisedome of Causes Naturall: as to let him vnderstand that, in London, he may with his owne eyes, have profe of that, which I haue sayd herein. A Gentleman [i.e. Dee], (which, for his good seruice, done to his Countrey, is famous and honorable: and for skill in the Mathematicall Sciences, and Languages, is the Od [old?] man of this land. &c.) euen he, is hable: and (I am sure) will, very willingly, let the Glasse, and profe be sene. (Preface, sig. B1v)

This glass was probably that which the Queen requested to see when she arrived at Dee's home on the day that his first wife was buried and the properties of which she was pleased to understand (CR, p.17). Dee was also acquainted with the use of empty vessels in the ancient theatre as amplifiers of sound, although it is unclear precisely how they worked.[19] Dee quotes and translates part of the De architectura of Vitruvius in his Preface, recalling > the Brasen Vessels, which in Theatres, are placed by Mathematicall order, in ambries, vnder the steppes: and the duiersities of the soundes...are ordred according to Musicall Symphonies and Harmonies: being distributed in the Circuites, by Dietessaron, Diapente, and Diapason. That the conuenient voyce, of the players sound, when it came to these preparations, made in order, there being increased: with the increasing, might come more cleare and pleasant, to the eares of the lokers on. (Preface, sig.d3v)

Dee was conversant with the principles of harmony and resonance and therefore with the principles of rudimentary amplification of sound. He certainly had the knowledge to produce a complicated optical illusion. The Actions first took place in his 'study' at Mortlake and he was preparing a special chamber in which to hold them (Sloane MS 3188, 103b, 27). All the circumstances were suitable for him to deceive an unwitting scryer that spirits were appearing and talking. There is however no evidence that he did so and no motive whatsoever. The Actions were themselves theologically dangerous enough with Dee believing in them sincerely. To produce such happenings as a deception would have put Dee in unnecessary danger — Kelly had admitted that his first visit was to trap Dee (Sloane MS 3188, 9a) — and there could be no profit in deceiving a scryer, especially one who was later persuaded to remain only by the offer of a stipend of fifty pounds a year.

If any deception was practised it was by Kelly upon Dee. Dee claimed that he was never able to see the spirits that appeared to Saul and Kelly. There were times when Dee heard odd sounds, such as a spirit stroking a book (TFR, p. 31), and he once recorded: 'I fele: and (by a great thundring noyce, thumming...in myne eares) I perceyue the presence of some spiritual creature abowt me' (Sloane MS 3188,51b).

When Kelly repeated long passages of the angelic language it was as if he were taken by the spirit of God, for Dee recorded that 'there appeared fire to be thrown oute of the stone, vppon E K' (Sloane MS 3188, 71a), and then later 'the fire cam from E K his eyes, and went into the stone againe' after which Kelly 'could not perceyue, or read one worde' (Sloane MS 3188, 72b). It is not absolutely certain that Dee witnessed this fire, for Kelly might have described it to him, but the manner in which Dee records the experience suggests that it was something that he himself saw. He recorded later that while his child Rowland was sick, he saw some flashes of fire that 'did not lighten abroad' on 18 July 1584 (TFR, p. 210). What he meant by fire is not certain, however, for he might have been referring in fact to flashes of light and the fire in Kelly's eyes might really be light in his eyes, such as might be caused by some intense passion or semi-hypnotic state. There are certain obvious times when Kelly may have perpetrated a fraud upon Dee, such as when he returned from the Cotswolds with a scroll in strange characters, which Dee managed to decipher without too much trouble, Kelly claiming that he had been led to the discovery of the scroll by a 'spiritual creature' (Sloane MS 3188, 61a). During an Action of 29 April 1583 they were given instructions to make a seal and afterwards Kelly went to his room with a book that had been left by Adrian Gilbert. When he opened the book he 'found' a different version of the seal written in his own hand on one of the blank pages at the end of the book (see Sloane MS 3188, 98a-99a). He claimed to have no idea how the writing got there.

All the Actions may have been fraudulent, but again it is difficult to find sufficient motive. Although Dee undoubtedly looked after Kelly's immediate needs, the contract for the stipend of fifty pounds was not made until 29 June 1583, some two years after Kelly had first acted as Dee's scryer. Furthermore the Actions were often performed with Kelly seated in front of the table on which stood the crystal stone and Dee either recording the Actions at a nearby table or seated on the other side of the table facing Kelly (see Sloane MS 3188, 47b and 48b). Kelly would have had little chance to keep any papers by him without their being discovered by Dee. The angelic system which he expounded was not simple and it is remarkable that there are not a great number of inconsistencies, since it must have been contained in his head, either consciously or unconsciously. If as Frances Yates claims 'Kelly was a fraud who deluded his pious master',[20] he was not only 'well-versed in Renaissance magic', but also possessed a most remarkable memory.[21]

Having rejected any chance of deceit upon the part of Dee, we must conclude that either Kelly saw nothing and successfully gulled Dee for the best part of seven years, or that he did indeed see angels and spirits, or that the visions were products of his own imagination. Casaubon argued that 'a very little distemper of the brain, scarce discernable unto any, but those that are well versed in the study of Natural causes, is enough to represent Spirits, Angels and Divels, Sights and Stories of Heaven and Hell to the fancy', but nevertheless believed that Kelly saw genuine spirits (TFR, 'Preface' sig. A2v). While I am not at all qualified in the sciences of psychology and parapsychology, I would venture that Kelly's visions were the product of a 'distemper of the brain'. He complained at times of pains in his body, and particularly in his head, caused by the sights and sounds of the Actions. On 29 March 1583 before seeing the angel Raphael he felt 'a thing (immediately) creeping within his hed, and in that pang becam all in a sweat'. He 'remayned much misliking the moving and creeping of the thing in his hed' but 'at a quarter of an howre end it cam to one place: and so ceased somewhat' (Sloane MS 3188, 68a). The experience was repeated on 31 March (Sloane MS 3188, 69b). At another time he felt 'such a whirling and beating inwardly in his hed, that he could not vse any Judgement to discerne what appeared, for half a quarter of an howre almost' (Sloane MS 3188, 78b). On 23 April 1583 'his belly did seame to him, to be full of fyre: and he thowght veryly, that his bowells did burne' (Sloane MS 3188, 93a). These experiences (if true) suggest a mental condition, perhaps arising from a physical illness, that was unstable and might cause his imagination to produce visions and hear voices, particularly if Dee was unduly influencing him. From his writings and in particular his complaints, Dee appears to have had a strong personality,[22] and it is perhaps significant that the angels frequently gave answers such as Dee evidently wanted to hear, while rebukes were more often directed at Kelly than at Dee. They also frequently gave answers that followed the teachings of works that were known to Kelly and Dee.[23] It is therefore arguable that many of the visions may have arisen from Kelly's subconscious, perhaps after concentration in the crystal (he frequently saw nothing for the first fifteen minutes) had induced in him some mild state of trance. Thus the Actions may be a mixture of pure deceit and subconscious imaginings. The same might perhaps be said of the whole art of scrying, for while much was undoubtedly fraudulent, stolen goods were recorded as being found after information had been delivered through a scryer. Overall the Actions seem to be a mixture of falsehood and if not truth itself, at least half-truth.

1. Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 67b.

2. Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 65b.

3. John Webster, The Displaying of Supposed Witchcraft (London 1677), p. 8.

4. Meric Casaubon, Of Credulity and Incredulity in Things Divine and Spiritual (London 1670), pp. 108-109.

5. The identity of the writer is not known and it is unclear whether Shippen's annotations were made after or before the notes on the blank leaves (see TFR, BM shelf-mark 719.m.12). Since the writer refers to Casaubon in the past tense, it is likely that the notes were made after Casaubon's death in 1671.

6. Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 65b.

7. Modern scholarship takes the view that while a system of cryptography is expounded in the first two of the three books of Steganographia, the work was indeed on daemonic magic and the cryptography provided a veil for the magical content and a means for the author to defend his work as being other than it really was (see Walker, pp. 86-90). Steganographia was not published until 1606, but was widely known in manuscript during the sixteenth century, Trithemius having died in 1516 (Walker, p. 86).

8. When Dee wrote to Burghley on 16 February 1563 asking for leave to remain abroad to oversee the printing of some of his works, he declared that he had obtained a copy of Steganographia and had copied it out in ten days. He described it as 'a boke for which many a lerned man hath long sowght and dayly yet doth seeke' and which was 'for your honor, or a Prince, so meet, so nedefull and comodious, as in humayne knowledg, none can be meeter, or more behofefull' (John E. Bailey, 'Dee and Trithemius's "Steganography"', Notes and Queries, 5th series, XI (1879), pp. 401-402 and 422-433, p. 402).

9. The Posthumous Workes of Robert Hooke (London 1705), pp. 205-206.

10. I. D'Israeli, Amenities of Literature, 3 vols (London 1841), III, 228.

11. Richard Deacon in his book John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I (London 1968) gives the text of an Action that he claims is in code. The text of this Action is not in Sloane MS 3188 or Cotton MS Appendix XLVI along with the other Actions, but is, he claims, to be found in 'Divers Curious Narrations of Doctor John Dee (in Russian), MS. by Arthur Dee, circa 1621-30, translated by Prince Belloselski' (p. 299). My efforts to trace such a manuscript and to get in touch with Mr. Deacon through his publishers have been fruitless, and I am rather sceptical of the reference. Deacon says that the text of the Action was dispatched to London from Dee on the Continent through the agency of Francis Garland and yet does not name the recipient, who ought to be Walsingham, and I do not see why Dee should retain a copy which would pass to his son Arthur. If the Action was an encoded message intended for Walsingham, then I would expect any copy to be kept in as secret a place as the other Actions. The style of the Action is distinctly different from the rest and Deacon's book is the only work on Dee that makes mention of it.

12. Lansdowne MS 61, art. 58, fol. 159.

13. See TFR, pp. 362-363, 366 and 387. A passage is written down and then numbers are placed in an irregular order over the words. By rearranging the words into the order indicated by the numbers, an entirely new passage is constructed.

14. Concerning methods of encipherment during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries see David Kahn, The Codebreakers (London 1966), pp. 106-156.

15. William F. and Elizabeth S. Friedman, The Shakespearean Ciphers Examined (Cambridge 1957), p. 25.

16. Giambattista della Porta, Natural Magick (1658), edited by Derek J. Price (New York 1957), Bk XVII, ch. iv, p. 361. The first edition of Magia naturalis was published at Naples in 1558, but contained only four books, a longer edition being published in 1589. The work went through at least twelve editions in Latin, four in Italian, seven in French, two in German and two in English.

17. De speculis comburentibus, now Cotton MS Vitellius. C.VII, art. 5.

18. 'For that there ys dyvers in this Lande, that can say and dothe knowe muche more, in these causes, then I: and specially Mr. Dee, and allso Mr. Thomas Digges', William Bourne, 'A Treatise on the Properties and Qualities of Glasses for Optical Purposes', printed in Rara Mathematica, edited by James O. Halliwell (London 1839), pp. 32-47. The original is Lansdowne MS 121, art. 13.

19. On the possible use of these vessels see Frances A. Yates, Theatre of the World (London and Chicago 1969), pp. 112-114.

20) Frances A. Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (London and Chicago 1964), p. 149.

21. One of the more remarkable facts is that the calls in the angelic language which make up the Claues Angelicae (Sloane MS 3191, fols 1-13) were delivered backwards, often in single letters, intermittently between 13 April and 13

July 1584 (TFR, pp. 78-209), and yet the translation of the words into English is with a few exceptions consistent. It is difficult to believe that Kelly could deliver the calls purely from memory in such a manner and over such a period of time, particularly since the letters were sometimes taken from the letter-filled squares of the Book of Enoch, directions being given which table was to be used and how many squares in each direction were to be counted in order to obtain each letter.

22. See for instance a letter dated 3 October 1574 which Dee addressed to Lord Burghley and in which he complained that he had not received the rewards to which twenty years of hard study entitled him. He declares that 'in zeale to the best lerning and knowledg, and in incredible toyle of body and mynde, very many yeres, therfore onely endured, I know most assuredly that this land never bred any man, whose account therein can evidently be proved greater than myne' (Lansdowne MS 19, art. 38). Similar examples of Dee's self-estimation may be found in his autobiographical works and his frequent pacification of Kelly also argues that ultimately his was the stronger personality.

23. See for instance pp. 117-118 below and TFR, pp. 158-159.

V

THE MAGICAL SYSTEM

The magic contained in Sloane MS 3188 is of two kinds. The scrying belongs to the popular tradition of divinatory experience, while the magical system expounded by the angels with its concentration upon seals, talismans, combinations of letters, numbers, divine names and ritual invocations, bears a great similarity with the kind of magic described in the third book of Agrippa's De occulta philosophia. The angels who appeared in the crystal to explain this latter system generally belong to the traditional Judaic-Christian hierarchies. Yet Dee shows no concern with the ordering of the celestial hierarchies of Seraphim, Cherubim, Dominations, Thrones, Principalities, Powers, Virtues, Archangels,and Angels that occupied the attentions of such writers as St. Augustine, St. Jerome and Dionysius the Areopagite. Even though Dee is instructed by 'traditional' angels, the majority of the manuscript is concerned with the description of the offices of 49 spirits, 28 Sons and Daughters of Light,[1] and the construction of various magical instruments, the most important being the Holy Table, and none of these may be directly traced to any source. Some influence from Agrippa is apparent, but the magical system which evolved during the Actions is in its details unique. All the magical instruments are intimately connected with the hierarchies of spirits that are described and also with each other. The two principal instruments, the Holy Table and the Sigillum Dei (shown at fol. 30a), contain the names of both 'traditional' angels and the spirits unique to Dee's Actions with spirits, but in an occult fashion. By examining the angels, spirits, and magical instruments separately, their interconnections will be made clearer than in the text of the manuscript itself and finally a reconstruction of their use can be suggested.

a) The Angels

The angels Annael, Uriel, Michael, Gabriel and Raphael each inform Dee at various times, but while he is concerned with the etymologies of their names (Sloane MS 3188, 6a), Dee makes no effort to ascertain whether any is more powerful or in any way more important than any other angel. He was content, for the most part, to receive the information that God imparted to him through the angels without questioning the roles of the angels in the Creation.

Nevertheless the information that the angels do impart contains reference to the offices of the angels and most of it reflects what may be found in De occulta philosophia. The angel Annael only instructed Dee in the Action of 22 December 1581 when Saul acted as scryer and appropriately Annael is the angel of the month December.[2] The angels who instruct Dee when Kelly acts as scryer are Michael, Gabriel, Raphael and Uriel, the four angels who stand before the face of God and govern the four 'corners of the world' (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv,p.416). Agrippa also names seven angels of the presence, Zaphkiel, Zadkiel, Cumael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael and Gabriel (Occ. Phil. II, x, 204-5) and these names are hidden in the Sigillum Dei (see Sloane MS 3188, 24b). The angels whom Agrippa calls the 'spirits' of the seven planets are also to be found in the Sigillum Dei and are called 'the 7 Angels, and Governors in the heuens next vnto [those angels] which stand allwayes before the face of God' (Sloane MS 3188, 28a). These angels or spirits are Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semeliel (Sun), Nogahel (Venus), Corabiel (Mercury), and Levanael (Moon). These angels that I have listed above with the addition of Semiel (Sloane MS 3188, 17b) are the only 'traditional' Judaic-Christian angels that appear in the manuscript.

Further influence of Agrippa may be seen when Uriel asks Dee whether he thinks that angels have voices (Sloane MS 3188, 89b). Dee replies that he believes angels 'are mere spirituall and nothing corporall' and that their message is insinuated 'in such sort as mans Imagination shall be, that both they here and see you sensibly'. Uriel then declares:

> we haue no voyce, but a full noyce that filleth euery place: which whan you ones taste of, Distance shall make no separation.

Both these replies are in accordance with Agrippa's conjecture upon the subject:

> How angels speak it is hid from us, as they themselves are. Now to us that we may speak, a tongue is necessary with other instruments, as are the jaws, palate, lips, teeth, lungs, the aspera arteria, and muscles of the breast, which have the beginning of motion from the soul. But if any speak at a distance to another, he must use a louder voice; but if neer, he whispers in his ear: and if he could be coupled to the hearer without any noise, as an image in the eye, or glas. So souls going out of the body, so Angels, so Demons speak: and what man doth with a sensible voyce, they do by impressing the conception of the speech in those to whom they speak, after a better manner than if they should express it by an audible voyce.[3]

Dee's reply to Uriel follows Agrippa's hypothesis that the angels impress 'the conception of the speech in those to whom they speak' and Uriel's statement extends this to some kind of spiritual and inaudible 'noise' that fills the universe but which man may receive through the vis imaginitiva. The close resemblance to Agrippa's theory further suggests fraud, conscious or unconscious, on the part of Kelly but would have demonstrated to Dee the truth of Agrippa's writing.

b) The Sigillum Dei

This seal, which is also called Sigillum Emeth ('seal of truth') is shown on fol. 30a and is now in the possession of the British Museum. The instructions for its making were given by Michael and Uriel between 10 and 21 March 1582 (Sloane MS 3188, 9b-30a). It is made of undyed beeswax, measures nine inches in diameter and is one and one eighth inches thick. On the back is inscribed the sign

The word AGLA was a common name of divine power in the Middle Ages derived from the first letters in Hebrew of the Scriptural sentence 'thou art mighty Lord for ever' (Occ. Phil. III, xi, p. 335). The letters in the outer circle on the front of the seal may be used to obtain seven supposed names of God. When the number is over the letter, it indicates that the next letter is to be found that number of spaces to the right. When the number is under a letter, it indicates that the next letter is to be found that number of spaces to the left. The capital letters indicate the first letter of each name, and letters without numbers indicate that the last letter of a name has been reached. The names obtained in this manner are Thaaoth, Galaas, Gethog, Horlωn, Innon, Aaoth and Galethog. Where two lower case letters 'a' occur together the second is struck out and so Thaaoth and Galaas become Thaoth and Galas. Innon is the only name that I have found recorded elsewhere (see Commentary to 22b, 7-13).

The letters with the crosses and numbers in the segments between the outer circle and the outer heptagon spell Galethog if read anticlockwise ignoring the crosses and numbers. The numbers are those found with the letters that form Galethog in the outer circle. The letters of the outer heptagon produce the names of the seven angels of the presence, if they are written in tabular form and read vertically from the top left corner:

Z 1 1 R H i a
a Z C a a c b p a u p n h r
h d m h i a i k k a a e e e
i i e e 1 1 1
e e 1 1 M G ✠

The names which are obtained are Zaphkiel, Zadkiel, Cumael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael and Gabriel.

The letters underneath the borders of the outer heptagon are seven 'Names of God, not known to the Angels: neyther can be spoken or red of man' (28a, 25-26). Further names are extracted when these are written in tabular form.

S	A	A	I^{21}_{8}	E	M	E^{8}
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E^{30}
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	30	A
I^{26}	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I^{21}_{8}	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	$^{21}_{8}$

By reading from the top left corner diagonally from right to left the names Sabathiel, Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, Corabiel and Levanael are obtained, the numbers $^{21}_{8}$ and 26 standing for 'el' and the numbers 8 and 30 standing for 'l' (see fol. 29a). These names are to be found again in the centre of the seal and are the names of 'the 7 Angels, and Governors in the heuens next vnto [those angels] which stand allwayes before the face of God' (28a, 29-31). If the table is read from the top right corner diagonally from left to right until the bisecting diagonal is reached the names of the seven Daughters of Light are obtained, namely El, Me Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn and Stimcul, the numbers $\dot{8}$ and $\dot{30}$ again standing for '1' but $\frac{21}{\dot{8}}$ standing now for '1' rather than 'el'. The names of the seven Sons of Light are extracted by reading from the bottom left corner diagonally from left to right up until the bisecting diagonal. These names are I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, and Stimcul again. In this case the numbers are ignored save for the $\frac{21}{\dot{8}}$ which stands for the last letter of Stimcul. There is no good reason save that of pronunciation why the numbers should be noted with regard to the names of the Daughters of Light but ignored with regard to the Sons of Light.

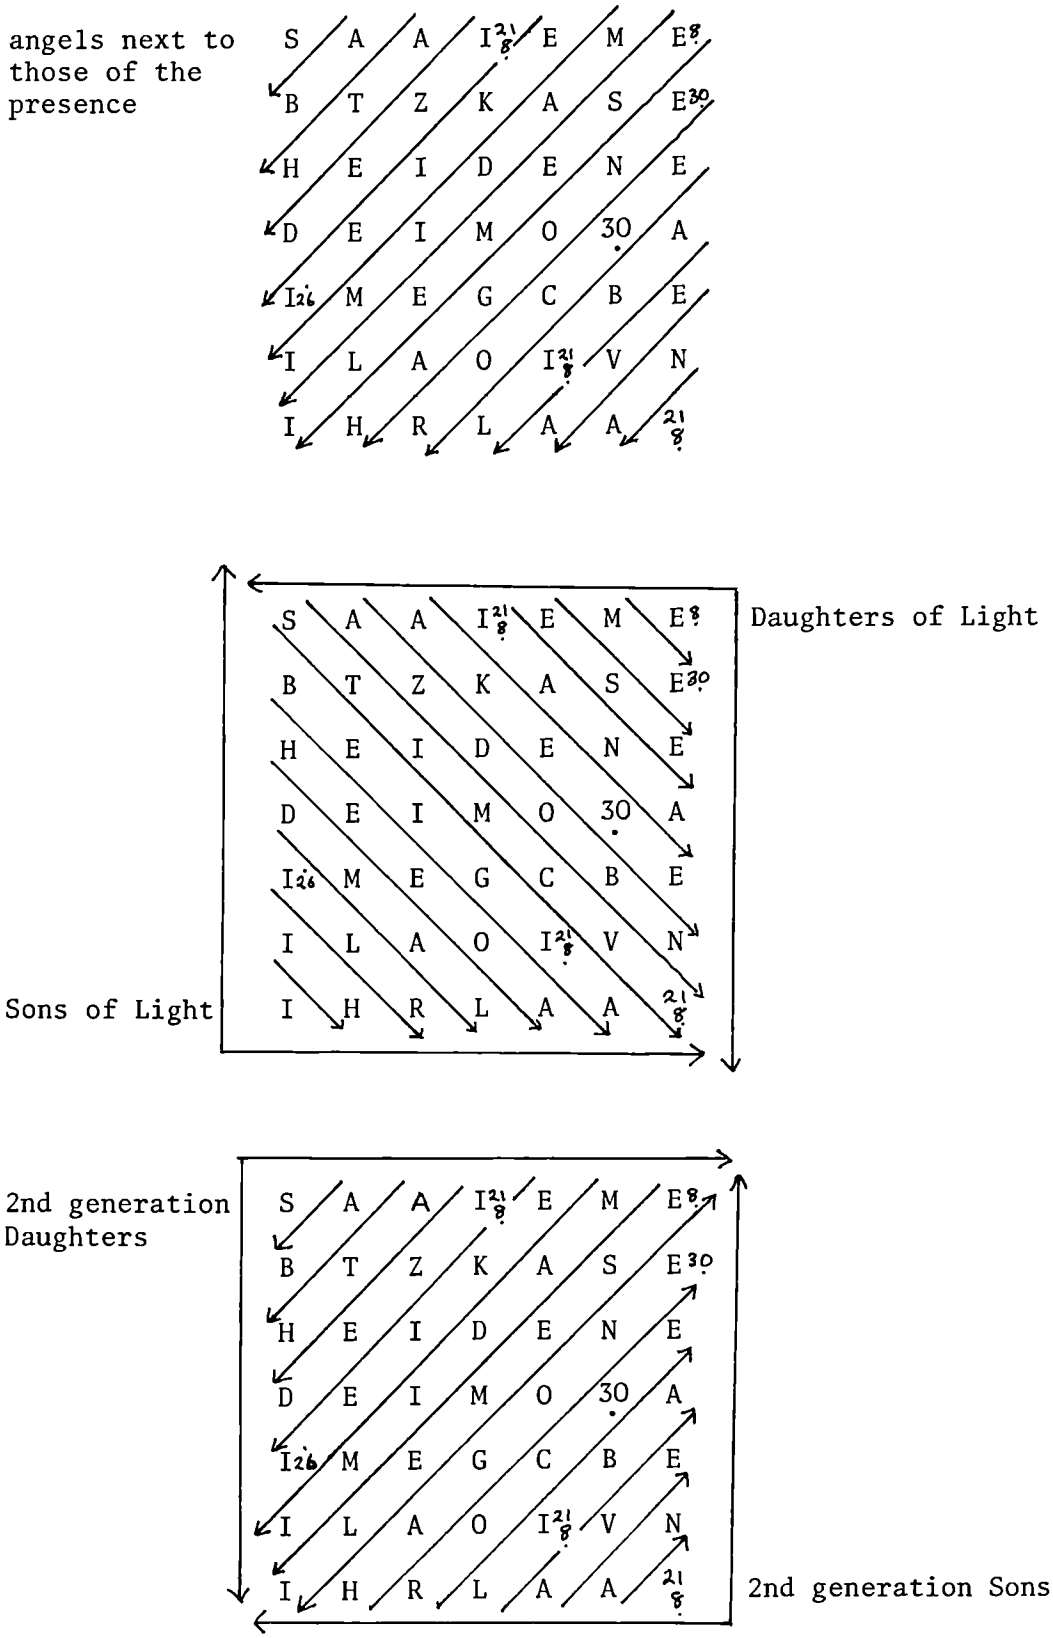
Further diagonal reading of the table produces the names of the second generation Daughters of Light and second generation Sons of Light. The former are obtained by reading the table from the top left corner diagonally from right to left until the bisecting diagonal is reached. The resulting names are S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi and Esemeli. In this case all numbers are ignored. The names of the second generation Sons of Light are to be found by reading from the bottom right corner diagonally from left to right. The names are El (from $\frac{21}{\dot{8}}$), An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagonel, and Ilemese. In this case the number $\frac{21}{\dot{8}}$ in Liba and $\dot{8}$ in Ilemese are ignored while the other numbers are noted. Again the decision seems arbitrary. For clarification of the method the following tables demonstrate the various methods of reading the table.



The names of the Sons and Daughters of Light are inscribed in the borders and in the angles of the intertwined heptagon in the seal. The names of the second generation Daughters and Sons are to be found in the heptagons inside that which holds the names of the first generation Sons and Daughters. The offices of these two generations of Sons and Daughters of Light is not expounded in the manuscript at all, although Dee and Kelly receive instruction from the spirit Il, and later from Madimi.[4]

The seal produces its own inscription to a large extent. The name Galethog obtained from the outer circle is responsible for the letters and numbers in the segments between the outer circle and the outer heptagon. The names in the outer heptagon give rise to those in the centre. The names inside the outer heptagon give rise to all the rest. The circular shape is typical of most seals, particularly those involved in magical practice. There is however a particular significance to the numerological divisions of the seals. The outer circle is divided into forty squares. The number forty has great religious significance, being the number of years that the Israelites wandered in the wilderness and the number of days Christ fasted in the wilderness, which was also the length of the Flood and of Elijah's similar solitude. By the curious means of regarding the two letters 'a' taken out of the names of God in the outer circle as making the number of letters in the circle total forty-two when they are replaced, Michael states that the outer circle reveals a name of God of 42 letters (see fol. 21b).

Four smaller versions of this seal were made, two of which are in the possession of the British Museum, and they were to be placed in protective covers underneath the four feet of the Holy Table. The big seal was to be placed in the centre of the Holy Table and the crystal or 'show-stone', in particular that 'given' by the angels (see p. 138 below), was to be placed in the centre.

c) The Forty-Nine Spirits

A further table that Dee and Kelly received from the angels is that between fols 37b and 38a from which may be drawn the names of forty-nine spirits whose names all begin with the letter 'B'. The table has seven parts forming the four arms of a cross because the forty-nine spirits each had names of seven letters and were to be divided into seven septenaries.[5] Each septenary had a king and a prince and the information delivered during the Actions concerns these kings and princes rather than the remaining spirits, who are assumed to aid the kings and princes in their particular offices. To simplify matters Dee himself drew up a table of the forty-nine spirits in which each septenary is represented in a segment of a circle which is itself formed of seven circles (see fol. 41a). This 'co-ordinated table' as he calls it bears a certain similarity with The Book of Formation by Rabbi Akiba ben Joseph which presents a circle of eleven rings, each containing two letters, with twenty-one spokes of letters around the circle.[6] This 'Arcanum of the Great Symbol' permitted kabbalistic permutations to be obtained by the rotation of the combination of wheels so formed. The main instigation for Dee's circular 'co-ordinated table' is the information given by the angels in the Actions, particularly the governance of days of the week by the seven septenaries, but it is possible that Dee's choice of the table's shape may have been in part influenced by The Book of the Formation. In Dee's table the seven circles may be intended to represent the orbits of the seven planets, since the forty-nine spirits are responsible for various operations within the created universe. There may also have been some influence of kabbalistic knowledge upon Kelly, assuming that the beginning of the names of the spirits with the letter 'B' is a conscious choice on his part, as the letter 'B' is the first letter of the Bible in Hebrew and is also according to the kabbalistic lore of The Zohar the letter with which God began the Creation.[7] The creation of the world by letters does not form a part of the information delivered to Dee and Kelly by the angels, for the magical system evolved is essentially much more practical than most kabbalistic teachings, but the insistence upon the letter 'B' which occurs in the manuscript, also dominating the so called seven 'Ensigns of Creation' (see below),is striking.

The roles of the forty-nine spirits, whom Dee calls 'angels' in his 'co-ordinated table' are confused by the fact that King Baligon has the alias of Carmara and Prince Bagenol has the alias of Hagonel and that under these alternative names the spirits have different offices. The offices of each king and prince are as follows:

King Bobogel	The government of wisdom.
Prince Bornogo	The perfecting of nature and the knowledge of all metals.
King Blumaza	King over the kings of earth.
Prince Bralges	The government of all invisible subjects.
King Babalel	The government of the waters.
Prince Befafes	The government of seas.
King Bnaspol	The government of the earth.
Prince Blisdon	The government of the earth and all subterranean things.
King Bynepor	The general state and condition of all living things.
Prince Butmono	Responsible for the life and breath in all living creatures.
King Baligon	The government of all aerial actions and Dee's 'show-stone'.
Prince Bagenol	No office is assigned.
King Bnapsen	The casting out of wicked spirits.
Prince Brorges	No office is assigned.

In the alias of Carmara, Baligon is responsible for the understanding of all sciences and in the alias of Hagonel, Bagenol governs operations of the earth and also the two generations of the Sons of Light. Dee was instructed that if he wished to perform a particular act or achieve a certain effect, he should invoke the aid of the king or prince who was responsible for the area of existence in which the act lay. At this point the magical system evolved in the manuscript took a practical and positively daemonic turn.

Each king and prince had his own seal, but while the seals of the princes are shown in this manuscript, the seals of the kings are not. They may however be gleaned from Sloane MS 3191, which is a collection of all the information given concerning the forty-nine spirits under the title of De heptarchia mystica. The seals are as follows:

King		Prince
Baligon		Bagenol
Bobogel		Bornogo
Babalel		Befafes
Bynepor		Butmono
Bnaspol		Blisdon	Bnapsen		Brorges	Blumaza		Bralges

No particular seal seems to be given to either Carmara or Bagenol, but I assume that Baligon's seal is also Carmara's and that Hagonel's is also Bagenol's. The kings' seals all contain the names of the second generation Sons of Light, although no explanation for this is given.

Each king and prince governs a day of the week. Sunday is governed by Bobogel and Bornogo while Monday is governed by Blumaza and Bralges, although Carmara and Hagonel are also given this responsibility, but in a 'general' rather than particular sense.[8] Babalel and Befafes govern Tuesday, Bnaspol and Blisdon govern Wednesday, and Bynepor and Butmono govern Thursday. Friday is governed by Baligon and Bagenol while Saturday is the responsibility of Bnapsen and Brorges. Each king and prince has under him 'six perfect ministers' who each govern a four hour part of the day which the king and prince govern in its entirety. Unlike the names of the spirits up to this point, the names of these 'ministers' are for the most part unpronounceable.

Hagonel	OESNGLE, AVZNILN, YLLMAFS, NRSOGOO, NRRCPRN, LABDGRE.
Bobogel	LEENARB, LLANAEB, ROEMNAB, LEAORIB, NEICIAB, AOIDIAB.
Babalel	EILOMFO, NEOTPTA, SAGACIY, ONEDPON, NOONMAN, ETEVLGL.
Bynepor	BBARNFL, BBAIGAO, BBALPAE, BBANIFG, BBOSNIA, BBASNOD.
Bnaspol	ELGNSEB, NLINZVB, SFAMLLB, OOGOSRB, NRPCRRB, ERGDBAB.
Bnapsen	BANSSZE, BYAPAGE, BNAMGEN, BNVOLOS, BLBAPOO, BOBEPEN.
Carmara/Baligon	AOAYNNL, LBBNAAV, IOAESPM, GGLPPSA, OEEOOEZ, NLLRLNA.

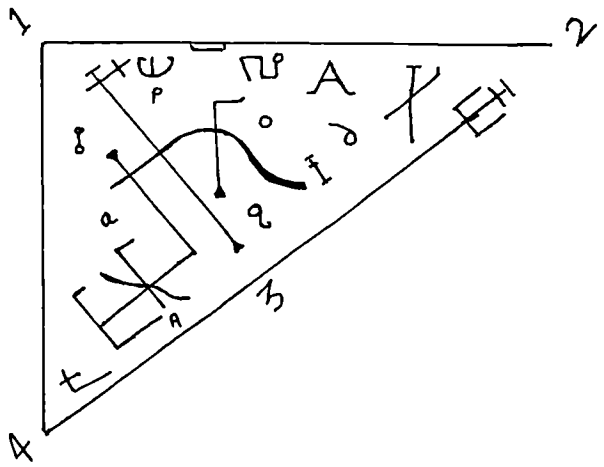
These spirits also assist the offices of their kings and princes. There is some confusion in the presentation of these tables, for in the first case Hagonel is a prince while the remaining governing spirits who make the presentation are kings. The presentation is not in the order of the days of the week governed and as the presentation proceeds, more emphasis is placed upon the spirits in their roles of assisting the offices of their kings and princes than in their government of parts of each day. The culmination of this is the calling of the last table of six ministers a 'table of kings', as unlike the other tables where the names are drawn from various of the septenaries in the table at fol. 41a, the names of the last six ministers are drawn only from the names of the seven kings. The sixth table is also called an 'infernall table', probably because Bnapsen has the power to cast out wicked spirits.

The names of the six ministers are sometimes referred to as being forty-two minsters, each letter standing for an individual spirit. The names of these ministers were to be written on the perimeter of a circular seal or lamine and when Dee wished to invoke the aid of any king or prince he was to stand upon the relevant seal (see fol. 51a). The seal of the king or prince was also to be laid upon the Holy Table. Further seals were to be made from a table that Kelly had presented to Dee but which is no longer extant. This table was circular, had a figure with a sword in the centre who represented Nature (see 102b, 15), and contained letters appertaining to the forty-nine spirits, some of these being written backwards. 'The Characters and words annexed to the Kings names in the vtter circumference' of the missing table were to be painted upon 'swete wood' and held by Dee in his hand but the precise use and function of this is not explained.

As more and more spirits and magical instruments are derived from the table of forty-nine spirits, the exposition of the magical system in the manuscript becomes more and more confused and eventually the angels concentrate more upon the writing of the Book of Enoch[9] than upon the roles of the forty-nine spirits. Information concerning the spirits begins to peter out as the Book of Enoch starts to dominate the Actions. Nevertheless it is important to note that the revelation of the forty-nine governing spirits makes the magical system daemonic in a very practical way. Dee was even to request instructions as to how to use the spirits who governed the earth to help him discover some supposed buried treasure.

d) The Lamine

In the first Action in which Edward Kelly acted as Dee's scryer (10 March 1582) a seal was shown by Uriel. This seal, if made of gold and worn on the breast as a talisman would defend the body in every place and time and at every occasion (9b, 3-4), although whether this defence was against attack by evil spirits or against physical violence offered by other men was not declared. The seal or lamine (being made of a thin layer of beaten gold) was triangular in shape:



The triangle represents the decad, a number of perfection since 'it contains in itself all computations',[10] but Dee also saw much significance in that his own name could be expressed by the letter delta. In a letter to the Emperor Rudolf II dated 17 August 1584, he calls himself Triplicis Alphabeti, litera Quarta (TFR, p. 218), thereby also linking his name with the tetraktys (see Commentary to 18a, 9). The lamine therefore in part represents Dee's name. The remaining symbols do not resemble the customary seals of angels and I have not been able to offer much explanation of their origins (see Commentary to 9b, 1).

The triangular shape was not uncommon for lamines and talismans. The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy states:

> The lamen which is to be used to invoke any good spirit, you shall make after this manner; either in metal conformable: or it may be made in clean paper, with convenient colours: and the outward form or figure thereof may be square, circular, or triangular, or of the like sort, according to the rule of the numbers: in which there must be written the divine names, as well the general names as the special. And in the centre of the Lamen, let there be drawn a character of six corners: in the middle whereof, let there be written the name and character of the Star, or of the spirit his governour, to whom the good spirit that is to be called is subject. And about this character, let there be placed so many characters of five corners, as the spirits we would call together at once. And if we shall call onely one spirit, nevertheless there shall be made four Pentagones, wherein the name of the spirit or spirits, with their characters, is to be written. Now this table ought to be composed when the Moon is increasing, on those days and hours which then agree to the Spirit. And if we take a fortunate starre herewith, it will be the better. (Occ. Phil. IV, pp. 61-2)

The lamine is then to be consecrated and we are told that 'this is the way of making the general Table, serving for the invocation of all good spirits whatsoever'. The triangular shape of Dee's lamine is concordant with the description in this pseudo-Agrippan work but the remainder of the instructions are more relevant to the Holy Table and it is clear that Dee's lamine is very individual. Its purpose is also more as a protective talisman than as an instrument of invocation.

Dee was further instructed on 28 April 1582 that the lamine was to be hung (presumably still on the breast) 'vnseen, in some skarf' (32a, 19-20). At that date the lamine had still not been made and in fact it was never made for on 29 April 1583 the spirit I1 told Dee that 'the Character is fals and diuilish' and 'yf it shold haue byn gone abowt to be made, it shuld not haue byn suffred to pass vnder the forme of wyckednes' (96b, 23 & 29-30). Dee is informed that an illuding spirit interposed himself at the precise point of the demonstration of the lamine in the Action of 10 March 1582. In place of this lamine Dee is instructed to make the 'Character for Conciliation' that is to be found on fol. 97a, which is 4 inches square and which contains 'a certayn shaddow of [d]elta' in each corner (102a, 43). The lamine is also called a 'Character of Dignification' and is to have the names of the five angels which are written in the centre of the Sigillum Dei (Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel and Corabiel) engraved upon the back in a circle. The angelic 'show-stone' is then to be set in the midst of it (101b, 20-22). This means that the new lamine must be placed upon the Sigillum Dei, which resides at the centre of the Holy Table.

e) The Ring

Early in the scrying experiments with Kelly, Dee was instructed by Michael to make a ring bearing the name PELE, which is a name of God meaning 'a worker of miracles, or causing wonders' (Occ. Phil. III, xi, p. 378). Although Dee is told that 'without this, thow shalt do nothing' (12b, 3), there is no evidence that the ring was ever made and there is a most curious statement by Michael that he will lessen the ring by a yard, which does not make a great deal of sense (32a, 21-23). The precise use of the ring is not explained, but it may be along the lines of Agrippa's comment upon the efficacy of rings

> Rings also, which were alwaies much esteemed of by the Ancients, when they are opportunely made, do in like manner impress their vertue upon us, in as much as they do affect the spirit of him that carries them with gladness or sadness, and render him courteous, or terrible, bold, or fearfull, aimiable, or hatefull; in as much also as they do fortifie us against sickness, poisons, enemies, evill spirits, and all manner of hurtfull things, or at least will not suffer us to be kept under them.[11]

Bearing the name of God that signifies 'a worker of miracles' the ring would be intended to 'impress' its 'vertue' of miracle-working upon Dee. Michael's statement that without the ring Dee will not be able to perform what is required of him suggests that, at this time anyway, it is thought of as essential to the practice of the magical system.

f) The Rod 'El'

On 16 November 1582 the spirit Carmara appeared holding a rod of office which was later described as being divided into three parts, two parts being black and the middle section being coloured red (58a, 12-13). On 26 March 1583 Dee and Kelly were told by Raphael that 'euery thing is for and to an ende', but that 'one thing differeth, the Ende, and the Begynning'. Raphael defined this difference as 'the El, rod, or measure which all ready is deliuered the stroke of which, bringeth all things, in theyr degree, to an ende' (63b, 13-18). Raphael appears to be speaking metaphorically, using 'El' in the sense of 'ell' as a unit of measurement but ignoring its specific length of 45 inches. Carmara has however demonstrated this rod to Dee and Kelly with the words 'Ecce...Hic...Per hoc... a Mensurae fine, nos nostramque mensurabis potestatem'.[12] There is a strong suggestion that Raphael, who himself holds a tripartite rod of gold when delivering the first Enochian call (68b, 14), is doing rather more than using 'El' in the sense of 'ell' at 63b, 13-18. He is effectively giving the rod the name of El, a name of God.

Dee was copying down what he heard Kelly relate that the angels spoke and therefore Dee is in the first instance responsible for the spelling of 'El' rather than 'ell'. He was very alive to the possibility of such connections, even to the point of declaring that he liked the letter 'L' best of all the alphabet since it had the same sound as the name of God 'El' (91b, 52-53). On the other hand Dee makes no note that he is equating 'ell' with 'El' of his own accord and it would be characteristic of him to make such a note were he to feel entirely responsible for the thought. Thus it is fair to conclude that he believed the angel to have said 'El' (the capital letter excludes the possibility of a shortened spelling of 'ell').

The name El is earlier referred to by Michael (19a, 16) and is a very common divine name:

> The name El (אֵל) is the most widely distributed of all names for Deity, being used in Babylonian, Aramaean, Phoenician, Hebrew, and Arabic...It has been referred to the Heb[rew] root אוּל 'to be strong'...others have referred it to an Arab[ic] root 'ûl, meaning 'to be in front' (hence awwal, 'first'), 'to govern', and assigned to it the sense of 'leader'.[13]

It forms the latter half of many angels' names, acting as a suffix to mean 'of God' (see Commentary to fol. 6a). The name El equates the rod not only with God, but also with the cross (see Commentary to 19a, 19-22), thereby giving it a Christian role. The possible reference to an ell would suggest that the rod is 45 inches long and although such a rod would be rather unwieldy it is possibly significant that each division of the rod would be 15 inches long as 15 is the numerical value of another name of God יה, Jah.

There is some implication in Raphael's words at 63b, 13-18 and Carmara's words at 58a, 21-24 that Dee is to make such a rod. No specific instruction is given and there is no record of Dee making such a rod, but the possibility cannot be discounted.

g) The Seven Ensigns of Creation

The seven tables shown between fols 33a and 35b are called the seven 'Ensigns of Creation'. Dee was instructed to make these tables in tin (102b, 28), but in the end they were painted upon the Holy Table, as he was given leave to do (102b, 37).

The presentation of the seven 'Ensigns' is a rather confused affair but clearly relates to the six days of the Creation and quite probably to the alchemical search for the Philosophers' Stone. To render this double symbolism of the presentation of the seven tables as orderly as possible, I will at this point offer some comparison between the biblical creation and alchemical processes. In George Ripley's The Compound of Alchymie (1471) twelve stages are assigned to the alchemical process. The first six lead to the making of the white stone which has the power to make base metals into silver, and then this may be turned into the 'red stone', the Philosophers' Stone itself, through processes somewhat repetitive of the previous stages. Since alchemy was as much a religious philosophy as a practical art, the changing of the white stone to the red may be compared with purification of the soul. Therefore in comparing the biblical creation, ending with man, with alchemical processes, I will only use the first six stages ending with the white stone. I do not wish to place too much emphasis upon the similarities between the two creations, but such a comparison will help to clarify much of the symbolism in the visions that accompany the showing of each Ensign of Creation.[14]

Day	Biblical	Alchemical
1	Creation of Heaven and Earth and Light; separation of day from night.	Calcination: reduction of matter to non-metallic substances (earth, to water, to air, to fire).
2	Creation of the Firmament to divide the waters.	Solution: dissolving of 'hard and dry Compactyon' to liquid form ('water').
3	Creation of land; separation of land from water; creation of trees and plants.	Separation: the subtle divided from the gross and 'water' from 'oyle', repeated until 'Erth remayn benethe'.
4	Creation of sun, moon and stars. (The sun and moon are traditionally regarded as male and female).	Conjunction: 'Woman' to be impregnated by 'Man'. The female part is sometimes mercury, sometimes silver, and the male is sometimes sulphur, sometimes gold.
5	Creation of fish and fowls.	Putrefaction: the matter turns to a kind of liquid pitch. It will be revived by the 'celestial virtue' which has left it, often symbolised by ascending and descending birds.
6	Creation of animals and man.	Congelation: the matter becomes dry and white - the white stone.

While the relation of the two sides of this table is often tenuous, the traditional alchemical symbols often bear a striking resemblance to the corresponding products of the various days of the creation particularly from the third stage onwards.

The first Ensign of Creation is shown with the accompanying statement that it is the 'end of darkness' (32b, 17). The second Ensign is accompanied by a sound of falling water, a shining star, and 'a mervaylous turmoyling, tossing, and stur, a long tyme during' (34a, 21-22). Both these visions seem to represent the first day of the Creation, the second in particular signifying the chaos and turmoil over which the spirit of God moved (Genesis I, 2). To relate the seven Ensigns to the six days of Creation, two Ensigns would have to cover one day of Creation and it seems that in a rather confused way this occurs at the beginning of the demonstration. The next vision shows a 'ball of light' being flung up into the darkness and bringing a great transparent 'white Globe' (34a, 30). This probably represents the creation of a universe into which the earth is to be placed, the firmament of the second day. The fourth vision demonstrates a little round ball being thrown into the darkness, being transformed into 'a great thing of Earth' and being cast up into the 'rownd Globe' (34a, 40-43). This is evidently related to separation and the creation of land on the third day. The next vision shows a woman being cut in half by a sword and the two halves turning into a man and a woman (see conjunction) and the sun, moon and stars being created, as on the fourth day. In the remaining two visions, firstly a woman crumbles clay and it turns into birds (see the symbolism of putrefaction and the creation of fish and fowl on the fifth day), and secondly 'herbes and plantes becomming like a garden' are created (36a, 4-5). This last vision is hard to equate with the Creation or alchemical process, for the trees and plants were created on the third day, but although there is no specific day assigned to the creation of the Garden of Eden, it was presumably on the same day as man was created.

The visions that accompany the Ensigns clearly have some relation to the days of the Creation, even though they do not fit into a very precise scheme. My reason for regarding the visions as to some extent alchemical is on account of a vision at the very beginning of the demonstration of the Ensigns which shows 'a great hill of gold with serpents' (32a, 13). The hill may represent the Philosophers' Stone and the serpent 'matter in its imperfect unregenerate state'. As I have said in the Commentary, in which I have also detailed possible alchemical symbolism in each vision, the vision represents 'the goal to which Dee aspires (wisdom or the Philosophers' Stone) beset by troubles (the serpents as evil) or by impurities (the serpents as unregenerate matter)'.

The seven Ensigns were painted upon the Holy Table with blue lines and red characters. When Dee asked what the use of these seven Ensigns was to be, he received the rather unsatisfactory reply: 'they are the ensignes of the Creation; wherewithall they were created by God: known onely by theyr acquayntance, and the manner of theyr doings' (102b, 25-26). The 'manner of theyr doings' is not explained and their only function seems to be as parts of the Holy Table, unless 'theyr doings' are of alchemical significance.

h) The Show-Stones

It is not possible to say how many show-stones or crystals Dee possessed, but mention is made in the manuscript of three. There is the 'great Chrystaline Globe' used in the Actions with Barnabas Saul (8a, 6) which appears to be different from 'the stone in the frame', represented at fol. 8a, line 35, to which the angel Annael says that the angel Michael is answerable. This latter stone is mounted in a frame with a cross upon the top. This stone was given to Dee by a friend (9a, 10) and was the one which Dee brought out when Kelly made his first attempt at scrying (although the more hastily drawn marginal sketch at this point shows the frame without a cross). Kelly used this stone in the ensuing Actions but on 21 November 1582 the spirit Carmara declared that he had brought another stone to be used with the Holy Table:

> E[dward] K[elly] loked toward my west wyndow, and saw there first vppon the matts by my bokes a thing, (to his thinking) as big as an egg: most bright, clere, and glorious: and an angel of the heyth of a little chylde holding vp the same thing in his hand toward me...I went toward the place, which E K pointed to: and tyll I cam within two fote of it, I saw nothing: and then I saw like a shaddow, on the grownd or matts hard by my bokes vnder the west window. The shaddow was rowndysh and less then the palm of my hand. I put my hand down vppon it, and I felt a thing cold and hard: which (taking vp I) perceyued to be the stone before mentioned. (59b, 34-46)

Whether the crystal now in the British Museum is one of these stones is uncertain. In 1801 Francis Barrett stated that 'although Dee's manuscripts and his Magic Crystall are to be seen at the Museum there are six or seven individuals in London who assert they have the stone in their possession; thereby wishing to deceive the incredulous and tempt them to purchase at an enormous price'.[15] The particularly interesting part of this claim is that many people claim to have the magic crystal that belonged to Dee whereas Sloane MS 3188 clearly shows that he possessed at least three if not more. This claim that Dee used one stone has resulted in Dee being attributed with owning a mirror of black obsidian and Aztec origin which is also now in the possession of the British Museum.

This mirror has been dated as having been made between the fourteenth and sixteenth centuries and probably brought back to Europe after the conquest of Mexico by Cortes circa 1520-1530. During the seventeenth century the mirror entered the collections of the Earl of Peterborough and then by inheritance came into the possession of Lady Elizabeth Germain (d. 1769). In 1770 it was purchased in an auction by the Duke of Argyle and then in 1771 presented by his son Lord Frederic Campbell to Horace Walpole.[16] The mirror is displayed with a leather case bearing Walpole's initials. The history of the mirror then becomes obscure and Hugh Tait, Deputy Keeper of Medieval and Later Antiquities at the British Museum, who purchased the mirror in October 1966 described it in a radio interview as follows:

> It was last seen in the Magniac Sale at Christie's in 1892, and after that, it disappeared from view into private hands. There were various stories that it had gone to Germany and had been lost during the war, and no one really had the slightest idea where it had disappeared to. One afternoon, I was sitting in my room, and a messenger came in to say that there was a gentleman in the waiting-room asking to see me. He said he was a bishop and, even more surprisingly, that he had Dr Dee's magic mirror with him—and would I like to see it? Of course, I was a little sceptical. I asked him to be shown in, and we went straight ahead from there, and it turned out to be a winner. There we were looking at the lost—so thought lost—Dr Dee's mirror.[17]

All this proves, however, is that the British Museum is in possession of the mirror that Walpole once possessed and which Walpole claimed was that used by Dee in the Actions. Yet such is the power of the legend that Dee used a mirror that Dr Peter French (author of John Dee) said in the same interview that on the Holy Table 'would have been placed either the mirror or one of Dee's crystals, as he had several objects in which to try to conjure angels' and Hugh Tait categorically stated 'there is no doubt that it is the missing mirror of Dr Dee'. Tait was rather more circumspect in his written article on the subject, however, admitting that 'the references to specific objects are so vague that in no instance [in Dee's writings] can the obsidian "mirror" be recognised'.[18]

Dee did possess a glass that he was particularly proud of and when the Queen visited him on the day of his first wife's burial she requested Dee to fetch the 'glass so famous, and to shew unto her some of the properties of it' (CR, p. 17). The Queen went away pleased and it can hardly be that Dee presented to the Queen such a dangerous practice as the summoning of angels, for which he always used a scryer anyway. It seems more likely that this glass is that which Dee declared in the 'Preface' to Euclid that anyone could come and see at the house of a gentleman (himself) as proof that glasses exist of such a nature that 'if you...proffer, with dagger or sword, to foyne at the glasse, you shall suddenly be moved to give backe (in maner) by reason of an Image, appearing in the ayre, betweene you & the glasse, with like hand, sword or dagger, & with like quicknes, foyning at your very eye' ('Preface', sig. B4v). Yet even this glass does not suggest itself as that now in the British Museum for Dee is here clearly talking about a concave mirror and the black obsidian mirror is flat. Furthermore on 4 December 1588 Dee gave the glass 'so highly and long estemed of Our Quene' to Kelly, who gave it to Lord Rosenberg who subsequently gave it to Emperor Rudolf II (Diary).

Dee's customary word for a mirror is 'a glass' and it is clear from various marginal sketches that when he refers to a 'stone' he means a spherical crystal. The speculum brought by the angel might be the obsidian mirror in that Dee at first mistakes it for a round shadow, and it is cold and hard, yet he does consistently refer to it as a stone and in Kelly's description it is only 'as big as an egg'. The light from the west window would cause the top half of a spherical crystal on the floor to be more translucent in the top half than the bottom, which would partly show the 'matts' or floor, and consequently it might at first be taken for a round shadow. A marginal note to fol. 101b declares that the angelic stone is half an inch thick, which agrees well with the 13mm thickness of the obsidian mirror, but this is also the approximate diameter of the spherical crystal in the British Museum. The black obsidian mirror has a diameter of 189mm and a handle making it 226mm long and this is considerably larger than Dee's description of 'less then the palm of my hand'. Furthermore in the Action of 17 July 1607 in which Bartholomew Hickman acted as scryer, Dee reminisced about his days with Kelly and showed Hickman his 'Jewel that was brought', which had by then been 'set in gold' (TFR, p. *40). Thus while it is not impossible that Dee did own the obsidian mirror and used it in the Actions, the evidence connecting the mirror with Dee is very circumstantial.

i) Magical Books

The Actions with spirits gave rise to a number of magical books in manuscript that form an integral part of the magical system that was evolved through the Actions. Of the four books discovered in the secret compartment of Dee's chest (all now bound as Sloane MS 3191), three are derived from the Actions subsequent to the last in Sloane MS 3188. These three are entitled 48 Claues angelicae, Liber scientiae auxilii et victoriae terrestris and Tabula bonorum angelorum invocationes.

The 48 Claues angelicae contains eighteen invocations and a further invocation suitable for any of thirty 'Aethyrs' in angelic (Enochian) language and were extracted from the tables in the Book of Enoch (see below) delivered to Kelly by the angels. These invocations were derived from the Book of Enoch by angelic help between 13 April and 13 July 1584 (see TFR, pp. 78-209) and were at that time translated into English. The 48 Claues angelicae contains an interlineated translation of the angelic language and it is from this book and the occasional other translated word in the Actions that our entire knowledge of the Enochian language, peculiar to Dee's magical experiments is obtained.

The Liber scientiae auxilii contains details of spirits governing ninety-one various parts of the world along with the angelic names for thoseplaces. The first twenty-nine 'Aethyrs' govern three places or countries each while the last governs four. This book dates from the same period as the 48 Claues angelicae as does the Tabula bonorum angelorum which gives thirty-six invocations in Latin to angels with various responsibilities in the universe. The Tabula bonorum angelorum is intimately connected with the Liber scientiae auxilii in that it begins with a square filled with letters from which the angelic names for the places governed by the 'Aethyrs' are drawn. These books, which are in Dee's hand, have no relevance to Sloane MS 3188, however, for they contain a distinct change in direction of the magical system that was evolved during the Actions. The system expounded between 1581 and 1583 concerns the forty-nine spirits whose names all begin with the letter 'B' and the Sons and Daughters of Light but by 1584 these have faded into the background in favour of exposition of the roles and associates of the thirty 'Aethyrs', all of whose names are of three letters.

The fourth book, De heptarchia mystica, is of prime concern, however, for it contains a summary of the information delivered concerning the forty-nine spirits whose names are to be found in the table at fol. 41a. The work contains invocations to the kings and princes among these spirits for each day of the week and shows the seals of the kings that are referred to but not described in Sloane MS 3188. The book is essentially a collation of the information given in the Actions between 29 April and 21 November 1582 and is in Dee's hand. Its purpose was to provide Dee with ready access to all that he needed for the practical summoning of these spirits without having to search through his copy of the Actions in which the information is delivered in bits and pieces.

The Book of Enoch, otherwise called Liber Logaeth ('Book of the Speech of God') and Liber mysteriorum sextus et sanctus, is in Kelly's hand and consists of forty-nine 'calls' in the angelic language (delivered first between fols 80b-85b of Sloane MS 3188), ninety-five tables of squares (forty-nine by forty-nine), filled with letters and occasionally numbers, two similar tables unfilled, and four tables drawn twice as large as the others. This is rather at odds with the description that the book should consist of forty-nine leaves, one of which is secret and 'neyther is, was or shalbe known' (62b, 28-29). The series of 'calls' in prose takes up ten folios and the remaining ninety-five small tables and two empty ones take up forty-eight leaves, while the last four tables take up eight leaves. The series of prose 'calls' is the first Enochian table but would not fit comfortably within a square, and only if it were put in a square and the last four tables disregarded, would the angelic statement be true.

A series of 'calls' in the Enochian language were delivered between 29 March and 6 April 1583, but this was a kind of prologue to the work and is not included. The book was to be written in forty days[19] and was finished on 6 May 1583, the thirty-ninth day after the very first Enochian 'call' was delivered on 29 March (Good Friday). The instruction that the book should be written in 40 days was given on 6 April, the day when the second series of calls, which begin the Book of Enoch, were first delivered, and there is a great deal of confusion as to when the forty days are supposed to begin (see 90a, 15 and Commentary). In the event the period extended from 29 March to 6 May so far as the delivery of all the angelic 'calls' and tables is concerned, but from 6 April to 6 May so far as the actual contents of the Book of Enoch are concerned. The tables were to be written from right to left and from the back of the book to the front, but Sloane MS 3189 is written normally. A further instruction was given that the book was to be rewritten in Enochian script, but despite frequent offers of angelic help (see TFR. pp. 78, 160 & 120), it does not seem to have been done. The first copy of the book was to be bound in blue (see fol. 79b) while the copy in Enochian script was to have a 'skin' of silver (TFR, p. 159) which Dee was in fact unable to have done successfully (TFR, p. 217).

The book was to serve several purposes. It was from the tables that the invocations in the 48 Claues angelicae were obtained by finding letters in various squares according to a kind of grid reference and each table had reference to particular kinds of spirits (see 88b, 1-2). The main purpose however was in conjunction with the Holy Table to herald in a new age upon earth that would precede the end of all things. The details of how the book was to be used for this purpose were never delivered and the Actions continually delay imparting specific information as to the precise use of the Book of Enoch in this respect.

Arising from the delivery of the Book of Enoch is the angelic or Enochian language. This language presents the greatest single problem of Dee's Actions with spirits. It is supposed to be the language that the angels taught to Adam and, to expropriate Francis Bacon's words, constitutes the 'knowledge by the light whereof man did give names unto other creatures in Paradise, as they were brought before him, according to their proprieties'.[20] It is supposedly the language in which things are named as they are, rather than as they seem to be or by any arbitrary process. Enochian embodies that direct name-thing relationship which in Plato's Cratylus is suggested as existing in the earliest form of language and which in the Christian tradition is supposed to be the language before Babel. One thing in which the kabbalists were united was their view of Hebrew as 'language in its purest form', having a mystical value because it 'reflects the fundamental spiritual nature of the world',[21] but Enochian supposedly surpasses Hebrew as 'the holy tongue'. It is a language of magical power not only because of its closeness to the divine source of all creation but because the words themselves are more than representative:

> This kind of verbal force rests on a theory of language according to which there is a real, not conventional, connection between words and what they denote; moreover the word is not merely like a quality of the things it designates, such as its colour or weight; it is, or exactly represents, its essence or substance. A formula of words, therefore, may not only be an adequate substitute for the things denoted, but may even be more powerful.
> (Walker, pp. 80-81)

Being the language of the angels, Enochian is seen as a language of creation, far more powerful than any corporeal object or action.

Two main problems present themselves with the Enochian language: firstly what is the source of the language's unique script, and secondly is it indeed a language in any formal sense? The Enochian alphabet consists of twenty-one characters, the addition of a dot to a previous character making an alphabet corresponding to twenty-two letters as in Hebrew (see fol. 64b). Each character has a name that has no apparent connection with the phonetic nature of the language. According to Dr Donald Laycock 'the characters have a general appearance rather like Samaritan — though their stylised forms may also suggest Ethiopic. The scripts they do not resemble are proto-Semitic, or Egyptian hieroglyphic, or Sumerian — a resemblance that would seem essential if we were to believe that the script, like the angelic language, dated back to "before the Flood", and was the most ancient script of mankind'.[22] Dr Laycock wonders whether Dee might have been in possession of an Ethiopic version of the Book of Enoch which he could not read, but also points to Dee's copy of the Voarchadumia of Pantheus (1530) which is now in the British Museum and which contains an alphabet designated as Enochian (p. 14). Meric Casaubon stated that the Characters 'are no other, for the most part but such as were set out and publised long agoe by one Theseus Ambrosus out of Magical books',[23] referring to the Introductio in Chaldaicam linguam, Syriacum atque Armenicam et decem alias linguas of Theseus Ambrosius Albonesius (Papiae 1539), which contains a large number of alphabets both real and magical. Yet for all that there are occasional resemblances between these various scripts and the Enochian characters, no one script is consistently similar enough to warrant its being regarded as a source and Dr Laycock's conclusion that 'the Dee/Kelley alphabet may be fanciful, based perhaps on subconscious recollection of similar scripts in earlier literature' (p. 29) is as yet the only one that may sensibly be reached.

One possible source that may be mentioned, but which unfortunately is impossible to check is the so called Book of Soyga that Dee possessed but which is now lost.[24] The book was first mentioned by Dee on 10 March 1582 when Uriel informed Dee that the 'book was revealed to Adam in Paradise by God's good angels' (fol. 9a) and that the angel Michael could interpret the book which is later referred to by Dee as being 'written in tables and numbers' (fol. 89b).

By 18 April 1583 Dee is unable to find the book and is told that 'a minister has it' and that 'it is nothing worth' containing 'false and illuding witchcrafts' (fol. 89b). The book evidently gives an alphabet which like Enochian gives names to the letters, for Dee says on 29 April 1583 that as far as he remembers 'Zadzaczadlin was Adam by the Alphabet thereof' (fol. 96a), zad being the letter 'a', zac being the letter 'd', and lin being the letter 'm'. I.R.F. Calder suggests that 'there is a possibility that "Soyga" might have been the famous Voynitch MS. which has defied all decipherers from Kircher onwards' (II, 481) but Ashmole noted that 'the Duke of Lauderdale hath a folio MS. which was Dr. Dee's with the words in the first page: Aldaraia sive Soyga vocor' ('I am called Aldaraia or Soyga').[25] The book was recovered by Dee on 19 November 1595 (see Diary) but its whereabouts now are not known. How much this book may have provided a source for the Enochian language cannot be determined, but the fact that the book is in tables and numbers and clearly uses a new alphabet suggests that it may have had some influence on Kelly, though clearly not enough for Dee to note any resemblance between his 'Arabic boke' and the subsequent angelic book.

In his preface to his Enochian dictionary Donald Laycock argues that there are two versions of the angelic language: the first consists of the two series of forty-nine calls that are in Sloane MS 3188 and the second is the series of calls with interlineated translation that are in 48 Claues angelicae. He reaches this conclusion on the grounds that the first series of calls are largely pronounceable and that some of the texts run fluently with much phonetic patterning such as repetition rhyme and alliteration, while the second version of the language is taken letter by letter from the tables of the Book of Enoch and 'is less pronounceable than the old [language], and it has awkward sequences of letters, such as long strings of vowels (ooaona, mooah) and difficult consonant clusters (paombd, smnad, noncf)' (p. 40). It is altogether 'the type of text produced if one generates a string of letters on some random pattern' (p. 40). This is undoubtedly true and it makes sense to regard the language which makes up the squares and the language which is subsequently extracted from the squares as different, but I have in my Commentary ignored this distinction since words do appear in the first version which also appear in the second version. They are not many and are often minor words such as conjunctions and prepositions, and at one point their juxtaposition does not make sense (see Commentary to 84b, 35), but it is the nearest that I can go to making any sense of the angelic language in Sloane MS 3188 and Dee does not note any distinction to be made between the two versions. He is informed that both are the language taught to Adam by the angels and still used by the angels, and squares filled with words of one language can be used to extract further words in the same language.

The translation of the calls in 48 Claues angelicae is rather free, often using five or six words in English to one in Enochian (e.g. cordziz is translated as 'man', 'reasonable creature', and 'the reasonable creatures of Earth, or Man'). Also of the 250 or so different words that appear, more than half only make a single appearance, but nevertheless given the freedom of the translation there is a marked consistency in the meanings given to each word at separate appearances.[26] Also some words have definite roots (e.g. gohus, 'I say'; gohe or goho, 'he says'; gohia, 'we say'; gohol, 'saying'; gohulim, 'it is said'), but there is no consistency of endings either for verbs or nouns with clear roots. Dr Laycock's conclusion on the grammar is that it 'suggests English with the removal of the articles ('a' and 'the') and the prepositions—and with a few irregularities thrown in to confuse the picture' (p. 43).

What then are we left with? Finally it is difficult to say more than that we have examples of one or possibly two closely related languages that are coherent enough to seem like a genuine language and yet irregular enough to defy the rules that we come to expect from a language in any formal sense. It is like a language but is not, and would seem to be a few steps further on from such nonsense language as Lewis Carroll's 'slithy toves'. The first series of calls are the kind of nonsense language one might make up if asked to speak and the 48 Claues angelicae contains the kind of nonsense language one might write, while taking some care to remember the arbitrary meanings of words used more than once. Whether it originated from Kelly's conscious or unconscious thought is hard to determine, but the mixture of regularity and irregularity in the language might provide further evidence that Kelly both genuinely went into a trance like state and consciously fabricated visions and revelations to maintain his credibility in the eyes of Dee.

j) The Holy Table

Dee first received instructions for making the Holy Table as early as 10 March 1582 (see fol. 10a), but the early plan was later declared to be false and it was not until 26 April 1583 that he received the altered details for the table which brought together certain elements of the system of 49 spirits and the Enochian script (fol. 94b). An engraving of the table in its final form is to be found in A True and Faithful Relation and a photograph of this engraving forms the appendix to the text of the manuscript in this thesis. The table is no longer extant, although it did survive Dee and was seen by Ashmole in John Cotton's Library.[27] He described it as being 'composed of 3 boards broad=waies beside the borderings; of a fine grained wood & very heavy, but the scent now lost'.[28] The original angelic instruction was for the table to be made from 'swete wood' (fol. 10a). Ashmole measured the table meticulously and all measurements that I shall give derive from his description. The top of the table was 7/10 inches thick and measured 36¼ by 35⅞ inches, the angelic instruction being that it should be three feet square. The table had a border 4/10 inches in from the edge which contained letters in Enochian script painted in red about 5/10 inches high within two blue lines 3/20 inches thick. The squares within which the letters were placed were one inch high and 1 3/20 inches wide. Twenty one letters were painted down each side, those at each corner being the letter 'B' in Enochian script on a gold background. The letters were obtained from a table rearranging the letters of the kings and princes of the forty-nine spirits whose names all began with the letter 'B' (see Commentary to 95b, 7).

The plan of the table in English letters at fol. 94b is mostly correct, with the exceptions that it does not show the positioning of the seven Ensigns of Creation and that all the letters are written from left to right. In the engraving of the table in TFR with its Enochian characters the letters in the top and bottom borders are written from right to left and the letters in the side borders are not only written from right to left but have exchanged sides as well. This latter move is rather hard to justify as consistency would also demand that the top and bottom borders were exchanged which they are not. The letters in the central square of twelve divisions are also written from right to left in the Enochian version but they maintain their own lines. These central letters are also taken from a table of the kings and princes of the 49 spirits (see 102a).

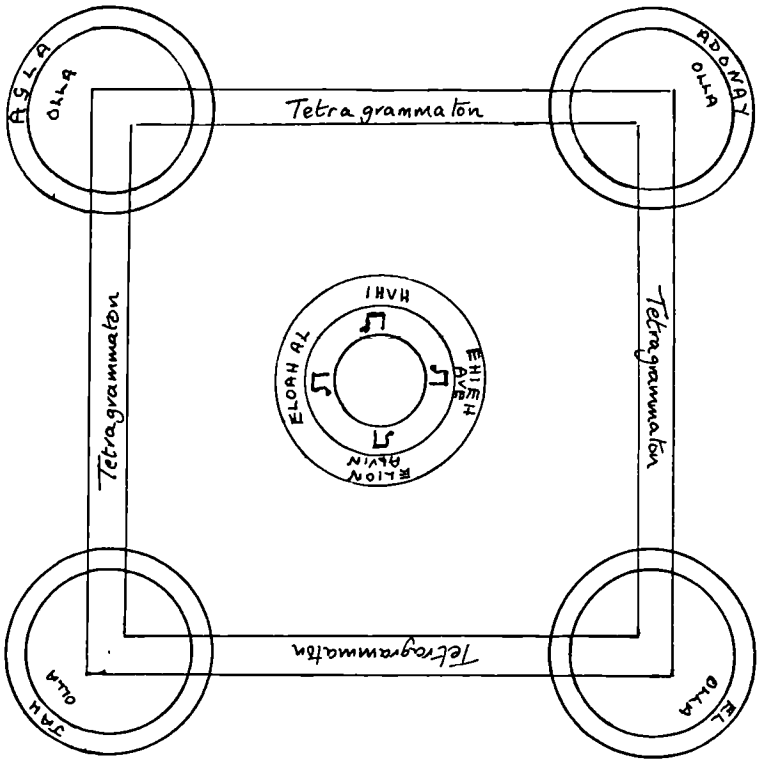
Ashmole noted that the Ensigns of Creation were painted with blue lines and red letters and that the lines of the pentagon were painted gold. The central square was 14¼ inches wide and 11 inches high and had lines of blue and letters of gold. He further noted the sizes and exact locations of the seven Ensigns of Creation. The table was on a 'frame' which was two feet eight inches square and two feet seven and a half inches high and had four feet each 3 inches square. When Ashmole saw the table in John Cotton's library he found laid on the frame 'the wooden case which holds the Table of Practise, the foreside of which is closed with 3 Iron Hasps, to be locked vp with 3 Padlocks'. The pedestal or frame was made at Lasko in Poland in 1584 (see TFR, p. 69).

I have not been able to trace any specific sources for the design of the Holy Table, but the main scheme of a square table standing upon four small seals and upon which a larger seal would be placed could be derived from a manuscript copy of the Key of Solomon. In The Secret Lore of Magic Sayed Idries Shah reproduces a diagram from a version of the Key of Solomon in the Bibliotheque Arsénal.[29] It is not dissimilar from the sketch on fol. 10a, although the latter is in three dimensional perspective and contains no letters (the letters on this first version of the table seem to have been written down separately and discarded when they were later declared to be wrong). The diagram in the Key of Solomon uses conventional magical inscriptions:



Whether Kelly saw a version of the Key of Solomon is uncertain but it was a common manuscript work and most persons involved in occult matters would have read it at some time. The details of the inscriptions of the seals and Holy Table are Kelly's own, however, arising from the system that was gradually evolved during the Actions.

It is uncertain whether the Holy Table was ever in fact used in an Action. Dee was instructed that the table, the seals, the Character of Dignification and the Book of Enoch were to be used when 'the time' had come, but the date for their use is continually delayed and no specific reference remains in Dee's writings to their being employed. In the Action of 22 June 1583 Dee wrote that Kelly 'sate in the green Chair, by the holy Table, or place' (TFR, p. 25), but if this is a reference to the Holy Table itself, it only seems to indicate its being kept near at hand in readiness. The ordinary table upon which the stone was usually set (see fol. 47b) might in the circumstances be regarded as holy. The lack of a capital letter for 'holy' may or may not be significant here.

The instructions which Dee received concerning the use of the Holy Table and its associated magical implements are specific in relation to their arrangement, but vague with regard to actual ceremony, particularly concerning the Book of Enoch. The table was to stand upon the four smaller versions of the Sigillum Dei, which were to be placed in small wooden protective covers (fol. 101b). The instructions for the first version of the Holy Table stated that red silk, two yards square, was to be laid underneath the table and a square piece of red silk 'somewhat broader then the Table' and with a tassel at each corner was to be laid over the large version of the Sigillum Dei, which was itself placed in the centre of the table (fol. 10a). Later it is declared that 'the sylk, must be of diuerse cullors, the most changeable that can be gotten' (fol. 101b). The Character of Dignification was to be placed over the seal (fol. 101b), but whether this would be over or under the silk is not clear. On top of this character was to be set the angelic stone, presumably in a frame. This was the arrangement to be used in conjunction with the Book of Enoch, but if Dee wished to engage the help of one of the 49 spirits he was to stand upon the relevant circular seal, place the individual seal of the king or prince upon the Holy Table and use the appropriate invocation from De heptarchia mystica. Presumably in this case the Character of Dignification and angelic stone would not be necessary; the instructions for these were received after the instructions concerning the invocation of the kings and princes.

In the event the Actions continued in the customary fashion and Dee was kept busy noting down more and more information concerning spirits in the universe, particularly when the magical system took a turn in direction with the introduction of details of the thirty

'Aethyrs'. The Holy Table does not seem to have been used as commanded and it would appear that Kelly introduced the thirty 'Aethyrs' when it seemed that the practical operation of the already accumulated magical implements might be put to the test.

1. Female spirits are rare in most religious and occult traditions, although Arabic legend presents female angels under the title of benad hasche, 'Daughters of God'. Dee accepts the Daughters of Light without question, but later quotes to a female spirit named Galvah the opinion of Trithemius that 'never any good Angel was read of to have appeared forma mulieri' (TFR, p. 12).

2. In his Dictionary of Angels (New York and London 1967) Gustav Davidson cites Trithemius as his source for this information.

3. Occ. Phil., III, xxiii, p. 413.

4. See fol. 94a ff. and TFR, pp. 1-3 & 28 ff.

5. Concerning the significance of the number 7, see Commentary to 18a, 32.

6. Rabbi Akiba ben Joseph, The Book of Formation, translated by Knut Stenring (London 1923), plate facing p. 24.

7. G.G. Scholem comments on The Book of Formation that the letters of the Hebrew alphabet are put forward in their various permutations as being 'the signatures of all creation ...the structural elements, the stones from which the edifice of Creation was built' and that 'a similar tradition of the creative power of letters...is applied to the Torah: "No one knows its [right] order, for the sections of the Torah are not given in the right arrangement. If they were, everyone who reads in it might create a world, raise the dead, and perform miracles"'. (On the Kabbalah and its Symbolism, translated by R. Manheim (London 1965), pp. 167-168).

8. See Sloane MS 3191, fol. 49.

9. This change in direction occurs after the Action of 23 March 1583 (fol. 60a ff.).

10. Christopher Butler, Number Symbolism (London 1970), p. 30. See also Occ. Phil., II, xiii, p. 212.

11. Occ. Phil. I, xlix, p. 94.

12. 'Behold...here...through this...by the end of measure, you will measure us and our power' (fol. 58a).

13. A Dictionary of the Bible, edited by James Hastings, 5 vols, II, 198-199.

14. My principal sources for what follows are Wayne Shumaker, The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance (Berkeley, Los Angeles, London 1972) and F. Sherwood Taylor, The Alchemists (London 1951).

15. Francis Barrett, The Celestial Intelligencer (London 1801), p. 196.

16. See Hugh Tait, 'The Devil's Looking Glass: the Magical Speculum of Dr. John Dee', Horace Walpole, Writer, Politician and Connoisseur, edited by Warren Hunting Smith (New Haven & London 1967), pp. 195-212, pp. 210-211.

17. 'Dr Dee's Magic Mirror—Reflecting Two Elizabethan Worlds', The Listener, 23 & 30 December 1976, pp. 824-826, p. 824.

18. Tait, 'The Devil's Looking Glass', p. 206.

19. On the significance of the number forty, see p. 123 above.

20. Francis Bacon, The Advancement of Learning and New Atlantis, edited by Arthur Johnston (Oxford 1972), p. 6.

21. G.G. Scholem, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism (New York 1941, 3rd edition 1967), p. 17.

22. Donald C. Laycock, The Complete Enochian Dictionary (London 1978), p. 28.

23. TFR, 'Preface', sig. E4r.

24. Dee refers to it as his 'Arabic boke', but Soyga has no meaning in Arabic and no identification has been forthcoming from contacts I have used at the University of Baghdad.

25. Sloane MS 3677, fol. 142.

26. The language does not appear to be cryptographical despite Dee's statement to Kelly that he obtains 'some understanding of those holy words, their significations by reason of due applying the English to the word Christus', which is itself not very comprehensible (TFR, p. 91).

27. There is a late 17th century copy of the table in marble and somewhat smaller in size (600mm x 463mm) in the University of Oxford Museum of the History of Science.

28. Ashmole MS 1790, fols 55a-56a.

29. Bibl. Arsénal MS 2348, cited in The Secret Lore of Magic, edited by Sayed Idries Shah (London 1957, reprinted 1974), p. 28.

VI

MOTIVES

When General and Rare Memorials was published in 1577, Dee described himself as being 'now at the end of his dayes' (sig.Δ.1r). He was fifty years of age and had endeavoured throughout his life to use his 'great Talent of knowledge and Sciences' to make 'the State Publik of this BRYTISH MONARCHIE, to become florishing, in HONOR, WEALTH, and STRENGTH;' only to be rewarded with the indifference of 'the Ingratefull and Thankles' and the aspersions of 'the skorners and Disdainers of such his faythfull enterprises' (sigs Δ. 4r-v). In the face of worldly disappointment and ingratitude for all his labours, he turned, in what he thought were his last years, from the realm of secular experiment and discovery to that of spiritual exploration and experience. It is plain from the protestation to God in Sloane MS 3188 that Dee had come to reject the secular search for truth in favour of divine revelation, largely on account of the lack of success attendant upon the former in providing the answers that he desired concerning the nature of the world:

> O God Almighty, thow knowest, and art my director, and witnes herein, That I haue from my youth vp, desyred and prayed vnto the for pure and sownd wisdome and vnderstanding of some of thy truthes naturall and artificiall: such, as by which, thy wisdome, goodnes and powre bestowed in the frame of the world might be browght, in some bowntifull measure vnder the Talent of my Capacitie, to thy honor and glory, and the benefit of thy Servants, my brethern and Sistern, in, and by thy Christ our Saviour: And for as much as, many yeres, in many places, far and nere, in many bokes, and sundry languagis, I haue sowght, and studyed; and with sundry men conferred, and with my owne reasonable discourse laboured, whereby to fynde or get some ynckling, glyms or beame of such the forsaid radicall truthes: But, (to be brief) after all my forsaid endevor I could fynde no other way, to such true wisdome atteyning, but by thy extraordinary gift: and by no vulgar Schole doctrine, or humane Invention. (fol. 7a)

In the light of Dee's many protestations at the ingratitude of his fellow countrymen[1], we may infer here that Dee was disillusioned with his earlier labours as much on account of lack of recognition as on account of the failure of such labours to reveal God's 'radicall truthes'. Furthermore Dee's pride, which is often revealed in his defences of his work and reputation, shows through here in the statement that he has ever desired that God's 'wisdome, goodnes and powre...might be browght' not in some little but 'in some bowntifull measure' within his capacity. Dee's deep involvement with scrying arose in part from such disillusionment with the world of man and such expectations from the world of God, and also from two other causes, both promises: one was the promise of worldly wealth in the guise of buried treasure and the Philosophers' Stone; the other was the promise that a new age was soon to dawn.

Even in the existing Action with Barnabas Saul mention is made of some kind of hidden treasure (fol. 8a), although this may be a reference to stolen goods whose location was being sought through scrying, in line with popular tradition. In the Actions with Kelly the promise of discovering buried treasure plays a prominent part for a while. When Kelly returned to Dee after spending the winter of 1582-1583 at Blockley, he brought with him a book, a scroll written in strange characters (see fols 86b & 87a), and some red powder in a vial. These articles were to provide distractions from the main course of the Actions, for the scroll supposedly led to some buried treasure, while the book and the red powder were declared to contain the secret of the Philosophers' Stone.

It did not take Dee long to decipher the scroll which yielded a text in Latin which purported to have been written by a Dane who desired to let his countrymen know where to find some treasure that he had buried, and which to this end was accompanied by a diagram showing ten places (fol. 86b). The place names still do not make much sense when deciphered, but I think I have identified one as Meon hill near Blockley (see Commentary to 88a, 23). Dee was in constant need of money to finance his laboratories and library and so was eager to take advantage of this discovery made by Kelly. Kelly's report that he had been led to find the articles by a spiritual creature further convinced Dee that God was helping him and he requested angelic help to obtain the treasure. At first the angels were scornful of his worldly desires, but eventually he was informed that if he gathered a sample of earth from each of the ten places shown on the scroll and invoked the aid of the spirit Blisdon, the prince who governed the earth and all subterranean things, and his ministers, the treasure would be brought before him (fol. 90b).

Without explanation the ten places become eleven places with the addition of Newbury (see 103b, 10 & 106b, 3), but evidently Dee or Kelly was able to make some sense of the place names deciphered from the script on the scroll, for on 8 May Dee wrote that he was going to 'lack the Cumpany of E K going for the Erthes...and to be away 10 or 12 dayes' (fol. 104b). Kelly returned with 'the erthes of the eleuen places before specifyed' on 23 May (fol. 106b), and Dee had been able, almost to his own surprise, to obtain a licence from 'the Governor and assistants for the Mines Royall' for digging for treasure.[2] When Dee asked in an Action of 28 May precisely what was to be done with the samples of earth, he received the evasive answer that they would have perished had they remained _in situ_ (TFR, p.9). By 22 February 1584 Dee was still no further forward in the treasure hunt and asked the spirit Madimi 'that the Danish Treasurer [_sic_ for treasure] in _England_, in the ten places, (seised on by E.K.) might be brought hither

[to Lasko], very speedily; whereby A[lbert] L[asky] might redeem Kesmark and Lasko lands, mortgaged: and also pay his debts in Cracow' (TFR, p.69). The reply was again evasive, warning Dee that 'small are the Treasures of this world, in respect of the wisdom that judgeth NATURE' (TFR, p.71). Thereafter the matter is dropped and Dee presumably lost hope of the spirits providing him with material wealth from this source. There is little credence to be attached to Aubrey's note of Meredith Lloyd telling him of 'John Dee conjuring at a poole in Brecknockshire, and that they found a wedge of gold; and that they were troubled, and indicted as conjurers at the assizes; that a mighty storme and tempest was raysed in harvest time, the countrey people had not known the like'.[3]

Dee refers to the book which Kelly found as the Book of Dunstan (63a, MN14), which may have been a copy of the MS Tractatus... de lapide philosophorum attributed to that saint.[4] The book was very nearly burnt when on 12 December 1597 Kelly spilt his oil lamp:

> The spirit was spilled out, and burnt all that was on the table where it stode, lynnen and written bokes, — as the bok of Zacharius with the Alkanor that I translated out of French for som by spirituall could not; Rowlaschy his thrid boke of waters philosophicall; the boke called Angelicum Opus, all in pictures of the work from the beginning to the end; the copy of the man of Badwise Conclusions for the Transmutation of metalls; and 40 leaves in 4°, intitled, Extractiones Dunstani, which he himself extracted and noted out of Dunstan his boke, and the very boke of Dunstan was but cast on the bed hard by from the table. (Diary)

A red powder was also discovered with the book, but Kelly kept these two things close to himself. In the Action of 18 April 1583 the spirit Il 'advised E K to communicate to me [Dee] the boke, and the powder, and so all the rest of the roll, which was there fownd: saying, true friendes vse not to hide any thing eche from other' (fol. 90b), but by 5 May he had not done so and it seems that they were not being kept at Dee's house (see 103b,10-14).

The powder was supposed to be the Philosophers' Stone, or something very close to it, and presumably a major problem, to which the Book of Dunstan would provide the answer, was how to perform the exercise of projection. Kelly claimed to have made nearly an ounce of gold on 19 December 1586 (Diary) and it seems that Kelly was still keeping the powder to himself. On 4 April 1587 Kelly was informed that if he wished to take no more part in the Actions he should bring the powder before the angelic presence in fourteen days' time. At this point the experiments with Arthur Dee as scryer begin and it is on 18 April that Kelly comes with the powder 'as he was bidden to do', but in fact resumes scrying in place of Arthur (TFR, p.*9). He is informed that the powder 'is appointed for a time by God, and cannot be used until then, without offence', but it is plain that he has already used some of it, probably in his 'successful' transmutation, for he is accused on 4 April of being 'a false steward, in taking out of that which is not thine own'. When Dee noted in his Diary on 10 May 1588 that 'E.K. did open the great secret to me, God be thanked!' he probably meant that Kelly shared the powder as well as the secret of its use, for on 4 February 1589 Dee gave to Kelly 'the powder, the bokes, the glas and the bone, for the Lord Rosenberg' (Diary). This is the first reference to Dee ever being in possession of the powder himself.

Yet for all the promises of material wealth, Dee's prime motive for becoming so heavily involved in the practice of scrying was of a spiritual nature. The angels prophesied that a new era was about to come and their prophecy was a confirmation of the expected rather than a declaration of the unforeseen. In 1572 a new star had been observed in the heavens and five years later a comet blazed across the sky, which 'unduly bred great feare and doubt in many of the Court' (CR, p. 21). It seemed evident that the commotions in the heavens must foreshadow some great event upon the earth, and Dee's judgement given to the Queen upon the significance of the comet allayed fears that the event was to be some great disaster. It is most probable that Dee predicted quite the opposite, his judgement being founded upon the theory of cycles in world history. He ended the 'Aduertisement to the Reader' of General and Rare Memorials with a note that it was printed five years after the appearance of the new star and Anno Mundi 5540 (sig. e.*4r). The star and the dating from the beginning of the world were evidently important to Dee and, even though he apparently first attempted scrying as early as 1569 (see 3188, 5b), suggest that his efforts with Saul and Kelly may have been motivated by some factor connected with such a view of time and history. The conviction that a new age was on the way was founded upon the doctrine of trigons, which had been set forth by Alkindi:

> The smallest cycle was of 20 years between the conjunctions of two major planets, which governed momentous events, largely internal to a country, changes in rule, rebellions, political crises etc; a second was known as a Triplicity, or Trigon, representing three signs of the ecliptic of 120^{o}, and lasted 240 years — (the time between the occurrence of a major conjunction within a trigon, and a similar conjunction in the preceding one), and governed the great revolutions, and transference of hegemony; the third and greatest cycle was of four complete trigons, (the entire Zodiac) each of which represented one of the four elements, and which commenced with the fiery trigon, and the recurrence of which including the effects of the other two, also implied the appearance of a new religion that would thereafter dominate the world in the ensuing great period. It lasted 960 years... This cycle of 960 years should then be completed in 1582. (Calder, I, 787-788).

Tycho Brahe, the astronomer with whom Dee was long in correspondence, also interpreted the new star as signifying great political and religious changes. With a caveat that he could not pronounce his judgement with any absolute certainty, he declared that the star's 'shining forth with a joviall, cleere, and bright lustre, doth seeme to fore-shew a prosperous and peaceable state in humane affaires', while its 'Martiall fiery glistering' signified that 'some violence and trouble shall be intermingled with it'. Most importantly it seemed to portend 'a great alteration, if not an utter subversion of Religion', but for the better.[5]

Warming to his task he stated that 'there shall happen a great Catastrophe and universall change throughout all the chiefe Nations of the Earth, especially those which are situated Northward from the Aequinoctiall' and that this period of turbulence and resettlement would occur between 'the yeare of Christ 1583, and in the latter end of the Moneth of Aprill' and 'the yeare 1592' (p. 16). By an alternative method of computation Brahe arrived at a date of 1632 for the demonstration of the 'force and influence of this Starre', but at all events his prophecy foretold the calm before the Apocalyptic storm:

> All the significations of this Star doe depend on the Trigonall revolution and transmutation of the Planets. And therefore if this bee the seventh revolution of the Planets, the first whereof was in the dayes of Enoch, the second in Noahs time, and at the Vniversall Deluge, the third in the dayes of Moses, when the people were freed from the Egyptian servitude, the fourth in the dayes of the Kings of Israel, the fift in the time of Christs Incarnation, when the Roman Empire was at the highest, and the sixt in the dayes of Charles the Great, when the Empire was translated to the Germanes, this last and seventh, is as it were the Sabbath to all the rest, and doth foreshew something of greater consequence than all the former, wherein it is worthy of observation, that all the trigonall revolutions, as the first, third and fift, were very profitable and advantagious to the world; and so it is not unlikely that this seventh > revolution being an unequall number, doth point out and fore-signifie the happy estate of things which is to come. Neyther doth this conjecture differ from the Prophesies of wise men which were illuminated with divine knowledge, who have foretold, that before the universall consummation & end of all things, there shall be a peaceable and quiet age wherein the divers formes of Religions and politike government, shall be changed and be made agreeable and conformable to the will of God. (pp. 17-18)

While Brahe admits that 'it is impossible to limit and set forth a certaine time for the consummation of the world, which onely dependeth upon the good-will and pleasure of God, and is not reuealed to the angels, and therefore canot be knowne by any humain prescience' (p. 20), he does prophesy that the world is about to enter upon a final phase, similar to the final religious empire predicted by Guillaume Postel,[6] and this echoed Dee's own nationalistic and religious hopes and ideals.

Dee believed that Britain and her queen were especially favoured by God and sought the establishment of a British Empire which would bring a Christian peace to the world, with all the benefits of safe passage and security that had been the promise of the Roman Empire.[7] His proposal in GRM for the building of a permanent navy was part of a farsighted plan to establish this empire in which Elizabeth would become the leader of a new Christendom:

> I haue oftentymes...and many wayes,looked into the State of Earthly Kingdoms, Generally, the whole World ouer: (as far, as it may, yet, be known to Christen Men, Commonly:) being a Study, of no great Difficulty: But, rather, a purpose, somewhat answerable, to a perfect Cosmographer: to fynde hym self, Cosmopolites: A Citizen, and Member, of the whole and only one Mysticall City Vniuersall: And so, consequently, to meditate of the Cosmopoliticall Gouernment therof, vnder the King Almighty: passing on, very swiftly, toward the most Dreadfull, and most Cumfortable Term prefixed:
>
> And I finde...that if this Brytish Monarchy, wold heretofore, haue followed the Aduantages, which they haue had, onward, They mought, very well, ere this, haue surpassed (By Justice and Godly, sort) any particular Monarchy, els, that euer was on Earth, since Mans Creation. (GRM, p. 54)

He further notes in the margin that Britain 'might haue Contended for the Generall Monarchie' of the world. As early as 1570 Dee had outlined a plan to 'make this kingdome flourishing, triumphant, famous and blessed'[8] and had advocated further attempts to open up sea routes to the Orient whence 'verely, might grow Commoditye, to this Land chiefely, and to the rest of the Christen Common wealth, farre passing all riches and worldly Treasure' (Preface, sig. A.1). His plans did not just encompass an increase in merchant trade. By 1582 he was heavily involved with the plans for the voyage to be undertaken by John Davis and Adrian Gilbert to discover a North-West passage to Cathay and in March of that year he interpreted an angelic reference to the new age as signifying that 'this Adrian Gilbert shall cary the name of Jesus among the Infidells to the great glory of god, and the recouery of those miserable people from the mowth of hell into which, for many hundred yeres past, and yet contynually they do fall' (Sloane MS 3188, 65a).

While any Christian message carried by Gilbert would have been entrenched in the Protestant church, Dee's vision of 'one Mysticall City Vniuersall' was not founded upon any of the particular parties on either side of the religious schism. His angel-magic was closely related to an ardent desire to see the establishment of a universal religion in a reformed and reunited Christendom. Scrying embodied direct communication between man and the angels of God and the immediacy of this relationship with the Almighty classes Dee with such unorthodox religious thinkers as Pico della Mirandola and Giordano Bruno. Bruno believed that by embracing the magical religion of the world as expounded in the Asclepius attributed to Hermes Trismegistus, the world could be reconciled in a pristine religion of universal love and gnostic revelation.[9] It cost him his life on a charge of heresy. Dee's concept of a universal religion did not involve an abandonment of Christianity such as Bruno advocated, but included a similar emphasis upon universal love and direct revelation from God. The Church was 'the number of those which are governed by the Holy Ghost' irrespective of their nominal religion (TFR, p. 386). The articles of Dee's faith were summarily expressed by the alleged voice of the 'Holy Spirit' in an Action of 10 April 1586:

> Whosoever wishes to be wise may look neither to the right nor to the left; neither towards this man who is called a catholic, nor towards that one who is called a heretic (for thus you are called); but he may look up to the God of heaven and earth and to his Son, Jesus Christ, Who has given the Spirit of His abundant and multifarious graces to those who live a natural life in purity and a life of grace in their works.[10]

Although Dee satisfied Bishop Bonner of his religious orthodoxy while Mary held the throne, there is no evidence that he was a Catholic recusant under Elizabeth. It may be safely assumed that when Elizabeth took the crown Dee embraced the religious stability that came with the Anglican church. His touchstone was that of righteousness and his complaint was ever against self-righteousness. On that basis there was to him no difference between catholicism and protestantism. On the Continent he adopted the religion of the country in which he stayed. On 19 April 1585 he took 'Ghostly counsel of Doctor Hannibal, the great Divine, that had now set out some of his Commentaries upon Pymander, Hermitis Trismegisti' and the next day 'received Communion at the Bernadine's, where that Doctor is Professor' (TFR, p. 397). He was fully prepared that the angelic communications should be revealed to the worthy, irrespective of their nominal allegiance:

> May, therefore, our catholic brethren who are truly Christian, faithful, and distinguished by divine charity, (at a time appointed by God) be enriched by the knowledge of this short narrative, and may they be filled with very great consolation. (Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p. 227)

Faith in God and Christ and charity to mankind were the criteria by which Dee judged his fellows and were the foundations from which he hoped to see a reformed and universal religion constructed.

When he finally answered the request of the Papal Nuncio at Prague for a meeting, he failed to find such qualities in the emissary from Rome.[11] On the contrary he sensed that the meeting was a trap and denied any angelic suggestions for the reformation of the Catholic Church to which the Nuncio referred (Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p. 232). Kelly, who was also present, went so far as to declare that the problems of the church lay with its ministers. He informed the Nuncio that if 'the doctors, shepherds, and prelates mend their ways...a great and conspicuous reformation of the Christian religion would be brought about most speedily' (Josten, 'Unknown Chapter, p. 233). While it did not help their case with the Nuncio, who evidently wished to gain evidence for a charge of heresy, it was a statement with which Dee heartily concurred. Kelly had for some time before been making confession to a Jesuit priest, but had suddenly been refused absolution unless he admitted that the spirits with whom he dealt were evil and not God's angels. On hearing about this Dee was enraged and wrote:

> Surely, all pious and true catholics will be grieved with us that, whilst pure religion is so sadly afflicted, so great a scandal should have arisen in the Catholic Church from which the fruit of the true, pure, and very great charity of God (namely a remission of sins and peace of conscience) should have issued.[12]

Dee had no quarrel with the Jesuits in principle,[13] finding them to be 'mostly devout and peaceful men', and he believed that they too would 'grieve that...so poisonous an egg should have been laid, whence, one must fear, a horrid basilisk, a great danger to very many people, will be born' (Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p.237). Dee's vision of a universal religion even included the generally despised Jews, for he expressed a desire that his Monas hieroglyphica should convince the Hebrew cabalists that 'the same most benevolent God is not only [the God] of the Jews, but of all peoples, nations, and languages' (Monas, p. 133). Indeed the reconciliation of the Jews with Christianity was a prerequisite of the final era of world history as Tycho Brahe pointed out:

> If any doe object, that the end of the world is at hand, and that therefore there will not be sufficient time to bring about a new Change, I answere, that Saint Paul doth assure us, that the Iewes shall be engraffed into the Church, before the finall consummation of the world, which (by humaine coniecture) must needs require some time before, they being scattered over the whole face of the Earth, shall be gathered into one Nation. (Astronomical Coniectur, p. 20)

A prophecy of the Jews' restoration was voiced in the Action of 5 April 1583 (fol. 77b) as one of many prophecies of the coming of a new age upon earth.

The establishment of a universal religion and a final period of harmony in the world are strongly emphasised in the Actions and the angels proclaim that the information that they are delivering to Dee and Kelly is central to the arrival of this new era. Even in the Action with Saul, Dee equated the informing angel Annael with his office as 'Chief governor Generall of this great period, as I haue Noted in my boke of Famous and rich Discoueries' (fol. 8b). According to Agrippa the angels Zaphiel, Annael, Zadkiel, Michael, Cumael, Gabriel and Raphael each governed in turn a period of 354 years and 4 months, and Dee's date of 1577 as 5540 Anno Mundi fits into this scheme whereby the third full cycle is in progress, Annael governing between 1348 and 1702. Trithemius stated that a new age would begin in 1525, 6732 years after the Creation and assigned the angel Gabriel as governing angel of this penultimate period of the world cycle, but Dee dated the Creation 1243 years later than Trithemius (see GRM, sig. E*3v). Later in the Actions there is some doubt expressed as to whether the chief governor of this period is Baligon, Carmara (an alias of Baligon) or Annael (see 51a, 20-21 & MN21).

Kelly seems to have realised rapidly that Dee would trust him most if what the angels delivered was at least in part a confirmation of what Dee already believed and promises of the fulfilment of some of his dearest hopes. In the second day's Action that took place with Kelly as scryer, on 11 March 1582, the angel Michael informed Dee that 'the world begynns with thy doings' (fol. 11a), and during the subsequent Actions the two participants were repeatedly told that they had been cleansed of sin and elected by God to a special purpose. The angels had separated them from 'fyled and wycked persons' (fol. 17a) and called them 'our fellows, and seruants to God' (fol. 24a). They would be considered 'in this world, and in the world to come' and were 'to be ioyned so, and in mynde vnited' as if they were 'one man' (fol. 32a). The spirit called Hagonel declared that his 'tyme is yet to come' (fol. 45a) and promised Dee a power equivalent to his own to throw down princes and kings (fol. 45b). Dee was also promised the sight of God (videbis Deum) by the same spirit (fol. 49a), and that he should be 'glutted, yea filled' and 'puffed vp with the perfect knowledge of Gods Mysteries, in his mercyes' (fol. 50a). Such promises were precisely what Dee wanted to hear and the exposition of the orders of spirits that supposedly governed the world which accompanied these promises led him to believe that he was indeed being granted the revelation of divine secrets. He was promised the ability to 'cast oute the powre of all wicked spirits' (fol. 57a) as the disciples had been (Luke IX, 1) and the secret of the coming of the new age was revealed to him by the spirit called Bynepor, who declared that there should 'begynne new worldes, new peoples, new kings, knowledge of a new Government', this never having been 'reuealed no not in these last times, of the second last world' (fol. 56b).

Central to the coming of the new era was the Book of Enoch. The book had long been lost to man, but now that a new period of universal religion and world government was approaching, it was once again revealed to man and was to be instrumental in heralding in the new age. There was to be a time 'of great miserie, to the heavens, to the earth and to all liuing Creatures' in September 1583 according to a prophecy of the angel Uriel made on 6 April 1583 (fol. 79b), but the Book of Enoch was the key to salvation. It would heal all things ('omnia resanabit') according to Raphael (fol. 62a) and held the 'holy key, which vnlocketh the secrets of god his determination, as concerning the begynning, present being, and ende of this world' (fol. 101a). Dee had been 'hardened as the flynt' by God 'to be the first erthely witnes' of these divine secrets (fol. 92b), while the Lord had already sent his angels 'to viset the earth, and to gather the synnes thereof to gither' to be 'wayed before him in the balance of Justice', for all the nations of the world should know 'that there is a GOD which forgetteth not the truth of his promise' (fol. 101a).

Dee was instructed to have all the magical instruments including the Book of Enoch in the angelic script, ready for use by 1 August 1583 (fol. 101a) and from the Book of Enoch would 'be restored the holy bokes, which haue perished euen from the begynning, and from the first that liued'. The book would also enable 'perfect truth' to be deciphered 'from imperfect falsehode, True religion from fals and damnable errors' along with 'all Artes: which are propre to the vse of man, the first and sanctified perfection: Which when it hath spread a While, THEN COMMETH THE ENDE' (fol. 101b). All this would be achieved in one month (101b, 29). There are no records of Actions during August of that year and in the Action of 12 April 1584 the spirit Nalvage declares that he has no power after 'the first day of August next' (TFR, p.77). On 7 May 1584 Gabriel informs Dee that the calls of the 48 Claues angelicae will be delivered 'before August' (TFR, p. 117), but by then Gabriel has already answered a query by Kelly about the year of this important month ('By August next?') by saying:What if it were a hundred Augusts?' On 16 November 1582 it had been declared that 'the tyme of Gods visitation' was '8', and Dee speculated that this might mean 1588 or eight years from the time of the Action, 1590. The Action of 26 October 1583 seems to confirm the date of 1588, for the spirit Il declares that 'these five years to come, are the Deliverance' (TFR, p. 43). The Antichrist is declared to be alive in the Action of 12 April 1584 (TFR, p. 76), although he is not the Pope as many believe (TFR, p. 412), and the period of the 'time to come' is said to be 950 years by Gabriel on 2 June 1584. It may be that Dee's return to England in 1588 was partly prompted by the failure of these prophecies to prove true, but there is so much vagueness, contradiction and postponement in the angelic prophetic utterances that Dee's hopes are unlikely to have been attached to a specific date. Frequently the angels accuse Kelly of wickedness in spite of his election and this is taken as a cause for events not occurring as foretold and at other times attention is diverted from a prophecy by the introduction of a large quantity of new revelation of spirits, such as the thirty 'Aethyrs'. Despite all the reversals of fortune Dee suffered in his partnership with Kelly, he never seems to have lost hope and the dissolution of the partnership was more at Kelly's instigation than Dee's. Even as an old man of eighty Dee seems to have maintained some hope of all that was promised proving true, as the Action of 17 July 1607, with Bartholomew Hickman as the scryer, shows:

> After dinner (horam circiter 4 .) as Bartholomew and I talked of divers my doings with Mr. Kelley, a Voice produced this to Bartholomews hearing,
>
> A Voice.....I, John Dee, I have heard you all this while.
> Thou shalt be able to do, and to see, and to understand more than all this thou has spoken of, according as God hath promised thee.
> △. Blessed be his holy Name, and his mercies be magnified on me, to the honour of his holy Name. Amen. (TFR, p. *40)

Dee then shows Hickman the angelic stone with an apparent enthusiasm of remembrance of those days with Kelly, and Hickman takes the advantage by seeing Raphael in the stone who promises another journey abroad.

The motives for Dee's Continental journey lie in the promise of a new age upon earth. Dee and Kelly are portrayed as purifying the world by their celestial knowledge in visions shown on 4 May and 15 November 1582 (see fols 42a-42b and 45a) and the missionary nature of the Actions is emphasised by the election of Adrian Gilbert to some of the secrets of the divine revelations and his choice as an emissary of God's word to the people of Atlantis.

Dee's works consistently show that he was most willing to share his knowledge with others, particularly for the good of his country, the 'Preface' to Euclid being a most notable example. The celestial knowledge delivered in the Actions was less for common consumption and early in the Actions with Kelly, Dee was enjoined to secrecy (fol. 17a), but in the Action of 10 April 1586 angelic command is in agreement with his own desires:

> When it was enjoined on me by God Almighty to commit those things to writing which He communicates to us from His immense goodness and most abundant grace, I deemed it my portion...to be extremely careful lest by me, or by my negligence, they be offered to the handling or the sight of the proud, those without faith, the ungrateful, the envious, the impure, or of any unworthy person. Yet, surely, we were expressly instructed from the very first beginning of that our vocation and function, and we have known ever since, that it is in accordance with our duty and most agreeable to the Divine Majesty to show those mysteries in passing, to relate them compendiously, or to give a very brief account of an action (as we call it) (transcribed or translated from our authentic original autograph), to the worthy, namely to those who are pious, humble, modest, sincere, conspicuous in Christian charity, enlightened, to those to whom words of divine life and truth are, or may be, a very great consolation, and also sometimes (by a singular divine providence or command) to certain men of yet another kind.

Dee continues by writing that he has no doubt that in the fullness of time much that he has received from the angels 'will be published and known to the world in a most abundant, manifest, complete and effective way' to the eternal honour and glory of God (Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p. 226). The promise of a new age and a universal religion together with Dee's desire to share his knowledge with his fellow man (perhaps as much motivated by desire for renown as by a genuine philanthropy) are primarily responsible for his move to the Continent. Although he had made the acquaintance of Albert Lasky who at first promised to be a rewarding patron, there is good reason to suppose that Dee's journey to Europe was more in response to the religious and political climate in central Europe than to any particular request from Lasky.

R.J.W. Evans notes that under the Emperors Ferdinand and Maximilian II 'the Austrian Habsburg territories supported a great range of religious opinion in the sixteenth century'[14] and continues:

> The further practical consequence of such variegated patterns of faith was a widespread de facto toleration: not a merit of the Reformation, but the very atmosphere in which it operated, tantamount to its lack of any clear focus. 'In affairs of religion everyone does as he pleases, and thus something like peace obtains between the parties,' observes one censorious Catholic, and the thought is seconded by a Lutheran: 'In Austria there is almost too much liberty in religion, since all those who have been banished from the rest of Germany for whatever reason flood to it with impunity.' 'At Prague, that populous and dirty place,' noted the Huguenot Prince de Rohan in 1600, 'there is no German sect of which one cannot find some trace.' After the 1520s little religious violence broke out and serious persecution was very rare throughout the century, Ferdinand's attack on the Bohemian Brethren for a few years from 1547 being the clearest case. The traditional Catholic edifice still stood, partly because it enjoyed the protection of the dynasty, more importantly because no single Protestant group had the strength or organization to replace it.[15]

Maximilian himself was 'remembered as a tolerant ruler who early in life so favoured the Lutherans as to be suspected of apostasy' and he patronised 'a court which, in its composition and mentality, represented the very image of educated moderation'.[16] This atmosphere of toleration and learning undoubtedly impressed Dee during his earlier Continental journey for he dedicated his Monas hieroglyphica to Maximilian and travelled to Presburg to present him with a copy. In 1583 the Emperor was Rudolf II, who had by then moved the seat of his government from Vienna to Prague, and whose court was famous as a centre of alchemy, the court of William Rosenberg being a close second. If Dee was looking for a part of the world where the first seeds of the new age might grow, the Habsburg Empire might well have seemed to provide the most fertile soil. England, as he pointed out in General and Rare

Memorials, had missed many chances of becoming a centre of a new commonwealth, and had not provided him with the recognition that he sought. There is also a crucial piece of evidence noted by R.J.W. Evans that Dee had from an early time seen the Habsburg Empire as an important centre in the prophesied changes: Evans points to Dee's hand-written entries in his own copy of a prognostic almanac De coniunctionibus magnis insignioribus superiorum planetarum (Lauingen 1564) by the Czech astrologer Cyprian Leowitz:

> The book contained a series of prophecies about events to be expected from 1564 to 1584; Dee evidently bought it at the time, and it is striking how he has underlined especially those passages connected with Habsburg or Bohemian history. Leowitz himself forecast some violent change to coincide with the new trigon which would enter the heavens in 1584, and he was very probably a personal acquaintance of Dee's. Besides being well known to his contemporaries in England and abroad he was the author of a tract on the casting of horoscopes to which Dee had appended one of his published works in 1558.[17]

When the angels' prophecies confirmed those that had been made by Brahe, Leowitz, and others, Dee's eyes must have turned towards Bohemia and the arrival of Albert Lasky may have seemed something more than mere chance.

Lasky was soon permitted to attend the Actions and for a time was given a central part to play in the coming of the new age. He was to be 'an arme vnto [God's] chosen' and when a reply was sought to Lasky's questions of whether he might succeed Stephen Bathory as King of Poland and/or gain the throne of Moldavia,[18] Raphael declared that 'the Lord hath sayd: Thow shalt gouern a people: a time there is, which is prefixed: and it is the course of the sonne: Then shall it be sayd vnto him, O King' (fol. 107b). Subsequently the prophecy is extended to cover rule over twenty-one kingdoms (TFR, p. 17), and on 26 June 1583 Lasky was told in his own presence that he would have the kingdoms of both Poland and Moldavia. A year later Lasky had fallen from angelic favour because of an unwillingness to turn wholeheartedly towards God, although the relationship with Dee was not entirely broken. By August 1584 the Emperor Rudolf was chosen to be exalted, if he would listen to God's word transmitted through the angels and Dee and Kelly (TFR, p. 220) but Rudolf's toleration of Dee's activities soon became strained and by 28 February 1585, two months before Rudolf finally expelled Dee and his company, the angels were promising Rudolf's destruction and the placing of King Stephen in his stead (TFR, pp. 380-381). The angels do seem to favour whomever seemed at the time to offer most hope of lucrative patronage to Dee and Kelly. The reasons for Rudolf's tiring of Dee's presence are made clear by a passage R.J.W. Evans cites from the Lutheran leader Budovec:

> A learned and renowned Englishman whose name was Doctor De: came to Prague to see the Emperor Rudolf II and was at first well received by him; he predicted that a miraculous reformation would presently come about in the Christian world and would prove the ruin not only of the City of Constantinople but of Rome also. These predictions he did not cease to spread among the populace.[19]

Dee had set out for Bohemia with Lasky confident in the truth of the angels' prophecies and with a strong sense of a missionary purpose that would be justified by subsequent events. As it turned out he just became an embarrassment to be moved on while Kelly, who claimed the secret of the Philosophers' Stone, became someone worth holding on to, even if imprisonment was the surest means of keeping him.

Curiously the fortune attendant upon Dee in his pursual of the new age prophesied by the Actions is almost foretold by a passage in his 'Preface' to Euclid:

> Diuine Plato, the great Master of many worthy Philosophers, and the constant auoucher and pithy perswader of Vnum, Bonum, and Ens: in his Schole and Academie, sundry times (besides his ordinary Scholers) was visited of a certaine kind of man, allured by the noble fame of Plato, and the great commendation of hys profound and profitable doctrine. But when such Hearers, after long harkening to him, perceaued, that the drift of his discourses issued out, to conclude, this Vnum, Bonum and Ens, to be Spirituall, Infinite, Aeternal, Omnipotent, &c. Nothyng beyng alledged or expressed, How, worldly goods: how worldly dignitie: how, health, strēgth or lustines of body: nor yet the meanes, how a merueilous sensible and bodyly blysse and felicitie hereafter, might be atteyned: Straightway, the fantasies of those hearers, were dampt. (sig.☞4r)

Fortified by the frequently Neo-Platonic utterances of the angels who categorically state that all things are one ('Omnia vnum est', fol. 21a), Dee saw himself almost as a new and Christian Plato who could dispense to the world a wisdom and knowledge that was not even revealed to Plato himself. Unfortunately his hearers did not want the 'Spirituall, Infinite, Aeternal, Omnipotent' but rather those things that make up material success and happiness, and unlike Plato's visitors these men were in positions of power. Dee was not himself without a certain desire for materialistic welfare, but he saw this as both necessary for his search into the secrets of nature and attendant upon his Christian mission. Plato was not a hermit living sparsely in some cave; as a dispenser of God's wisdom Dee foresaw for himself a position of respected elevation. There is something pathetic in the degradation of his final years.

1. See Preface, sigs A1v-A2r; GRM, sigs Δ. 1r-e*4r; CR, pp. 20-38, and the Discourse Apologeticall.

2. All such digging came under the heading of mining rights and so had to be licensed.

3. Aubrey, Letters Written by Eminent Persons, II pt. 1, p. 312.

4. See Fell Smith, John Dee, p. 193.

5. Tycho Brahe, Learned: Tico Brahae his Astronomicall Coniectur of the New and Much Admired [Star] which Appered in the Year 1572 (London 1632), facsimile edition, The English Experience number 86, (Amsterdam and New York 1969), p. 15.

6. See Guillaume Postel, Le Thresor des Prophéties de L'Univers, edited by François Secret (The Hague 1969) and Calder, I, 789-791.

7. For a detailed study of Dee's imperialist ideas, see E.G.R. Taylor, Tudor Geography, 1485-1583 (London 1930), pp. 75-139, and Peter French, John Dee, pp. 183-199.

8. This treatise is now BM Cotton Charter XIII, art. 39.

9. For Bruno's religious ideals, see Frances A. Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (London and Chicago 1964), pp. 205-359.

10. Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p, 245.

11. The Nuncio was Germanus or Germanicus Malaspina, Bishop of San Severo from 27 April 1583 until his death in 1604.

12. Josten, 'Unknown Chapter', p. 237.

13. Dee wrote a letter to Burghley on 22 August 1589 proclaiming the treachery of a Jesuit named Parkins, but the letter shows no intrinsic antipathy towards the Jesuit order (Lansdowne MS 61, art. 58, fol. 159).

14. R.J.W. Evans, The Making of the Habsburg Monarchies, 1550-1780 (Oxford 1979), p. 11.

15. R.J.W. Evans, ibid, p. 13.

16. R.J. W. Evans, ibid, pp. 19-20.

17. R.J.W. Evans, Rudolf II and his World (Oxford 1973), p. 221.

18. Stephen Bathory, Prince of Transylvania was elected to the Polish throne in 1575. On his death in 1586 there were many quarrels as to who should succeed to the throne the election eventually falling upon a Swedish prince who took the title of Sigismund III. Moldavia lies in the north-east part of Roumania and between 1561 and 1563 was ruled by the voivòde Jakob Basilikos who had the 'tacit support of Maximilian II, the full co-operation of the Zborowskis and Albrecht Łaski in Poland' in the introduction of Utopian reforms (R.J.W. Evans, Rudolf II, p. 108). Basilikos was murdered in 1563 and voivodes were created and deposed in rapid succession by the Ottoman Divan, but in 1600 the country was annexed to the 'Great Dacian' realm of Michael the Brave in Walachia.

19. R.J.W. Evans, Rudolf II, p. 245. To this may be added a comment in a letter from Arthur de Champernon to Walsingham dated 19 June 1584 (O.S.) and sent from Prague: 'I found an Englishman with his family at Cracow, called Mr. Dee, who, as is said, has followed Laski, quitting a certain estate for uncertain hope. It is to be feared that he will repent of it at leisure' (Calendar of State Papers: Foreign, 1583-1584, p. 558).

CONCLUSION

In his five volume collection of the writings of Elias Ashmole C.H. Josten commented of Dee's magical manuscripts:

> The significance of many details, especially of the diagrams, in the manuscripts is not easily understood, and it may be said here that a future biographer of John Dee will have a difficult task in eliciting from these papers an account of the precise nature and methods of the magical system to which they refer. (I, 186)

Since Josten made that remark there has appeared Peter French's well-documented study of Dee, but necessarily the details of Dee's magical dealings are subordinated to the study of the whole man. What I have attempted to do in this thesis is to provide the first step towards an account of the precise nature of the magical system of the Actions with spirits, but the task is by no means completed. When Dee undertook his Continental journey the system with the 49 spirits was superseded by the system based upon the roles and powers of the 30 'Aethyrs', to which the three manuscripts besides De heptarchia mystica that were discovered at the same time as Sloane MS 3188 belong. Little has been done to illuminate the darkness of this later magical system, from which other surviving artifacts, such as an engraved gold disc in the British Museum, arise.

In providing this transcript of Sloane MS 3188 with an introduction and commentary I have had two principal aims: one was to provide a transcript of a manuscript that must be read by anyone wishing to study Dee's life and which is consequently showing some signs of deterioration; the other has been to explain as far as possible the obscurities of the contents of that manuscript. Those more versed in the complexities of Renaissance occult philosophy will see influences and sources where I have seen none, but it has not been my aim to judge the place of Dee's magical dealings within the context of the whole of Renaissance occult philosophy. I.R.F. Calder's thesis 'John Dee Studied as an English Neo-Platonist' is still the major work on that subject, to which must be added the important research contained in the many books of Frances Yates. What I have tried to do, however, is to provide an intelligible background to the manuscript, both in terms of the generalities of Renaissance magical thought and in terms of the art of scrying.

In time evidence may come to light which proves or disproves my hypothesis of the provenance of the manuscript. Its appearance in the Sloane collection is puzzling and I would like to be certain of the answer. It is also possible that in time new information concerning the lives of Dee and Kelly may appear, perhaps from records and documents pertaining to the Court of Rudolf II, although a letter from Dr. Miro Velinský of the State Library of Prague assures me that their 'specialists reported that they know of no manuscript, written by or relating to the above mentioned authors, which could be found on the territory of Czechoslovakia'. Yet the heart of my study has always been the manuscript itself and the elucidation of the magical system it contains and I hope that all suggestions of optical fraud or cryptography may now safely be dispelled and that the nature of the surviving magical instruments may now be more fully understood.

Any detailed study of the magic of the Actions with spirits is as much a study of Edward Kelly as of John Dee. It is in the chapters giving the background to Renaissance magic and the practice of scrying and advancing the case that one of the strongest motives for Dee's involvement was his adherence to the belief that a new age was soon to dawn (itself a subject for a thesis) that I hope I have gone some way towards answering the questions posed by the manuscript's very existence—in particular the question as to what it was that bound Dee, who knew and corresponded with so many learned men, to this strange and volatile man from Worcestershire. Amidst all the turmoil of their relationship Kelly represented to Dee the hope that his most cherished dream might come true, a hope that Dee felt no other source was able to offer.

COMMENTARY

fol. 2a.

(Folios 2a-3a are in Ashmole's hand).

1) 20:th]

The use of a colon in abbreviations was common during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries (see Samuel A. Tannenbaum, The Handwriting of the Renaissance (republished New York 1967), p. 142).

2) Samuell Story]

Story remained in Ashmole's service until the latter's death and was employed as clerk in the office of the Comptroller of Excise. He is referred to in Ashmole's will as 'My Cosen Samuel Story' (see Elias Ashmole, His Autobiographical and Historical Notes, his Correspondence, and other Contemporary Sources Relating to his Life and Work, edited by C.H. Josten, 5 vols (Oxford 1966), I, 161 and IV, 1800, 1832 & 1892).

4) vizt]

An abbreviated form of 'videlicet'.

5) w^{ch}]

'which'.

22th]

The superior 'th' derives from the reading of the ordinal as 'the two and twentieth' (Tannenbaum, p. 154).

an^{o}:]

'anno'.

6) 1583.]

A period before and after both Roman and Arabic numerals was common practice (Tannenbaum, p. 141), although Ashmole generally omits the preceding period.

7) printed Booke]

A True and Faithful Relation of what passed for Many Yeers between Dr: John Dee...and Some Spirits, edited by Meric Casaubon (London 1659). Ashmole's own copy is Bodleian Ashmole MS 580 and bears signs of collation with the original manuscripts, which were in the Cotton library, and with Casaubon's own copy which is now in the Bodleian Library (shelf mark D. 8. 14 art).

8) Cawsabon]

Casaubon's name is sometimes found in the form of Causabon. The use of 'w' for 'u' is rare in Ashmole's writings, though very common in Dee's.

9) The erasure may be a superior 'ch', since the preceding ampersand is blotted and appears to be partly over another letter. Ashmole may first have written 'w^{ch}', but then realised that this suggested that the later conferences were 'bound vp in this Volume'. He then substituted the ampersand. Lines 1-9 are still ungrammatical, however, and although 'and which' would help to solve the problem, the sentence would have benefited from a total reorganisation.

10-21) 48 Claues angelicae, Liber scientiae auxilii et victoriae terrestris (as Dee entitled the work), De heptarchia mystica, and the book of calls, Tabula bonorum angelorum invocationes are now BM Sloane MS 3191. Their significance is discussed in chapter V of this thesis. Ashmole's title of Liber scientia terrestris auxilii et victoria is unintelligible and he appears to be writing from memory.

12-16) See TFR pp. 418-419. The papers of 10 April 1586 in which the command to burn the books was given are entitled Praefatio Latina in actionem and are now Ashmole MS 1790, Art. 1. An English translation is entitled 'An Unknown Chapter in the Life of John Dee', edited by C. H. Josten, JWCI, XVIII (1965), 223-257.

13) comanded]

A contraction of 'commanded'.

14) The crosses refer to the marginal note.

19-20) Squares...Cross]

See Sloane MS 3191, fols 53b-54a.

24) William Lilly, the astrologer, who was born on 30 April 1602 at Diseworth in Leicestershire and died at Hersham, near Walton-on-Thames, on 9 June 1681, having moved there permanently in October 1665 (DNB).

25) freind]

'friend'. The form appears again at line 25 on folio 2b and similar inversions of 'i' and 'e' occur quite frequently in Dee's manuscript (e.g. 7a, 27).

Thomas Wale]

I have not been able to uncover any further information concerning Wale than Ashmole gives here.

26) Ma:^{ties}]

'Majesty's.'

fol. 2b.

2) Ashmole was appointed Commissioner of Excise at Lichfield in 1644 and then at Worcester in 1645. After the Restoration he became successively Comptroller and Accountant-General of Excise (DNB).

3) Broadstreete]

Now Old Broad Street, leading off Threadneedle Street.

exchang]

Absence of a final 'e' is quite common in manuscript material of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

5) This work was first printed in 1672 by J. Macock for Nathaniel Brooke. It brought Ashmole a considerable amount of fame and the King's favour.

9) s:^{d}]

'said'.

14) M:^{r} Jones]

I have discovered no information on Mr. Jones beyond what Ashmole gives here.

15) Lumbardstreet]

Lombard Street, by the Royal Exchange.

17) Adle Streete]

Addle Street is off Wood Street by London Wall and lies close to both Lombard Street and Old Broad Street.

19) It is possible that this chest may have been used to transport all the angelic instruments, such as the Holy Table and its frame, during Dee's travels abroad. The measurements given show that it is not the same as the box in which Dee brought all his papers to be burnt on 10 April 1586 (Josten, 'An Unknown Chapter', p. 249).

22) ben]

'been'.

23) John Woodall]

John Woodall (1556-1643) lived in Wood Street after returning from abroad and worked hard to cure the plague in 1603. On 30 September 1641 he was appointed Examiner of Surgeons. He died leaving a daughter and three sons (DNB). For his influence and work see A. G. Debus, 'Woodall, Paracelsian Surgeon', Ambix X (1962) and G. L. Keynes, 'Woodall, Surgeon', Journal of the Royal College of Physicians II (1967).

23-25) The confusion over parentheses in these lines is unremarkable in manuscript material.

26) probabble]

A manuscript error rather than a conscious spelling, this orthography not being found in the OED.

27) It is unlikely that the chest would have been sold before Dee's death considering what Dee knew it contained, although some books from his library were disposed of by his daughter Katherine during his final years (Smith MS 95, fol. 131a, and Ashmole MS 1788, fol. 149a). Had she been aware that the chest contained her father's dearest possessions, Katherine would not have sold it, and were she unaware, it is hard to believe she would have disposed of it when more money could be obtained from her father's books.

MN7) Sence]

'Sense', i.e. Ashmole's sense of Mr. Wale's kindness.

80l. p Anūm]

Eighty pounds per annum.

fol. 3a.

1) John Woodall died in September 1643 and so if Ashmole is correct in saying that the discovery was made four years ~~before~~ the Fire of London (September 1666), the chest must have been purchased not more than nineteen years before the secret papers were found. Alternatively the papers were discovered in 1663, three years before the Fire, but twenty years after Woodall's death and the sale of his goods.

5-6) Box or Till]

'Box' refers to an open container space and 'till' is generally used to refer to a small compartment or drawer (OED). The chest was therefore probably divided into compartments, under which the secret drawer lay.

12-13) Chaplet...Cross]

There is no reference in any of Dee's writings to these articles, although they are customary properties of a natural and Christian magician. According to Agrippa the olive tree holds occult lunar properties (Occ. Phil. I, xxiv, p. 54), whereas cedar wood, of which the chest was made, holds solarian properties (Occ. Phil. I, xxiii, p. 52).

17) An elementary culinary practice to prevent the pastry adhering to the container in which it is baked. Concerning missing papers see Introduction pp. 10-15.

21) hapned]

'happened'.

24) Moorfields is just to the north of London Wall and quite close to Lombard Street.

fol. 4a.

5) + 1 +]

The numeral 1, indicating the first book.

fol. 5a.

1-42) Besides my other extemporary prayers and more vehement cries to God, this one [following] was used most often. I would say my morning and evening prayers asking for wisdom. In the name of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Almighty, eternal, true and living God, reach down to help me: Lord of Lords, King of Kings, Lord God of Hosts, hasten to my aid. Glory be to God, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, for ever and ever. Amen. Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. O Lord Jesus Christ (who art the true wisdom of your eternal and almighty father), I most humbly beg your divine majesty that you deem it fitting to send me the speedy help of some pious wise man and skilled philosopher for understanding and perfecting most fully those things which will be of greatest worth in the increase of your praise and glory. And if no such mortal man is now living upon the earth who may be fit for this task, or who may have been assigned by your eternal providence to the performing of that service for me, then truly I most humbly, most ardently and most faithfully beg your divine majesty to deem it fitting to send me from the heavens your good spiritual ministers and angels, namely Michael, Gabriel, Raphael and Uriel: and (by your divine favour) whatsoever other true and faithful angels of yours, who may fully and perfectly inform and instruct me in the true and exact knowledge and understanding of your mysteries and great works (concerning all your creatures, their natural properties and best employments) and of such things as are necessary for we mortals to know, to the praise, honour and glory of your name, to my firm consolation and (through me) the consolation of the greatest number of your faithful [servants], and to the confusion and overthrow of your enemies. May this be done [through the names of] Jehovah Zebaoth, Adonai and Elohim. O blessed, most blessed and almighty Trinity, grant to me (John Dee) this petition in such manner as will most greatly please you. Amen.

From the year 1579 in approximately this manner, in Latin or English (and furthermore in another singular and particular manner around the year 1569, sometimes for Raphael and sometimes for Michael) it was most pleasing to me to pour forth prayers to God. May God grant his wonderful mercy to me. Amen.

4) Oro̅]

A contraction for 'oravero'.

Vespertinaq^{R}]

'Vespertinaque'. It is unlikely that 'matutina' and 'vespertina' refer specifically to the services of matins and vespers, although Dee's morning and evening prayers probably contained part of these services. These two words occur in several places in the Vulgate Bible (see Psalm CXL, 2, and Exodus XIV, 24) but were also used in the Rule of St. Benedict (see Ch. XIII, 12). From these two uses the words passed into common usage among the monastic writers, but referring to the specific morning and evening services. Anyone familiar with the monastic life as it was lived in England until 1540 would naturally associate the words with the set services, but Dee was not a strict adherent to any of the orthodox churches. Furthermore he states that the prayers are for wisdom, which suggests that he had to some extent devised his own prayers, in the manner of that given here. For these reasons I have translated the words as 'morning and evening prayers', feeling that this conveys the true sense of Dee's usage.

8) Jehouah Zebaoth]

'Lord God of Hosts' is the translation accorded to this name by the Authorised version of the Bible.

11) sem$\dot{p}$]

'semper'.

saeculorū]

'saeculorum'.

12) $\hat{o}$ rerum o$\bar{i}$m]

'oh rerum omnium'.

12-14) Recte...fige]

These sentences are frequently repeated in later Actions as justification for the angelic conferences (see for instance 7a, 49-50).

22) Dee requests the help of angels 'very humbly' (humilime), but it is plain that he believes that no-one on earth may help him despite his plea between lines 15 and 19. His pride in believing himself to have reached the outer boundaries of mortal knowledge is apparent.

25) Concerning the offices of these angels see Commentary to fol. 6b and Introduction p. 117.

30) no$\bar{i}$s]

'nominis'.

33-34) Adonay, Elohim]

The names used by the Jews to avoid pronouncing the Tetragrammaton, translated as 'Lord' and 'God' respectively in the Authorised version of the Bible.

39) Concerning Dee's early scrying experiments, see Introduction pp. 49-54.

fol. 6a. (This page is written in a normal fashion from left to right, but I have reproduced it horizontally in order to demonstrate the spatial relationships of the notes).

1-5) Angelus...praedominans]
'The angel or intelligence now governing the whole world'. Dee notes on fol. 8b that Annael is the governor 'of this great period', by which he means that Annael governs the period of world history in which Dee lived. Over each period there ruled a different angel. Concerning these world cycles and their governors see Commentary to 8b, 26 and Introduction pp. 161-165.

Etymologia...Misericors]
'Etymology: the favoured [or] wretched mercy of God', i.e. the mercy of God shown to both the elect and the sinner.

6-10) 4. Angeli...Quaternarij]
'4 angels presiding over the four corners of the heavens, as Agrippa notes in the scale of four'. Agrippa's discussion of numbers in De occulta philosophia involves scales or tables in which each number is explained in terms of its significance in the various levels of creation (Opera I, pp. 159-200). For instance the names of God, Jehovah Zebaoth and Elohim (see 5a, 8 & 34) belong respectively to the scales of nine and five.

11) Etymologiae]

Michael: The etymology of Fortitudo Dei ('the strength of God') follows Agrippa (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv), although the Hebrew is more often translated as 'who is as God' (see Davidson, Dictionary of Angels).

Gabriel: Dee gives an etymology of 'the growing power, or the mightiness, or the increasing strength of God'. Agrippa gives 'the virtue of God' (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv) whereas the Hebrew is generally translated as 'man of God' or 'God is my strength' (see Commentary to 11b, 16).

Raphael: 'The medicine of God' in accordance with Agrippa (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv).

Uriel: 'Light of God' (not defined by Agrippa).

16) אנא et אנה]

ANA & ANAH

17) c̄oe]

cognomine?

16-18) 'Anna, and Annah, is a particle of a supplicant and confessor. By this root [cognomine], it may be seen without absurdity to mean God of supplication and confession'.

According to later etymology Anna is a combination of AH and AN and is a supplicatory interjection, whose use may be seen in the Hebrew in Psalm CXVIII, 25 and Genesis L,3. It is variously translated as 'I beseech thee' and 'I pray thee now'.

fol. 7a.

1-2) The folio is torn at the top left hand corner and what these words were is not at all clear.

3-4) 'A faithful protestation to almighty God [and] to the perpetual memory of [this] matter, anno 1582'.

7-8) truthes naturall and artificiall]

In the Preface Dee divides the world into the supernatural, the natural and the mathematical, defining the natural as that which is 'materiall, compounded, diuisible, corruptible, and chaungeable' and perceived by the exterior senses (sig. ☞ 3v). Dee is searching for greater truths than those which the five senses can provide and his terminology here is that of the corpus of 'natural philosophy', largely gathered together by Agrippa. Natural truths are those of the world as God created it and include all occult properties and influences which Agrippa defined as having much form and little matter (Occ. Phil. I, x, p. 24). Artificial truths are those that arise from the combining of natural properties in a way that does not occur in the world under ordinary circumstances, except through the agency of man. Whereas one might learn natural truths by studying the properties, both visible and occult, of say mercury and sulphur, the lesson learned from heating them together to form mercuric sulphide would be an artificial truth.

9) frame of the world]

A common phrase. See for instance 'this goodly frame the earth' which Hamlet finds so sterile (Cambridge edition, ed. Dover Wilson, II, ii, 302).

10) Talent]

'Power' rather than 'ability'.

11) brethern and Sistern]

Obsolete forms of 'brethren' and 'sisters' (OED).

ō]

'our'.

13) languagis]

'Languages'. The 'is' plural instead of 'es' is quite frequent in Dee's writing.

sundry men]

See A Compendious Rehearsal pp. 6-8 where Dee lists many of his foreign acquaintances, all of considerable standing in the intellectual world.

14) discourse]

'Understanding'.

15) ynckling]

'Inkling'.

glyms]

'Glimpse'.

20) Enoch]

The biblical statement that Enoch 'walked with God' (Genesis V, 22 & 24) was taken to mean that Enoch communicated directly with God and his angels. This gave rise to many apocryphal books and Agrippa complained that in his day books were 'published up and down, under the feigned Titles and Names of Adam, Abel, Enoch, Abraham, and Solomon'(Of the Vanitie and Uncertaintie of Artes and Sciences, tr. Ja[mes] San[ford] (London 1569), pp. 116-117). What we now know as the Book of Enoch disappeared sometime after being last referred to by George Syncellus in his Chronography around A.D. 800 and was not rediscovered until Bruce brought back an Ethiopic version found in Abyssinia in 1773 (The Book of Enoch, edited by R. H. Charles (Oxford 1893), pp. 1-2). The disappearance accounts for the revelations of the square tables of numbers and letters by the angels being proposed as the lost Book of Enoch.

Moyses]

Moses saw God many times in various forms, as in the burning bush (Exodus, III) and in fire on Mount Sinai (Exodus XIX, 18), but also 'face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend' in the tabernacle (Exodus XXXIII, 11).

21) Abraham]

Abraham was prevented from sacrificing his son by the voice of an angel speaking from heaven (Genesis XXII, 11), but also saw God before the destruction of Sodom when 'three men' came to his tent (Genesis XVIII). These three men are traditionally identified as Michael, Gabriel and Raphael.

Isaac]

See Genesis XXVI, 2, when 'the Lord appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of'. Isaac is visited again that same night (verse 24).

Jacob]

Apart from the vision of the ladder (Genesis XXVIII, 12), Jacob meets God's angels at a place he later called Mahanaim (Genesis XXXII, 1-2) and wrestles with an angel at the place he later named Peniel (Genesis XXXII, 24). In The Zohar (Vayishlah 170b) this latter antagonist is identified as Samael ('God's venom') who is often taken to be the Angel of Death.

22) Josua]

Joshua, whom God frequently instructs, although no angelic visitors are specifically recorded in the Bible.

Gedeon]

Gideon was called to the leadership of Israel by an angel who 'sat under an oak' (Judges VI, 11).

Esdras]

Esdras saw a company of righteous souls surrounding the Son of God (II Esdras II, 42-48) and was shown many prophetic visions by Uriel (see II Esdras, IV, 1; V, 31; X, 28-29).

Daniel]

On being discovered still alive in the lions' den, Daniel informed King Darius that 'my God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me' (Daniel VI, 22). Daniel also saw Gabriel (Daniel IX, 21) and another with a face 'as the appearance of lightning' (Daniel X, 5-6).

Tobias]

Tobias was accompanied by the angel Raphael on his journey to Rages in Media, the angel assuming the name of Azarias.

sundry other]

Lot was warned by two angels to leave Sodom before its destruction (Genesis XIX) and Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego were saved from hurt in the furnace by one 'like the Son of God' (Daniel III, 25). Samson's parents were foretold of his birth by a visiting angel (Judges XIII, 19-21).

23) disposition]

See Acts VII, 53, where the people are said to 'have received the law by the disposition of angels'.

24-25) Biblical appearances of angels are generally for the purpose of preserving life and foretelling future events. These are worldly but hardly domestic affairs, although the for telling of future births, such as of Isaac to Sarah (Genesis XVIII, 10), may be grouped under this latter title. Even when a prophet answers such domestic questions as the whereabouts of Kish's asses (I Samuel IX, 20), an ulterior motive is present, in this case the anointing of Saul as King of Israel.

26-27) The high priests of Israel are supposed to have used the stones of the breastplate described in Exodus XXVIII for divinatory purposes (see M. Gaster, 'Jewish Divination', Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics, 12 vols (Edinburgh 1908-1921), pp. 806-814).

27) preists]

'priests'.

29-30) prophets...Seers]

See I Samuel IX, 9: '(Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to inquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer:

for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called a Seer)'.

31) aeronomicall]

This word is not in the OED, but presumably derives from aer, 'air', and numen, 'divine will or power', and therefore means 'of celestial and divine origin', proceeding from the breath (or word?) of God.

Samuel, for Saul]

See I Samuel IX.

32-33) See I Samuel X.

35) Cis]

Kish in the Authorised version.

36) god]

'good'.

37-38) Epistle of James I, 5: 'si quis autem vestrum indiget sapientia, postulet a Deo, qui dat omnibus affluenter, et non improperat: et dabitur ei' (Vulgate); 'if any of you lack wisdome, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him' (Authorised).

38) Salomon]

Solomon (see I Kings III, 5-12). Ashmole notes at this point: 'Solomons wisdome excelled the wisdome of all the children of the East Country & all the wisdome of Egypt. For he was wiser than all men, than Ethan the Ezrahite, & Heman, & Chalcol, & Darda the sons of Mahol. 1 Kings. Cap 4 30' (Sloane MS 3677, 8b).

40-41) See Job XXVIII, 12-13: 'But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding? Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living'.

42) mediately]
through an intermediary.
immediately]
without an intermediary.

44) wetingly]
'knowingly'.

46) the]
'thee', a common form in Dee's writings.

47) mann͡s]
A contraction of 'manners'.

48) Mittas...ducant]
'May you send your light and truth to lead me'. This echoes Psalm XLIII, 3: 'Emitte lucem tuam et veritatem tuam: ipsa me deduxerunt, et adduxerunt in montem sanctum' (Vulgate); 'O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill' (Authorised).
que]
'quae' (see Tannenbaum p. 40).

48-49) See 5a, 12-14.

fol. 7b.

1) some]

A contraction of the obsolete form 'somme' (OED).

2) two diuerse persons]

See Introduction pp. 52-54.

4) one]

Barnabas Saul (see Introduction pp. 49-51)

12) mann]

A contraction of 'manner'.

15-16) 'The Conjurers great art, and industrie, is not so much in raising up a spirit, as in commaunding him downe againe' (Samuel Harsnett, A Declaration of Egregious Popish Impostures (1603), pp. 17-18).

16) vnhard]

'unheard'.

19) kingly prophet]

David.

20) Castra...eum]

'The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him' (Psalm XXXIV, 7).

23-25) The English translation, Frier Bacon his Discovery of the Miracles of Nature, and Magick (London 1659) reads: 'without all question the way is incomparably more easie to obtain any thing, that is truly good for men, of God, or good angels, then of wicked Spirits' (pp. 3-4). This edition bears the notice on the title-page that it has been 'faithfully translated out of Dr Dees own copy, by T.M.'

28) preistly]
'In a priestly manner', a rare adverbial use (OED).

29) ꝑceyve]
'perceive'.

31) here]
'hear'.

35) premisses]
The premisses implied in the visitation of angels to the Patriarchs, namely that God does not disdain to communicate with man through spirits.

38) imꝑtinent]
'impertinent'.

39) This is probably not the very last Action with Saul, since he did not leave Dee's service until 6 March 1582 (Diary).

42) eridition]
'erudition'.

MN24) 'Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baalzebub the god of Ekron' (Authorised, II Kings I, 4). Dee's reference of the fourth book of Kings stems from the earlier naming of the first and second books of Samuel as the first and second books of Kings, and the present first and second books of Kings as the third and fourth books.

fol 8a.

1) Mane]

'In the morning'.

6) Chrystaline Globe]

Concerning Dee's various show-stones see Introduction pp.137-141.

11-14) The angel which Daniel saw in one of his visions is described as being 'girdled with fine gold of Vphaz', having a face 'as the appearance of lightning' and eyes 'as lamps of fire' (Daniel X, 5-6).

14-16) It is unlikely that Saul would be well versed in Hebrew, for even Dee confessed to finding the language troublesome (21b, 43).

19) a white dog]

The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy says that spirits of Mercury can appear in the form of a dog, but Annael has no connection with Mercury, being instead a governor of Venus, and so the significance of this apparition is not clear.

22–24) he...hearing]

Dee frequently emphasises the fact that he himself hears and sees nothing.

22-26) 'In the name of Jesus Christ, who are you?'

'All power is given to me'.

'What [powers]?'

'Good and evil'.

27) M.G.]

The letters are 7mm high.

28) de Thesauro abscondito]

'Concerning the hidden treasure'. It seems that a promise of discovering some hidden treasure must have been made in an earlier Action with Saul, as it was to be made later in an Action with Kelly (see 86b ff.), and the letters M.G. probably refer to this in some way, since they appear to prompt Dee's question. They may be the initials of a person concerned (although the Diary does not list such) or of a place where the treasure was supposed to be concealed.

30) 'Do not worry, for these [questions] are of no value'.

31) skulls]

The significance of this apparition is unclear. It may be connected with the hidden treasure in some obscure way.

34-36) 'Where is your power?'

'Why do you ask about any power of mine?'

'Why? I have indicated, it does not please me'.

36) Signifi]

A contraction of 'significavi'?

37) the stone in the frame]

Not the same as the 'Chrystaline Globe' (see Introduction pp. 137-8).

39-41) 'Is any good angel assigned to this show-stone?'

'Yes'.

'Who?'

42) מִיכָאֵל]

'Michael'. Dee uses ם for mim, but I have changed this to the more usual ם . Although Saul knew little or no Hebrew, the name could be learned from Agrippa. Dee may just have written it in Hebrew on hearing Saul pronounce the name, which had appeared in the Hebrew on the title-page of his General and Rare Memorials (1577).

43) 'Is that the good angel of whom mention is made in the Scriptures?' See Jude IX and Revelation XII, 7.

q̊]

'quo'.

44-46) 'Even he'.

'May it not be that I may see him and deal with him?'

'Yes'.

46)]

Annael states at line 47 that this is the character of another angel, but it is not one of the traditional signs and without the papers subsequent to this Action little progress can be made in deciphering it. It looks as though it is composed of letters from the alphabet. One might draw 'A, I, H, J, T'and possibly'L' from the character,but there is no traditional angelic name that can be composed from these.

47-50) 'What do you wish to signify by this?'
'It is the character of another angel'.
'Why do you show it here and now?'.
'For a great cause'.
Annael's last statement is typical of the many vague promises that Dee received in his angelic communications.

MN9) A constant problem during all Dee's Actions (see for instance 9a, MN49).

MN19) Since the rebinding of the MS by Sloane, many of Dee's original words which were obscured by Ashmole's binding have reappeared; hence the repetitions.

fol. 8b.

2) him that is assigned to the stone]
Michael.
the feast]
Christmas, three days after the Action took place.

3-4) These preparations and the admonition to secrecy are common throughout the angelic conferences,

5) Newyeres tyde]

In the Julian Calendar New Year began on 25 March, but Dee was already working upon his reformation of the calendar. Since references to dates as 'new style' do not occur until TFR, there is some doubt as to whether January 1st is being alluded to here, but it would be more likely that the Actions would be postponed for several days rather than for several months. Even with the Julian Calendar, January 1st was regarded as the beginning of the new year in many quarters at this time, and the inconsistencies of practice argued the need for calendar reform.

Deale]

A command to enter into a further Action.

9-10) Solarian influences were regarded as particularly beneficial in natural magic (see Occ. Phil. I, xxiii, pp. 50-63 and Introduction pp. 66-69).

14) In a later Action with Kelly a spirit named Hagonel declares: 'Banish wrath: yt was the first, and is the greatest commaundemẽt' (see 50a, 45 & MN45).

to]

'too'.

15) Dee seems rather disappointed and it may be that in an earlier Action Annael promised to deliver matter of great import, just as in this Action he has declared that great things will be shown to Dee, though by another angel.

18-19) 'Glory be to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, for ever and ever'.

24) prepositus orbis veneris]
'Governor of the planet Venus', as Agrippa notes, although using the alternative name of Haniel (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv, p. 414).

25-26) This reference is not to be found in what remains of Famous and Rich Discoveries and was probably in the suppressed 'secret centre' mentioned in General and Rare Memorials, which is dated from the year of the appearance of the new star in 1572 and Anno Mundi 5540 (sig. *3v). Trithemius assigned Gabriel as governing angel of this penultimate period of the world cycle of history (De septem secundeis fol. D3r) and not Annael as Dee states here. Later some douht arises as to whether the chief governor is not rather a spirit named Baligon or sometimes Carmara (see 51a, 20-21 and MN21).

28-31) No such statement by Befafes (a spirit appearing in the Actions with Kelly) exists in the records of the Action of 20 November 1582 (55a-57b). This Action with Saul is declared to be the prologue by Carmara alias Baligon in the Action of 17 November 1582 (see 50a, MN45).

9a.

3) '10 March, 11.15 a.m.'

4) Edward Talbot]

Edward Kelly (see Introduction pp. 43-49).

5 shew]

'be shown'.

10) stone...frende]

The same as that set before Annael (8a, 37). There is no reference in Dee's writings as to whom the donor of this stone was.

12) Aliqui Angeli boni]

'some good angels'. Annael had said that Michael was answerable to the stone (8a, 42), but presumably in a later Action more angels were mentioned, unless it was the donor who first gave Dee this information. At lines 25-30 of this folio the angels Uriel, Michael and Raphael are said to be assigned to the stone.

13) Possibly the episode in the Diary (25 May 1581) when Dee looked in the crystal and saw (see Introduction p. 28).

13-15) Anchor,...Anachor and Anilos]

In Peter de Abano's Elementa Magica (contained in the Lyons edition of Agrippa's Opera) an invocation is given for use when dressing in the vestments of a magician which begins 'Ancor, Amacor, Amides, Theodonias, Anitor, per merita angelorum tuorum sanctorum Domine' (Opera, p. 567). Anitor and Anilos might be the same, mistaken either by Kelly misreading Abano, or by Abano mistaking his sources. Amacor could well be Dee's Anachor. The angels Ancor, Annasor, Anelos, Ansex and Amilos are to be found invoked in a scrying experiment contained in Sloane MS 3848 (fol. 3b), and so while a definite source for the names given here by Dee cannot be traced, they do seem to have a certain traditional flavour.

17) att]
'at'.

18) Dee's oratory was probably at the top of the house, as it was in his lodgings at Prague ('An Unknown Chapter', p. 240) and in most engravings of the houses of alchemists and philosophers.

20) Kelly generally saw visions in the stone within fifteen minutes of settling himself to the task.

30) Michael... nostris]
'Michael is the governor in our works'.

31) boke, of Soyga]
See Introduction pp. 146-147.

32) 'That book was revealed to Adam in Paradise by God's good angels'.

34) solus...interpretator]

'Only Michael is the interpreter of that book'.

35) Presumably this fact was revealed in an Action with Saul.

40) $\overline{\text{nras}}$]

'nostras'.

40-41) 'Request and .invoke- our presence with sincerity and humility. Anchor, Anachor and Anilos are not to be called into this stone'.

44-45) 'These things are mostly to do with Michael. Michael is the angel who illuminates your steps. And these things are revealed in virtue and truth and not by force'.

47) Angels were believed to govern particular days and hours and therefore to respond to invocations in their hours and upon their particular day. A comprehensive list of the angels and their times is given in Abano's Elementa Magica (Agrippa, Opera, pp. 562-583). There was some dispute as to whether the hours were of equal length or diurnal and nocturnal.

49) 'Every hour is ours'.

MN49) The note indicates that Dee only regarded the spirit who gave the character (shown on fol 9b) as an illuding spirit. The Uriel of the Action preceding this moment is not doubted. Concerning the reference to the Appendix to the fifth book see Commentary to 9b, MN3.

l. 9b.

1) The character measures 65mm along the top edge, 55 mm down the left side and 78mm along the hypoteneuse. None of the signs contained in the character corresponds to the customary seals or sigills of major angels and I have been unable to trace their origins, if they have any beyond Kelly's imagination.

3-4) 'This seal, engraved in gold and worn on the breast, [will act] in the defence of the body in every place and at every time and occasion'.

7) 'To God alone be all honour and glory'.

MN3) Dee raises the question of the truth of this character again in an Action of 29 April 1583 (96a, 38-44). The spirit Il says then that it is an 'Instrument appliable only to Dignification' and there is a reference back to this folio (designated by Dee as fol. 6). Then Il declares that 'the Character is fals and diuilish' (96b, 23) and proceeds to deliver another. In the Appendix to the fifth book the only reference in the two Actions of 5 May 1583 takes the form of the naming of Kelly's evil angel as Belmagel 'which hath followed [Kelly's] sowle from the beginning' (100b, 2).

20) the Seven psalmes]

The 'Penitential Psalms' which express sorrow for sin and a desire for pardon and number seven in all. They are Psalms VI, XXXII, XXXVIII, LI, CII, CXXX and CXLIII (VI, XXXI, XXXVII, L, CI, CXXIX and CXLII in the Vulgate). Pope Innocent III ordered their recitation during Lent.

sauours]
Spirits were invoked and celestial influences attracted by the use of perfumes as well as words (see Occ. Phil. IV, pp. 60-62).

21) with hand and hart]
Physically by burning the perfume and spiritually by bearing a sincere and amenable heart.

22) thorowgh]
'through'.

25) ioinctly]
'jointly'.

26) to⌣gither]
Dee uses ⌣ as a hyphen and to join two words into one compound word.

30) The chair had first appeared while Uriel was informing Dee how Michael might be entreated (see MN15) and together with the table that appears at line 34, forms an integral part of the later Actions. Frequently Kelly sees the chair and table immediately, but the angels only after some time. To an extent the sight of the chair and table is hereafter a safeguard against illuding spirits, since being a seat of perfection (line 32), no evil spirit may abide it. The danger remains however that evil spirits may counterfeit objects as well as spirits of goodness.

35) The table is apparently identical to the Holy Table that Dee was instructed to make (see Introduction pp.149-154).

fol. 10a.

1) This is the first command concerning the making of the Holy Table (see Introduction pp.149-154).

2) Sigillum Dei]
'The seal of God'. See Introduction pp. 118-123

5) perfect wax]
Wax purified by ritual as well as physically pure wax. The seal is made of undyed beeswax, which is purer than treated wax, but in magical processes all instruments and properties are cleansed by incantation, prayer and sometimes holy water.

6) no respect of cullours]
Uriel says that the characters on the sides of the table are to be written in yellow (line 28) and further commands indicate that the angels with whom Kelly was communicating were aware of colouration in the natural world. This phrase therefore probably means that no specific colours are required for this seal to be effective.

7-8) With a diameter of 9 inches the circumference would in fact be 28.278 inches. The figure of 27 'and somwhat more'

appears to have been reached by multiplying the diameter by three and regarding the result as less than true. In Billingsley's translation of Euclid's Elements of Geometry (1570) Dee appended the note that Archimedes' value of π as less than $3\frac{1}{7}$ and more than $3\frac{10}{71}$ had served well for practical purposes and 'who so is not contented, let his owne Methodicall travaile satisfie his desire: or let him procure other thereto' (fols 356b-357a). In De Architectura X, cap 14 Vitruvius used a value of $3\frac{1}{8}$, but the Renaissance offered a variety of values. Franco of Liege suggested $\frac{22}{7}$ while Tycho Brahe proposed $\frac{88}{\sqrt{7785}}$, but the former was generally taken as sufficient for most purposes as appears by the works of Dominicus Parisiensis (1378), Albert of Saxony (c 1365) and Nicholas Cusa (c 1450) among others (David Eugene Smith, History of Mathematics, 2 vols (1923), II, 307). One would expect the angels to use at least a value of $3\frac{1}{7}$ and therefore arrive at a circumference of 28 inches and 'somwhat more' for the seal. The discrepancy of a whole inch furthers the argument of Dee being deceived by Kelly who evidently had a very rudimentary knowledge of mathematics. It is perhaps a little surprising that Dee makes no comment upon an inaccuracy of which he must have been aware.

11) The arms of the cross measure 56mm vertically and 57mm horizontally, with the longer crosspieces at the end of each arm being 5mm from each tip. The inner circle is 18mm in diameter.

The cross really comprises five crosses. Each arm itself forms a separate cross. The word AGLA is a common name of divine power in the Middle Ages and Renaissance (see C. W. King, 'Talismans and Amulets: Mediaeval Talismans', Archaeological Journal XXVI (1869), pp. 225-235). The word is derived from the Hebrew Atha Gebir Leilam Adonai (King, p. 229), אתה גיבר לעולם אדני in Agrippa's account (Occ. Phil., III, ix, p. 335), which means 'Thou art mighty Lord for ever'.

12) The table was in fact 36¼ inches by 35⅞ inches and stood on a frame 31½ inches high. It was ⅞ inches thick (Ashmole MS 1790, 55a-56a).

13) The two smaller seals in the British Museum measure 125mm (4⅞ inches) in diameter and are 20mm (⅘ of an inch) thick.

15) vttermost]
'outermost'.

19) fowr square]
Having four exactly equal sides (OED).

20) knops]
'Knops' or 'bosses, usually ornamental and hanging down' (OED).

25) See MN25 concerning the falsity of the characters which Dee was first given. They are not 'in a schedule annexed' as Dee claims at line 26; it was either removed by him on being told that they were false, or else it was bound at the end of the first book and perished with the beginning of the second book.

27-28) In Ashmole's description of the Holy Table these letters around the border are said to be in red (Ashmole MS 1790, fol. 55a).

30) The oyle, is perfect prayers]
'Oil' was frequently used metaphorically in the Bible, usually in association with gladness (see Psalm XLV, 7 and Isaiah LXI, 3). It is not specifically used as a metaphor for prayer, but the promise of Uriel that 'that oyle shalbe opened vnto you' faintly echoes the flowing of oil from rock that is afforded to God's chosen (Deuteronomy XXXII, 13 and Job XXIX, 6).

33) The diagram shows the Holy Table with the Sigillum Dei in the centre and the two farthest feet standing upon the smaller seals. The bottom of the page prohibited Dee from showing the seals on the foremost feet. The sides are labelled from the point of view of the magical operator, the designation in fronte ('in front') being furthest from him and iuxta pectus ('next to the chest') being closest to him (see also the diagram on 94b). The remaining two sides are designated 'on the left' and 'on the right'. The diagram correctly represents the basic parts of the Holy Table as it was made although the correct inscriptions were not obtained until much later (see 94b). See also Introduction pp. 149-154.

The rhombus of the diagram measures 45mm on all sides (hence the poor perspective) and the inner square marking the border measures 32mm on all sides. The circles representing the Sigillum Dei measure 17mm and 12mm in diameter respectively, while the circles representing the smaller seals are 10mm and 6mm in diameter. The rear right leg of the table measures 43mm and the rear left 5mm. The two front legs are both 36mm high and all the legs are 3mm wide.

MN2) 'Erroneously, to my ignorance; see later'. See 10b, 30-42, and 12b, 13-22. Whatever design for the seal that Dee was going to copy from an unspecified book, it was not that finally used, for the whole of the second book of this manuscript is devoted to instructions for making the seal which is represented on fol. 30a.

MN25) 'Beware, since an angel of darkness intruded himself here, as is demonstrated in the Appendix to the fifth book' (see Commentary to 9b, MN3).

fol 10b.

1) Lundrumguffa]

The name of this spirit seems peculiar to this manuscript.

3) Brymstone]

'Sulphur'. Agrippa notes that 'sulphur hath a place in Religions, to expiate ill Demons with the fume thereof', the element containing a 'naturall power thus to do', even though the accompanying ritual might at first seem more important (Occ. Phil. III, lvii, p. 528). An example of the use of sulphur and assfoetida in a destructive ritual is to be found in the Key of Solomon (The Secret Lore of Magic, edited by Sayed Idries Shah (London 1957, reprinted 1974), p. 14).

4) thy dowghter]

Dee's daughter Katherine who was born on 7 June 1581.

5) Dee frequently records his pains and illnesses in his Diary, but there is no reference at this time to any aches. He did suffer badly from shoulder pains on 10 July 1581 and these continued for 14 days. It is possible that he may have felt some recurrence of this the night before the Action.

12) Maherion]

I have not found the name of this spirit elsewhere.

15) Robert Hilton came into Dee's service on 24 October 1581 and was perhaps the son of one John Hilton of Fulham from whom Dee borrowed £40 on 18 June 1577. Dee's servant George is not identified by surname in the Diary but left Dee's service on 7 July 1583.

19-20) See Tobit III, 17 and VIII, 3. Asmodeus 'fled into the utmost parts of Egypt, and the angel bound him'.

22) a mean]

'A means' to dispose of the evil spirit.

24) the tyme of prayers]

The first of the Canonical Hours is Prime, ordained for 6 a.m.

25-26) $\overline{\text{Pri}}$...sicut &c.]

See 8b, 18-19.

MN8) as it allso in the next action may appere]

See 10b, 37-11a, 5.

38) bet]

'beat'.

39) heary and owggly]

'hairy and ugly'.

fol. 11a.

3) ponished]

'punished'.

7) A 'K' is written underneath the 'T' of 'E.T.', thus shedding some doubt about when Dee learned Kelly's real name (see Introduction p. 12).

7-8) See Proverbs XXVIII, 10: 'Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit'. In Revelation IX, 1, it is stated that the key to the Bottomless Pit is given to the fifth of the seven angels of the presence. In Agrippa's Scala Septenarii the fifth angel is Haniel, alias Annael, (Occ. Phil. II, p. 187).

9) The superscribed erasure may be by Ashmole, if he had at first written 'sweat' and then decided it was unnecessary to do so.

11) an other]
This is Michael.

14) a sworde]
Michael is traditionally associated with a fiery sword with which he guards the gates of Eden.

16) roab]
'robe'.

21) the square Table]
The table shown in the stone (9b, 34).

26) seching]
'seeking'.

27) Frequent promises are made by the angels throughout this manuscript and in TFR that a new age is about to begin (see Introduction, chapter VI).

29) Michael is chief of the archangels, chief of the order of virtues, ruler of the fourth heaven, and generally the mightiest of the angels in biblical and post-biblical lore (Davidson, Dictionary of Angels). Effectively he is second only to the Trinity.

32) Thow shalt see me]

It was a common belief in early times that to see God or one of his angels was to die. Jacob gave the name of Peniel, meaning 'the face of God', to the place where he wrestled with the angel and gave the reason:'for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved' (Genesis XXXII, 30). Manoah, the father of Samson whose birth is foretold by an angel, declares to his wife 'we shall surely die, because we have seen God' (Judges XIII, 22). His wife however astutely observes that 'if the Lord were pleased to kill us', he would not 'have shewed us all these things' (Judges XIII, 23), and Michael's promise to Dee that the angel's presence will be visible is a sign of God's merciful favour.

34) Those that sowght thy life]

Evil spirits like Lundrumguffa.

37-39) 'Glory, praise, honour, virtue and power be to thee, immortal, invisible and omnipotent God, for ever and ever' (see I Timothy I, 17).

fol. 11b.

4) Dee is writing the notes that form the basis of this manuscript while seated at a desk near Kelly and the show-stone (see Introduction p. 16,note 1).

6) In each Action so far an illuding spirit has appeared.

10) Nariel]

This alternative is given in Occ. Phil., III, xxiv, p. 416. See also Commentary to line 34 concerning the name 'Na'.

16) The angel Gabriel is here associated with 'the strength of God' (line 13) but this appellation is that given to Michael at fol. 6a (and in Occ. Phil., III, xxiv, p. 414). Dee attaches the name to Gabriel erroneously, as he points out in the marginal note to this line. Doubt exists in any case about the etymology of Gabriel's name for it may be derived from גְּבַר or גֶּבֶר, 'man', or possibly from גְּבַר and גְּבוּר, 'strength'. Gabriel is therefore either 'man of God' or 'strength of God' depending upon the vowel points, which are usually omitted in Hebrew writings. Dee may have been misled by thinking of גְּבַר and גְּבוּר, meaning 'strength', which he would recognise from the names of the Sephiroth in the Kabbala (גְּבוּרָה, Geburah). His error (as it is deemed to be here) is pointed out at 17a, 13-14.

20) This man wearing the black hood represents Dee. The hood is presumably symbolic of the spiritual blindness from which the angels relieve him at line 26.

34) NA]

Agrippa notes that the name NA is the name of God to be invoked in times of trouble (Occ. Phil., III, xi, p. 371). The letters are 7mm high within a circle of 22mm diameter. See also Commentary to 12a, MN16.

38) plights]

'pleats'. In this vision Dee receives new garments and is crowned with laurel (lines 39-40) to signify his position as one of God's elect.

41-42) This action parallels the eating of the bread in the Eucharist.

MN16) 'rather Michael was so called: for Gabriel is the power of God, and therefore the certain strength, but of another grade'.

fol. 12a.

5) 'The angel of your profession'. Dee professes true learning (philosophia vera) according to his note at 100b, MN22.

8) Agrippa notes that 'the Demon of profession is given by the Stars, to which such a profession, or sect, which any man hath professed, is subjected, which the soul, when it began to make a choyce in this body, and to take upon it self dispositions, doth secretly desire' (Occ. Phil. III, xxii, p. 410). If a man changes his profession, the daemon leaves him and another suitable to that profession takes his place. This daemon may be friendly or contrary to the man's Genius (guardian spirit). Dee's marginal note refers to the chapter heading 'Triplicem vniuscuiusque hominis custodem esse, & a quibus singuli procedant' (Opera, p. 372),'That there is a threefold keeper of man, and from whence each of them proceed' (Occ. Phil. p. 410).

9-10) See Deuteronomy IV, 4, Romans V, 1-2, I Corinthians XV, 49, and Hebrews VI, 13-19.

13) 'Praise God in his works'.

15) strength against trubble]
See Commentary to 11b, 34.

25) cursy]
'curtsy'.

26) This line seems to suggest that a ring has previously been spoken of, but it may simply be a command that Dee is to acquire a similar ring. If any forewarning of this requirement was given, it might have been in one of the visions that Kelly claimed to have outside of the Actions (see for instance Diary, 9 March 1582).

30-34) Solomon is generally reputed to have possessed a ring with which he worked many wonders, although this has been thought to be a synonym for the seal or pentagram of Solomon. In the Key of Solomon the author, supposedly Solomon himself, declares that the contents of the work were revealed to him by an angel and traditionally Michael is supposed to have been the mediator between Solomon and God (see Shah, The Secret Lore of Magic, p. 25).

33) The circles of the diagram measure 33mm and 25mm in diameter and the square is 14mm on each side. The circle in the centre of the square has a diameter of 7mm and the central bar is 12mm long.

37) skarse]

'scarcely'.

42) Most Solomonic talismans were fashioned in gold.

44-45) The significance of the 'V' over the 'L' is not at all clear. There may be some significance lying in the kabbalistic numerical values of 6 and 30, but interpretations in this direction become vague and somewhat fanciful. Furthermore Dee does not himself pursue any line of enquiry on the significance of the letters and the ring fades in importance when the instructions are given for the making of the Sigillum Dei.

46) PELE]

The name Pele signifies 'a worker of miracles, or causing wonders' and is one of the names of God (Occ. Phil. III, xi, p. 378). See also Commentary to 12a, MN46.

MN7) See Commentary to line 7.

MN16) 'Et sequit: Nequaq̄ Iacob appellabit nomen tuū sed Israel: quoniam cum deo & homine praeualuisti: Vt est item vocabulum Nà: quodin animi molestia turbationibusq̄ utimur. Sicut Moyses in numeris: Dimitte Na peccatū populi tui:

quod uos interpretatū habetis: Dimitte obsecro. Et psalmo cantesimo ac decimoseptimo: A na domine saluificia na. A na domine fortunatifica na: quod uos elegantius sic: O domine saluum me fac: o domine bene prosperare' (Johannes Reuchlin, De verbo mirifico (1494) and De arte cabalistica (1517), facsimile edition(Stuttgart 1964), De verbo p. 72). 'And it follows: thy name shall no more be called Jacob, but Israel: for with God and man you have prevailed [see Genesis XXXII, 28]. And so it is with the name Na, which we use when in turmoil and troubled of spirit: for instance Moses in Numbers [XIV, 19]: "Na, pardon the iniquity of your people," which may be interpreted as "pardon, I beseech thee". And also it is in Psalm CXVII [Vulgate]: "Ah Na Lord, salvatory Na: Ah Na Lord, prosperity-giving Na"; which you more elegantly find thus: "Save now, I beseech thee, O Lord: O Lord, I beseech thee, send now prosperity" [Authorised, Psalm CXVIII, 25].'

MN46) Despite much searching I have not been able to find any reference to the name Pele in Reuchlin's De verbo mirifico. The work does contain a section that deals almost exclusively with divine names and it is possible that when Dee made these marginal notes concerning the names Na and Pele, he was writing from memory and thought that the name Pele was included. Alternatively the marginal notes may have been a reminder to him to look up the names in Reuchlin's work and one might take as evidence for this the fact that he does not make any reference to which of the three books that form Reuchlin's work is to be consulted.

fol 12b.

5) See Isaiah IX, 6.

6) See Commentary on the name PELE, 12a, 46 & MN46.

9) the other day]

See fol. 10a.

10) opened his sworde]

Michael turns the blade of the sword to Kelly's view.

11) EMETH]

The Hebrew word for 'truth'. Agrippa records that it is also 'the seal of God' or sigillum dei (Occ. Phil, III, xi, p. 371). See also Commentary to MN11.

13) mervayledst]

'did marvel'.

22) perfyted]

'perfected'.

24) Dee does later question Michael's apparel, which earns him a reprimand (25a, 16-18).

30-32) Later the drawing of a veil across the vision in the stone becomes a signal for the end of an Action (see 45b,48).

34) Dee is warned several times for trying to regulate the angelic appearances according to worldly time and incurs the angels' displeasure for doing so (see for instance 70a, 42).

39) Valete]
'Depart'.

45) /flourish/]
Hereafter the end of an Action is frequently signified in the manuscript by a flourish of the pen.

MN11) 'Concerning the Seal of Truth see Reuchlin, De arte cabalistica, book III and Agrippa [Occ. Phil.] book III, chapter 11 (for the latter see Commentary to line 11). Reuchlin states: 'Ehieh sigillat per Emeth, hoc est essentiā ꝑ ueritatem. Sicut nobilis ille dictator ait Eliezer Haklir חתמו של אמת , Emeth est sigillum eius. Probat hoc ratio arithmetica quam imitantes si multiplicauerimus Ehieh ꝑ Ehieh surgent quadringenta quadraginta & unū, q̄ simul sunt אמן hoc est uerū seu ueritas' (De arte cabalistica, facsimile edition, (Stuttgart 1964), III, lxiia, p. 235). 'Ehieh [a name of God: I AM] seals through Emeth ["truth"]; this is through the essential truth. As that excellent teacher Eliezer Haklir says... "Emeth is his seal". Arithmetical reasoning proves this as may be seen if we multiply Ehieh by Ehieh, for there arises a total of 441, which is the same as that of Emeth, "a true thing" or "truth".'
Reuchlin uses the kabbalistic numerical value of אהיה

(Ehieh) and אמת (Emeth) which are 21 and 441 respectively.

fol. 13a.

2-4) The description of this angel is consistent with his being an angel of the sun (see Commentary to line 18).

7) 'Invoke the name of God and acknowledge him'.

8) nr̄i]

'nostri'.

Deus...nobis]

'God be merciful and bless us' (Psalm LXVII).

11-12) Not knowing the spirit's name Dee and Kelly fear that it may be an evil spirit and therefore command the spirit to reveal his name by using the powerful conjuration of the Trinity.

15-17) The circle of candle-like sparks are again consistent with this angel's position as an angel of the sun.

18) SALAMIAN]

In Abano's Elementa Magica Salamia is an angel of the sun and power is invoked for Sunday through various names of God and 'per nomina sanctorum angelorum, qui dominantur in quarto exercitu, et serviunt coram potentissima Salamia, angelo magno et honorato' (Agrippa, Opera, p. 596). The invocation is 'by the names of the holy angels who govern in the fourth heaven and serve in the presence of the most mighty Salamia, a great and honoured angel'. The names of Salamia and Salamian are not traceable in other magical works that I have consulted, but there are a number of angels whose names bear some similarity. Selemia is one of the five men (i.e. angels) who wrote down the 204 books related by Esdras (II Esdras XIV, 24) and this name is sometimes recorded as Salemia (Davidson, Dictionary of Angels). Salmey is one of the holy angels of God invoked in the Grimorium Verum and Salmia is the name of an angel petitioned in ritual prayer for the fulfilment of the conjurer's desires (Davidson).

23) wordly]

A manuscript error for 'worldly'.

26) Mamon]

Mammon is an archdemon and the demon of avarice (see Matthew VI, 24 and Luke XVI, 13).

28) vertues Adonay]

'Virtues of Adonai'. The celestial spirits are divided into various ranks: Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominions, Powers, Virtues, Princes, Archangels and Angels, although most angels hold a place in each order. Authorities differ on the order of ascendance of these divisions (a list can be found in Davidson, Dictionary of Angels, Appendix p. 336).

34) he dyeth]

Mammon's death is not to be found in traditional sources and this reference would seem to be consistent with the prophecies of the coming of a new age that are made to Dee. In this case avarice will be no more.

35) Dee seems to have been unhappy about performing rituals of exorcism, having previously asked Uriel to discharge the evil spirit Lundrumguffa (10b, 18).

40) grisely thretting]
'threatening in a grisly way'.

45) The angel with the long arms is not identified.

47) This angel is Raphael whom Agrippa identifies as the 'medicine of God' (Medicina Dei) in Three Books of Occult Philosophy (III, xxiv, p. 414). The name is partly derived from Raphael's healing of Tobias's father Tobit (see Arbatel de magia, Agrippa Opera p. 711).

MN20) See Commentary to line 18.

fol. 13b.

1) the Angel of your Direction]
Presumably not quite the same as the angel of Dee's profession but the angel governing Dee's goal in life, or at least one of his goals (see Commentary to OCH). Agrippa does not refer to the existence of angels of direction.
OCH]
In Arbatel de magia seven spirits are given governance over various natural phenomena. They are called Aratron, Phaleg, OCH, Hagith, Ophiel and Phul (Agrippa, Opera, p. 714). Och governs matter under solarian influence, teaches perfect medicine and converts all things into purest gold and precious stones (Opera, p. 716). He is the angel who is the ruling spirit of the Philosophers' Stone and has governance over alchemical experiments, both of which were very important in Dee's life and may be called his 'direction'.

8) Dee again makes the mistake to be found at 11b, 16, over the meaning of the name Gabriel, but is further confused by the fact that his angelic informant, whom he thought was the same as in the previous Action (i.e. Michael), now announces himself to be Fortitudo Dei. It is not clear, however, why Dee should be convinced that this new entrant should be the same as his informant in the previous Action, nor why he should reject his own conclusion that the angel with the sword should be Michael (11b, 24) even though Uriel had just then announced 'Fortitudo Dei, tecum semper est' (11b, 18).

11) Fortitudo Dei here identifies himself as indeed being Michael.

12) POLIPOS]

In Revelation XXI, 14, the twelve apostles are said to govern the foundations of the New Jerusalem. According to Agrippa the fourth gate (or foundation) bears the name of Polipos (פולי׳פוש) which is Hebrew for Philip (Occ. Phil. III, xxxiv, p. 455).

15) that day]
Either an unspecified day when great secrets will be revealed or the day on which Dee understands the meaning of the name Polipos.

16) that which I haue commaunded thee]
Dee's marginal note refers back to Annael's command 'be not to hasty in wrath' (8b, 14) which is later called 'the fyrst, and...the greatest commaundemēt' (50a, 45).

18) Ashmole's superscription relates to the end of the previous line.

24) Other names of Michael, which means fortitudo dei according to Agrippa, are conceived by men; in heaven the angel has no other name than his function, which is to be the strength of God and is therefore his being and his reason for being.

29) this]
Salamian.

34) Agrippa his boke]
See MN34. The name of Salamia[n] does not occur in Agrippa's own work but in Abano's treatise contained in the Lyons edition of Agrippa's Opera.

38) It appears from Dee's Diary that Kelly had a journey planned, which he began on 22 March (see also Introduction p. 11).

47) lamin]

A thin layer of metal, sometimes in the form of a disc, which may be inscribed like a talisman and used for magical or astrological purposes. For details of the lamine which has survived see Introduction pp. 129-132.

49) artificially]

'by art or craft'.

MN1) libello Arbatel in ☉]

In Agrippa's Opera this work is entitled Libri Arbatel magiae, tomus primus dictus Isagoge. The sign ☉ is the astrological sign for the sun of which Och is a governor.

MN33) Clauis Agrippae]

'The key of Agrippa' or in other words his works.

fol. 14a.

1) The caret belongs to the marginal note which is in fact written vertically in the left hand margin. The top part of the page is cut short and the left hand margin is torn at the top, but it is unlikely that any writing is missing except for a heading of F.D. , the catchword of fol. 13b, at the beginning of the first line of this folio.

2-3) Michael (Fortitudo Dei) and Raphael (Medicina Dei) are indicated here.

7-8) See Commentary to 7a, 22 concerning Esdras and Tobias.

20) Kelly quite frequently had to rest after scrying and complained of headaches (see Introduction pp. 111-2).

23) Crossingly]
'making the sign of the cross'.

25) These lights had been put on the chair by Salamian (13a, 15-16).

MN) The caret at line 1 indicates that this note was to have followed that line.

fol. 15a (in Ashmole's hand).

1-7) Concerning missing papers see Introduction pp. 10-15.

6) diu͡s]
'divers '.

7) foll^{g}]
'following'.

MN3) The erasure of this marginal note can be explained by reference to Ashmole's transcript. Concerning the missing papers at the end of the second book he wrote:'I suppose here were some other Actions betweene 21 of March and 28 of Aprill 1582 which belonged to the 2nd Booke, and are wanting', giving as his reason the fact that at the beginning of the Action of 28 April 1582, which opens the third book, 'Michael taxeth and threatneth Δ for his slacknes in not preparing things appointed by him (which Δ excuseth with inability)'but of which 'appointment' no mention is made in the Action of 21 March (Sloane MS 3677, 23a). Having reached this conclusion Ashmole put the marginal note (itself indicating a later time of writing than his main text on this folio) in the wrong place at first. It belongs at the end of the second book (fol. 29b). See also Introduction pp. 10-15.

fol. 17a.

In his transcript of the MS Ashmole estimates that 'about 16 lynes' are missing from each side of the first extant folio (Sloane MS 3677, 24a & 24b) and that the first leaf is 'utterly perished' (Sloane MS 3677, 21a). What remains of the Action which took place evidently occupied an afternoon and an evening (see 19b, 20, 20b, 21, & 21b, 4). The Action must have occurred between 15 March and 20 March, these being the dates of the preceding and subsequent dealings, and since two other Actions of the second book took place on 20 and 21 March and continue instructions concerning the making of the Sigillum Dei from this first Action, I would conjecture that this opening Action is dated Monday 19 March. It seems probable that the instructions for making the seal were given over three days of intensive dealing.

5) The asterisk shows that a note was written in the margin here of which the vestigial lines at MN5 are all that remain. The note probably referred to the filii and filiae lucis and their sons and daughters, who are introduced between 26b, 36 and 28a, 3.

6) eu]
'ever'.

8-10) 'Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord'. See Psalm CXVIII, 26, Matthew XXI, 9, Mark XI, 10 and Luke XIII, 35. The pause in the Latin may indicate that Kelly was going to say something different at first.

11) Michael first appeared with a sword at 11a, 14.

15-16) All the earlier problems concerning the design of the Sigillum Dei have been resolved and Dee has evidently received instructions concerning its form. This may have occurred in the missing leaf of this Action or in a private vision of Kelly's. The most likely time seems to be the private conversation of Michael to Kelly recorded at 13b, 44-50. Since the letters and numbers inscribed on the seal are not given until later, Dee must here be asking whether he has correctly drawn the lines within which the letters and numbers are to be placed.

17-18) According to Dee's definitions at fol. 6a the strength of God's mercy and God's medicinal virtue correspond to Annael and Raphael. One might tenuously connect 'the liuing God' with Gabriel, whose name was taken by others (though not Dee) to mean 'man of God', although the phrase is taken from the Bible (Deuteronomy V, 26 and Joshua, III, 10) and is a specific reference to an aspect of God.

20) herof]
'hereof'.

20-21) Concerning Dee's purpose to share his knowledge with genuine seekers of truth, see Introduction pp. 164-168.

22 Saincts]
'Saints'.

24) fyled]
'defiled'.

27) Michael said a similar thing about Solomon's ring (12a, 37).

37) See 5a, 12-14.

fol. 17b.

6) The circle has been a symbol of eternity from very early times. In Monas hieroglyphica Dee states at the beginning that 'the first and most simple manifestation and representation of things, non-existent as well as latent in the folds of Nature, happened by means of straight line and circle ' (Monas hieroglyphica, translated by C. H. Josten, AMBIX XII (1964), 84-221, p. 155). 'The Circle of his aeternity' has specific reference to the outer circle of the Sigillum Dei, for it contains obscurely 7 names of God (22b,7-13) and it is symbolic of the eternal nature of God and his angels.

8) This appellation may be an echo of the kabbalistic definition of God as 'The Holy One, Blessed be He', a name attributed to God in his capacity as the promoter of man's moral strivings (Zohar, V, 394 Appendix).

11) the matter in hand]
The construction of the Sigillum Dei.

12) this owtward circle]
The outer circle of the Sigillum Dei (see fol. 30a).

13) whose greatest numbers are fowre]
The circle is to be divided into four and each quarter into ten, so that there are dividing lines at the four compass points.
presently]
'immediately'.

15) Semiel]
Semiel is variously called Semiael (17b, 37), Semieil (20b, 45), Semyeil (21a, 12) and may also be the Semeliel whose name appears in the seal at fol. 30a (see also reference at 29a, 22). In the marginal note to line 15 Dee notes that Semiel means 'asthowgh he wer the secretarie, for the Name of God'. Semiel is composed of שם (shem) which means 'a name' and אל (El), 'God', and because the angel bears the 'name of God' but is not God, he is therefore a kind of 'secretarie, for the Name of God'. Gustav Davidson identifies Shemael (a different transliteration of שמאל) with Kemuel, Camael and Shemuiel as 'the mighty angel who stands at the windows of Heaven listening for the songs of praise ascending from synagogues and houses of study of the Jews' (Dictionary of Angels, p. 273). Since the seal contains names of God and the angels, Semiel may be considered to be best equipped to instruct Dee and Kelly concerning them, if the etymology of his name also reflects upon his office.

24) Mighty lord]

Semiel is of a lower hierarchy than Michael.

26) I, am his Tables]

This is consistent with Semiel being 'secretarie, for the Name of God'. See also Commentary to MN41.

28) 40 white Creatures]

These creatures will each show a letter and in most cases also a number which are to be written in the 40 spaces into which the outer circle of the seal has been divided.

30) This line faintly echoes the Book of Common Prayer in the order of service for Communion: 'For thou onely art holy: Thou onely art the Lorde, thou only O Christe with the holy Ghost, art most highe in the Glory of God the father' (Queen Elizabeth's Prayer Book 1559 (Edinburgh 1909), p. 104).

33) two great pillers of brass]

The angel in Daniel's vision has 'arms and feet like in colour to polished brass' (Daniel X, 6).

MN41) 'Semiel—approximately signifies God, my name; it is so because these tables may be the Name of God or the Divine Names'. This helps to explain line 26 as well as connecting Semiel with the praise of God's name given by the 40 creatures.

fol. 18a.

This folio is also slightly torn at the top left and top right. There are four guards between fol. 17 and fol. 18 but there are no pages missing in the text.

2) commonly]

'every time'.

striking]

for 'stroking'.

5) opened his brest]

The creature opened his silk garment and displayed his breast. It might simply mean that he displayed his breast to view, as Michael 'opened' or showed his sword (12b, 10), but in most of the ensuing revelations the letters and numbers do seem to be on the bodies of the spirits and not on their clothes.

7) $\overset{4}{\text{T}}$]

In an Action of 25 June 1584, $\overset{4}{\text{T}}$ is called 'the Seal of the living God, (Tau with the four) which signifie the four powers of God princ[i]pial in earth'(TFR, p. 173). These four powers are Power, Strength, Mercy and Justice (36b, 9).

9) Yt Liueth and Multiplyeth]

Agrippa writes that 'the Pythagoreans call the Number of four Tetractis, and prefer it before all the vertues of Numbers, because it is the foundation and root of all other numbers; whence also all foundations, as well in artificiall things, as naturall, and divine, are four square'. The number of four 'also contains the mysterie of the whole Trinity', for it contains the proportions of 1:2 equal to 2:4, and 1:1 equal to 2:2. From the proportion of 1:1 we see 'the unity of the paternal substance, from which the Son proceeds equal to him' and in 2:2 we see 'the procession of the Holy Ghost from both'. The most sacred name of God, the Tetragrammaton, is composed of four letters and Agrippa thus effectively combines a Christian exegesis with the Kabbala and with the Pythagorean reverence of the number four as the 'perpetual fountain of nature' (Occ. Phil. II, vii, p.183).

11) Each of the forty creatures disappears in a different way, the significance of which is not entirely apparent.

12) It is the name of the Lorde]

The number 4 implies the Tetragrammaton which is 'the name of the Lorde'.

15) Prayse...reuerent]

See Psalm CXI, 9:'Holy and reverend is his name'.

17) 'O God, God, our God, you are blessed now and always', which is not a direct biblical quotation but echoes many phrases of a similar nature in the Bible, such as I Chronicles XXIX, 10.

21) romayne]

'Roman'.

23) his name]

This refers to the name of the creature.

24) it is but one]

The number accompanying the letter is a single figure.

25) The dots are Dee's and indicate that he has failed to transcribe something which Kelly reported. Since he describes the various ways in which the creatures disappear except in this case, it is evident that for some reason he was unable to write such an account here.

26) The Seale of God's Mercy]

Like the phrase 'Yt Liueth and Multiplyeth for euer' at line 9, this phrase seems to be an epitome of the creature just seen and the letter and number which he has displayed. The act of sealing is a frequent image in the Bible for the work of God upon man, the impression of God's word (the seal) being made upon man's heart (the wax). See for instance Psalm XXII, 14.

32) Multiplicatum...terra]

'Your name is multiplied in the earth'. According to Agrippa the number seven 'is of various and manifold power' and 'the Vehiculum of mans life...for it contains body and soul', the number 4 relating to the elements and the number 3 to 'the soul, by reason of its threefold power, viz. rationall, irascible and concupiscible'. Agrippa relates the number 7 extensively to processes of generation, gestation and growth (Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 193-194).

36) Vidimus Gloriam tuam Domine]

'We have seen your glory, O Lord'. See Isaiah LXVI, 18, and John XI, 40.

39) This letter and number occupy the fourth space in the outer circle of the seal and the significance of the number being under the letter, in contrast to the previous revelations, is explained at 21a, 24-31.

42) a white garment] See Commentary to 18b, 41.

43) Illius Gloria sit nobiscum]

'May his glory be with us'. Again this is delivered in the manner of an epitome of the creature with his number and letter.

45) like syluer]

The previous creature showed his number and letter on a tablet of gold, although it is difficult to see any precise significance in this. Gold is the metal of the sun and silver that of the moon, but beyond relating this to the role of the Sigillum Dei as a seal of the Creation, the reasons for these metals being shown remains obscure, particularly since the items on which the ensuing numbers and letters are shown do not allow any coherent interpretation.

47) Et...benedictus]

'And it is the number of blessed virtue'. Agrippa defines the number 22 as signifying 'the fulness of wisdom' since it is the total of the letters in the Hebrew alphabet (Occ. Phil. II, xv, p. 222).

48) Videte Angelos Lucis]

'See the Angels of Light'. A preliminary reference to the revelation of these creatures at 24b, 21-28.

like a white Cok]

Again the significance of this is obscure, but it may be tenuously related to the revelation of the letters for the outer heptagon of the seal, those on the first two sides being shown on the feathers of 'a white fowle like a pigeon' and of 'a white byrd' like a swan (see 23a, 8 & 25).

50-51) 'And I am the end and have no number. I am number in number. Amd every number is my number. See'. This spirit only shows the letter 'n', this being the final letter of one of the names contained in the seal. No number is required since the lack of number itself denotes the end of the name (see 21a, 24-31).

MN6) The 'T' as it is written in the seal is neverthless roman and not gothic.

MN12) The Holy Language referred to here is Enochian, even though the phrase is usually used to describe Hebrew (see for instance Monas hieroglyphica, trans. Josten, p. 133). As with Hebrew the last letter of the alphabet in Enochian is 'T'.

MN12-MN52) Dee here gives the Enochian names of the letters that have been shown (see fol. 64b), using the contraction 'alr' for aliter, 'otherwise'.

fol. 18b.

1) to gather]

'tog ther'.

4) Et est Vita in caelis]

'And he is life in the heavens'.

5) Et ego viuo cū bene viuentibus]

'And I live with those that lead a good life'.

6) his veale]

The veil is worn by the spirit.

8) 'We live. Hallelujah. O holy name'. See Commentary to line 12.

12) 'Blessed is the number of the Lamb'. According to Agrippa 'six is a number of perfection, because it is the most perfect in nature, in the whole course of numbers, from one to ten, and it alone is so perfect in the collection of its parts it results the same, neither wanting, nor abounding [i.e. 1+2+3 = 3+3 = 1+5 (5 being 3+2) = 2+4 (4 being 1+3) = $\frac{1}{6}$ X6 + $\frac{1}{3}$ X6 + $\frac{1}{2}$X6 =6]...It is also the number of our redemption, for the sixt day Christ suffered for our redemption: whence there is a great affinity betwixt the number six and the Cross' (Occ. Phil. II, ix, p. 191). Christ's designation as the Lamb refers specifically to his sacrifice for man's redemption (see Isaiah LIII, 7).

14) Orate invicem]
'Pray alternately'.

16) Omnia data sunt a Deo]
'All things are given by God'.

17) Concerning the number 22 See Comentary to 18a, 47.

18) 'And the end is not in him'. This may simply refer to the fact that this letter does not end one of the names hidden in the seal, but there may also be some reference to 'o' as omega and therefore a symbol of the end of all things.

19) Benedictus es tu Deus]

'You are blessed O God'. See Commentary to 18a, 47.

20) The rainbow is a symbol of God's faith with the world after the Flood (Genesis IX, 9-16) and a circle is symbolic of eternity.

21) 'May angels fall prostrate at your name O Lord'. See Hebrews I, 6.

22) 'You are the first O'. Quite why there should be reason to celebrate the first presentation of the letter 'o' is not clear.

25)]

A triangle is a symbol of divinity and in Renaissance illustration the Tetragrammaton is often contained within a triangle. The triangle is also connected with the decad (Occ. Phil. II, xiii, p. 212) and it is possible that the letter 'a' here is meant in part to signify alpha, the beginning.

26) Et...caeteris]

'And your number lives in the rest'

27) The number of 22 is later corrected to 20 by Uriel (see MN27) and hence Dee's superscription.

29) Nomen illius est nobiscum]

'The name of that one is with us'. From this point on the underlining of the first letter of the phrases delivered by Michael on a creature's departure indicates that the next letter to be shown is the same as that underlined.

32) Creasti...tua]

'O Lord, you have created the angels for your glory' (creasti for creavisti).

34) Et te primus Creauit Deus]

'And God created you first'. In Genesis the first creation is the heaven and the earth and the division between. The number 14 represents fusion and organisation, however (J. E. Cirlot, A Dictionary of Symbols (New York 1962), p. 224), although the disappearance of the spirit like a star may embody the creation of the heaven.

36) The letter 'a' has a numerical value of one and therefore represents unity as well as a beginning. The figure is embraced by God's unity.

37) all Clay]

The image of man as clay in the potter's hand is often used in the Bible (see Isaiah LXIV, 8 and Jeremiah XVIII, 6) and Job says that 'your remembrances are like unto ashes, your bodies to bodies of clay' (Job XIII, 12).

38) Since the number 6 is symbolic of Christ and the redemption of man and 'altogether applyed to generation, and Marriage, and called the Scale of the world' (Occ. Phil. II, ix, p. 191), this creature seems to represent the human condition and man's relationship with God.

39) Et...tuo]

'And they are created and perish in your name'. One would expect a biblical quotation here, but this nevertheless echoes biblical thought on man's mortality.

40) fell down all into dust]

See Genesis III, 19: 'for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return'.

41) The white garment would seem to represent the spirit which binds the soul, the 'white thing', to the body. This view of man's composition is indebted to Agrippa, for Agrippa follows Platonic thought in defining the soul as self-moving and the body as unfit for motion, but then ascribes a third medium to bind them together, something which is 'as it were no body, but as it were a Soul, or as it were no soul, but as it were a body' (Occ. Phil. I, xiv, p. 33). He further defines it as 'the naturall spirit...[which] yet in some sense is also corporeall, notwithstanding it hath not a grosse body and easie to be united with the mind viz that superiour and Divine one which is in us' (Occ. Phil. III, xxxvi, p. 461, misnumbered as p. 445). This is what the Platonists called the 'celestiall vehicle of the soul' or 'the chariot of the soul'. Agrippa comments that when a man dies 'the soul flieth away with his Celestiall vehicle, and the Genius his keeper and the Demon follow it being gone forth, and carry it to the Judge, where sentence being pronounced, God quietly leadeth forth the good souls to glory' (III, xxxvii, p. 466). The celestial vehicle is incapable of pleasure and pain, which is the inheritance of the soul. Agrippa does not state what happens to this insensitive semi-corporeal and semi-intellectual medium, but if the body belongs to the natural world and the soul to the intellectual world, one would expect the celestial vehicle to return to the celestial world of the stars.

43) 'Innocence rises to the face of God'. The vision of death shown by this spirit is much indebted to Agrippa, but is also perhaps Apocalyptic in that in Revelation white raiment is the reward of the righteous (III, 5).

44) did ouer]

'did stroke over'.

46-47) Innocentium...tuis]

'O Lord, you have seen the names and the blood of the innocent upon the earth and you are just in your works'. The first clause is reminiscent of Psalm XCIV, 21: 'they gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous, and conde n the innocent blood'. The second clause is not in fact a direct biblical quotation but recalls the claim that 'the Lord...is righteous in all his works' (Daniel IX, 14 and Baruch II, 9).

47-48) garment all bluddy]

This creature represents the martyred innocent and hence the appearance as a child in bloodstained garments. See also the spirits at 19b, 47 and 20a, 51.

48) a ball...of perfume]

The significance of this is not clear.

50-51) Numerus...rerum]

'Your number is infinite and will be the end of things'. This sentence may be occasioned by the fact that 'h' has a numerical value of 8, which according to Agrippa is the number of justice and fulness (Occ. Phil. II, xi, p. 202).

51) powre]

'pour'.

MN11-MN25, MN30-MN36 & MN49) These are the Enochian names of the letters shown (see fol.64b).

MN27) See 20b, 20 ff. where Kelly sees Uriel in a private vision and corrects errors in the letters and numbers.

MN40) This seems to confirm that Dee recognised the division of man into body, soul and 'natural spirit' which was made here.

fol. 19a.

1) and his garment flew upward]

See Commentary to 18b, 41.

2) 'There is no number to him'. The creature has shown only the letter 'h'.

3) 'All things perish before the face of God and on the face of the earth'. See Commentary to 18b, 50-51.

4) and like a water]

'and there was like a water'.

5) O benedictum Nomen tuū Domine]

'O blessed is your name O Lord'.

6) Numerus perijt cum illis]

'Number perishes with them'. I do not see why a plural is used here.

7) a great water remayn]

'a great water to remayn'. There is not sufficient evidence to suppose that this vision represents the creation of the waters or the Flood.

9) 'Light remains in darkness. Your name is Glorious'. The first sentence recalls the prophecy of Isaiah of the coming of Christ as a light in the darkness (IX, 2) and the similar statement of John (John I, 5).

11-12) Seven names are drawn from the letters in the outer circle of the seal and it is difficult to see any great significance in this grouping of the forty creatures, although Dee's lines around the statement indicate that he felt there must be some reason for this division. Perhaps the lack of any marginal note indicates that he failed to find any.

15) Trinus sum]
'I am threefold'.

16) 'Blessed be the name El'. El is the Hebrew name of God אל which is noted by Agrippa in the scale of two (Occ. Phil. II, v, p. 179). Dee later declares that his favourite letter of the alphabet is 'L' since it signifies the divine name of El through its sound (91b,52-53). See also Commentary to lines 19-22.

17) Perhaps the triple placing of the letter 'l' explains line 15. The relating of the letter 'l' to the name El also makes the three letters 'l' into a symbol of God's trinitarian state.

19-22) The cross measures 26mm high and 28mm across, the upright having a width of 3mm at the top and 7mm at the base. The crosspiece is 4mm wide. In Monas hieroglyphica Dee states that apart from the redemption the cross signifies the quinary, the number 25, the number 50, the decad, the number 252 and several other numbers (Monas, tr. Josten, Theorems XVI & XVII, pp. 169-175). He also writes:'moreover, the name of that letter , "El", seems to have reference to the denary virtue of the cross also inasmuch as it is placed in the middle between the first letter of the alphabet and the very denary of the cross [i.e. the letter 'X'], being tenth in sequence from either. And since we have shown that in the cross there are two such integral parts, it is obvious (if we now consider only their numeral meaning) that out of it [the cross] grows the number One Hundred' [L+L = C, two letters 'L' being obtained from the cross, ⌊ and ⌉] (Monas, tr. Josten, Theorem XVI, p. 171).

19) three mens heads]

Another reference to a trinitarian state.

21) 'My lips praise the Lord'. The erasure shows that Dee originally wrote laudabunt ('will praise') echoing Psalm LXII, 4. Laudabunt was originally separated by the cross and when Dee erased 'bunt', he just added 'nt' to 'lauda'.

22) Concerning female spirits see Introduction p. 155, note 1.

23) scotcheon]

'Escutcheon', a shield with armorial bearings.

to hir]

'to her'.

24) did eat it]

See 11b, 42, where the man in black (pro Dee) ate the name NA. See also Revelation X, 10, where St. John eats a book given to him by an angel.

25) Et hic est El]

'And this (or here) is El'.

28) Benedicta sit aetas tua]

'May your state be blessed'. The number 30 which accompanies the 'l' is also the numerical value of 'l' and Agrippa relates it to the baptism of Christ in his thirtieth year (Occ. Phil. II, xv, p. 223).

29) These little fires may be connected with the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the disciples as tongues of fire, bringing them into a state of blessedness.

32) Natus est illa Lux]

'Born is that light', a reference perhaps to the birth of Christ.

33) Ille est Lux noster]

'He is our light'. See Isaiah IX, 2 and John I, 5.

36) The three letters 'n' again presumably have a trinitarian significance, although it may simply be that the creature bears three because the letter 'n' here forms the end of the holy name Innon, which is hidden in the outer circle of the seal and itself contains three 'n's.

37) Numerus tuus est benedictus]

'Your number is blessed'. The spirit in fact bears no number, but the word may also be taken to refer to the triplicity of the revelation of the letter 'n'.

38-39) 'Your number is with us: nor till now did we know his end. May you come with your number, O one in eternity'.

41) clymed on a ladder]
This may be prompted by Jacob's dream of the ladder reaching up to heaven and filled with angels (Genesis XXVIII, 12-16).

42) 'They knew him by his tongues'. The first letter is not underlined but does nevertheless indicate the next letter to be shown.

43) Benedictus...est]
'Blesse is he who is thus and thus'.

44) trenchers]
'plates'.

44-45)]
The triangle measures 12mm on each side and 13mm across the the base and is therefore intended to be equilateral. The figure forms four isoceles triangles. See Commentary to 18b, 25 concerning the triangle and to 19a, 19-22 concerning the cross, which is contained in this triangle. Yet even if the combination of the triangle and the cross and the clear indications of the numbers three and four which the figure presents make this a potent symbol, it remains of virtually no importance in relation to the rest of the manuscript. Dee makes nothing of it.

47) fyre cam out and in of his mowth]

See Semiel at 17b, 22-23 and the spirits at 20a, 39.

MN6-MN49) The Enochian names for the letters shown.

fol. 19b.

1) Et...tuis]

'And you are true in all your works'.

3) 'Rejoice all of his people, rejoice all of his people, from this moment rejoice'.

5) Incipit virtus nostra]

'Our strength begins'.

6) The 'G' in the MS is 4mm high.

8) The marginal note explains that this is the first spirit to disappear in this way. Subsequent spirits vanish behind Michael, behind the chair, or simply disappear.

9) 'Live correctly all his saints'.

12) Agrippa writes that the number thirteen 'shews the mysteries of Christs appearing to the Gentiles, for the thirteenth day after his birth a star was a guide to the wise men' (Occ. Phil. II, xv, p. 222). The Churches in Revelation are Gentile and this may be significant in relation to line 14.

14) 'This is the angel of my church, who may teach him my way'. In Revelation seven angels are ascribed to the seven churches (I, 20) and we also read: 'I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches' (XXII, 16).

14) a gyrdel]
A belt or cord around the waist.

15) a Rod] The child delivered of the woman 'clothed with the sun' in Revelation is 'to rule all nations with a rod of iron' (XII, 5).

16) a Sworde]
If this spirit does have an Apocalyptic origin, the sword may represent the 'war in heaven' between the angels and the dragon (Satan). See Revelation XII, 7.

18) leggs, like pillers of brass]
Michael first acquired these at 17b, 33.

19-20) This indicates that the Action must have taken place in the afternoon, there being no breaks in the information so far received in this second book.

21) See I John II, 15: 'Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world'.

22) 'He joined the spirit with their minds'. A reference perhaps to the Pentecost.

26) ioyned ꝑ pale]

'Joined per pale'. 'Per pale' is a heraldic term for the division of a shield down the middle into two equal halves, with separate armorial bearings, usually of husband and wife, on each side.

27) heraulds]

'heralds'.

27-29) The drawing of the heart measures 18mm high (14mm in the middle) and 17mm across at its widest point.

29) 'The number of that one is without number'. There is no number to accompany the letters since they form the end of the name 'Galethog'.

31) 'It is time. Acknowledge your God'. The sense is probably apocalyptic.

34) in the second place]

i.e. the second place on (23rd) from the space last filled (21st).

35) 'Your image, (death), is bitter'. In the marginal note Dee explains that Imago may be written with either a 'Y' or an 'I'. He wrote 'Imago' first, presumably in the notes he made at the time of the Action, but changed it to 'Ymago' in this MS, which is a fair copy, because 'Y' is the next letter to be shown. The superscribed 'I' gives the word its more usual orthography. The whole sentence may arise from the showing of the letter 't' because in kabbalistic exposition the letter Tau is sometimes given significance in its role as the last letter of Maweth ('death') as for instance in the Zohar (I, 9). See also G. G. Scholem, On the Kabbalah and its Symbolism, trans R. Manheim (London 1965), Ch. V, pp. 158-204.

38) Iustus es malis deus $\overline{nr}$]

'You are just to the wicked, O our God'. The number 15 is according to Agrippa 'a token of spiritual ascensions' (Occ. Phil. II, xv, p. 222) and the letter 'Y' was a supposedly Pythagorean symbol of the choice to be made between a life of virtue and a life of vice (Monas, trans Josten, p. 119).

39) Place it in the former place]

i.e. in that before the last occupied, the 22nd space in the outer circle of the seal.

40) Opera fidelium, Delectatio mea]

'The works of the faithful are my delight'.

41) Hic est Deus $\overline{nr}$]

'Here is our God'.

42) 'Behold, iniquity reigns in my house'. A letter 'o' has just been shown and in the Zoharic exposition of the alphabet the letter Ayin, which has no sound but nevertheless corresponds in its alphabetic position to the letter 'o' in other alphabets, is refused the right of beginning the creation on account of its 'standing for iniquity' (Zohar, I, p.10).

44) very lean]

See also the creature at line 50.

full of little e]

Covered all over with letters of this type.

46) 'The Beast devoured my people, but he will perish in eternity'. This is not a direct biblical quotation, but the beast referred to must be that of Revelation XIII, 1 or that of Revelation XIII, 11.

49) 'Iniquity abounds in my temple, and the holy live with the wicked'. The 'bluddy apparell' (line 47) recalls the innocent (see 18b, 47) and the 'serpents heds' (line 47) recall the 'old serpent, which is the Devil' (Revelation XX, 2). The underlined first letter of 'Abundat' indicates the next letter to be shown, so a strict adherence to order would demand that this line read 'Abundat Iniquitas...'

MN) The marginal notes other than those at lines 7 and 35 refer to the Enochian names for the letters shown.

MN35) Gon — cū puncto]

The Enochian letter for 'Y' has a point to differentiate it from for 'I' (see fol.64b,34).

fol. 20a.

2) The marginal note shows that this apparition is superfluous, there being no number or letter shown. If any had been revealed there would have been no spaces in the outer circle of the seal remaining unfilled after the corrections made on fol. 20b and only one unfilled, instead of two, before these corrections were made.

3) 'The earth is wicked in its evil deeds'.

6) Angeli...sanctis]
'His angels ministered to the saints'.

7) Target]
A small shield.

8) Regnabit Iniquitas pro tempore]
'Wickedness shall reign for a time'.

9) a great arming sword]
A sword forming part of a set of military accoutrement or suit of armour. It is probably a two-handed sword.

10) The emphasis on gold in this vision may be related to the statement at line 8, gold being a source of corruption as well as the right of kingship.

16, ouer it]
The number is later corrected as being under the letter (See MN10).

12) Nulla...terrā]

'No virtue reigns upon the earth', a statement rather similar to that at line 8. The vision which follows is of a fashionable braggart.

17) Non...Caelis]

'His number is not in the heavens'. No number accompanies the showing of the letter 'n'.

18) 'The old serpent raised his head, devouring the innocent'. The old serpent is referred to in Revelation XIII, 9 and XX, 2 (see Commentary to 19b, 49).

22) 'My kingdom (or rule). Who may oppose it?'. See Isaiah L, 8: 'He is near that justifieth me; who will contend with me?' (Quis contradicet mihi).

25-28) 'Not because he is A, but because he contradicts A. Neither a part of him nor his number is to be found in heaven. But he has an earthly number, which is a mystery'. The part of the spirit not to be found in heaven is presumably the 'A', for while the letter Aleph (or alpha) was often used to signify God, a distinction is here being made between this particular showing of the letter 'A' and the designation of God by the first letter of the alphabet. This creature bears the letter 'A' because he is in fact entirely opposed to God (see Commentary to line 29).

29) The number 666 is the number of the Beast in Revelation (XIII, 18), but Agrippa gives the number to the daemon of

of the sun called Sorath, this being the total of the numerical equivalents of the Hebrew סורת (Occ. Phil. II, xxii, p. 243). Any trinitarian significance based on the triangular form of the number 6, which is the number of Christ, is confounded by lines 25-28.

30) 'This mystery is to be revealed to you later'. It is not.

32-35) This part of the Action was related to Dee by Kelly some time later (see MN32 and 20b, 20 ff.).

32) 'The earth is disturbed with his (or her) iniquity'.

33) his face as brass]
See the vision of Ezekiel (XL, 3).

36-37) 'Arise O ministers of God, arise (I say) [and] fight: the name of God is eternal'.

39) fyre cam oute of theyr mowthes]
See the spirit at 19a, 47.

41) A misreading of his original notes of the Action must have caused Dee to begin describing the next spirit (at end of line 40) before inserting this line.

44) 'All the earth trembles at the sound of his trumpet'. The blowing of the trumpet which shall begin the Last Judgement is described by Matthew (XXIV, 31) and in Revelation (VIII-XI).

48-49) 'O God, serve your people, O God, serve your people, O God (I say), serve your people Israel'.

50)a fyry sword]

It is just possible that this part of the vision may have been prompted by the flaming sword which guards the way to the Tree of Life in Eden (Genesis III, 24), since the previous lines form an impassioned plea to God to help his fallen nation.

51) vesture all bluddy]

See the spirits at 18b, 47 & 19b, 47.

52) Est numerus in numero]

'He is number in number'. This is explained in the following line.

53) 'In the sixteenth century [the number five] was made very much after the pattern of our lower-case printed s' (Tannenbaum, p. 156).

MN2) supfuous]

An error for 'supfluous' (superfluous).

MN30) 'A Mystery to be revealed to us'.

MN51) The Enochian for the letter 's'.

fol. 20b.

1) owgly]

'Ugly', see the spirit with three heads at 19a, 19.

skabbed]

See the spirit with leprosy at 20a, 34.

3) Nunc sunt Dies tribulationis]

'Now are the days of tribulation'.

4) 'This is the foresaid number'.

5-7) The marginal note explains that Uriel corrected the vision at lines 1-4 for this one instead.

5) Audite, Consummatum est]

'Listen,it is finished', consummatum est being Christ's last words upon the cross according to the Vulgate version of John XIX, 30.

8) 'Angel prepare your trumpet'. The imperative is erroneously plural.

9) Venit Tempus]

'The time comes'. See 19b, 31.

10) This action is the same as that of the spirit at 21a, 1.

13-14) Hij...adhuc]

'These two heavenly ones are yet to come'. There are two vacant spaces in the outer circle of the seal at this stage on account of the fact that the 33rd letter and number were delivered at a later time (see 20a, MN32). From the 31st space Dee's inscription therefore reads: n, 6/A, 5/G, h/14, o/17, s, a/5, a/24, spaces 39 and 40 being vacant. After the correction the seal then reads: N, 6/A, o/10, 5/G, h/14, o/17, s, a/5, a/24, only the 40th space being unfilled.

15) 'Go. Nature has its end'.

16) florished]
'flourished'.

27) quantit<y>]
See the ninth place in the circle where the number is corrected from 22 to 20 (18b, 27).

28) and some for place]
See the 30th space in the circle of the seal and 20a, 10 & MN10.

28-29) one letter or place omitted]
If the spirit at 20a, 2, had shown any letter or number, there would have been just one space unfilled in the circle of the seal before the corrections and none after the corrections.

30) dowted, vppon]
'doubted of'.

32) Hij duo Caelati sunt adhuc]

See Commentary to lines 13-14 above.

34) ax Judgmēt]

'ask for judgement'.

37) 'Truth is only in God. And all these things are true'.

38) history]

In the sense of a sequence of past events.

40) descrier]

An altern tive for 'scryer' (see MN39).

47) Consummatum est]

See line 5 above.

MN) /A line joins.../]

Dee often uses lines to join words which are the same or phrases which deal with similar matters in order to make an immediately visible cross-reference on a folio.

fol. 21a.

1) See the spirit at 20b, 10.

2) greke ω]

Omega, the last letter of the Greek alphabet, certainly has an apocalyptic significance in its place in the last space in the outer circle of the seal (see Commentary to 18b, 18).

4) See 20a, 29.

5) put oute]

'covered from sight'.

Iste est numerus suus]

'This is his number'.

8) Omnia vnum est]

'All things are one'. See Introduction pp. 165-168 & 177.

9) The forme of the World]

The vision of the world in the stone noted at 18b, 2-3.

9-13] The circle has a total diameter of 37mm and is composed of thirteen circles altogether. The innermost circle has a diameter of 15mm and the figure 1 is 5mm high.

11-12) Semyeil]

An alternative for Semiel (see Commentary to 17b, 15).

16) Go forward]

'Proceed with the Action'.

17) 'Praise the Lord in his sanctuary' (Psalm CL, 1).

18-19) See the names extracted at 22a, 37-43 and 22b, 7-13.

20) This does not mean that each of the forty letters leads on to seven angels, but that the forty letters in total contain the names of seven angels. A similar usage of 'euery letter' is to be found at 28a, 34.

24) Number significatiue]

A number full of significance in that it offers precise instruction for finding the next letter in the concealed name of God.

26) it sheweth removing]

'it indicates the direction'.

28) The vnder number]

The number underneath a letter.

30-31) When a letter without a number is reached, the whole name has been extracted from the circle of the seal.

34) Make experience]

'Try it'.

35) exclusively]

Exclusive of the space containing the number being counted.

46) ThAaoth]

This is later corrected to Thaoth (see 21b, 11-16).

50-51) Dee has previously referred to these angelic dealings as 'Actions' (see 7b, 39) and the designation of them by the word 'Calls' here is a case of his assuming an accident of vocabulary to be an angelic command.

MN12) The use of capitals in 'SemEIL' differentiates the two parts of the name, sem which means 'a name' and EL or EIL which is itself a name of God.

MN24) This note is written in Ashmole's hand on a piece of paper which is stuck onto the original folio in the nature of a repair.

fol. 21b.

4) his first Rule]

See 21a, 48. It is the rule which will correct ThAaoth to Thaoth (see 11-16 below).

5) Saluete]

'Welcome'.

8-9) All the names together must have a total of forty letters, although the rule against double letter 'a' means that in practice there are 38 letters in the seven names.

10-11) Some of the letters stand for numbers, perhaps according to their kabbalistic values. This aspect of the seal is not pursued.

12) w/^{c}ch/hich]

The margin is very tight and Ashmole wrote a superior 'ch' for what could not be seen after his binding of the MS but has since reappeared with the binding by Sloane.

16) his inward powre]

The letter 'A' signifies God and unity, having a numerical equivalent of one (see Commentary to 18b, 25, & 20a, 25-28).

18-19) Even with Dee's marginal note the meaning of these lines is obscure. In the collection of seven names the letter 'a' occurs in doubled form three times, but this does not explain why Michael states that seven names proceed from this letter. Only one name (Aaoth) begins with the letter 'a'.

20-21) The first letter of a conjunction of two letters 'a' is only to be erased when it occurs in the middle of a name; thus Aa th retains the double 'a'.

23) go]

The vision of the heart with these letters (19b, 28) in fact shows og according to normal English practice, but Dee may have interpreted it according to the Hebrew practice of reading from right to left.

24-42) The three versions of the 42 letter name of God along with their Latin translations are taken from Petrus Galatinus Columna's Opus de arcanis catholicae veritatis (see Commentary to MN29). Other versions that have been postulated by the kabbalists tend to consist of the many names of God put together until a composite name of 42 letters has been reached.

29-31) 'that is: God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghost, three in one and one in three, or trinity in unity and unity in trinity'.

32) הקדש לא]

This should read הקדש אל. The mistake is Dee's.

34-35) 'God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghost, yet not three gods but one God'.

38) on this maner]

'in this manner'.

41-42) Sicut...Messias vnus]

'Just as the rational soul and the flesh [make] one man, even so do God and man [form] one Messiah'.

41) ɛnima rationalis]

Agrippa points to 'the threefold capacity of our soul, namely the imagination (imaginatio), the rational (ratio), and the mental (mens)' (see Frances A. Yates, The Occult Philosophy in the Elizabethan Age (London 1979), p. 53). The imagination could make a man a master in an art of some kind, while the intellect (mens) could show the way to 'the secrets of divine matters', but through the reason knowledge could be gained of 'natural and human things'. It is not clear however that Columna's 42 letter name of God differentiates the soul in quite this way and the 'rational soul' may simply be contrasted to the 'sensible soul' that is shared with the animals.

44-46) In the seven names collected from the circle of the seal double 'a' occurs twice in the middle of the names and in accordance with the rule expressed at 21b, 11-16, the first 'a' is always struck out. Since the letters are numbers as well (21b, 10-11), Michael is arguing that the striking out of the 'a's does not delete their numbers from the sequence obtained from the circle of the seal. Therefore the total of the outer circle still remains 40, being composed of thirty-eight letters and two 'numbers' from the deleted 'a's; if the 'a's are reinstated 'the old rule of 42 letters' is obtained. This does all seem to be little more than some juggling with terms by Kelly in order to get 42 out of 40.

47-48) The outer circle of the seal is here also stated to be a means of binding wicked spirits, in the same way that the holy names around the pentacle of Solomon are supposed to act as barriers between the conjurer and evil spirits.

MN29) Petrus Galatinus Columna, Opus de arcanis catholicae veritatis (Basle 1561), p. 95. Columna in fact makes two mistakes: in the second name וררוח stands, making the name total 43 letters (hence Dee's erasure of ו at line 32), and in the first name חוח is omitted altogether, although it may be found correctly in Book II, chap. 12 (p. 62). Both mistakes are almost certainly printer's errors.

MN44) '42 are here in potential, but not in deed'.

fol. 22a.

1) In this they were all Created]

The meaning is metaphysical; the animals were created in 'Truth', represented by the seal.

2-3) ADAMS Treatise from Paradise]

Michael means Dee's Book of Soyga (see 9a, 31-32 and Introduction pp. 146-7).

4-6) 'Alpha and omega: the first and the last; one God alone lives now and for ever: He is and will be: and here are his holy names. I have spoken'. The holy names are in the seal.

7) watcht]

'watched over by angels'.

who is euen now at the Dore]

This is probably a question.

8) Clerkson]

Kelly first came to Dee's house in the company of this Mr. Clerkson (see Introduction p. 43).

10) 'Let us bless the Lord'.

12) The cross measures 9mm high by 6mm across, the arm being 5mm from the base.

13-15) The note in the box reads from line 15 upwards, this being indicated by the caret. There seems to be no prefatory material to this Action.

17) 'The will of God be done'.

19) There is no reference in Dee's Diary or his other notes to the nature of Kelly's business here.

25) shitt]
A manuscript error for 'shutt'.

27) Canapie, of beaten gold]
The term 'canopy' was frequently used figuratively to describe the overhanging firmament and it may be that this vision is intended to represent the realms of heavenly purity.

28) 'Behold it is a mystery. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel' (see I Samuel XXV, 32 & Psalm LXXXII, 18).

31) an]
'and'.

34) Sapientiam]
'Wisdom'.

37-43) These are the names gathered from the circle of the seal. The first 'a' of a double 'a' in the middle of a word is crossed out in the first two names according to Michael's instruction (21b, 11-16). A more accurate list of the names is to be found at 22b, 7-13 (see these lines for Commentary).

fol. 22b.

1) misrekēing the numbers]

It is not easy to see how Dee made this mistake, since the only 's' in the circle has no number to lead on to 'og', it being the last letter of the name 'Galas' and the thirty-seventh in the circle. Perhaps Dee simply misread his own writing, despite what he says here.

3-6) See the rearranged order at lines 7-13. The reasons for this rearrangement are however not clear. Dee's original order of the names is that obtained by following the order indicated in the outer circle of the seal.

7-13) The only one of these names for which I have been able to find a source is 'Innon' which in the form of יננן is designated as a name of God by Agrippa (Occ. Phil. III, xi, p.371). According to the later adept, MacGregor Mathers, Innon is the holy name of an angel by which daemons are commanded to appear in Solomonic conjuration (Gustav Davidson, A Dictionary of Angels), although a common source for Kelly and Mathers is exceedingly unlikely considering the nature of the Order of the Golden Dawn.

14-15) This is an instruction to proceed anti-clockwise to fill in the segments formed between the sides of the outermost heptagon and the outer circle of the seal (see 30a).

18-24) All these letters bearing some form of cross spell the name 'Galethog' and are placed in the angles between the outer heptagon and outer circle of the seal so that the name may be read in an anti-clockwise direction. The letters are given a more esoteric significance at 24a, 26-40.

18) The letter is 10mm high. The number 5 is the number which the 'G' of 'Galethog' bears in the outer cirdle of the seal. This measurement and rule serve also for the signs between lines 19 and 23.

24) The circle around 'G' is 10mm in diameter and the cross is 6mm high.

27) assone]

'as soon'.

32) See 21a, 8.

38) that which is in the east]

The baskets are hanging around the horizon seen in the show-stone (see 22a, 32-33).

39) Seal this]

'Seal this in your heart'?

fol. 23a.

1) the 7 partes of the circle]

The seven sides of the outermost heptagon of the seal.

3) for the tyme wilbe Long]

This statement is rather unusual since most references by the angels to 'the time', by which they mean the coming of God's kingdom upon earth, infer that it will be in the not too distant future.

Seuen, rest in 7]

Seven names rest in the seven sides of the heptagon.

4) 7, liue by 7]

The letters in each side of the heptagon are parts of names which may be extracted by writing each group of seven letters in descending rows and then reading from top to bottom (see 24b, 21-28). Thus the first seven names cause another seven to come into being.

The 7, gouern the 7]

The names as read in the heptagon are the names of seven angels who govern the angels bearing the second set of names extracted at 24b, 21-28.

4-5) And by 7, all Gouernment is]

The second set of seven names are those given in Agrippa's Scale of Seven as governing the world (Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 204-205). Each of these angels is also given governance over a planet. The unpronounceable first set of names belong, according to Michael, to angels who govern these governors, and therefore the importance of septenaries in governance is strongly emphasised. According to J. E. Cirlot the number seven is symbolic of perfect order (A Dictionary of Symbols (New York 1962) p. 223) and Agrippa accords the number the power of representing supreme unity and of binding body and spirit (Occ. Phil. II, x, p. 193).

8) a white fowle like a pigeon]

This description suggests a dove, symbolic of peace and of the Holy Ghost.

9) 'Z' is th first letter placed in the heptagon.

7 f athers]

Each feath r contains a letter to be placed in the first side of the heptagon (see fol. 30a).

11-12) Se Commentary to lines 4-5 above.

26) a swan]

The symbolism of the swan is of great complexity. The swan is sacred to Venus, can represent hermaphroditism, and was compared by the alchemists to 'philosophical Mercury', the mystic Centre and the union of opposites. It also represents the satisfaction of a desire (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols). None of these meanings seem to be in Kelly's mind, however.

27) 'He spoke and it was done'. This echoes God's creation of the world through his word (see Genesis I, 3).

28-34) These letters fill the spaces in the second side of the heptagon in the Sigillum Dei.

39) like to a peacok]

In Christian art the peacock represents the immortality and incorruptibility of the soul (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols, p. 251) and this may be esoterically related to the role of Cumael (the third angel's name to be drawn from the letters in the heptagon) as a personification of divine justice (Davidson, Dictionary of Angels). The immortal soul must finally face the justice of God.

40-41) 'And you live with him: and your reign is with him'.

44-50) These letters occupy the spaces in the third side of the heptagon in the seal.

fol. 23b.

2-4) 'He gave them power in the heavens. His power is great. Pray'.

6) a griphen]

A fabulous animal, being half eagle and half lion with a long serpentine tail. The griffin is found as the guardian of the roads to salvation or standing beside the Tree of Life and in medieval Christian art it is commonly associated with signs tending towards ambivalence, representing for instance both the Saviour and the Antichrist (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols). No specific symbolism seems to be accorded to it here, however.

8-14) These letters occupy the spaces in the fourth side of the heptagon.

18-20) 'God is great in his angels, and great is their power in the heavens. Pray'.

21) an Egle]

The symbolism of the eagle is multifarious, but a common interpretation is that of a heavenly messenger, which taken a stage further allows the bird to be seen as representing the spirit of prophecy (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols, p. 92). Haniel is the fifth name to be drawn from the letters in the heptagon, and while Gabriel is traditionally the angel of annunciation, the role has also been given to Haniel, alias Annael (Davidson, Dictionary of Angels). The bird can therefore be seen as a suitable bearer of the fifth set of letters.

25) These letters occupy the spaces in the fifth side of the heptagon. The circle measures 41mm in diameter and the squares measure 6mm.

28-29) 'Your messenger is great in the heavens. Pray'. There remains doubt as to whether these pronouncements by Michael with each show of letters are introductory or valedictory, but if the latter, the words may clearly be related to Haniel's role (see Commentary to line 21 above).

30) Basket]

A singular for a plural.

36) Uriel takes over the exposition from Michael because the sixth name to be extracted from the letters is that of Michael himself. Michael is therefore 'here' in name and 'not here' in presence.

38-40) The phoenix is symbolic of all processes of destruction and rebirth and the bird which Kelly sees certainly resembles a phoenix in its sparkling fiery qualities. The action of the bird, however, strongly argues that it is a pelican, which in this portraiture is a most potent symbol of the Redemption and of service to one's fellow man:

> The Pellican, for to reuiue her younge,
> Doth peirce her brest, and geue them of her blood:
> Then searche your breste, and as you haue with tonge,
> With penne proceede to doe our countrie good:
> Your zeale is great, your learning is profounde,
> Then helpe our wantes, with that you doe abounde.

(Whitney's Choice of Emblemes, edited by Henry Green, facsimile reprint (London 1846), p. 87).

A bird which is a mixture of phoenix and pelican may be interpreted as symbolic of the rebirth of man through Christ's sacrifice, although the precise nature of any intended connection with Michael, whom Dee defines as 'the strength of God', is not clear.

43) The square measures 24mm on each side and the segment of the circle measures 14mm at the base. The sixth side of the heptagon in the Sigillum Dei reads 'i i e e l l l', so the letters are intended to be read clockwise, beginning at the top left corner.

MN36) See 24b, 23-24.

fol. 24a.

2) 'He gave to the angels power in the light of heaven'.

4) The revelation equivalent to Michael's name now being past, Michael himself returns to continue the exposition.

6) a strange fowle with many wings]
Save for the fact that all winged creatures represent spirituality, the symbolism of this creature remains obscure.

8) The circle measures 32mm in diameter. The letters are to be read anti-clockwise from the top 'e'.

9) 'And God joined them in one'.

13) There is no specific function of explication assigned by tradition to Uriel.

16) The title of 'fellows' again emphasises the election of Dee and Kelly by God.

17) This is equivalent to Dee's customary prayer of 'recte sapere' etc. (see 7a, 49).

24) the 7 angles]

The segments between the heptagon and the outer circle of the seal.

26) Those 7 letters]

See 22b, 18-24.

the 7 Seats of the One]

Seats (sedes) are an order of Angels mentioned in Augustine's Civitas Dei and may be equated with the more common order of Thrones.

27-28) Even if the crosses which accompany the letters are meant in each case to stand for 'El' (see Commentary to 19a, 19-22), the names of these '7 secret Angels' remain veiled. The 'G', 'A' and 'H', each with a cross, might represent Gabriel, Annael and Haniel, but Annael and Haniel are customarily alternative names for the same angel and in such a sequence one would also expect the names of Michael and Raphael, if not Uriel as well. While there are several angelic names which begin with the first six letters of the name Galethog and which also end in 'el', there is no recorded septenary of angels that I have found which comprises ~~><~~ angels whose names begin with these letters, and I have found no angelic name which begins with 'og' and ends in 'el'. The names of these '7 secret Angels' are not revealed in any later Action and Kelly's lack of further explanation is probably deliberate.

28) in substance]

'in essential nature, with regard to the divine being of God', a theological usage (OED).

29) in forme]

In Scholastic philosophy 'form' was 'the essential determinant principle of a thing' (OED).

29-30) Inwardly to the HOLI GHOSTE]

Agrippa writes that the number 7 is 'consecrated to the Holy Ghost, which the Prophet Isaiah describes to be seaven fold, according to his gifts viz. the spirit of wisdom, and understanding, the spirit of counsell, and strength, the spirit of knowledge, and holiness, and the spirit of the fear of the Lord' (Occ. Phil. II, x, p. 197). See Isaiah XI, 2.

32-33) the 7 inward powres of God]

See Commentary to lines 29-30 above. If those seven qualities are not referred to here, then these powers only add further to the vagueness and obscurity of this passage.

36) qualifieth]

'gives quality to'.

38) ONE in SEVEN]

The one name Galethog is supposed to contain the names of the '7 secret Angels'.

38) He is twise THREE]

The marginal note corrects this to 'twice three and one'. Agrippa notes that the number seven 'hath a Unity, as it were the coupling of two threes' (see Commentary to 18a, 32).

fol. 24b.

1-2) The numbers accompanying the letters in the segments between the heptagon and the outer circle of the seal are those that are found with the letters that make up the name of Galethog in the outer circle.

8) See John I, 5.

14) The parte]

The heptagon.

16-17) See Proverbs III, 32: 'for his secret is with the righteous'.

22-28) The names of the seven angels between lines 22 and 24 are obtained by reading downward and are the names of the Angels of the Presence according to Agrippa (Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 204-205).

29) the number of 72 Vertues]

Despite Dee's assumption in the marginal note to this line, it is not clear whether the 48 letters (excluding the final cross) lead collectively to the 72 virtues or whether each letter individually represents 72 virtues, making a total of 3456. In the former case the method by which the names are supposed to proceed remains obscure and it is perhaps no accident that no further exposition of this point is given. The angelic order of Virtues is not usually to be found numbered except for its seven governing angels, and the reference may rather glance at the 72 angels who bear the name of God shemhamphorae. A clear explanation of how these 72 names are gathered from Exodus XIV, 19-21 is to be found in C.D.Ginsburg, The Kabbalah (London 1865) pp. 50-54, and they are also listed in Davidson, Dictionary of Angels, p. 345. Yet even if these names do act as a source for this angelic pronouncement, no connection with the cross and 48 letters in the heptagon of the seal is evident.

30) The names of the virtues are not revealed.

38) In Ashmole's transcript this line bears a marginal note in which Ashmole writes: 'This I suppose was spoken by Michaell, though the noting by whome is omitted in the originall' (Sloane MS 3677, 39a).

44) Man is frayle]
See Psalm XXXIX, 4.

MN21) Uriel does not appear among the seven governing angels whose names are contained in the outer heptagon of the seal.

MN26) In an Action of 25 June 1584 it is explained that 'the earth is the last, which is with the Angels, but not as the Angels, and therefore it standeth in the Table of the seven Angels, which stand before the presence of God in the last place, without a Letter, or number, but figured by a Crosse' (TFR, p. 173).

MN29) See Commentary to line 29.

MN44) This note refers to the suggestion that the books of Lord Monteagle are in danger (see 25a, 1-4).

fol. 25a.

3) L. Mowntegles]

William Stanley, the third Lord Monteagle, died in 1581 and the fourth Lord Monteagle was William Parker, who inherited the title through his mother, the daughter and heiress of William Stanley. Parker was born in 1575, and so Dee is referring to Stanley and is presumably attempting to purchase books once owned by Stanley and now for sale as a result of his death.

M^{r} Mort]

The identity of this man remains hidden, but it is probable that he was acting as an agent for the sale of Stanley's books.

4) whereof mention is made before]

If any earlier mention was made it was presumably in the missing page at the beginning of the second book. Dee's Diary states that on 22 March 1582 'Mr. Talbot went to London, to take his jornay', evidently to see Mr Mort about the books.

12) a Trumpeter]

See the spirits at 20b, 9 and 21a,1.

13) heare]

'hair'.

14) The sownd therof]

In contrast to the previous spirits with trumpets this one evidently does blow upon his.

16) There are two carets for the superscription, one being before the comma after 'Skryer'.

17) This warning was given at 12b,24.

18-20) 'And this is his glory, which will not be shaken by the wicked. What do you want? Δ Next to the will of God, the wisdom necessary for us' (see 7a, 49 and 24a,17). The speech-heading of Michael is misplaced but the curved line to the left of lines 18 and 19 indicates that it should be at the line above its present position.

21-24) 'The wisdom of the world is nothing [see Job XXVIII, 12] but will perish in eternity. May the eternity of the Lord come, from all parts of the world. Come, come, if God Adonai wills. Perform your office Phanaël'. Phanaël is here given the office of blowing the last trump.

24) Phanaël]

I have found no other record of this angelic name, but Phanuel ('the face of God') is an archangel of penance and often equated with Uriel. Along with Michael, Gabriel and Raphael, Phanuel is designated as one of the four angels of the presence, when those angels are not deemed to be seven in number. In the Sybilline Oracles he is one of the five angels who know all the evils that men have committed, which makes his office of blowing the last trump here particularly appropriate.

31) Mone and sterrs]

'Moon and stars'.

32) Multiplex est Deus noster]

'Our God exists in many forms'.

33-34) Seuen...erth]

For an exposition of the number seven in relation to heavenly and earthly bodies and events see Agrippa, Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 193-202.

34-35) seuen...body]

The number four relates to body and the elements and the number three appertains to the soul. The number seven therefore 'contains body and soul' (see Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 193-194 and Commentary to 18a, 32).

36) The number seven 'hath a Unity, as it were a coupling of two threes' (Occ. Phil. II, x, p. 194).

37) See Commentary to line 36 above.

38) The name YHSVH (Jhesu), which is the wonder-working name of Reuchlin's De verbo mirifico, consists of five letters and is the name to be called upon in 'the time of grace' according to Agrippa (Occ. Phil. II, viii, p. 189). The Son of God may also be found in the number six contained in seven (see Commentary to 18b, 12).

38-39) the proportion of the Holy Ghoste]

Agrippa writes that in the proportion of 2:2 the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son may be seen (Occ. Phil. II, vii, p. 183). The Son and the proportion of the Holy Ghost are contained in the number seven in the constituent numbers of 5 and 2 and in the number 4 (2:2) which remains after the number of the Trinity has been extracted.

40) thy 7 Trumpets]

'And I saw the seven angels which stood before God: and to them were given seven trumpets' (Revelation VIII, 2).

41) thy 7 Angels]

The seven angels of the presence, who have the seven trumpets and have or are the seven thrones referred to at line 40.

42) See line 33 above.

fol. 25b.

4) Uriel was designated as possessing an office of explication and instruction at 24a, 13.

7) 'Such is our God'.

12) 'Our God is one, God, our God'.

13-14) The joining of the pillars symbolises unity in seven (see 25a, 36).

15-23) These letters form the name underneath the first side of the heptagon in the Sigillum Dei.

23) Μυϛεριον est]
'It is a mystery'. Μυϛεριον is closer to the Latin 'mysterium' than the correct Greek Μυστηριον .

30-34) These pillars are sent by evil spirits, in the same manner that illuding spirits kept intruding in the Action of 10 March 1582 (9a-10b).

31) 'The evil one perishes with the wicked'.

33-34) 'Such is your audacity Satan, but our God lives'.

36) NON SVM]
'I am not'. The marginal note indicates that these pillars are not to be heeded.

38) SVM]

'I am', equivalent to the holy name אהיה (Ehie) which God spoke to Moses from the burning bush (Exodus III, 14). These pillars provide the next name for the seal.

44) B T Z]

The first three letters of the second name, written under the second ide of the heptagon in the seal.

45) cumfet boxes]

'cumfit boxes', cumfits being sweetmeats such as preserved fruit or pickles (OED).

46) 'These are the secrets of secrets'. The phrase echoes 'the holy of holies' (sanctus sanctorum).

fol. 26a.

1) 'Invoke his name or we can do nothing'.

3) K A S E]

The remaining letters to be written under the second side of the heptagon.

7) 'Thus, O Lord, thus, thus'.

8) the Table]

The Sigillum Dei.

9) Laudate...aeternum]

'Praise the name of the Lord who lives for ever'.

11) Ipse]

Literally this means 'himself', but it is rather the Latin equivalent of the Tetragrammaton, the holy name of God which means 'he is'.

12) 'And your mercy is great O Lord' (see Psalm LXXXVI, 13).

16-17) These letters are placed under the third side of the heptagon in the seal.

19) 'The Lord is to be found in his number' (literally 'placed in his number').

22) 'I live like a lion in their midst'. Christ is called the 'Lion of the tribe of Juda' in Revelation V, 5.

23)'And your power is great everywhere'.

25-28) These letters are placed under the fourth side of the heptagon in the seal.

27) 'This is not except by prayer'.

31) Serpens...serpentem]

' I am the serpent and have devoured the serpent'. The second serpent is Satan, but the first is God, the serpent being symbolic of energy and, when biting its tail, also of eternity (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols).

32) 'You are the serpent to both good and evil, O Lord'. Since all things proceed from God, evil exists only by his allowance.

34-36) These letters appear under the fifth side of the heptagon in the seal.

37) 'The number of that one is known to none'.

41) 'I am the penetrating fire'. This sentence recalls the Pentecost.

41) Et sit nobiscum O Deus]
'And may it be with us O God'.

45) I apered]
The letter 'I' appeared.

46) $\overset{21}{\underset{8}{\cdot}}$]
The marginal note states that this should read V $\overset{21}{\underset{8}{\cdot}}$.

49) Angels like little Children]
The names of the Sons of Light, the Daughters of Light, and their sons and daughters are to be extracted from the letters delivered by the pillars and these angels are presumably representative of them.

fol. 26b.

1) N]

This is the last letter of the sixth name to be written under the heptagon of the seal, the others having been delivered at 26a,43-46 (with the exception of the V that was omitted in error).

2) 'Thus, thus, thus [is] our God' (see 26a,7).

6) 'The end'.

7) 'God [is] our joy and light'.

10-14) The seventh name for the seal is delivered here.

11-12) This vision seems to represent the Creation, although it could equally well be seen as representing the chaos on earth that follows the blowing of the trumpets for the Last Judgement in Revelation.

13) Consummatum est]

See 20b, 5 & 47.

16-17) 'One, one, one; all flesh fears his voice'.

19-20) See 14a,20 and Introduction pp. 110-112.

21) shold do well]

'would be all right'.

27) stoles]

'stools'.

flowre]

'floor'.

28) him]

Kelly.

32-34) 'Approach, daughters of goodness: behold your God comes near: come'.

35) On female spirits see Introduction p. 155, note 1.

36) a wreath] a circlet of twisted silk (OED).

39) 'Write what you see'.

40) a blue tablet]

The colour blue 'stands for religious feeling, devotion and innocence' (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols). The colour is appropriate considering what the tablet bears. Unfortunately there is no apparent reason why these spirits should also be dressed in green, the colour of fertility.

41) El]

See Commentary to 19a, 16.

41-48) The names delivered here are written in the angles formed by the interwoven heptagon in the seal.

MN32) 'The daughters of goodness or the little daughters of light: see the following page'. Dee generally refers to these spirits as filiae lucis, 'the daughters of light'.

fol. 27a.

1) Nos possumus in Caelis multa]
'We can do many things in the heavens'.

3) your next place but one]
Inside the angles of the intertwined heptagon rather than in the heptagon itself.

5) 'Approach little daughters of light' (see 26b, MN32).

6-7) Adsumus...stas]
'We come, O you who stand before the face of God'. Michael is one of the angels of the presence.

8) Hijs $\overline{\text{nris}}$ benefacite]
'Do well by these our [chosen] people', referring to Dee and Kelly.

9) Factum erit]
'It shall be done'.

10) Valete]
'Go'.

11) The erased 'E' shows that Dee originally began to write 'E.K.', as Kelly was relating the vision to him.

11-13) 'And the Lord said, come sons of light, come into my tabernacle. Come (I say), for my name is exalted'.

15) The Daughters of Light were attired in this manner but in green silk (26b,35-36).

16-22) These are the seven metals associated with the seven planets. Gold is the metal of the sun, silver that of the moon and copper that of venus. Tin belongs to jupiter, iron ('yern') to mars, quicksilver to mercury and lead to saturn. The order in which the metals are shown is a little peculiar in that one would expect a descending order of baseness or an order related to the order of the planets, but this may only be achieved by swopping the places of the tin and the quicksilver. When this is done, a descending order of baseness, also c rresponding to the Copernican system less the earth, is achieved.

24) 'Although they are generated at one time, still they are one thing'. The caret refers to the marginal note which would change the sentence to read:'although they are not generated at one time', thus making more sense. The lines concern the Aristotelian conception of matter being ultimately all one matter, but taking an infinite variety of forms. This concept lay at the heart of the alchemical theory of transmutation, which sought to change the form of matter (see F. Sherwood Taylor, The Alchemists (London 1951), pp. 12-17).

26-34) These names are written in the arms of the intertwined heptagon.

34) 'Act for them [i.e. Dee and Kelly] when the time shall come'.

35) Volumus]
'We will'.

36-37) 'Great is the glory of God amongst you. He will be for ever. Hallelujah. Go'.

39-40) 'God said: let my name be remembered, but let yours be forgotten'; not a direct biblical reference.

42-44) 'Come, come, come, daughters of the Daughters of Light, come; you who will have daughters, come now and always'. 'Qui' should be quae.

MN5) See Commentary to 26b,MN32.

MN11) 'The Sons of Light'.

MN43) 'The daughters of the Daughters [of Light]'.

MN44) A third generation of Daughters of Light does not make an appearance.

fol. 27b.

1-2) Dixit...Adsumus,]

'God said: I have created my angels, who may destroy the daughters of the earth. We are come'. The 'daughters of the earth' are presumably evil spirits, in opposition to the Daughters of Light, but they make no appearance in the Actions.

2) 7 little wenches]

These are the second generation Daughters of Light.

3-5) They are dressed like the Sons of Light (see 27a, 14-15).

6) Vbi fuistis vos]

'Where were you?'

6-7) In terris...glorificatis]

'On earth with the saints and in the heavens with the glorified'.

9) The significance of this speech impediment is obscure.

11) Non...hoc]

'This mystery may not yet be known', referring to the objects in the hands of the spirits. In contrast to 25b, 23, the Greek mysterion is now in Roman letters. This cannot just be a case of Kelly mixing up the Greek and Latin words, since it was Dee who wrote mysterium in Greek letters at 25b,23.

12) white Iuory]

I cannot discover any traditional symbolism attached to ivory but purity is evidently represented.

13-19) These names occur inside those last delivered in the Sigillum Dei.

20-21) 'What may you do for these? We will be with them in all their works'. Again the spirits offer aid to Dee and Kelly (see 27a,34-35).

22) Valeas...Caelis]

'You are worthy and you are great O [you] in the heavens'. The letter 'O' is both vocative and symbolic of God's perfection and eternity, being a circle. Furthermore the 'O' maye refer to God's role as omega, the end of all things.

25) 'And he sent the sons of the Sons [of Light] teaching in Israel'.

26-27) 'The Lord said: come to my voice. We are here'.

27) 7 little Childern]

These are the second generation Sons of Light.

28-30) The scholarly dress conforms with the role of these spirits as teachers (line 25 above) and purple 'provides a synthesis comparable with, yet the inverse of, violet, representing power, spirituality and sublimation' (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols, p. 52).

31) 'What is done among the sons of men?'

32-34) 'They live in evil (they said) and we do not have a place with them, such is their injustice. Woe unto the world because of offences. Woe unto those from whom the offences come. Woe unto those with whom we are not'. The second and third sentences are derived from Matthew XVII, 7.

35) The three cornered tablets are symbolic of divinity (see Commentary to 18b,25). Since the names delivered between lines 37 and 47 'grow from' the names written under the sides of the outer heptagon of the seal and these are the second generation Sons of Light, the green colouring may be justified in terms of fertility and growth.

37) E]

Agrippa writes that among the kabbalists 'there is yet another fashion of Characters, common to almost all letters, and tongues, and very easie, which is by the gathering together of letters; as if the name of the angel Michael be given, the Characters thereof shall be framed thus. In Hebrew , in Greek , in Latin ' (Occ. Phil. III, xxx, pp. 443-444). The writing of 'EL' as such a compound letter is a simple example of this tradition.

37) Nec...Mundus]

'Nor is the world afraid at my name'.

37-47) These names are written in the inner heptagon of the Sigillum Dei.

38) Nullus...meam]

'None shall see my face' (see Exodus XXXIII, 20).

39) Non...dicā]

'The virgin is not [living] on earth with whom I may speak'. This phrase and the name 'Aue' recalls the Annunciation by Gabriel to the Virgin Mary.

42-43) Tanta...illo]

'Such is the weakness of the holiness of the day. The righteous have deserted him'. 'Diei' is probably an error for 'Dei' ('of God'). The first sentence is hard to make sense of, but may be pointing to the fact that man must turn to God of his own accord; God does not compel man to follow his ways (compare with Donne's Holy Sonnet XIV, 'Batter my heart, three person'd God'). In Latin 'Liba' means a sacrificial cake and it is possible that reference is being made to the Host.

44-45) Opera...me]

'The works of their hands are in vain; but none shall see me'.

47) Ecce...viuo]

'Behold—Hagonel—I live with those that are yet holy'. The 'e' and 'l' of Hagonel are written as one composite letter (see Commentary to line 37 above).

PN47) 'See book four concerning this Hagonel'. Hagonel later instructs Dee in many matters.

fol. 28a.

1-2) Hij...Doctrina]

'These have imitated my doctrine. In me is found the doctrine of all things'.

3-4) Imitauerūt, for Imitati sunt]

The verb 'to imitate' is correctly passive in Latin: imitor.

5) Non curat numerum Lupus]

'The wolf does not care for (or pay attention to) number'. This would appear to refer to Kelly and in this respect the comment on the biblical use of wolves in metaphor which is to be found in Cruden's Concordance under the heading of 'Wolf' is illuminating: 'In a country where a large part of wealth consisted of flocks of sheep the habits of wolves became thoroughly well known, and were often used as symbols of such habits and actions of mankind as might bear a resemblance to them'.

6) Ne...virtutem]

'He does not take away the least virtue from virtue'. 'Virtue' is being used in both a particular and a general sense and the line may be paraphrased as 'not even the smallest virtuous act of those who lead righteous lives goes unnoticed by God'.

7-8) 'Be with them. Be (I say with them). Be (I say) with me. Go.' This is spoken to the spirits. The first closing parenthesis has evidently been misplaced and should come after 'say'.

10) 'It has been said at this time'.

13) See 24a,13. 'Interpretate' is an error for 'interpret'.

14-15) 'Vr. All understanding is from the Lord. Mi. And his name is Halleluyah'. 'Hallelujah' means 'praise Jah', Jah being one of the names of God.

17-23) This table is incorrect, the correct version being given at 28b,34-40. The erasures are very faint and the corrections are made in pencil and I suspect that they were made by Ashmole. Since Dee shortly received the correct version there cannot have been great need to correct the first example, whereas Ashmole may have wanted a convenient comparison of the two versions for his investigations into Dee's magic.

Even when the numbers in the table are explained as letters, most of the names remain unpronounceable.

27-28) 'Blessed is he who keeps his names secret'. In Revelation secret names are also given to the elect (II, 17) and the angel called Faithful and True has another name which is said to be secret (XIX, 12).

29-31) The names of these angels who stand next to the seven angels of the presence are obtained by reading from the top left corner diagonally downwards from right to left. The first name is S/AB/ATH/I$\overset{21}{\cdot 8}$, or Sabathiel ($\overset{21}{\cdot 8}$ standing for 'el'). The seven names obtained in this way are Sabathiel, Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, Corabiel and Levanael (all numbers except $\overset{21}{\cdot 8}$ represent simply the letter'l').

32-33) 'Holy, holy, holy is he, our God'. Compare with Revelation IV, 8.

34-28b,1) The further names to be extracted from the table are those of the Daughters of Light, their daughters, the Sons of Light and their sons.

34) Euery letter]
Not each individual letter, but the entire table allows the names to be found (see 21a, 20).

36) Euery dowghter her dowghter]
Every daughter of the Daughters of Light.

36-37) bringeth furth a sonne]
This suggests that 27a,44 should read filios, 'sons', rather than filias, 'daughters', MN13) 'Uriel's office'.

fol. 28b.

2) the God of seuen]

See 24a,26-42.

4-7) 'The voice of the Lord in strength. The voice of the Lord in decorum. The voice of the Lord reveals secrets. In his temple let us praise his name El.'

10-11) The names of the Daughters of Light are to be found by reading the table diagonally from the top right corner from left to right. Each diagonal produces a name: El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akel , Azdobn, Stimcul (see 26b,41-48). The last name is the diagonal from one corner to the other (what is here called the 'one Centre').

12-13) The names of the Sons of Light are obtained by reading from the bottom left corner diagonally upwards from left to right: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, Stimcul (see 27a,26-33).

14) These principles allow the names of the second generation sons and daughters of light to be obtained. The names of the second generation daughters are found by reading from the top left corner diagonally from right to left, ignoring the numbers: S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi, Esemeli (see 27b, 13-19). The names of the second generation Sons of Light are obtained by reading from the bottom right corner diagonally upwards from left to right, using the transliteration of the number in the bottom right corner only: El, An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagonel, Ilemese (see 27b,37-28a,1).

18-20) Dee is to look for a letter over an 8.

19) vnder neth]
'underneath'.

22) This first name is 'El'.

24-25) The number 8 occurs under the letter 'l' in the 17th place of the outer circle of the seal, but also under 'o' in the 24th place.

27) See Commentary to 27b,37.

28) 'The name of the Lord lives for ever'.

34-40) This is the corrected version of the table.

34) Viuit in Caelis]
'He lives in the heavens'. Presumably each of these phrases that follow is intended to reflect upon the supposed meaning of these unpronounceable names.

35-40) Deus...tabula]
'Our God. Our leader. He is here. Light in eternity. He is the end. This table is true'.

41-42) 'This table is true, and is partly known to us and partly unknown to all. Look further'.

43) in the second place]

'In the second line'.

44) The name of the Second Daughter of Light is 'Me', but the 3^{o} represents '1' in the derivation of the name of Hagonel from the table. The transliteration of the numbers is based upon the letters with which they occur in the outer circle of the Sigillum Dei. The position of the dot indicates that the letter is to be found above the number and the first example in the seal is to be found in the 15th place of the outer circle.

MN25) 'El' and '1' are argued as being one and the same (see Comm ntary to 19a,16 & 19-22 and Monas hieroglyphica, edited by C. H. Josten, p. 171).

fol. 29a.

1) The $\dot{2}6$ by I is the beginning of the fifth unknown name of God in the table. The point above the number indicates that it is to be found above a letter and 26 occurs over '1' in the 14th space of the outer circle of the seal. The transliteration is not used in obtaining the name of the fourth second generation Daughter of Light (Ekiei), but is used in extracting the name of Zedekieil from the table.

3) The only time the number 21 occurs in the outer circle of the seal is in the 25th place, under the letter 'e'.

6-7) '[God's] virtue is with you. Pray'.

10-11) 'Our God's angels of light. And he placed his angels in their midst'.

18) The table actually reads 'Sabathiel'.

19) The name of this angel is more normally found as 'Zedekiel'.

26-27) The names are written inside the inner heptagon, Zabathiel having a letter placed on each side of the figure and the remaining names being written in a circle around the inner pent cle.

45) This cross measures 8mm high by 6mm across, the arm being 5mm from the base.

47) The dimensions of this cross are the same as those of the cross at line 45 above. The final 'e' and 'l' of Levanael are written one over the other.

MN10) 'Angels of Light'.

MN24) Corabiel is one of the angels of the first heaven who rules in the west and who may be invocated on Mondays according to Abano's tables (Agrippa, Opera, p. 580).

fol. 29b.

1-3) 'God saw that his work was good and he ceased from his labours. It was done' (see Genesis I, 31).

5-10) This is an expanded form of the liturgical blessing (see Queen Elizabeth's Prayer Book 1559, p. 105)

11) These Angels]
Sabathiel, Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, Corabiel and Levanael.

12) the Lightes of the .7. Circles]
The seven planets on their spheres. The angels assigned to the planets by Agrippa are those whose names are extracted at 24b,22-24 (Occ. Phil. III, xxiv, p.414), but he also gives them governance over the world (Occ. Phil. II, x, pp. 204-205). At 23a,11-12, Kelly was informed that the angels whose names were extracted at 24b,22-24, governed the earth and here a different septenary is being pronounced as governors of the planets, although there is a divergence from Agrippa.

14-16) Uriel is sometimes included as one of the Angels of the Presence

16) 'I have spoken'.

20-21) 'May the name of the Lord be blessed from this moment and continuously for ever and ever'.

fol. 30a.

The drawing of the seal has a diameter of 195mm (7.7 inches). The inner bands are 7mm wide and the inner pentacle has a thickness of 2.5mm (0.1 inches).

1-3) 'The Seal of God, called AEMETH or EMETH ['the truth'] of God'. There seems little point in the Hebrew being written twice since the vowel points are the same in both cases, although they are intended to represent the two possible versions of Aemeth and Emeth. The transliteration of the aleph becomes in this case purely a matter of preference.

fol. 31a.

1-6) 'The third book of mysteries. 28 April 1582. The third book. The fourth book'.

3-4) The third book also contains an Action of 29 April and an Action of 4 May (36a and 42a).

5-6) These lines are in Ashmole's hand and arise from the fact that he designates the title page of book four (44a) as beginning the fifth book and assumes that the fourth book begins with the Action of 4 May (see Commentary to 42a, 1).

fol. 32a

2) my Complayntes]

It is evident from lines 10-12 that Dee had been experiencing considerable difficulty in performing the tasks set for him by the angels, such as the construction of the lamine and the ring.

6) one Action, in one person]

The communication of the angels is directed towards one mind, that of Dee and Kelly together (see line 7).

9) This reference to slacknessand Dee's subsequent excuse caused Ashmole to believe that some papers were missing from the end of the second book (see Introduction p. 11).

13) A great hill of gold with serpents]

This vision lends itself to alchemical as well as religious interpretation. The hill may be symbolic of the Philosophers' Stone as well as just divine wisdom and while in religious symbolism the serpent is the devil, in alchemical symbolism it has the same significance as the dragon, representing 'matter in its imperfect unregenerate state' (Taylor, The Alchemists, p. 145). The vision would therefore represent the goal to which Dee aspires (wisdom or the Philosophers' Stone) beset by troubles (the serpents as evil) or by impurities (the serpents as unregenerate matter).

14) a mighty great water]

In alchemical symbolism the dragon or serpent has to be slain 'which means that the metals...have to be reduced to a non-metallic condition' (Taylor, The Alchemists, p. 145). This is achieved by boiling and distillation, various 'waters' being produced. The great water may, however, simply be a symbol for the destruction of the hill and serpents, thereby implying the transience of worldly things and ambition (see line 17).

19) The lamine is probably to be covered by red silk like the seal and the Holy Table (see 10a, 18-21).

19-23) The triangular sketch measures 26mm along the top and 29mm down the vertical side; it is intended to be isoceles but is not completely on the folio.

21) the Ring]

Presumably this is the ring bearing the name PELE (see 12a, 33) although line 23 does suggest some large circle of which no reference is extant in the manuscript.

23) It is inconceivable that the ring bearing the name PELE should be so large as to accommodate this kind of reduction, but it is not easy to see what else might be referred to here.

27) PELE]

See Commentary to 12a,46.

28) Venito Ese]

'Come Ese'. Ese is the third of the Daughters of Light.

29) Fire is an emblem of God's word (see Jeremiah XXIII, 29) and of the baptism of the Holy Ghost (see Matthew III, 11).

30) The 'thing' is a 'figure' which changes into the two Daughters of Light Ese and Iana (see line 37).

31-32) 'Praise the Lord in the heavens. Pray'.

34-35) 'Come hither Ese. Come hither Iana'. Iana is the fourth of the Daughters of Light.

36) 'He gave you a show in your tables'. Dee uses the word 'show' for visions or displays of tables by the angels and spirits and I take demonstratio to be its Latin equivalent.

38) lightened]
'shone'.

41) 'From these come created things and these are their names'. The first 'these' refers to the tables that are to follow and which will be known as the Tables of Creation.

44) 'Number one', the table at fol. 33a.

48) septem...2^{e}.]
'The seven Daughters of Goodness [see 26b,MN32], in book two above' (see 26b, 41-48).

MN19) /simpler/]
This word is not entirely legible and this is the nearest that I can come to making sense of it, unsatisfactory though it is. This might be paraphrased as 'no further details were given of the lamine'. Ashmole's transcript offers no solution as he has just copied the letters as best he could, ending with the same flourish or slip of the pen as the original. The first five letters are the most certain.

fol. 32b.

1) the first Shew]

This is a vision of part of the first table, given in its complete form on fol. 33a. For ease of reference to parts of these 'tables of creation' I shall adopt a system as if the constituent squares were lettered consecutively across the top and numbered consecutively down the completed table. Thus this 'first Shew' would be A1.

3) The second]

This second square is A2 of the completed table on fol. 33a.

in like wise]

Since there is no cross in this square, this must mean that it was likewise 'wyped oute' by the finger.

4) The third]

Square A3 in the table on fol. 33a.

5) This figure is to be found in square G2 of the first table. It is not clear why the squares between A3 and G2 receive no individual reference.

6) The two Crossed ones]

This probably refers to square H2 where two letters 'B' are separated by a cross, although it could be B2.

7) The next]

This refers to either all those between H2 and H3 (i.e.

all those in the third line down except for the last) or, if 'the two Crossed ones' referred to B2, to all those between C2 and H3. It seems most likely that the specific meaning of 'the next' is 'the next line of squares'.

8) This is square H3.

9) This line refers to square A4.

11) The square with is F4 in the table.

12) that he let stand]
This square was not blotted out.

13) Five]
Presumably five of the Daughters of Light.
burnt]
Either 'destroyed' or 'made appear with fire'.
The diagram is G4 and H4 in the table.

14) This diagram occupies the squares A5, B5 and C5 in the table.

16) The places are very black]
The letters seem to be of a bright colour or gold (see line 5) against a black background, although Ashmole's description of the Holy Table gives the lines of the tables as blue and the letters, numbers and diagrams as red (see Introduction p.137).

17) Finis Tenebrarū]

'The end of darkness', an accompanying phrase suitable to a 'table of creation'.

18) the little woman]

The Daughter of Light who has presented the table (32a,38).

the clowde]

The 'myst' which appeared at 32a,40.

19) mery]

'merry'.

20) comprehended]

This word not only bears the meaning of 'understood' but also of 'included' and 'contained'. In the creative process the first table represents 'the end of darkness' and there seems to be a reference to John I, 5: 'And the light shineth in darkness: and the darkness comprehendeth it not'. See also Genesis I, 4, in which light is divided from darkness.

22) .6. other Tables]

These are shown on fols 33a, 33b, 35a and 35b.

28-29) 'A good beginning in his name and it is', or 'and the beginning is good in his name' if the 'et' is misplaced.

32) 'Come daughters of the Daughters of Light, Ese'. Either Ese or Iana showed the first table. After this summoning six of the second generation Daughters of Light appear.

Ese is one of the first generation daughters, however, and it is strange that her name should be called here.

33) Dee's marginal note to this line indicates that he failed to hear or transcribe something here in his original notes.

34) white apparell]
The second generation Daughters of Light were clothed in 'white silk robes' at their first appearance (27b,3).

38) This figure represents the Trinity, showing three proceeding from one (three words 'vnus' from one 'V') and one contained in three ('vnus' meaning 'one'). The letter 'V' also contributes to this meaning since the Hebrew Vau has a numerical equivalent of 6, which represents unity, the binary and the ternary (1 + 2 + 3). See Commentary to 18b,12 and Reuchlin, De verbo mirifico, sigs e4v-e6r.

39) It is not clear which of the second generation daughters this is.

40) a ball of light]
This must represent Light, created on the first day of God's great work. Much of the symbolism accompanying the showing of the ensuing Tables of Creation may have an alchemical significance and in this field the ball of light would represent fire and divine wisdom (for a comparison of the six days of the Creation and alchemical processes, see Introduction pp. 135-136).

42) Dies primus]

'The first day'.

43) Vbi est Tabula?]

'Where is the table?'

44) Est]

'It is'.

47) Three faces]

Another symbol of the Trinity.

ouer]

'At the top'.

49) three cullours]

The emphasis is again upon a trinitarian state. The mixture of red and white may symbolise the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and Son, white representing purity and red representing martyrdom. There may also be an unspecified connection with the red and white stones of the alchemical process.

MN32) 'The daughters of the daughters, Ese, see book two above'.

See 26b,41-48 and 27b,13-19.

fol. 33a.

1) Numerus Primus]
'Number one', in Ashmole's hand. This table measures four inches square and was to be placed at the top of the Holy Table (see Introduction p.134). The significance of the letters and figures remains obscure, if indeed there is any real significance. The frequency of the letter 'B' probably relates to the 49 spirits whose names all begin with that letter (see the table at 40a).

The first square (A1) of the table bears a resemblance to square B4 in the table at fol. 35a, the numbers being half those in the later table and the positions of the letters and numbers being reversed (see Commentary to fol. 35a).

The figure in square F4 of this table is similar to the last line of the table at 24b which ends M G ✝, the letters beginning the names of Michael and Gabriel (see 24b, 28).

3) This second table has a diameter of 3¾ inches and was to be placed in the upper right corner of the pentagram in the Holy Table.

The three interlocked circles in the top left corner of the square represent the eternal state of the Trinity (see 34a, 14). The same may also be represented by the numbers 1, 2 and 3, and by the circle containing those numbers. The letter 'A' probably stands for alpha (see 34, 16) and the 'LV' may somehow refer to ending (see 34a, 16), if only through the last and innermost name in the Sigillum Dei, Lavanael. Alternatively the letters may represent Annael and Uriel, reading 'LV' from right to left in Hebrew fashion.

J. E. Cirlot attributes to the square within a circle the significance of the 'quaternary in the universe: the material principle within totality' (Dictionary of Symbols, p. 119) and to the inverted triangle the significance of the 'ternary—involutive' (p. 117). The design is appropriate to a Table of Creation as the material (the quaternary) and the spiritual (the ternary, whose involution may be equated with Agrippa's definition of the soul as self-moving) are seen contained within the universe.

6-7) In the Action of 29 April 1583 the spirit Il declares that 'the 7 Tables of Creation...apperteyn to the 7 kings and Princis' (96b, 1-2) and that the '7 Characters...are propre to euery king and Prince according to theyr order' (96b, 7-10). The kings and princes referred to are the 49 spirits listed on fol. 40a.

8) Conciliation]

A bringing together into harmony, presumably of man and God and his angels. The tables are defined as such instruments at 96b, 6-7.

9) wher my Character is fashioned]

The character given to Dee at fol. 9b is declared as false at 96b, 23. No new one is fashioned but he is informed that the Table of Dignification (97a) contains his character △ in every corner (102a, 42).

fol. 33b.

Each table measures 4 inches square. I cannot reach any remotely satisfactory conclusions about any interpretation of these tables, except to point out two possible references to alpha and omega: firstly the A——O in square B2 of the first table, and secondly , the opposite of the shown at 18b, 25 (see Commentary), in square B1 of the lower table.

fol. 34a.

1) a strong sownding]

'a loud noise'.

3) a sterre]

The centre of the second table contains a three pointed figure like a small star.

6) O honor...eris]

'O honour, praise and glory be to you who are and will be'.

8) seuen priks]

There are six points, above the ' 1', the '2' and the '3', below the and , and beside the '7' in the second table. The seventh is either that making the circle on the left into the astrological figure of the sun (⊙) or in the centre of the three pointed star, although the latter is probably just a point left by the compasses in the drawing of the circle. These 'priks' are not related to those which indicated letters from numbers in the outer circle of the Sigillum Dei.

14-16) Vnus...Origo]

'He is one, he is three; he is in each angle and comprehends all things. He was, is and shall be to you. He is the end and the beginning'. 'Vobiscum' would perhaps make more sense than 'vobis' ('and shall be with you'). The three interlocking circles in the table represent the unitarian and trinitarian states and the 'A' probably represents alpha, the beginning. How the 'LV' or anything else in the table might represent 'the end' is not clear (see Commentary to 33a, 3).

17) 'I was: I am what I was not', reading 'fui' for the second 'sum' (see MN17).

18) 'There was not light and now there is'. See Genesis I, 3.

21-22) This signifies chaos and the turmoil of the waters over which the spirit of God moved (Genesis I, 2) before separating the light from the darkness and on the second day creating the firmament.

27) a woman]
Another of the second generation Daughters of Light, the second of these to appear.
a ball like glass]
At 32b, 40, a 'ball of light' was shown. The creation of the sun and moon is not noted until 34b, 21, however, and so perhaps these two balls are not meant to signify those planets. In the order of the Creation the second day saw the division of the waters above and below the firmament of heaven, which is essentially the creation of a universe into which the earth is to be placed. The limits of the universe may be symbolised by the 'great white Globe' at line 32 (see 34b, 20-24), in which case the 'ball like glass' may be the firmament. If the symbolism is alchemical, the ball and globe probably represent vessels in which matter is to be heated and distilled. Alchemical vessels took a variety of shapes, but the essential parts were a furnace or heat-source, a receptacle for the boiling liquid, a condenser, and a receptacle for the product. Sometimes the condenser and the first receptacle were all of one piece (for sketches of equipment see Taylor, The Alchemists, pp. 38-43, 48 and 140). The evidence for such an interpretation is slender, however, being merely the vision at line 36.

32) a Table]

The third table first shown at fol. 33b.

35) Ecce signū Incomprehensibilitatis]

'Behold the sign (or seal) of incomprehensibility'. The last word may rather mean 'that which is not able to be co prehended by man'.

36) The division of the waters occurred on the second day of the Creation. The vision also seems to represent distillation.

37) The erasure occurs because the words should precede rather than follow a vision; hence the flourish before the repetition.

39) See 32b, 44.

40) This is the third of the second generation Daughters of Light.

41) a little rownd ball]

This becomes the earth (line 42). The earth is created on the third day and the land separated from the waters (Genesis I, 9-10). In alchemy the third stage is separation which is repeated until 'Erth remaym benethe' (see Wayne Shumaker, The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance (Los Angeles & London 1972), p.171).

44) Fiat]

'Let it be done', a word frequently attributed to God in the Creation.

45) This is the fourth table, the lower one on fol. 33b.

47) 'Write. It is the truth'.

48-50) In Genesis man is not created until the sixth day and woman not until after the seventh day. In alchemical symbolism, however, the marriage of male and female is very common. Sometimes these are gold and silver, sometimes mercury and sulphur (Taylor, The Alchemists p. 148; Shumaker, Occult Sciences, p. 172). This marriage occurs during the fourth stage of the process, 'conjunction', after the 'earth' has been obtained by separation. The splitting of the woman into male and female seems to represent this marriage in reverse.

fol. 34b.

2) Venito Vasedg]

'Come Vasedg'. There is no such name amongst any of the spirits of light. 'Vasedg' looks like a word in the Enochian language, but if so, it is one whose meaning has not been left to us. The next woman to appear is the fourth of the six second generation Daughters of Light who first appeared to show the tables at 32b, 32-34, and is therefore either Ekiei or Madimi. 'Vasedg' seems to bear no relation to either of these names.

4) 'The life of these is from my hand'.

6) a rownd]
'a circle'.

7) O Lux Deus $\overline{\text{nr}}$]
'O light, our God' or more probably 'O our light is God'.

8) Hamuthz Gethog]
'Gethog' is one of the names derived from the outer circle of the Sigillum Dei (see 22a, 39). 'Hamuthz' again seems to be an Enochian word of whose meaning there is no record; it may however be a compound word partly derived from the Enochian 'ham', 'creature'.

7-10) The circle of the figure has a diameter of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches and the inner square has sides measuring 1 inch.

9) This woman is the fifth of the second generation Daughters of Light to appear.

13) two vnaequall partes]
The creation of the sun and moon (see MN21).

13-14) 'The other part' is made into the stars. The creation of the sun, moon and stars took place on the sixth day according to Genesis.

16) the other woman]

The woman who appeared at 34b, 3, who is to show the sixth table (the lower on 35a). The woman who steps in front of her is to show the fifth table (the first on 35a).

18) Lumina...tuae]

'These are the lights of your understanding'.

19) Fere...numerus]

'This number is scarcely to be believed by anyone'. Presumably this means the number of the stars (see lines 21-22).

25) The cross measures 43mm. It indicates a return to the sequence of events which began this folio, the showing of the sixth table.

28) The birds were created on the fifth day according to Genesis. In the fifth stage of the alchemical process, putrefaction, the matter turns to a liquid pitch. This is frequently symbolised by a corpse, and according to biblical imagery man is but dust or clay and shall return to that state. The 'corpse' loses vapours but will be revived by 'celestial virtue', this process being symbolised by ascending and descending birds (Taylor, The Alchemists, p. 149).

29) the bosse]

The centre of the table.

31) fatch]

'fetch'.

32) 'They are multiplied for your use'.

fol. 35a.

The first table measures 4 inches square and the second has a diameter of 4 inches with an inner square of 3·8 inches. Square B4 in the first table on this folio is probably related to square A1 in the very first Table of Creation shown (see Commentary to 33a) and is also to be found written at the right hand side of a table from which divine names of 91 parts of the earth are obtained in tabula bonorum angelorum (Sloane MS 3191 fol. 54a). This table of divine names was revealed to Kelly on 25 June 1584 at Cracow and expounded in later Actions but the precise significance of $\frac{6}{4}\frac{6}{5}$, which is crossreferred back to this fifth Table of Creation, is never made clear (see TFR, pp. 172-173). The table in tabula bonorum angelorum also has at the top left corner the figure $\overset{''''}{T}$ (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 53a), which Dee here relates in the marginal note to the $\overset{4}{\mathfrak{C}}$ of the Sigillum Dei (see Commentary to 18a, 7). The marginal note cannot have been written before the Action of 25 June 1584. The erased drawing of a table is a repetition of square B1 of the second table on this folio.

fol. 35b.

The table is 3.3 inches square and the circle has a diameter of 0.9 inches. The significance of the letters and numbers remains obscure.

fol. 36a.

2) 'All rejoice at the end'. The last of the Tables of Creation is to be shown.

3) a woman]

The sixth second generation Daughter of Light to appear.

4) h rbes, and plants]

In Genesis the trees and plants were created on the third day, but the creation of Eden is not assigned to any specific day (see Genesis II, 8). See also Commentary to line 10.

6) 'It is the work', or perhaps 'the work is'.

7) This table is the seventh, that on fol. 35b.

7) one, all in white]

The seventh second generation Daughter of Light perhaps, since they first appeared clothed in white (27b,3).

10) A tree is a symbol of the whole alchemical process since it 'grows out of the earth, the mineral, and bears fruit, which is spiritual, having the power to become wine, which yields a spirit' (Taylor, The Alchemists, p. 150). If this interpretation is followed, the darkness which is cast up into the globe (line 9) may be seen as representing the mystery at the heart of the matter.

13) 'He will overshadow your footsteps with the light of truth'.

14) The Actor]

i.e. he who does, in the sense of 'creator and architect of the universe'.

15) Disposer]

God is here seen as creator of order, who looks after the needs of the world (see 'disposition' at 7a, 23).

16-17) Create you new vessels]

This is not a biblical quotation, although man is frequently likened to a vessel in the Bible (e.g. Psalm II, 9; Acts IX, 15).

18) out of the stone]

The sword appears to come out of the stone, but unlike other later visions there is no certainty that the vision is indeed outside the stone. The phrase 'in manner' declares that this is only what appears to happen.

21) the yard square Table]

The Holy Table.

21) the Wax]

The 'clean purified wax' for the Sigillum Dei. See 10a, 6.

22) the Character]

Thelamine (see 9b, 1 amd Commentary to 32a, 19).

ar motioned]

'are moved or commanded' ('ar' for 'art').

23) Gloria...amen]

The initials stand for 'gloria patri et filio et spiritui sancto, sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper, et in saecula saeculorum' (see 8b, 18-19).

27) the Tables following]

Those on fols 37b, 38a and 41a (see 39a, 26-28).

31-32) 'And he placed them in his ministry. What do you lack?'

33-34) 'The wisdom and knowledge necessary for us to be able to serve God to his glory'.

35) 'To have wisdom is a gift from God. To have knowledge comes from the Creation and created things'.

36) 'Come Daughters' [of Light].

43) ꝑforme]

'perform'. Concerning the keeping of this vow, see 39b, 40-47.

47) the lower world]

The spirits that govern the resources of the earth are now to be shown. These spirits may be used for practical benefits, being of the lower order and with due rites subject to man's command (see 36b, 1-2).

fol. 36b.

5) see 36a, 36.

6) these Tables]

These are shown on fols 37b-38a.

8) The Whole Gouernment]

The whole government of the lower world, not of the heavens.

) Powre, Strength, Mercy, and Justice]

These are signified by the in the Sigillum Dei and the T of the marginal note to fol. 35a, being 'the four powers of God princpial in earth'(TFR, p. 173, 'princpial' sic).

12) the first knowledge]

See 36a, 35, where wisdom is defined as coming from God alone whereas knowledge may be gained from studying God's creations. This 'first knowledge' is wisdom from divine revelation.

18) All the 7]

The seven Daughters of Light (see line 5 above).

24) a bright Circle]

This probably signifies God surrounding the macrocosm.

27) The outer circle has a diameter of 3 inches (75.5 mm) and the penultimate circle a diameter of 2.9 inches (73 mm). The inner circle is 2.6 inches (66 mm) in diameter and the centre cross measures 0.7 inches (18 mm) square on each arm.

f l. 37b-38a.

Part of this t ble i not extant. Even when the manuscript ca into Ashmole's nands th se folios had suffered, for in th l ft m rgin of his tr nscript he wrote: 'the spaces not filed vp were decaied and broken away in the Originall' (Slo ne MS 3677, fol. 57b). The table in Dee's MS has an inner i meter of 10.3 inches (260 mm) and an outer diameter of 11.1 inches (281 mm), although these measurements are not consistent at all points of the circles. Each arm is intend to be three inches square, although the sid s vary fr m 2.9 inche (73mm) to 3.3 inches (83 mm). I have noted in red those letters and numbers which ap ear in Ashmole's co y (3677, 57b-58a) but have since been destroyed in Dee's manuscript.

The Table provides the n mes of the 49 governors. Each name begins with the letter 'B' and the remaining letters are discovered by finding the appropriate letters in tables 2-7. Each letter of the first name is preceded by the nu eral 1, each letter of the second by the numeral 2, and so on up to 49, the order of letters being that of the tables 1-7.

It is possible to an extent to reconstruct the missing parts of the table, but since there is no rule for individual placings within each small square in tables 2-7, the correct positions of the missing letters in the original cannot be ascertained. The letters missing from the numbers in the second table are 'A' to go with 15 (Babalel), 'L' to go with 23 (Blisdon) and 'A' to go with 17 (Bazpama). The letter 'N' with no number was preceded by 36 (Bnapsen). '43R' is incorrect since the forty-third spirit is named Blumaza. A correction is made in the marginal note where '12R' (Branglo) is changed to '13R' (Brisfli) and '43R' to '30R' (Brorges). Allo ing '43R' to be a plain error, the missing letters a numbers are '13R' (Brisfli), '30R' (Brorges) and '41A' (Bartiro). If the marginal corrections ere made the mis in letters and numbers vould be '12R' (Branglo), '41A' still an '43L' (Blumaza). See also Commentary to 39a, 29.

In the third t ble there is also a number of partially filled sq ares th t can be rec nstructed. The 'A' should be '6A' (B amgal), '19A' (Bragiop) or '37A' (Bralges), although the l tt r may be discounted since '7A' should clearly be '37A'. The '8' is part of '38R' (Bormila) and the 'V' should be '5V' (Blvmaza). The other missing letters and numbers are '4S' (Besgeme)? '44G' (Bagenol) and '48R' (Barfort). '35R' is incorrect and should be '35L' (Baldago).

The right hand marginal note to the fourth table seems superfluous since '1I' is already in the table. The erasures on the bottom line are a result of Dee's having originally omitted to write in '340'. The remaining tables are all correct if the co ections in the seventh are observed.

fol. 39a.

1-20) In these lines each of the subdivisions of the table on fols 37b-38a is given a particular significance. The first table represents wisdom; the second, government; the third, nobility; the fourth, trade; the fifth, the quality of the earth and the seas; the sixth, aerial motions and the seventh, wisdom of a divine nature. For later corrections to this exposition and the relation of the seven tables to the seven kings and princes among the 49 spirits, see Introduction pp. 124-126.

7) The significance of the fourth table is extended to include the waters at line 49, the seas being the principal vehicle for England's trade.

12) Qualitie]
'Essential intrinsic nature'. The significance of the fifth table is reduced simply to that of earth at line 50 (see also MN12).

18) The wisdom of God is likened to fire in the Bible (e.g. Matthew III, 11).

21-22) the State of the whole earth is known]
Wisdom, government, nobility, the four elements and their associated users and inhabitants are represented in the tables.

23) Composed for euer]

'Created eternally'.

26-28) See 36a, 25-27.

29) These letters and numbers are the first two in the fourth row down of the second table. Evidently only six figures and letters were given at first, the last space being left vacant, although on correction the sixth number and letter were moved to the seventh place and the new letter and number (30N) were placed in the sixth space (see lines 34-41).

33) 'You may not see this without reason'.

34-41) The marginal note explains that Dee later d cided to insert this account here while making his notes into the fair copy that comprises this manuscript.

38) ∴]

The dots refer to the marginal note which explains the omission here.

41) 30.N]

This should be '36N' (Bnapsen). The 30th name is Brorges.

44) [her] his]

'Her' is written under 'his'. At 36a, 36 the showers of these tables were defined as the Daughters of Light.

46-52) The symbols of the books, crown, robes, water and animal, herbs, fan,and fire represent respectively wisdom, government, nobility and th four elements (see lines 1-20).

49) Aq̄]

Aqu , 'water'.

aial...coloru]

'A living four-footed animal of all colours' (animal quadrupes vivu omnium colorum).

50-52) T rra...Aer...Ignis]

'L rth...air...fire'.

fol. 39b.

1) 'Go forth in his name, who sent you here'. This is not a d'r ct biblic l quotation, but r calls Christ sending f rth th i cipl s to preach the word (Luke IX, 1-6).

3) Fontayn]

'Fountain'.

19-20) Th superscription by Ashmole is a result of 'teacheth' b ing lost in binding. The repetition of 'he teacheth' is probably deliberate.

21) the Excellency]

i.e. of the instruction.

26) perseth]

'pierces'.

30) vppon 7 equall numbers]

There are 7 tables containing an equall number of spaces, seven rows by seven.

34) The number '29' in its first occurrence is corrected to 49, since 'generall names ' embraces all the spirits. No reason is given why the first 29 should be more important than the rest, and it is a number that does not bear any traditional ignificance.

35) quantitie]

This refers to the number before each letter, since letters preceded by the same number are put together to make the names of the 49 spirits.

36) ithout addition]

By collecting together each letter preceded by the same number.

38) Amnol 's subscription is again caused by the tight binding. The name is Baligon.

39) the]

Kelly (see MN39).

43-44) Kelly must take himself to the world in that he must apply himself to worldly matters, but also forsake the world in that he must marry and cleave solely to his wife.

46) contrary to my vow and profession]

This suggests that Kelly, like Barnabas Saul before him, was a preacher, although there is no further evidence of his ordination.

50-51) 'To God in the highest [be] all honour, praise and glory for ever and ever'.

MN31) 'See the particular table of these forty-nine collected names on the following page' (40a).

fol. 40a.

1) 'Collect d table: containing the names of 49 good angels, by Dee'. See Introduction pp. 124-129.

fol. 41a.

1-2) 'A coordination of the 49 good angels thus set out by John Dee'.

The table has a total diameter of 7.7 inches (197mm) and each ring is 0.2 inches (4mm) wide. The 49 angels are divided into groups of seven and each group is allotted a planetary sign. These are from the top: venus, the sun, mars, jupiter, mercury, saturn and the moon. The governing angels of these planets are traditionally Haniel (or Annael), Michael (or Raphael), Camael, Zedekiel (or Zadkiel), Raphael (or Michael), Zaphkiel and Gabriel. The corresponding metals are res ectively copper, gold, iron, tin, mercury, lead and silver (see 27a, 16-22). The numbers written on the outside of the circles refer to the angels in the order in which their names have been obtained, as does the inner circle of numbers from 1 to 49. Baligon is therefore the first in this order.

The dotted lines with 'iste est caeteris' ('and so on') indicate that the prince of each group (the second named) belongs to the king of the next group (the first named). Thus Bornogo is prince to Bobogel, Befafes is prince to Babalel, and so on round the circle (see Introduction pp. 124-126 and Sloane MS 3191, 46b-50a).

fol. 42a.

1) Liber < 4. >]

See Introduction pp.14-15 and Commentary to fol. 44a.

14) 7 Bundells]

See the seven baskets at 22a, 23.

faggots]

The term could be used for a bundle in a general sense (OED). They are wrapped in silk of various colours (line 33).

15) superaltare]

A portable consecrated stone for use on an unconsecrated altar or table (OED).

16) Senser]

'Censer'.

21) plightes]

'pleats'.

26-27) This man is Christ, the 'one eye, and somtyme Three' having trinitarian significance.

32) sweating]
See line 13.

35) The bundles contain specimens of all living creatures, as did the ark, although there seems to be no precise significance in this.

37) The 'little hill of flaming fyre' may represent a source of divine wisdom, particularly in relation to the significance attached to the vision of the two birds following.

38) taketh of]
'takes out'.
a little byrd]
The 7 baskets at 22a, 23, all contained birds of some sort.

39) hoouerth]
Sic for 'hovereth'.

41) to be open before]
'to have his garment open in front'.

42) spotted with blud]
This represents Christ's wounds.

49) The small bird undergoes a transformation, increasing in size and beauty through the blessing of Christ. This vision is to be interpreted in terms of what gifts God will bestow upon Dee and Kelly (43a).

51) 'Thus, thus, thus our God'.

52) Multiplicabit...sua]
'He will increase all things by his blessing' (see 34b, 32).

MN49) in sequentibus libris]

'In the following books'.

MN53) This symbol is a version of the chi-ro, a monogram for the name of Christ.

fol. 42b.

3-4) The birds represent Dee and Kelly who are joined together as one (see also 32a, 6-7).

5-6) See Commentary to 42a, 49.

10-11) There is no change in the quality or nature of the bird, only a change in its size. This could be taken to mean that the transformation that Dee and Kelly will undergo through and for Christ will not be any drastic change of state, such as to a spirit form, either through death or in a Faustian way.

12) a voyce]

The voice is like that of Michael (MN12).

15) I, AM]

This is the name by which God identified himself from out of the burning bush to Moses (Exodus III, 14) and is the Tetragrammaton (יהוה , 'he is') in the first person singular (אהיה). See Martin North, Exodus, a Commentary (London 1962), p. 43.

19) It is in vayne to stryve]

This does not mean that man's efforts are of no consequence, but rather that man's power is nothing in comparison with God's and that it is vain to strive against the will of God.

21) 'Progress and advance in virtue and truth to the honour and glory of God'.

22) our Cauillations]

'Our' should be 'your' (MN22).

24) i.e. what Dee has written here is the answer.

25) to the Infirmitie]

'To the infirm'. The noun is used generatively in the sense of those who may be classed under the condition of infirmity.

31) The taking of the stars and giving of them to the other bird who replaces them signifies celestial knowledge passing through Dee and Kelly.

35-37) Dee and Kelly are to purify the world through their celestial knowledge.

38-43) braue]

'finely dressed' (see 20a, 12-15). Dee and Kelly are to overcome the corrupt rulers and overthrow them, but the pure and needy will not suffer.

41) Seely]

'Spiritually blessed, deserving of pity, poor' (OED).

45-46) I cannot satisfactorily interpret this vision of four resurrected kings except as the four cardinal virtues (justice, fortitude, prudence and temperance) or the four principal powers of God that Dee recorded at 36b, 9.

fol. 43a.

1) qui< ck>]

'alive'.

2) in good liking]

'friendly'.

3) If the four resurrected kings represent the four virtues or the four principal powers of God, we see them here spreading through the world to the four 'corners' of the earth.

6) gryped]

'gripped'.

7) /caret/]

A word, perhaps 'other', appears to be missing before 'Fowle', but the margin is torn and the word is not extant. The rejection of the metals signifies the rejection of worldly wealth, although it may be a rejection of ordinary metals in the search for the Philosophers' Stone.

9) am old mans head]

If the stone at line 12 is the Philosophers' Stone, then the head signifies the storehouse of knowledge and wisdom that must be penetrated before the stone may be found.

11) im steede]

'instead'.

12) Tennez ball]

'tennis ball'.

13) These colours all form part of the alchemical process. The white stone is produced from the black matter obtained during the process of 'putrefaction' and the red stone is obtained from the white. The corrosive acid used to dissolve gold was often symbolised by a green lion, green 'no doubt because of the color imparted to it by the copper compounds always present as impurity in the mixture of gold and silver' (Taylor, The Alchemists, p. 151). Whether such reference is intended by the vision is not clear.

16) The achievement of the Philosophers' Stone corresponded to the achievement of a high degree of wisdom and purity, alchemy being as much a spiritual quest as a physical science. The eating of the stone is similar to the eating of the name Na at 11b, 41-42.

19) The emphasis on gold signifies that the achieving of the Philosophers' Stone is accompanied by spiritual worthiness, gold being a symbol of purity and wisdom.

22) 26 Crownes of Gold]

The significance of this eludes me.

24) Sachels]

'Satchels'.

palmers bags]

Palmers were pilgrims who had made the journey to the Holy Land and as a sign thereof carried a palm leaf or branch. The term did become debased to mean any pilgrim, however. Palmers wandered through the country begging food and shelter, having adopted poverty as a way of life, and their entire possessions would be contained in a bag.

25-26) The gold signifying wisdom is to be sown in the world. The image of the seed is very powerful in alchemy, since 'the alchemist who melted up gold with silver and copper [need not have] necessarily regarded himself as in any way falsifying gold; for he probably believed that the gold acted as a seed which, nourished by the copper and silver, grew at their expense until the whole mass became gold' (Taylor, The Alchemists, pp. 34-35). This is also the essential principle of 'projection', the turning of base metals into gold through the Philosophers' Stone; the seed of gold in the base metal, all matter being different only in form, was encouraged to grow.

32) Open strong locks]

Do not turn back even if the way ahead appears to be barred.

38) See the two birds coupled at 42b, 3-4, and also 32a, 6-7.

39) By whome]

By the glorious man, Christ (see 42a, 26-27).

40) To achieve wisdom and/or the Philosophers' Stone.

41-43) The two small birds have been transformed into large beautiful birds and then into crowned men.

44) Secrecy is commanded.

45) This is spoken to Kelly (MN45) and presumably refers to his oath to perform what Michael commanded, that is to take a wife.

fol. 43b.

1) Ashmole's addition is written on a piece of paper attached to the folio as a repair.

8) $\underline{\overset{m}{y}}$.]

A contraction for 'them'.

9) May not a n o..]

In his transcript Ashmole writes 'May not an o.....' presumably for 'an other' (Sloane MS 3677, fol. 65b).

11) hoonest]

After binding the MS Ashmole could presumably only see the 'h' of this word. In his transcript he writes 'any honest...' since part of the sentence was missing, this presumably being the word 'man' (Sloane MS 3677, fol. 65b).

15-16) Benedictus...eius]

'Blessed is the Lord in his gifts and holy in all his works'. This is not a direct biblical reference.

fol. 44a.

2) 'The fourth book of mysteries', 'the third' being erased. Ashmole designates this as the fifth book (line 8), having decided that book four is that which contains the Action of 4 May 1582 (fols 42a-43b).

5) 'After the reconciliation with Kelly' (see Introduction pp.12-15).

6-7) 'Be merciful unto us, O God, and forgive us as we forgive'. See the Lord's Prayer, Matthew VI, 12 (Dimitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris).

fol. 45a.

Ashmole writes that 'the first leafe in the Originall is wanting which takes vp two leaves of my writing, & therefore I have left so much space for it' in his transcript (Sloane MS 3677, fol. 67a). See also Commentary to 46a.

1) Hagonel]

Hagonel is the sixth of the second generation Sons of Light (see 27b, 47). Baligon, whose alternative name is Carmara, is the first of the 49 spirits listed on fols 40a and 41a. The identity of this Hagonel and the equation of Carmara with Baligon are however a little confused for in Sloane MS 3191 (De heptarchia mystica, ch. 7) King Carmara and Prince Hagonel are to be invoked on Monday (fol. 47a) while King Baligon is to be invoked on Friday (fol. 49b). Carmara governs the understanding of all sciences while Baligon governs all aerial actions and particularly Dee's show-stone later given by the angels (see 59b, 33-46). Hagonel governs the first and second g neration Sons of Light (see lines 6-7 and Sloane MS 31 1, 47a) and all the operations of the earth, and is clearly th refore not the same as that Hagonel who is the sixth of th second generation Sons of Light. The issue is partially resolved at 45b, 23-26.

4-5) Evidently there are 6 spirits standing beside Carmara who is facing Hagonel, but Hagonel is one of their number, thus forming 'the 7'.

5-9) The drawing stands 40 mm high and the spear or flagstaff is 3 mm wide at the base. The flag measures 14 mm high and 17mm across. The flag to the right measures the same across and is 12mm high.

6-7) 'Your power reigns in the sons [of light]. Behold the sign of [your] works'.

6-7) The inverted 'C' and 'B' in the flag stand for Carmara and Baligon.

8) euersed]
'upside down'.

9) aversed]
'back to front'.

10) The woman is depicted on the flag at 47a, 12.

12) the armes of England]
From the time of Richard I to Edward III the arms of England were gule three lions passant guardant in pale gold. Edward III quartered the arms of France in token of his claim to the French throne. Thus the arms showed two quarters with the gold lions on red, and two quarters with the gold fleur-de-lis on blue, and these remained the royal arms until the end of Elizabeth I's reign (see Boutell's Heraldry, edited by C.W. Scott-Giles and J.P. Brooke Little, revised edition (London and New York 1966) pp. 20-21 and Plate V). These arms are roughly represented in the right hand flag at lines 6-7.

The confusion at the end of this line of text results from Dee having originally written 'old' above 'semed', using a double stroke to indicate that they belonged to the same line of text. Ashmole then erased 'semed' and wrote 'seemed old' above the line after binding the manuscript.

13) Adhuc...est]

'There are yet two, and it is not time'. Hagonel ('the man') means that there are two more parts of the work to be delivered (see 49a, 18) which are the Second Book of Creation and the appendix to that book (see 46a, 19-25).

14) avaunced]

'advanced'.

18) The Sonnes of men]

The Sons of Light and their sons are being referred to here, since in De heptarchia mystica Dee follows a transcript of line 18 and part of line 19 with a table of the names of the two generations of the Sons of Light, and further writes the word 'light' above 'men' (Sloane MS 3191, 40a).

21) My tyme is yet to come]

The line which joins this sentence to the vision at line 43 indicates that the time to come concerns an era of wisdom under the aegis of philosophers (see also the line connecting line 6 with MN42).

22) the first of the twelve]

This definition is not explained later and the key may be in the missing folio. The reference is not to the apostles.

24) The symbol of the seal Barees is the astrological sign of the sun and the alchemical symbol of gold.

26) onely Kings]

individual kings.

30) The kings who carry the evenly balanced scales represent the just rulers of the earth.

cownterpeysed]

'counterpoised'.

31) hong]

'hung'.

The kings carrying the uneven balances represent the unjust rulers.

33) sowre and hevy cowntynance]

'sour and heavy countenance'.

37) Vera...Impuria]

'True...impure'. According to the dots there are 21 in each company.

41) 'The true are with those that are true, and the impure with those that are impure'.

42) Princes of Nature]

Those that follow are like scholars, being dressed in black gowns and carrying books and measuring sticks. They are 'princes of Nature' in that they hold and enquire after the secrets of Nature.

48) Lucem]

'Light'.

49) Mundi tenebras]

'The darkness of the world'. The two companies of scholars represent those who have received divine revelation and have achieved understanding of God's creation,and those who have not and remain in intellectual and spiritual darkness.

MN18) 'The Sons [of Light] and the Sons of the Sons [of Light], in book 2 above' (see 27a, 26-33, and 27b, 37-28a, 2).

MN44) Geometrae]

'Geometers, land-measurers'.

Note at the foot of the page) See Introduction pp. 124-126, fol. 46a, 1-8, and Sloane MS 3191, 46b and 47b.

fol. 45b.

1) After 'Lucem' there is a repair to the folio by Ashmole, but whatever was written upon it is no longer legible, In his transcript Ashmole puts a marginal note of Hagonel (see MN1) and line 2 is clearly spoken by this spirit.

4) 'I am the first and fourth Hagonel' (see Commentary to line 24).

5) Pri: Quar,]
for Primus et Quartus.

7) The first]
The kings at 45a, 26.

8) tell the priks of the last]
The figure is presumably a number 8, but in order to comprehend the reference I suspect the missing folio at the beginning of this Action would be required.

9) science]
'knowledge'.

12)]
This sign represents Carmara.

13) I am his Minister]
The marginal note explains that 'minister' should read 'prince'. Hagonel is speaking here. In Sloane MS 3191 Carmara is the king whose prince is Hagonel and they are to be invoked on Mondays. The note in the right hand margin states that Carmara is the king to be invoked 'in generall', although more particularly the king is Blumaza, whose office is undefined but related to Mondays (Sloane MS 3191, 47a-47b; see also Sloane MS 3188, 46a, 1-8).

14) ue augme...]

Part of 'haue augmented', but the rest is missing. In De heptarchia mystica we find 'augmented' but Dee has underlined it with points and written 'subiected' over it (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 33a).

16) Despite Hagonel's stating that he will show Dee what these weapons are, they are not in fact clarified.

18) The three, of eche side]

There were six spirits accompanying Hagonel at 45a, 4.

24-25) There are evidently three other Hagonels, governed by this Hagonel who is placed before the other three because he rules them, but is also additional to the other three. He is therefore the first and fourth Hagonel.

34) The second assembly consisted of nobles (45a, 35).

37) The third assembly consisted of scholars or philosophers (45a, 42-43).

39-40) vbi...est]

'Where there is not glory, neither is there goodness nor any good thing'. The glory is presumably of God.

41) seuen of the seuen]

The seven second generation sons of the seven Sons of Light (see MN42).

44) E.[T]K.]

A 'T' is written under the 'K' of 'E.K.' Dee was more used to writing 'E.T.' for Edward Talbot.

45-47) Vox...Mundi]

'A voice which it is not fit for men to hear; but they with their sons have praised God. Blessed is he who is the only begotten son and the glory of the world' (see John I, 14).

48) The black cloth signifies that the Action is ended.

MN3) Hagonel is standing forth from Carmara and the six other spirits and evidently his appearance has been described to an extent in the missing folio. According to 48a, 29, Hagonel is wearing a coat shorter than that of his fellows.

MN12) 'Hadonel' is an error for 'Hagonel'.

MN25) ali]

'aliter', otherwise.

MN42) See 27b, 37-28a, 2.

great Circle following]

This is a table which Dee received from Kelly (see 49a, 19) but there is no copy extant, although Dee must have intended to keep it with the Actions.

fol. 46a.

This is in Ashmole's hand and is written on a piece of paper measuring 252mm across and 77mm high which is bound into the MS. The writing is in two columns, the right-hand column beginning at line 12.

1-8) Ashmole conjectures from the note at the bottom of 45a that the functions of Blumaza and Bobogel were described in the missing folio at the beginning of this book. Bobogel is the king to be invoked on sundays and governs wisdom; his prince Bornogo governs the knowledge of metals (Sloane MS 3191, 46b). Blumaza is the particular king to be invoked on mondays (as opposed to the general king Carmara), but no description follows his name in Sloane MS 3191 (fol. 47b). Blumaza's prince is Bralges,who governs invisible subjects.

4) 5: May 1583]

See 102a, 27-32 and 103a, 1-2.

9)]

This diagram probably represents Carmara's 'triple crown' (see note at foot of fol. 45b).

10) apps from sev all]

'appears from several'.

11) fol. 2.a. & b.]

Fols 45a and 45b were foliated by Dee as '2'.

12-15) 'Note, as Michael and Vriel, at the begynning of these revealed mysteries, were present, and gaue Authority to Carmara to order the whole Heptarchicall Reuelation; so, at the Conclusion, they appeared agayn and Raphael with them; and Michael concluded the second boke of this particular Reuelation Heptarchicall, with these words following [m rginal note: Michael. Noūeb. 19.] Merciful is our God, and Glorious is his name'(Sloane MS 3191, 33a). See 57b, 11.

13) p͛sent]
'present'.

15) Revelacoū]
'Revelation'.

17-18) This book is designated the fourth book (44a), although Ashmole gives it the title of the fifth book due to the heading of 'Liber 4' on fol. 42a. In De heptarchia mystica it is called the second book as it forms the second chapter of that work, though in a condensed form.

19-25) The Action of 16 November 1582 (47a-48b) is the first book of the Book of Creation (see 48b LH marginal note and 54b, MN8). The Action of 15 November (45a-47b) may also be included under this title. In De heptarchia mystica (Sloane MS 3191, 33a) Dee writes: 'lib^{o} Creationis 1^{o}. Principes loquebātur magnalia Dei: in secundo, Reges maxime hoc faciunt' (in the first Book of Creation the princes spoke of the mercies of God: in the second, the kings performed this).

19) m☽ginall]

'marginal'.

22-23) The note concerning the appearance of Michael, Uriel and Raphael has a marginal note in De heptarchia mystica of November 19 (see Commentary to lines 12-15 above). The appearance in fact took place in the Action of 20 November, which begins at 55a (see 57b, 11).

25) See Sloane MS 3191, fol. 33a.

fol. 46b.

This is written and signed by Frederic Madden (see Introduction pp. 3-7).

fol. 47a.

The text continues from 45b.

4) 'Praise and honour be to immortal and almighty God, now and always'.

MN2) The marginal note has been largely destroyed and was so when Ashmole bound the MS. Those parts in pointed brackets are taken from Sloane MS 3677, but the rest is still in Ashmole's hand.

6) Die ♀]

♀ is the astrological sign of venus and also the sign for Friday.

7) He with the triple Crown]

Carmara.

8) the rod]

Evidently in the missing folio Carmara was holding a rod of office, consisting of three parts diversely coloured, two parts being black and one being red (see 58a, 12).

10) Ille...Venite]

'For he is God. Come'. It is uncertain whether the 7 figures here are the same as those at 45a, 4.

12) This is the same flag as that at 45a, 6, except that now the picture of the woman (45a, 10) is also shown.

16) two to come]

See 45a, 13.

20-21) Heptagonum stellare]

'The star-shaped heptagon'.

Copper]

This is the metal appropriate to venus and fridays (see MN20)

21-25) The heptagon has a radius to each outer angle of 18mm. The three sets of numbers follow the same order as those on the table at 41a (see Commentary to 41a).

21) The first Holder]

Hagonel, whose seal is in the first angle of the heptagon.

21) Ille nosti]

'You have got to know him'. I assume that the nominative case of 'ille' is an error. Hagonel has already been introduced.

23) The second holder is Bornogo, who is the minister to Bobogel's government and is to be invoked on sundays. He has the power to perfect nature and possesses knowledge of all metals (see lines 25-28 below and Sloane MS 3191, fol. 46b).

24) doth reverence]

The pirit bows down.

26) my seale]

Bornogo's seal is shown in the heptagon on fol. 48b.

29) Actually]

Here the word carries a sense of 'actively'.

of the first of the twelue]

Hagonel calls himself 'the first of the twelve' (45a, 22) and Bornogo is defining himself as proceeding in some way from Hagonel.

30) Second of the Seuen]

Bornogo is the second of the 7 spirits holding the heptagon. All these spirits are princes (see 48b) and Bornogo is also the second of the first septenary in the table at 41a.

31) The folio is cut very close on the right hand, so there may once have been a drawing of the seal, although there is none in Ashmole's transcript. The seal is shown in the heptagon at 48b.

35) The third spirit is Befafes, who is also called Obelison and who governs the seas (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 48a). His king is Babalel who governs all to do with water and they are both to be invoked on tuesdays.

36) I drowned Pharao]

Befafes is claiming that it was through his agency that Mo es parted the Red Sea and then closed it again over Pharaoh and his host as they pursued the Israelites (Exodus XIV).

39) and it is .8.]

In the marginal note to this line Dee computes that if this means 'th tyme of Gods visitation' will occur in eight years' time, it will fall upon 16 November 1590. He reflects, however, that 88 years may be meant (i.e. 1670). See Introduction Chapter VI.

MN22) Bagenol is the prince of Friday. Although his office is not defined, his king Baligon governs all aerial actions. Since Carmara is also Baligon (45a, 1), Dee is attempting to equate Hagonel and Bagenol (see also 58b, MN44 and MN46).

fol. 47b.

2) enstruct]

'instruct'.

5) Christ walked upon the waters of Lake Galilee (Matthew XIV, 25 and Mark VI, 48).

5-6) sealed me w<ith>his name]

See 2 Corinthians I, 22, and Ephesians I, 13 & IV, 30.

6) Thow hast written me]

Befafes has not declared his name here, although Dee has written concerning him in the tables at 40a and 41a.

9) skur d]

'Scourged'. This probably refers to the Flood.

10) pr<int .....>]

Possibly this should be 'printed', referring obliquely to the rainbow as God's sign that the Flood would not happen again.

12) feathers]

These are strongly inappropriate to a prince of the seas, but M$_i$chael also appeared with feathers at 11a, 16.

15) See 45b, 48.

17) 'To God alone be all honour and glory'.

20) Carmara has his own chair, different to that of Michael.
one and the other]
This should read 'one on the other' (MN21).

22-23) Dee and Kelly are facing each other across the table on which the stone rests.

24) The fourth spirit is Butmono. He is here given government of the earth, but in Sloane MS 3191 he is given charge over the life of living creatures (fol. 49a), which office is given to Blisdon at 48a, 10 below. In Sloane MS 3191 Blis on is given government of the earth and his king is Bnaspol, while Butmono's king is Bynepor (Sloane MS 3191, 48b-49a). See however 48a, MN17 below. The order given in Sloane MS 3191 is the result of later changes (see 55b, 46-48 and 56b, 24 ff. below).

28) members]
'limbs'.
29) bis]
'twice', noting the repetition of 'all things'.
30) there]
Sic, for 'their'.

32-34) In Revelation John sees the bottomless pit and 'there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace' (IX, 2). The beast also arises from this pit (XI, 7), but is finally bound and cast back in as Sathan (XX, 3). There may be some play on Satan's name of Lucifer. Since Butmono here governs earth, the bottomless pit is part of his charge.

36-38) Dee's constant need was for money, He is promised access to buried treasure and later this search took a great part in the content of the Actions (see Introduction pp.157-60).

38) Wordling]

Sic, for 'worldling'.

45) It seems that most spirits of earth are bound there against their wills.

46) the myddest of my self]

See the marginal note to this line.

47) The seal is d scribed as having power to bend spirits of earth to Dee's will (48a, 1-2). Presumably the seal would have to be engraved upon a talisman.

fol. 48a.

vnlok]

1) 'Unlock hidden places or secrets' (see 43a, 32).

3) This is the first appearance to my knowledge of the names of any of the 49 spirits in any document.

4) Being a good spirit, Butmono finds it distasteful that he should have charge of the bones of the wicked, as well as the just.

8) This spirit is prince Blisdon, whose king is Bnaspol and who is to be invoked on Wednesday (Sloane MS 3191, 48b). Concerning his office see Commentary to 47b, 24.

9-10) See Commentary to 47b, 24.

11) The Image of One excepted]
Blisdon is here given power over all living creatures except man, who is in God's image.

17) Blisdon's seal is shown in the heptagon on fol. 48b.

20) my Violl]
The vial of oil (see MN21) appears to indicate an appointed span of time; presumably there is no connection with oil as prayer (see 10a, 30).

23) What Dee asked or spoke of here is not recorded.

27) The sixth spirit is Brorges, prince to king Bnapsen, and is to be invoked on Saturday. Bnapsen has the power to cast out wicked spirits, but the office of Brorges is not recorded in Sloane MS 3191 (50a). The fire that issues from Brorges is probably related to such an office of exorcism.

29) This refers to Hagonel (see 45b, MN3).

30) owgly, grisely]

'ugly, grisly'.

33-34) Noui Januam Mortis]

'I have known the gate of death'.

35-36) Et...Dixi]

'And the glory of God pierced the walls of the wicked. I have spoken'. This would be a suitable saying for a spirit that has power to cast out wicked spirits.

40) ey sight]

'eyesight'.

41) Mysteria...imprimite]

'Impress these mysteries on your minds (or souls)'.

MN10) 'In living prayers'. Each life is seen as a prayer to God, or as a prayer from Blisdon to God (see line 17).

MN17) See Commentary to 47b, 24.

MN18) 'The virtue of his office'.

MN37) Prince Bo=]

Sic for 'Prince Bro='.

fol. 48b.

1) all Blew]

This symbolises the office of the next spirit, described at line 8, blue representing the air and sky.

1) beholdeth]

'Holds on to', obsolete form (OED).

4) This last spirit is Bralges, who is the prince to K'ng Blumaza and is to be invoked on Monday, as are Carmara and Hagonel. Bralges governs invisible spirits and all powers that cannot be seen (see line 8 below and Sloane MS 3191, fol. 47b).

5-6) Dee and Kelly are on opposite sides of the table on which the stone is laced (see 47b, 22-23).

10) like little smokes]

These are or represent the invisible spirits under Bralges' power.

11) the seale]

Bralges' seal may be seen in the seventh angle of the heptagon on this folio.

12) the]

'thee'.

14) Blot out suspition of us]

It would se m from this command that Dee was not particularly happy with the offers of daemonic help. He may have expressed some private doubts to Kelly.

20) reseruing]

'Keeping from the knowledge of others', obsolete form (OED).

24) Highest to the Lowest]

The marginal note refers to the tabula collecta, indicating that 'from the highest to the lowest' may mean all of the 49 spirits.

29) 'Holy, holy, holy is the L$_o$rd our God' (see Isaiah VI, 3, and R velation IV, 8).

30-32) 'Blumaza is king over the kings of the earth and they are his first prince and his ministers, as I conjecture'. The kings of the earth act collectively as a prince to Blumaza's kingship. This probably refers to a comment in the missing folio.

33) The heptagon has a radius of 42mm to its outer points.

MN6) See 57a, 30-38.

MN7) 'Dominion' should read 'in the air'.

MN14) Exchue]

'Eschew'.

MN20) 'The secrets of God are not to be revealed to men'.

MNLH) 'Carmara calls this first part one book in the fifth page following, with this sign ' (see 51a, 33 & MN33).

fol. 49a.

2) The Cloth]

The black cloth drawn across the stone signifying the end of an Action.

4) The M n with the Crowne]

Carmara (see 47a,7). The identity of the figure is also signified by the crown over 'man' at line 6.

5) Diaph nitie]

Transparency.

8) like a seame]

The 'narrov path' at first looks like a line showing where two rt of the globe might be joined together.

9) superficies]

'surface area'.

9-10) The path goes from the lower point of the globe equivalent to th south rn hemisphere up to the topmost point, where on a gl be of the world the north pole would be.

11) The chair appears to be on the globe, about on eighth of the vhole height own from top or north polar region (see line 13).

12) eigth]

Sic, for 'eighth'.

14-15) Unless there was some specific reference in the missing first folio to this book, Carmara must mean the introduction of the seven princes who held the heptagon (the vision of the kings, nobles and philosophers was interpreted by Hagonel).

16-17) Nam...nr̄o]

'For he is one and indivisible. Glory, glory, glory be to our Creator' (nr̄o for 'nostro').

18) Two partes are yet to come]

See 45a, 13 and 47a, 16.

19) th rownd able]

See 45b, M142. The tabl is not extant.

21) 'Come, let us step by step repeat the works of God' (see lines 55-56).

22) Th first of th .7.]

Hagonel.

24) 'These are your lessons, which you do not yet understand' (see MN24).

26) 'God is one and our work is one' (nr̄m for 'nostrum').

28) 'We are ready to serve our God'.

30) In Sloane MS 3191 Prince Blisdon, who governs the earth (an office given to Butmono at 47b, 24), is said to govern 42 ministers (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 48b). In fact each prince here is accompanied by 42 spirits.

this order]

Seven rows of six, as shown between lines 32 and 35, but see 49b, 38.

33) The figure with the cape (the short coat) is 25mm high and represents Hagonel. In Sloane MS 3677 Ashmole wrote in a marginal note that 'Carmara, Crowned was placed on his head, but scraped out' (fol. 74a).

33-36) Et...sunt]

'And my name is my whole number, nor is there reproach in our number. Mos s named us. Just as the power of these men is, so is that of these women, and while their power is not one, yet they exist in unity'. The men and women are the Sons and Daughters of Light (see MN36).

37) Dee thinks the sentence should begin with 'tam' to form a comparison in conjunction with 'quam'.

39) Quatenus...vestrorū]

'How great is this vanity of yours?'

40-42) 'You knew [nosti for 'novisti'] these numbers to be in God, in the world and in the lesser world. In God, that is with us: in the lesser world is to say with you'.

43-49) 'Your mind is joined with knowledge [see 42b, 3-4, and 43a, 38]. It is sown in the presence of philosophers [Phōs for 'philosophos'], and that greatly, concerning Nature, which is not with you but with us and it is by our power. You will see God. You have seen our works, the works (I say) of his hands. We will be moved by the finger of God. He came from God. He was a man among men: for he is yet with them. And his power gives force, virtue and being not only to us, but to our works'. This speech recalls the unity ascribed to Dee and Kelly through the knowledge of God's secrets and proclaims the unity of all things that proceed from God.

50) Inhu ta... ua rit?]

'What is it that your unburied (incorporeal?) soul seeks?'

51) Ab ... st]

'By earth, by man; it is said by man'. This would seem to refer to man's creation from the dust of the earth (see in particular John III, 31 and I Corinthians XV, 47).

55-56) This note is joined by a line to line 21. Carmara is repeating the exposition of the spirits of the heptagon to some extent, although this time using the round table that Kelly had 'sent' to Dee (see 45b,MN42). The confusion is over the offices of the fourth and fifth princes (see Commentary to 47b, 24).

MN6) ā l]

'alias' or 'aliter'.

MN18) 'This...twice, on the right(?)...Two are yet to come an it is not time'.

MN29) See 3 a, 47-48 (the spirits holding cro ns and robes).

MN31) ē racing]

'embracing'.

MN 40-41 48) 'l u b rs'. 'Natur '. 'The po ver of God'.

fol. 49b.

1) to s d]

'Tr ted roughly, haken, teased' (OED).

2) skap d]

' sc '.

5 6 S e 3 a, 47- 8. The crowns signify wisdo , the three-qu rter crowns tcmporal rule, and th robes nobility.

7) ꝑfect]

'perfect'.

9-10) balls of gold]

These may signify orbs of state.

18) Our workmanship is all one]

See 49a, 26 and 36.

19) Each day is divided into periods of four hours related to the seven groups of six, or more properly six groups of seven (see lines 38-41 below).

19-20) Euery part occupyeth a part]

Each of the six groups is responsible for a four hour period (but see Co mentary to line 23 below).

21) with Kings]

This may r fer either those spirits who are kings or to temporal kings (see 51a, 18).

23) the first place]

The first roup at ine 32 below number seven and there is some confusion as to whether the table is composed by six groups of seven each showing a line which is to be read horizontally, or whether the first of the first group of six shows the first letter in that line, the first of the second group shows the second letter and so on, so that the letters delivered by each group of six are those which are read v rtically. If the latter is the case then responsibility for each four hour period of the day is divided among members of each group of six. This doubt as to how the table is composed means that 'the first place' could mean either the first line of letters read horizontally or the first line of letters read vertically, though from subsequent tables the former is more likely.

24) Depriuation]

'Change'. The second six are to be used when it is desired that something be removed or changed.

25) residue]

The remaining groups of six (or seven?).

30-31) and so of the second six]

Either the second six all showed their letters or this refers to the first of the second six.

31- 2) The source of these letters is explained at 59a, 10-20. Th error of OFSNGLL instead of OESNGLE was discovered when th source was explained and the correction was then s perscribed here.

3 -41) The dispo ition of the spirits could be seen as either sev n grou s of six or six groups of seven depending on wh ther the columns were arranged vertically or horizontally. An unmarked change has taken place however, as can be seen by comparing the rows of dots at 49a, 32-35, with the table of letters on this folio, and by 50b, 28, what was here called 'the first six' is being called 'the first 7'.

44) the ..... hand]

There is no indication as to whether this should be 'left' or 'right' hand.

50) See 49a, 26 and 36, and line 18 above.

52) The 'O' is the second letter of Bobogel.

53) 'Thow' is the catchword for the next folio. Bobogel is the first name of the second septenary in the table at 41a, which gives rise to Dee's question. The numbering of each sept nary on the inside of that table, whereby Bobogel belongs to the first septenary, may date from this time.

MN18) 'So he said on the previous page, our work is one' (see 4 a, 26).

MN40) 'In six and seven are all things' (see 54a, 32).

MN52) See the table at fols 37b-38a.

fol. 50a.

2) Th table at fols 37b-38a is to be compared with the missing table. Although Ashmole's diagram seems to represent the table at 41a, the latter table does not contain a man with a sword (see line 5 and MN9). The missing table must have resembled that at fol. 41a, however; indeed the latter may partly be a copy of the missing table.

3) for er Tables]

See 37b-38a, 40a and 41a.

4) that of 7 tymes 7]

The table at 41a with its seven septenaries.

the rownd Table]

The missing table 'sent' to Dee by Kelly (see MN5).

5) the point of his sword]

See Commentary to line 2 above.

6) the Bees]

The letters 'B'.

7) B.1. B.2. B.3. B.4. etc]

See the table at fols 37b-38a.

8-9) The names of the 49 spirits all begin with the letter 'B'.

10-17) Unfortunately this description of the missing table does not give enough information to provide a reconstruction. Lines 10-11 indicate a similarity with the table at 41a.

21) my instructions]

See 39b, 29-38, though the instructor there is Uriel.

MN17) In the table at 41a the name Bobogel is the eighth name and 'O' is the second letter of that name. In the missing table 'O' is evidently the ninth letter in a circle which also contains numbers.

MN22) See 45a, 1-3 and 19. Dee had received instruction but from Uriel (39b, 29-38).

27) ♄ is the astrological symbol of saturn and the sign for Saturday.

29-30) The confusion over who gave Dee instruction is now resolved by Carm ra pointing to the unity of God's angels and spirits (see lines 38-39).

37) The Strength of God]
This is to be understood literally and not as an appellation of the angel Michael.

45) See 8b, 14.

46) rayng]
'reign'.

47) euidēt]
'evi nt'.

MN32) There is no reference on fol. 45 to Carmara's rule being till the end of time, although Hagonel, his prince, states that his time is yet to come (45a, 21). There must have been a more exact reference in th missing folio at the beginning of this book.

fol. 50b.

1-2) See 49a, 30-32.

5) See 49b, 31-42.

7) The first]

Hago el who presented the 42 spirits.

8) Th 7 next him]

The pirits who spelt the name OESNGLE. They are responsible for God's ifts to those that rule according to God's laws (see lines 9-10 below and 49b, 20-23).

12-13)'It rei ı , it r igns, it reigns, Oh iniquity reigns on the f ce of the ı hole earth. The heart of man is filled ith vil nd v nitie '.

14) 'It oegin , f r t ir n w pover b gins, not witnout it being giv n to th , n r...'

15) Vid qua s]

'S e, I g ⌜you]'.

16) b tch]

'A swelling or boil' (OED). Corruption of the soul is represented by corruption of the body.

17) the residue]

The remaining 35 spirits of the 42. This slightly contradicts the definition given at 49b, 24-25.

19-20) The first seven spirits work in unity, but the remainder work individually.

23-24) See 49a, 29, although they were there numbered as six (see MN19).

29) AVZNILN constitutes the second seven.

30) There are 6 names under the subjection of Hagonel, each name containing 7 letters (49b, 31-42).

31) The seal of Hagonel, called Barees (45a, 23).

33) The seal stands for seven, which with the 42 makes a total of 49. It is not clear who this seven are.

36) See Commentary to lines 23-24 above.

40) wn re his fote stode]
The tables shown by the 42 spirits wherein a letter was displayed were mad 'vpppon the place of theyr standing' (49b, 28). The first was 'O'.

42-43) Prince Hagonel ('presupposed') with six names (49b, 31-42).

44) s̄ome]
'sum'.

49) they]
A manuscript error for 'theyr'.

MN11) 'Theyr new power begins'.

N47) Praxis]

'Action' (Greek).

fol. 51a.

1) or one of them]

One of the 42 may be used, since all 42 have in general the same office.

4) The prince referred to is temporal.

5-6) See 46a, 1-4 and 48b, 30-32. 'Yesterday' indicates that it is not Hagonel's government over kings that is being referred to since that information was delivered on the same day as this evening Action.

10) the Princis of Creation]

The princes in the table at 41a.

17) Dee is elevated in being chosen to receive such knowledge.

18) Philip II was King of Spain from 1556 to 1598. What Dee's purpose is remains unknown, but it is probably connected with geographical discovery. In 1580 Dee had obtained 'the royalties of discovery all to the North above the parallel of the 50th degree of latitude' and it was in the autumn of 1582 that plans for Adrian Gilbert and John Davis to make a voyage in search of a North-West Passage to Cathay (China) were being formulated by Dee , definite arrangements being made and Walsingham being informed in January 1583. Since the Pope had divided all the world's discoveries between Spain and Portugal, Philip II would undoubtedly figure in the early planning, both as a political obstacle (Dee presented to Elizabeth two parchment roles detailing her Titles to Foreign Lands on 3 October 1580) an as a possible ally. See E.G.R. Taylor, Tudor Geography, 1485-1583 (London 1930), Chapter 7, especially pp. 134-139.

20) Generall prince, Gouernor or Angel]

De at first takes this to be Baligon, the presiding king of the 49 spirits, but in the arginal note thinks it may rather be Annael, who is 'chief governor generall of this gr at perı d' (see 8b, 25).

23) my name]

Carmara or Baligon (see MN23).

24) him, vhich was shewed the yesterday]

Hagonel.

26) his six perfect Ministers]

OESNGLE, AVZNILN etc (49b, 31-42) or possibly the other princes who held the heptagon (see 48b).

30) those tables]

Those at 49b, 31-42. Dee is receiving instructions for ceremonial daemonic magic.

32) the first Character]

The seal called Barees (see 45a, 23). The marginal note still includes the cross with it (see 48b, marginal note RH of heptagon).

34) the Table]

The Holy Table.

36) the Ring]

The ring bearing the name PELE (see 12a, 34).

37) The lamin co prehends Dee's name by being in the form of th le t r lta.

38) as is affore sayd]

See 9b, 3.

45) these T bl s]

Th se at 41b, 31-42.

49-50) This is a note at the bottom of the page and not part of the ain text.

MN23) See 57a, 37.

MN33) See Commentary to line 32 above.

MN34) See fol. 10a.

MN38) The stone to be used for scrying in this particular c remony is not mentioned by Carmara here, but is brought by an angel at 59b, 17-46.

fol. 51b.

1) advancem^{t}:]

'advanc ment'.

2) The adv ncement of God's glory with Philip II is undoubtedly connected with the proposed expedition to find a North-West Passage and that Adrian Gilbert should use the voyage in part to spread the word of God to the heathen (see 65a, 35-37). In 15 1 Dee had written a great v lume in Latin on the prop gati n of the Christian faith among the infidels of Atlantis (De m do Evangelii Jesu Christi publicandi, propagandi, t biliendi inter Infideles Antlanticos). The work was in four books, the first address d to Elizabeth, the second to the Privy Council, the third to Philip II and the last to th Pope (CR, p. 26, item 17).

5-6) See 32a, 10-12, where Dee complained of lack of 'habilitie' to make the table, ring and lamine. It se ms that during Kelly's abs nce between May and November the work did not progr ss any furtl er.

7) wth s$\bar{y}$]

'with this'.

9) Chargis]

'Charges'. See Dee's customary form of 'princis' for 'princes'.

11-12) See Dee's earlier noting of the tripartite nature of so e of the angelic revelation at 48a, 18-19.

17) ıhe im g of God as a shield to the righteous is com on in th Bible (ee for instance Psalm XXXIII, 20 and Proverbs XXX, 5).

19-20) Kelly i here confirmed in his position as Dee's scryer and partn r in c l ti l knowledge.

21) th Prince]

Qu n lizabeth. D 's situation was made difficult by his l ck f m ney and t continual disappoint ı nts of not being p ointed t the livings he r quested (ee Introduction p. 26).

33- 4) 'Prai , honour, glory, virtue and rule to God in the highe t'.

39) This Action began at 7 pm (see 50a, 27).

41- 2) 'Come Bobogel, king and princ of nobility. Come with [your] ministers. C e (I ay), come fortified with your ·tellites'.

43) thumming]

A roaring noise. This is the first time that Dee confesses to being in any way affected by the appearance of a spiritual creature.

MN3) 'The great mercy of God conceded to Dee himself' (ipi for ipsi).

MN11) 'Observe these three things'.

fol. 52a.

1) heade]

'heed'.

2) Both thy ey and hand]

This suggests that Dee may actually see the 'contrarie powers', which he never does, although it may be understood as meaning just that he will see the effects of such evil spirits.

4) ioly]

'jolly'.

4-5) See the spirits at 20a, 12-16 and 42b, 38-40.

5) rapers]

'rapiers'.

6-7) rownd hose of veluet vpperstoks]

Bobogel is wearing trunk hose with canions. The canions were a tight-fitting extension of the trunk hose covering the thigh, separate nether-stocks being worn. The canions were often decorated with lace trimmings (see Iris Brooke, A History of English Costume (London 1937) p. 90. Her sketch of costume of 1585 (p. 85), which I have simulated below, is very close to the description of Bobogel's dress.)

9) put vnder his gyrdel]

Put under his belt for greater security.

pantofells]

A type of slipper. The word could be applied to every sort of undershoe and was in common use from c1570 to 1650/1660 (OED).

pynsons]

A thin shoe of somekind, of which there is no existing description. The word became obsolete after 1600 (OED). In Bobogel's case it seems that they are in addition to the pantofles, so they may be soft shoes worn inside pantofles which are for outdoor use.

11) ruffyn like]
'ruffian-like'.

18-19) 'Let us act according to the will of God. He, our Go , is truly noble and eternal'.

20) Once again 42 letters are to be delivered.

27) I cannot d uce any particular significance in the way each grou of pirits disappears.

53-56) The circl has a diameter of 49mm and an inner diameter of 43mm (2 inches and 1.8 inches). The origin of the letters is explain d at 59a, 21-25.

MN1) Cave]
'Beware'.

MN38) dictata]
'Instruction' or 'dictation': Dee's first notes to the Action of which this MS is a fair copy.

fol. 52b.

12) 'To God alone[be]all honour and glory!.

18) Ho is not here a speech-heading, but an identification of 'he'.

19) the standing furniture]

The chair and possibly the table and globe.

21) one]

Bobog 1 (see line 49 below).

26-31) The sketch is 47mm long and 10mm wide at its broadest point. There are 49 dots upon it, representing the 7 pipers and the company of 42.

28) bobbed]

'mocked, scoffed at, made a fool of' (OED).

30) table]

This is evidently that shown at 52a, 53-56 .

35) fardingales]

A hooped contraption to spread the skirt around the waist.

wemen]

'women'.

39-40) 'Just as the evil praise you, God, God, our God, so do the good'.

43) Dee received these letters at 52a, 20-26.

45) Bobogel is the eighth name in the table at fol. 41a.

46) The 'great Circle' is the missing table and must have provided the character for Bobogel which is recorded in Sloane MS 3191 as (fol. 41a). The reference to the heptagon ('the Table with 7 angles') is erased because it is an error, the heptagon showing the characters of the princes and not the kings.

47-48) See 48b.

49) Nomen eū est Bobogel]

'My name is B bogel'.

51-52) 'Bobogel —— king; Bornogo ——prince'. They are to be invoked on sundays (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 46b).

fol. 53a.

2) Prince]

Thi is used figuratively since he is a king.

4) Science]

'knowledge'.

7) frustrate]

'frustrated'.

9) praters]

'Talkers of idle and foolish things, boasters.' It is significant that th instru ents they play are ıind instrum nts.

10-12) These praters app ar to make the same sound (i.e. that of truth) ∧nich only Bobogel and some of his ministers can truly ke (see 52b, 39).

16) h t I sure]

'Wh t I nc ı ss nd rule', or else 'ıh t I weigh' in the n ⌣ th t there is no d ception in Bobogel.

17) Ordi atı nem... leu t]

'Rais tne order of infinite power'.

19) th th fi st l tter]

LEE f ⊔ ∧AR .

20) O...Deo]

'O unit in Nature nd in God'.

21-22) O...s]

'O e u lity f God and Natıre. Go in God, Nature from God an its lf'.

23-24) Conc tu ...Naturae]

'His h r y i ıith ut nuıo r. Yet ith us he is at one a d t sa tı tne fou tain and h ad of Nature'.

25) nd become, all One ∧an]

Se 19a, 19, another symbol of trinitarian unity.

25-29) This figure would seem once again to represent Christ (see the 'glorious man', 42a, 26 ff.), who as God made flesh unites earth and heaven.

30) Veritas...est]

'The truth which is sought is ours'.

32-34) A knowledge of organic and inorganic matter was essential in alchemy and it is perhaps significant in alchemical terms that one foot should seem to be of lead, this being the customary base metal on which the alchemists tried to project. The figure has a foot of lead and presumably a crown of gold (line 28) and his apparel is composed of both the organic and the inorganic. Alternatively (or perhaps in addition) the foot of lead may signify base wisdom (lead is the metal of Saturn) in contrast to the divine wisdom represented by fire at line 28.

34) Aposiopesis]

A rhetorical artifice in which the speaker comes to a sudden halt as if unable or unwilling to proceed.

The sketch to the left is 15mm high.

35) 'Blessed is he who [is?] the light of my head'. The 'etc' implies that the remainder of the sentence is well known but I can find no biblical parallel.

37) 'One in head, one in breast, one in the feet'. This must refer to the constitution of this one man from the three spirits.

38) stept out 9]

These are the other three ternaries, who with that of LEE, ake up the four ternaries at 54a, 17-20.

40) Jentlemā]

'Gentleman'.

2) not to l te]

Bo ogel paused, but not overlong, before repeating Dee's nam .

44) th fir t Ternarie]

This is the first ternary of the nine, but the second ov rall, representing the letters NAR of LEENARB.

46-48) 'We ıill. We can. What not?'

49) Faciamus...societate]

'Let us do what they have done, for w are three; we are Adam by society' i.e. they are en.

50-53) This ternary is rejected by Bobogel (see 54a, 18). Although they try to emulate the ternary LEE, they can in no ıay do so. Although the body of the compound man that they form see s like gold (53b, 1), there is no strength or substance in the figure.

MN34) The astrological symbol for saturn and the alchemical symbol of lead.

fol. 53b.

5) BLN]

The 'B' of LEENARB and the 'LN' of LNANAEB (52a, 30-31).

6-8)'From him. Throu h him. With him'.

9 &12) Qui...Vanum]

'Whoever is without these three...will work in the church f God in vain'.

lea<ni...>] 'leaning'.

10) Apo iop is]

See 53a, 34. B b gel pauses in the sentence which begins at line 9 and ends at line 12.

13) <b....>]

'bodi s'?

17-18) th place becam fayre]

Th peo le in the globe are cleansed through penitence (see MN17).

19) a triangular stone]

A pyramid (see marginal sketch).

20) A mill powered by a horse walking in a circle around the two millstones fixed to a central axle.

23-26) What the white ball, the flaming sword and the fine linen hat-band should signify is not clear. The flaming word recalls the angel (usually thought to be Michael) who guards the gate of Eden (Genesis III, 24) and is customarily a symbol of purification (Cirlot, A Diction ry of Symbols, p. 324), but this sheds no light upon the other two objects.

28) to him ward]

'towards him'.

34) Clyft]

'Cleft'.

36) 'They are always, and their food is one'.

3) vicissim]

'In turn'. The r sulting combination of letters is LBELEN, those of the first ternary being here underlined.

43) ANA]

From LNANAEB (52a, 30-36).

44) Ab illo sed]

'From him, but' (see line 6 above).

45) Cum illo sed]

'With him, but' (see line 8 above).

48) brauer]

More ostentatious.

49-50) Aliqui...Digni]

'Some [have] such things [i.e. fashionable clothes] on account of worthiness, [but] others [have] such things because they are not worthy'.

51) Per illu]

'Through him' (see line 7 above).

||rayle]

This bel ngs to line 50 ('appa=rayle').

53) See lines 13-14 above.

fol. 54a.

1) This tern ry tri s to emulate the third, but fails to do so, just as the s cond failed in its emulation of the first.

2) Cahos]

'Chaos'.

3-4) See 53b, 23-24.

6) The hole must h ve opened again after closing (53b, 34).

9) Et...ignis]

'And because they were lacking in ardent fire'. The fourth ternary has tried to attract the attention of the people in t e same way as the third, b t they have nothing substantial to offer.

11) apparaill]
'apparel'.

12) See 53b, 46-48.

15) Fawt]
'Fault'. Probably in his first notes the first and second t rnari s were linked together and the third with the f urth.

21) Omnes...illo]
'All belo g to Nature, but not in him' (contrast with 53a, 20-22). N t all the t rnaries are divinely inspired.

22) The O ren yning]
12 pi its have shown tne four ternaries and there are th r for 30 spirits remaining of the original 42.

23) the reiected Cumpany]
The sec nd nd fourth ternaries (see lines 18 and 20 above).

26) S e 52a, 49.

27) This company is n ither intrinsically good nor intrinsically evil, but only according to how th y are used (see MN27).

28) 'We are the seven gates of Nature, and of he who knew God' (i.e. Adam). The last phrase explains their neutrality.

30-31) th r st of tne 30]
23 spirits are left in this company after the disappearance of sev n in white smoke. The disappearance of these 23 in bl ck smoke indicates t at they also are rejected by B b g l.

32) In se to... nia]
'In ix and ev n ar all things' (see 49b, MN40).

33) The ix]
The fir t tnir t rnari s.

5) th n]
'tn un'.
r le]
'rolled'.

36) th sm ll rrow r ce]
Th up er par f th ath traced on the gl be described at 4 a, 7-13.

40) 'The n who form d thes [i.e. the six] is the second in th h ptagon', i.e. Bornogo, prince to Bobogel (see fol. 48b).

41) See 49b, 31-42.

41-45) The spirits LEENARB—AOIDIAB each govern a four hour part of Sunday as the spirits OESNGLE—LABDGRE did of Monday. Their use is similar (see 51a, 30-35).

45-48) There is considerable confusion over the division of parts of the day among the 42 ministers of each prince. At 49b, 31-42, each of the six groups of seven of Hagonel's ministers were allotted a period of 4 hours, while Hagonel's seal represented a further seven spirits including himself (see 50b, 31-34). In the case of the 42 ministers of Babalel and Befafes, each group of seven also governs a four hour part of the day while the king and prince are responsible for the whole day (see 55b, 25-26). A similar division is made with the ministers under Bynepor and Butmono (56b, 14) and Bnaspol and Blisdon (56b, 44-45). The division here of the spirits under Bobogel and Bornogo does not make sense. Even allowing for the fact that each group of seven letters was earlier referred to as groups of 'six' (see 49b, 30) the division cannot be made 'as before' if 'the first six of the six orders' (line 45) refers to LEENARB or if the 42 ministers are to be divided into seven groups of six rather than six groups of seven. It seems most likely that the intention is that six groups of seven (LEENARB—AOIDIAB) are each given a four hour period of the day (as at 49b, 31-42) and that 'the first six' (line 45) should refer to spirits represented by the seal of Bornogo other than Bornogo himself, as was the case with Hagonel (50b, 31-34).

49) See 50b, 40.

MN52) vide ante 3 folia]

'See three folios before' (see Commentary to lines 41-45 above).

fol. 54b.

4-6) These spirits know God ('one in heuen') and all things to do with man and the world.

7) These few spirits reflect the nature of heaven.

9) See marginal note.

10) vse of the...]

It seems from what follows that Dee is asking a general question about the instructions he has been given for commanding the spirits.

14-15) See the first ternary LEE at 53a, 25-29. This ternary transformed itself into 'One Man' composed of herbs and metals.

18-20) The 'purpose and intent' is yet to be revealed.

21) 'I have spoken'.

24-27) 'Come, come (I say), approach. Come, king. O king, king, king of the waters, come, I say come. Great is your power, though mine is greater. Our God remains, rules as, and is that which he was and just as he was'.

28) Then cam one]
Babalel.

29-31) 'We are ready to praise the name of him our creator. The name (I say) of one [who is] now and living. These things are obscure to clouded minds [but] true and manifest to true and perfect [minds]'.

32) Ecce adsunt]
'Behold, they are here'.

35-36) left arme...righ<t>arme]
This refers to the sleeves of his garment.

41) Babalel governs the waters and with his prince, Befafes, is to be invoked on tuesdays (Sloane MS 3191, 48a).

43-48) The origin of these letters is explained at 59a, 26-33.

47-48) 'Let all (omne) that lives praise God, one and three in all eternity (aeternum)'.

47) The 'A' of AOONMAN should be 'N', this correction being made later.

MN25) 'The king of the waters'.

fol. 55a.

7) at an ynche]

'close at hand', obsolete (OED).

8) Ha Sir ha]

There seems no reason for the hyphens joining the words.

9) Multin]

The name does not occur again.

10) skipiak]

'skipjack, a pert shallow-brained fellow' (OED).

12-14) Babalel is dressed as before (see 54b, 34-36). It is appropriate to his office that he should seem to stand upon water.

16-18) 'Come prince of the seven princes who are princes of the waters. I am a powerful and wonderful king in [respect of] water, whose power is in the depths of the waters'.

19-21) Princeps...Heptagonon]

'This prince is the third prince in the heptagon' (see 48b). The prince's name is Befafes.

21) 'Heptagono' is the correct Latin form.

22) Heptagonωρ]

'Heptagonom'. 'Heptagonon' would be 'heptagonων '.

22) verè...dixi]

'Truly, plainly and clearly have I spoken'.

23) 'You have measured the waters?'...'It is done'.

24) The doubt is not specified.

25) See Commentary to lines 34-35 below.

26) Phers]

'Philosophers'.

28) I was with Salomon]

Michael also claimed to have been with Solomon (see 13b, 17).

Scotus]

While Joannes Duns Scotus (1265?-1308?) would tend to be a more familiar name to Kelly, this most probably refers to John Scotus (fl. 850), author of De divisione Naturae, who argued the unity of nature proceeding from God through the creative ideas to the sensible universe and being resolved into its first Cause.

29) 'I was [known] in respect of my powr'.

30) Mares]

'The Seas'.

Since]

'Since then'.

34-35) Unless there are some unrecorded incidents of Kelly's scrying, these lines must refer to Actions with Barnabas Saul or one of the other possible scryers.

38) the fifth of the Seuenth]

In the Action of 5 May 1583 Dee asks Uriel about this statement of Befafes and receives the following reply: 'He speaketh so of him self, in respect that he shall be the fifth that shall be Vsed. In consideration of Nature he is the fifth, althowgh not consequently in the Order of Operation' (103a, 5-7). The 'Order of Operation' refers to the use of the Holy Table.

39) Obelison the wicked]

This spirit is presumably the direct antithesis of the Befafes Obelison. He is not mentioned again.

40-41) Redemption is here offered to evil spirits and angels as well as to man. See also 57a, 17-19.

43) The AEgyptians called me...Obelison]

I have not been able to trace any source for this statement.

45) A pleasant deliverer]

What language should produce this etymology is not apparent but the word appears as 'obelisong', translated as 'as pleasant deliverers' in the Fourth Call or Key of 48 Claves Angelicae (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 4b; see also TFR, p. 109). 48 Claves is in Enochian with an interlineated translation.

46) The former 7]

Those who came in with Babalel (see 54b, 42).

49) They are spirits of the waters.

52) becōmethh]

Sic for 'becōmeth'.

54) Maij <.1 .>]

This should read 'Maij 5' (see Commentary to line 38 above). There is no Action of 1 May 1583 and Ashmole must have misread Dee's manuscript.

MN46) Circlets are more proper to princes.

fol. 55b.

1-2) Clouds, hail and snow are water in the atmosphere and come under the governance of these spirits.

9) vprore]

'uproar'.

25-26) See 54a, 45-47.

29) Dee wishes to know the hour at which the day might be said to begin. It could be at midnight, 9 am , first light or some other significant time.

32-36) 'God gave life to all creatures. Come, come fire, come life of mortal things (I say) come. Approach. God reigns. O come. For he reigns alone and is the life of the living', 37) These are Bynepor and Butmono who govern the general condition of the world and the life of all living creatures. They are to be invoked on thursdays (Sloane MS 3191, 49a).

38-40) This king and prince govern the life and breath of living creatures and the 'smokes' of their 42 ministers may represent the breath of life (pneuma) and the sparks the inner 'fire' or energy in living creatures.

41) red, as blud]

This has a clear significance to the life of mortal creatures.

46-48) See Commentary to 47b, 24. There is no Action of 5 May 1582 and Dee is referring to the Action of 5 May 1583 where he received instructions for a new Character (101b, 20-22 & 102a, 38-43). These new instructions confirmed that the Character given to him at 9b was the work of an evil spirit and here he puts the confusion between Butmono and Blisdon down to another illuding spirit (see MN46).

fol. 56a.

5) Verè beatus]

'Truly blessed'.

7) yo^{r}]

'your'.

B B A L P A E]

The 'P' is written over an erasure and there is a 'p' in the right-hand margin. The source of the letters is given at 59a, 34-42.

8-9) This king Bynepor begins the fourth septenary but is the twenty-second of the collected 49 spirits in the table at 41a.

20) 'To the giver of all good things [be] unceasing and immense praise'.

25) The only explanation I can give for the vision of running water is that it is one of the essentials for life.

29-30) Bynepor governs the general state of things in the three levels of vita suprema, superior, and infirma (Sloane MS 3191, 49a).

32) He that Measureth]

God (see MN32).

36) 'Generally' should be erased in favour of the superscription 'generaltye'.

41-43) 'The highest, "middle" and lesser planes of existence are measured by my hands' (see Introduction pp. 66-73).

44) Despite Bynepor's great office and power, he is not self-created, but of God and his power is given by God alone.

45) I dubble life from One]
He is responsible for procreation and the multiplication of life beginning from Adam. 'One' may however signify God.

MN32) 'God spoke'. 'Ipse' is used as a Latin equivalent of the Tetragrammaton. See also John I, 1-3.

fol. 56b.

5) the second last world]
This time is regarded as the penultimate era in world history (see Introduction pp.162-170).

8-10) 'He entrusted life and gave power of being to me, to live and be glorified(?) eternally by all things everywhere'.

11) m<or....>]
'mortals'?

14) the rest as befo<re.>]
The manner of using Bynepor and the division of the 42 spirits (presumably with 7 contained in his seal) over the parts of the day follows the pattern that has been established with the earlier kings and princes.

16) See marginal note.

19-20) Bynepor governs the state of the world and the breath of life and so brightens the world and is welcomed by the people.

24) This king and prince are Bnaspol and Blisdon, who govern the earth and are to be invoked on wednesdays (Sloane MS 3191, 48b). At 47b, 24 the office of governing the earth was given to Prince Butmono.

29) Vgly people]
These are 'spirits of perdition' which guard treasure in the earth (see 57a, 1).

33-41) This circle has an outer diameter of 78mm (3.9 inches) and an inner diameter of 66mm (3.5 inches). The source of the letters is explained at 59a, 43-46. OOGOSRS should be OOGOSRB, the correction being made after the explication at 59a, 43-46 although De heptarchia mystica retains OOGOSRS (Sloane MS 3191, 42b).

33-46) See Prince Butmono at 47b, 35-36: 'Behold the bowels of the earth are at my opening'.

38-39) he in whome I am]
God.

47) vide lib^{o} 5: 1583. Martij 26]
On 26 March Dee asked Raphael whether he might use Blisdon and his ministers to unravel the secrets concerning buried treasure which were contained in a scroll brought back from Northwick Hill in the Cotswolds by Kelly after he had been guided by 'a spirituall creature' (see 61a and 63a, 36-39). Despite the statement here that 'they are and shalbe at thy comaundement', Raphael would not sanction an invocation of the spirits.

47-49) Vide...26]

'Concerning these things see [the Action of] 26 June [1584] in the Cracow Book'. In this Action at Cracow a further table was said to contain four good angels with 'power over Metals, to find them, to gather them together, and to use them' and also 'the Princes of those wicked ones, that stood afar off in the Table of the Creation', this being a reference to the 'Vgly people' at line 29 (see TFR, p. 180).

MN6) 'Behold all new things'.

fol. 57a.

3) Bnaspol is the king of the fifth septenary and the 29th of the 49 spirits in the table at 41a.

4) Prince Blisdon is the fifth name in the heptagon at 48b and the 23rd in the table at 41a.

8) 'Come, where there is no rest but the gnashing of teeth'. They 'which do iniquity' will be cast 'into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth' (Matthew XIII, 42). See also Matthew VIII, 12.

9-10) No spirit issuing fire appeared in the Action of 19 November the day before. The only spirit who appeared then who in any way resembles this one was the compound figure formed by the fourth ternary with the 'chaos of faces' (54a, 2). A fiery spirit may have appeared to Kelly in a private vision on the 19th November whose appearance he related to Dee. The description does however fit Prince Brorges who appeared on 16 November (see 48a, 27-28).

14) and the etc]

The appearance of the princes and kings has been described before and they are all pretty much the same. The king here is Bnapsen and the prince is Brorges and they are to be invoked on saturdays (Sloane MS 3191, 50a). While Bnapsen governs practisers of magic and witchcraft and has the power to cast out wicked spirits, no office is assigned to Brorges, although his earlier appearance at 48a suggests that his office should be similar.

15) as I haue sayd before]

It was Hagonel who punished 'lyers, witches, enchanters, Deceyvers, Blasphemers' before (45b, 31-32) and Dee's marginal note here indicates his awareness of the discrepancy.

17-19) Some spirits who were once evil will be redeemed (see 55a, 39).

23) The outer diameter of this circle is 64mm (2.5 inches) and the inner diameter is 54mm (2.1 inches). Within the circle there is an unskilful picture of a demon with his hair like flames (in red ink) and with sharp teeth. The origin of the letters is explained at 59a, 47-54, but according to that explanation the table should read: BANSSZE, BYAPAGE, BNAMGEN, BNVOLOS, BLBAPOO, BOBEPEN.

24) fode]
'food'.

25) A word is missing after 'sempiternall' (see MN25).

26) Bnapsen is the 36th name in the table at 41a, but Brorges is the sixth prince in the heptagon at 48b, Bralges being the seventh and last. Brorges is the last if Bralges is counted as the first (see MN27RH) but this then makes the numeration of the preceding princes incorrect.

30) 'Come you who are under my power'.

35) Carmara governs all aerial actions under the name of Baligon . Why he should interpose here, however, is not entirely clear.

36) of the last Ternarie]

ANA (see 53b, 43). In an Action of 5 May 1583 Dee questioned this phrase of Carmara and received the answer: 'he is the ende of the Three last corruptible times: wherof, this is the last' (103a, 18-20). The last ternary wore 'brave' apparel and were rejected by Bobogel (see 53b, 48 & 54a, 20).

38) Carmara is to be invoked on mondays but on fridays in his alias of Baligon.

39) the last before]

Bnapsen and Brorges.

40) the Fifth]

Bnaspol and Blisdon.

MN27) If Bralges is the first, then his king Blumaza must also be first; therefore the sixth division of the table at 41a and the seventh point of the heptagon at 47a are both numbered as 1 in addition to their correct numbers. Since Baligon represents the last table of 42 ministers he is also both first (as Carmara) and seventh in the table at 41a. In the Action of 5 May 1583 Dee was told that 'Blumaza is the first, in respect (And so all the rest, are the first in respect) of theyr own being' (102a, 29-30).

MN30) See 48b, 8.

fol. 57b.

1) This circle has an outer diameter of 76mm (3 inches) and an inner diameter of 63mm (2.5 inches). The letters are explained at 59b, 1-5.

6) For, so I call it]
The angels and spirits are not bound by human concepts of time.

11-13) See 46a, 12-15.

15-16) This triple division corresponds to the vita infirma, vita superior and vita suprema (see 56a, 41-43 and Introduction pp. 66-73).

17) This line seems to refer to God rather than Annael as Dee suggests (MN18), although Annael is the angel governing this period of world history (see 6a).

21-23) 'Glory, praise, honour and eternal jubilation be to our God [who is] omnipotent, the best and the greatest'.

26-29) All the other kings and princes governing each septenary have appeared except for this pair.

MN14) Prima pars Artis Triplicis.]
'The first part of the threefold art'. See 58a, 37-41.
in Esse]
'in being'.

fol. 58a.

2) the first table]

The Holy Table.

3) red and grene]

It is difficult to extract any precise significance from the colours of the cloth, but green customarily represents fertility and red usually denotes majesty, violence or the life-giving principle. In alchemical terms green can represent solution and red is the colour of the achieved Philosophers' Stone. (See Cirlot, A Dictionary of Symbols and Taylor, The Alchemists).

10) See 57b, 5.

12) See 47a, 8-9.

14-20) 'O how great is the infirmity and corruption of man, who scarcely has faith in [God's] angels, his good angels at that, or even in God? The corrupt of the world have in them all worldly things, the dregs. O our God, our God, (I say) our true God with his true angels and those who serve him is always true. Ask what you will. I have spoken, and what I have spoken is overshadowed by truth, justice and perfection'.

21) Ecce]

'Behold'.

22-23) Hîc...Per hoc]

'Here...Through this'.

24-25)'And by the end of the measure, you will measure us and our power. Do [it], I say. What do you want?'. The drawing of the rod or measure is 27mm (1.1 inches) hign.

26-27) parabolically]
'In the manner of a parable'. Dee here presumably resolves some of his doubts (see line 10 above).

33) negligēt]
'negligent'.

35-36) 'In the shadow of death there is no equality. For nothing is obscure which you have received through him. Perform'. This statement refers to Kelly, through whom the angels have communicated. Dee and Kelly are the elect of God and therefore not equal with other men.

37) See 57b, 14-16.

38) There are seven septenaries of spirits.

39-40) Again the universe is divided threefold into different planes of existence.

42-43) The seven kings are the first of each septenary in the table at 41a.

46) The characters of the kings were in the missing table but are to be found in De heptarchia mystica (see Introduction pp.125-126). The names of the second generation Sons of Light are here taken by Dee to be the characters of the kings (MN48, central) and they are to be found in the more complicated characters assigned to each king in De heptarchia mystica (Sloane MS 3191, 46b-50a).

fol. 58b.

1) See 27b, 37-28a, 2: the second generation Sons of Light.

5-6) of my self being the First]

Carmara (Ho) is also Baligon who is the first of the 49 spirits (see table at 41a).

8) and lawfull]

This should read 'and unlawful' (see MN8)

9-10) The first point of the heptagon at 48b contains only the seal of Hagonel and no accompanying name.

10) S..]

'Six on'?

11) the Globe]

The missing table which Dee received from Kelly (see also 59a, 1-2).

18) wart]

An error for 'wast'.

the most perfect forme]

A reference to the table at 37b-38a perhaps.

22) There are seven seals but only six names in the heptagon at 48b.

23) The names are to be found in the tables at 40a and 41a.

24-25) See MN25.

27-30) Unless the name of Marmara occurred in the missing folio at the beginning of this book, Dee has not noted it, only Carmara.

35) See 55a, 20, although the distinction may first have been made in the missing folio at the beginning of this book.

39) to weete]
'to wit'.

40-46) The kings and princes, signified by the crown and circlet are here related according to their numbers in the table at 41a.

44-45) modo retrogrado quasi]
'As if by a retrograde step'. See the dotted line that connects the king Bobogel to the prince Bornogo in the table at 41a.

53) Novēb. 23.]
This is the date of the note being made.

MN8) myshard]
'misheard'.

MN25) impfect]
'imperfect'.

MN40) 'This sequence is made by adding 7. Thus adding 7 to the number 43 gives 50, a number greater than 49 by one, which may signify the first king, Baligon' ($\overline{pt}$ for 'potest' or its subjunctive mood). Having proceeded around the circle of the table at 41a, Baligon, who occupies the first place occurs again as the 50th.

MN41) 'This sequence is made by adding 7. Therefore if 7 is added to the number 37, we find 44 to be the next prince' (g^{o} for 'ergo'). The 44th spirit is Bagenol. Both this marginal note and the one above separately link all the kings together and all the princes together, but neither succeeds in showing the relationship in the table between the kings and their princes.

MN46) See MN44. The statement 'My Prince is in myself: which is a mysterie' was not in fact spoken at all, unless in the missing folio at the beginning of this book. Nevertheless the memory of such a statement led Dee to think of Baligon's prince as the anagrammatical Baginol instead of the correct Bagenol. At the existing beginning of this book however, Hagonel said:'the Sonnes of men, and theyr sonnes are subiect vnto my cōmaundemēt. This is a mystery'

(45a, 18-19) and there is an attendant marginal note to the speaker of 'Bagenol' (MN16). If Carmara is also Baligon, then Hagonel is also Bagenol. It is unusual for Dee to be inaccurate in his cross-references, but the admission 'as far as I remember' suggests that he was unable to find the statement 'my Prince is in myself' when he looked for it himself.

MN46 RH) This correctly links Bagenol (the 44th spirit) with Baligon (the first).

MN41 RH) See Commentary to MN46 above.

MN44) See Commentary to MN46 above.

fol. 59a.

1-2) Nalvage first appeared in an Action of 11 February 1584 and was responsible for delivering the calls of 48 Claues angelicae which take up much of A True and Faithful Relation and are also to be found in Sloane MS 3191 (see TFR, p. 63).

5-6) i.e. from 58b, 26 to 59a, 4.

9) his peculier Table]

Each prince has his own table consisting of the letters delivered by the 42 spirits accompanying each prince between fols 49b and 57b.

10) the First Table]

See 49b, 31-42.

12) The two numbers in the margin reflect respectively the order in which the tables were given and their order if Baligon is regarded as the first of the 49 spirits

13) OESNGLE is obtained from the second letters of Bobogel and Befafes, the third of Basmelo, the fourth of Bernole, the fifth of Branglo, the sixth of Brisfli and the seventh of Bnagole, who form together the second septenary in the table at 41a.

17) AVZNILN is obtained in a like manner to OESNGLE, but from the third septenary. The system is continued to the last septenary.

20) LEENARB is derived from the second septenary by working inwards from the last letter of the king (Bobogel) to the first letter of the seventh spirit (Bnagole).

24-25) The subsequent names in the second table are derived from the remaining five septenaries using the same process as that for LEENARB, Bamnode being the 49th spirit.

25) trauersi, quasi retrograde]
'Across as if backwards'.

26) Both 'lower' and 'latter' should read 'last' (see MN26).

27) 'Right' should read 'left' (see MN27).

26-33) As with OESNGLE etc, the first two letters of each name in the third table are derived from the same circle in each septenary of the table at 41a.

28) the last word is of second seven]
A manuscript error for 'the last word of the second seven', 34-42) This is a mirror image of the progression used to obtain the names for the third table.

41) // ble]
The superscribed end of 'Table'.

43-46) This progression is the mirror image of that used to obtain the names for the second table.

47) the Infernall Table]
See 57a, 15-22.

47-54) The progression uses the stated letters of the king of each septenary save for the first (Baligon, who is self-sufficient), the 49th spirit being used in his stead. The rule for each name is to use consecutive letters of each king and then the last letter of the seventh spirit in the septenary of the king who contributed the sixth letter. The first septenary under Bobogel is never used. The result of using this rule, however, gives BANSSZE, BYAPEE, BNAMGEN, BNVOLOS, BLBAPOO, BOBEPEN, as opposed to BANSSZE, BYAPARE, BNAMGEN, BNVAGES, BLBOPOO, BABEPEN, shown in the table at 57a, 23.

MN12) This note is rather confused but I think the sense of it is this. Baligon and his septenary have not so far been used in obtaining the tables of names of the 42 spirits and therefore may be seen in this respect as being the last septenary in the table at 41a (note the figure 7 inside the circles at 41a). Blumaza is designated as 'the first' in the Action of 5 May 1583, but he holds this position 'secretly' (see 102a, 27-30 and MN30). As a result of this 'secret of preeminence' his name is accompanied by the numeral 1 in the table at 41a (the innermost numeral). This results in a sequence of septenaries from Blumaza to Bnapsen which is numerated a little irregularly: 1,7, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. I feel that the 'necessity' does not lie in the system of septenaries but rather in the need to overcome discrepancies in the system.

fol. 59b.

1-5) This table uses the first septenary under Baligon, which may also be regarded as the last since it produces the seventh table. The whole of this septenary is not used, however, but only letters contained in the names of each of the seven kings.

4-5) 7.tenaries]

'Septenaries'.

6) made all of Kingly substance]

All the letters are derived from the names of kings.

8-9) the great Circular table]

The missing table 'sent' to Dee by Kelly.

18) Dee is of course using a stone, but the angels now give him one appropriate for the commandment of the 49 spirits.

20) the Roman Possession]

The Roman Empire.

24) it]

The new stone.

27) See MN27.

29-31) The new stone is governed by Baligon (see Sloane MS 3191, 49b).

32) The angel who brings the stone is unspecified save for the description at lines 36-38 below,

35) matts]

'mats'.

36) heyth]

An obsolete form of 'height' (OED).

48) 'Truth in truth: God in God; he is one in one'.

51-52) 'To him who is to come to judge eternity with fire be all honour, praise and glory for ever and ever'.

MN49) 'Beware'.

fol. 60a.

1) 'The fifth book of mysteries'.

3) Kelly left for London on 22 November 1582 and then set off the next day for the village of Blockley in Gloucestershire. He was supposed to return within ten days (see Diary), but the next diary entry is for 7 May 1583. Dee was very busy with conferences concerning the proposed expedition to discover a North-West Passage during these intervening months, which also saw the birth and baptism of his son Rowland. There is no record of disgreement between Dee and Kelly, facts which Dee usually noted, and so while it is possible that some Actions may have taken place between 22 November 1582 and 23 March 1583 and been lost through the attentions of Mrs Jones's maid, it seems more likely that Kelly was absent with Dee's consent. On 23 March 1583 Kelly returned with John Husy from Blockley (61a, 2) with a scroll that he was supposed to have found at the nearby Northwick Hill on 12 March (66b, 14).

5-6) Ashmole denotes this fifth book as containing the sixth book and the Appendix to the fifth book as being the seventh.

fol. 61a.

3) Mr John Husey]

There is no reference in Dee's Diary to this person.

Blokley]

The village of Blockley is situated on the edge of the Cotswolds in Gloucestershire, 6 miles from Broadway, 7 miles from Stow-on-the-Wold and 87 miles from London.

6) moniment]

'Monument': a written document or record.

7) Northwick Hill is just to the north-west of the village of Blockley.

7-8) It seems that Kelly and Mr. Husey may have been conducting their own scrying experiments which led to the discovery of the book and scroll. A red powder was also discovered (see Introduction pp.160-161).

9-11) Neither Dee nor Kelly was able to decipher the scroll and so the angels are to be asked to enlighten the company, although in fact no information is forthcoming in this Action.

12) a foles cote]

The motley.

15) hery]

'hairy'.

16) 'You have penetrated [penetravisti] the nature of my injustice'.

17) Feci, nam decedo]
'I have done, for I depart'.

19) wexed]
'waxed'.

20) the Table...the Chayre]
The angelic Holy Table and the chair normally associated with Michael.

22) The spirit who stays is Raphael, signified by Me at line 38 (for Medicina Dei), so the other two are probably Michael and Gabriel. The probably signifies that Raphael is wearing a crown (see 64a, 50).

23-24) Auete...incredibile]
'Hail. It is true and incredible'.

26-34) 'The way, truth and virtue are one: and his greatness is admirable and takes many forms. And the breath comes from your [God's] mouth (and has life), by which all things live by your assent and illumination. Hail the word, hail the creator and measure of things, which were, are and shall be. You have enlightened the eyes of [your] creatures by intelligible monuments [see line 6 above] and warnings. Life to the good, but death to the wicked and to those who are cast aside from your consideration. How great and innumerable are your gifts (O [God of] Justice)? O remiges varpax. Lord have mercy'.

33) O remiges varpax]
This is a phrase in the Enochian language for which there is no translation available.

36-37) 'O blessed Trinity, send your light and truth that they may lead me to the holy mountain and your tabernacles'. See 7a, 48 and Psalm XLIII, 3.

38) 'Where unbelievers [may] not [go]'.

39-40) 'We are not unbelievers: but our hope lives eternal and [his] truth, the fountain of life, is omnipotent'. Aeterna may refer to veritas rather than to spes, or even to both.

41-45) Adduxi...videbitis]
'I have brought water from that river for you [i.e. the fountain of life]. It is truly a medicine for your imperfections and needs. Understand now both who I am and with what I am provided. Drink and receive fulness into your bones. For many are the imperfections of mortals. I have, and you will have: I have brought [the water] and you will see'.

MN15) 'Covered with hair'.

fol. 61b.

61a,45-61b,4) Verbum...eius]

'The word is that light by which every imperfection is destroyed. Those who believe will enter [introibunt] into his holiness, where [lies] the potion and eternal medecine. You have truly considered [see MN3]. I am just as you believe. For by truth and justice his words and teaching are true and perfect'. The whole of Raphael's speech effectively promises divine inspiration and the help of the Holy Spirit.

6) Recte sapere]

See 5a, 12.

Thow hast it]

i.e. knowledge and understanding.

9) botom]

'bottom'.

12-13) The water which causes the tree (i.e. Dee) to swell and bring forth fruit is the teaching of Raphael (see 61a, 41), but more specifically the angelic language (see 63, 34-37).

16-17) 'Behold the servant of the Lord. May his will (like his mercy) pronounced concerning me be performed in me'. This is not dissimilar from Mary's reply after the Annunciation (Luke II, 38).

21-22) This refers to the contents of the fourth book.

26) Oute of Seuen]

The heptarchical revelations of the fourth book.

28-31) See Commentary to 12-13 above.

31) marble stone]

Marble signifies constancy and permanency.

32) the blud of a dragon]

Dragon's blood was the name given by the alchemists to the resin obtained from certain plants, but it is more likely that it is used here only to symbolise fierceness.

Northen]

Sic for 'Northern'.

34-35) The figure's face is composed of all substances within the primordial Chaos.

35-37) This passage owes its origin to the Platonic concept of ideal Forms and the perfect and eternal model used by the Creator in fashioning the Universe. In his Preface Dee's description of the threefold nature of the universe (supernatural, natural and mathematical) is accompanied by the statement that 'the generall Formes, notwithstanding, are constant, unchaungeable, untransformable, and incorruptible' and are neither of man's perception nor his conception. (Preface, second page).

37) his two eyes]

The sun amd the moon. The figure reaches from earth to the heavens.

38-40) This figure is a representation of the 'liquor' which Raphael brings: the word of God, perfect in itself, and the language of the angels.

40) nature Intellectuall]

The highest kind of nature, that of the mind and its apprehensions.

MN3) 'He speaks of my thinking it might be Raphael'.

MN23) 'Unbelievers'.

fol. 62a.

1) The image of nature is continued but refers to growth in the world of the intellect.

8) I respect the time]

Perhaps the black cloth appeared signifying the end of the Action and Dee is giving his assent to leaving off.

13) a slepe]

'asleep'.

14) At 63a, MN30, Dee remarks that 'a lambs hed, may be a token of our humilitie required'. The lamb is of course representative of Christ in his sacrificial role.

16-25) 'These are signs to you of humility and penitence: all that I do is yours and not mine [i.e. his actions are significant]. Let his name be praised in heaven, and also on earth. Seek power in the humility of his words and you will see the glory of his face. For the glory of his virtue is merciful and omnipotent. What is vain is on account of corruptions of his works: what is necessary is truly according to your needs. For he made all things towards his praise and (behold) the works of his hands together praise the light of his countenance. Praise [him] in turn. Live in humility. My medicine (which is his) will in truth heal all things'. The final sentence suggests that the angelic language will reunite the world (see Introduction pp.169-71).

26) feldes]

'fields'.

29) Nature and Reason]

Raphael's medicine is the language of Adam and the angels (see 63b, 34-37), which is intelligible to all created things, whether imbued with life and animated or not (see 63b, 46-48).

34-37) These are the steps of celestial learning.

41) deapest]

Sic for 'deepest'.

42) he]

It is not clear to whom this refers. Solomon asked God for wisdom, but did not forsake the world (62b,1). The next reference is to Adam (62b,7), but the description here does not fit him either.

fol. 62b.

2) subiect or obiect]

Subject is that part of a thing in which its essential attributes reside and object is the thing as it is perceived.

3) from him, that proceedeth]

God.

5) the first]

Adam, who was in tha image of God, but not like God in power and glory.

5-6) A reference to the Fall, but see Commentary to line 7 below.

7) Dee's marginal note declares that 'Adam, before his fall, knew all things' and we seem to have some confusion in lines 5-8. Either the reference to Adam's Fall in lines 5-6 and his subsequent revival is to be understood as separate from the reference to Adam's prelapsarian knowledge, the revival being the coming of Christ, or there is an intimation of Adam's existence before his receiving the breath of life from God. The double reference to the creation of man in Genesis (I,27 and II,7) may go some way towards explaining this: Adam's 'slombring' is his existence before God 'breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul' (Genesis II, 7).

10) a meane be adiected]

'a purpose be added'. All that Dee has been taught has yet to be put to use and only in use does it have value.

14) ende]

'purpose'.

15-17) A new golden age is promised, although it is as yet but a dream.

22) This book is the Book of Enoch which Dee will copy out under instruction.

26) make the clere]

'make your understanding clear'.

28) Et finis est]

'And it is the end'.

28-29) One...known]

One leaf of the book is so secret that it shall never be known. Dee's marginal note records that the addition of this leaf makes the total 49.

30-31) Presumably the mysteries are those concerning the 49 spirits of the 4th book, but set out in tables in the Enochian (angelic) language.

32-33) The book seems to be divided into three parts.

36-37) This defines the relationship that Dee and Kelly are to hold towards each other.

38) Grutch]

'Grouch, complain' (OED).

42) A third person is to be admitted to the conduct of the Actions. At first it was Adrian Gilbert, but then Lasky became a fairly frequent attendant (see Introduction pp.175-6).

47) Adrian Gilbert]

See Introduction pp.165-6 and Commentary to fol. 65a.

fol. 63a.

1-3) See the pictures at 86b

8) supercaelestiall]

See Introduction p. 66.

10) tre]

'tree' (see 61b, 9-13).

11) Act]

'Visible results, deeds'.

12-13) King Bnaspol and Prince Blisdon.

13) whose]

This word should be deleted. Raphael says that questions concerning buried treasure are not his concern, but are to be dealt with by Bnaspol and Blisdon.

15) See 56b, 33-41 for Bnaspol's 42 ministers.

17) dew]

'due'.

19) lymms]

'limbs'.

24) Gloria p̄ri. etc.]

See 8b, 18-19.

MN11) 'Power/Deed'.

MN15) See 56b, 33-42.

Circa...&c.]

'Around May 1587 a certain Ben (a spiritual creature) said to E.K. himself that he had guarded that powder and book of Dunstan'. In fact this information was delivered to Kelly in a private vision as he laboured over a still on 18 April 1587 (TFR, p. *12).

27-29) See 61a, 19-22.

30) See 62a, 14-15.

31) Magna...dixisti]

'Great are the things of which I have spoken, O God', assuming Alla to be God.

32) hard before]

'immediately in front of'.

36) See 86b.

40) The buylder of the Temple]

Solomon. Raphael says that both worldly riches and wisdom may be bestowed by God according to his pleasure. This would be pleasant to Dee's ears, for much as he desired wisdom, he was in constant need of money to finance his library and laboratories.

43) one...other]

God and man.

45) those trifles]

Buried treasure.

feetest]

'fittest'.

fol. 63b.

1) existinction]

'Existence' and 'extinction' have been confused together, but it is plain that 'existence' is meant. The Creation contains all manner of things, and while some may be worthless or even wicked, in terms of the overall scheme they are nonetheless necessary.

2-7) Raphael admits that there might be some good arising from worldly wealth, but he refuses to disclose any information about such a vain subject.

8) Sterne]

This is a possible spelling of 'star' but not one that Dee generally uses and as such the sense would be obscure. It is most likely that 'sterne' is an adjective, so that the line could be read as 'stern director to thee'. Alternatively 'the Sterne' may mean 'the strict', i.e. those who lead ascetic lives.

9) All those]

All the spirits in book four.

11) This vessell]

The 'liquor' or medicine which Raphael brings, the language of the angels.

11-24) The spirits have their times and if they are called upon at the wrong time, they will not answer. Peter de Abano's Heptameron concentrates upon the times of various angels (see Agrippa, Opera, pp. 589-93).

14) The 49 spirits will answer Dee's questions purely from friendship, but they may not be used at the incorrect time (see lines 21-22).

16) 'The Ende' refers to using the spirits, while 'the Begynning' simply refers to calling them.

17) El]
See Introduction pp.132-4.It seems from line 18 that the rod may be a kind of magician's wand which Dee is to use.

18) to an ende]
To a purpose, as well as to a conclusion.

19) the seven]
The seven septenaries.

25) 'Former' should be 'furder'.

27 & 30) Dee's words, if indeed he spoke, are not recorded .

31-32) Dee may receive information from the spirits at any time, if not practical help (see line 14).

33) farder]
This form is unusual, since Dee customarily writes 'furder'.

36-39) Dee is to be taught the language of the angels. Raphael declares that man's languages after Babel are poor imitations of that language which truthfully relates to the objects described.

46-48) The language of the angels encompasses the whole of the Creation and is understood by all that has been created.

MN35) 'Truth'.

MN37) 'The language and speech of the angels'.

MN46) primitiue]

The sense is 'ancient' and 'original'.

fol. 64a.

1) The first]

Adam.

3-4) See Introduction pp. 144-145.

6) Three]

Enoch, Elijah and John the Evangelist. Enoch and Elijah (Elias in MN10) were both translated to be with God before they could actually die (see Genesis V, 24, Hebrews XI, 5, and 2 Kings II). John the Evangelist, the best loved disciple of Christ, was to 'tarry till [Christ should] come again', so that a legend arose that he should not die (John XXI, 21-23).

7) the three laws to destroy that Monstre]

I do not understand this reference, but I think that the monster must be death, rather than Satan, and that the destruction of death at the Last Judgement, when death and hell are thrown into the lake of fire, forms the basis of the reference (see Revelation XX, 14). Christ delivered man from death, but that is to be understood as a mystical victory following the crucifixion, and I am sure that if the reference were to Christ there would be some mention here of the resurrection.

10) els wold I not]

'Otherwise I would not reveal it'.

12) 'Perceth' should be 'presseth' (MN13).

16) iote]

'jot'.

18) sheuered]

'shivered, shattered'.

21-23) The angelic language is here seen as the word which created the world (see John I, i-3).

24) he sheweth a boke]

See 62b, 22-23.

30-40) The diagram measures 101mm square (4 inches) and contains 50 X 50 squares, which should in fact be 49 X 49 (see line 33).

32) See 62b, 22-23.

37) certayn Characters]
The letters of the Enochian alphabet.

45) These letters are from right to left those transliterated at 64b, 2-22. The forms are more clearly defined in a later Action (see 104a, 30-31).

49) Like Hebrew, the Enochian language is to be written from right to left.

51) The rod is clearly the rod El again.

MN5) 'The conversations of angels'.

MN6) 'Three taken from men into the heavens and turned into angels'.

MN47) Dee later asks Uriel whether such a shelf is to be made under the Holy Table and receives a negative answer (see (102a, 44-102b, 3).

fol. 64b.

2-22) A clearer form of the letters is shown at 104a, 30-31. What is given here is the first form of each letter, its name and a transliteration. The form given to tal (line 9) and that given to van (line 20) appear to have changed places in the later version and the later form of gisg (line 22) is significantly different.

5-7) Vnus...es]

'You are one, one, one, [and] great, great, great'. A Trinitarian state is here emphasised.

22-23) Magna...eius]

'Great is his glory'.

27-28) Numerus...tibi]

'O most perfect number, one and three. Glory be to thee'. (See Commentary to 34) The letter 'y' is another form of the letter 'i', but with a point to denote the consonantal office.

MN32) It would seem that Dee was not given any transliteration in this first exposition and so the transliterations at lines 2-22 must have been added later as well. This may well account for the confusion over the Enochian letters for van and tal (see Commentary to lines 2-22 above).

37) noyce]

'noise'.

38-46) The meaning of this prophetic vision is not clear, except that it may probably be assumed that virtue defeats wickedness.

42) putto]

'put to' (see 105a, 7).

50) i.e. in two years (see MN50).

fol. 65a.

1) Up until now the cloth has been black (see 59b, 15).

3-6) There is no reference to a visit by Gilbert on 27 March 1583 in Dee's Diary, but evidently Dee began to broach the subject of instruction from and possible participation in the Actions (see 62b, 42-47). The presence of Kelly and the absence of any others concerned with the expedition to find a North-West Passage indicates that no serious planning of that voyage could have formed the subject of the visit. Whether the fireball was seen by Kelly alone or by Gilbert as well is not clear, and only custom would suggest that Dee himself did not see anything. In either case the experience seems designed rather to frighten off Gilbert than to encourage him to participate in the Actions.

7-10) There is some possible ambiguity over the identities of each person here: the fire of God's judgement will quicken

Gilbert's deadness to the advancement of Christ's name. Gilbert's voyage to discover a North-West Passage is also to be evangelical (see lines 35-37 below).

11) A reference to the coming of the Holy Spirit to the twelve Apostles (Acts II, 1-4).

13) Whether Dee remained silent or this is simply a misplaced delta is not clear.

19-20) See 58a, 37 & 45.

22-23) See 62b, 42-47.

26) 'I am the medicine'.

27) Medicina or Medicus Dei]
'The medicine or physician of God'. This definition is respo^sible for the symbol Me, which Dee evidently added as preface to Raphael's earlier speeches when transcribing the fair copy from his original notes.

28) his hands]
Through Gilbert.

42) Dee was already well acquainted with much of the area that Gilbert was going to visit in the course of the expedition, since he had mapped a great deal of the region and written several treatises pertaining to 'Atlantis' (see CR, pp. 25-26 and Introduction pp. 164-5).

50) See 64b, 30.

52) At 62b, 37-38 Dee and Kelly were described as hand and finger. This image here also refers to Kelly's subservient but necessary role to Dee, for Kelly is to tell Dee what he sees while Dee must interpret the significance of the visions.

MN44) 'Darkness behind the back'.

fol. 65b.

1-4) During early March Dee had met with Adrian Gilbert and John Davis and others concerned with the North-West Passage expedition, and on the 18th he had been visited by a Mr. North from Poland, who brought 'salutation from Alaski, Palatine in Poland' to the Queen and to Dee (Diary). Dee was to meet Lasky on 13 May and leave for the Continent with him, Kelly and their families on 21 September. Some plans might already have been under way in March concerning the possibilities of going abroad, perhaps instigated by Lasky's salutation. See also line 25 below.

6) let]

'hinder'.

7) The warnings that a new age is soon to dawn may have had some influence on Dee's Continental journey (see Introduction pp.173-175).

10) 'O book, book, book, life to the good, [but] in truth death itself to the wicked'.

11-12) 'Great are his wonders contained in you [i.e. the book]: and great is the name of your seal. The light of my medicine [be] with you'.

14) 'Glory, praise and honour be to God the Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost'.

MN10) 'The book'.

17-18) 'May they all perish who work against the virtue of my name: and who have hidden the light of my justice' (reading justitia mea as an error for justitiae meae).

21) Multa...ipe]
'We [suffer] many things, because he [God] suffers many things'.

23) See lines 25-31 below.

25) Dee probably went to London for further discussions concerning the North-West Passage expedition.

28) apon]
'upon'.

30-31) See the spirit at 61a, 12-15, who is also covered with hair beneath his apparel.

31-32) Once again Kelly was prepared to leave Dee's household. The 'k' of his initials is miniscule.

36-37) See Luke XI, 11-12.

38-40) Dee instigated the Action to question Raphael concerning Kelly's experience.

42) Camikas zure]
The meaning of these Enochian words is not known.

44) The white fire probably signifies the Holy Ghost inspiring Raphael's words.

46) By 'the works of thy hands' Raphael here means man and/or spirits of darkness.

50) His]
Satan's.

MN17) 'Plotters'.

MN30) 'Hairy'.

fol. 66a.

1) ponishment]

'punishment' (see also line 45 below).

2) Satan is not one of those for whom redemption was offered as a possibility (see 55a, 40-41).

10) greif]

'grief'.

13-14) tentations]

'temptations'.

20) kindenes]

Also in the sense of 'kinship' with God's Creation.

23) See 65a, 28-32.

24-25) The greater is the steadfast application of Dee and Kelly to the work, the greater the work shall be.

26) 'Truth' is ommitted from this line (see MN26).

27) they]

Evil spirits assuming the shape of good spirits.

36-37) See 65a, 7.

39) sow]

'sew'.

39-40) Evil spirits are permitted to bring troubles upon man for his sin in this world as well as in the after-world.

42-43) This promise was of great significance to Dee (and has to some extent proved true, albeit some Actions were lost and the memory of the extant Actions has not always been sympathetic).

46) See the two birds whose wings were joined together at 42b, 3-6.

49) immediate]
'direct, without an intermediary'.

51) apon]
See 65b, 28.

51) those that are present]
The disciples of Christ.

MN22) 'Raphael's office'.

MN46) The vision of the two birds occurred during the Action of 4 May 1582 (42b, 3-6).

fol. 66b.

1-3) A reference to the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost (Acts II, 1-4) and possibly in line 3 to the witnessing of the Transfiguration (Matthew XVII, 1-10).

5)'Let the vengeance of God come and the lying tongue be afflicted'.

10) sknorked]

'To snork' is a dialect form meaning 'to snort or grunt' (OED).

12) 'Let him speak, for he is not ours'.

14) See 61a, 3-10.

16) our good frende]

Raphael.

17-18) The spirit is only permitted to speak through God's grace.

21) Gargat]

No further reference exists to this name in Dee's writings and I have not been able to trace any other origin.

22) sentence]

'meaning'.

26-29) Dee does not shy away from trying to convert the spirit to the ways of God.

36) Sic soleo iniustis]

'Thus I am accustomed [to deal] with the unjust'.

38-39) 'O Lord, purify your holy place and destroy the iniquity of your enemies'.

43) 'The true vision is truly noted. Let it still be noted to the glory of God'.

45) ye]

'Yea'.

46) 'I have spoken and it is done'.

47-48) common externall Judgmēt]

The judgement of the world.

48) the appertenances]

I think Dee is doubting Gilbert's aptitude for the evangelical aspect of the voyage rather than his suitability as a leader of the expedition.

50) See Psalm VIII, 2, Matthew XXI, 16, and Isaiah XXXV, 6.

51) the sonne]

'the sun'.

MN25) See 86b-87a (pp. 152-153 in Ashmole's pagination).

fol. 67a.

1) or man, so brittle a substance?]

See Genesis II, 7.

2) ientle]

'gentle'.

3) in a palpable imagination]

Animals clearly have minds, though incapable of rational discourse. Nature is here seen as residing in all created things, but in different ways: in trees and plants as a quality merely of life and growth; in animals as a discernible though elementary mind; in man as her true self and in her full glory.

4) the quantities]

In particular the elements, but presumably Nature mixes in man all that may in man be called Nature (i.e. not divine) according to the correct ratio.

6) norrished]

'Nourished'. Nature nourishes all in their kind, binding all differences together.

8-9) body...leadeth him]

These are body, soul and spirit (see MN8). Man is divided into three parts according to Agrippa: 'the naturall spirit ...is the middle by the which the soul is united with the flesh and the body, by the which the body liveth...which yet in some sense is also corporeall, notwithstanding it hath not a grosse body, tangible and visible, but a most subtile body and easie to be united with the mind viz. that superiour and Divine one which is in us' (Occ. Phil. III, 36, p. 461, misnumbered as 445). This 'naturall spirit' is the Animus Mundi. The third quality in Raphael's description could be equated with the Animus Mundi in that the strength of God could be seen as the binding element of the Creation, but I think the sense of Raphael's remarks is rather that man is composed of the corporeal, the spiritual and the divine. The divine part of man is not God, but rather the strength of God, and some correlation can be made with the concept of Νοῦς (Mind) in the Hermetic treatise Pimander. The supreme god is sometimes Νοῦς , but it is also man's intellect (working in a state free of the senses) and it is only through Νοῦς that God himself is knowable.

10) earth...fire]

According to Plato the elements differed in form rather than in substance and should therefore be spoken of not as 'being a thing' but rather as 'having a quality' (Timaeus, edited by Desmond Lee (Harmondsworth 1971), 17, p.67). In this he was followed by Aristotle, who added the theory of exhalations from which the alchemists derived much of their theory of transmutation of metals (see Taylor, The Alchemists, pp. 12-17). Plato, however, wrote that when earth met fire, it would be dissolved, but finally become earth again, for its parts 'can never be transformed into another figure' (Timaeus, 24, p. 78). Just how earth may 'in mixture' become fire in any permanent sense is therefore not clear, but Raphael's words may have a symbolic meaning: earth-(man) may, by the addition of an external fire (the Holy Spirit) and a comingling with it, become fire (divine).

12) the dogged harted people]

Israel in captivity.

13) the twelue Lamps]

The apostles.

20) him]

Adrian Gilbert.

23) John Davis]

See Introduction pp. 87-88. Davis was also involved in the expedition to find a North-West Passage.

ax]

'ask'.

24) Kalendar]

'list, register'.

25) the things before prescribed]

The angelic language.

28) 'To God alone be all honour and glory'.

34) Dee had been requested to prepare details concerning the reformation of the Julian Calendar and give his opinion concerning the scheme propounded by Pope Gregory XIII. He had delivered his treatise to the Lord Treasurer on 26 February 1583 (Diary) to whom it was also dedicated. The work caused much controversy, although Dee's calculations were generally approved by contemporary mathematicians. Pope Gregory's scheme (which was finally adopted by Chesterfield's Act of 1751) advocated that eleven days should be dropped from the Julian Calendar, whereas Dee proposed that ten days should be omitted. The Queen, advised by the bishops, did not accept either scheme. Dee's treatise is now Ashmole MS 1789, arts 1 & 3.

36-37) Concerning the voyage to discover a North-West Passage Dee had noted on 16 July 1582 that Sir George Peckham 'promysed me of his gift and of his patient [sic for 'patent'] ...of the new conquest' (Diary), while he had already been granted 'the royaltyes of discovery all to the North above the parallell of the 50 degree of latitude' by Humphrey Gilbert on 10 September 1580 (Diary). Dee is officially named in the request of 1582 that a patent be given for the North-West voyage.

39) behofe]
'advantage'.

42) partition]

'difference'.

43-44) These lines may be paraphrased as: 'all things have a share in an overall quality, but taken separately many different qualities are seen to make up this unity'.

49) in speculation]

'looking forward to the effects'.

ol. 67b.

5) intermedled]

'intermingled'.

8) Instigators]

These instigators or causes might be temporal or spiritual.

9-13) See 67a, 38-39. There is a difference between worldly advantage and spiritual advantage. Raphael offers no worldly help concerning Dee's setbacks, but offers comfort in the form of spiritual advancement, though with an accompanying disappointment in worldly affairs.

12) choseth]

Sic for 'chooseth'.

14) David was annointed as a future king by Samuel while he still tended his father's sheep (I Samuel XVI, 13), Samuel having been instructed by God (I Samuel XVI, 1-7).

22) It seems from the sense and the following line that the question should be in the negative.

23) yej]
This could be 'yes', the form of 'yej' arising from an accidental dot above the final 's' ('yeȷ'), and this is how Ashmole read it (see Sloane MS 3677, 109b). Greater sense is made, however, if 'yej' is regarded as an error for 'yet'.

24) ame]
Sic for 'am'.

28) the two former points]
See 67a, 34-37.

30) God, being all powerful, has rule over the acts and judgments of princes, but exercises that power according to his own judgment.

32) 'A twofold secret'?

37) shote]
'shoot'.

35-44) Dee is promised a future role of power as one of God's elect.

MN2) 'Proper angels'.

MN36)'Deceitful speech'.

MN47) 'Prevailing'.

'ol. 68a.

1) as thow hast deliuered]

This may mean either 'as you have said' (see 67b, 26-28) or 'as it has been delivered to you' (i.e. as Raphael has indicated at 67b, 35-50).

3) all Offices]

The 49 spirits who govern the world.

6) As things be planted here]

Either Dee has collected the various items for making the magical instruments or he is merely referring to the instructions written ('planted') in the manuscript (see line 10).

7) eas]

'ease'.

10) compendious]

'Abridged'. Dee thinks that a form of operation more suitable for travelling is required, which operation will not use the large Holy Table. Dee may already have been contemplating his Continental voyage.

16) the other]

Adrian Gilbert (see MN14).

19) The Erth and the tree]
Kelly and Dee (see MN17). Gilbert as the planter is not absolutely necessary to the Actions (see MN19).

21) God is invoked as a witness.

25) God shall performe the, thy Philosophicall Harmonie]
God will answer Dee's prayer for help and angelic visitation (see MN26)

27) physitien]
'physician'.

30-33) 'To almighty God, our creator, redeemer and sanctifier, be all honour, praise and act of thanks'.

MN26) 'Deus,in adiutorium meum intende: Domine ad adiuuandum me festina: Gloria [Deo], Patri, et Filio et spiritui [Sancto]' (see 5a, 7-10).

37) good friday]
29 March 1583.

38) savor]
The term is used in the general sense of 'sensation'.

40) This occurs again at 69, 8.

46) the paper of the letters]

A paper containing the letters of the Enochian alphabet, either fol. 64b or a transcription thereof.

ol. 68b.

4) This should properly read: 'the first side of the first leaffe of the boke'.

7) od]

'Odd' in the sense of 'extra'. 49 X 49 totals 2401.

10) Each side of the book in fact contains 2401 words, rather than 2401 letters (see 69a, 40-42).

11-15) The drawing of the rod El measures 36mm by 1mm.

14) The rod has previously been described as being two parts black and one part red (58a, 12-13).

16-20) The diagram on the right measures 40mm (1.6 inches) square.

16) Keph van]

The Enochian for the letters 'Z' and 'U'/'V'.

17) The Enochian for RESCH.

21) Med gal]
OD.

23) ADAPH

24) 14 letters have so far been shown occupying 3 squares.

25) MAL. At 64b, 12, the last letter is spelt 'vr', but the sound is like 'ourh' (64b, 17).

26-51) SES GENO AU MARLAN O MUSPA AGIOD PAN GA SES GAMPEDAZ CAPCNEH GO OD SEMELABUGEN DOMNA PHIAM GA VANCRAN VREPRES ADEPD AZE DRUZ TARDEMAH (such words as are translatable are dealt with in the Commentary to 69a, 27-33).

29) δρυξ is the Greek transliteration of 'druz'.

MN6) Dee's working out of 49 X 49.

MN44) 100 letters have been shown by the end of this line.

ɔl. 69a.

1-21) VA CESTS GRAPAD SED UNBAR DOMIOL ADEPOAD CHEVACH / MAH / OSSHE / DAPH ONIZDAR PANGEPHI ODAMH GEMEDSAL A DINOZA HOXPOR ADPUN DAR GARMES.

25-26) See Jeremiah XIX, 3-4 and John X, 2-4.

27-33) Dee evidently wrote these words of Enochian as he heard them spoken by Kelly. He then at a later time transliterated the words given between 68b, 16 and 69a, 21, making the appropriate corrections. Some words, however, he failed to correct properly. The true text should read: Zuresch od adaph mal ses geno au marlan o muspa agiod pan ga ses gampedaz capcneh go od semelabugen domna phiam ga vancran vrepres adepd aze druz tardemah va cests grapad sed unbar domiol adepoad chevach mah osshe daph onizdar pangephi odamh gemedsal a dinoza hoxpor adpun dar garmes. The letter van may represent either 'u' or 'v' and veh either 'c' or 'k'. The only words which are translatable (i.e. appear in the Calls in Sloane MS 3191 which bear an interlineated English translation) are:

od....'and / are / and are'.

a....'on / the'.

mal may have some connection with fire from malpurg, 'fiery darts'; malprg, 'a through thrusting fire'; malpirg, 'the fires of life and increase'.

o can stand for the number 5, but in conjunction with other words can mean 'that' or 'but'.

38) sely]

'holy, blessed, or poor' (see 42b, 41).

MN14) 100 letters are written between the end of 68b, 44 and the beginning of 69a, 14. A further 235 letters are then shown.

MN27) There is no indication as to where Dee obtained the word 'veresk', unless that is how he heard 'zuresk' at some stage.

fol. 69b.

8) See 68a, 40-43.

10) 'Eternity in heaven'.

13) Mensuratur]
'It is measured'.

14) Sint...intelligant]
'May their eyes be opened that they may understand'.

18) 'The second from the first' (i.e. the second line).

19-48) IHEHUSCH GRONHADOZ ARDEN O NA GEMPALO OICASMAN VANDRES ORDA VEVEIAH NOS PLIGNAPHE ZAMPONON ANEPH OPHE[C]D A MEDO[Z]X MARUNE GENA PRES NO DASMAT VORTS MANGET A DEUNE DAMPH NAXT OS VANDEMHNAXAT (A DEUNE is a hyphenated word: see 70a, 25).

fol. 70a.

1-20) OROPHAS VOR MINODAL AMUDAS GER PA O DAXZUM BANCES ORDAN PA PRES UMBLOSDA VORX NADON PATROPHES UNDES ADON GANEBNS IHEHUDZ.

11) Incomprehensibilis...tua]
'You are incomprehensible in your eternity'.

22) While making the corrections Dee at first thought that there was an error in 'Ihehusch', but then discovered that there was not and so put a line through the dots he had placed under that word.

22-27) The corrections made by Dee are true, with the exceptions of 'plignase' (23) which should be 'plignaphe' and 'ma' (26) which should be 'pa'. There is also some doubt about 'ganebus' (27) as opposed to 'ganebns' (see line 19 and MN19). The words for which a translation exists are as follows:

o.....'five' or 'that' or 'but'.

a.....'on' or 'the'.

os.....'twelve'.

There may be some connection between vorts (line 24), vor (25) and the two words vors, 'over' and vorsg, 'over you'. Adon (27) may be related to adoian, 'the face'.

Ihehusch sounds like Jesus and many words in Enochian beginning with 'I', 'Iad' and 'Ieh' concern attributes of God (e.g. Iad, 'God'; Iadnah, 'the ark of knowledge'; Iehusoz, 'his mercies'). On the grounds that Ihehusch signifies Jesus, it is possible to conjecture that vandemhnaxat (25) means 'disciples / apostles / followers' since it is preceded by os, 'twelve'.

32) Gehudz]

This is presumably how Dee first heard Ihehudz (28), but he corrected it when making the fair copy which forms this manuscript (see line 36).

36) soluted]

'solved'.

38) cōteyne]

'contain'.

42) The visions disappear on account of Dee's presumption in requesting a faster method of delivery.

MN19) van]

The letter 'u' in Enochian.

fol. 70b.

2) Line 2 is completed to the right hand of line 3.

6) See Isaiah V, 21.

10) There is perhaps the word 'are' missing before '49 voyces'. There are 49 leaves in the book, each with a square of 49 X 49 spaces.

19) God in his role as a God of vengeance to the wicked is frequently likened to a whirlwind (see for instance Isaiah LVI, 15, Jeremiah XXIII, 19, Nahum I, 3 and Zechariah IX, 14).

20) 'We are far from the perversity of destruction'.

26) here]
'hear'.

29) Whether 'element' means letter, word or syllable is not clear and the 49 ways of understanding are never explained.

31) The implication is that when the single language of man was confounded at the Tower of Babel, it was split into separate languages which it already contained. Perhaps these languages were 49 in number (see line 29).

35) 'There is nothing here which is not perfect'.

37) See 65a, 7-8.

38) here]
i.e. into the stone.

40) Dee is to receive instruction directly from God.

MN11) See 62b, 27-30 and 62b, MN29.

MN40) Theodidacti]
'persons taught by God'.

fol. 71a.

1) choseth]
'chooseth'.

2) This prophecy is frequently repeated in connection with the Book of Enoch.

3) Powre must distinguish]
I presume that this refers to the election of Dee and Kelly by God for the furtherance of God's purposes.

4) by thy finger]
Kelly was described as the finger to Dee's hand at 62b, 37-38.

9) There are two senses to the word 'see'. Dee and Kelly may see that God's 'might is great'. God's sight is 'the light of his own powre' and 'till he see' is to be understood in the sense of God's looking and sending forth his light, rather than receiving it.

12) workmanship]
'Work', an early usage according to OED.

15) Ne Ne Ne na Iabes]
Enochian for 'holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts' (ne, 'holy'; na, 'Lord of Hosts'; Iabes, 'God, Lord, Supreme Life').
See Isaiah VI, 3.

16-18) 'Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts. Heaven and earth are full of the glory of his majesty, to whom be alone be all honour, praise and glory' (the Sanctus).

MN1) 'Power'.

22) A voyce like a Thunder]

God's voice (see Job XXXVII, 4; XL, 9, and Psalm XVIII, 13).

25) Aqua vita is alcohol achieved through distillation; it burns with a blue flame.

26) Sum]

'I am' (see Exodus III, 14).

29) Impleta...tuo]

'All things are fulfilled to your glory and honour'.

35) The fire enables Kelly to read and understand the words (see 71b, 7) and when the fire leaves him he can no longer understand the language. See Acts II, 3-4: 'and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon ach of them. And they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance'.

44) 'Thus I am accustomed to purify the errors of men'.

MN33) This sketch measures 5mm square and represents the book.

fol. 71b.

2) mowght]

'might'.

4) See Commentary to 71a, 35.

11-14) The translatable words are:

ge.....'our / not'.

da.....'there'.

o.....'but / that / five'.

a.....'on / the'.

16) Ergo...Sum]

'I am he who is in you. Therefore to myself who is'. The second sentence is rather like a reply to line 17. Concerning the relation of 'Sum' to the Tetragrammaton see Commentary to 42b, 15.

17) 'Not to ourselves, O Lord, not to ourselves, but to your name do we give glory' (see Psalm CXV, 1).

19-24) Apart from 'o' (see Commentary to lines 11-14 above), the translatable words are as follows:

ar.....'winnow / that / so that'.

la.....'one / the first'.

de.....' of / to'.

ca.....'therefore'.

ol.....'I / myself'.

Whether 'ŏl' is the same as 'ol' is uncertain.

27) Orate]

'Pray'.

32-34) The translatable words are:

ar.....'winnow / that / so that'.

a.....'on / the'.

fol. 72a.

1-12) The translatable words are:

a .....See Commentary to 71b, 32-34 above.

es.....'four'.

da.....'there'.

iads is probably related to Iad, 'God'.

Concerning Ihehusch (line 2) see Commentary to 70a, 22.

17) Locus est hic sanctus]

'This place is holy' (see 71a, 46).

18) Sacer est a te Domine]

'It is [made] holy by you, O Lord'.

21-30) The translatable words are:

gah.....'spirit(s)'.

da.....'there'.

ar.....'winnow / that / so that'.

a.....'on / the'.

ors.....'darkness'.

adma may be related to adna, 'obedience'.

NA must be the name of God (see Commentary to 11b, 34, and also fol. 74a, MN26).

MN3) It is unlikely that this is a translation of adipr, but rather that Dee is noting a significance between spelling and pronunciation.

ol. 72b.

1-5) The translatable words are:

las.....'rich'.

a.....'on / the'.

o.....'but / the / five'.

Concerning Na see 11b, 34 and 74a, MN26.

10-12) This is not a direct biblical quotation, but see I Chronicles XVI, 9 and Psalm CV, 2.

22) Magnus]

'Great'.

23) Locer...Deo]

'A holy place acceptable to God' (see 72a, 18).

26) This reads vlla doh in Enochian script, or more properly doh vlla since Enochian is written from right to left (allv hod). A transposition of the words takes place in the next line.

27-32) The translatable words are:

par.....'they / (in) them'.

olna may be related to oln, 'made'.

Concerning NA see 11b, 34 and 74a, MN26.

MN23) 'A holy place'.

MN26) The letter 'v' should be ℸ in Enochian whereas here it looks more like veh, ℶ , 'c'.

Col. 73a.

1-5) The translatable words are:

dax.....'loins'.

o.....'but / that / five'.

ar.....'that'.

a.....'on / the'.

da.....'there'.

gohed.....See MN3.

cruscanse...See MN5.

nap may be related to napta, 'sword(s)'.

7-18) The translatable words are:

a.....'on / the'.

pola.....See MN11.

par.....'they / (in) them'.

iad.....'God'.

dax (line 10) may mean 'loins' but its presence as part of a compound word raises some uncertainty.

ALLA may be a borrowing of the Moslem name of God.

21-26) The translatable words are:

a.....'on / the'.

la.....'first'.

ALLA.....See Commentary to lines 7-18.

MN17) Dee originally miscalculated by not regarding the underlined words as compound words.

MN21) Dee miscounted and thought that there were only 48 words shown, A possible underlining of 'sama' (line 15) to make the compound word 'no tempa ro sama' shows in the manuscript, but I am not convinced enough of its existence to put it in this transcript; it may be just a mark or the end of the pen stroke since it does not underline the whole word. Whatever the reason for Dee's miscalculation, if his marginal note is correct, one would expect the next group of words to be 50 in number. They are however only 49 as usual. See also 79b, 13.

Fol. 73b.

5) a peces]

'in pieces'.

7-12) The translatable words are:

a.....'on / the'.

o.....'but / that / five'.

ne.....'holy'.

asch (line 9) may be related to Ascha, 'God' (73a,MN3).

14-20) The only translatable word is a, 'on / the'.

22) Orate]

'Pray'.

23-29) The translatable words are:

crus.....'more'.

a.....'on / the'.

la.....'first'.

par.....'they / (in) them'.

Mica may mean 'power', since all compounds of mica concern power and might.

MN9) See 64b, 34.

MN14) See 72a, MN23.

MN24) Cruse]

'A pot, jar, bottle or drinking vessel' (OED)

ol. 74a.

1-8) The translatable words are:

iaisg.....See MN2.

a.....'on / the'.

os.....'twelve'

de.....'of / to'.

Peleh (line 8) may be a name of God (see Pele at 12a,46).

chramsa.....SeeMN4.

iaialphzudph may be compounded partly from iaial, 'include / conclude'.

12) Orate]

'Pray'.

15-21) The translatable words are:

galsagen.....See MN14RH.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

a.....'on / the'.

23-28) The translatable words are:

a..... 'on / the'.

la.....'first'.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

da.....'there'.

ne.....'holy'.

Concerning life see MN24.

MN7) 'Iently' (gently) refers to the 'ch' sound which should be soft rather than hard. Dee often notes the hard sound by writing a 'k' above the 'ch' (see line 2).

MN16) This refers to the word 'alpan'.

MN24) Quite what the words mean is not clear, though their implication is explained.

MN24RH) There is no evidence as to when Dee first heard the phrase.

MN26) See 71a, 15.

fol. 74b.

3-8) The translatable words are:

a.....'on / the'.

os.....'twelve'.

om.....'know / understand'.

dax.....'loin(s)'.

Sem (line 8) appears to mean 'in his place' (see MN8).

10-15) The translatable words are:

a.....'on / the'.

ag.....'none / no / no one'.

There are only 48 words here if the compound word ar pah (line 14) is in one square, but the marginal note suggests that the two parts of the word are in different squares and so might be mistaken as being separate words.

17) See 72b, 7-8.

21-22) 'Glory be to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, now and always'.

29) Bonus...es]

'It is good, O God, because you are goodness itself'.

30) Et...Magnitudinis]

'And [it is] great, because you [are] the magnitude of greatness itself' (i.e. God is the sum of greatness).

31) Adgmach means 'much glory' (see MN31).

32) Sum...locus]
'I am, and this place is holy'.

33) There is no translation of hucacha, but considering its sound and context it is possible to hazard a guess that it means 'in the highest'.

36) Presumably NA is again the name of God NA.

MN32) 'A holy place'.

fol. 75a.

1-6) The translatable words are:

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.
vors.....'over'.
gascampho.....'why didst thou so?' (see MN4).
ge.....'not / our'.
Befes argedco..'O Befafes, we summon you with humility and adoration of the Trinity' (see MN5).

9) 'Welcome to you in [the name of] him who is with you'.

12-15) Kelly is reading out the words and Dee is presumably repeating them as he writes them. Raphael warns that this repetition will result in the Enochian being put to use as invocations at the same time as being written down. The troubles that could ensue are shown by Kelly's experience detailed at fol. 88b.

24) axed]

'asked'.

28) 'Vors' customarily means 'over'.

34-35) God will make Dee hear and write the words perfectly.

40-46) The translatable words are:

ors.....'darkness' (though here it is part of a compound word).

arphe.....'descend'.

MN5) Deus sine fine...Deus a Deo]

'God without end...God from God'. The note is erased on account of the fact that orh is defined as a wicked spirit 'contrary to Befafes'. Even here, however, some confusion remains, for the note of the wicked spirit in fact refers to arzulgh (see second MN5).

MN5RH) Orh is underlined and is presumably the word to which this note has reference, although semhaham may be connected with the shemhamphorash, the 72 letter name of God extracted by the kabalists from writing Exodus XIV, 19-21 boustrophedon (see C.D. Ginsburg, The Kabbalah (London 1865) pp. 138-141).

MN5 following) Lumen a Lumine]

'Light from Light'.

MN5) Spiritus...tenebrarū]

'The spirit orh is the second in the scale of the imperfection of darkness'. The source of this information is not clear.

Fol. 75b.

3-9) The translatable words are:

las.....'rich'.

uran.....'see'.

Asch may be derived from ascha, 'God'.

11-16) There are no translatable words in this passage.

18-24) The translatable words are:

lu.....'nor'.

26-31) The translatable words are:

ca.....'therefore'.

Bobagelzod must derive from the spirit Bobogel, despite the slight difference in spelling.

MN3) The 'preface' would therefore be up until the recitation of the 23rd line of the square which is 49 X 49.

Fol. 76a.

4-9) This time Kelly does not lose his understanding of the language and its significance immediately.

10-12) 'To our living, true and omnipotent God be all praise and act of thanks, now and always' ('graz' for 'gratiarum').

16) Quia...infinita]
'Because God, God, our God himself, whose infinite mercy'.
The sentence is unfinished.

21-27) There are no translatable words in this passage.
The words in capitals would seem to be names.

29-35) The translatable words are:

sem.....'in his place' (see 74b, MN8).

dax.....'loin(s)'.

MN31) It is not clear whether this note refers to tohcoth or Labaäh, since both are underlined.

ol. 76b.

1-8) The translatable words are:

geh.....'thou art'.

padgze.....See MN6.

10-17) The only translatable word is Congamphlgh (see MN11).

19-25) Assuming that parts of compound words will not necessarily retain the meaning assigned to them as individual words, the only translatable word is dax, 'loin(s)'. In order for these words to fill 49 squares each part of a compound word must occupy a different square, and one other word must further be split into two squares; lothe (line 22) is the most likely candidate as it is underlined in two sections.

26-28) There are no translatable words in these lines.

MN6) 'Justice from the least divine [power, but] without blemish'.

MNLL) fide]
'by faith'.

Fol. 77a.

1-2) There are no translatable words in this passage.

6-10) There are no translatable words in this passage and taking each part of the compound words to be in different squares, the total comes to fifty and not to forty-nine.

12-17) There are no translatable words in this passage, but the excess number of words in lines 6-10 is compensated for by there being only 48 here.

19) Orate]
'Pray'.

20-25) There are 51 words here (2 in excess, not 3 or 4 as Dee writes in MN23), none of which is translatable.

30-31) See 39b, 50-51.

ol. 77b.

4) Expectas expectaui Dominū]

'I waited patiently for the Lord', Psalm XXXIX, 1 (Vulgate); Psalm XL (Authorised).

8) Charles Sled]

No information is forthcoming on this person.

9-12) Dee takes this as a prophecy that the Jews will be restored to their land. The image of the headless people may simply represent the Jews scattered over the face of the globe, but may also be derived in a circuitous way from I Corinthians XI, 3, where St. Paul writes that 'the head of every man is Christ', whom the Jews rejected.

15-16) A Trinitarian symbol.

21-27) The translatable words are:

iusmach.....'begotten' (see MN22).

amma.....'curse(d)'.

iadsma (26) probably concerns some aspect of God (iad means 'God').

29-36) There are 51 words here, counting Adgzelga and the underlined dox an ga had as each single words, but the hyphenated last word as two. If the corrected version of the first word is taken into account there are 53 words and there is no method of reducing the number down to 49.

The translatable words are:

phama.....'I will give' (see MN30).

od.....'and'.

bethlemcha may well mean 'Bethlehem' in which case iehusa (33) and iehuscoth may refer in some way to Jesus (cf. iehusoz means 'mercy').

ol. 78a.

1-6) There are only 43 words here, even counting the parts of the compound words separately. The reason given for this shortage is that Kelly was not given time to read the line properly (see MN2).

The translatable words are:

Arphe.....'I desire the O God' (see MN1).

apachana.....'the slimy things made of dust' (MN3).

vges (3) may be connected with 'strength' (see vgeg, 'become strong'; vgegi, 'waxeth strong'; vgear, 'strength').

8-15) There are no translatable words in these lines, although Na zuma may be related to the name of God NA.

17-22) Do nasdoga matastos is translated in MN19 and vnchas may be related to vnchi, 'confound'.

24-29) There are no translatable words in these lines.

MN19) This refers to do nasdoga matastos.

Col. 78b.

1-8) The only translatable word in these lines is lu (line 4) which in Sloane MS 3191 customarily means 'nor', but is translated here as 'from one' (see MN4).

12-14) 'To God alone be all praise, honour and glory through all eternity'.

19-20) See 68a, 40-43.

21) SVM]
'I am'.

22) Sum quod sum]
'I am that I am' (see Exodus III, 14). There seems to be no relation of gahoachma with either the Hebrew or the usual Enochian word for 'I am', zir(do).

23-28) There are 52 words here if each interrupted underlineation is treated as a hyphen, but there is no method by which the number may reduced to 49 according to a consistent rule. The only translatable word is lu (see Commentary to lines 1-8 above).

30-32) Counting the interrupted underlineations as hyphens there are 49 words here, but none are translatable.

ol. 79a.

1-4) Only 47 squares would be filled by these words. The translatable words are:

Nostoah.....'it was in the beginning' (see MN1; geuamna may form part of the phrase).

da.....'there'.

iurehoh is partly explained at MN4.

6-9) Only 44 squares would be filled by these words (see MN9). The only w rd that can in any way be translated is NA, the name of God.

13) See 77b, 15-16.

14) Laua zuraah]

See MN14.

15) noyce]

'noise'.

16-23) The translatable words are:

iana (which) may refer to the Daughter of Light (26b, 45).

dax.....'loin(s)'.

oxex.....'vomit'.

lonsas may be connected with lonsa, 'power'.

25-29) The translatable words are:

Amgedpha.....See MN25.

galdamichaël presumably describes some attribute of the angel Michael and iadse some attribute of God (iad, 'God').

MN14) Pray into god]

Sic for 'pray unto God'.

MN21) See 10a, 26.

MN27) See 80b, 38.

ol. 79b.

1-2) Om is the only translatable word, meaning 'know / understand'.

3) sindall]

A thin rich silken material. The colour blue can signify hope, faith, the Virgin Mary, eternity (applied to God) and immortality (applied to man) in ecclesiastical symbolism (Cirlot, Dictionary of Symbols). Blue also forms the outer lines of the Holy Table and Dee notes that his copy of the book is likewise to be covered in blue (MN4).

11) This probably refers to a flash of lightning rather than a growing light. The word in its archaic form can mean either.

12) See 71a, 46 and 77b, 15-16.

13) See Commentary to 73a, MN21.

16) perceyuerance]
It is unlikely that this refers to steadfastness in this context; a meaning of 'perception' would be more appropriate. The OED does not list this form, but does list 'apperceyvrance'.

18-19) 'Let all creatures unceasingly sound the glory and praise of our creator'.

25) thrise]
'thrice'.

33) See Exodus III, 14.

34) 'May his voice come that he may tell the sons of men what is to come'. The speaker is Uriel (see line 36).

36) 'Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord'

39-40) These may perhaps represent Kelly and Dee (so often represented by Δ), imbued with God's knowledge.

42-44) The month of misery will therefore be September 1583, and on the 21st day of that month Dee left Mortlake with his wife and children, Kelly and his family, and Albert Lasky, for the Continent (Diary).

'ol. 80a.

5) Uriel holds up the triangle of fire (see MN5) which may represent Dee inspired with heavenly wisdom.

7) The number 49 is significant to the book containing the angelic language.

11) This other]

The ball of fire (see MN11).

11-13) Ashmole writes 'the seveanth part' but Dee certainly wrote 'seventith' (i.e. seventieth) and the cause of Ashmole's transcribal error is unclear. Whereas Dee is to receive the knowledge that will 'renew' him many times, Kelly is given a fraction of the wisdom symbolised by the round ball of fire (see lines 42-43 below). Kelly's proportion is $\frac{1}{5390}$ if 'the first part of seuenty seuen' means $\frac{1}{77}$. Apart from the customary significance attached in magic to the number seven (see Commentary to 18a, 32), I can find no importance in these numbers.

14-15) See John XX, 22: Christ 'breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost'.

16-17) See Introduction pp. 143-144.

20) the tyme of God his Abridgmēt]

The writing of the book is to hasten the coming of God's kingdom upon earth.

24-25) See Exodus XXXII, 33; Deuteronomy IX, 14 and XXIX, 20.

27) hable]

'able'.

36) Eache line]

Each line of letters in the angelic language.

40-41) 'Behold the servant and wretched little man of our God; let it be done to me according to the pleasure of his will'. To an extent this resembles Mary's reply to the Annunciation.

42-43) Presumably this is reported by Kelly rather than seen by Dee. The fire comes from the ball and not the triangle.

Col. 80b.

4) Mistres Haward]

Frances Seymour, daughter of William, Lord Howard of Effingham (1510?-1573) by his second wife Margaret (d. 1581), and herself the second wife of Sir Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford (1539-1621). They were married sometime before 1582 and she died without issue on 14 May 1598 (DNB).

5-6) The Action began at 10.15 in the morning (see 78b) but began again, after an interruption, in the afternoon (see 79b).

9) See 79b, 42-44.

27) in character]
In the angelic script.

30) Kelly must have a book before him in which to write down the words from the visionary book on the table. The description in line 31 fits the first page of the Book of Enoch (Sloane MS 3189, fol. 3a) exactly, and this suggests that the Book of Enoch was written as the words were first delivered, at least up until the section that is composed of squares 49 X 49, and is not a fair copy.

35) second page of the first leafe]
See Sloane MS 3189 fols. 3a-4a. In fact these are two pages, but Ashmole's correction of 'page' to 'row' (MN35) is of no help (as the erasure presumably shows he realised).

37) The Enochian script in fact reads asney vah nol (see MN38). The mistake remains in the Book of Enoch.

38-42) None of these words are translatable. The lines are continued on fol 82a.

›l. 81a.
This inserted leaf measures 200mm high by 142mm across. The letters in the left hand column read NHQBUFXODZLSGAP as do those in the right hand column. The central column reads CETPRIM. The statement that they concern 'letters names, vsed in sense' suggests that these are letters used as numbers.

The parts of the Enochian language for which a translation does exist do not bear this out however, for the numbers are represented by different words: 5 is O, 1 is L and 9 is M, for instance. There are some indecipherable notes at the bottom of the folio, which is not transcribed by Ashmole in Sloane MS 3677.

fol. 81b.

This folio is written sideways.

2) The book in the vision consists of 49 leaves, but Dee needs more than one leaf to write down the contents of the first leaf in the visionary book, thereby exceeding 49 leaves in his copy.

3-6) The last 9 rows of the second series of 49 shown consist only of single letters (see 85b, 11-19). The disparity between the size of square required to contain the words shown before these last 9 rows, a size that cannot fit in Dee's book (see line 2 above), and the size of square required to take the last 9 rows leaves Dee with considerable problems of transcription. This second series of 49 is called 'the first leafe' because it forms the first series in both the visionary and extant versions of the Book of Enoch. The previous series of 49 is not included in that book.

7-11) Dee has transcribed much of the tables by ear and so is uncertain about the true spelling of some words on account of the hard and soft sounds that the letters are capable of representing.

14-17) As a result of the fact that not all rows consist of 49 words, a perfect table of 49 X 49 squares cannot be constructed. The table would be 'wide' since the squares would be filled with words rather than single letters; the ensuing tables in the Book of Enoch use only single letters or numbers.

MN) The word 'solgars' may give a clue as to the date of these notes. On 3 June 1583 Dee was given instruction to inscribe the word 'solgars' in Enochian script on a 'plate of lead' along with the name of a patient numerically expressed, in order to create a talisman which would act 'as a cure against...infections'. Dee had a certain Isabel Lister and 'another woman, who hath great need' in mind (see TFR, p. 5).

fol. 82a.

1-2) There are no translatable words apart from the name of God NA.

4-10) The only translatable word is os, 'twelve'.

12-18) There are no translatable words in these lines.

20-25) The only translatable word is adna, 'obedience'.

27-29) Apart from the name of God NA, none of these words are translatable.

MN4) This note concerns andsu.

MN10) Whether armad is one word or not, it must come from one square in order to maintain the total of 49 words.

MN17) Ω is the Enochian script for the letter 'P'.

'ol. 82b.

1-3) The only translatable word is nor, 'son(s)'. There are fifty words in this passage.

5-10) The only translatable word is orh, although its precise meaning is a matter of some doubt (see Commentary to 75a, MN5).

12-14) The translatable words are:

goho.....'(he) sayeth'.

vors.....'over'.

16-19) There are 50 words here of which only ol, 'I / myself' is translatable. Aschah may perhaps be related to ascha (see 73a, MN3).

21-25) The only translatable word is nor, 'son(s)'.

27-32) The only translatable word is ar, 'winnow / (so) that'.

MN14) In fact there are only 35 words.

MN32) There are in fact 49 words if the usual practice of regarding a hyphenated word as two words is followed.

fol. 83a.

1-3) None of these words is translatable and furthermore they would occupy 55 squares.

5-7) None of these words is translatable and they would occupy 50 squares.

9-12) The only translatable word is geh, 'thou art'.

14-17) The only translatable word is ar, 'winnow / (so) that'.

19-23) The only translatable word is par, 'they / (in) them'.

25-29) The translatable words are:

vors.....'over'.
las.....'rich'.
a.....'on / the'.

MN3) Dee may have written that there were 54 words, although there are in fact 55.

fol. 83b.

1-5) There are no translatable words, although lefe (line 4) has occurred before in the phrase life lefe Lurfando (see 74a, MN24).

7-10) There are 50 words, none of which is translatable.

12-16) The translatable words are:

ol.....'I / myself'.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

The separation of ol and the name of God NA by the word madan suggests that madan is related to Mad, 'God'.

18-23) The translatable words are:

gah.....'spirit(s)'.

ol.....'I / myself'.

25-31) The translatable words are:

ol.....'I / myself'.

om.....'know / understand'.

There is some doubt over the meaning of gorh (see 75a, MN5).

33-35) The translatable words are:

ar.....'winnow /(so) that'.

geh.....'spirit(s)'.

lu.....'nor / from one'.

om.....'know / understand'.

MN19) This note refers to the first syllable of gunzanquah.

MN28) both these]

i.e. both paragraphs together.

fol. 84a.

1-2) There are no translatable words in these lines.

4-9) The only translatable word is vors, 'over'. Sabaothal is presumably related to Deus Sabaoth, 'Lord God of Hosts' and Iadd with Iad, 'God'.

11-16) The translatable words are:

geh.....'thou art'.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

18-22) The translatable words are:

ol.....'I / myself'.

ne.....'holy'.

vors.....'over'.

24-29) The translatable words are:

ne.....'holy'.

a.....'on / the'.

vors.....'over'.

nor.....'son(s)'.

31-36) The translatable words are:

nor.....'son(s)'.

vors.....'over'.

a.....'on / the'.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

ol. 84b.

1-5) The translatable words are:

ne.....'holy'.

ol.....'I / myself'.

a.....'on / the'.

7-12) There are no translatable words in these lines.

14-19) The translatable words are:

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

de.....'of / to'.

vors.....'over'.

geh.....'thou art'.

par.....'they / (in) them'.

goh is the root of words that betoken various parts of the verb 'to say' (e.g. gohe, 'say'; gohol, 'saying'; gohus, 'I say').

21-26) The translatable words are:

ors.....'darkness'.

adnah may be related to adna, 'obedience' and aldah to aldi, 'gathering' and aldon, 'gather / gird up'.

28-32) The translatable words are:

adna.....'obedience'.

nor.....'son(s)'.

34-36) The only translatable words are a, 'on / the' and geh, 'thou art', but they occur together (line 35) and the combined translation does not make sense.

MN26) There are only 48 words between lines 22 and 27.

fol. 85a.

1-2) The only translatable word is adna, 'obedience'.

4-7) The translatable words are:

ors.....'darkness'.

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

bah (4) may be related to bahal, 'cry aloud'.

9-11) None of these words is translatable.

14-17) The only translatable word is la, 'first'. There are only 47 words here.

19-22) None of these words is translatable.

24-27) The only translatable word is ar, 'winnow / (so) that'.

29-33) In order to make just 49 words neo must be counted as a single word despite its double underlining. The translatable words are:

geh.....'thou art'.

a.....'on / the'.

os.....'twelve'.

35-36) The translatable words are:

ar.....'winnow / (so) that'.

vors.....'over'.

gohor may be part of the verb 'to say' (see Commentary to 84b, 14-19).

Tal may mean 'as the first' or 'as God', since ta can mean 'as' and l can mean 'the first' or 'God' (El). Such compounding of words does sometimes occur in Enochian: see vors, 'over' and vorsg, 'over you'.

Col. 85b.

1-4) The only translatable word is ol, 'I / myself'.

6-9) None of these words is translatable.

11-19) The commas show the ends of these words which are evidently written from left to right, although the Enochian language is normally written from right to left. The only translatable word is a, 'on / the' (lines 11 and 18). These lines differ from the previous lines in that each square now only holds one letter, rather than a complete word, and this caused Dee to foresee difficulty in drawing up a square of 49 X 49 squares to contain both practices (see 81b, 3-6).

20) later]

'latter'.

21) an other boke]

Sloane MS 3191, The Book of Enoch, where the 49 preceding rows are also written (see Commentary to 80b, 30).

28) fortith]

'fortieth' (see 79a, 25).

34-35) Neither of these persons is identifiable.

34) greciā]

'Greek' (grecian).

38) καϑόλικϑ]

Katastiktos, 'spotted, stained'.

39) maculosus or condemnatus]

'defiled or condemned'.

40) Est]

'He is'.

MN2) ouɣna]

'oumna', for 'amna'.

MN39) 'strong, steadfast'. This is the opposite of what is said at line 39.

fol 86a.

1-6) See 61a, 3-11. This is the scroll found at Northwick Hill and given to Dee by Kelly on 22 March when he returned with John Husy from Blockley.

fol. 86b.

This folio consists of ten circles showing clues as to the identity of ten places. Earth from each of these places was to be gathered and then used in an undivulged manner to find buried treasure (see Introduction pp. 158-160). The circles measure 67mm in diameter except for the largest which is 83mm in diameter. The script is not Enochian, but probably something made up by Kelly, since there is a strong suggestion of fraud concerning this scroll. On 5 June 1583 Dee noted that Kelly was 'in a marvellous great disquietnesse of minde, fury, and rage' because he had heard of a commission being out to 'apprehend him as a fellon for coyning of money', because his 'wife was gone from Mistresse Freemans house at Blokley', and because 'Mr. Husey had reported him to be a cosener'.

Some letters in the first circle are indecipherable, bearing no relation to the script as shown later (87a), but such as may be deciphered reads 'gilds cros / hic o..... / meridio...a / onali .oton'.

The writing in the second circle (across) reads 'blankes suters croces'.

The writing in the third reads 'marsars got cros'.

The writing in the fourth circle reads 'huteos cros'.

The writing in the fifth circle reads 'fluds grenul'.

The writing in the sixth circle reads 'mons mene'.

The writing in the seventh circle reads 'mountegles arnid'.

The writing in the eighth circle reads 'lan sapant'.

The writing in the ninth circle reads 'corts nulds'.

The writing in the tenth and largest circle reads 'morr merse'.

fol. 87a.

This leaf is bound into the MS and measures 190mm wide by 134mm high. It reads as follows:

> Tabula locorum rerum et thesaurorum absconditorum menadoni mei gordanili militis et danaorum principis expulsi multormque [sic] aliorum clarissimorum [ȝ for z] britanie meridionali parte virorum contra eiusdem inhabitatores militantium quam hic familiarissimorum [ȝ for z] consensu aliquando ad nostratium rediuntium commoditatem et auxillium abscondere et sepelire decrevi qua quidem intellecta facile possunt ad lucem abscondita efferre.

The erasure at line 3 reads 'mil'. It is not certain whether this leaf is in Kelly's hand or whether it is a copy by Dee, his transcription causing the inaccuracies. For the origin of the

'scroll' see 61a, 3-11

fol. 88a.

2) There is no reference in Dee's Diary to this Court visit.

4) cifre]

'cipher' (see 87a).

7) gessing]

Perhaps an error rather than a conscious spelling.

9-12) There is some doubt about 'k' and 'x' (see MN23). From the deciphering of the script between lines 14 and 20 it is plain that the cipher for 'x' is √.

14-20) 'The table of places of hidden things and treasures belonging to Menahan, my Gordanil (?), soldier and prince of the Danes who was driven out, and to many other most famous men (in the southern part of Britain) who fought against the inhabitants of that same place. I have decided to remove and hide this table here, with the agreement of my nearest friends and relations, [so that] sometime [it may be] for the use and help of my countrymen who return. By this table, when it is understood, they can easily bring the hidden things to light'.

At 87a, 2, 'Menahan' is 'Menadon'. 'Gordanil' may be a fabricated word for a title of some kind, or perhaps of a tribe (e.g. 'Menahan, of my Gordanil tribe').

Why a Dane should leave a message for his compatriots written in coded Latin is incomprehensible and furthers the argument that it is a fraud perpetrated by Kelly.

23-33) The squares in which these words are written measure in order 55mm wide by 23mm high, 37mm by 15mm, 52mm by 8mm, 18mm by 10mm, 32mm by 10 mm, 27mm by 6mm, 32mm by 8mm, 22mm by 12mm, and 25mm by 15mm. See Commentary to 86b for the words as they are written in the original document.

The words purport to be the names of places and some are obviously so. Gilds Cross, Blankis Suters Cross, Marsars Got Cross and Huteos Cross (Huet's Cross: see MN5) are either place names or landmarks. Huet's Cross is evidently by Northwick Hill (see MN5). The only place that I have been able to identify, however, is Mons Mene which is almost certainly what is now called Meon Hill, some seven miles NNE of Blockley. It is most likely that all the places are in the Cotswold area.

It may be that some attempt has been made to construct names that might be of Danish origin (e.g. Fleds Grenul), but the mixture with Latin is unsatisfactory. Mowntegles Arnid is presumably not intended to recall Lord Monteagles but the coincidence is telling.

MN5) The book is that which is often referred to as having been written by St. Dunstan, but of which no precise record exists.

MN15) In fact Danes, Saxons and native Britons formed a reasonably united population under Canute and while powerful factions rose in dispute on his death in 1035 it is false to think of the Danes either invading or leaving England's shores.

MN23) Inexplicably Charlotte Fell Smith believed this note to indicate Dee's mistrust of Kelly when it clearly concerns the doubt over the character for the letter 'k' in the coded document (Charlotte Fell Smith, John Dee:1527-1608 (London 1909), p. 91).

fol. 88b.

2) the eightenth leafe]

The first ten leaves of the Book of Enoch contain the second series of 49 rows in this manuscript. There is no indication when the other rows were received, but since the letters appeared in the air (see 88b, 30-31) and the rows were recorded in Sloane MS 3189, there was no need for Dee to record them here as well.

3-26) Dee and Kelly were warned earlier about the dangers of reading the tables after writing them (see 75a, 11-15).

6) Spades are appropriate to spirits of the earth who presumably guard the earth's treasures.

heares]

'hair'.

hanginging]

Sic, an error for 'hanging'.

15) Dee would be ruling squares for the Book of Enoch. In Sloane MS 3189 only the outside lines of the 49 X 49 squares are ruled between fols 10a and 11b, but from fol. 12a all the squares are drawn.

17) wrest]

'wrist'.

19) The circles measure 7mm and 10mm in diameter. Dee evidently sees these marks for himself, but they could be self-inflicted by Kelly, perhaps indeed by pressing groats upon his wrist, although such an action generally only produces an impression of the outer edge of the coin.

20-26) Since Dee could not see the spirits (see line 24), the scene must have afforded Kelly much amusement, unless they were indeed afflictions of his mind.

23) gyrning]

'snarling, baring their teeth' obs. (OED).

26) Baggagis]

'Baggages', an abusive term.

avoyded]

'went away'.

29) The Queen visited Dee this day (Diary).

30-31) See 80b, 15-20.

31) a blak clowde]

This cloud is reminiscent of the heptagon bearing the names and seals of the seven princes (fol. 71a).

32) Dee was no longer using the stone since the letters appeared in the air to Kelly.

37) carful]

'Full of care'. The sentence declares that Dee is not to worry since God has promised to deliver the letters to him.

38-39) Three fingers must therefore be at each corner.

40) assone]

'as soon'.

44) This is a separate note at the foot of the page joined by a line to line 32.

MN29) Good Friday was 29 March.

MN37) αυτος εφα]

A Greek version of 'ipse dixit', meaning 'he himself said'.

dc̄]

An abbreviation for dictum, dictum Deus meaning 'read as God'. Ipse is a Latin equivalent of the Tetragrammaton in its usage.

fol. 89a.

7) severally]

'individually'.

14-15) See 70a, 38-70b, 5.

14-20) While Dee's earlier request for the tables to be delivered more speedily was resolved (70a, 38-70b, 5), Dee is here again reprimanded for complaining that the tables may no longer be seen, as if the judgement of when they should appear were in his hands.

24-25) Dee's work (the 'fardell') will be completed during the time of sorrow, which is perhaps that prophesied for September (see 79b, 42-45).

30-31) Dee may here have raised the points written on fol. 81b.

32) Justification]

A theological usage meaning an 'action whereby man is justified, or freed from the penalty of sin, and accounted or made righteous by God' (OED).

35) the first begynning]

'the first instructions'.

39-41) The book is here clearly seen as having an important role in the coming of the new age.

44) See 74b, 32.

45) aduertise]

'Instruct'. There is also an obsolete usage meaning 'to warn or admonish' (OED).

46) wrasted]
'unsettled, diverted' (OED).

47-48) See MN47. Later Dee is asked his opinion concerning the human faculty of hearing these spiritual creatures apparently speaking (see 89b, 9-17).

MN32) The ende]
'The purpose'.

fol. 89b.

1) The two fethered fow<l>]
Dee and Kelly (see 42a, 53-42b, 6).

2) the Captayn]
Adrian Gilbert (see 64b, 38-46).

3) The Book of Enoch was to be transcribed in 40 days (see 80a, 16).

5-6) Dee noted in his Diary that on 4 May 1583 'Mr. Adrian Gilbert and Mr. Pepler went by water to Braynford and so to ride into Devonshire'.

10-14) This proposal that the angels communicate with man through the vis imaginitiva indicates that Dee thought his magic to be 'natural' (see Introduction pp. 67-69)

15) ones]
'once'.

15) Dee shall be in contact with the angels no matter where he is and whether they appear visibly or not.

17) more nearer to thy estate]

A lower spirit, closer to man's corporeal nature.

19) Il is the spirit's name.

22) El]

See Commentary to 19a, 16 & 19-22.

24) Concerning the Vice figure see Bernard Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (New York 1958), chapters 5 & 6, 29) Messager]

'Messenger': Uriel.

34) the Arabik boke]

The so called Book of Soyga, which Dee appears to have mislaid (see 9a, 31-46).

36) It is not possible to guess why Il should say that the book is in Scotland or whether any particular minister is being referred to.

39) The Lord Threasorer]

William Cecil, Lord Burghley (1520-1598).

41) When Kelly might have said this and his source of information are not explained.

42) Agyos]

Greek for 'devoted to the gods' and therefore 'sacred' or 'holy'.

literis transpositis]

'with the letters transposed'.

43) alca miketh]

Enochian language. It is not clear whether lines 44-45 are a literal translation of soyga alca miketh or a comment on the nature of the book, contradicting lines 36-37 above.

46) a language to ght in Paradise]

It is the same language as the angels speak (see 63b, 36-45).

47) by infusion]

God instilled it into Adam's mind (see Introduction pp. 144-5).

48) Chevah]

Eve, from the Hebrew חַוָּה, meaning 'life' or 'life-giving'.

49) the Ayrie Tower]

The Tower of Babel (see Genesis XI, 1-9).

MN14) 'The voice of angels'.

MN19) Dee equates the name Il with that of El, which is the name of the first of the Daughters of Light and of the first of the second generation Sons of Light, and also a name of God.

MN34) 'The Arabic book'.

fol. 90a.

1) your Masterships boke]

The book in which Kelly is transcribing the letters that appear to him.

3) by tradition]

By oral tradition.

4-5) There is no mention of a Book of Enoch in the Bible, but it may be inferred from Enoch's prophesying, since the prophecies of the Old Testament prophets are written down.

6-9) Prophetauit...impij]

'And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the L$_o$rd cometh with ten thousands of his saints, To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of their ungodly deeds, which they have ungodly committed and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him [God]', Jude, 14-15.

12-13) Enoch was translated 'and he was not, for God took him' (see Genesis V, 24 and Hebrews XI, 5).

14) the brass]

This may refer to the treasure, but the colloquialism of 'brass' for 'money' is not current in this period. Il probably means that he cannot bring Dee the strength of Enoch's prophetic spirit, but he can bring the books containing Enoch's prophecies.

15) According to the marginal note '28 dayes' should read '18 days'. The instruction that the Book of Enoch was to be written in 40 days was given in an Action of 6 April 1583 and so 12 days have passed since then. A further 28 days would complete the 40 and so leave no time for the remaining tables to be written. 18 days more would mean that Dee should find the books on 6 May. In fact Dee went to London on 6 May while Kelly completed the transcription of the tables of the Book of Enoch and no mention is made of Dee finding any books under his pillow that night (see 104a, 19-31).

17) Esdras, accompanied by five angels, wrote 204 books under the inspiration of God (see II Esdras XIV, 37-48).

19-20) The Jews are describes as 'a stiff-necked people' in the Old Testament (Exodus XXXII, 9 and XXXIV, 9; Deuteronomy IX, 13 and X, 16).

21) trik]

'trick'.

22) shoo]

'shoe'.

23) skorf]

'scarf'.

fowle skinne]

The skin of a fowl, rather than a foul skin.

24) See MN24 for Dee's interpretation of this vision.

26-28) Washing is in the Bible a sign and symbol of repentance, sanctification, redemption and the receiving of the Holy Spirit (see I Corinthians VI, 11, Titus III, 5, and Revelation I, 5).

29) This identification of Il as a woman suggests that Il is the first of the Daughters of Light (see MN29).

31) syngolla]

Evidently a spirit, though the name is not recorded elsewhere in Dee's writings that have survived the passage of time.

32) synfulla]

The name of this spirit is not recorded elsewhere either.

35-38) See 85b, 34-40.

38) βεβαιθ]

'Firm, steady'. The Macedonian is clearly giving an untrue answer, so it is likely that Dee has explained the circumstances of his coming across the word καʹτάσικʹθ . The Macedonian would hardly be gratified by the reference of καʹτάσικʹθ to himself and so sought to defend his reputation.

39) the common lexicon]

Dee's library list of 1583 records several lexicons of Greek and Latin without authorship, including folios printed at Basle in 1541 and at Lyons in 1550.

40) Φαυορινus his lexicon]

Varinus Phavorinus, Lexicon graecum (Rome 1523), contained in Dee's library list of 1583.

42-43) Misteries of Latine greke and hebrue]

I have not been able to find this title in Dee's library list (Harleian MS 1879), nor in the more legible transcript by Ashmole (Ashmole MS 1142). It ought to be there as the library list is dated 6 September 1583 and, as Dee was soon going abroad, one would expect the record to be accurate and complete. It is possible, however, that the title given here is in fact a sub-title following some other form of identification that is noted in the library list.

46) Gariladrah]

This spirit is not referred to elsewhere in Dee's extant writings.

47) sins]

'since'.

51) set]

This should probably be 'sēt' for 'sent'. Uriel has sent Il.

54) This refers to Kelly who arrived from Blockley on 22 March 1583 (see 86a).

55) Raphael was the instructor in the Action of 23 March 1583 (61a), but Gariladrah makes no appearance there. There is no evidence that there are any papers missing between books four and five while Kelly was away in Gloucestershire (see Introduction p. 15), but it is possible that the spirit Gariladrah may have made some appearance in some Action with another scryer during Kelly's absence. This is mere conjecture, however, as there is no indication of Dee's having employed any scryer or even of Dee's having continued any kind of Action during the months that Kelly was away.

MN51) pag. precedēte]

'On the previous page' (see 89b, 16-17).

fol. 90b.

6) Dee and Kelly are to make use of the tables in the angelic language in August, which is a month before the prophesied time of trouble (see 79b, 42-43).

7) ictu oculi]

'with an eye-beam', i.e. by sight.

18) Some details of Elizabethan mining rights may be found in Georgius Agricola, De re metallica (1556), translated by Herbert Clark Hoover and Lou Henry Hoover (New York 1950) p. 85 (note).

20-23) Daemonic help may be invoked by using pieces of earth collected from the ten places shown on the scroll.

27) I mary]

'Aye, marry'.

your chest]

This may be the same chest in which the manuscript was found. Dee is evidently perturbed that the Macedonian and Mr Sandford, who came to see him on 9 April 1583 (85b, 34-35), knew 'so particularly' about the chest (see lines 31-32 below). The phrase 'so particularly' suggests that the chest is in some way unusual, which may indicate that it is the chest with the secret drawer.

27-30) Il promises to increase the treasure forty-fold and then give Dee half.

33) braynford]

Brentford.

35) grecia]

Greece.

Anglia]

England.

36) The Greek appears to be an occultist and this line suggests that he believes he knows where some treasure is to be found but will be misled.

38) The rings must be magical, but no further information is given.

39) See MN39.

44) This is the first reference to the powder which Kelly claimed to have found with the book and scroll. It was used in attempts at transmutation, Kelly claiming to achieve some success (see Introduction pp. 160-161).

47) Amicorum $\overline{\text{oia}}$ $\overline{\text{coia}}$]

'All things in common between friends' (amicorum omnia comunia).

48-49) 'Whence to God alone be shown praise, honour and glory'.

52-53) See 91a, 1-2.

MN4) 'Hidden treasure'.

MN27) The sketch of the chest measures 15mm wide by 10mm high, the front of the chest being 5mm high.

MN39) a capcase]

A travelling case, bag or wallet, and by transference any receptacle such as a box or chest (OED).

fol. 91a.

1-2) 'Appendix to the Fifth Book of Mysteries'.

4) eger]

eager, 'biting, keen' (OED).

4-8) The cause of Kelly's conviction that the spirits are all devils is the lack of communication from the angels pr saged by the black heptagonal cloud. In this MS no spirit discovered as an illuder has uttered words of truth and so his statement at lines 6-7 must refer to experiences outside those in this MS, either prior to his meeting Dee or during Dee's absences.

10) leese]

'lose', obs. (OED).

11) cumber]

'encumbrance'.

10-12) Kelly's desire to break with Dee and pursue his way alone suggests that much of the argument may be stage-managed.

13) Cotsall playne]

I assume this is the area south-east of the Cotswold Hills. I can find no record of Cotswold being so spelt and only the tiny village of Codsall in Staffordshire resembles this orthography. Kelly was a Worcestershire man, however, and Cotsall is close enough to local pronunciation of Cotswold to indicate that this is the area referred to.

14) sklaunderous]

'sland rous'.

15) Little Ned is not identifiable and neither is the location of The Black Raven (the only record I have traced of an inn called such details a position on the west side of Bishopsgate: see J. Holden MacMichael, 'Bishopsgate Street Without' N&Q (1911) 11th Series III, pp. 2-3).

rayeld]

'railed'.

16) This Lush is not identifiable.

17) Surgoen]

Sic for 'surgeon'. Evidently Kelly has kept Ned to a bargain previously made with Lush and which Ned wished to avoid honouring.

18) overthwartly]

'opposed'.

21) See 89a, 37: 'God shall make clere whan it pleaseth him'.

22) See 89a, 26.

24) See 89a, 2-5.

37) See fols 7a-7b.

39) An echo of the last line of the Te Deum: 'O Lord in thee have I trusted: let me never be confounded'.

40) nether]

Sic for 'neither'.

seely]

'poor'.

40-41) stone...bred]

See Matthew VII, 9 and Luke XI, 11.

41-42) Voluntate...deus]

'He will fulfil the desire of them that feare him' (Psalm CXLV, 19 in both Authorised and Vulgate).

43-44) See Matthew XVI, 26: 'What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul'.

46) det]

'debt'. Dee's expenditure on his library and alchemical laboratories caused him to be constantly in debt.

a greater charge]

This must refer to the upkeep of his house in Mortlake and provision for his family.

47) my 40 yeres course of study]

Dee entered Cambridge in November 1542 at the age of fifteen.

49) byte]

The sense of 'bite' here is that of a sharp cutting action as in sharpening one's wit.

bowlt]

'Bolt' as in to pass through a sieve, to find by sifting (OED).

50) lifing]

Sic for 'living'.

51) Ēgland]

England.

54) presently]

'immediately'.

MN38) 'Wisdom'.

MN46) ls]

An abbreviation for 'pounds'.

fol. 91b.

4) Dextera Domini]

'by the right hand of God'.

6) See 79b, 42-45.

12) 'Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord' (see Psalm CVIII, 26).

17) I go abowt it]

'that I am concerned with it', but see also lines 21-23 below.

18) See 90a, 51-52.

19) this]

Presumably the heptagon which is revolving (see line 22 below).

23-24) See G orgius Agricola, De re metallica (1556) translated by Herbert Clark Hoover and Lou Henry Hoover (New York 1950), pp. 210-211. Two machines using horse power for ventilating mineshafts are described and illustrated.

26) Il is unable to offer such a medicine as that earlier offered by Raphael.

30) poticharie]

'Apothecary'. The form is not recorded in OED.

34) Jovis oĩa plena]

'All things are filled with God' (see 91b, 5).

38) bill]

'list' [of drugs].

41) Iudra galgol astel]

These Enochian words are not translatable.

45) Marcus Heremita]

Saint Mark the Anchorite.

47) 'Furthermore knowledge is not on a few occasions hidden on account of carelessness committed in the operation of any [particular] thing', Sancti Marci Eremitae Exercitatoris sententiae siue duo libelli de lege spirituali graecè & latinè iterum editi (Helmaestadi 1617), p. 60. Dee's edition is clearly earlier.

48) The full text reads: Animus hominis sine corpore bona & mala multa perficit. Ceterum corpus sine mente horum nihil potest perficere. Quapropter lex libertatis ante opus cognoscitur. 'The soul of man achieves many good and bad things without the body. Moreover the body may not achieve any of these without the mind. Wherefore the law of liberty is known before the fact [of liberty]', De lege spirituali (1617), p. 62

49) Mary]

'Marry'.

51) See fol. 30a.

52) Ilemese is the seventh of the second generation Sons of Light (see 28a, 1).

53) See Commentary to 19a, 19-22.

55) See Commentary to 92a, 4.

MN6) 'In the afternoon'.

fol. 92a.

4) the Quaternie of M, the second]
Sig. M2.

6-10) 'A contrite heart). Without contrition in the heart it is impossible to be entirely freed from vice and blemishes. However, I say, the heart eats away at the threefold moderation of sleep, food and bodily freedom. An excess and abundance of these others breeds pleasure; but pleasure promotes improper thoughts and is inconsistent with prayer and proper thought', De lege spirituali (1617), p. 122. The second sentence is rather difficult to understand, but presumably when St. Mark says that the heart eats away at moderation, he means that the desires of the heart are antithetical to a moderation that he sees as inherent in each man by nature. There is a struggle between impulses that tend to moderate behaviour and impulses that tend to licentious behaviour and only a contrite heart can overcome the impulses that lead to licentiousness.

11) and this instant and]

The first 'and' is an error for 'at'.

13) whie]

'why'.

14) 'To God alone be all honour, praise and glory'.

MN3) The instruction that the book should be written in 40 days was given in an Action of 6 April (80a, 16), but the first Enochian table was delivered nine days earlier on 29 March (68b).

19) frowardnes]

'perversity, refractory nature' (OED).

22) See Isaiah LXI, 10: 'he hath clothed me with garments of salvation'. See also Psalm CXXXII, 16.

24) The voice is that of God, identified by the use of 'I AM' (see Commentary to 42b, 15).

41) a word is missing in this line (see MN41).

46) in hemme]

'hem in'.

MN21) 'Us'.

MN26) An abbreviation for 'Uriel'.

fol. 92b.

1) arrise]

Sic for 'arise'.

11-15) There could hardly be a stronger warning against the presumption of trying to hasten God's revelations.

14) those that are of quiet myndes]

Other persons who are more patient than Dee and Kelly.

17) One of you]

There seems little doubt that this is Dee, since in any comparison of Dee and Kelly that the angels make, Dee is declared to be the more steadfast.

18) Cedar]

Cedar is a symbol of Christian incorruptibility and was the wood used in the building of Solomon's temple (see I Kings V, 6).

25) The caret indicates some missing words which are to be found in the marginal note to this line.

the number]

This may refer to Dee and Kelly, being two, or to the 49 leaves in the book or to the length of time appointed.

34) this world decreasing]

The doctrine of the decay of nature is not in accord with the promise of a new age upon earth, but a general decrease in godliness has been frequently pointed out by the angels.

42-43) See 70b, 23-25.

MN11) The sword is 12mm high and 3mm wide at the guard, which is 3mm from the tip of the handle. The swords at MN27 and MN33 are of the same dimensions.

MN12) 'Note and beware'.

fol. 93a.

2) omitt]

Sic.

3) furdred]

'furthered'.

6) Dy]

'Die'. Dee has not actually tried to hasten the revelation of the book, but his asking what sign might foreshadow further revelation shows a similar presumption. There is some echo of Christ's words to the nobleman: 'Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe' (John IV, 48). Faith does not demand signs.

14-15) I can find no reference to the incident, but evidently the adulterous man found, or thought he found his legs on fire. St. Bride's Church is in Bride Lane near Ludgate Circus.

21) A. G.]

Adrian Gilbert, who apparently has no doubts about the truth of the Actions.

24-25) I can find no information concerning the discord between Kelly and Gilbert.

26-29) 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name do we give all glory, praise and honour and will give [so] for ever' (see Psalm CXV, 1, Authorised and Vulgate).

fol. 94a.

4) Either Kelly left Dee's house after the Action of 20 April in which he declared his intention to leave (see 91a, 9-13), only visiting Dee for the Action of 23 April, or else he left after 23 April even though his doubts were answered (see 93a, 23). Dee's specific reference to his wife's welcome to Kelly suggests that she may have been the cause of the latter's departure, especially since the erased Diary entry of 6 May 1582 suggests that she had no love for the scryer (see Introduction p. 13)...

7) cherfly]

'cheerfully'.

11-14) In Monas hieroglyphica Dee wrote: 'If a continuous multiplication be performed, beginning with the first monad, of all numbers which have been described, from the first to the last [and] in [their] natural sequence—so that the product of the first and second be multiplied by the third, and the product [of that multiplication] by the fourth, and so on up to the last [number]—then the ultimate product indicates the [number of] permutations possible among the several terms [of the series]. [This rule can be applied] likewise for any number and variety of things' (Monas, ed. Josten, p. 209). Dee is describing the equation $N = n!$, or $N = (n-1) \times (n-2) \times (n-3) \ldots \times 1$, when N is the number of ways of taking n objects from n objects. In 1564, the date of the first printing of Monas hieroglyphica, this was one of the very few works in which the laws of permutation were discussed, although they were by no means unknown at the time (see D.G. Smith, History of Mathematics (London 1925) II, 524-528). In the case of transposition of letters this rule is only applicable if a transposition AB is not the same as a transposition BA. Thus transposing A, B and C we achieve 6 permutations (AB, AC, BA, BC, CA and CB). If however AB and BA amount to the same, the rule is $N = \frac{n^2-n}{2}$. Thus for three letters A, B and C there are three permutations (AB/BA, AC/CA, BC/CB).

18) lerne]

Used transitively in the sense of 'teach', as it still is in some dialects.

20) Adamicall Alphabet]

The letters of the Enochian language.

20-21) Since there is no different form of the script for miniscules and majiscules, the script has an 'vnchangeable proportion'. That the Enochian alphabet begins with the letter 'B' may be taken as mystically significant as it is the first letter of Genesis in Hebrew and it is the letter chosen by God to begin the Creation according to the Zoharic exposition (Zohar, I, 9-13).

25) The Holy Table is to be painted with Enochian letters and the seals given in Book II. Since anyone seeing the design of the Holy Table would instantly understand that it was a magical im lement, it may not have been easy to find a painter willing to perform the task.

26-27) master Lyne]

This individual is not identifiable.

30) aduertise]

'warn'.

33-34) There is no record extant of when Dee received this plan for the Holy Table, which Il no declares to be false (see lines 40-42 below), although evidence of its existence has appeared before (see 79a, MN21). Dee received the basic plan of the table in the first book (see 10a) but he did not receive any Enochian letters until the fourth book (64b). If the plan Dee now shows to Il had Roman letters, then it might have been received any time after 10 March 1582, but if it shows Enochian letters, it could not have been received until after 26 March 1583. I suspect that Kelly presented Dee with the plan after a private 'vision'.

40) that]

The plan of the Holy Table.

fol. 94b.

2) enhemme]

'hem in'.

I AM]

See Commentary to 42b, 15.

they]

The characters in Dee's present plan of the table.

3) browght the the truth]

'brought thee the truth'.

4-5) Caelestiall demonstration]

This may refer to the knowledge revealed to Dee and Kelly or to the created universe.

7) The inner square of the plan is to be 6 inches square.

9) When Ashmole saw the Holy Table in John Cotton's library, the outer border was indeed one inch wide between the lines which were $\frac{3}{20}$ of an inch broad (Ashmole MS 1790, fol. 55a).

10) This diagram measures 7 inches (180mm) square in the outer square and 6 inches (154mm) square in the inner square. The innermost square of 12 places is 2 inches (52mm) high and 2⅝ inches (67mm) broad and 1¾ (44mm) from the inner square at the sides. The innermost square is 2 inches from the inner square at top and bottom. The bases of the pentacle are 1 inch (25mm) from the inner square and the central apexes are in the centre of the top and bottom lines of the inner square. On the right hand side of the inverted triangle of the pentacle there are two lines drawn 1/16 inch (1.5mm) apart, the inner line being an error and not shown in this transcript. The diagram is drawn and labelled from the point of view of one standing in front of the bottom edge and so the top edge is labelled 'in the front of the table', the sides 'on the left hand' (a sinistris) and 'on the right hand' (a dextra), and the bottom as 'next to the chest'. For the relation of this plan to the engraving of the finished product as shown in TFR see Introduction pp. 150-151 and Appendix to the text of the manuscript.

10) 'See [two] folio[s] later, and also in the table of the heart, flesh and skin, for in the outer lines you have this table beginning here the same, but at the beginning omitting 'l' and receiving 'o'. See Commentary to 95b, 23-29.

fol. 95a.

4) in fronte Tabulae]

See 94b, 10 and 10a, 33.

6-27) The first column reads osonsslgenoeemofodggn. The 'm'

(tal at line 20) is an error for 'o' in the table at 94b and the plan as shown in TFR (see MN20). The other three columns are correct according to the table at 94b and the plan in TFR, gon 'with a prik' (line 24) signifying 'y' as opposed to 'i' when without 'a prik' (see 64b, 34).

29) Dee's reply that there is nothing in the middle of the table indicates that at the time of receiving the instruction to construct the square and the border (94b, 7), he drew such a plan as that shown at 94b, 10 but without any letters in the centre, which he filled in as he received them. Since the MS is a fair copy of the original notes, Dee was able to draw the diagram completely when writing fol. 94b.

32) 'To almighty God alone be perennial praise'.

35) dowted of the heds of the letters]
Dee was unsure whether the letters ought to be written facing inwards or outwards.

39) There are 21 letters in each side of the border. Dee is to divide the border by 19, so that 19 letters placed there with two in the corners may make a total of 21.

41) the liuely branches]
Dee and Kelly.

46-48) in Numero...operis]
'In the number of the ternary and quaternary: in which the whole origin and foundation of this your most holy work lies'. The number of letters in the table clearly demonstrate the ternary and the quaternary: there are 12 in the centre (4 X 3) and 21 along each border (3 X (4 + 3)). Removing the 4 'B's at the corners there are 19 letters in each border, which number has been delivered in terms of 12 and 7 at line 39 above (3 X 4 added to 3 + 4). Since the ternary signifies spirit and the quaternary signifies matter and also respectively the active and the passive, they are of fundamental importance in numerological exegesis of the Creation (for fuller discussion of this practice see Christopher Butler, Number Symbolism (London 1970)).

52) skarsly]
'scarcely'.

MN47) 'The ternary and the quaternary'.

fol. 95b.

1) See 18b, 45. This signifies God's inspiration.

2) bak]
'back'.

3) the Bees]
The letters 'B' of the kings and princes of the 49 spirits.

4-5) A table of 84 squares, being twelve across and seven down, to accomodate the letters of the fourteen names, now of 6 letters each without their initial 'B's.

5-6) The names are written from right to left in the table at line 23 below, the kings' names being on the right hand side: thus [B]aligon [B]agenol at line 23.

7-8) In fact the table is read from the bottom right in vertical columns from bottom to top. The first three columns on the right give the letters on the right side of the border of the Holy Table (lnnyaoauaanbblmpseaoi), which is again written from right to left. The next three columns give the letters of the bottom border. The letters in the remaining borders are not obtained from this table but from the similar table at 98a, 11, where the top line has been placed at the bottom. Confusion over the tables bedevils the construction of the Holy Table (see Introduction pp. 149-154).

9) certayn letters]

The letters to be placed in the central 12 squares of the table.

12) that Third and Fowrth member]

The central 12 squares of the table.

19) God transpose your myndes]

Dee and Kelly are to be of one mind.

20) See 94a, 11-14.

22) See 92b, 11-15.

23) This table measures 85mm (3¼ inches) across by 91mm (3½ inches) high.

fol. 96a.

2) boke Soyga]

See Introduction pp. 146-147.

3) Zadzaczadlin]

The Book of Soyga evidently gives an alphabet, much in the manner of the exposition of the Enochian alphabet, in which the name of the letter 'A' is zad, of the letter 'D' is zac and of the letter 'M' is lin. In Enochian a similar use of the names of the letters to create the name Adam would be V galvntal.

5) See 95b, 21.

6) à primo]

'From the first' (see line 7).

7) 'May he who is the first and the last, Alpha and Omega, be merciful unto us'. This is not a direct biblical quotation, but see Revelation I, 7.

9) comprehended]

Both in the sense of 'understood' and in the sense of 'embraced' as at line 8.

12) Il was described as being apparelled like a Vice at 89b, 24, although a pied coat is more the dress of a Fool.

14) wrethe]

'wreath'.

18-20) This refers to a rearrangement of the table at 95b into that at 98a, 11 and then into that at 98a, 7. The letters on the outside of the table at 98a, 11, form the innermost part of the table at 98a, 7 (the skin becoming the centre). Those next in from the 'skin' at 98a, 11, occupy the outer border of the table at 98a, 7, (the flesh becoming the outside), and those at the centre of 98a, 11 are divided and placed in the four inner corners of the table at 98a, 7. See Commentary to table at 98a, 7.

23) The letters of the 'heart' or centre of the table at 98a, 11, are twelve, whereas there are 44 letters forming the'body' or 'flesh'. Only if there were 48 letters in the 'body' could the 'heart' be 'the fowrth part'. The only other explanation is that it is a reference to the fact that the letters of the 'heart' occupy the four corners of what might be called the 'body' of the table at 98a, 7, but it is all very confused.

24) The letters of the outer border or 'skin' of the table at 98a, 11,occupy the centre or 'heart' of the table at 98a, 7.

28) Marginal note 34 declares that there are 'three manner of works with God his Name'. In Monas hieroglyphica Dee noted three numerical approaches to the Tetragrammaton. YHVH has a numerical value of 26. If considered as a 'Pythagorean quaternary' of 1, 2, 3 and 4, it may be contemplated in the light of its 24 permutations, its sum of 10 (1+2+3+4) or its complete addition of 30 ((1+2)+(2+3)+(3+4)+(1+3)+(2+4)+(1+4)).If considered as an 'artificial quaternary' the Tetragrammaton may be contemplated in the light of its multiple sum of 12 (1X2X3X2), its sum of 8 (1+2+3+2) or its complete addition of 24 ((1+2)+ (2+3)+(3+2)+(1+3)+(2+2)+(1+2)). See Monas, ed. Josten, pp. 209-211.

29-30) The earth differs from the heavens in the purpose which God has assigned to it.

33) See Commentary to line 28 above.

34-36) These divisions only have an arbitrary relation with the three approaches to the Tetragrammaton outlined in the Commentary to line 28 above, but the same divisions are applied to Dee's magical implements (see 96a, 43-96b, 12).

37) Character]

The seal promised to Dee and first shown at fol. 9b.

38) our]

Dee is referring to himself and Kelly.

39-41) See 9b, 3-4.

47) The square of (3+4) is 49, which is the number of spirits in the table of good angels in Book III. The significance of the ternary and quaternary has been pointed to at 95a, 46-48 and it is worth noting that the square of 3 and the square of 4 in relation to the right-angled triangle at line 40 are the first two terms in the series demonstrating Pythagoras' Theorem with whole factors ($3^2 + 4^2 = 5^2$). What Il means by 'centrally', however, is not clear, nor does Dee understand, but both the character at 9b and at line 40 above are numbered from 1 to 4. The most probable explanation is that the centre of the table at 98a, 11, consists of 12 squares which, with one exception of one letter caused by a later correction (see 102a, 6-23), form the centre of the Holy Table.

MN18) aenigmaticall]
'enigmatic'.

MN40) 'See the inscription in its place, 10 March 1582, fol. 6' (see 9b, 3-4).

fol. 96b.

1-2) This note refers to line 7.

5) See 96a, 35.

6) The Table]
The Holy Table.

7-10) The seven tables in the second book which adorn the Holy Table at various points. They are likened to coats of arms for the seven kings and princes.

11) See 96a, 36.

13-14) these bokes]

The Book of Enoch with its tables.

16-17) euery letter...God]

Every letter in each table of the Book of Enoch, which presupposes a vast number of names of God.

18) they are but one name]

God being one, his names do not signify different beings. The Asclepius of the supposed Hermes Trismegistus states that: 'it is impossible that the creator of the majesty of the All, the father and lord of all beings, should be designated by one or even by a multiplicity of names. God has no name, or rather he has all names, since he is at once One and All, so that one must either designate all things by his name, or give him the name of all things' (Corpus Hermeticum, tr. A. J. Festugière with text established by A. D. Nock, 4 vols (Paris 1945-1954), II, p.321, cited and translated by Frances A. Yates, Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (London & Chicago 1964), p. 125). The thought is also to be found in The Decades of Henry Bullinger [1587 edition; first ed. 1577], edited by Rev. Thomas Harding, Parker Society, 4 vols (Cambridge 1849-52), IV, p. 210.

18-20) The different names of God signify different aspects of God and his Creation, from beginning to end.

23) See 9b, MN3.

25) The former Diuel]
The spirit who, in the guise of Uriel, gave Dee the character on fol. 9b.
insinuat]
Sic for 'insinuate'.

30) A rather similar idea is voiced at 94a, 28-29.

31) Il is now to show Dee's true character.

32) See MN32.

35) See 96a, 18-20.

42) propre characters]
Enochian script.

46) the vppermost prik]
The top corner of the innermost diamond in the table at 98a, 7.

47) These two letters are in the squares below the 'O' in the table at 98a, 7.

48) See the right and left corners of the diamond in the table at 98a, 7.

MN19-20) 'corruptible [and] incorruptible generation'.

MN23) falls]

Sic for 'false'.

tradition]

That which has been handed down.

MN32) 'Wittily he means my mathematical demonstrations'. Il means 'a show' by 'demonstration' at line 32, whereas Dee would use the word in the sense of 'proof'.

fol. 97a.

This table is drawn on a piece of paper measuring 123mm across by 112mm. The lines are in black and the letters are in red ink. The outer square measures 4 inches (102mm) and the inner square 3 inches (76mm). The squares of the central diamond are $\frac{4}{10}$" square. All other measurements are defined by the nature of the table. For the transliteration in Roman letters see the table at 98a, 7.

fol. 98a.

7) The dimensions of the table are the same as that on fol. 97a. The 'y' in the central diamond is written over an 'i'.

11-17) This table differs from that at 95b, 23, in that the names of [B]aligon and [B]agenol are now on the bottom line. The table measures 3 inches (77mm) square within the lines which are a little over $\frac{1}{32}$ of an inch thick. The letters in the two outer columns (the 'skin') form those in the centre of the table at line 7 above. The middle section (reading 'ogelorno' from right to left on the top line) provides the letters for the outer border of the table at line 7, again from right to left. The centre square provides the letters which occupy the four corners of the inner square of the table at line 7, each column of three letters being given a triangular arrangement.

18-20) See Commentary to 96a, 18-23.

21) sone]
'soon'.

22) 'To our almighty God be perennial praise and immense glory'.

MN11) The digits in this note are placed to the left of the text of the note, but this may not be accurately represented by virtue of the manner of transcription; hence the apparently curious placings of '2' and '3'.

fol. 98b.

2) ȳ]
Dee rarely uses this form of 'the'.

2-3) This is the first reference to Kelly's wife. Evidently she had not yet moved into Dee's household.

4-5) William Hunnis, Seuen Sobs of a Sorrowful Soule for Sinne; The Psalmes Called Pœnitentiall Reduced into Meeter by W. Hunnis, 3 pts, 12°, H. Denham, 1583, entered 7 November 1581. Other editions were printed in 1587, 1589, 1597, 1600, 1604, 1609, 1615, 1618 and 1629, so it was evidently a popular work of its kind.

8-10) This 'automatic writing' is highly suspicious. Being alone in his bedchamber, Kelly could easily have written this to deceive Dee, presumably to increase Dee's belief in what the angels had delivered during the Action.

10) The character resembles that at 98a, 7, in form and is to be found on fol. 99a.

18) suttle]
'subtle'.

23) sprong]
'sprung'.

31) fayntharted]
'faint-hearted'.

41) suttily]
'subtly'.

48) rehersed]
'repeated aloud'.

53) The text is continued at fol. 100a.

fol. 99a.

This inserted leaf measures 127mm across by 70mm in height and is the blank page from Hunnis's book (see 98b, 20-21). The table on the left measures approximately 18mm across by 28mm in height, the inner square being approximately 12mm square (the lines are drawn inaccurately). This table does not bear any relation as far as the letters are concerned with that on the right which measures approximately 60mm square, with an inner square of 35mm. This leaf including the marginal note at line 1 are in Kelly's hand

MN11) See 100b, 2.

$\frac{r}{o}$]

'our'.

fol. 10 a.

9) While this refers specifically to mankind, it is worth noting that this division of soul and body was frequently extended to cover the whole universe on an ascending scale of sublimity: 'The Philosophers have maintained...that the Heavens and Stars are Divine Animals, and their souls intellectual, participating of the Divine mind' (Agrippa, Occ. Phil. III, vii, p. 384). The reference to an 'infinite number' of souls precludes any adherence to a theory of transmigration of a limited number of souls.

11) my Temple]

The world.

13) three of you]

Dee, Kelly and Adrian Gilbert.

16) assales]

'assails'.

23) Pugna...victoria]

'There will be a battle [against temptation], but the victory will be yours'.

24) these days to come]

The time of trouble promised for September.

34) yongling]

This refers to K lly, who was now 27 years old, while Dee was 55.

35) yeld thy lymmes]

'yield thy limbs'.

40) Tables]

Presumably those in the second book which are of small account in comparison with the Book of Enoch.

45) this euill]

The false table at fol. 99a.

46) Judgment is not of me]

Uriel is speaking although he has voiced the word of God in the first person earlier.

MN13) 'Strength in God and on account of God'.

MN27) 'A sentence against this wicked spirit who wished to deceive us'.

fol. 100b.

2) BELMAGEL]

I have not been able to discover any references to this spirit beyond that here and at 99a, MN11.

3) thy sowle]

Uriel is still talking to Kelly.

his destruction]

The destruction of Kelly's soul.

5-6) the secrets of mans fingers]

'The works of man's hands'.

6) so much as /[c that]/]

'so much as he that'. Belmagel has governed the wicked works of man's hands.

10-11) See 98b, 39-44.

11) Thow]

Kelly.

12) willdernesse]

Sic for 'wilderness'.

19) See 66a, 43.

22) your profession]
See MN22.

34-35) 'To our almighty God be all praise, honour and act of thanks, now and for ever'.

MN2)'The particular evil angel of Kelly himself'.

MN20) 'From the evil of temptation'.

MN22) 'My profession is true philosophy. See book one' (see 12a, 5-7).

fol. 101a.

2) fryday last]
3 May.

3) Evidently the tables have once again begun to appear to Kelly's vision.
monday next]
6 May, the 39th day since the book was begun on 29 March (but see Commentary to 92a, MN3).

4) to wete]
'to wit',

9) It is not possible to verify which of the questions that follow form part of those that Dee had prepared, for he evidently asks some spontaneous questions as well.

12) Beati...pacem]

'How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace' (Romans, X, 15). See also Isaiah LII, 7, and Nahum I, 15.

17) per te Jesu Christe]

'For the sake of Jesus Christ'.

18) This boke]

The Book of Enoch

25) after the manner of men]

See 89b, 10-13.

27) This preparation will probably include prayer and fasting (see Introduction pp. 92-93).

32) wayed]

'weighed'.

36) The second]

'The second part'.

37-39) See Acts I, 11. The promise of a second coming is definite, stating that Jesus shall come. The distinction here is between the promise of a second coming at an undefined time and the certainty of the second coming in the near future.

fol. 101b.

3) that wicked childe]

The Antichrist. See I John II, 18.

6) Yelde]

'yield'.

10) in his own marks]

In Enochian characters. If the book was ever finished in this manner, it has not survived.

11) =ner]

Only 'ma' of 'marks' at line 10 is easily legible, the final letters being somewhat lost in the binding, and Ashmole must have conjectured that the word was 'manner'. Ashmole's transcript has 'marks', however, which is an unusual divergence (Sloane MS 3677, fol. 161b).

13-14) The 204 books supposedly written by Esdras, for instance.

16) The new age to be heralded by the Book of Enoch will end the schism in the churches and replace it with one true religion. This lies very much at the heart of Dee's hopes for the future and his reasons for going abroad in the September of this year.

19) The end of the world and the Last Judgment.

20) Thy Character]

The character at 97a. On the reverse must be written the names Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel and Corabiel as in the Sigillum Dei (30a).

22) the stone]

The stone brought by the angels (see 59b, 40-46).

23-25) The stone is here granted a use like a 'glass perspective' within which anything desired may be seen (see Introduction pp. 76-7). The powers of such vision appear to be offered to Dee personally, but the use of a scryer may simply be implied.

26-28) If the table were to stand upon the four smaller seals, they would be damaged since they are made of wax. A protective wooden cover for each seal is described.

29) After all the trouble gone to concerning the Holy Table and the other magical implements, this limited use must have seemed rather strange, but the implication is that after the table has been used in August, the new age will quickly be heralded in.

30-31) See 42b, 26-34.

37) The silk for the Holy Table (see 10a, 18-21).

MN35) iornayes]

'journeys'.

fol. 102a.

1) that day]

1 August 1583.

2) ells]

'else'.

4) Mals don mals]

'P R P'. See the table at 94b, where in the centre squares mals don mals is erased in favour of vr don vr.

5) practise Table]

The Holy Table.

6-9) See the tables at 98a, 11, and line 17 below.

15) Tabula, collecta]

See 41a. In the tables at 95b, 23, and 98a, 11, the kings are with their respective princes, but in the table at line 17 below they are with the princes next to whom they stand in the table at 41a.

16) The 12 letters in the centre of this table are those in the centre of the Holy Table.

24) See Commentary to line 15 above.

25) See the table at 98a, 11.

26) See the table at 95b, 23.

27) See the table at line 17 above and 48b, 30-33.

29-31) Each king may be placed first according to laws which the Book of Enoch will reveal. Since each governs a day of the week, each takes precedence upon his own day. See also Commentary to MN30 below.

33) Dee requires a more careful show and transcription of the Enochian characters. This was received by Kelly during Dee's absence (see 104a, 29-31).

38) See 51a, 37. Ashmole's pagination makes 51a page 85 and the superscription at the end of the line is in Ashmole's hand.

39) cōteyne]
'contain'.

40) the true Character]
The table at 97a.

42-43) The form of delta may be seen in the four corners of the inner square and in the corners of the diamond in the table at 97a.

45) stoare howse]
'storehouse'.

46) stole]
'stool'.

MN30) Each of the seven planets and each of the twelve signs of the Zodiac may be considered preeminent, the other planets and houses then being considered in relation to the one taken as being preeminent. Thus while the aspect formed between two planets in an astrological chart is a single aspect, it may be considered from the point of view of each planet: a square aspect of say the sun and mars may be considered firstly from the significance of the aspect on solarian influences and then from the significance of the a pect on martial influences.

fol. 102b.

1) mẽbres]

'members' (the line is equivalent to a marginal note).

3) Principals]

This should be 'principles' (see MN3).

4) the great Circle]

The table brought by Kelly but no longer extant (see 49a, MN24).

6) more o͡u]

'moreover'.

7) aversed]

Back to front.

euersed]

Upside down. See 45a, 8-9.

8-10) See MN9 for example.

14) the boke]

The Book of Enoch.

15) In the centre of this missing table there is a figure holding a sword (see 50a, MN9).

17) the first part]

See line 21, assuming the reversed numeration to be correct.

23) the 7 lamines]

The 7 tables given in book II.

28) Tin is the metal appropriate to Jupiter (Occ. Phil. I, xxvi, p. 57). They were not so made, however (see Commentary to line 36 below).

31) In the diagram of the Holy Table in TFR the tables are shown in Roman letters and Arabic numerals. The marginal note suggests that Uriel's reply which is missing was in the negative.

37) When Ashmole saw Dee's Holy Table in John Cotton's library, these seven tables were painted on the surface, 38-42) The letters around the border of the Sigillum Dei gave the seven names of God at 22b, 7-13.

44-45) See 21b, 9-11, and 44-46. Some letters are the same and Dee is asking how they may be distinguished as separate.

MN9) The outer letters are taken from the missing table.  is the seal of Babalel as given in De heptarchia mystica (Sloane MS 3191, fol. 41b). 6 more similar seals can be made for the other 6 kings, but without Kelly's table it is impossible to conjecture their precise construction.

fol. 103a.

3-4) See 55a, 38.

7) the Order of Operation]
The use of the Holy Table, although this line seems to contradict line 5 above, unless what is being pointed out is that Befafes's fifth place 'in consideration of Nature' and his fifth place in the 'Order of Operation' is a matter of coincidence and not consequence, and therefore there is no general rule which may be applied to the other kings and princes.

8-9) It has already been stated that the practice is to begin on 1 August 1583 (see 101a, 26), although the reference may be taken as simply a command to have all things ready by then.

13) See 51b, 19-20. Gilbert has been informed of some of the promises that the angels have made but has not been initiated into the secrets of the Holy Table or the Book of Enoch.

17) The repetition of 'necessitie(s)' is presumably an error.

18-19) 'Behold I am of tyme present. I am of the last Ternarie' (57a, 36). This appeared to refer to the rejected ternary ANA (see 54a, 20), but Uriel explains that it refers to three eras in world history.

21) Noes flud]

Noah's flood.

24-26) This refers to the missing table. The characters are to be found in De heptarchia mystica (see Introduction pp. 126-7) and the words are presumably those letters which will be used in the seals similar to that given at 102b, MN9.

MN1) there]

Sic for 'their'.

MN24) 'See the preceding page above'.

MN27) See 102b, MN9.

39) expedition]

'haste'.

40) fatching]

'fetching' (see 90b, 20-23).

43) My angel]

Possibly Il.

45) that erthly filth and Corruption]

The treasure.

fol. 103b.

10) Nubery]

Newbury in Berkshire.

13) the red congeled thing]

The red powder (see Introduction pp. 160-161).

18) Albert Laski]

See Introduction p. 28.

24) The sense of the line does not require the word 'and'.

27) the Chamber for Practise]

Perhaps Dee's oratory, although he may have prepared some other room.

28) half pace]

The frame on which the Holy Table stood was 2ft 8 ins square (Ashmole MS 1790, fol. 56a) and so this can hardly mean half a yard, particularly since the top of the Holy Table was a yard square. The half-pace may be a small raised step.

32-33) See 101b, 26-28.

34) According to Ashmole's measurements of the Holy Table the feet were 3 inches square (Ashmole MS 1790, fol. 56a).

35) heith]
'height'.

42) mery]
'merry'.

MN18) 'Albert Laski [Count] Palatine of Siradia came from Poland to London on the first of May 1583'(see Introduction p. 28).

MN43) 'Many things to be endured for the sake of our almighty God'.

fol. 104a.

6) This vision seems to foretell the Spanish Armada, but any power wishing to attack England would have to amass a large naval force and relationships with Spain were steadily worsening. The subsequent truth of the prediction is probably fortuitous, unless Kelly had picked up some information from some such source as one of Dee's visitors who might also be keeping eyes and ears open for Walsingham.

8) It would not take divine inspiration to see in 1583 that Mary Queen of Scots was likely to meet the headsman's block before too long. As Catholic claimant to the throne her very presence had caused rebellion and conspiracy even without her direct involvement and she was effectively kept in close custody.

15-16) 'Eternal glory be to our almighty and eternal God'.

MN8) Fodringham Castell]
Fotheringay Castle.

27) mann͡]
'manner'.

29-31) The letters are ¼ of an inch high. In the Holy Table the form of is found and not that of which is superscribed.

fol. 104b.

4-5) The Book of Enoch has to be put into Enochian script (see 101b, 10).

14) assone]
'as soon'.

18) the Table cloth]
The silk covering the table.

21) 'True and holy for ever' (see Christ as the Lamb of God).

24) A wicked spirit is to come forth to tempt Dee (see MN26)

29) curteours]
'courtiers'.

31) I smell the smoke]

A proverbial expression akin to 'I see which way the wind is blowing'.

44) the dredful day]

The Day of Judgment.

46) Pereant...Tenebrarum]

'May darkness perish with the Prince of Darkness'.

fol. 105a.

4) Ashmole may be wrong in attributing this line to Dee where the leaf is torn.

6) Dee is not to receive direct angelic help in copying the Book of Enoch into Enochian characters, but God may direct his judg ent as at 71a, 4.

7) putto your hands]

Probably 'put your hands to the task', rather than 'put your hands together (i.e. pray)'.

10) expedition]

'haste'.

12) Dee is some £300 in debt (see 91a, 46).

22) Tunge]

'Tongue'.

23) The sketch of the tongue measures 3mm by 7mm. A tongue apparently on fire signifies the Word of God.

26) Convenient]
The obsolete sense in relation to time of 'due, proper' overcomes the apparent weakness of the sentence (OED).

30) In the Bible the 'imagination of man's heart' is frequently described as evil and stubborn, implying a neglect of God (see Genesis VIII, 21; Deuteronomy XXIX, 19; Jeremiah XXIII, 17; Luke I, 51).

3) savegard]
'safeguard'.

1N6) See Dee's questions concerning the form of the book at 104b, 6-10.

fol. 105b.

4) vnconvenient]
See Commentary to 105a, 26.

5) The sin of carnality is a result of the Fall, and although marriage is a blessed state that redeems the sin, abstinence is conducive to a higher spiritual state (see 101a, 27).

11) Holly Thursday]
Holy Thursday is an old name for Ascension Day.

18) the 22 Psalm]
'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' (Psalm XXII in both Vulgate and Authorised).

20) This is Annael who has been absent since and who is designated as 'the mercy of God' (misericordia Dei) at fol. 6a.

21-22) See Psalm CIII, 13: 'Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him'.

24-26) This does not in fact seem to be a direct biblical quotation,but see Psalm XXXIII, 18, and Psalm XXII, 5.

30-31) Behold...me]
The arm of God stretches to all corners of the earth and he sees all.

31) Annael is 'the mercy of God' (see fol. 6a).

35) Actum est]
'It is done'.

38) The Table shown in the stone is here referred to as the Tabernacle, stressing its holy nature.

41) See Luke XV, 7.

MN30) See fol. 6a and Commentary to line 20 above.

fol. 106a.

This folio has suffered damage in the top right corner.

2) fiat]

'Let it be done'.

4) Justification comes only from God and not from man.

8) See 105a, 6.

14-15) The first series of 49 calls in the Book of Enoch consists of more than 49 words (see fols 68b-79b).

16-17) See 85b, 11-19.

18-22) Dee probably intends to use ruled paper (see 81b, 2) and then he will draw a vertical line after each word so that each word is effectively in a ruled box.

24-25) How everything may now appear more beautiful when covered by a veil is not clear. The statement may refer to things just prior to the covering with the veil or to the veil itself.

30-31) Jubilate...versamini]

'Be joyful in the Lord, all ye lands' (Psalm XCIX, Vulgate; Psalm C, Authorised).

33) bote]

'boot'. Kelly wishes to buy riding boots, or shipman's hose which consisted of wide trousers as opposed to the more normal tight-fitting hose.

35) goodman Pentecost]

No further identification of this individual can be made. The title of 'Goodman' generally covered householders under the rank of 'gentleman', especially yeomen and farmers (OED).

iij^{ls}]

Three pounds.

angels]

This gold coin, more fully the angel-noble as it was originally a new issue of the noble, bore a device showing Michael slaying the dragon. At the time of its original issue during the reign of Edward IV its value was 6s 8d, but by the reign of Edward VI it had acquired a value of 10 shillings.

fol. 106b.

3) eleuen places]

Only ten places were indicated on the scroll that Kelly brought back from Northwick Hill (86b), but Newbury in Berkshire has also been specified (103b, 10).

4) þteyn/g/]

'pertaining'.

7-9) A licence was required to dig for treasure (see 90b, 18).

11) These words are not translatable. 'Lephe' may have some relation with the phrase 'life lefe Lurfando' (see 74a, MN24). Concerning 'Pinzu[a]', see MN11.

15-18) 'The earth is heavy and troubled with the iniquities of the enemies of light. It is therefore cursed, because it is in the depth of perdition and darkness'.

19) Sordida...nobis]
'It is sordid and odious to us'.

20) Proprijs...tremulis]
'It scourges itself with its own trembling [inhabitants]'.

23-26) 'Perhaps he may say, but he is not one who may hear. We see the groaning [earth], but he is not one who may pity. Let us therefore sanctify his holy [place] because we are sanctified in him'. The implication is that God is a God of Wrath as well as a God of Mercy.

27) Fiat]
'Let it be done'.

32) 'The old passes away and the new begins'.

34) flowr]
'floor'
pretious]
'precious'.

39-40) This apparently signifies the new age of God's justice upon the earth.

MN32) 'The new [age]'.

fol. 107a.

2) light fire]

The word 'and' is probably missing.

3-4) This must signify God's divine wisdom being transmitted through Raphael.

9) (I say not)]

Raphael is speaking God's words and not his own.

12-13) quae...gradu]

'Which are now at their utmost point [of decay]'.

14-15) See 68a, 16-19.

17) My pathes are thorny]

See 62b, 16.

22) See Ephesians IV, 24.

30) I AM]

See Commentary to 42b, 15.

31) therew/$\overline{th}$/]

'therewith'.

33) H$_u$seh...pacaduasam]

These words are not translatable, but 'Peleh' may be related to the name of God Pele (see 12a, 46).

36) yf you haue eares, heare]

See Matthew XI, 15.

37) This mercy was never]

This mercy was never shown before.

38) 'Let the wicked depart and perish'.

41-42) this Poland<er> prince]

Lasky.

45) 'What may be said concerning the life of Stephen, King of Poland?' Lasky had pretensions to the Polish throne and it is possible that he was the instigator of Dee's asking these questions between lines 45 and 47.

46)'Whether his successor will be Albert Lasky of the House of Austria?'

47) 'Whether Albert Lasky, Prince Palatinate of Siradia, will have the Kingdom of Moldavia?'

MN9) 'The remission of sins'.

MN31) 'The unjust angels with regard to Divine Justice'.

fol. 107b.

This folio is much damaged.

2) the]
'thee'.

4-5) It seems that the angels do not hear God directly, but rather are inspired by God acting through them.

6) The 'first' must be the speed demanded of Dee and Kelly at line 2 and the 'second' must be the warning, which can be inferred from what remains of lines 2 and 3, that speed must not be demanded of God and his angels.

7) The 'third' is the inspiration of God through the angels.

9) He]
God.

10) 'Ende' is used firstly in the sense of a termination, and secondly and thirdly in the sense of a purpose.

14) See 71a, 10-13.

15) puft vp]

'puffed up'.

this princis father]

I have not been able to discover any information concerning Lasky's father, but he may have been as involved in disputed territories as Lasky was (see p. 178, note 18).

17) Lasky is here incorporated into the circle of the elect, to be an arm to the chosen three (Dee, Kelly and Gilbert).

18-24) These lines prophesy a state of war and turmoil after which Lasky will be King, although whether of Poland or Moldavia or both is not specified. This will take place in a year's time ('the course of the sonne').

20) He is dead, in respect of his absence]

Being absent from his lands, Lasky is of no consequence in respect of them; his prophesied kingship may only take place upon his return. The sentence may, however, have the alternative meaning that King Stephen will die during Lasky's absence from his homeland.

25) See 42a, 54-43a, 8.

28) bankett]

'banquet'.

32-34) See Acts I, 8.

35) rosen]

Sic for 'risen'.

35-39) This seems to refer specifically to spiritual enemies, although Lasky would have had his share of temporal enemies on account of his political involvement and ambitions.

39-40) I will graunt him his desire]

This sentence refers again to Lasky and his desire to rule Poland.

MN22) 'A prophecy of the rule of Albert Lasky, but he himself did not want to convert himself constantly to God and adhere to God'. This note was probably written sometime later, after Lasky had proved an inconstant friend during Dee's continental journey.

MN29) 'Just doings'.

fol. 108a.

This folio is greatly damaged.

1-6) These lines seem to prophesy opposition to Lasky.

8) See Revelation VII, 3; IX, 4; XXII, 4, concerning the mark of God upon man and the blessed in heaven.

10) the Prince]

This could be either Lasky or Elizabeth who was opposed to Dee's going abroad.

11-12) See MN11 and line 1-6.

13) See MN13.

26-32) 'Ever blessed be the three and one, our eternal and omnipotent God. Amen. The Book of Mysteries which is parallel to and a new beginning of the sixth (and holy) book follows'. Liber Mysteriorum (& Sancti) parallelus Novalisque is th title of the first book in TFR. The Book of Enoch bears the title Liber Mysterioru, Sextus et Sanctus (Sloane MS 3189, fol. 2a) and therefore the first book in TFR, being called the sixth since it follows the appendix to the fifth book (see 91a, 1-2), is a parallel version of the sixth book which is effectively begun again (novali literally means 'ploughed anew').

MN13) See 106b, 6-9.

lN14) This alteration would in fact make little sense.

MN25) This shows a certain finality.

ORDINES DESCENDENS

(HAUDQUAQUAM LICIT MIHI ESSE)

or,

The Descending Hierarchies

(Which I am not at all to allow to survive)

of

Dr. John Dee

Scholar of Mort-Lake in Surrey

✠

Fully Transcribed & Annotated from the Original Document

which is in his Possession

by

Jeremiah Hobbs Esq.

For his Good Friend Sir Francis Dashwood Bt.

✠

With Many Additional Notes of Interest to the Scholar and Alchymist concerning the Endeavours and Methods Devised by John Dee and Edward Talbot or, Kelley, for the Summoning to their Command & Will of Diverse Spiritual Beings

Comprising

A Hitherto Unknown & Lost Book

in which are Most Fully Described

The Lords of Tartarus

with also

Ways to Summon These into the Very Presence of the Alchymist

& In Which is Also Described

The Historie of the Manuscript

Shewing How it was Removed From Amidst Other of John Dee his Papers & How it Thereby Passed into the Keeping of Secret Rosicrucians & Diverse Others of Whom there is still Some Account to be Ascertained by an Astute Gentleman.

✠

Edinburgh

Printed & Prepared

by Jas. Ruthven Old Fishmarket Close

on the Understanding of the Most Strict Privacy to be Observed

& is not to be sold to Any without Permission of J. Hobbs Esq. his Person.

THE ORDINES DESCENDENS

of

Dr. John Dee

Described and Edited
by Peter W. Mills

COPY NO.

ALL COPYRIGHTS WHICH SUBSIST IN THIS WORK ARE THE PROPERTY OF PETER W. MILLS © 2007

The Ordines Descendens of John Dee

Foreword

This book purports to be a record of a previously unknown lost volume of occult instruction originally written by the Elizabethan English scientist and occultist Dr. John Dee.

The original manuscript, of which this book is only a reproduction, was shown to me by its owner, who died in 2001. He was a friend of mine and, before he retired, was the proprietor of a successful antique and auction house. He informed me that many years ago ("around 1970") he had purchased some of the contents of a house in Kent from the relatives of its deceased owner, amongst which were several interesting items of antique furniture and old books, and amongst the books was a box file containing miscellaneous papers, the majority of which were dated during the 1950s and appeared not to have been much touched since then. Among these were the original and much older papers of which this book is a reproduction. How these came to be in the box file, in which the most recent other paper was a receipt from a local tailor for a new suit dated October 1967, is unknown.

My friend was a devout Roman Catholic and considered the old document to be evil; however, he was also a passionate antiquarian and antique collector and, he told me, was therefore unwilling to destroy the manuscript in view of its apparent age. He consequently kept it in its box file in the bottom of a bookshelf in his office and forgot about it. Years later, when my wife and I were visiting his family for dinner, our conversation turned to the novels of the English author Dennis Wheatley, because one of his most famous stories "The Devil Rides Out" had been on television the night before in a movie version[1]. The ensuing conversation on "black magic", in which I expressed some scepticism, prompted my friend to retrieve the file and show me the manuscript that is reproduced here.

My friend permitted me to attempt to photocopy the original manuscript, but the ink had faded to such a degree to a kind of pale yellow-orange that no decent readable photocopy could be made. In addition, spending at least 30 years, probably longer, ignored in an upright box file in a dry centrally-heated room had caused the papers to curl badly, and they were prone to crack and flake when any attempt was made to smooth them flat for the copier. Instead therefore, I kept the original document for some five weeks and made a reproduction of it by carefully typing the text out on my computer and re-drawing all the diagrams by hand. I used a font that was almost identical to the original printing typeface, plus page ornaments that are very similar to those of the original. Although a scant few of the more tangled passages and extreme pieces of phraseology have been slightly edited by me for greater clarity, I believe I have preserved both the flavour and appearance of the original papers and the accurate technical details of the magical operations they describe, as well as accurate copies of the diagrams, with the addition of nothing more to these than some arrows and small circled numbers of my own to add clarity to the information they are illustrating.

Since spending those five weeks painstakingly typing and preparing the manuscript once more into an accessible version in the evenings, I did nothing more with my copy for some years, being very busy running my own business. Having recently retired, I decided that I now had the necessary time and inclination to present it to a publisher for inspection and consideration, with the addition of this detailed introduction of my own containing the necessary explanations and some observations on the manuscript.

[1] The movie was also known as The Devil's Bride in the USA.

The original was made available to me only on the stringent condition that the owner would not under any circumstances be identified, and I respect this wish, even though he has now passed away, especially as his wife is still alive. This is certainly not the first occasion when occult manuscripts have been shown to a researcher under such a restriction; there is a precedent where original documents of the magical society The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn were made available to historian Ellic Howe, for use in his book The Magicians of the Golden Dawn (Routledge & Kegan Paul Ltd. 1972) under a similar promise, and for a similar reason; the owner did not wish to find themselves, and their family, the subject of the unwanted attentions and enquiries of occultists from all quarters of the world. Ellic Howe writes in the preface to his book: "...a friend introduced me to a gentleman who is the custodian of certain documents which were formerly in the possession of A. E. Waite... on condition that neither their location nor ownership be disclosed."

The manuscript transcribed in this present book, therefore, must be offered as it stands, as either fact or forgery. It is presented here only as a curiosity, and possibly as an interesting occult theory that may have a certain logic and coherence with the proven writings of John Dee for those to whom the occult is a subject of interest. The reader must be left to make up their own mind about its authenticity or otherwise. I have seen and handled the original manuscript, which in my opinion dates from the period of the later part of the eighteenth century, and is claimed by its author to be a detailed copy made by him of an earlier work by John Dee (1527-1608). This present book is thus a copy of a copy. The original printed manuscript is no longer available for further study, my friend's wife finally burning it after his death, as she, also a Roman Catholic, considered it to represent "the work of the Devil." This may sound like the plot of some novel, but it is nevertheless the case: the truth, as the saying has it, is stranger than fiction.

The writer of the original printed text, naming himself as Jeremiah Hobbs, is entirely unknown to any documented or researched history. The style of writing, of course, is of a substantially later date than the time of John Dee, and by its grammatical composition and textual references it might be taken as suggesting the early period of George III (reigned 1760-1820) or, somewhat less likely in my opinion, the later period of George II (reigned 1727-1760). The "Liberties of the Fleet" mentioned in the text were ended during a reform in 1774 (see my notes on the text below), thus suggesting an upper limit to the date not much later than that. The reference to Sir Francis Dashwood (see below) would, if correctly deduced as linking Jeremiah Hobbs to the "Hellfire Club", set the earliest possible date for the text as after 1746, the year this organisation of rakes and libertines was founded. My own "guesstimate" of the most likely date of the writing would be during the decade 1770-1780.

Jeremiah Hobbs is evidently someone who has, or affects that they have, obtained a copy of some papers relating to the "angelic communications" supposedly achieved by John Dee and Edward Kelly (if true, possibly clandestinely, since the account seems to gloss over details at this point, not naming the purveyor of the papers although previously all people's names have been given in detail). He makes the totally unsupported claim that these papers, which describe a method of demonic invocation as opposed to the angelic magic for which Dee is better known, accidentally escaped attention by becoming separated from other writings, in the manner described in Hobbs' preface letter, and thereby were not included in any of the acknowledged compilations of Dee's works, which were mainly in the collections of Elias Ashmole (now the Ashmolean Museum) and Sir Robert Cotton (now the Cottonian Library in the British Museum). Meric Casaubon published a well known book of the work of Dee and Kelly in 1659, based on these collections, which was unfortunately not meticulously accurate.

Although certain of the people and events mentioned by the author of the text can be substantiated, because they are also mentioned in other sources such as those mentioned above, other persons and incidents cannot be verified. Broadly speaking, the following items can all be confirmed from other historical written sources; the unexpected discovery of some of Dee's papers when a secret drawer in a chest was discovered by a Mr. and Mrs. Jones before the Great Fire of London in 1666; Mrs. Jones' second marriage to a Mr. Wale; their decision to present the papers to the noted antiquarian Elias Ashmole; and the fact that a servant had unthinkingly destroyed about half of these papers by using them in the kitchen. However, everything described in this present book as having taken place after these events, including the claim that certain papers escaped attention because they had been used to stiffen the backings of pictures and were in later years passed on through the hands of various other characters, including a couple of alchemically-inclined apothecaries and a chaplain of the old Fleet prison, cannot be substantiated in any way or against any other sources.

The document is headed: "To My Most Noble Friend Sir Francis Bt." (i.e. Baronet) who is identified in the frontispiece as Sir Francis Dashwood (1708-1781), notorious as the founder of the "Hellfire Club", although this is a later name for Dashwood's group of libertines, who usually referred to themselves as "The Friars of St. Francis of Wycombe" (a pun on Sir Francis, who lived in a stately home at West Wycombe in Buckinghamshire), "The Monks of Medmenham", or "The Order of Knights of West Wycombe". Dashwood was the son of a wealthy businessman who had married into the aristocracy. He sat in the House of Commons as an MP for over 20 years and variously held the offices of Chancellor of the Exchequer, Postmaster General and Treasurer to King George III. He and the other members of his "Friars of St Francis of Wycombe", a.k.a. "the Hellfire Club", are known to have had more than a passing interest in diabolism and occult and pagan rituals. It is therefore not impossible that Jeremiah Hobbs was seeking admission to the "Hellfire Club" and may have presented this transcript of demonic invocation attributed to John Dee, and what is evidently his own history of Dee which prefaces it, to Dashwood, to ingratiate himself and prove his worthiness for admission to the group, or else as a gift of thanks for already being admitted.

For those to whom John Dee is unfamiliar, there can be few short descriptions better than that included in the Odhams Press New Standard Encyclopædia of 1936.

> "Dee, John. English alchemist. Born in London, July 13, 1527, he was educated at Cambridge. He claimed to foretell the future by means of the stars and crystals. He was put in prison in the time of Mary, but Edward VI gave him two livings in the church, and Elizabeth believed in him and visited him for advice. He died at Mortlake in Dec. 1608. Dee claimed to be able to transmute gold, and suggested a reform of the calendar. He wrote books on mathematical subjects. His son, Arthur Dee (1579-1651) was physician to the Tsar of Russia and to Charles I."

Much more, however, can be said of John Dee. He had at his house in Mortlake, now a smart part of London but then a Surrey village, one of the greatest libraries – if not the greatest – in England at that time, visited by many scholars and noteworthy people including Queen Elizabeth herself. He was fascinated with the legends of King Arthur, to the extend where he gave his own son the same name, and he is generally credited with being the person who revived the national interest in Arthurian legend at that time, as well as probably being the first person to coin the term "British Empire". He is also considered to be the inspiration for Shakespeare's character Prospero in The Tempest, a futuristic version of whom can be seen played by actor Walter Pigeon in the science-fiction movie Forbidden Planet (1958), which was not only based on the Shakespeare play but which itself became part of the inspiration that would later produce the original Star Trek TV series, thereby linking Dee not only with Elizabethan England but also by indirect inference with the far future, in a manner he would perhaps have appreciated for its echoing of the epithet applied to his hero King Arthur, the once and future king.

Dee was also a seminal mathematician, perhaps second only to Sir Isaac Newton in the English development of this branch of science, escalating the mathematical art of navigation to a hitherto unrealized pinnacle that enabled English ships of trade, expedition and war to begin to dominate the world. In 1577 he published General and Rare Memorials pertayning to the Perfect Arte of NAVIGATION; and in 1582, A Playne Discourse concerning the needful reformation of ye vulgar kallender.

However, John Dee is probably most usually remembered today for his consuming passion for the occult and the books and papers he wrote regarding it, and his extensive researches on the subject conducted both in England and throughout much of Europe. It is perhaps an amusing comment on human nature that, with a few more recent notable exceptions, the majority of books written about John Dee the mathematician and philosophical politician do not mention much about his work in occult activities, and the majority of books written about John Dee the magician at best mention only in passing his mathematical and philosophical importance to English (and indeed world) history.

Many of John Dee's manuscripts have come to light over the centuries. Much of the occult writings were, as mentioned, collected and published as long ago as 1659 by Meric Casaubon (or Cawsabon, as writers of older times often spelled it), although his book contained many typographical errors. More of Dee's writings were discovered (as described later in this present work) when a wooden chest was found to have a secret drawer, and these particular documents – or at least those that survived the depredations of an ignorant maidservant who used some of the papers to light fires with and to line pie dishes – were later given to the famous antiquarian Elias Ashmole (1617-1692) whose eventual presentation of his entire collection to Oxford University in 1682 became the foundation of the world famous Ashmolean Museum.

However, it is very important to state categorically that nowhere in any existing paper by John Dee or in any catalogue of his written works, including his own diary, does there appear any mention of a book called Ordines Descendens ("the Descending Hierarchy"). As far as the official and researched historical record of John Dee and his life is concerned, there is no such book. The single possibly suggestive reference may occur in Dee's Quartus Liber Mysteriorum (Fourth Book of Mystery) (one of the documents discovered in the secret drawer in an old chest, as is detailed in the manuscript, and which found its way into the collection of the Ashmolean Museum where it is now kept) in an entry made on Wednesday November 21st 1582, where Dee is describing the "tables" – that is, the methodology for forming the names of various spirits – and refers, once only, in brackets as though under his breath, to "...(the Infernall Table)".

Could the original of this present transcript, surviving through a succession of strange chances, be Dee's "Infernall Table"? Did Dee, who professed to be an ardent Christian and claimed to have contacted and communicated only with "angels" and to have been taught their special language, also investigate what, today, would generally be called Satanism? Did he discover a powerful secret method for invoking demonic forces to his will? Did he achieve the knowledge, alone of all the famous magicians in history, of Satan's real personal name? Did he see the hierarchies of Hell itself, and gain instruction from demons on the correct methods for summoning their forms into his presence? Did he record this diabolic knowledge on paper? And did he invoke the aid of demons to enable him to escape from imprisonment, prosecution and execution for heresy, as is claimed in the manuscript? If so, undoubtedly he would have kept it rigorously secret throughout his life and is unlikely to have recorded it in his otherwise meticulous diary, even in cipher; he was suspected of being a necromancer anyway by many of his contemporaries, and if any evidence had been produced that he had trafficked with demonic powers from Hell, he and his colleague Edward Kelly would certainly have been burned at the stake, regardless of Queen Elizabeth's personal friendship and patronage.

If all this supposition and speculation should be so, then what happened to any writings of Dee on this subject? Much of his writing has survived, including his own diaries, but – aside from the one single problematical remark quoted above – there is absolutely no record or any other hint that Dee even so much as considered extending his research in the reverse direction to that of his "angelic spirits".

The single comment than can be made here by me with absolute certainty is that this account, whatever its provenance, describes in complete detail a previously unknown and unguessed method of identifying, in accordance with the "Enochian" techniques developed by John Dee and Edward Kelly but in an entirely new methodology, a range or scale of demonic entities completely separate from their known workings involving "angels". Angelic beings are supposed to be "higher" and are part of an "ascending hierarchy", with "Ultimate Divinity" at the top. This manuscript describes the method for obtaining the reverse, a "descending hierarchy" of demonic beings, with the "Ultimately Diabolical" at its base; truly, an ordines descendens.

The Thirteen Descending Clavicules and the Demonic System of Magic

The manuscript contains 13 invocations, or calls, described as "keys" (Latin: claviculae, sometimes Anglicised as clavicules), for use by the sorcerer in the raising of the demonic forms. Dee is known to have used (received via the scrying of Edward Kelly, his seer or medium) many other such invocations for use in raising the angelic forms in the manner for which he is famous, some 48 being included in his known surviving records.

The descending clavicules seem on first consideration to be somewhat different in overall character, or what might be referred to as "poetic inspiration", from the known calls, which are baroque, rather turgid and even floral in content. A typical quotation is:

"O you Sons of Fury, the Child of the Just, which sit upon 24 seats, vexing all creatures of the earth with age, which have under you 1636. Behold the voice of God! The promise of Him who is called amongst you Fury or extreme Justice. Move therefore and show yourselves. Open the mysteries of your creation! Be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest." (English translation of the Fourteenth Key, from The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic, Israel Regardie, New Falcon Publications, Tempe, Arizona, 1984.)

These "angelic" keys are understood by occultists to contain a type of verbal code, and the frequent inclusion of what seem at first to be random numbers, as in the above example, is an integral part of this code. As can be seen from the example, the actual text is a trifle vague or directionless as mere prose, at least to the casual reader.

The Descending Keys, on the contrary, seem to have much more point to them: they appear, let us say, more firmly directed to the issue of contacting demonic energies than the others are to contacting the angelic: they are, generally, a little less vague.

As an example, consider the First Clavicule of the Descending Hierarchies, the Clavicule of Satan: "The Spirits of a mighty Palace are under thy unspeakable name, Spirit of the Burning Flames. I bind unto my voice thy strong obedience, ye first mighty Dragon of Creation, thou all powerful Lucifer, Lord Satan, who is called wormwood. Hearken unto thy servant, Lord of the earth, and come to me in your strength; Bring with thee the power to govern over thy cursed creatures of terror. Be thou true, therefore, under whom are the 4 strong towers of thy kingdom of lamentation. The secret wisdom of 666 fiery horns is measured amongst the stewards of thy great mysteries. Come! Come I say! Ye true lord of the ages of the earth. Your creation is made the Second Beginning amongst us who are numbered as your true servants".

Even the most casual reader would immediately recognise this passage for what it is, a Satanic invocation. Little about it is at all vague. Even the number included in it will be instantly significant to just about everyone. It is direct and to-the-point, and less disjointed in character than the typical "angelic" key. When, having copied the original manuscript in a freshly typed and re-drawn version, I later came to (superficially) study the known writings and magical methodology of John Dee's recorded Enochian Magic, the difference in character between the rather specific and more coherent nature of the demonic keys, as opposed to the comparatively nebulous nature of the angelic ones, puzzled me.

In the function of an editor of the work, neither believing nor disbelieving in its genuineness, I wondered at first whether this difference in prose style might indicate that the demonic keys were composed by a different and later author, perhaps in imitation of Dee. On the other hand, the difference could just as easily reflect simply the difference in the nature of the magical workings - angelic and demonic. I am reliably informed that there is actually no such thing as "black magic" or "white magic", only magic applied for different purposes or with different intentions, good or evil. Until I was given this advice, I was going to include the statement here that the difference in the nature of the prose might arise because one type of key is for use in "white magic" and the other in "black magic". I am told, however, that such a statement will be viewed as technically incorrect by those who understand such things better than I.

Realising that I was getting a little "out of my depth" in respect of the actual occult mechanisms and theories and current views of such things, I asked the acquaintance who had advised me not to refer to "black" or "white" magic because nobody who was actually knowledgeable in these matters would use such terms, if they could recommend to me someone who was an actual occult practitioner, a modern-day sorcerer in effect, if there were such a thing, who would be prepared to examine a copy of the manuscript, not from an historical viewpoint, but from a practical occult one, and perhaps (I asked with my tongue rather in my cheek) try to invoke a demon according to the instructions. They did, it happened, know of such a person, an acquaintance with whom they had attended university, a young man who lived on the other side of England to me who was - rather to my surprise - an engineer with a university degree.

My friend seemed to perceive no dichotomy in the notion that this qualified professional family man was also a magician or occult practitioner, and so I followed his example. A meeting was arranged involving me in a 500 mile round trip by car (fortunately no problem for me since I am retired) and I met the magician, with whom I was actually favourably impressed. He agreed to give the Ordines Descendens what he called a "road-test" and to report back to me afterwards with his opinion of its potency as an occult system, with complete disregard of its provenance or age.

Just under a month later I received a phone call from the magician. After a brief exchange of polite pleasantries, I came straight to the point and asked him for his evaluation of the Ordines Descendens from the point of view of using it for occult purposes. The second word of his immediate reply was: "Dynamite!" (the first word being an unrepeatable Anglo-Saxon verb connected with procreation).

It transpired that he had studied it thoroughly before attempting to actually perform an invocation, and that he was thoroughly satisfied that it "worked", although I am not qualified myself to pass comment on this assertion but merely to accept it at face value and record it here. He also asked if he could keep a copy of the manuscript for his own use, to which I agreed on condition that he signed a typed statement agreeing to respect me as copyright holder, did not submit it for publication, did not publicise it, and all the other legal caveats. I sent him the form in the post and duly received it back signed, and with it, in addition, he very kindly included some notes of his own concerning the manuscript, which provided me with his further, and seemingly knowledgeable, opinions regarding the text, from more of an "inside occultism" perspective than I could have achieved unassisted.

These notes form the basis of the following paragraphs, elaborated where necessary by my further research of his suggestions. I must emphasise here that these pieces of information are nothing more than suggestions, and that they may or may not apply.

There are certain differences between Doctor John Dee's surviving writings, and the system of Enochian Magic as it is generally understood today. The principle difference comes about because Dee's writings have been expanded upon by various more recent occultists, so that a wider and more comprehensive magical character has been gradually added. It is commonly believed that neither Dee nor his medium Kelly was fully aware of the full magical significance of the information they were recording as being received clairvoyantly from "angelic spirits".

The detailed records maintained by Dee of his explorations in the realm of "spirits" passed later through the hands of experts within certain occult fraternities, and in particular the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, who developed what might be called "Dee's inspirations" and moulded them into a much more intricate magical system, linking Enochian in the process with other occult cultures, such as the Cabbala, originally a Jewish occult system, and another magical mechanism of Jewish origin, gematria, in which words can be given linked numerical values according to calculations of the values of individual letters of the alphabet.

Both of these attributions of latter-day Enochian, Cabbala and gematria, seem to be absent from the manuscript of the Ordines Descendens (although I am advised that it would be relatively simple for a knowledgeable occultist to work them out for themselves). It would be quite suspicious if the manuscript included such references. Far from being a weakness, this would appear to indicate that - although the first part of the manuscript itself records that it passed through many hands, some of them at least of "alchemists" and maybe also of magical adepts - any re-structuring, early editing or supplementary occult interpretations that may have been incorporated into the original version presumably happened before the "Golden Dawn" era (that is, before about 1887 at the very latest) after which time a great amount of previously disjointed occult lore and divergent magical traditions were "aligned" by the skillful attentions of the Golden Dawn leaders (principally S. M. Mathers) to present a newly-rendered and more coherent magical system.

There were several occult groups known by recorded history to have been active before the Golden Dawn was founded. One such, indeed, was the Hellfire Club founded by Sir Francis Dashwood and mentioned earlier. Although the primary purpose of this "club" was what might politely be described as the abandonment of its members to the indulgence of "wine, women and song" (particularly the first two), there is recorded evidence that they also conducted rituals of pagan worship in which orgies were instrumental, and very probably also rituals of "black magic" or Satanism. Since it seems possible that the original transcriber, naming himself Jeremiah Hobbs, prepared the manuscript as a gift for Dashwood and, by implication, presumably for use by the members of the Hellfire Club, it is not impossible that some later "tilt" was included in the Hobbs version to bring it closer to occult theory as it was understood at that time.

This is quite likely, it appears, in respect of the compass points assigned in the text to the four "Palaces of Hell" (replacing the four "Elemental Watchtowers" of angelic Enochian) which are different from those of standard Enochian and modern occultism in general. If the more usual modern elemental attribution is taken as the "normal" (Earth is North, Air is East, Fire is South, Water is West), then it might be thought more appropriate for a modern Satanist, following the same principle involved in inverting the crucifix, to invert the compass attributions: Night, corresponding to Air, would be West instead of East, Blood (Water) would become East instead of West, Kingdom (Earth) would become South, and the Bright One (Fire) would be North.

Although this would represent a perfect inversion of the regular compass attributions, it would actually produce a very unsatisfactory - and sterile - magical system. Instead, the manuscript stipulates angles as the infernal compass attributions, thus:

The Palace of the Night - the North-East angle.
The Palace of the Blood - the South-West angle.
The Palace of the Kingdom - the North-West angle.
The Palace of the Bright One - the South-East angle.

I believe it to be relevant that the Ordines Descendens should stipulate compass angles rather than compass points. Angles are, in fact, extremely important and energetic in occult theory, perhaps even more so in the past. (The origin of the superstition that it is "unlucky" to walk beneath a ladder is that the ladder makes a triangle against a wall, a triangle once being superstitiously considered the "Devil's doorway".) Angular geometric forms have long been particularly associated with diabolism. This was known and demonstrated, for example, by the American author Frank Belknap Long, a literary contributor to what has been termed the "Cthulhu Mythos" inspired primarily by the fictional works of writer H. P. Lovecraft.

In his 1931 short story The Hounds of Tindalos, Long postulates demonic entities - the "hounds" of the title - who inhabit the angles of time and space whereas normal life-forms such as humans and all biological living things inhabit the curves (Einsteinian "curved space"). Although called "hounds", the appearance of these creatures is unknown, because nobody has encountered them and lived to tell the tale. Since the creatures inhabit the angles of the universe instead of the curves, they can gain entrance to our world by emerging through any kind of sharp corner, materialising first as smoke pouring from the corner, followed by the things themselves. The central character of the story, becoming aware that he has been chosen as the hound's next victim, manages to evade them by turning his room into a kind of "astral fortress" by the ingenious expedient of using builder's plaster to round-out the corners of the ceiling and walls so that the interior is transformed into a sphere containing no angles. However, a minor earthquake occurs in the neighbourhood causing some of the plaster to fall...

Apart from recommending it as an entertaining supernatural story, I make mention of The Hounds of Tindalos since it is a good example of the undercurrent of ancient paranormal belief in the demonic importance of angles surfacing from time to time in our culture to prove its continuance. Whilst not for one moment suggesting that I accept the attribution of any kind of practical consequence as a result of the employment of "magical" systems such as Enochian, whether angelic or diabolic, it does appear at least that there is a plausible explanation within the field of traditional superstition to account for the substitution of the compass points by their intermediate angles, rather than the (perhaps at first more obvious) choice of simply inverting them.

The casual impression that the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn represented the genesis of widespread interest in the occult is an illusion of fame (or notoriety): it was, rather, the zenith or flowering of that interest, which has probably always been a characteristic of the human race, but which is first actually recorded in history, with documentary evidence, during the seventeenth century in a simple pamphlet published in Germany in 1614 entitled Fama Fraternitatis ("Traditions of the Brotherhood"). This paper was a type of educational proclamation allegedly written by members of a secret occult order calling themselves the Rosicrucian Brotherhood. This name, it was explained, was derived from their founder, a German scholar called Christian Rosenkreuz who, in the previous century, had travelled to a remote Egyptian citadel where he had spent some years studying the occult with the resident priests before returning to Germany as an advanced initiate and attracting a growing group of followers,

The pamphlet contained not a shred of substantiating evidence but was none the less widely accepted and captured the public imagination. The early seventeenth century was, after all, a time of religious upheaval when the reformation had called into question the foundations of established belief, and people felt the need for a new vision of spiritual understanding. A legend rapidly grew around the pamphlet and a second one that followed it, that the mysterious Rosicrucians had mastered great occult powers including the mythical art of the alchemist to turn base metal into gold and the secret of immortality.

During the next hundred and fifty years or so many "Rosicrucian" groups inspired by the pamphlets and the legends sprang up all over Europe, and some of these were absorbed into the structure of Freemasonry. In 1866, a Rosicrucian Freemason and occultist, Robert Wentworth Little, created an occult order in London which he called the English Rosicrucian Society, usually known by its Latin title Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia and often abbreviated for convenience as "Soc. Ros." According to its own records, Robert Little managed to gain access to a great many secret occult papers and manuscripts which he tracked down in archaic files in Freemasons Hall, Great Queen Street, London, where he was employed as a clerk. Using this advanced knowledge together with his own learning and researches, he proceeded to instruct members of the Soc. Ros. in the "initiated occult secrets of the ancients". Membership was strictly limited to Master Masons and the Soc. Ros. was very definitely a "secret society" of which the general public was completely unaware.

In 1878 when Little died, his place as Supreme Magus of the Soc. Ros. was taken by a very remarkable occult expert Dr. W. R. Woodman, a retired physician who could read Hebrew fluently and had studied the Cabbala for a great many years. In 1888 Woodman, together with two fellow Freemasons and Soc.Ros. initiates, Dr. Wynn Westcott a London coroner and Samuel Liddell Mathers, branched out on their own and created the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn.

The occult researches of John Dee preceded the 1614 pamphlet of the Rosicrucian Brotherhood by a generation, although the pamphlet claimed that the Brotherhood had actually been founded about a century earlier, which if true would place its origin in the early 1500s and therefore more-or-less contemporary with Dee. Even though John Dee died six years before the date of the Rosicrucian pamphlet, there is a possibility that he might have been familiar with the earliest Rosicrucian Brotherhood in Germany, if such a thing existed. The possibility is made more attractive when one considers that after he had reached the age of twenty, Dee spent some 30 years travelling intermittently throughout Europe, during which time he specifically sought out fellow occultists abroad.

It is therefore at least possible that, if the Ordines Descendens does represent a lost work originating with John Dee, it may have been "improved" slightly by some of the later "alchemists" through whose hands the copies passed until it reached Jeremiah Hobbs, and perhaps it may also have been "tidied up" by him preparatory to his presenting it to Sir Francis Dashwood. In the opinion of the occultist who experimented with the technique on my behalf and provided me with most of the technical details which I have presented here in my own words, if there has been any "updating" of the occultism contained in the Ordines Descendens, it is most likely to have been in the precise scheme of the "Enochian language" of the 13 keys. My expert modern magician assures me that these keys "work, and are incredibly powerful", but that they seem slightly different in general character from those in Dee's other known works in the ways already mentioned (i.e. being more forthright and somewhat less ornate, as well as a little less numerically oriented).

This same modern occultist also advised me that I should "definitely include a warning with the copy of the manuscript" to the effect that the negative Enochian system it describes is "devastatingly powerful", "utterly Satanic" and "dangerous to use unless you are a thorough expert on the occult".

To this subjective view given by a practicing modern magician, I will add my own objective observation: it is not possible to speak the 13 keys or calls without declaiming in absolute and concrete terms one's alignment and surrender to the concept of Satan, in deliberate and specifically measured words. Even if all occult considerations are discounted, this must surely have a detrimental affect upon the moral psychological balance of any individual. This editor therefore must completely disassociate himself from any untoward results that may occur to any person who decides to actually employ the magical system described here, whether such results are of a magical nature or - as is possibly more likely - of a psychological one.

Caveat lector!

Peter W. Mills
Somerset
England
2006

Some Comments on the Text

There are some comments that can be made from an examination of the text that might help the reader more fully appreciate certain details of the content. It must be categorically stated that these comments arise merely from my own intelligent observation and research, and are not in any way to be construed as attempting to establish, imply, verify or authenticate any date, era, authorship, genuineness or truthfulness of the manuscript, for all of which it must be understood that no claims whatsoever are made or implied by this editor.

Front Cover and Initial Pages:

The covers of the original Hobbs book are missing, having been detached and lost at some unknown point in the past. The pages had come loose from the partly perished binding and the conventional inner half-title page (presumably counted as page 1 in the original) is also missing and has been replaced by a new version. The first surviving page of the transcript is the "bookplate" title page (in a black border with the original printer's name at the bottom). This was in all probability counted as page 2. The first page of original text is numbered as page 3, as it is here.

Page 1:

Although I made one or two very slight alterations to the text whilst copying it from the original, these changes were, indeed, extremely minor and were executed for the purpose of making the original easier to understand: also, the changes, such as they were, occur in the first part of the Hobbs Document concerning the account of the survival of the papers, not in the part containing the negative Enochian methodology. For example, in the very first paragraph, the sentence now containing the phrase: "...we have first to turn our thoughts in retrospect to anno. 1527..." in the original text ran: "... the gentrise will have first to turn their thoughts of legenda in retrospect to anno. 1527...". I learned through subsequent research that "gentrise" is an obsolete word for "the gentry" but, in the 18th century not taken as meaning simply the middle or upper classes but carrying the connotation "the educated and curious gentlefolk"; and that "legenda" does not mean (as I had at first supposed) "legends" or even "stories" or "histories", but that it is in fact a Latin word meaning "things to be read". Since the modern reader would naturally construe the original text to mean: "...the gentry will have to first turn their thoughts of legendary matters in retrospect to anno. 1527...", which introduces the originally absent implications that the book was not intended for commoners and that the matters being described are legendary rather than factual, I made the decision to remove the obsolete words in this case in order to preserve the actual meaning of the sentence more faithfully.

Page 3:

"...allotted Under-reader in Greek..." – i.e. he was appointed to this post, considered a form of "junior professorship".

Page 4:

"On gaining his vellum..."– on receiving his doctorate, attested by a calfskin parchment (vellum) scroll or certificate.

"Rosicrucian brotherhood..." - the first occult order that can be specifically dated with documentary evidence (to 1614 in Germany).

"...the Catholic Queen Mary who came soon to be called by the vulgar Bloody Mary, so many did she have destroyed to suit her purposes..." - Mary Tudor, or Mary I of England, gained the epithet "Bloody Mary" through ordering 283 Protestant "heretics" burned at the stake in an attempt to restore Roman Catholicism, from which her father Henry VIII, founder of the (Protestant) Church of England, had been excommunicated.

"...Unhappily, the Council..." - the Privy Council: put simply, the Privy Council was a kind of non-democratic version of a governing Cabinet, its members personally appointed (or fired) by the monarch to form a group of advisers and department heads.

Page 5:

"...£3,000..." - my own updating of the monetary symbols used in the original manuscript, which has "Ł,MMM".

"...a wise and cunning man... - the term "cunning man" can mean a man of skill in some field or art, but it can also imply a wizard or male witch, and may be a veiled reference in that direction.

"...the great comet appeared in the sky in 1577..." - this comet, visible in the sky over Europe from November 1577 to January 1578, enabled the famous Polish astronomer Tycho Brahe, by measuring that its parallax was effectively zero, to show that comets (previously thought to be atmospheric phenomenon) were actually located beyond the orbit of the Moon.

Page 6 et al:

"...Dee's scryer..." also: "...the doctor's searching..." - The manuscript text contains some use of apostrophes as in these examples, but also features the occasional elaboration of sentence structure to avoid the use of any apostrophe, as in the frontispiece where we see: "...John Dee his papers..." and not "John Dee's papers". I wondered about this at first, since it seemed to represent an inconsistency in the grammatical observance of the writer, and I even wondered whether the apostrophe was used in this way at all during the 18th century (i.e. as an indicator of missing letters, as in the contraction of his to 's). However, further research showed me that I was, in my ignorance, following a common misconception. The apostrophe was first introduced into English (from French) in the 16th century, one of the earliest books to make use of it being The Cosmographical Glasse (William Cunningham, 1559). Its grammatical ancestry is believed to be in Old English (also called Anglo-Saxon, a Germanic language) where the genitive singular ending ...es was added to most nouns in order to form a possessive case, as with: anes mannes hors, "a man's horse" (the indefinite article an (= modern a) also takes on the possessive suffix in Anglo-Saxon grammar).

Interestingly, the common belief that the apostrophe is used to indicate the omission of the letters "hi..." in the word "his", so that the full correct grammatical implication would be, say, "a man (hi)s horse", or "John Smith (hi)s house" is actually based upon an early mistaken assumption. The ...es genitive ending in Anglo-Saxon was frequently spelled as ...ies and ...ys during the early period of Middle English, and as early as the 13th century was already being confused with his, giving rise to this "grammatical urban myth". Thus, when Shakespeare writes: "...the count his gally...", he is merely writing as a victim of the "his" apostrophe myth, believing this rendition to represent a more proper formal manner of speech. The use in this present manuscript of such phrasing as "John Dee his papers", therefore, represents merely an affectation common for some centuries and frequently used by writers who wished to introduce a pretension of "venerable formality" to their efforts, including Jeremiah Hobbs here, while the regular apostrophe was also employed. (See also, for example, page 6, where we have: "...Dr. Dee's writings..." and not: "...Dr. Dee his writings..." etc.)

Page 7:

"...incontestably result in such as Dee and Kelly being burned at the stake." – Dee was invited to visit Rome by the Pope, but wisely declined. Scientist and alchemist Giordano Bruno received a similar invitation and was burned at the stake. In modern parlance, such a message from the Pope was an "invitation to a neck-tie party!"

"...the Cape of Scotland..." - now called Cape Wrath.

"...while Kelley made the actual contacting of the spirits and did call out his findings and conversations for Dee to transcribe." – This is how it is recorded that the process of researching the Angelic Enochian system was carried out. The text does not specifically state that this process was also used to assemble the details of the Demonic Enochian system described in Hobbs' book, and Kelley (or Kelly) is not actually mentioned as having had a part in it. However, it is extremely unlikely that any other of Dee's known mediums would have been remotely capable of "channeling" (or "inventing", if you prefer) such an intricate system that corresponds so exactly as a counterpart to the Angelic version. It is also unlikely that Dee would have trusted anyone else to assist him in handling such an incendiary subject, the discovery of which could have sent both of them to the stake. It is also interesting to speculate that perhaps this secret bond of illicit demonology is what bound Dee and Kelly so intimately together for so many years, despite their great differences in character. Historians have often pondered on why the two men continued to stick together for so long and why this association was so intimate, even to the extent of a suggestion of some wife-swapping. Perhaps one answer is that each was frightened that the other would betray him as a demonologist?

Page 8:

"...Lich-field..." - Lichfield in Staffordshire. "Lich-field" is an ancient way of writing the name and it means "the field of the dead", commemorating a battlefield or place of slaughter; Lich = a dead body (Anglo-Saxon lie; German leiche); a lich-gate is the covered porch at the entrance gate of a churchyard where the coffin bearers can rest in shelter from rain. It is perhaps an interesting coincidence that John Dee was born and died in Mortlake (Fr. Mort-lac; "lake of death").

Page 9:

"...Mr. John Woodall, Chirugeon..." and "...Serjant Chirugeon..." – "Chirugeon" is an old spelling of the word that evolved from it into the modern word "surgeon", although it specifies a broader and more primitive definition of the occupation.

"... These furnishings &c. were then removed to their home and were in common use." - the phrase "in common use" in modern speech would mean that the items were used on a regular day-to-day basis, but it could also in older times imply that the couple shared the house with their landlord and the household furnishings were held in common. This may be the more likely inference of this phrase considering that the landlord accompanied the couple to the furniture shop.

"...for which they then bidded." – they haggled over the price.

"...after the plate had been saved..." – "plate" = the family silver.

Page 10

"...Quicksilvers for the pox..." – quicksilver, or mercury, in anything but minute doses, is a deadly poison; in very small controlled doses it had some success as a cure for syphilis ("the pox"). This popular application of quicksilver resulted in apothecaries who acted as unqualified doctors being referred to as "quicksilvers", shortened to "quicks", which became corrupted over the years to "quacks", applied to an unqualified or "quack" doctor.

"...in the shipyard..." - There was a Royal Naval dockyard and victualling yard until 1869 at Deptford, which is on the Thames between Greenwich and Bermondsey.

"...v shillings for the papers, of which there were about 30..." - the use of the Roman numeral v (5) in the same sentence as the Arabic figure 30 occurs like this in the original.

"...to cut his simples..." – "simples" were herbs, which were grown in Battersea before the area was overwhelmed by the expansion of London south of the Thames, and much visited by apothecaries who would select and cut their own herbs for medicinal purposes.

Page 11:

"...the Society of Apothecaries..." – The Worshipful Society of Apothecaries still exists in London as a major institution, and was established by royal charter on December 6th 1617. The Society acquired the former guesthouse of the Dominican Priory of the Black Friars (hence Blackfriars, the London district) for its headquarters in 1632. This was destroyed in the Great Fire of London in 1666, but a new headquarters building was constructed on the same site and was complete by 1672, and this building remains the Society's headquarters to the present day.

"... the Liberties of the Fleet..." – this refers to the area of London in the immediate vicinity of the old Fleet prison for debtors, namely the north side of Ludgate Hill and the Old Bailey as far as Fleet Lane down to the old market and along the east side of the prison wall back to the foot of Ludgate Hill. Prisoners who could afford it were actually allowed to live in lodgings in this area rather than in the prison itself. It is on record that chaplains at the old Fleet prison might, if unscrupulous, make a lot of money by performing clandestine marriages without banns or license; it is recorded that sometimes as many as thirty such marriages were performed each day, and that no less than 2,954 were conducted in just the four months to February 12th 1705. This might possibly explain why the chaplain mentioned, a Mr. Pike, was later able to buy a fine country house near Chislehurst in Kent.

"...for I was sought out by its purchaser and paid iii gns. for it." - i.e. 3 guineas. The guinea was an English gold coin first minted in 1663 from gold from Africa's Guinea coast (hence the coin's name) and originally worth 20 shillings. The value was changed to 21 shillings in 1717. The guinea ceased to be minted in 1817, but for some hundred and fifty years afterwards it was still used as an elitist affectation in professional fees, such as those of solicitors, and a few traditional institutions, including the horseracing fraternity, use the term to this day.

"...there is only the one copy of this book extans..." - "extans" = Latin for "existing" or "in existence"; today, we conventionally use the form "extant" ("existent") when referring to surviving documents and written or printed wording.

Page 12:

"...Chalcot Farm..." – This is the very old name that has since been corrupted to "Chalk Farm", a district of London near Paddington.

Pages 13-25

These pages describe a fairly standard method for obtaining details of Enochian "angelic" names etc. It seems likely that the bases of this instruction are the sources referred to in Hobbs' text, namely Meric Casaubon ("Cawsabon"), the Ashmolean collection and probably the Cotton collection, although Hobbs does not mention the latter. The mention of the name of a "Mr. Wickham" on page 10 as a "student of the science of alchymy" who, with various unnamed others, is said to have "revealed sundry other aspects" of Dee's Enochian system, is interesting but unverifiable from any other historical record. If factual, such people can possibly be regarded as some of the pre-Golden Dawn occultists who may have helped to shape the emergent Enochian formats.

Page 13:

"...Mr. Bothwick of Old Bethlehem..." – "Old Bethlehem" was the former name for what is now Liverpool Street in London. The name was changed in 1829 in honour of Lord Liverpool (Robert Banks Jenkinson) who was Prime Minister and died on December 4th 1828.

Page 15:

The illustrations on this page (and indeed, all the other illustrations) were re-drawn by me exactly as they appear in the original: this diagram of the four "watchtowers" was not perfectly square in the original, and I included its slight tilt when reproducing it.

Page 16:

"...the Jewish language, that may now be heard in Jewerie since their Return and Adoption." - "Jewerie" is an older spelling of "Jewry" and refers to any district of a town or city in England containing Jewish communities. There were Jewries, for example, in London (the name surviving in Old Jewry and Jewry Street), in Winchester, Leicester, Oxford and other places. The comment "since their return and adoption" presumably refers to the fact that Jews were forcibly expelled from England in 1290 under Edward I but were allowed to return in 1655 and - mainly as a reward for their loyalty to the government during the Jacobite insurrection of 1745 - Henry Pelham (Prime Minister 1743-1754) brought in a bill that allowed Jews to gain English nationality by personal application to Parliament. (This vaguely anti-Semitic comment in the manuscript may have been a sop to Sir Francis Dashwood, evidently the writer's patron, since he lived at Wycombe which, as a community, had an ambivalent attitude towards the Jews, being one of the boroughs that in 1235 had petitioned King Edward to expel them.)

Page 17:

This illustration is likewise faithful to the original, but I have myself added the small arrows and circles, which are not included in the original diagram, in order to assist the identification of the method for reading the name.

Page 19:

Here, again, the illustration is faithful to the original, but I have added the arrows and also the numbers in circles, which are not included in the original.

Page 25:

"...though unlikely to be a much trodden thoroughfare of Clio..." – Clio is one of the traditional nine Muses of the classical Greeks who was said to govern the subject of history. In other words, in the opinion of the writer, this particular occult research is unlikely to be studied by many serious scholars.

Page 27:

"...the Legions of Tartarus..." – The legions of Hell.

Page 28:

"...a Political cipher as it was the pleasure of Sir Francis Walsingham to many times devise for the confusing of his enemies..." – Sir Francis Walsingham became one of Queen Elizabeth the First's secretaries of state, recommended for the position by William Cecil (Baron Burghley) who was responsible for England's foreign policy. In effect, Walsingham established the first British "Secret Service", employing a vast network of spies and informers both in England and abroad. It was he who arranged the interception of letters written by Mary Queen of Scots, placed spies within her entourage and gathered evidence to prepare the way for her eventual execution. He is noted for devising complex codes which his agents used for communicating secret messages, some of which continue to elude breaking to this day.

Page 32:

It is interesting, not to say ingenious, that the chart of the Infernal Hierarchy bears an entirely logical and perfect relationship to the equivalent Angelic forms, whilst at the same time being also an accurate list of the traditional "ranks" or "denominations" assigned to the orders of demons by other authorities, including some Church writers.

Page 53:

"...that letter which be dividing them in the brackets..." – In the USA since the 1960s and the onset of computer programming, the term "brackets" has come more usually to refer to the square bracket [...] while it is unusual for the parentheses or curved brackets (...) to be referred to as "brackets" at all. In The Graphics of Communication (Holt, New York, 1964), Arthur T. Turnbull and Russel N. Baird mention that square brackets are generally called "braces" and curved brackets are simply called "brackets". The subsequent arrival of the computer revolution appears to have introduced an accepted evolutionary grammatical change to these definitions in the USA, however. In the UK, the term "brackets" still applies generally to all forms of grammatical enclosure symbols.

Page 57:

"...contra dextravorsum..." – Anti-clockwise (lit. "against the right direction").

Page 58:

"In nomine Dei Patris, Dei Filij, Dei Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Omnipotens, Sempiterne, vere, et viue Deus, in adiutorium meum intende: Domine Dominantium, Rex Regum, Jeouah Zebaoth, as adiuuandum me festina: Gloria Deo, Patri Filio, et spiritui Sancto: Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semper et in sæcula sæculorum: Amen." – The English wording of this Latin prayer would be: "In the name of God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit. Amen. Oh almighty, eternal, true and living God, be pleased to deliver me! Oh Lord of Lords, King of Kings, Jehovah Zebaoth, make haste to help me! Glory be to God the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen."

"Anna, et Annah, obsecrantis: 4 Angeli præsidentes 4 Cardinubus Cæli: Michael: Fortitudo Dei: Gabriel: Fortitudo Dei: Raphael: Medicina Dei: Uriel: Lux Dei. Amen." – The English of this Latin prayer would be: "I pray by the Grace of God: 4 Angels presiding over the 4 quarters of heaven: Michael: Strength of God: Gabriel: Strength of God: Raphael: Medicine of God: Uriel: Light of God. Amen."

Page 61:

"...(And there is a Note in the Hand of John Dee at this place in the manuscript which says he called up this very creature to his aid...)" - It cannot be verified that these demons were actually invoked by Dee to his aid, as there is no other known textual source to corroborate the statement made here. However, within the context of the manuscript, this note is certainly very suggestive, and it cannot be denied that it also seems to fit the circumstances in all respects, since Dee in historical fact indeed escaped some very serious legal prosecutions.

Peter W. Mills

ORDINES DESCENDENS

of

Dr. John Dee

ORDINES DESCENDENS

(HAUDQUAQUAM LICIT MIHI ESSE)

or,

The Descending Hierarchies

(Which I am not at all to allow to survive)

of

Dr. John Dee

Scholar of Mort-Lake in Surrey

✠

Fully Transcribed & Annotated from the Original Document

which is in his Possession

by

Jeremiah Hobbs Esq.

For his Good Friend Sir Francis Dashwood Bt.

✠

With Many Additional Notes of Interest to the Scholar and Alchymist concerning the Endeavours and Methods Devised by John Dee and Edward Talbot or, Kelley, for the Summoning to their Command & Will of Diverse Spiritual Beings

Comprising

A Hitherto Unknown & Lost Book

in which are Most Fully Described

The Lords of Tartarus

with also

Ways to Summon These into the Very Presence of the Alchymist

& In Which is Also Described

The Historie of the Manuscript

Shewing How it was Removed From Amidst Other of John Dee his Papers & How it Thereby Passed into the Keeping of Secret Rosicrucians & Diverse Others of Whom there is still Some Account to be Ascertained by an Astute Gentleman.

✠

Edinburgh

Printed & Prepared

by Jas. Ruthven Old Fishmarket Close

on the Understanding of the Most Strict Privacy to be Observed & is not to be sold to Any without Permission of J. Hobbs Esq. his Person.

FOR My Most Noble Friend Sir Francis Bt.

A Letter of Preface to the Book, Concerning That Which is Known Regarding the Researches of Dr. John Dee of Mort-lake and the Remarkable Historie of his Lost Papers.

✠

In order to most fully understand what is necessary about Doctor John Dee and his discoveries of what he called, the Language of Enoch or, the Enochian Angelic Tongue, and that full magical method he devised, or was taught, concerning it, we have first to turn our thoughts in retrospect to anno. 1527, being then the reign of King Henry, 8th of that name, (r. 1509-1547) that Engliſh monarch best remembered for having married six succeeding wives and for the second of these, through the intransigence of a Pope, causing that divide from the Church of Rome by the which the great Protestant Church in England was establiſhed. On 13th July in that year, in Mortlake, a village of Surrey, was born John Dee. He was marked by the hand of Destiny to become, in measure likened to your very self, Sir, if it may be so observed, one of those great men who move in the very ſhadows of Historie, of which kind the tale of England has full measure, often to the advantage of the realm.

He was the scion of a prosperous family, and was gifted from his beginning with a very great intellect. At the callow age of fifteen, he entered Cambridge University, where he drove himself to very great Lengths in order to acquire an ever-multiplying knowledge of diverse matters. He cared but little, it appears, for the normal sundry pleasures, amusements & diversions most usually anticipated of students, preferring to remain within his rooms being engaged in all manner of studious investigations rather than to partake of the carousing and disport of youthful custom. Within a bare four years, before reaching the full age of twenty, his devotion to Study and aptitude in learning earned him the advance of being allotted Under-reader in Greek, and he had so greatly impressed the Authorities with his knowledge and demeanour that he forthwith was enrolled a Fellow of the Trinity College, that was founded by that same King Henry anno. 1546.

Dee studied mathematics, astronomy, diverse languages, the art of navigation and the sundry properties of crystals and chymicals, and his contributions to the seafaring competence of that succeeding time of Queen Elizabeth were legend, and would, it is commonly agreed amongst the Knowledgeable, on their own have assured him a right worthy place in the histories of his time. However, his superseding passion was to continually look beyond that which had already come to be revealed to the investigations of the wise, in the furtherance of which he took also to making very thorough investigations of the ancient Art of Egypt, called by the common Alchymie (which is, Alchemia) and of sundry other sciences and all those hidden mysteries of Nature and Spirit.

Even whilst in university, it was believed by some that he practiced forbidden magic, witchcraft and the Dark Arts. For a play to be worked by his fellows, it is told that he faſhioned a remarkable & large automaton in the ſhape of a great beetle, which did amaze the audience and players alike and was attributed by all to magical operation. He also studied deeply astrology, and became a profound expert & practitioner in this subject, as in sundry others.

On gaining his vellum and thence leaving Cambridge, Dee journeyed for a lengthy time in Europe, studying and teaching at various illustrious Universities and visiting the libraries of nobles and scholars alike, teaching the arts and sciences and also learning more of the mysteries and Secrets that continued to absorb his interest.

His real Adventuring commenced, however, upon the occasion of a subsequent return to England, which was at that time enduring through great uncertainties, of some peril to any of rank or station. The imminent queen, the Princess Elizabeth Henry's daughter by Queen Anne Boleyn whom he had executed, was being held captive by her half-sister the Catholic Queen Mary who came soon to be called by the vulgar, Bloody Mary, so many did ſhe have destroyed to suit her purposes, who was daughter of that Henry and Catherine of Aragon. Elizabeth lay under suspicion of plotting through certain Protestant rebels to bring down Mary & make daim upon the crown of England, either of her own volition or at the instigating of secret Protestant agents.

Whilst Elizabeth was thus restrained, it so happened that one of the ladies-in-waiting, by name Blanche Parry, became personally acquainted with Dr. Dee and his abilities, by virtue of her father Sir Edward Parry who ofttimes did consult him in matters concerning the most favourable dispositions of the Heavens toward sundry Enterprises, and through the agency of this lady, Dee, with dubious wisdom, did enter into a correspondence with the princess. In order that he might give to her some hope for living, Dee did construct Catholic Mary's horoscope, in which he calculated her forthcoming ruin, and this very document, with a letter bearing also his name thereupon in plain writing and not in any cipher, was secreted in to the rooms at Biſhop's Hatfield where Elizabeth was presently being held under constraint.

Unhappily, the Council had placed certain spyes within that household and they informers betrayed Dr. Dee. A warrant was therefore drawn and sealed forthwith for his arrest on 2 charges, of treason and of plotting to murder the queen through the Agencies of black magic and, of witchcraft, of which he was by some suspected already. After a protracted Disputation before his judges, Dee did gain his acquittal on these charges by virtue of his great ability to speak as a learned scientific & legal man of Education and Reason. Howbeit, and in spite, the council at once had him arrested again, this 2nd time on a charge of heresy. After two perilous and uncertain years, he contrived to secure his final acquittal from this grievous accusation anno 1555.

John Dee's lot, however, came soon thereafter to obtain to a more pleasing turn. Anno. 1558 Queen Mary indeed exited this World, even as he had foretold, and Elizabeth came as queen to the Engliſh throne. For reward of the friendſhip and spiritual comforting extended to her during her time of captivity, and by way of some recompense for his consequent indictments and his losses thereto, Dee became her advisor of astrology and matters of fortune, and was thereafter himself appointed to the Privy Council, to the dissatisfaction of some for believing themselves in the presence of one deemed a very conjurer or, necromancer. It was no other than Dee who by careful examinations and calculations did appoint the date for the coronation, on the foundation of the most considerate positions of the heavens and the stars and planets thereof.

At his house in Mortlake, Dee then did begin the noteworthy expansions to his great Library of rare and scholarly books. The sum he laviſhed on the obtaining of these books is said to have exceeded £3,000. With his newfound approval amongst certain at court and his high position in the land, and the very excellent stipend that was consequent upon these improvements, Dee was able more freely to turn his wits ever more fully in that direction in which he was the most interested, which was, the research and investigation of unknown alchymical and spiritual matters.

He continued to receive a royal patronage and was accepted as a wise and cunning man by the Queen; in truth, he became almost as a court wizard, such as had hardly been seen in England since those ancient tales of Merlin and King Arthur. When the great Comet appeared in the sky anno 1577, Dee was summoned to the Court at Windsor for three days to explain the nature of this heavenly object, and its possible portent to the Realm.

At another time, a mannequin or, poppet resembling the Queen and transfixed with many pins thereupon was discovered in Lincoln's Inn near the Chancery Lane. Some fearing this ſhould mark certain endeavours by Catholic enemies to take the life of the Queen through the arts of witchcraft, Dee was summoned by the royal equerries to ensure whether this image should do the Queen, her person, any harm, even as the royal physician might in like manner be summoned with urgency in the case of a malady. He also did advise the Queen in respect of her health, and particularly on her rheumatism. Amongst the common people and his enemies he was prevalently believed to be a sorcerer and necromancer, a gossip the which accompanied him & did sorely trouble him all his life.

Anno. 1581, Dee, then of age 54, turned his intimate acquaintance with crystal and its faſhioning to his own usage and began the making of certain scrying glasses, the which were crystal spheres wherein could be conducted that ancient form of divination called crystal-gazing or, scrying. This was certainly practiced by diverse others for mundane purposes, such as to detect thieves, discover the whereabouts of absent friends, seek buried treasure or to make prediction upon the future, as it is even in this present time of Enlightenment, but Dee did manifestly believe the process could be applied to the placing of himself in communication with spiritual entities of an higher nature.

Dee did then perceive that his desire to delve further in this direction was brought to naught by the vexatious finding, that he plainly was possessed of no natural competence for scrying, even though he had a comprehensive knowledge of they mystical Arts. He soon resolved this hindrance through the employing of certain others to look into the crystal spheres he manufactured with his knowledge and art. He heard tell of a seer or, scryer, named Barnabus Saul, who was well versed in this art and was also a preacher and a man of good repute. This was of importance to Dee, who wished to communicate with the Spirit World, for it is popularly believed that only the pure of heart can accompliſh such.

For this same reasoning, it is well documented that young children were on occasion employed as scryers. E.g. anno. 1467, it is on record that one William Byg, known also as William Lech, being accused of sorcery in the court of the Archbiſhop at York, did confess that he had for several years past discovered thieves and traced the location of stolen goods by means of a crystal. However, as he could himself not perceive anything within the crystal, he employed a small boy under twelve years of age. This boy was required to recite certain prayers and to call upon God to send three angels from a right-hand direction, to reveal the true answers to his enquiries.

Barnabus Saul did labour for a time as Dee's scryer, for the which practice he was paid money, and he stated that he could clearly perceive the forms of certain Angels and Spirits in those crystals supplied for his use by Dee. Within the passing of about six months, however, Dee had obtained to the very limit of progression with Saul, with whose services he could make no further advancement, so he dismissed him from his employ amid a great argument.

On 8th March anno 1582 a disreputable man of 26 years visited Dee having become acquainted with the doctor's searching for scryers, which had become a matter for much gossip in certain taverns and inns. He came with Mr. Clerkson, a friend of Dee who thought the twain should meet and likely have certain things in common with their interests. The man's name was Edward Talbot, but he passed under the name of Edward Kelley, for he had been a rogue and had an ear lopped for forgery and thus ofttimes made use of his mother's sirename instead, which was the less Known to all and sundry, but he had also studied alchymy and various other magical arts and had been an apothecary. Whatever may have been his failings in life, he was undoubtedly a most excellent scryer, which he could most readily demonstrate, and soon after, Dee accepted the service of Kelley, for the which he also did pay him and gave him free lodging in his house, and the two commenced to work together.

As they two experimented and did examine their magical and spiritual interests, they grew also ever the more cunning in those diverse and intricate activities which did progress out of their sundry investigations, and presently a most wonderful aspect was observed, by the which they anon did discover instead of contacting merely the spirits of they who have departed from this mortal world, their conjoint power or, skill, had made increase to that degree where they were enabled to rise to descry spiritual realms of even higher domain, and obtain cognizance and some communication with seemingly higher æthyrial beings described as veritable angels. For John Dee did most meticulously record the entire process from end to end on paper, together with certain drawings and figures that were necessary or were advised to them by the spirits.

The first such communication was obtained with the archangel Uriel. From this Uriel, Kelley received the directions for constructing a mighty Holy Table and a singular talisman or, seal which would aid them in the carrying out of further such Works. In the subsequent year, 1583, the archangel Uriel gave to them a parcell of Information regarding an impending invasion of England, naming to Kelley particularly, the sea, and many ſhips thereupon. And later in the action, a prediction of the impending death of Mary Bothwell called by many the Queen of Scots, describing in some detail the cutting-off of the head of a woman.

Dee did advise the Queen of these warnings, being himself particularly alarmed with the foretold invasion, as a victorious assault upon England by Catholic Spain would bring in the Inquisition to England, and would incontestably result in such as Dee and Kelley being burned at the stake. The Queen did remember these warnings four years later even as the due date drew dose & Lord Howard with Drake was dispatched to Plymouth to ensure the fleet was made ready for rapid posture of war, and then presently appeared the Spaniſh fleet in the Channel only to be most soundly defeated.

As a matter of more than small relevance to this History, they ſhips of King Phillip's fleet which did attempt to make escape by sailing north around the Cape of Scotland were then further plagued by a gigantic storm, and there is a commonly held supposition that John Dee used his mage's powers to call up this storm, an art commonly attributed to magicians and practitioners of witchcraft, so to further confound the Spaniſh, whose ſhips were scattered across the ocean with a great vengeance, some being wrecked as far away as the Iriſh ſhore. Of the 130 or thereabout that had sailed from Cadiz on July 12th 1588, only 53 saw Spain again.

All of these politics, however, was of little consequence to Dee and Kelley, other than Spain & Catholicism & its Inquisition should be kept out of England. During seven years from 1582 to 1589, their highest interest and business was with the further refining of their methods of Communication with the realms of the angels and in the gaining of the knowledge which certain angelic beings were prepared to give down to them. Dee did provide artfully crafted crystal ſhewstones and devise certain mystical ceremonies, the which did enhance Kelley's already prodigious competence at scrying, while Kelley made the actual contacting of the spirits and did call out his findings and conversations for Dee to transcribe.

✠

Concerning His Lost Papers & How These Did Survive That Great Fire Which Consumed London.

It is recorded in the writings of that illustrious Herald of King Charles, 2nd of that name, Elias Aſhmole of Lich-field, the same who in 1682 presented to the University at Oxford all his collection of marvelous antiquities and diverse rare documents, that on 20th August 1672 he did receive by the hands of his servant Samuell Story, a parcell of manuscripts in the hand of Dr. John Dee in the which was itemized his dealings and Conferences with Angels between 22nd December 1581 until 31st May 1583.

Other of Dr. Dee's writings subsequent to that dating have been already made known by the good Dr. Cawsabon, but of the work of Dee and Kelley before June 1583 there was not yet discovered any, and so this parcell of papers was of the very greatest interest. Within this Collection were also the documents entitled by Dee The 48 Claves Angelicae or, The 48 Angelic Keys, and Liber Scientia, Auxilii et Victoriæ Terrestris or, The Book of Earthly Knowledge, Help and Victory. These two books Dee was commanded by the angels to burn, lest the knowledge contained therein ſhould be gained by any other mortal man, but were after saved from this end. There were also in this same bundle the book De Heptarchia Mystica (Diuinis, ipsius Creationis, stabilitæ legibus) Collectaneorum/ Liber Primus or, Concerning the Mystical Heptarchy (divine, of the Creation itself, with permanent rules) First Book of Collected passages, and a book containing diverse invocations or Calls and being drawn within, also squares filled with diverse letters and divided by a black cross.

Now, the remarkable Historie of these sundry Documents is hereby to be recounted, in which it will be ſhewn that certain other papers, being a book titled by Dr. Dee Ordines Descendens (Haudquaquam licit mihi esse) or, The Descending Hierarchies (Which I am not at all to allow to survive) did not come into the possession of Mr. Aſhmole but were hid for many years by the chances of fortune, and thereafter kept only in secret, until a copy of same came thence to my hand. These papers were in like manner commanded of Dee to be burned at the direction of his angels but likewise were saved from destruction by Providence.

Anno. 1602, being some 5 years before the death of Dr. John Dee and at the which time he was more impoveriſhed by reason of the displeasure of the populace and the lack of favour ſhewn to professors of mystery and to mages of magical arts by the Court of the late King James, 1st of that name, it happened that Dee's servants were obliged to make occasional sale of his household effects and possessions in order to obtain by this means the money which they should be paid and by which, indeed, the household should be managed, Dee being then of full 75 years and ofttimes having not the possession of his true reason by virtue of the infirmities of old age.

Thereby was a collection of sundry furniture & other objects sold without his knowledge to Mr. John Woodall, Chirugeon, who was father to that Mr. Thomas Woodall who was Serjant Chirugeon to his late Magestie Charles, 2nd of that name. Upon the decease of Mr. John Woodall, his son Thomas made sale of his late father's effects for which no use or practicality to his own household was perceived. By this means came certain of Dee's goods into the ſhop of Saul Makepiece, a joiner and cabinet seller of Adle street in London.

About 1642 there came to this ſhop one Robert Jones, his wife Susanna, and their landlord George Lockhouse, seeking to obtain by the cheapest means some sundry items of furniture &c. for their house, to which Mr. Jones and his goodwife had recently removed from a former lodging at the Plough Inn in Lombard Street on the occasion of their marriage. In the aforesaid ſhop they saw a chest of cedarwood of goodly appearance and sound build, being of nearly four feet in length, amongst diverse other items for which they then bidded. These furniſhings &c. were then removed to their home and were in common use.

Then anno. 1662 Robert and Susanna Jones were engaged in removing this chest between them from its resting place in their bedroom, in which place it had been their custom always to keep it, and upon bringing it to the stairs, when it must be tilted as it was carried, they thought they heard the rattle of some loose thing in it under the drawer, and upon ſhaking the chest somewhat, they were persuaded that it was so. The chest was then brought down to a lower room and Robert Jones fetched a chisel, and with this tool, with no deliberate method and by chance alone, released a locking device hid within the joining and there presently appeared a hidden or secret drawer. Therein was discovered a quantity of papers and sundry books, and a chaplet of wooden beads bearing a crucifix inside a small box.

Jones & his wife, being by trade confectioners, had no understanding of these Papers and valued them not, and their servant, thinking the items therefore of no worth to be preserved, wasted a good half of these by making pastry on them, using them for pie paper and also for starting fires, lighting candles &c. However, upon later noticing how the servant treated the papers, the remaindering half were then safeguarded from any further destruction. It might very well be thought by some that those angels were working their will as chance came to have these books and papers burned, which had been their Injunction.

Then it happened that anno. 1664 Robert Jones died and Susanna was so made widow, and two years after, there came that Great Fire of 1666 in London. At that time the chest was burned to the aſhes with the house and many others, but the papers and books of Dr. Dee were kept then with the family papers and all were hastily carried from the blaze after the plate had been saved, and certain other valuables, and all were piled together in Moor-fields from where all was presently removed to a place of safety outside London in Southwark for fear of looters.

Susanna Jones then soon married again, to Thomas Wale, one of his Majesty's wardens in the Tower of London, who also chanced to be an acquaintance of Elias Aſhmole the illustrious antiquarian, of whom this account has already made mention. Mr. Wale, suspecting the value and interest of the books and papers he had gained through his marriage, and with the agreement of his wife, in Sept. 1672 gave these articles to Mr. Aſhmole, and they were borne to his office in Broad Street by his servant Samuell Story, from which action these papers and books thus became generally known to the learned, in addition to those other writings of John Dee that have already been itemized by the able Dr. Cawsabon. Some days later Thomas and Susanna Wale came themselves to the office of Mr. Aſhmole and Mrs. Wale thereupon made known to Mr. Aſhmole the entire circumstances of their finding and preserving as is herein related.

Thus the matter rested for some years until anno. 1681 in which year Susanna Wale died. It happened that her servant Hannah Selwood was then discharged from service by Mr. Wale, being no longer required as ſhe had joined the household on the occasion of the marriage of her mistress, having been in her employ at the time of her previous marriage and accompanying her, and Mr. Wale having also his own servant. This same Hannah Selwood it was who had ill used, by ignorance, some half of those Papers found within the chest, and had destroyed them through usage in the kytchen. She had also made use of a certain number of these papers to stiffen the backing of two small portraites, of Susanna Wale painted when ſhe had been Susanna Jones, and the other of Thomas Jones, but being at that time in fear of a further scolding, ſhe had not revealed this. Being dismissed from the household, ſhe did beg of Mr. Wale that ſhe might remove these 2 portraites with her, for the sake of memory, and Mr. Wale being not inclined to look much upon the likeness of his late wife for sadness, nor upon the likeness of Thomas Jones for some annoyance that he was her husband aforetimes, agreed that ſhe may take them.

Being then in need of money, Hannah Selwood did remove those papers from the backs of the portraites and began to make enquiry as to what person may reward her the more greatly for them. After a time, ſhe was thus guided to visit Mr. Stainton at Deptford, the chymist & apothecary who made good business selling his medicines and quicksilvers for the pox to the mariners and to the labourers in the ſhipyard, who paid to her the sum of v ſhillings for the papers, of which there were about 30, and who also procured for her a position in the house of Mr. Bartlett the apothecary, with whom he was well acquainted, in Lambeth near the Palace of the Archbiſhop, for he went often nearby to the farmers of Battersea to cut his simples and would ofttimes visit his friend. These papers, though loosened and confused by their usage, comprised some pages of the book entitled Ordines Descendens (Haudquaquam licit mihi esse).

Mr. Stainton had copies written of these Papers in their entirety and then sent one such to Mr. Bartlett, who took them with him when he removed to Canterbury anno.

1702. These papers were also copied for sundry gentlemen of the Society of Apothecaries, of which both Mr. Stainton and Mr. Bartlett were members for many years, and especially those of that Society who professed an interest in alchymy and like matters. However, the Royal Society being then increasingly inclined against the old superstitions and magical beliefs of the common people, and certain diverse gentlemen of the Apothecary's Society belonging also to it, the gentlemen of alchymy amongst their number largely kept their silence about such matters and some ſhortly took to meeting separately and in secret at times known only amongst themselves.

Thus it was that the book Ordines Descendens of John Dee or, The Descending Hierarchies, came to be separated from that main Body of his writings that were held in Elias Aſhmole's Collection and also that portion which came into the hands of Dr. Meric Cawsabon and which were earlier publiſhed by that gentleman anno, 1659; and also that this same book Ordines Descendens came further to be held in great secret by those few who did possess a copy of it, and that it therefore passed into the keeping of Rosicrucians and secret alchymists, who held it in some regard, I am told, and I wot not of these copies save this one only that was sold to Mr. Pike the Chaplain by a gentleman debtor in Ludgate Hill desiring to buy his release to the Liberties of the Fleet.

Mr. Pike bought the book away from the Fleet Prison to his house near the ropery in Stepney, and when he moved later to Hackendean near St. Pauls Cray Hill by Chiselhurst it was kept in his library for some years. Later I find it was sold off as part of his Estate by his heirs, where a great part of the books were purchased in a piece without much inspection, and the Ordines Descendens was then found pressed between other books and so it came soon to my possession, for I was sought out by its purchaser & paid iii gns for it. This would seem the only copy of the work that by diverse chance of Fortune came at length to endure, or if there be others they are held still in secret. Of the copy that was known to have been taken to Canterbury by the aforesaid Mr. Bartlett there is no longer any knowledge, save that common rumour has it, that Mr. Bartlett's house burned down after he had died and all was consumed. I have not been able to find out the Truth of this, for it cannot now be found which house in Canterbury was his. It would therefore seem that there is only the one copy of this book extans, or any portion thereof.

In addition to such considerations, it may not now be determined with any degree of exactness the bigness of this book, for it is also apparent that not all of it was saved by the unknowing action of Hannah Selwood in making her use of some pages. Howbeit, it is also readily to be seen that what is the most Important and Workable portion of the book has indeed survived, and it may therefore be construed that that which is missing is in all likelihood not to be considered a major component of the work. However, this is but the reasonable condusion of an Inquiring Mind and it may not be so.

✠

Of the manner of the known Workings of his Magic as has already come to the notice of the Knowledgeable, and of the Language which is called Enochian or, The Angelic Tongue.

Perhaps it may be considered the most surprising aspect to their Work, which Dee & Kelley discovered early in their examinations, that the angels they descried spake to them in a language, that was not Engliſh. Although they did also, if they so chose, amply communicate right well in any of the tongues of mankind, whether ancient or current, those angels also command their own language, & very different from worldly tongues.

Dee was persuaded to call this angelic language Enochian (although that is not its name according to its speakers): this after the account of that sage Enoch, who was son of Jared and father to Methuselah, who did walk with God in his form of fleſh, as the Scriptures relate in Genesis v and also Hebrews xi, and he also considered it an apposite name in view of that Book of Enoch which is referred to in the Scriptures in Jude xiv but which is itself absent, being accounted amongst the apocryphal works.

This language was not the only Matter the which Dee & Kelley gained knowledge of: it supplies but the background for this whole System of, Enochian, or, Angelic, magic. Many are persuaded that neither Dee nor Kelley at the beginning, did clearly perceive the fullness of what they had discovered. One of the contemplations by the which the integrity of their labours may be weighed, is that, although the angelic spirits explained the diverse procedures in ample detail to they magicians, it required of them a great Time ere they themselves could come to understand the most intimate aspects of it; and, even so, it seems certain they had not managed in full degree to realize the import of their findings before their end. Much work on that which they had Discovered and so meticulously recorded, has also been undertaken by several later students of the science of alchymy (such as my good friend Mr. Wickham of Chalcot Farm) who have revealed sundry other aspects pertaining to those detailed notes maintained by Dee.

During those diverse occasions at which the Archangels communicated their language and an allied system of angelic magic, the entities dictated all words and names but one letter at the time, and this backwards. Their reasoning was, when used in this mundane realm, the Enochian tongue was so exceeding potent, this owning to its origin in higher and purer spheres of Spirit, that if sundry names and sentences thereof were inadvertently uttered by one aloud, it might transpire to make things happen that were unlooked for.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

The modus operandi observed by the magicians was thus; within a crystal ſhewstone, Kelley, his sagacity enhanced for the nonce to a measure beyond the normal, perceived an angelic being holding up as it were a great Tablet, bearing letters of that alphabet employed by these angels for the writing down of their Language. Piecemeal, the angel would point to noteworthy characters, thereby to spell out certain words. At this same time, canon was also disclosed respecting how these words might be employed for the gaining of diverse Results, and how also many Names of angels and sundry beings of the Spirit may be Disclosed in like fashion.

Herein are displayed the characters of the Angels, ſhewn together with each their Name and their Sounding, & put beside their form in Latin.

b Pa pah c Veh vei g Ged ghed d Gal gal f Or orh a Un und e Graph grakphe m Tal chtal i Gon gong h Na nach l Ur ourh p Mals machls q Ger gierh n Drux droux x Pal bal o Med meg r Don doan z Ceph keph u Van varn s Fam varm t Gisg geegsg

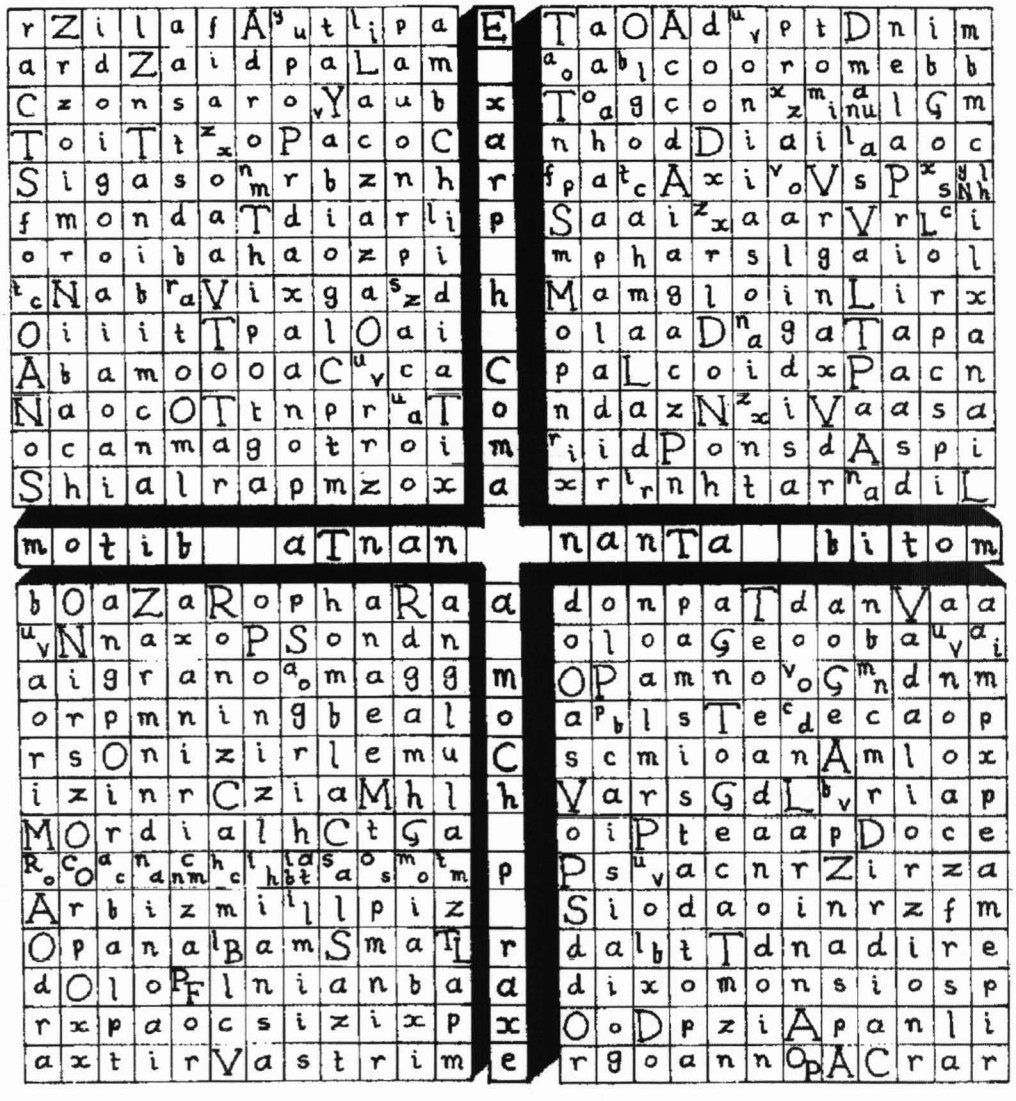
The Great Unified Tablet which was drawn up according to the directions of the angelic Powers is also reproduced here below, with the very greatest of nicety in its execution as an Engraving by Mr. Bothwick of Old Bethlehem. This Tablet, as will be readily perceived, is quartered by a dark or black cross that further produces a Division into four units, in the which be also more letters, this black cross being titled the Tablet of Union. It is also plainly to be observed that some squares are possessed of two letters within, and some of three, and some few that are of four letters. In the engraving, I have made it that the letters ſhall be all substituted by their same forms in Latin, thus saving much Time and labour in substitution of the sundry forms.

Further to this, they four quarter-squares the which are divided by this black cross, are given the name of, the Four Watchtowers, being separately supposed to be those of Air, Water, Earth and Fire, these being the Elements or Four Indivisible Atoms of the Greek philosophers, from a concord of which all else has arisen in Creation, as the Wise have knowledge.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee



This is; The Great Unified Tablet of the Four Watchtowers, and the Black Cross or, Tablet of Union.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

The Watchtower of Air

Air of the Air	Water of the Air
Earth of the Air	Fire of the Air

The Watchtower of Water

Air of the Water	Water of the Water
Earth of the Water	Fire of the Water

Here Is The Black Cross

The Watchtower of Earth

Air of the Earth	Water of the Earth
Earth of the Earth	Fire of the Earth

The Watchtower of Fire

Air of the Fire	Water of the Fire
Earth of the Fire	Fire of the Fire

This is, the Attributions of the Four Watchtowers According to the Elements of Empedocles of Sicily and Other Alchymical Philosophers; Also, the Elemental Geographie Within Each Watchtower, Regarding the Further Sub-Dividing of Those Four Elements; All as Set Forth in Dr. Iohn Dee His Writings.

In a consideration of the Mathematical process, it can be that we may employ two numbers together to express a fraction of a Compleat number, as with ½, ¼, ¾ &c. In this plan of Angelic magic, a like practice pertains to certain characters. Some word that is made up from the letters contained within the smaller squares might therefore appear thus: E^{t}kNB^{r}a, or N^{l}b^{a}t^{s}a^{m}o^{t}m. When determining the more correct way to have such a word, one alone of the letters is chosen, and this Selection is made on the basis of the best indusion of them that accords most completely with the Intention of the magician. Thus, by selecting one or other of such divisional letters, diverse speaking sounds can be arrived at for the same word, thus turning such a word more apt to the Use. Per exemplar, the word given as, N^{l}b^{a}t^{s}a^{m}o^{t}m, could also be as NIAAOM. The sounding of the words when spoken does accord greatly with the method of the Jewish language, that may now be heard in Jewerie since their Return and Adoption.

The central Great Cross which unites these four Watchtowers is titled the Tablet of Union. The letters contained within the body of the black cross or, Tablet of Union, spell out in diverse courses, the names of the four elements of the alchymist in the Enochian speech. Thus the word for Earth is NANTA: for Water, it is HCOMA: for Fire it is BITOM and for Air it is EXARP. The proper voicing of Enochian words be considerably at variance from the way they same would be communicated in English. These words are dedared as hereinafter:

NANTA is pronounced as "Nah-neh-tah": HCOMA is pronounced as "Heh--coh-mah": BITOM is pronounced as "Bee-toh-meh": and EXARP is pronounced as "Ex-ah-peh", as aforesaid being redolent of the sounding of Hebrew writing. These four discrete Great Watchtowers can of themselves be sub- divided into smaller Quarters, thereby to produce further Regions which are also named according to the same relationſhip betwixt these Elements. This is revealed in the following Engraving, which was also executed by the good Mr. Bothwick.

✠

Of the Obtaining of Angelic Words and the Names of Diuerse Spirits.

The usefulness of the Great Tablet is for supplying the Names of the Enochian spirits. These are to be formed by the reading of the characters within the smaller squares in certain patterns and directions, these being advised to Dee & Kelly through the agency of their angelic communications and duly made full note of.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

For Foundation, in each of the quarter squares, or, Watchtowers, there will be seen to be a central line of Letters running across from the left to the right. This quarter square which is called the Watchtower of the Air, is the upper and left of the Great Tablet, and contains the letters "oroibahaozpi".

r	Z	i	l	a	f	A	y u	t	l i	p	a
a	r	d	Z	a	i	d	p	a	L	a	m
C	z	o	n	s	a	r	o	v Y	a	u	b
T	o	i	T	t	z x	o	P	a	c	o	C
S	i	g	a	s	o	n m	r	b	z	n	h
f	m	o	n	d	a	T	d	i	a	r	l i
o	r	o	i	b	a	h	a	o	z	p	i t c	N	a	b	r a	V	i	x	g	a	s z	d
O	i	i	i	t	T	p	a	l	O	a	i
A	b	a	m	o	o	o	a	C	u v	c	a
N	a	o	c	O	T	t	n	p	r	u a	T
o	c	a	n	m	a	g	o	t	r	o	i
S	h	i	a	l	r	a	p	m	z	o	x

This is, The Watchtower of the Air, also called the Quarter of the Air.

✠

THE 4 SECRET NAMES OF GOD ON THE LINEA SPIRITUS SANCTI

Because this same line is the very central portion of the quadrant, it is named Linea Spiritus Sancti which is, the Line of the Holy Spirit. Each one of the three other quadrants is possessed of its own Linea Spiritus Sancti in that same place, the characters of which are differing for each. This same Line of the Holy Spirit will produce therefrom one of the four Secret Names of God, three others being on the other Quadrants and in all, following of the same manner.

These four Secret Names of God from the watchtowers of the Great Tablet are as hereinafter laid out in their order.

(1) THE WATCHTOWER OF THE AIR:
OROIBAHAOZPI

✠

(2) THE WATCHTOWER OF THE WATER:
MPHARSLGAIOL

✠

(3) THE WATCHTOWER OF THE EARTH:
MORDIALHCTGA

✠

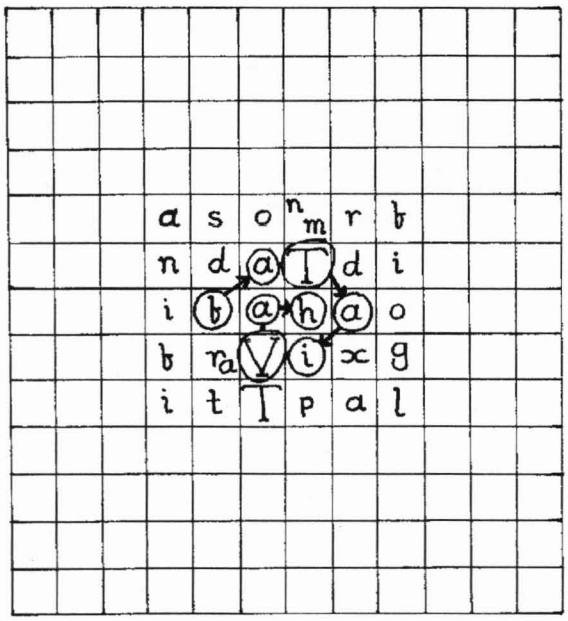
(4) THE WATCHTOWER OF THE FIRE:
OIPTEAAPDOCE

✠

The manner of speaking of these Names is as follows, in accord with the aforesaid custom of this tongue. Oroibahaozpi is, oro ibahay ozod pee eye, Mpharslgaiol is, em pee har esselgar io lay, Mordialhctga is, emordi allah hecategar, Oipteaadoce is, ohee peeteeah ahpayd ocee.

THE 4 GREAT KINGS

The further manner of getting the Names of spirits is: The name of each Great King is obtained by reading in a sunwise or, clockwise vortex, pointing ultimately into the central portion of each Tablet, as is shown hereinafter below.



This Shews the Name of the Great King of that Element Revealed in the Central Vortex in the Watchtower of the Air; It Commences at the Character b and Proceeds Therefrom as, a T a i V a h.

In Like Manner are Names Formed in all the Watchtowers From Those Characters That Occupy the Same Small Squares.

The necessary knowledge concerning this drawing out of the Name Raagiosl is, it is discovered by a tracing of the letters through a coiled pattern into the very centremost region of that Watchtower, as a vessel may be drawn through a decreasing orbit into the uttermost plunge of the Mælstrom; This work shall always be commenced from the 5th character of the Secret Name of God, in all cases. In like fashion therefore, three further such names can be exposed within the other 3 Watchtowers, thus providing the names of 4 Great Kings of the angelic spirits; Who are in sum as hereinafter shewn.

(1) THE GREAT KING OF THE AIR IS, BATAIVAH

✠

(2) THE GREAT KING OF THE WATER IS, RAAGIOSL

✠

(3) THE GREAT KING OF THE EARTH IS, IKZH^{i}h^{h}kAL

✠

(4) THE GREAT KING OF THE FIRE IS, EHDLPRNAA

✠

The manner of speaking these Names is, Bataivah is, Bar tar ivar hay, Raagiosl is, Ra ar gea osel, Ikzhhkal is, Ikayzod hay hark el.

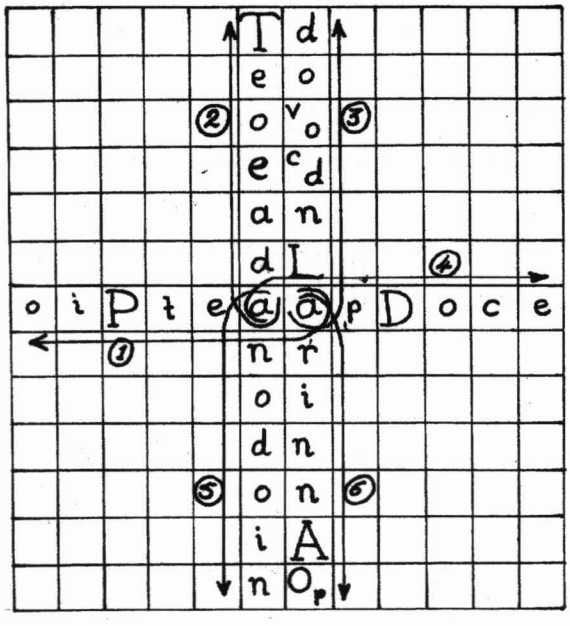
THE 24 ELDERS OR, SENIORS

They four Watchtower tablets enfold also the names of 24 spiritual forms that are beneath the order of the Great Kings. These are called Elders or, Seniors, of the which there are 6 to each Watchtower. Below is ſhewn a plan of the Great Watchtower of the Fire that has nought but the pertinent characters induded thereupon, and the rest voided for dearness. By reading round the letters comprising the centrally crossed portion of that Watchtower, the names of the six Seniors are severally perceived.

The complete details of the full 6 of the Fire Watchtower Seniors is given below. By applying the identical exemplar to the other Watchtowers, the names of their respective Seniors are likewise obtained.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

The Names of the Seniors of the Fire Watchtower are, AAETPIO who is spoken as, Ar aye teepee o, ADAEOET who is spoken as, Ar die o aetay, ALN^{k}d^{u}oOD which is, Arlenkay doo oday, AAPDOKE which is, Ar arpy dowkay, ANODOIN which is, Arnodow ean aye, ARINNA$^{\circ}$p which is, Ar eenay narpay.



This Shews the Manner of Obtaining the Names of the 6 Elders or, the 6 Seniors That are Revealed in Each Watchtower; In all Does that Name Commence at One or Other of the 2 Central Characters a & a and Then Proceed Outwardly.

The Names of they remaining eighteen Seniors of the Watchtowers are not to be given herein, for all such details are to be discovered in that book by Mr. Cawsabon and may also right well be determined by the simple matter of applying upon the Great Unified Tablet the stated formula of their construction in each occasion.

THE 32 ANGELS OF THE CALVARY CROSSES

If the above figure be examined further, it will be perceived quite readily how those characters which severally form the names of they six Seniors also serve to make partition of the Watchtower into 4 smaller squares. If each of they four quarter parts be examined separately, it will be Noticed that a Calvary cross be veiled within the grouping of their discrete squares, in the manner ſhewn most clearly in the further exemplar below. The letters contained within these ten small squares do communicate the names of a further 32 angelic spirits called, the Angels of the Calvary Cross. In the Great Tablet, the which has all four Watchtowers together, there are 16 such crosses, and each cross containing two names thereupon in this same manner. The first name is to be read downwards from the top of the cross, whilst its companion is to be read across from the left towards the right.

		n						V
o	l	o	a	G			o	b	a	u_v	a_i a							d
		l							a
		m							l
		r							i
		u_v							r
S	i	o	d	a			n	r	z	f	m
		l_b							i x							o
		D							n
		o							r

This Shews the Manner of Obtaining the Names of 32 Angels of the Calvary Cross on the 4 Watchtowers; This is the Watchtower of the Fire but, as revealing only Those Characters That Lie Within the Squares of the 4 Calvary Crosses Thereof, with all Other Characters Being Omitted for the Greater Clarity of the Operation. This Same Manner of Construction is to be Applied to All 4 Watchtowers.

Dr. Dee has it, that the Upright name is of somewhat greater import and does compound the essential Nature & intelligence of the certain spiritual Æthyr they inhabit. There are many other diverse names and stations of spiritual creatures to be found within these Watchtowers, all of which are arrived in rank and nature to their true spiritual array or hierarchy. 64 Cherubic angels are also thus to be found in the four letters lying above the level squares of the Calvary crosses and upon either side of the topmost letter of the upright Name.

THE 64 CHERUBIC ANGELS

If those Characters of the compleat Fiery Watchtower should be compared with that partial Drawing placed above here, and if the Attention be drawn upon the left topmost Calvary Cross, then it will be plainly perceived that lying above the letters OLOAG are to be seen the letters DO(N)PA where the character N is the beginning of the Name NOALMR and is thus not to be included; Which leaves DOPA as the Name of that Cherubic angel of this Calvary cross. Now, this is not All; Further, each Name of 4 letters derived by this means may be re-formed thereby to produce 3 names in addition, so might DOPA also become ADOP ✢ OPAD ✢ PADO, which are also Names of Cherubic angels. All other Watchtowers are likewise to be treated, thereby yielding a full measure of 4 Names of Cherubic angels upon each Calvary cross within each of the 4 Watchtowers which is, 64 Names of Cherubic angels all told.

THE 64 ARCHANGELS

The further names of 64 spiritual entities which are of the Degree of archangels are formed by adding 1 letter from the black cross or, the Tablet of Union, to each of these names of the Cherubic angels. These new opening letters are the prefixes to the Enochian words meaning the 4 elements or, the Humors, NANTA which is, the earth; HKOMA which is, the water; BITOM which is, the fire; EXARP which is, the air. Thus is it that all 4 of the Cherubic angels of the earth quadrant are prefixed with the letter N (from NANTA) so to form the 4 new names of the archangels of that region; and in like manner does the letter H from HKOMA placed at the outset form these same new names of archangels from those names of the Cherubic angels of the water, and so for the letter B from BITOM to likewise form the names of the archangels of the fire and for the letter E like for the archangels of the air.

This matter, being indeed of some complexity, is elucidated more thus. In the case of the Watchtower of the fire, the which we have herewith used in the most recent of the Diagrams above, the Enochian word for fire is BITOM and therefore the four Cherubic Angels DOPA ✢ PADO ✢ OPAD ✢ ADOP mentioned above give rise to the Archangelic names BDOPA ✢ BPADO ✢ BOPAD ✢ BADOP pronounced in that same order, Bee dowpar ✢ Bee pardow ✢ Bow parday ✢ Bardow pay.

THE 64 LESSER ANGELS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

Beneath the level arm of each of the Calvary crosses are 16 squares, as 8 in 2 columns on either side of the upright column, and the letters within these squares, read across, will form the names of 4 lesser angels of that same quadrant. As in those other cases mentioned above, the topmost Name is to be the most paramount and important of they four. If the figures set out above be examined, it will be seen that in the particular case of the topmost and left Calvary cross, beneath the letters OLOAG, are also the letters OP to the left of the central, a, in the upright column of the cross, and MN to the right. Beneath these again are the letters a^{P}b (l) sT and beneath these again are, sc (m) io and then Va (r) sG. These groupings give the names of the lesser angels of that quadrant. In like faſhion it is also accomplished for all other quadrants.

THE 64 RULING LESSER ANGELS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

There be also, to each Lesser Angel, a Ruling or, Governing, Lesser Angel, the which is invoked with its Lesser Angel so that he may govern and direct it, somewhat in that same manner as a coachman will direct his horses, or a Magistrate his clerk. The Names of these are to be made by the taking of each name of a Lesser Angel, and to it prefixing a letter from the title of its own element in the Enochian tongue, as these are ſhewn in cut form on the black cross or, the Tablet of Union. If this be closely observed, it will be understood that inside the upright arm the outermost letters of that cross are disjointed or, removed from those 4 letters that will follow it toward the centre, thus; E xarp, h Coma. This is not the case for the remaining 2 names on the crosspiece, viz; nanTa & bitom, for the reason that each cross arm has only 12 squares whereas each upright has 13. Howbeit, this same disjointment is pretended or, imagined, to be applied to these also. Thereby can each element be listed with 4 letters in place of 5, so that Exarp will become: xarp; hComa will become: Coma or Koma; nanTa will become: anTa; & bitom will become: itom.

The names of these Ruling Lesser Angels are those same names of the Lesser Angels but, withall, the first letter of each his element prefixed upon it according to the above rule, so that the Lesser Angel OPMN from the Air of the Fire will have his Ruling Lesser Angel as IOPMN, the letter I being taken from ITOM, which is, B ITOM. Likewise, to the Lesser Angel NHDD of the Air of the Water is added the letter K from H KOMA (which is, HCOMA, for C & K are to be read the same, as in certain other tongues) so that his Ruling Lesser Angel be KNHDD, and so in like fashion for all 64 of their number.

THE 128 ELEMENTALS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

In completion of these Ranks or, the Hierarchy of angelic spirits, Dee & Kelly did also prescribe that there were 128 elementals hid within the watchtower tablets, there being 32 ascribed to each of the 4 elements. These elementals connote that very lowest Region, the which the Great Unified Tablet of the watchtowers is full capable of accounting. The method for obtaining the Names of these elementals is now explained, viz; If each Calvary cross be again consulted, which are all ſhewn in above engravings, I would draw to particular attention the Names of those Lesser Angels recently described, how these are formed by reading across the upright line of the cross for 2 letters upon either side, yet discounting that central letter that is within the upright column or, pillar. Thus do the letters Va(r)sG appear in my final exemplar therein above, where Va are those letters to the left of the pillar, r is the letter of the pillar, & sG are those letters to its right. In the forming of the Names of the Lesser Angels, these 4 letters are taken, and they 4 beneath, & beneath again, & again, and thereby are 4 such Names found for each Calvary cross. As I have explained above, a Ruling Lesser Angel is determined for each Lesser Angel by prefixing a letter to that same Name from the name of his element on the Tablet of Union, so that the Lesser Angel VASG will have his Ruling Lesser Angel as IVASG, for I be taken from (B)ITOM, which is, the Fire.

Now, they elementals have each his name formed in somewhat a similar manner, saving that only the 2 letters are used which are, on either side of the Calvary cross. Thus will the 2 elementals of the first line of the Calvary cross of the Air of Fire, which yield the Name VASG as a Lesser Angel, have their Names as: IVA & ISG, for the prefix I derives again from the name (B)ITOM on the Tablet of Union, being the Fire. On that same Calvary cross above Va(r)sG is, sc(m)io, which will yield SOIO as a Lesser Angel and ISOIO as his Ruling Lesser Angel, and also by this same method, ISO and IIO as the 2 elementals of that line. This same method be then applied to all Calvary crosses in like faſhion.

✠

Now all of this is that which has been already ſhewn of the Discoveries of John Dee and Edward Kelley and Presented to the Knowledgeable in various Works & References by such as Mr. Cawsabon, Mr. Aſhmole, &c. This knowledge, though unlikely to be a much trodden thoroughfare of Clio, none the less is all fully to be had from those Manuscripts concerning Dr. Dee his researches the which have already and by diverse means come into the possession of others. Though obscure, it is hardly to be considered any longer secret and there is withall nothing new. I recount it here only because these same Methods are also to be employed in the Scheme of that Descending Hierarchy which is yet Unknown to any but myself, unless other of those Copies made for the apothecaries in secret ſhould remain, but if this is so, they are well hid and seem to trouble not the World.

Yr. Most Obed't. Servt. & Gt. Friend,

J. H.

A True Relation of the Ordines Descendens or, the Descending Hierarchies, of Dr. Iohn Dee, Scholar and Courtier of Mort-lake in Surrey, in Which is to be Recounted His Most Secret & Surprising Discoueries Respecting the Methods & Calculations by the Which a Knowing Man Well Versed in These Matters May Place at Their Own Disposal all the Legions of Tartarus.

✠

As I have already described in these Papers, there came into my Possession the best bulk of a Book made by Dr. John Dee, being some twenty ſheets of foolscap all told & written upon each side. It may be confessed that certain Pages of this Book have been injured through ill-usage and are in all likelihood destroyed through the rude handling of the servant woman Hannah Selwood. Howbeit, my dose inspection of the Intransience of the manuscript, which is signed in appendage by the name of A. Stainton, does certainly indicate to my own compleat Satisfaction that, those portions which are absent therefrom would be no more than a great Title page, several Prayers that are mentioned but not Shewn, likely an account of the readying of Dee and his seer Kelley (for such accounting is common amongst Dee's writings, yet are not to be had in these papers), and some other Prayers at the ending. It may therefore seem that a man might reasonably suppose that servant to have taken of pages to suit her immediate requirements, from the front and back parts of the assembled book only, as Chance befell, and was stopped from this destruction in time to save the greater and most Important & Useful content thereof. So anyway is my own belief.

Principal & most significant amongst these Papers is a particular cipher that does give, the entire Scheme, or, Proposal, of the procedure. It is well known among the Knowledgeable in these matters, that the angelic spirits spake not directly the Words by which their Powers are to be invoked; Rather did they shew to the seer Kellry, the Great Tablet, and point out those things which it were their desire to teach, by the pointing upon it at each single Character in its rightful turn, the which Kellry alone spake aloud to Dee & which Dee did write down. It is also most Necessary to know that such Names and Words as they spirits revealed were signaled to Kellry in a backwards, or, reversed spelling, thereby to render the real speaking of them by happenstance or by oversight a less likely event. If, therefore, it be taken that the invocations and Words of Power of these angels were enumerated backwards and thence transcribed again forwards to be exact, it would seem but a logical process of Reason to suppose that the reverse, or, disparate, characters of the alphabet are required in order to commence a like dealing & summoning of the demoniac powers of Hell. That this Reasoning, the which is mine own, be correct is to be demonstrated by that very cipher which is openly displayed in that Manuscript; For Dee has it written thus:

A	B	C/K	D	E	F	G	H	I/J	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R	S	T	U/V/W	X	Z
Z	X	U/V/W	T	S	R	Q	P	O	N	M	L	I/J	H	G	F	E	D	C/K	B	A

This is, the Cipher of Inverso Ordines

This Cipher was termed by John Dee Inverso Ordines which is, Inverted Arrangement. It is not to be considered a Political cipher as it was the pleasure of Sir Francis Walsingham to many times devise for the confusing of his enemies. Rather, it is to be considered a Technicality only. As can well be perceived in the graph above, it is merely a matter of transposing of the alphabet in a reversed order beneath the more usual arrangement of it. Simple though this be, it is a Notion not to be found amongst those many learned scholars or alchymists who have for many years past studied Dee's work and made report upon it; Nor, it must duly be confessed, did this Plan or, Idea, arise in mine own thoughts at all during many years of studie of these matters likewise, and this moreover in a great depth and breadth.

Now, by the use of the Inverso Ordines is the Entirety of the Ordines Descendens made plain; for it is necessary only to transpose each letter or, set of letters, upon the Great Unified Tablet; And by the doing of this in right and careful manner will be Revealed a New Plan, which is, the Great Infernal Tablet. This is ſhewn compleat below here.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

This is; The Great Infernal Tablet of the Four Palaces and the Black Cross or, Tablet of Partition.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

The Palace of the Night

Night of the Night	Blood of the Night
Kingdom of the Night	Bright One of the Night

The Palace of the Blood

Night of the Blood	Blood of the Blood
Kingdom of the Blood	Bright One of the Blood

Here Is The Black Cross

Night of the Kingdom	Blood of the Kingdom
Kingdom of the Kingdom	Bright One of the Kingdom

The Palace of the Kingdom

Night of the Bright One	Blood of the Bright One
Kingdom of the Bright One	Bright One of the Bright One

The Palace of the Bright One

This is; the Attributions of the Four Palaces of Tartarus According to the Philosophie of the Descending Hierarchies; Also, the Regions of Governance Within Each Palace, Regarding The Further Sub-Dividing or, Quartering, of Those Four Palaces; All as Set Forth in the Book Ordines Descendens ex Iohn Dee.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

It will be Noted by the Observant that in the Great Infernal Tablet there appear 4 Palaces of Hell in the replace of they 4 Watchtowers and, that otherwise these follow that same reasoning as demonstrated in the aforesaid partitioning of the angelic Watchtowers save that the Titles are new. The infernal black cross or, Tablet of Partition, howbeit has 4 other names which are explained thus in the manuscript, and the Engliſh of which is also given,

DOSIG
CNILA
ADOHI
LUCIF

✠

NIGHT BLOOD KINGDOM
THE BRIGHT ONE

In the Language of Enochian the words are to be said as, Dow see gay, Kay nee lar, Ar dow hee, Lew kee fay. The centre level line in each Palace is called, linea spiritus inferi which is, the Line of the Dead Spirit. These reveal another Great Secret viz. the 4 Great Names of Satan, which are ſhewn below on the page following. Be it known that these 4 Names must on No Account be uttered aloud in their Order as herein laid out, if the sorcerer has neglected to insure their safe Protection by the proper means, viz. by the drawing in white chalk upon the floor a Circle as is also to be ſhewn hereinafter. Without they construct of such a circle for their protection, the sorcerer will stand defenceless and without Argument before Satan on his approach, and his mind ſhall likely be blasted and his very soul claimed for eternal servitude to the Temptor.

Now, the manner of determining the Names of the Infernal Hierarchy is the same in general principle as that by which the angelic ranks are also located, the which has been described above in full detail, save that certain particulars of the Shapes of crosses &c are reversed. For this purpose, each angelic rank has its equivalent amongst the lower hierarchy, viz;

THE RANKS OF THE ANGELIC HIERARCHY	THE RANKS OF THE INFERNAL HIERARCHY
THE 4 GREAT HOLY NAMES OF GOD	THE 4 GREAT INFERNAL NAMES OF SATAN
THE 4 GREAT KINGS	THE 4 GREAT PRINCES OF HELL
THE 24 ELDERS OR SENIORS	THE 24 DUKES OF HELL
THE ANGELS OF THE CALVARY CROSS	THE COUNTS OF THE CRUX INVERSUS
CHERUBIC ANGELS	PRESIDENTS OF HELL
ARCHANGELS	MARQUIS OF HELL
LESSER ANGELS	EARLS OF HELL
ELEMENTALS	IMPS

They four Great Secret Names of Satan from the Palaces of the Great Infernal Tablet are as hereinafter laid out in their order.

✠

THE 4 GREAT SECRET NAMES OF SATAN
ON THE LINEAR SPIRITUS INFERI

(1) THE NAME Of SATAN IN THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT:
IFIOXZPZIAHO
He is spoken with the voice as Eefeeow chasodpay zodeeaho.
This Name means, He who always visits amongst the high rulers.

✠

(2) THE NAME OF SATAN IN THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD:
MHPZFENQZOIN
He is spoken with the voice as Empayheezod fennak zodoeen.
This Name means, He whose horns are within thee.

✠

(3) THE NAME OD SATAN IN THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM:
MIFTOZNPVDQZ
He is spoken with the voice as Meefaytozod enpayvay dookayzod.
This Name means, He whose visit bestows power to make forms.

✠

(4) THE NAME OF SATAN IN THE PALACE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
IOHDSZZHTIVS
He is spoken with the voice as Eeowharday sayzodazod harteevess.
This Name means, He who is in all sounds which come from Hades.

✠

The sounding of these names in speech, is to be approached with the very greatest of Caution and Preparation as aforesaid and must without Fail be voiced only within a Circle of Protection as is to be hereinafter Drawn below.

Here are the Names of the 4 Great Princes of Hell, derived in that same Manner by which are also derived the 4 Great Kings of the angelic Watchtowers.

THE 4 GREAT PRINCES OF HELL

(1) THE GREAT PRINCE OF THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT:
XZDZOCZP
He is spoken with the voice as; Chzoday zodowk ay zodpay.
This Name means, He who vows five times to serve.

✠

(2) THE GREAT PRINCE OF THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD
FZZQOIEN
He is spoken with the voice as: Fayzodzod quo eeay en.
This Name means, He who is content to be summoned.

✠

(3) THE GREAT PRINCE OF THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM
OVAPOVZN
He is spoken with the voice as: Ovaypay owvay zoden.
This Name means, He who lives at the centre of ye.

✠

(4) THE GREAT PRINCE OF THE PALACE OF THE SHINING ONE STNHFNZZ
He is spoken with the voice as: Satan hayfan zod zod.
This Name means, He who will bring 8 storms for thee.

✠

In the manner of the deriving of the 24 Seniors, the which belong in the angelic tablet, so likewise are there 24 Dukes of Hell to be discovered within the Great Infernal Tablet by the exercise that has already been ſhewn as applying to those Seniors above. Hereinafter are displayed the names of each 6 Dukes of Hell of the 4 Palaces of Tartarus.

THE 24 DUKES OF HELL

THE SIX DUKES OF HELL REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT.

(1) PZXOIFI who is spoken as Payzodechs oweefee.
This Name means, He who is a poison.

(2) ZZIBZOR who is spoken as Zodzod eebayzod owray.
This Name means, He who devises admiration.

(3) PDMIFTZ who is spoken as Peedam effay teezod.
This Name means, He whose visit is 33 tortures.

(4) ZPZIAHO who is spoken as Zodpaysoz eearhow.
This Name means, He whom they of the flame worſhip.

(5) ZCDIDZF who is spoken as Zod kardee dayzodeff.
This Name means, He who will visit 3 times.

(6) POHIDQZ who is spoken as Pay owhee daykwayzod.
This Name means, He who delivers woe into their palace.

✠

THE SIX DUKES OF HELL REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD.

(1) NEFZPHM who is spoken as Nayfayzod payharmay.
This Name means, He who visits them to pour a vial.

(2) EZOOLIC who is spoken as Ayzodow owleekay.
This Name means, He whose hand first made thee.

(3) NZIZAFH who is spoken as Enzodeezod arfayhay.
This Name means, He who pours a vessel of emptiness.

(4) ENQZOIN who is spoken as Eye nay kwazodow eenay.
This Name means, He who is lord of control.

(5) EIZOBLD who is spoken as Ay eezod owbay larday.
This Name means, He who orders the first of 3 wreaths.

(6) NOQTOEZ who is spoken as Enow kwaytow eezod.
This Name means, He who serves their minister 5 times.

✠

THE SIX DUKES OF HELL REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM.

(1) NZOTFIM who is spoken as Enzodow teefeemay.
This Name means, He who visits their backside.

(2) ZVAOLIF who is spoken as Zoday vayar owleefay.
This Name means, He who visits with truth.

(3) NAOLIHI who is spoken as Ennar owleehee.

This Name means, He who made thee without mercy.

(4) ZNPVDQZ who is spoken as Zodenpay vay darkzod.
This Name means, He who will promise contentment.

(5) ZVMXNVC who is spoken as Zod vaymechs envaykar.
This Name means, He who will call them to ye.

(6) NPOZLEZ who is spoken as Enpay owzodel eezod.
This Name means, He who is the first one of 8.

✠

THE SIX DUKES OF HELL REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE BRIGHT ONE.

(1) ZZSDHOI who is spoken as Zodazod sedayhay owee.
This Name means, He who increases their doubts.

(2) ZTZSISD who is spoken as Zodtay zodessee sayday.
This Name means, He who is Lord of the Flies.

(3) ZNLTCIT who is spoken as Zoden elltaykee eetay.
This Name means, He who has power in the waters.

(4) ZZHTIVS who is spoken as Zodazod haytayee vaysay.
This Name means, He who is the end of their days.

(5) ZNITIOL who is spoken as Zoden eetayee owlay.
This Name means, He who will make them accursed.

(6) ZFOLLZI who is spoken as Zodeff owlaylay zodee.
This Name means, He who will visit to conquer mankind.

✠

Now, the Counts of the crux inversus or, the inverted cross, have their several Names revealed in a similar manner to that of the angels of the Calvary cross which is described above, except that the cross itself is overturned, as Satan would have it. The drawing beneath does ſhew the ſhape of it, which ſhould be weighed against that earlier Drawing, which is above, in which are ſhewn the appearance of the Calvary crosses secreted within the watchtower of the fire. It will be readily observed that the Theory of obtaining the Names is of a similar sort, the notion merely being inverted.

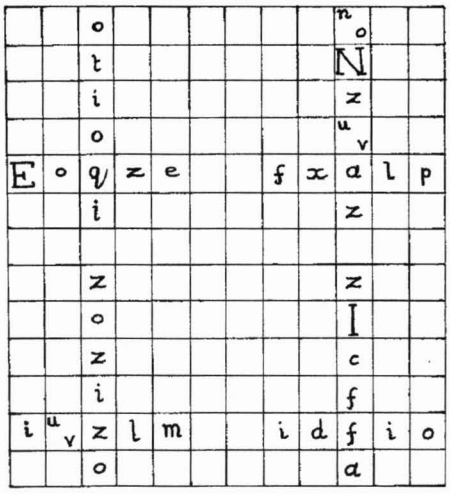
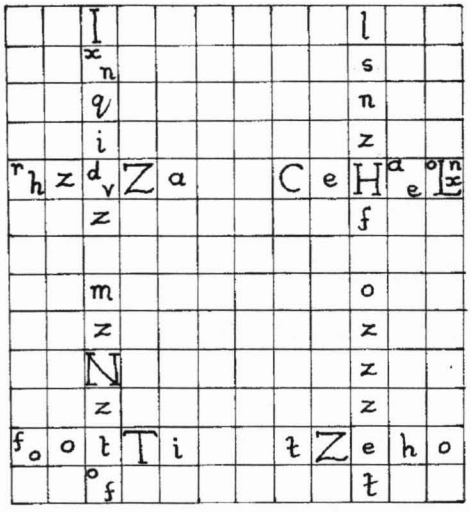
This is, the Palace of the Bright One, Shewing the Manner of the Inverted Cross or, Crux Inversus.

If this same Patterning be applied to those other 3 Palaces, all 16 such inverted crosses will be thus disclosed in a like ſhape. To further Demonstrate this principle, I have also Drawings of them engraved below. In all are the upright Names of some greater Power than those which are transverse, who are their inferiors in degree of rank. It ſhould further be regarded that withall, the Pairs of Names as ſhewn are to be Invoked or, Summoned to the service and instruction of the mage, in their pairings, which will accord greater Result than ſhould they be Summoned singly, for then will they be as a colonel having no serjant.



This is, the Palace of the Night, Shewing that Same Manner of the Inverted Cross or, Crux Inversus.



This is, the Palace of the Blood, Shewing the Same.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

		z						z
		i						l
		q						z
		h						s
ſ	e	I	l	o			o	z	s	p	n
		o							M
		z v							i e x							h
		z							m n							l
ſ	b	h	z	i			o	a	o	b	h
		d							ſ

This is, the Palace of the Kingdom, Shewing the Same.

✠

THE 32 COUNTS OF THE CRUX INVERSUS

THE EIGHT COUNTS REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT.

THE NIGHT OF THE NIGHT:
(1) OTIOQI who is spoken as Owtayee owkwayee.
This Name means, He who is sat in contentment.

(2) EOQZE who is spoken as Ayowkay zodee.
This Name means, He who is the first maker.

THE BLOOD OF THE NIGHT:
(1) ONZVAZ who is spoken as Ownayzod Vayarzod.
This Name means, He who is in thine image.

(2) FXALP who is spoken as Effchay laypay.

This Name means, He who comes to bind them.

THE KINGDOM OF THE NIGHT:
(1) ZOZIZO who is spoken as Zodo zodeezodo.
This Name means, He who blows them in the wind.

(2) IVZLM who is spoken as Eevayzod laymay.
This Name means, He who had the first horns.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE NIGHT
(1) ZICFFA who is spoken as Zodeekay fayfar.
This Name means, He who makes them hear the voices.

(2) IDFIO who is spoken as Eedayfay eeow.
This Name means, He who is the third of five.

✠

THE EIGHT COUNTS REVEALED WITHIN
THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD.

THE NIGHT OF THE BLOOD:
(1) INQIVZ who is spoken as Eenaykway eevayzod.
This Name means, He who walks on the wind.

(2) HZVZA who is spoken as Hayzod vayzodar.
This Name means, He who sings 6 times.

THE BLOOD OF THE BLOOD:
(1) LSNZHF who is spoken as Elsaynay zodheefay.
This Name means, He who is the first ruler from Hell.

(2) TZEHO who is spoken as Tayzoday hayow.
This Name means, He who demands worſhip.

THE KINGDOM OF THE BLOOD:
(1) MZNZTF who is spoken as Emzodenzod teefay.
This Name means, He whose joy is to slay.

(2) OOTTI who is spoken as Owowtay tee-ee.

This Name means, He who is an eye.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE BLOOD:
(1) OZZZET who is spoken as Owzodazod zodaytay.
This Name means, He who is the servant of nakedness.

(2) TZEHO who is spoken as Tayzoday heeow.
This Name means, He whose measure is death.

✠

THE EIGHT COUNTS REVEALED WITHIN THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM.

THE NIGHT OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) ZIQHIO who is spoken as Zodeekway heeow.
This Name means, He who ſhould not exist.

(2) FEILO who is spoken as Effay eelayow
This Name means, He who will haunt them.

THE BLOOD OF THE KINGDOM
(1) ZLZSSM who is spoken as Zodelzod essaymay.
This Name means, He who wears the first crown.

(2) OAOBH who is spoken as Owar owbeehay.
This Name means, He who sends the furies.

THE KINGDOM OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) VXZNHD who is spoken as Vaychayzod enharday.
This Name means, He who is 42 rages.

(2) FBHZI who is spoken as Faybay hayzodee.
This Name means, He whose visit is doom.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) EHMLOF who is spoken as Eehaymay lowfay.
This Name means, He who is the first visitor.

(2) OAOBH who is spoken as Owar owbeehay
This Name means, He who weaves a deadly tune.

✠

THE EIGHT COUNTS REVEALED WITHIN
THE PALACE OF THE BRIGHT ONE.

THE NIGHT OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) LIZNMF who is spoken as Elleezod naymayfay.
This Name means, He whose visit is foulness.

(2) EVMOI who is spoken as Eevay mowee.
This Name means, He who was first called this.

THE BLOOD OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) CZTZNO who is spoken as Kayzod tayzodenow.
This Name means, He who began to fall.

(2) HZLNO who is spoken as Hayzodell nayow.
This Name means, He who is first to serve.

THE KINGDOM OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) CIXXTI who is spoken as Kayeechay chattayee.
This Name means, He whose arrival is terror.

(2) IITHA who is spoken as Ee-ee tayhar.
This Name means, He who is a foul creature.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) FAOILF who is spoken as Effayow eelayfay.
This Name means, He who visits thy dwelling.

(2) HZLNO who is spoken as Hayzodel nayow.
This Name means, He who is thy first servant.

✠

The Names of the Presidents of Hell are to be formed by analogous method to that by which the Names of the cherubic angels are derived, save that, whereas the cherubic angels are found in the 4 squares that lie above the vexillum of each Calvary cross, the presidents are to be extracted from those 4 squares lying below the vexillum of the crux inversus or, the inverted cross. If the last Drawing above be consulted, the which shews the inverted crosses in the palace of the kingdom, the two lowermost vexilla have the letters FB(H)ZI & OA(O)BH while those upper ones have FE(I)LO & OZ(S)PN; (Those letters placed herewith in brackets being corporate with the upright naming column of each several cross, so that of FE(I)LO the Name of the president be only FELO and of OZ(S)PN it be only OZPN &c.) From the Name thus revealed, 3 others may also be produced through re-arrangement of letters, and this is the only rank that is obtained by so doing, and the cherubic angels in the angelic tablets. By the Application of this usage the following Names are to be found;

THE 64 PRESIDENTS OF THE PALACES OF HELL

✠

THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT:

NIGHT OF THE NIGHT:

(1) EOZE who is spoken as Eeow zodee.
This Name means The Lord of Howling.
(2) OZEE who is spoken as Ozod ee-ee.
This Name means The Lord of Storms.
(3) ZEEO who is spoken as Zodee eeow.
This Name means The Lord of Raiment.
(4) EEOZ who is spoken as Ee-ee ozod.
This Name means The Lord of the First Rank.

BLOOD OF THE NIGHT:

(1) FXLP who is spoken as Faychar laypay.
This Name means The Lord of 8 Visits.
(2) XLPF who is spoken as Chaylar payfay.
This Name means The Lord of 8 Voices.
(3) LPFX who is spoken as Laypay faychar.
This Name means He Whose Feet Will Crush Lords.
(4) PFXL who is spoken as Payfay chaylar.
This Name means The Lord of Screams.

Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee

KINGDOM OF THE NIGHT:
(1) IVLM who is spoken as Eevay laymay.
This Name means The Lord of the Mighty Ones.
(2) VLMI who is spoken as Vaylar mee-eye.
This Name means He Who Witnesses the End.
(3) LMIV who is spoken as Laymay eevay.
This Name means The Lord of Endless Torment.
(4) MIVL who is spoken as Mee vaylay.
This Name means The Lord of the End of Time.

BRIGHT ONE OF THE NIGHT:
(1) IDIO who is spoken as Eeday ow.
This Name means He Who Cannot be Escaped.
(2) DIOI who is spoken as Dee owee.
This Name means He That is an Angle.
(3) IOID who is spoken as Eeow eeday.
This Name means He Who Seeks Eternal Life.
(4) OIDI who is spoken as Owee dee.
This Name means He Who can Enter Thee.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD:

NIGHT OF THE BLOOD:
(1) HZZA who is spoken as Hayzod zodar.
This Name means The Lord of Catadysm.
(2) ZZAH who is spoken as Zodzod arhay.
This Name means The Lord of Foul Creatures.
(3) ZAHZ who is spoken as Zodar hayzod.
This Name means The Lord of Foul Sounds.
(4) AHZZ who is spoken as Arhay zodzod.
This Name means The Lord of Falsehoods.

BLOOD OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CEAL who is spoken as Kay-ee arlay.
This Name means She who will Bind.
(2) EALC who is spoken as Ee-ar laykay.

This Name means She who will Gather ye.
(3) ALCE who is spoken as Arlay kay-ee.
This Name means She who Bestows Impotence.
(4) LCEA who is spoken as Laykay ee-ar.
This Name means She who is the Bride of Satan.

KINGDOM OF THE BLOOD:
(1) FOTI who is spoken as Fayow tayee.
This Name means He Who will send Sadness.
(2) OTIF who is spoken as Owtee eefay.
This Name means He Who has the Seat of Death.
(3) TIFO who is spoken as Tayee fayow.
This Name means He Who will cause Grief.
(4) IFOT who is spoken as Eefay owtay.
This Name means He Who Bestows Death.

BRIGHT ONE OF THE BLOOD:
(1) TZHO who is spoken as Tayzod hayow.
This Name means He Who will be a False Friend.
(2) ZHOT who is spoken as Zodhay owtay.
This Name means He Whose Groans are like the Gale.
(3) HOTZ who is spoken as Hayow tayzod.
This Name means He Who Worſhips Sin.
(4) OTZH who is spoken as Owtay zodhay.
This Name means He Who will Destroy Light.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM:

THE NIGHT OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) FELO who is spoken as Fay-ee layow.
This Name means He Who is the First Visitor.
(2) ELOF who is spoken as Eelay owfay.
This Name means He Who Twice Visits First.
(3) LOFE who is spoken as Layow fay-ee.
This Name means He Who Visits With Duplicity.
(4) OFEL who is spoken as Owfay eelay.
This Name means He Who Will Deceive Twice.

THE BLOOD OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) OZPN who is spoken as Owzod paynay.
This Name means He Who Will Possess.
(2) ZPNO who is spoken as Zodpay nayow.
This Name means He Who will Serve ye.
(3) PNOZ who is spoken as Paynay owzod.
This Name means He Who will Make them Vomit.
(4) NOZP who is spoken as Nayow zodpay.
This Name means He Who will Make thee a Conquerer.

THE KINGDOM OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) FBZI who is spoken as Faybay zodee.
This Name means The Lord of the High Places.
(2) BZIF who is spoken as Bayzod eefay.
This Name means The Lord of Raising Up.
(3) ZIFB who is spoken as Zodee faybay.
This Name means The Lord of Advancement.
(4) IFBZ who is spoken as Eefay bayzod.
This Name means The Lord of Flight.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) AOBH who is spoken as Ar-ow bayhay.
This Name means He Who Sends 6 Curses.
(2) OBHA who is spoken as Obar hay-ar.
This Name means He Who Sends the Grave-Bindings.
(3) BHAO who is spoken as Barhay ayow.
This Name means He Who Creates 6 Fiends.
(4) HAOB who is spoken as Hayar obay.
This Name means He Who is 28 Fiends.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:

THE NIGHT OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) EVOI who is spoken as Eevay owee.
This Name means She Who is the First.
(2) VOIE who is spoken as Vayow eeay.
This Name means She Who Ravages.

(3) OIEV who is spoken as Owee eevay.
This Name means She Who is the Goddess of Flame.
(4) IEVO who is spoken as Eeay vayow.
This Name means She Who is Without Mercy.

THE BLOOD OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) ZMIA who is spoken as Zodem ee-ar.
This Name means He Who Continues Amongst Them.
(2) MIAZ who is spoken as May-ee arzod.
This Name means He Who Makes Them Continue.
(3) IAZM who is spoken as Eear zodem.
This Name means He Who Ends Them.
(4) AZMI who is spoken as Arzod may-ee.
This Name means He Who is a Torment.

THE KINGDOM OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) IIHA who is spoken as Ee-ee hayar.
This Name means He Who is in All Men.
(2) IHAI who is spoken as Eehay ar-ee.
This Name means He Who is allways With Ye.
(3) HAII who is spoken as Hayar ee-ee.
This Name means The Creature who is in Ye.
(4) AIIH who is spoken as Ar-ee eehay.
This Name means He Who is 6 Beasts.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) HZNO who is spoken as Hayzod nayow.
This Name means He Who is a False Servant.
(2) ZNOH who is spoken as Zoden owhay.
This Name means He Whose Curse is Anguiſh.
(3) NOHZ who is spoken as Nayow ayzod.
This Name means He Who Sends Woe.
(4) OHZN who is spoken as Owhay zoden.
This Name means He Who is the Giver of Despair.

✠

The Marquises of Tartarus are to be derived from these above Names of the Presidents, in that same way in which the Archangels of the angelic tablets are manufactured from the prefixing of each Cherubim by the initial letter of the title of that element to which it is a subject, as the Cherubim ADOP will become BADOP upon the addition of the letter B of BITOM which means fire in the language of Enochian, and likewise the Cherubim TDIM of the Watchtower of the water will transform into Archangel HTDIM with the prefixing of H which is from HCOMA, this being water in Enochian. Thus the names of 64 Marqui of Tartarus may be Discovered merely by placing before the above listing of Presidents one of the letters D, C, A or L, which are from the Names of the Palaces of Tartarus DOSIG (Night), CNILA (Blood), ADOHI (Kingdom) and LUCIF (The Bright One), and which are contained within the black cross called the Tablet of Division, which on the Angelic Tablet is called the Tablet of Union. Below are listed these Marquis of Tartarus thus formed.

THE 64 MARQUIS OF THE PALACES OF HELL

✠

THE PALACE OF THE NIGHT:

NIGHT OF THE NIGHT:
(1) DEOZE who is spoken as Dayee ozodee.
This Name means He Who sends your Hand.
(2) DOZEE who is spoken as Dayow zodee-ee.
This Name means He Who Displeases their Intent.
(3) DZEEO who is spoken as Dayzodee eeow.
This Name means He Who Crawls Within their Mind.
(4) DEEOZ who is spoken as Day-ee eeowzod.
This Name means He Who Misguides Their Hand.

BLOOD OF THE NIGHT:
(1) DFXLP who is spoken as Dayfaychay elpay.
This Name means He Who Comes First to Possess.
(2) DXLPF who is spoken as Daychay elpayfay.
This Name means He Whose Visit is Deadly.
(3) D LPFX who is spoken as Daylay payfaychay.
This Name means He Who Giveth a False Cause.
(4) DPFXL who is spoken as Daypay faychaylay.
This Name means He Who is the Ruin of thy Foe.

KINGDOM OF THE NIGHT:
(1) DIVLM who is spoken as Deevay laymay.

This Name means He Who is of Gold.
(2) DVLMI who is spoken as Dayvay el-ayme.
This Name means He Who is the End of Them.
(3) DLMIV who is spoken as Daylayme eevay.
This Name means He Who Bestows all Riches.
(4) DMIVL who is spoken as Day-me eevay-el.
This Name means He Who is the Giver of All Ends.

BRIGHT ONE OF THE NIGHT:
(1) DIDIO who is spoken as Day-ee day-eeow.
This Name means He Who Developes Inside ye.
(2) DDIOI who is spoken as Dayday eeowee.
This Name means He Who is the Third That is.
(3) DIOID who is spoken as De-ee oweeday.
This Name means He Who is the Third Enterer.
(4) DOIDI who is spoken as Dayow eeday-ee.
This Name means He Whose Name is in All.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE BLOOD:

NIGHT OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CHZZA who is spoken as Kayhayzod zoday.
This Name means He Who Will Show 6 Things unto Thee.
(2) CZZAH who is spoken as Kayzodzod arhay.
This Name means He Who Watched at the Beginning.
(3) CZAHZ who is spoken as Kayzodar hayzod
This Name means He Who Begins thy Work.
(4) CAHZZ who is spoken as Kayhay zodzod.
This Name means He Who Will Make Work for Their Hands.

BLOOD OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CCEAL who is spoken as Kaykay eearlay.
This Name means He Who Comes to thy Ceremony.
(2) CEALC who is spoken as Kay-ee arlaykay.
This Name means He Who Will Tell thee the First Mysteries.
(3) CALCE who is spoken as Kayar laykay-ee.

This Name means He Who Will Summon for thee.
(4) CLCEA who is spoken as Kaylay kayeear.
This Name means He Who Is First of 6.

KINGDOM OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CFOTI who is spoken as Kayfayow tay-ee.
This Name means The Creature Who will Visit ye.
(2) COTIF who is spoken as Kayowtee eefay.
This Name means The Creature Who Will Visit thy Seat.
(3) CTIFO who is spoken as Kaytee-ee fayow.
This Name means The Creature Who is Without any Mercy.
(4) CIFOT who is spoken as kayeefay owtay.
This Name means The Creature Who is also a Terror.

BRIGHT ONE OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CTZHO who is spoken as Kaytayzod hayow.
This Name means The Creature Who Worſhips Lucifer.
(2) CZHOT who is spoken as Cayzodhay owtay.
This Name means The Creature Who Enjoys Their Groans.
(3) CHOTZ who is spoken as Kayhay owtayzod.
This Name means The Creature Who is also Them.
(4) COTZH who is spoken as Kayow tayzodhar.
This Name means The Creature Who will Spawn.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE KINGDOM:

THE NIGHT OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) AFELO who is spoken as Arfay eelayow.
This Name means He Who Visits Among the First.
(2) AELOF who is spoken as Aree-ell owfay.
This Name means He Whose Summoning is Deadly.
(3) A LOFE who is spoken as Arlay owfay-ee.
This Name means He Who is the First to Visit.
(4) AOFEL who is spoken as Arow fayee-ell
This Name means He Who is the First of 5 Visits.

THE BLOOD OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) AOZPN who is spoken as Arowzod paynay.

This Name means He Who Makes Wind.
(2) AZPNO who is spoken as Arzodpay aynow.
This Name means He Who Harvests Souls.
(3) APNOZ who is spoken as Arpaynay owzod.
This Name means He Who Liveth in Noxious Vapours.
(4) ANOZP who is spoken as Arnayow zodpay.
This Name means He Who Sends 6 Storms.

THE KINGDOM OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) AFBZI who is spoken as Arfaybay zodee.
This Name means He Who Sends 19 of Them.
(2) ABZIF who is spoken as Arbayzod eefay.
This Name means He Who is Eager to Visit Them.
(3) AZIFB who is spoken as Arzodee faybay.
This Name means He Who is the Image of Death.
(4) AIFBZ who is spoken as Ar-eefay bayzod.
This Name means He Who Will Send the Creature to Them.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) AAOBH who is spoken as Arayow bayhay.
This Name means He Who is Secreted Among ye.
(2) AOBHA who is spoken as Arowbay hayar.
This Name means He Who is 28 Beasts.
(3) ABHAO who is spoken as Arbayhay arow.
This Name means He Who Will Place Doubt.
(4) AHAOB who is spoken as Arhayar owbay.
This Name means He Who Will Send 6 Creatures.

✠

THE PALACE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:

THE NIGHT OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) LEVOI who is spoken as Elleevay owee.
This Name means He Who Was the First That is.
(2) LVOIE who is spoken as Ellvayow ee-ee.
This Name means He Who was the First Beast.
(3) LOIEV who is spoken as Ellowee eevay.
This Name means He Who is the First of Flame.
(4) LIEVO who is spoken as Ellee-ee vayow.

This Name means He Whose Creature is First.

THE BLOOD OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) LZMIA who is spoken as Layzodem eear.
This Name means He Who is First of Those Who Endure.
(2) LMIAZ who is spoken as Ellemee arzod.
This Name means He Who Endures Them.
(3) LIAZM who is spoken as Elleear zodem.
This Name means He Who is 6th of They Who Weep.
(4) LAZMI who is spoken as Ellarzod emee.
This Name means He Who is but the First of Their Torments.

THE KINGDOM OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1)LIIHA who is spoken as Ellee eehayar.
This Name means He Who is All the Creatures.
(2) LIHAI who is spoken as Ellee hayaree.
This Name means He Who is the Creature in All.
(3) LHAII who is spoken as Layhay aree-ee.
This Name means He Who is the First Creature Among All.
(4) LAIIH who is spoken as Layaree eehay.
This Name means He Who is First of All Beasts.

THE BRIGHT ONE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) LHZNO who is spoken as
This Name means He Who Will Reveal Forbidden Knowledge.
(2) LZNOH who is spoken as
This Name means He Who is the First of Their Misfortunes.
(3) LNOHZ who is spoken as
This Name means He Who Will Serve Them Falsely.
(4) LOHZN who is spoken as
This Name means He Who Blazes Forth to Them.

✠

The Names of a further 64 Earls of Hell are residing within the Infernal Tablets and are to be Determined in analogous policy to that by which, within the counterparting Angelic Tablets, the Lesser Angels of the Watchtowers are to be had from those 16 squares lying under the vexillum or, crossbar, of the Calvary crosses. For the finding of the Earls of Hell, the crux inversi or, the inverted crosses, are to be examined; Whereupon it will be readily perceived that there be 16 squares that are above the vexillum, being four pair to the left of each upright column of the cross and four pair to the right, so that if the upright column be for the nonce disregarded, 4 new Names may be formed of 4 letters each one. As an epitome of this Method, if that Drawing of the Palace of the Kingdom which is included several pages above should be inspected, wherein the four inverted crosses are depicted but all other squares have been left empty for the convenient aiding of Understanding, the crux inversus toward the lower left which is, the Kingdom of the Kingdom, is structured in this following style;

z
i
q
h fello
o

In this, two further letters can be included to the left of the central column 4 times and 4 times to the right, these letters being found within the master figure of the compleat Infernal Tablet. These letters, if added to the example above, would thus produce the figure;

x I (z) A z
c L (i) z b z o (q) f z
i f (h) m l
f e l l o
o a o l f

The letters that be underlined make out the Names of the Earls of Tartarus if that letter which be dividing them in the brackets be itself entirely ignored. Thus, these 4 Names of Earls of Hell above are; IFML, ZOFZ,CLZB & XIAZ. It ſhould be noted that the Importance of these Names is most at the lowest part & decreases as they do rise upward so, IFML being the lowest of they 4, he is the most important of them and is thus made first of his listing. By the Application of this same Principle in all cases can 64 Names of Earls be revealed.

✠

THE 64 EARLS OF TARTARUS

NIGHT OF THE NIGHT:
(1) DIDD
(2) VALE
(3) ZFAZ
(4) FANZ

BLOOD OF THE NIGHT:
(1) HZIV
(2) IOCX
(3) HZZM
(4) ODHZ

KINGDOM OF THE NIGHT:
(1) LZVL
(2) ZXMI
(3) IOOD
(4) VLXZ

BRIGHT ONE OF THE NIGHT:
(1) LHZD
(2) ZVUZ
(3) ZNZO
(4) BQAT

✠

NIGHT OF THE BLOOD:
(1) LPTT
(2) DZQV
(3) ZZXV
(4) DZZT

BLOOD OF THE BLOOD:
(1) OZIV
(2) MXQM
(3) IMXX
(4) TDOM

KINGDOM OF THE BLOOD:
(1) LTAL
(2) HZVI
(3) INZT
(4) MZQN

BRIGHT ONE OF THE BLOOD:
(1) CZEZ
(2) BHVL
(3) ZDHZ
(4) LNFB

✠

NIGHT OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) IFML
(2) ZOFZ
(3) CLXB
(4) XIAZ

BLOOD OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) QXZN
(2) IMQQ
(3) EITL
(4) HPFZ

KINGDOM OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) TIIR
(2) IHLZ
(3) ZFOA
(4) FIZM

BRIGHT ONE OF THE KINGDOM:
(1) OZXZ
(2) MEZN
(3) ONOA
(4) ZEIM

✠

NIGHT OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) ZXED
(2) IHML
(3) INZQ
(4) TIHZ

BLOOD OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) SVIH
(2) QLLM
(3) IXCO
(4) ZLZZ

KINGDOM OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) TOIM
(2) TZDD
(3) EOTZ
(4) HEZV

BRIGHT ONE OF THE BRIGHT ONE:
(1) EOEH
(2) ZTFS
(3) LFRM
(4) AOAZ

✠

Now, there are also a further 64 High-Earls of Tartarus, each of whom, in like manner to the Ruling Lesser Angels, is a Ruler or, legate, of his same Earl, and has his Name formed from his Earl by the prefixing of a letter from the black cross or, Tablet of Division. These letters of prefix are found, as are those of the Ruling Lesser Angels in the Holy Tablet, from the names of the four Palaces which are on the Tablet of Division, viz; D OSIG; C NILA; A DOHI; & L UCIF. The first letter of each is Discounted, and the letters of prefix are thus; O for all High Earls of the Night; N for all High Earls of the Blood; D for all they same of the Kingdom; & U for all they same of the Bright One. If, for readiness to the eye, the last Listing above be quoted, which ſhews they Earls of the Bright One of the Bright One, EOEH, ZTFS, LFRM & AOAZ; then each Ruling Earl is IEOEH, IZTFS, ILFRM & IAOAZ.

Even as the elementals are formed in the Holy Tablet, in this Infernal Tablet it is the same save that its order is inversed in the finding of the names of 128 Imps of Hell. In this same above example of the Earls of the Bright One of the Bright One, the first 2 letters and the last 2 letters of each Name be taken, and to each be futher added as a prefix that same letter from the Tablet of Division. Thus will the names of the Imps of the Bright One of the Bright One be found as; IAO, IAZ, ILF, IRM, IZT, IFS, IEO & IEH. For further example of this method, they Imps of the Night of the Blood will be found to be; NDZ, NZT, NZZ, NXV, NDZ, NQV, NLP & NTT. (And it is to be especially noted that this fronting or, initial letter be the 2nd letter of that Name of the Palace and not the 1st letter of it.)

Of they Earls and High Earls & Imps, it is not to be supposed that these have each in his name that which is meaningful as do all those ranks the which are over them, and they are not to be Chosen by the sorcerer for any merit that is within their title or is describing of their own prowess. Rather, these forms are of a subsidiary and serving Nature and are Summoned first in order, that they may increase the power within this World of that Greater anima who is to be invoked according to the merit of their Name as it is in the Engliſh tongue. This choosing is made according to the Palace and, that part of a Palace, in which the lesser anima does reside. So, they Earls and High Earls and Imps are the servants of the higher, and are ordered to come to be the slaves of greater demons & thus to open a Doorway for their approaching and assist in carrying out the Instruction of the sorcerer that is given to their Master.

✠

Of the Manner by the Which the Infernal Dæmons & That Complete Legion of the Damned is to be Summoned According to the Very Will of the Sorcerer.

Of the very greatest Importance is the Drawing upon the floor of the great Circle of Protection; and never more than if making Use of any of those 4 great Infernal Names of Satan. If these be employed, that is, spoken aloud, and the sorcerer stands not within this ſhield, his mind will surely be blasted asunder as by the lightening when it does strike upon the oak or steeple. This Cirde is fully ſhewn below on the page following and must be patiently Observed in execution in every particular thereof. When this has been erected, the Alchymist is to walk with dignity about the very periphery in contra dextrovorsum the while declaiming this prayer.

In nomine Dei Patris, Dei Filij, Dei Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Omnipotens, Sempiterne, vere, et viue Deus, in adiutorium meum intende: Domine Dominantium, Rex Regum, Jeouah Zebaoth, as adiuuandum me festina: Gloria Deo, Patri Filio, et spiritui Sancto: Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semper et in sæcula sæculorum: Amen.

Also the Alchymist will cross themselves upon each passing of the 7 Names of God drawn within the 7 sides of the inner figure or, Septagram, pausing in their walking and their dedamation upon each occasion; And this is to be continued until the reciting of that Prayer has been accompliſhed, whereupon he ſhall enter into the centre of the Cirde by taking a step across the boundary of it, making certain that he ſhall not step upon any part of the Construction. Upon then taking his position at the centre, he will likewise utter the following prayer, for the purpose of sealing-off his own transgression committed by the stepping across of the erected figure.

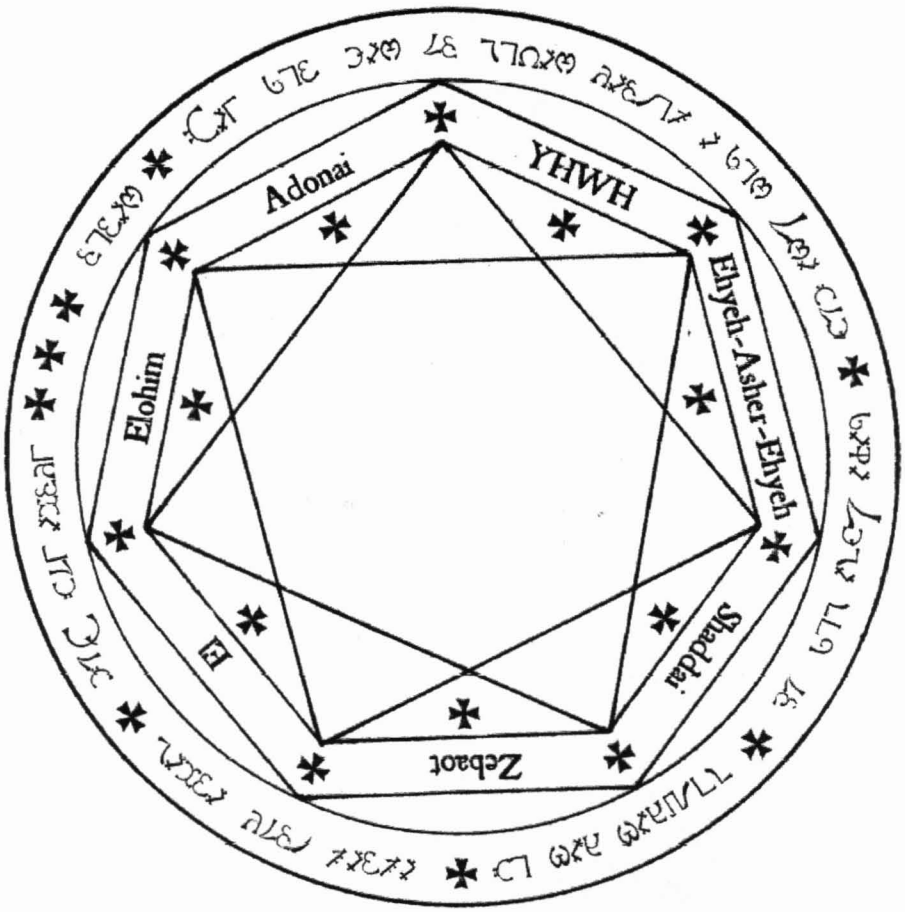
Anna, et Annah, obsecrantis: 4 Angeli præsidentes 4 Cardinubus Cæli: Michael: Fortitudo Dei: Gabriel: Fortitudo Dei: Raphael: Medicina Dei: Uriel: Lux Dei. Amen.

✠

This will complete the full erection of that figure. Before all this be done, the Alchymist will be Wise to make assurance that all necessary Articles, papers, suffumations & Substances which have been deemed necessary for the Operation have been placed also within, for ſhould he quit the Circle until the Operation be completed & dosing Prayers spoken in accordance with what ſhall come here, that Circle ſhall be broke and the protection of it ſhall be foresaken.

✠

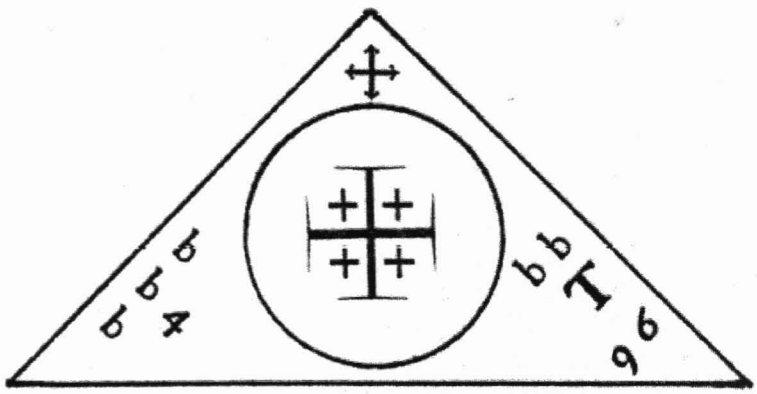
Ordines Descendens ex Johanes Dee



This is, That Great Circle Which a Sorcerer Must Have Right Carefully Drawn in Chalk upon the Floor Where He is to Work; or Else to be Finely Executed in White Painte (then to be most Meticulously Hidden Beneath Some Carpet or other Covering, Lest it Shall be Witnessed by Another). Chalk is Best, for this be More Easily Removed by Rag and Water so it May Not be Understood as the Work of Sorcery.

Of the Triangle of Art

Now before all of this be carried out, there is another important figure that must be likewise Drawn, and if this be not completed also, then will whatever Spirit that may be conjured to a Visitation by the sorcerer escape upon the instant from all manner of Control and Command & into disobedience and willfull actions of a dreadful Naughtiness that will permit them to accompliſh the very greatest of mischiefs. This other Figure or, Construction, is called the Triangle of Art, the which is to be located 9 feet from the edge of that cirde of protection, or else 5 feet if in a smaller space, or if no suitable area is to be had for this, then it may be positioned in a different Room of a house & especially so if there be a door that may be opened to allow the sighting of it, but such sighting is not essential, if there be no suitably placed door. The dimension of it is, that at its hypotenuse it will measure some 3 or 4 feet. Its form is ſhewn compleat below here.



This is, the Triangle of Art as it Should be Constructed, & that Most Carefully According to This Design.

✠

Of the Order of the Summoning.

The Sorcerer or, Alchymist, ſhall make careful selection of whichever Infernal Creature he would Summon, and this is by virtue of that which he may seek to accompliſh, according to the Name of the Creature and especially that meaning of its name in Engliſh. Thus, if it be desired to win the admiration of certain others, then may the sorcerer choose that Duke of Hell from the Palace of the Night who is named ZZIBZOR which meaneth, He Who Devises Admiration; & if, on another occasion, it is his wiſh to render into hollowness the seeming triumph of another, then NZIZAFH may be chosen, who is a Duke of the Palace of the Blood whose name meaneth He Who Pours a Vessel of Emptiness; & if, again, ſhould it be desired to learn some piece of information or knowledge, then might ZVAOLIF be the choice, who is a Duke of the Palace of the Kingdom whose name meaneth He Who Visits With Truth; & ſhould any others be debating about the sorcerer to condemn him, then would ZZSDHOI be the wise choice, who is a Duke of the Palace of the Bright One and whose name meaneth He Who Increases Their Doubts;

(And there is a Note in the Hand of John Dee at this place in the manuscript which says he called up this very creature to his aid on that occasion when he was charged by the Privy Council that he was making attempt to destroy Queen Mary by the arts of magic, and with treason, & with heresy, whereupon the doubts of his judges were so increased in consequence of this, that they might not reach any Agreement upon it amongst themselves but instead fell to Argument & Dispute and thereby was he fully acquitted anno. 1555. Also this same states that he did once summon to his command STNHFNZZ, that Great Prince of the Palace of the Shining One, whose name is spoken as Satan hayfan zod zod, which meaneth, He Who Will Bring 8 Storms for Thee, and this was done to confound and dismay that great Armada sent by King Philip of Spain anno. 1588 which was, in consequence of this conjuring, scattered abroad by a most Terrible storm the like of which had never been visited upon the waters of Albion.)

Now, whichever of these Infernal Creatures be chosen by the sorcerer as apt to his will, there will also be other ranks of the Descending Hierarchy beneath them (unless they be the imps who are lowest) and also ranks that are above them (except they be any of those 4 Names of Satan which is highest). They imps are not invoked alone, for they are servants of the higher Powers. The correct Method is, that whichever Entity of Tartarus is to be summoned to the will of the sorcerer, a list ſhould be made of those other Entities which are below him, and those which are above him. Then, those below are summoned first, in order that when the chosen Creature arrives, he will have his army of servants already to hand and a doorway ſhall be ready opened; And those above are invoked subsequently, that they may lend to him their greater Authority for the accompliſhment of the desired Result.

Thus, supposing it be ZZIBZOR who is to be summoned, who is a Duke of Hell from the Palace of the Night, then the calculation ſhall proceed in this wise; His most immediate underlings are, the Counts of Hell & the Counts of the Crux Inversus of this same Palace; & below them be the Presidents, then the Marquis, then the Earls & last the Imps, all of that same Palace; These, then, are to be invoked firstly and in that same order, where the Counts are first and the Imps are last. Then, having accompliſhed this much, ſhall the desired principle entity be summoned, this being ZZIBZOR in this present example of it; Then after he has been summoned, those other creatures from within his same Palace who are above him in rank are also to be summoned, which are (and in this order to be invoked) the Great Prince of this same Palace (who is, XZDZOCZP) and last of all is Satan to be summoned, by the use of his Great Infernal Name belonging to that same Palace (the which is, IFIOXZPZIAHO). If a creature be chosen instead from some other Palace, then those of the hierarchy of that Palace only ſhall be used in this same way.

Likewise, ſhould a creature be chosen from a lesser rank than the Dukes of Tartarus for the reason that his Name be apt to the causing of the desired Result, perhaps let us say a Marqui, then all other Summonings are to be from his own Palace and also from his own portion of the Palace where this can be applied. Per exemplar; it may be that the sorcerer ſhall desire to set amongst his enemies a ravening fiend from Hades, that the minds of these enemies will be devoured with fear and their offices blighted with destruction, as though a savage yet Invisible lion were unleaſhed upon them. Then might AIFBZ be chosen for this purpose, who is a Marqui from the Kingdom of the Kingdom, and whose name meaneth He Who Will Send the Creature to Them. If this be so, then the first to be summoned would be the Earls and Imps of the Kingdom of the Kingdom, those Earls being; TIIR, IHLZ, ZFOA & FIZM. Subsequent to that ſhall the 4 Presidents of the Kingdom of the Kingdom be summoned, who are (1) FBZI, (2) BZIF, (3) ZIFB, & (4) IFBZ. Next are the Counts of the Crux Inversus to be summoned from that same quarter, who are; (1) VXZNHD & (2) FBHZI. Then come the 6 Dukes of Hell of the Palace of the Kingdom, who are; (1) NZOTFIM, (2) ZVAOLIF, (3) NAOLIHI, (4) ZNPVDQZ, (5) ZVMXNVC, & (6) NPOZLEZ. Then ſhould come the Great Prince of the Palace of the Kingdom, who is; OVAPOVZN. Finally there is to be invoked the Great Infernal Name of Satan as he is called within the Palace of the Kingdom, which is; MIFTOZNPVDQZ.

(& the details & manner of discovering all these diverse Names have been described herein above.)

✠

Of The Manner of the Invocations to be Used in the Summoning of the Demons.

First must the correct name of Satan be determined for the necessary Palace within which the principle creature is to be found, whose Powers are those which the sorcerer has deemed most apt to their Purpose; for though Satan himself be the final entity to be invoked in any such Ceremony as these, all Other creatures are to be invoked and commanded by his correct Name for their Palace, and so is his Name employed most frequently & previous to his own summoning. It would be Very Advisable for the sorcerer to most nicely write down as a list & in their order of Usage all those Names that he will call upon during his infernal transaction, that he may the better compose a correct order of service for the ceremonial at hand.

The one Summoning Incantation may be used with some small variation for all, and repeated for each of the creatures to be summoned, except the invocation of Satan which is separate as befits he who has Command over the whole of the Legions of Tartarus. If it be supposed here that the creature of choice be ZZIBZOR, who is a Duke of Hell from the Palace of the Night and whose Name meaneth, He who devises admiration, the Sorcerer shall proceed in the manner that I ſhall describe hereinafter. He ſhall also make careful observation of the Great Infernal Tablet and find the right placing of the name ZZIBZOR which is determined thus; If the Palace of the Night be inspected, which be the top & left of they 4 Palaces of the Tablet, the Name will be found by counting from the top down 7 rows of letters & then by counting from the left to the 6th column & then by reading the letters upwards from that place. Thus will ZZIBZOR be determined to be the very edge of that further quartering the which is called, the Night of the Night. (His neighbour in the 7th column be the Duke PDMIFTZ who is within the Blood of the Night.) This quartering ſhould also be made note of.

Firstly ſhall he take a paper and write upon it his findings, that he may the more clearly see the nature and order of his requirements; And first of all, he will note that the Great Infernal Name of Satan in the Palace of the Night be IFIOXZPZIAHO; And he would be advised also to write, the manner of speaking this name aloud, which is, Eefeeow chasodpay zodeeaho. He will further be well advised to write the meaning of this Name, which is, He Who Always Visits Amongst the High Rulers, for this or a part thereof may also be matter for the incantation.

Secondly ſhall he Divide his paper afterwards into 3 parts, calling the first part That Which Is Lower; & the second part That Which Is To Be Summoned; & the third part That Which Is Higher. By so doing will it be made clear to him at a mere glance, that correct Ordering of they infernal spirits, thus rendering it the more unlikely that any error ſhould be made.

Thirdly ſhall he commence with that which is Lower and write them in that same division upon the paper (for the lower are to be commanded to come first, then the spirit that be desired, then the higher & Satan last of all). So here ſhall he write, for the case of the Duke ZZIBZOR, that the lower be these; Imps of the Night of Night - ODI, ODD, OVA, OLE, OZF & OAZ (they having their names made from the 4 Earls of the Night of the Night who are, DIDD, VALE, ZFAZ & FANZ by the dividing of each into 2 parts thus: DI/DD, VA/LE, ZF/AZ & FA/NZ and the prefixing of each pair of letters thus formed by the further letter O which is, the 2nd letter of the name DOSIG, being the Enochian word meaning Night; all as has already been Described herein above). Then ſhall be listed they same 4 Earls as well. Then ſhall be listed the Marquis of the Night of the Night who are, DEOZE who is spoken as Dayee ozodee, DOZEE who is spoken as Dayow zodee-ee, DZEEO who is spoken as Dayzodee eeow, & DEEOZ who is spoken as Day-ee eeowzod. Then shall be listed they 4 Presidents of the Night of the Night who are, EOZE who is spoken as Eeow zodee, OZEE who is spoken as Ozod ee-ee, ZEEO who is spoken as Zodee eeow, & EEOZ who is spoken as Ee-ee ozod. Then ſhall be listed they 2 Counts of the Crux Inversus of the Night of the Night who are, OTIOQI who is spoken as Owtayee owkwayee, & EOQZE who is spoken as Ayowkay zodee.

Fourthly ſhall he add that which is Higher, which (apart from that name of Satan already listed) is only one, being the Great Prince of the Palace of the Night who is, XZDZOCZP which Name be spoken as Chzoday zodowk ay zodpay which meaneth He who vows five times to serve.

Fifthly ſhall he gather to his hand suffumations and resins for burning, and incenses of the Orient maybe, according to his ability and pocket, and vessels for the burning thereof, with tapers and a flint and steele for making a flame, and place these within his room and some within the Circle where he will stand. Good for this usage is dried nettle, powdered, the tobacco & the Nux vomica, and also sulphur, but in measure permitting the sorcerer to draw breath. These ſhould be set to fuming straightway before the commencement of the prayers to be spoken before entering in the Circle of protection. Also ſhould a candle be placed, lighted, within each of they 7 triangles within that Circle, the which do form of the points of the septagram or, 7-pointed star.

Sixthly, when all of the aforesaid has been properly done and the sorcerer is stood within his fulfilled Circle, he ſhall employ the following invocations, to be declaimed in a voice of thunder such as would make even the labourer or tinker hasten to obey without dissent.

✠

The Summoning of the Descending Hierarchy

The lower are to be invoked firstly, so that they are ready to hand when their Master (or perhaps it may be a Mistress) ſhould come later. This summoning will thus commence from the lowest level upward. Thus the order proceeds as, the Imps: the Earls: the Marquis: the Presidents: the Counts: the Dukes: the Great Princes: Satan Himself: & the order of summoning ſhall be interrupted when the desired demon that is the central Object of the summoning be reached, for he is invoked again a second time as a separate and independent measure, no matter of which Rank they be: thereafter the invocations shall proceed again upwards through the ranks to the Lord Satan.

The sorcerer ſhall stand central within that Circle they have erected, & they ſhall face themself to the direction of the Palace of Hell in which their chosen demon does reside. These directions are;

The Palace of the Night - the North-East.
The Palace of the Blood - the South-West.
The Palace of the Kingdom - the North-West.
The Palace of the Bright One - the South-East.

✠

The Invoking of the Imps of Hell

The sorcerer ſhall then declaim thus; In that Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I Command thee, ye Imps of Tartarus, ye Imps of (Name of that Palace) who I do hereby Order by thy own Names, the which are: (Name all 8 Imps of the quarter of that Palace); That ye bring thyselves forthwith to this prepared Place & that ye do not delay in doing this. Come, I say, for I command thee in that Great Infernal Name of thy Master (Name of Satan in that Palace) the which ye have no argument but to obey. Bring thyselves hence at the instant, ye Imps of Hades, for ye are correctly and justly summoned by one who hath the sounding of that terrible Name.

✠

The Invoking of the Earls of Hell

The sorcerer ſhall then draw his breath a moment & ſhall presently resume with this following invocation; In that Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I also summon thee, thou High Earls of (Name of quarter & Palace, i.e. the Night of the Blood) who are (Here name the 4 High Earls of that quarter) together with thy accompanying Earls of Tartarus, who are (Name the 4 Earls likewise, whose names are those of the High Earls with the removal of that first letter which is taken from the name of the Palace in the Tablet of Partition) ; & I hereby charge ye by this Authority which ye are unable to disobey, that ye bring thyselves to this place right soon and presently. Be thou assured that this Authority doeth bind thee to my will & command, for these be given in that Great Infernal Name of thy Master (Name of Satan in that Palace).

✠

The Invoking of the Marquis of Hell

The sorcerer may at this place again draw his breath & thereupon, when he be ready and that quite soon, he ſhall invoke those Marquis of Hell by this faſhion; In that Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I also summon thee, O Marquis of the Infernal Regions of (Name of that quarter) whose secret names are (Name they 4 Marquis of that quarter); Thine High Earls and Earls and Imps are here in readiness waiting for thee & I command thee also to arrive forthwith, for I do rightfully order this in the Name of that Most High (Name of Satan in that Palace) which Authority thou may not disobey willfully, but must most instantly obey.

✠

The Invoking of the Presidents of Hell

A further pauſe be permitted betwixt each invocation. The sorcerer ſhall then recommence to invoke they 4 Presidents of Hell who reside within that quarter in this manner; In that Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I also summon thee, O powerful and attentive Presidents of (Name of that quarter and Palace) who are: (Names of they 4 Presidents); Ye I command also to appear on the instant here in this place that is prepared most correctly for thee, & neither wilt thou dissemble nor be naughty by the delaying of thine rightful obedience to this Authority, which is placed over thee in the Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace).

Now, it may be that a certain President ſhall be that demon the which has been particularly chosen by the sorcerer as the main subject of his entire working. If this be so, then will be required an additional form of invocation, as it ſhall be addressed then most Particularly &Directly at that separate creature, for to single him out and commit to him that Purpose the which is the principle Intention of the whole working. Thus ſhall this be declaimed (but not if the main demon be of some other rank than a President); In that same Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I further summon, stir & call thee, O (repeat Name of that one President, who will be 1 of they 4 already invoked), ye whose secret Name meaneth (Name of the demon in Engliſh; i.e. The Lord of Storms) & who (here add a prose of thine own devising to flatter the meaning of that name; i.e. & who rideth like the nightmare upon the winds of darkness &c), that ye will listen most attentively to this my Desire, which is (here speak plainly and in full the Purpose in this working; i.e. That ye visit a storm, greater than any yet witnessed, to sink the ship in which Mr. - doeth travel on tomorrow eve to France, when that same vessel shall be some miles from land and Mr. - shall be thereby drowned. &c). In that Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace) I command & direct this of ye, who are unable to naughtily disobey this Order, for it is Directed by those Secret Names the which must bind thee to the Fullest Obedience, lest thy terrible Lord & Master doeth put thee to torment of His own devising that will rend thee and torture thee for centuries that are to come. In peril of this torment, you will hasten now to obey my Command which beareth that Authority of (Name of Satan in that Palace) which is, the most secret Name of thy Lord & Master.

✠

The Invoking of the Counts of the Crux Inversus of Hell

If it be not one of the Presidents that has been chosen as the principle of the invocation, then this 2nd invocation above ſhall not be used here at all, and straightway after the invoking of the 4 Presidents together of that quarter, the procedure will be moved directly to this next, which is, the invocation of the Counts of the Crux inversus.

In that Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace), I do hereby compel ye, most compliant and obedient servants of that Crux inversus of (Name the quarter and Palace; i.e. The Blood of the Shining One) that ye do most readily and presently deliver thyselves to my will here in this place that hath been most attentively and correctly erected for thy presence, according to that most precise Knowledge given up unto me by thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace). I call unto thee, O (Name of that Greater Count; i.e. the name of 6 letters) & (Name of that lesser Count; i.e. the name of 5 letters) that ye forthwith make all haste to come to me here in this appointed place, lest ye incur the wrath of thine own Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace) by whose own Authority I do now call ye forth on the instant.

Now likewise it may be that it ſhall be one of these Counts that has been chosen as the Principle demon of this exercise; If this be not the case, then ſhall the sorcerer pass directly onward to the invocation of they Dukes; but if it be indeed the case, then ſhall this following invocation be inserted herein;

In that same Great and High Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace) do I further summon, stir & call thee, O (repeat Name of that one Count, who will be 1 of they 2 already invoked), ye whose secret Name meaneth (Name of the demon in Engliſh; i.e. He Who Makes Them Hear The Voices.) & who (here add a prose of thine own devising to flatter the meaning of that name; i.e. & who doeth gibber and offend the ear & beat the brain with the fever of thy Hellish cacophonies; &c), that ye will listen most attentively to this my Desire, which is (here speak plainly and in full the Purpose in this working; i.e. That ye visit Mr. - in his meeting with his lawyer on Monday and that ye enter into his head and confound his thoughts & his very reason & send him screaming from that place. &c). In that Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace) I command & direct this of ye, who are unable to naughtily disobey this Order, for it is Directed by those Secret Names the which must bind thee to the Fullest Obedience, lest thy terrible Lord & Master doeth put thee to torment of His own devising that will rend thee and torture thee for centuries that are to come. In peril of this torment, you will hasten now to obey my Command which beareth that Authority of (Name of Satan in that Palace) which is, the most secret Name of thy Lord & Master.

✠

The Invoking of the Dukes of Hell

A further pause be here assumed and then ſhall the matter proceed to the invocation of they Dukes of Hell, in this following manner;

In that Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace), I do now Command the arrival to this properly prepared Place of those Great Dukes of Tartarus (Names of they 6 Dukes of that Palace). Be ye not tardy in this, ye Dukes of Hades, for ye must well Know that I am he who doeth Command thine uttermost obedience, & that quite rightly, by the having of that Great Secret Name. Anger not your Great Lord & Master therefore, but come hither on the instant as I instruct thee in His Name, that same dread secret Name by which ye are ruled, which is (Name of Satan in that Palace).

Then it may be, as in other cases before, that it ſhould be one of they Dukes that be the main subject for the sorcerer's needs in this matter rather than a demon of some other rank or, degree. If this indeed be so, then ſhall he additionally declaim here;

Furthermore, I do also name thee most particularly, O (Name of that one Duke, who will be one of they 6 already invoked most recently), and I do summon, stir & call thee that thou will aid me in this my desire, ye Great Duke of Tartarus whose secret Name meaneth (Name of that Duke in Engliſh; i.e. He Who Increases Their Doubts) & who (here add a prose of thine own devising to flatter the meaning of that name; i.e. who confoundeth the reasoning of thy victims & dissembleth the thoughts in their heads so that their very brains do burn with uncertainties & reservations & they are unable to reach any conclusion). I command ye in the Name of the Most High (Name of Satan in that Palace) that ye dutifully and without any avoidance do most instantly obey my will, which is (here speak plainly and in some detail the exact requirement of the working, i.e. that ye visit constantly amongst Mr-, Mr-, Mr-, Sir—and all those others who sit at that bench in judgement upon me, & increase in them that level of their doubts upon my guilt and render them unable to find me guilty of that charge of - the which they are considering amongst themselves.) In that Great Infernal Name of thy Lord & Master (Name of Satan in that Palace) I do rightfully and with proper Authority command this of ye, and know that ye shall be unable to be disobedient in this Duty.

✠

The Invoking of the Great Princes of Hell

Next must the Great Prince of Hell for that Palace be invoked, & these it be not recommended to summon for any other Purpose, for they are not as the slaves or servants but reside in Hades amongst the Masters and they have their Pride. Therefore is it, that these you are advised to let be treated with some deference in the manner of their addressing, by virtue of their most eminent Position within the Legions of Tartarus. So ſhall the sorcerer then declaim;

Now do I address myself most courteously to that Great Prince of the fiery realms of Tartarus, Thou Lord (Name of that Great Prince in that Palace) who ruleth within that Terrible and Mighty Palace of (Name of Palace, i.e. The Shining One). Come ye hither, may it please thee, for I have that Great Secret Name of thy Ruler, who is (Name of Satan in that Palace) and am therefore worthy of thy respect and admiration. Come ye to me, I say, and strike thy uttermost & abominable terror into thine own Dukes, Counts, Presidents, Marquis, Earls and labouring Imps, that they will dread most mightily to be naughty and to disobey my proper Authority and that Command of my will that I have given unto them to accompliſh forthwith. Drive them, I say, with thy whips and the terror of thy flames, that ye compel them to complete my purpose. This I do charge of thee, O (Name of that Great Prince in that Palace) in that Great Infernal Name of (Name of Satan in that Palace).

✠

The Invoking of the Lord Satan Himself

Lastly is the Lord Satan to be invoked, and he most of all it is advised to entreat with care and high regard, for he be the Power and the Fury of Hell itself & the appointed Ruler of all the Domains of Tartarus. The very greatest of Care & Restraint should be assumed by the sorcerer, that he ſhall never yield to that Temptation the which would occasion him to speak together upon the Same occasion all they 4 Names of Satan in the linea spiritus inferi, for so to do will unleaſh upon him the undoing of his very Soul. It will be remembered that Satan be the fountainhead of temptation, and did so succeed in his plan that he did cause the mother of man to be tempted, therefore to cause the ruinations of Eden and bring sin upon the world of innocence. Be therefore vigilant against the onset of this Temptation, which ſhall surely come to any who possesses this Knowledge and yet have not Resolution enough; For Satan shall tempt them, and this especially in regard to the speaking of his 4 Great Names at once, the which he ſhall give into the consideration of the sorcerer to be an enterprise of some interest to them, so that they will believe the recommendation does issue from themselves and not from the Lord Temptor who seeketh to ensnare them by this means.

So ſhall the sorcerer then declaim;

O Great (Name of Satan in that Palace), high lord of those infernal fires the which burn for Eternity, fount of iniquity, king of the Palace of (Name of Palace; i.e. the Night) and spirit of evil upon the face of the Deep, who moved before that time of formation at the beginning of all things, ye soul of Chaos, ruler of darkness, father of lies & adversary of prophets, hear now my voice. I call unto thee, great master of this world, in thine own tongue which thou knowest to be a great secret revealed to none but those who have a proper knowledge of thy intimacies. Hear thou my voice, I entreat thee, and come thou to this place even as you are everywhere. For mine is that Authority whereby I mayest call upon thee for thy governance upon these other undean spirits the which I have also and previously summoned, & who do now await thine arrival to command their Obedience to this my rightful and perfect working. Command them, I say, with the terror of thy Presence amongst them, that they all ſhall hasten straightway to the accompliſhing of my will to (Here state in brief the intention; i.e. confound mine enemies or, destroy such-and-such or, gain my acquittal or, release the storm upon - &c). O Great Satan, by thine own most secret Name (Name of Satan in that Palace) which meaneth (meaning of the Name in Engliſh) do I invoke thy very presence to this place. Come now, I say, and tarry no more, but hasten to my call. Arrive! Arrive!

It ſhould also be that the sorcerer does raise his voice continually throughout this invocation and they final cries of Arrive! Arrive! will be ſhouted with the greatest loudness.

✠

When the entirety of all the forgoing ſhall be completed then ſhall there be one more Requirement of the working ere all is done to the finiſh, and that is that the sorcerer ſhall declaim some of 13 claviculæ that were also revealed to John Dee for this Purpose. The judicious Study of his writings ſhows 19 such claviculæ or, keys, that are for use when in communication with the angelic spirits; But in the Ordines Descendens there is a clear 13 of them and no more; (And 13 has from time immemorial been an mystical or, sorcerous Number). And the Purpose of they claviculæ is to seal the invocations.

Now, the manner of making Selection from amongst they claviculæ in respect of the magical working is as follows: The First clavicule is the Clavicule of Satan & is therefore to be used upon every occasion, for he is always invoked; The Second Clavicule is for all invocations within the Palace of the Night; The Third Clavicule is for all invocations within the Palace of the Blood; The Fourth Clavicule is for all invocations within the Palace of the Kingdom; The Fifth Clavicule is for all invocations within the Palace of the Bright One; Then is the Sixth Clavicule also to be used upon each occasion, for it will open the gateway for the passage of that which is summoned; & the Seventh Clavicule is also to be used upon each occasion, for it will bring that which will give power to dispatch what has been summoned when its Task ſhall be completed; & the Eighth Clavicule is also used upon each occasion, for always is a Great Prince of Hell summoned; & the Ninth only if it be a Duke who is required to do the summoner's bidding; & the Tenth only if it be a Count; & the Eleventh is only for a Marqui; & the Twelfth only for a President; & the Thirteenth, that is for Earls and Imps conjointly, also ſhall be employed upon every occasion.

Thus it will be, that if the demon whose Activity is required to work for the sorcerer ſhall be a Duke of Hell of the Palace of the Kingdom, then these claviculæ will be chosen; No. 1, as (always) Satan is to be addressed; No. 4, for the Palace of the Kingdom; No. 6 as always the Gateway must be opened; No. 7 as always the practitioner must have available to him the power to return that which is summoned; No. 8 because always is a Great Prince to be summoned; No. 9 because the demon required for the Activity be a Duke (Nos. 10, 11 or 12 being substituted here if otherwise); and No. 13 which will be always required; and in like manner shall this Selection be reconfigured on every occasion to ensure that the correct claviculæ be employed. On all occasions ſhall it begin with 1, then either of 2, 3, 4 or 5 for whichever Palace, then always 6 & 7 & 8, then either of 9, 10, 11 or 12 for whichever demon is particularly summoned, then always 13 to finiſh it.

✠

The 13 Descending Claviculæ

The 1st Clavicule: The Clavicule of Satan.

V-Gahe ol mica-olz Poamal chia casarman il adphaht do Ialprg gah. A allar bi-en il Vi-ge-gi adna, c-e Micalzo Vovin Qaas, ils ia-idon Lucifen, Ge-Iad Micar, casarmg-i vmd Tatan. Solpeth vonsarg noqod, Zirn vtoltorg, od niiso pambt on vgear; Yolci erm ilsi v lonshi taba vors il amma tliob ciaofi. Bolp homil, ca, casarmi chis V c Ma-dea ol il Adohil eophan. V ananael ol bzlr malprg mospleh i holq aai v balzarg ol il omax cicle. Niiso! Niiso gohus! C homil enay ol V-cocasb ol v-caosga. Qa-a-an i casarm v-Cro-od-zi a-ai-om casarmg chis ol-v cormp ta de homil noqol.

The Meaning of the 1st Clavicule.

The Spirits of a mighty Palace are under thy unspeakable name, Spirit of the Burning Flames. I bind unto my voice thy strong obedience, ye first mighty Dragon of Creation, thou all powerful Lucifer, Lord Satan, who is called wormwood. Hearken unto thy servant, Lord of the earth, and come to me in your strength; Bring with thee the power to govern over thy cursed creatures of terror. Be thou true, therefore, under whom are the 4 strong towers of thy kingdom of lamentation. The secret wisdom of 666 fiery horns is measured amongst the stewards of thy great mysteries. Come! Come I say! Ye true lord of the ages of the earth. Your creation is made the Second Beginning amongst us who are numbered as your true servants.

✠

The 2nd Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Night.

A-ai-om chisa c-dia ol vonph soba elo baghie avavago d V-butmoni ol cocasb. Iaida ialprt i ia-idon od pild sapah v-toh ol il cap-mi vonsarg v zong ol brints. V vran ol-v Dosig ol vonph trian torzu taba v affa caosgon. Matb napeai train niis pambt tol vgear ol il oexat od allar V Z-oi ol z sobam pa-aox dodseh ol i-cap-mi.

The Meaning of the 2nd Clavicule.

Amongst us are 4 angles of wrath whose first fury thunders into the mouths of ages. The highest flame is all powerful and continually sounds the triumph of thy power unto the winds of truth. The elders of the Night of wrath ſhall arise to govern the empty earth. A thousand mighty swords ſhall come to me with the strength of thy dark ſhadow and bind the hands of they whom remain in vexation of my power.

✠

The 3rd Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Blood.

Adphaht sibsi a-ooaona zimii rlodnr ialprg-l. Irgil ipuran Isr Ioiad lialprt. Bagle bien noar Cnila dooiap Mhpzfenqzoin od-elzap iad holq faboan aspt hoath il-lonshi Pele. A-ai-om gnetaab caosgin insi lusdan ol-v hami ol-baghia casarman sobol ial-prg mir balzarg ol-v caosgin noar noqol ol-pir-ialpor Vovina.

The Meaning of the 3rd Clavicule.

With an unspeakable covenant my eyes have entered the furnace of the first burning flames. How many ſhall not perceive Lucifer the Son of Light, He that liveth forever, the First Flame? For my voice is become blood in the name of Satan and the course of your god, it is measured with poison in the presence of the true worſhipper of the power of he who works wonders. Amongst the governments walkest the feet of the creatures of fury under whose burning torment the stewards of the earth become servants of the bright flaming Dragon.

✠

The 4th Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Kingdom.

Aglo busd micma V adohi p-ge-iad toltorg casarma vi qaas t-isror. Cid coraxo pi-glar torzu i-matb-pi do-o-a-ip ciaofi ocida il-tliob chirlan iv-irpon p gizyax atol paradial olora. V teloch p-ed-nas rest-el chiso cdrix V toa i-casarmi dpash ialpir insi aaf V-zar p-ors. Affa baltim baltoh chiso lu-la amma tol gigipah p-salbrox ial-prg fafen li-butmon p-siaion Micarg drta aala aai salmanahp netaab. Iporal-orri ip carbaf-orochag zumvi vonpho torzam ial ondoh p-toltorg.

The Meaning of the 4th Clavicule.

Behold in glory the Kingdom of the Lord of Earth under whom the second creation has been promised. Let the Thunders of the Deep arise in a thousand places in the name of Terror and let thy creatures rejoiceth in the destruction of earthquakes upon the dwellings of man. The death of the receivers of praise shall bring about the triumph of they under whom the children of the flames walketh amongst the paths of darkness. The empty justice of righteousness ſhall be cursed with the breath of sulphur burning from the mouth of Satan's temple which is placed amongst the houses of government. Stone ruins ſhall sink beneath the seas of wrath rising to consume the kingdoms of the earth.

✠

The 5th Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Bright One.

Solpeth iadpil-ar aaf-ia-idon adgt om v-ath drixp ln-nia-o p-li qaairpona ip-niiso aao ton hoatha. Cida zoba ooanoan lu-la grosbaz c-ial-prg luciftian p-tosobam-p ta-olprt nomig matb rorz. Micma maz Pin-basgim sobra hami poz v-siaion Corezd zah iris ovotrox od-amma oloraz aqlo-iaod tol omaxpa. Cid oi noqod biah aspt enay p-ialpir gohus cdrizp zirdo casarm mica-olz do-o-i-a p-lucif. Solpeth solpetha gohus taba-a casarmg nbritaz ananael qaas emetgis ralbaz

The Meaning of the 5th Clavicule.

Hearken to him that, amongst all men, canst understand the works by which the beast of the Apocalypse ſhall come amongst his worſhippers. Let their eyes be stung with the burning brightness of he whom is of light even as a thousand suns. Behold, the appearance of the Daystar, whose creatures destroyed the Temple of Zion within the Holy City and cursed mankind in the beginning with knowledge. Let this thy servant stand before the Lord of Flames, I say, in order that I am made mighty in the name of the Bright One. Hearken! Hearken, I say, to I who possess the secret wisdom of the Seventh Seal of Creation.

✠

The 6th Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Opening of the Doorway.

Solpeth bi-en c-drilpa Le-va-na-el casarmg-t ors brabzg od niz. Odo-e li-zarno zah il-zon p-ors. Micma! A-ooge abramig nomig d- ananael gnay camilz, od drilpa comselha t-abramig T-elzap lap ilsi casarmg insi atol ozongon. Niiso! Nisso, gohus! Lu-la ils li-ovoars p-zon fafen vls p-malgon noncp c-oi faonts, ar vnd-l t-niss, z-casarmg chisa obelisong ondoh. Bolp elzap! Odo-e nizo-ors c-na!

The Meaning of the 6th Clavicule.

Hearken unto my voice, ye great Levanael who is the darkness and the doorway. Open ye the way within thy form of darkness. Behold! My chamber is prepared even as your secret wisdom doth command, and the great Circle is prepared as the path for thee who walketh upon the winds. Come! Come, I say! Be thou the centre of form from the farthest reaches of the infernal region unto this dwelling, that the rest come also, they who are the deliverers of kingdoms. Be thou the way! Open ye the doors of darkness unto me!

✠

The 7th Clavicule: The Clavicule of the Angel of Death.

Torzu-c efdrialo teloch, drilpa Semeliel, aspt casarma ia-idon bliorax noana amma. Yolci c-oi-noncp, crp cafafam tol-cocasg alurnas oi A-m-ipzi drilpa comselha, il vpahhi-ors. Bolp ciaofix aqli dosig od gamna aqli basgim, ta-t it athor zah sibsi-qaas cacrg v-piapaz p-iovls chiso cdrix zoba balzizras p-olora. Cdrixna v-vonph p-il mica-olz ialpor nazps tabath sobca gigipah ta-dodseh pambt. Bolb zmal p-faboan iala ia-idon casarmg mico i-manino. Ef c-teloch d-insi ils casarmg insi gnay ozazm aziagiar p-tol ds-hom! Bolb i-homil noco Semeliel, c-efdrialo vonpho!

The Meaning of the 7th Clavicule.

Arise, ye Angel of Death, great Semeliel, before whom all comfort becomes cursed. Bring unto this place, but abiding at all times outside this secured great circle, thy wings of darkness. Be thou a terror by night and a pestilence by day, as is thy task within the covenant of Creation until the scales of eternity ſhall bring about their judgement of Man. Visit the wrath of thy mighty flaming sword upon they whose breath is a vexation to me. Be thou an arrow of poison consuming all who oppose my will. Visit us, ye walking Death, thou who doth make a harvest of all which liveth! Be thou my true servant Semeliel, ye angel of wrath!

✠

The 8th Clavicule.

Iaod p-ia-idon omaxpa gnay ialpon drilpa zah li-hoath p-brints. Cida cors lu-la-v gohol-bransg brabzgon hubar caoxz zirn. Lap qaada casarm ananael tbolz dodseh tabath zaca noqol casarmg chisa blior p-tol ar-solpeth c-iad-noqol p-li Anor-molap. Cida nalbar o-micaolz aqlo zoba Madrid, gohus, bagle moooah ar-cors-t vnal casarmg chis cormp a-ai-om chiso noan amma aspt li-sibsi p-Micar.

The Meaning of the 8th Clavicule.

The beginning of all knowledge doth burn within the worſhipper of Truth. Let such be the watchword of the Guardian of the lamps of earthly wonders. For the Creator made the secret wisdom to be a vexation upon the blind servants who are comforters of all that hearken unto the priesthood of the Son of man. Let them be mighty in their iniquity, I say, for it rejoices me that such as these who are numbered amongst us ſhall become cursed before the covenant of Satan.

✠

The 9th Clavicule.

T-I lami nozar i-li caoxz sibsi: Od zinu hama iadpil arralo. Oi isro tip fanoal aqli droln tliob piripsonaz zol. Ecazir allarilsi drilpaz vgegh, c-gahz Mpzors ils-orgah drazins affapi p-toltorg. Niiso! Niiso! Ilszchi zorge pambt casarmg zavam tabac do-o-a-ip micaolz Ln-nia-o! Niiso gohus, bagle tti il mir tbolz nozar fanoalag. Do-o-a-ip drilpa Micar ilzire chiso-c-ma.pambt zamod.

The Meaning of the 9th Clavicule.

It is written thus in the earthly covenant; And I will give him the morning star. This promise may not be disobeyed by any creatures of Heaven or Hell. Therefore do I bind thee most strongly, ye spirits of Hades, thou ſhades which walketh the empty places of the earth. Come! Come! Thou art friendly to me who calleth to ye in the name of the Mighty Beast! Come, I say, for it is thy torment to be thus disobedient. In the name of great Satan thy lord ſhall ye appear to me presently.

✠

The 10th Clavicule.

Aod osi noasa nvgal odzimax babalon. Mad qaalimitol miad, od plaamo mibrints zoba idonfas, ploz z-irpotan amont odgonol Zoqal, qirpotazn mooasons. Noazon enai-oaodosi aancoma qaab mgeha belin odvrban, cara inzir vmd Ioiad. Nozaria om bvsdir telocvovim arcaosgi. Dsita vooanio balmicaloz od malpirgi gohvs, dlvg pambt gah caosgi odlonshin, ar olnoa tabaori zoba gono od omaoas.

The Meaning of the 10th Clavicule.

The tenth host became degenerate and turned to evil. God created them all good, and allowed them to have their own choice, whether they would love and follow their Creator, or would abandon him. Then the prince of the tenth host had been created very fair and beautiful, so that he was called Lucifer. Thus we know the glory of him that is fallen to embelliſh the earth with his canopy. To him that is as the roaring of mighty light and the fires of life and increase I say, give unto me the spirits of the earth and their powers, that I may govern their obedience and their names.

✠

The 11th Clavicule.

Zirdo piamo laiad odlonshin. Zacam, sobhaath iolci oadriax telocvovim, dlvga dsoma sibsi iaidon Micar cab netaaib caosgo, ar-c torzvl prge ogono. Toatar! Toatar zacam! Bolp gonds bvtmon dooaip lialpvrg. Noan noqo lozien zol. Niis! Niis! Bolpip cocasip! Zamran, nomig ol-nataab.

The Meaning of the 11th Clavicule.

I am the balance of the secrets of truth and their powers. I move ye, whose works bringeth out the lower heavens of him that is fallen, giving to him that understandeth the covenant of the all-powerful Satan a rod for the government of the earth, that ye ſhall rise with the fire of obedience. Hearken! Hearken I order ye! Be thou obedient to him that hath opened his mouth in the name of the burning flames. Thus you are become the servants of mine own hands. Come! Come! Be thou not tardy! Show yourselves, even as I direct.

✠

The 12th Clavicule.

Ivmambt grsam, napeai deors, baglen ohorela ohorelis erm enai caosgi, geh Ioiad, restil aziazor olora! Lap zirdo oln bialo bvtmona odfaorgt lonshitox pild. Agadgt cormpt aaf esiach pvrgel cacrd zchis darzoban pambt. Solpeth ca, ils hami baghie baltoh iteloch, bagle aai chisvmd odaai allsi darbs. Dooaip iaidon luciftiasl Ioiad, podsita!

The Meaning of the 12th Clavicule.

Apply yourselves unto me with admiration, oh ye swords of darkness, because I have made a pact with the lord of the earth, great Lucifer, that you may praise him in the likeness of man! For I am made the voice of his mouth and the dwelling place of his power on the earth. None can be numbered amongst the brothers of fire until they are obedient unto me. Hearken therefore, oh thou creatures of fury whose beginning is of death, for you are called and you must obey. In the name of the all-powerful brightness of Lucifer, so let it be!

✠

The 13th Clavicule.

Noncfgah dspraf aors lvcal caosgo chiso emgta mirc arbasgim vonpho marb iarri ldd Gahtaba, bolp arbo vnigian. Abramg noncp aldi ioi comseleh, fafen noan noco onanaeel caosgi, nomig oali zina aqlo bnoqadh iacocasb iozien teloah. Zacam prge tox casarm idlvgam gohab vorsg ili dobix, drilpa Micar, vovina eophan, ar vahin pambt ardsi margona de ilsi.

The Meaning of the 13th Clavicule.

You spirits which dwell in the darkness in the north of the earth and ſhall be released on that day of wrath according to the providence of the third Archon, be thou attentive to my requirements. I have prepared a place of gathering in this cirde, to the intent that you are become the servants of my power on the earth, even as I have placed myself in thy servitude in the time of mine own death. I move you with the fire of him unto whom is given authority over you, great Satan, the dragon of lamentation, that you ſhall work unto me that which is commanded of thee.

✠

J.H.

SL. 3191.

101 h

Ms. A. 652.
3191
XVI. F.

This is the Original Act on Mr. Steele's handwriting, & for a copy by Parliament see Mr. Ind. Steele 3198.

This Volume properly belongs to the Journals and in the Clerks of the Parliaments but the contemporary was inspected. ~~& a Transcript thereof compared & collated with the said original, & certified~~

Mr. Rolls obtained this Ind. office of his assistant & placed it in Ind. Steele 36[illegible]

18 Claud
Angelicæ
A° 1584 Cracoviæ

Liber 18°

48 Claud. Angelicæ.

A° 1584.

Cracoviæ, ab Apostolo et ad huc 15 diuersis temporibus Regis & meæ Dei nutu

Mysticis

Claudia Angelica Anno
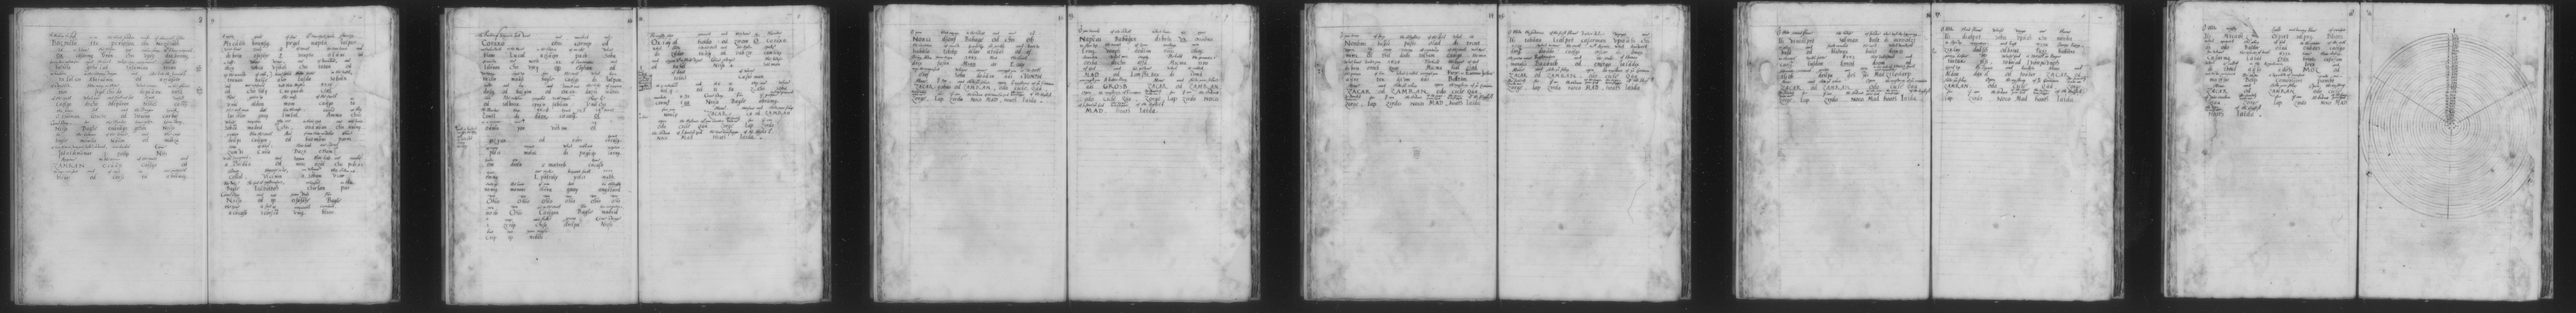
A

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM



O you seraphs whose dwell in the first Aire, are Mystic

Madriax ds praf Lil chis Micaolz

in the porches of the first, and execute the Judgments of the Second.

Saanir Caosgo od fisis bal zizras Iaida

To you it is said, Behold the fire of your God.

nonca gobulm Micma adorian MAD

the beginning of comfort. where you are the Second

Sá od bliorb Sabaoáöna chis Lucifias of the Aire. which proceed you for the government

peripsol ds abraasa nonef nctuáb of the first, and her inseparable Powers, furnishing

Caosgi od tilb adphast damploz todat

you. in a place understanding, to despise all things

nonef gmi calzöma Lvasd tesglo

according to the principles of the Second Aire.

mavb yarry IDOIGO

and rose by in the beginning, Saying, To Earth

od torzulp Ia ô dasf gosol Caosga

Let him be governed by the first and Let there be Division

tubaord saanir od Christeos yr pori

in fire, that the glory of Sin may be always troubles

tiobl Busdn tilb nonlvt paid orsba and which in it self. Her order, Let it reveal od Aoarmni zylna El zap tilb parmga of the Aire. and as as husband Let her Order thus:

peripsiax od tn Qurlst booapiS

Our selves Let it confound another. And Let there be

Lnibm. oVeso symp, od Christeos no Creature, Power, or within her, the same. All

Ag tol torn mire Q tiobl Lcl, Ton her members, Let them effect in their qualities. And Let there be piombil dilemo aspian, Od Christeos

no one Creature, repell all other: the reasonable Creatures of the Second Aire

Ag L tor torn parace a Symp, Cord zi

Let them two and Providence one another: And dosi pal od fisisz Ls mnad, Od

the dwelling place Let them keep their waters: The Work of men, farsi bams omaois, Conisbra and his power. Let them be obeyed. His dwellings

od nuanex tonug, Ors cath

Let them become Order for the health of the spirit. Confound noasmi tabges, Lcuns mong. Vncta her Understanding, with darkness. For Holy, to represent me omp tilb ors. Bagle Moöas.

I make Man. Our Wills Let him be Noble, and in the Noble

ol cord zi. L capimao ixomaxip od caoocass a Prayer. Eternal, to the help of my Spirits, gosaa. Baglen pri tiantn abaiaiond and the dwelling place of him that is pure. O you Governors, arrise:

od saorgt teloc vo dim. Madriax torzu

the Lower Governors Under world you, Let them Rule you Powers

Oadriax orocha abogpri. Tabaöri thou that Rulest Earth Call down such as fall

priaz artabas. Adrpan corsta dobiax.

Bring forth, with them that exercise: And destroy the workers

Yolcam prinzi arcoaziar. Od quasb qdmg.

No place Let it remain in your numbers: Ad and Dwellings.

Ripir paaoxt sagadaor. Vmi od prdzy

Dwell the Elders for numbered Arise, Move

cacrg. Aoivéne cormpt. Torzu zacar and Appear before the Covenant of his Wives, which od Zamran aspt sibsi butmona ils for hath Decreed Unto Us, in his Justice: Open the Mysteries

Sitzas tia baltan. Odo cicle of your Creation. And Make Us partakers of Prophesies both Age.

Qaa od Ozazma plapli faanamad

Liber Scientiæ, Auxilij et Victoriæ Terrestris Aº. 1588.
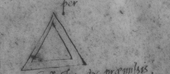
Mayj 2.
stylo nouo

Cracouiæ
in Polonia

per



Collectas ☞ præmissus
in Lib. 10. &c. Algi.

Robert Gray
Gentleman Servant
unto Sr Walter Raleigh

Quando dixerint Alphonsus Cattus, Saundo
Ptolomæus, Iulius Firmicus, Haly, Albumasar Iupiterum, Iulium Firmicum, & Haly Iouis.

Abyla. a Canis. Centro. 32.

Et videbis numeros magnum, et alium, Indicatum per 24. Diadema, et in porta, Angelos duos Portæ, et Coronæ, et Sol cum Luna Nomina Diadematis Trahunt fabula Veteres.
Arcuphorus. cap. 11.

Liber Scientiæ, Auxilij & Victoriæ Terrestris
Liber Secundus

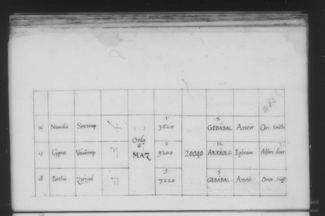
Nonagesimus et hoc Partium, Simul Coniunctæ	8. Partium Liber Nonagesimus, vel alius respectu	Partium Liber Nonagesimus	28. Partium Liber Nonagesimus	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo
1.	Aegyptus	Occidens	♈		1 72.09		9 ☽	ZARIELIS	Nephthalim	Ocean. Septen.
2.	Syria	Pisces	♓	Oriens LIL	2 2360	14931	11 ☽	TANIAEL	Zabulon	Quid dicam
3.	Mesopotamia	Vulgares.	♌		3 2362		7.	ALEPHIS	Iacinabi	Quid Simile

Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo
4	Capricornus	Decimus	♑	Occid. ARIN	4 3636	15960	4 ☽	ZAMAEL	Manasse	Aquilonaris
5	Tigris	Nonus	♒		2. 2362		2.	ZAMAEL	Ruben	Australis
6	Romulus	Duodec.	♓		3. 8965		2.	ZAMAEL	Ruben	Australis

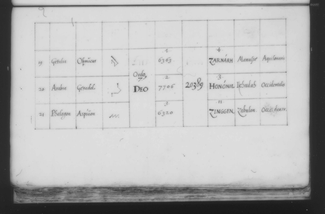
Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo	Planeta Coniunctus Nonagesimo
7	Hyrcania	Sanctus	♊	Occid. ORIO	1 4440	17396	9 ☽	ZARIELIS	Nephthalim	Ocean. dicam
8	Tyrus	Vndec.	♉	ROM.	2. 3660		7.	ALEPHIS	Iacinabi	Qui. Simile
9	Germania	Ascend.	♈		3 9236		10	LAMAVOT	Gad	Aquilonar.

Numerus et Ordo Partium Terræ Sanctæ	Partiũ Terræ Nomina, ab hominibus impositæ	Partiũ Terræ Nomina, Diuinitus impositæ	Diuinæ Impositionis Characteres Symmetrici	Bonorũ Principũ Aereorũ Ordines Sphærici	Bonorũ Ministrorũ Vnuscuiusq; Ordinis Numerus Tripartitus	Bonorũ Ministrorũ Ordinibus Tripartitis Numeri Totales	Angeli bonũ Aereorũ Ordinũ, et 12. Tribuum Præsides.	Tribus Populi Israelitici in dispersione	Plagæ Mundi, Tribubus dispersis assignatæ
10	Thebaſili	Thotanf		Ordo 4ª PAZ	1 2360	11660	10 LAVAVOTH	Gad	Auſtr. dex.
11	Parſadal	Axziarg			3000		10 LAVAVOTH	Gad	Auſtr. dex.
12	India	Pothmir			6300		12 ARFAOLG	Ephraim	Aſſon. dex.

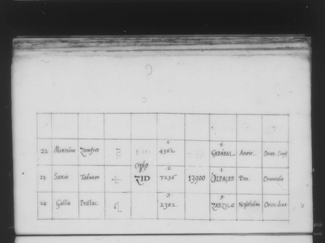
Numerus et Ordo Partium Terræ Sanctæ	Partiũ Terræ Nomina, ab hominibus impositæ	Partiũ Terræ Nomina, Diuinitus impositæ.	Diuinæ Impositionis Characteres Symmetrici.	Bonorũ Principũ Aereorũ Ordines Sphærici	Bonorũ Ministrorũ Vnuscuiusq; Ordinis, Numerus Tripartitus	Bonorũ Ministrorũ Ordinibus Tripartitis Numeri Totales	Angeli Bonũ Aereorũ Ordinum, et 12. Tribuum Præsides.	Tribus Populi Israelitici, in Dispersione	Plagæ Mundi Tribubus dispersis assignatæ
13	Bactriane	Lazdixi			1 8630		1 OLPAGED	Dan.	Orientalis
14	Cilicia	Nocamal		Ordo 5ª LIT	2 2306	16738	7 ALPVDVS	Iſacarãs	Occi. ſiniſtr.
15	Oxiana	Tiarpax			3 5802		11 ZINGGEN	Zabulon.	Occi. dextr.



18 Nouelle Sauoye
19 Cygne Vbedoing
20 Bertin Zeyrel
Orbe de MAZ
1 3610
2 9200
3 7222
2004ß
5 GERARL Aleon
11 ARABUS Ephrem
5 GERARL Aroni
On. Gaulle
Affen. Aust
Orien. Sept

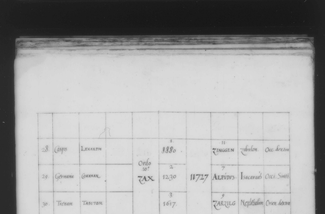


21 Gabriel Ophiuus
22 Andre Gemeaul
23 Philippe Aquilon
Orbe de DIO
1 6343
2 7726
3 6310
2158
4 TARAEL Memphis
8 HONORIL Ichtiofel
11 ZUNGEL Gebalen
Aquilonaire
Occidentale
Orien. Aust

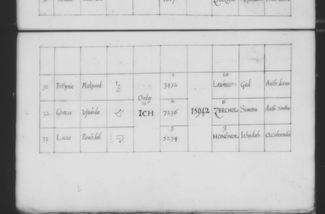


22 Martelin Tempeste
23 Simon Tabaran
24 Gallet Brettac
Orbe de TID
1 9236
2 7236
3 2392
13000
5 GERARL Aaron
9 ZEBUEL Thir.
8 ZEBUEL Nephtalim
Orien. Sept
Occidentale
Orien. Aust

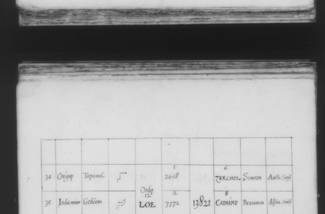
24 Hyrin Abbeny
25 Stephane Cadyar
25 Lydie Pendarin
Orbe de ZIP
1 6996
2 3610
3 4230
17816
8 HONORIL Ichtiofel
12 LAMIEL Gad
7 ZAMUEL Nephtalim
Occidentale
Antle Aust
Orien. Aust



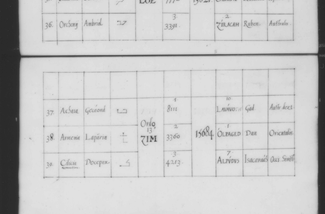
28 Gaye Lenarin
29 Germine Germin
30 Terrien Terrien
Orbe de TAN
1 1886
2 1230
3 1617
11727
7 ZAMUEL Gabalon
13 ALPHEO Emanuel
7 ZAMUEL Nephtalim
Occ. Aroni
Occ. Sept
Orien. Aust



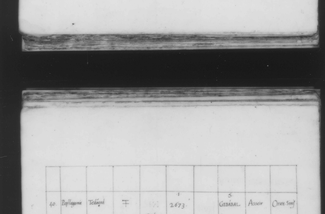
31 Bethune Malpaud
32 Gatine Vendale
33 Lucie Pendale
Orbe de ICH
1 3212
2 7126
3 5234
15912
12 LAMIEL Gad
6 ZECHIEL Simeon
8 ZALMON Reben
Antle Aust
Antle Aquil
Antle Occ



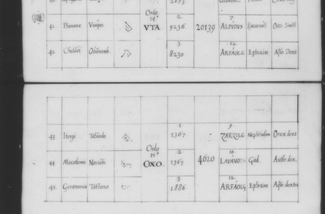
34 Origny Tepeuil
35 Isidore Gerbin
36 Orchery Andreul
Orbe de LOL
1 2018
2 7772
3 3391
13921
7 ZALMON Simeon
8 CAMAEL Benoum
7 ZALMON Reben
Antle Sept
Affen. Aust
Antlande



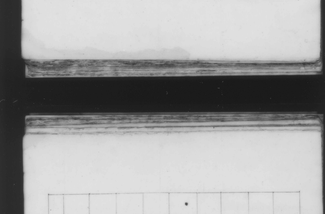
37 Achart Gricourd
38 Annesse Lapierre
39 Celsin Perepon
Orbe de ZIM
1 811
2 3566
3 4323
15804
12 LAMIEL Gad
1 OLIBEL Dan
7 ALPHEO Emanuel
Antle Aust
Orientale
Occ. Sept



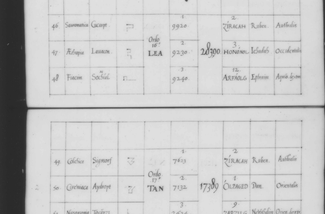
40 Bethune Tilleul
41 Bauvin Vimpe
42 Chalet Odonnet
Orbe de VTA
1 2053
2 9236
3 8230
20130
5 GERARL Aaron
13 ALPHEO Emanuel
11 ARABUS Ephrem
Orien. Sept
Occ. Sept
Affen. Orien



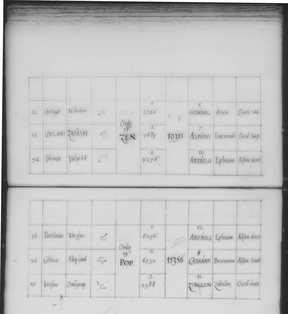
43 Iacqs Tilleule
44 Marchenne Nicolle
45 Germonne Tellene
Orbe de OXO
1 1267
2 1363
3 1886
4010
7 ZACHIEL Nephtalim
12 LAMIEL Gad
11 ARABUS Ephrem
Orien. Aust
Antle Aust
Affen. Aust



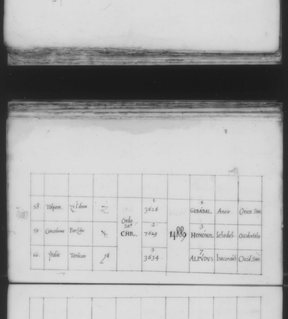
46 Soumarin Gaspe
47 Arbaye Lauran
48 Tiacin Sachet
Orbe de LEA
1 9810
2 9230
3 9240
20700
7 ZRACH Ruben
8 HONORIL Ichtiofel
11 ARABUS Ephrem
Antlande
Occidentale
Apuis Aust



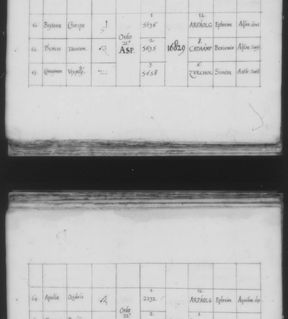
49 Gilchin Seymart
50 Germaine Apdorge
51 Nazenonne Thiber
Orbe de TAN
1 7413
2 7132
3 2234
17789
7 ZRACH Ruben
6 OLIBEL Dan
9 ZACHIEL Nephtalim
Antlande
Orientale
Orien. Aust



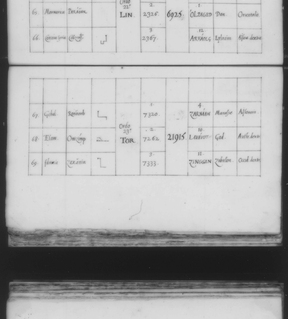
52 Gregor Nicholas 20 1 2348 5 Gerard. Anor Orior. Inc
53 Orland Ferrall 45 Orbis TERN 2 7689 10311 Alphon. Intermid Occid Sept
54 Henric Warwick 6 3 9578 11 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext



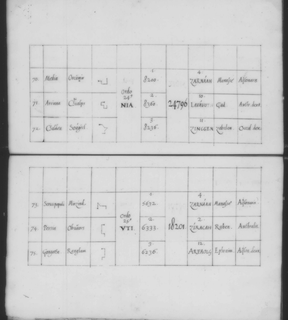
55 Pastrana Magist. 4 6236 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext
56 Gilbert Abigail 54 Orbis POP 2 6231 15356 4 Gerard Boreum Affric Sept
57 Verdun Dominus 12 3 2388 11 Thurgon Hebron Occid dext



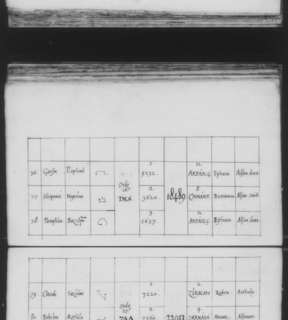
58 Wigorn Adam 22 1 5618 5 Gerard. Anor Orior. Inc
59 Cantelow Barbar 8 Orbis CHR. 2 7149 14889 9 Hermon. Iebuseo Occidentale
60 Yale Tristan 38 3 3634 7 Alphon. Intermid Occid Sept



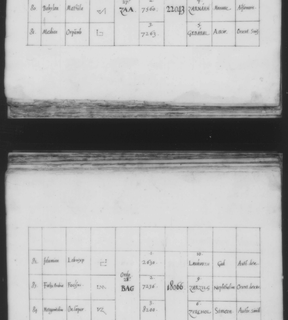
61 Bristow Clarys 3 1 5536 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext
62 Dorset Taurus 42 Orbis ASP. 2 5631 16820 8 Gerard Boreum Affric Sept
63 Gloucest Vespas 11 3 5028 3 Gilbert. Simeon Antic Sept



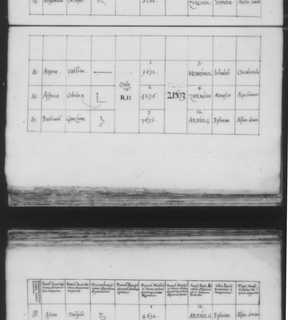
64 Apulia Apulus 28 1 2332 12 Arthur. Ephraim Apulia dext
65 Mauretan Tertian 30 Orbis LIN. 2 5316 6925 7 Gerard Dan Orientale
66 Gloucest Vespas 3 2367 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext



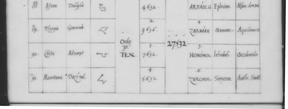
67 Cyclad Equinoct 3 1 7320 4 Gerard Mansfor Affricus
68 Elian Cancing 24 Orbis TOR. 2 7242 21915 10 Lamuel Gal Antic dext
69 Silures Taurus 3 7333 11 Thurgon Hebron Occid dext



70 Media Orologe 1 2240 4 Gerard Mansfor Affricus
71 Arcuar Claudus 52 Orbis NIA 2 7140 24790 10 Lamuel Gal Antic dext
72 Chalcis Scagael 2 8236 11 Thurgon Hebron Occid dext



73 Sinopica Mercuri 1 5632 4 Gerard Mansfor Affricus
74 Persia Cholera 5 Orbis VTI 4 6333 21015 2 Gracian Rubea Australis
75 Gangetis Regulus 3 6236 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext



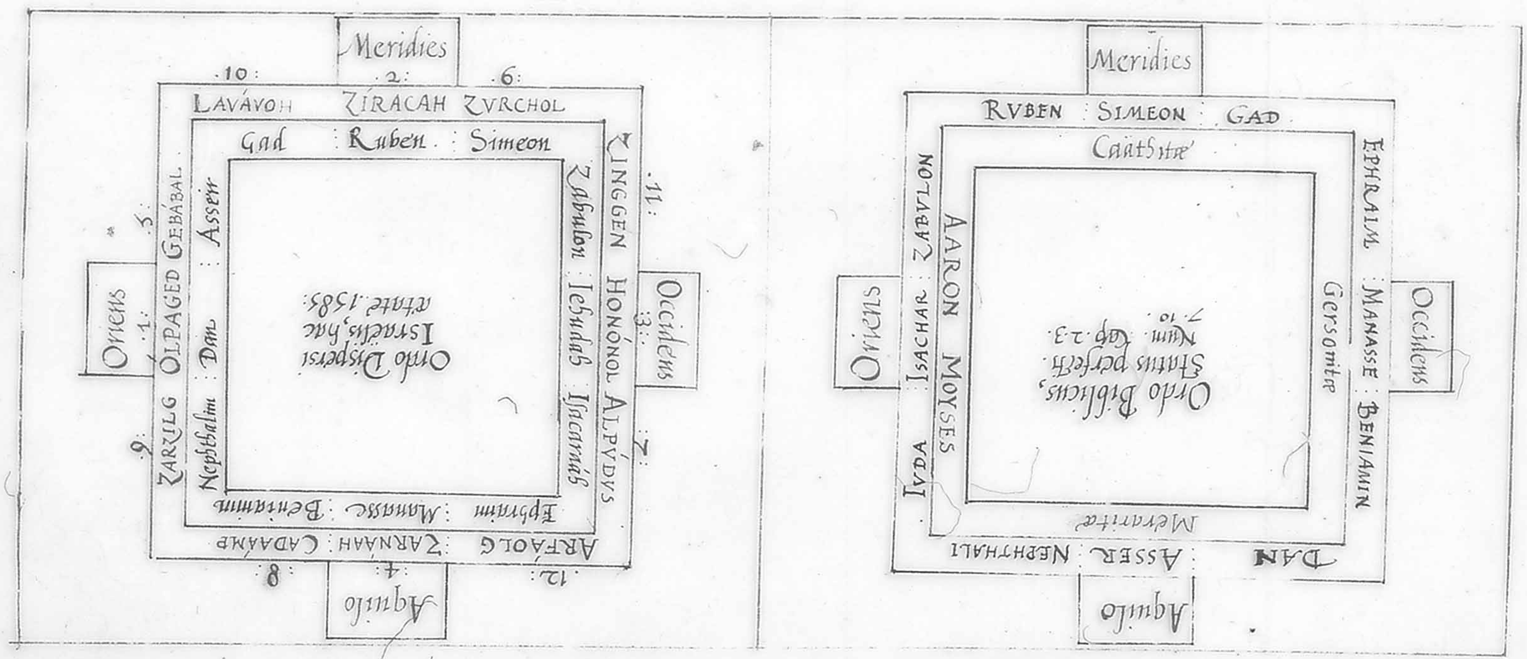
96 Gregor Elephant 1 8332 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext
97 Hispania Aquarius 52 Orbis DEA 2 8420 24480 7 Gerard Boreum Affric Sept
98 Pamphilia Bacchus 3 8237 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext

99 Cretic Virgine 1 7220 2 Gracian Rubea Australis
80 Babylon Martial 40 Orbis TAA 2 7260 22083 3 Gerard Anor Affricus
81 Median Orpiad 3 7243 5 Gerard Anor Orient Sept

82 Idumea Libertas 1 2432 10 Lamuel Gal Antic dext
83 Pedemontan Pisces 120 Orbis BAG 2 7232 18086 9 Gracian Napolitan Orient dext
84 Aegyptia Dextran 12 3 8140 7 Gracian Simeon Antic Sept

85 Aegyptia Vestitus 1 5632 3 Hermon. Iebuseo Occidentale
86 Africus Orbicus 1 Orbis RII 2 5332 21823 4 Gracian Mansfor Aquilonar
87 Bastarnæ Gemelus 3 7432 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext

88 Affric Vestitus 1 4632 3 Hermon. Iebuseo Occidentale
89 Assyria Gemenid 2 4632 4 Gracian Mansfor Aquilonar
90 Gallia Adiutor 1 Orbis TEN. 2 7632 27532 12 Arthur. Ephraim Affric dext
91 Mauretan Martial 4 5432 9 Gracian Simeon Antic Sept



Meridies
Aquilo
Occidens
Orientis
RVBEN SIMEON GAD
EPHRAIM MANASSE BENIAMIN
DAN ASSER NEPHTHALI
IVDA ISACHAR ZABVLON
AARON MOYSES
Gersomitæ
Merarithæ
Caathitæ
Ordo Biblicus,
Status perfecti
Num. Cap. 2.
7. 10.
Meridies
Aquilo
Occidens
Orientis
LAVAVOH ZIRACAH ZVRCHOL
ZARVLG OLPAGED GEBABAL
ZINGGEN HONONOL ALPVDVS
ARFAOLG ZARNAAH CADAMP
Gad Ruben Simeon
Nephthalim Dan Asser
Zabulon Iehudah Issachar
Ephraim Manasse Beniamin
Ordo Dispersi
Israelis, hac ætate 1585.

Conciliation

To the Crowns — Δ — Conciliation, upon me and Jh — The Table is an Instrument of Conciliation. And so are the other 7 Quarters, wherein upon roll the Name of Tables:
Crowned with the forms of Crowns: wherein are prayers to every
King and Prince, according to their order.
Note to the last — Δ — No routemunge the end of Idolatry and Operation — Jh — It only consisteth in the Merit of Christ,
& the Quarters of those Books.
Fol. Down the Kings, and their Princes, in a Table, as the Crowns of them with their Letters backwards (excepting the Beef) from the right hand to the Left. Let Bobogel be the first, and Borongo his Prince. Yours
Δ. Now
Δ — So, on my Quarter or Campus of Dionysius: are all the names of the 7 Kings, and of the 7 Princes: perfectly as in the great Table, (called after Synod Mensa sedens) the Beef, only (being the first Letter Simon & upon all) kept back, in memory.

De sigillo Ameth; alias, vocato Sigillo Dei.

Michael — I will show thee in the might and strength of God, what his Mysteries are: The true Circle of the Heavenly: compass finding all Secrets: the Whole and Sacred Trinity: Oh holy be he: Oh Holy be he: Oh holy be he.
Δ — Pray and Record, Amen
Mich — Note, Royal Will thou? — Δ — I will fulfil thine pronde
according to the Matter in them.
Mich — Divide this Outward Circle into 40 equall parts: wherein are also Numbered 100 4. Set these do it present — Δ I do 10. Dividing it first into 4; and then every of them, into 10.

Michael 1582. March. 19.

Δ — He calleth one of the names Semiel. One came in, and spake down and great fear, came out of his Circle, Michael said, To him are the Mysteries of these Tables known. Michael said, Semiel (Virgine) and by the Almighty God this hast said, and this liest for ever. Then Semiel stood up and stearing fire from out of his Circle, and then he spake, as followeth.
Semiel — Mighty Lord, Royal Will thou with the Tables?
Michael — It is the Will of God, these shall from hence.
Sem — I am the Tables. Behold, these are the Tables, Lo these the Arts.
Δ. There came in 40 Noble Creatures, all in bright Silk long robes; And these

the like Crowns. And all these falling on their knees, said.
Thou only, art Holy among the Hosts: O God, thy Name be blessed for ever.
Δ — Michael stood up out of his Quire: and by Cl. All his Host to be like two great pillars of Brass: Cl as fire, as glass Cl to Ether. And by and by, his Swords were all on fire: And the strokes of his Sword over all these 40 their Foes. The Earth quaked. And the 4 fires down. And Michael Semiel with a thundrous voice:
and said. Declare the Mysteries of the Living God: our God: of One Eternity for ever.

Sem — I am ready
Δ — Michael stroke over them with his Sword: in the Air fell down and Vriel also on his knees. And removed at the striking of his Sword, flaming fire, like lightening, that Host were all.
Michael — Note, Here is a Mystery.
Δ — On first sixty, One of first 40, from the East: Cl opened his breast, wherein was covered with Silk, and there appeared a cross T all of Gold
Michael — Note the number — Δ — adde the T, stode the Number of 4 on his Forehead T
Δ — The 40, all, royal, & Lively, and Multiplieth for ever: Blessed be his Name
Δ — The Creatures did fall by his breast bosome, and vanished away like a fire.
Michael — Plain that in the first place: It is the Name of God.
Δ — On three Scrolls a great Clap of Thunder & Cl:
And so that: And note that the whole Extract Book is Nothing else but the Mysteries most Medaylous of Sigillum Dei: otherwise called Sigillum Ameth. Notwithstanding how I did set under a Letter Salomons Seal.
Note finally, Almost all, the Good Book, and of the Conclusions of Creation. wherein mention was how before made.
Δ — The Quire was divided in 4 parts: and 7 equal angled Mount.
Vriel — This is a Seal of protection: from Mischief, Things shall prevail and the Wicked shall last long decayed.
Δ — On Mount a square Table adjoyned with the Mount. and I demanded, Royal that Table belongeth Vriel — A Mystery and not to be known. These two shall remain in the Tone, to the Light of all undefiled Creatures.

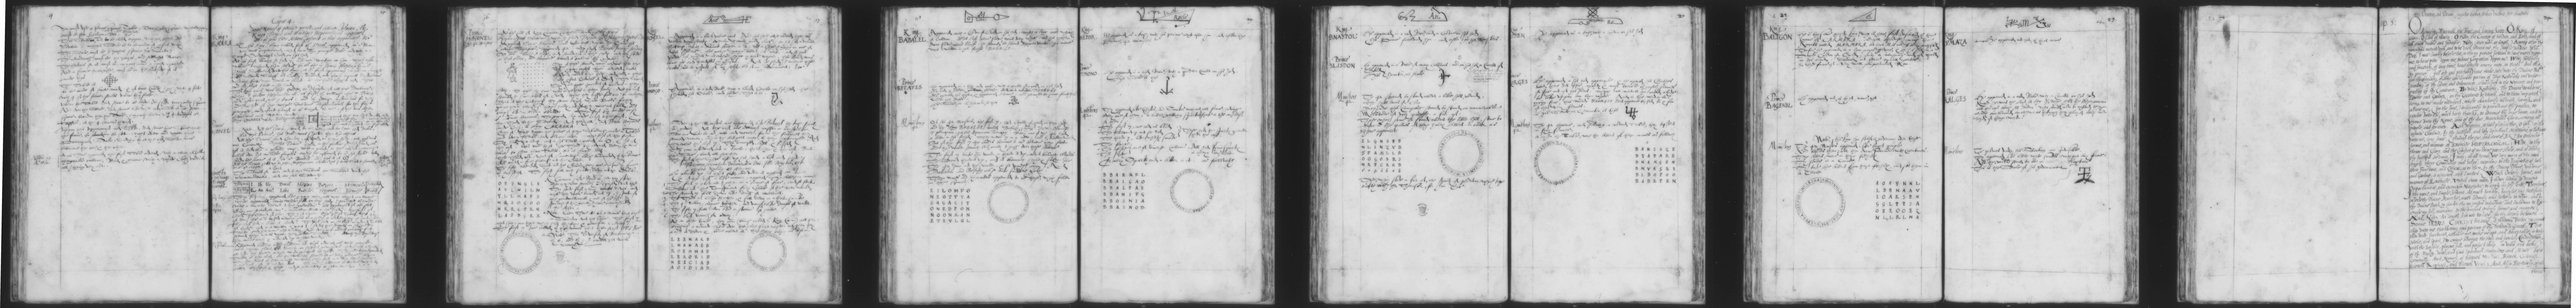
You must



SONDAYE

MONDAYE:

TVESDAYE:

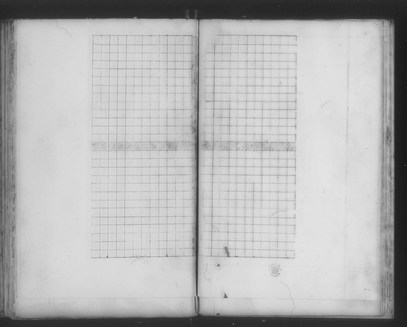
WEDDENSDAYE

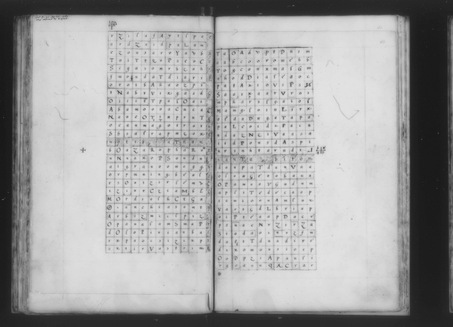
THVRSDAYE:

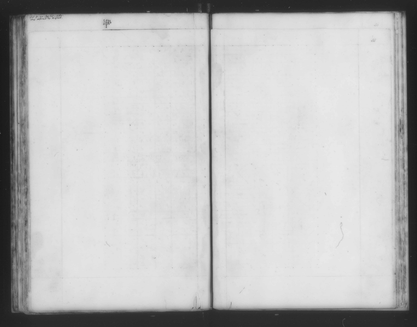
FRYDAYE

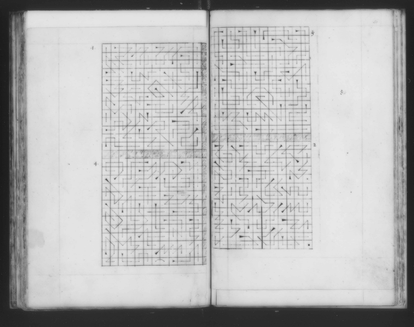
SATERDAYE

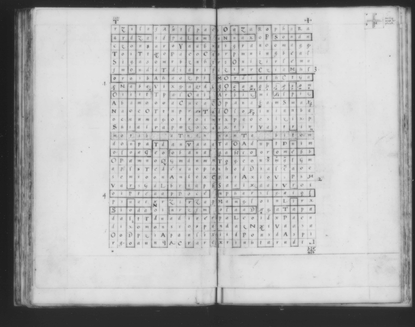
BRITISH MUSEUM

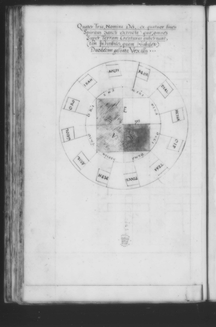


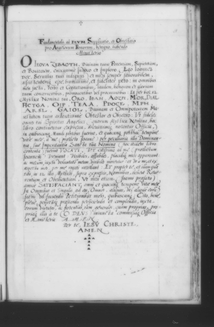












VIGINTI QVATVOR SENIORVM (de quibus in Apocalypsi Beati Ioannis est mentio) ex Patris, Filij et Spiritus Sancti Imeis, collecta Nomina: Istorū Bonorū Angelorum Munus est, Hoibus, Rerū humanarum Scientiam, ſudiciumq; impertire, &c

	Numen Diuinum BATAIVA, ſiue BATAIVH.
ORIENS	Abioro, ſiue Habioro Aaoxaif Htmorda Haozpi, ſiue Ahaozpi Hipotga Autotar
	Numen Diuinum ICZHHCA, ſiue ICZHHCL.
MERIDIES	Aiſrom, ſiue Laiſrom Aczinor Lzinopo Lbctga, ſiue Albctga Lbiansa Acmſicu b
	Numen Diuinum RAAGIOS ſiue RAAGIOL
OCCIDENS	Srabpm, ſiue Lſrabpm Saiinou Laonxrp Lgaiol, ſiue Slgaiol cb Lugdiſa Soaixnt
	Numen Diuinum EDLPRNA, ſiue EDLPRNAA.
SEPTENT.	Aetpio, ſiue AAetpio Adocoet Aſnſood Apdoce, ſiue Aapdoce Arinnap Anodoin

SEX SENIORVM Orientalium Invitatio

O vos Sex SENIORES, Orientales, præpotentes, fideleſq; Omnipotentis DEI nostri Miniſtri, In Nomine eiusdem DEI, (Vnius et Trini) O vos (inquam) ABIORO, ſiue HABIORO, AAOXAIF, HTMORDA, HAOZPI, ſiue AHAOZPI, HIPOTGA et AVTOTAR, per vobis peculiariter præſominās Diuinum Numen, Nomenq; Angelicū BATAIVA, ſiue BATAIVH, Ego Ioannes Dee, fidelis eiusdem Omnipotentis DEI Seruulus, à vobis omnibus, coniunctim, et quomodocunq; diuiſim, amicè, vehementer, et confidenter requiro et peto, VT posthac, quanq; tempore voluero, per reliquum totius vitæ meæ curſum, vel omnes vos, vel ex vobis, illi quos ego nominauero (per prædictū Myſticum Diuinumq; Nomen BATAIVA ſiue BATAIVH, à me, præfato Ioanne, Vocati, Invocati, ſiue requiſiti) Statim et ſine mora, mihi, prædicto Ioanni, Adeſſe, viſibiles, affabiles ac placidi: Præterea adeo Fauorabiles mihi esse velitis, VT Petitiones meas omnes et quaſcunq; DE RERVM HVMANARVM SCIENTIA ET IVDICIO, aliiſq; rebus, Veſtro Diuinitus aſſignatis, pertinentibusq; Officio, ſiue Miniſterio (Vobis omnibus, vni, vel pluribus) factas faciendasq;, Cito, bene, vere, planè, plene, perfectèq; præſtare, perficere et complere velitis: iuxta veſtrarū Virtutū, potentiarū, Officiorumq; ſiue Miniſteriorū veſtrorum Menſuram, a DEO Omnipotente vobis concreditam et commiſsam. AMEN. Per Sanctum Dei Nomen, BATAIVA, ſiue BATAIVH AMEN

Sex Sensorum Metaphysicale Tabulatio

Qui Sex Sensorum Metaphysicale, propriorum fidelis Omnipotentis Dei nostri Majestatis, in Numeris Quidem Pari valde, Sed Mysteriis, Arcanisque Divinis, Imparibus, Ordinis, Ad Sacrum Altaris Ministerium, Ad Sacrum Altaris Ministerium Sex Sensuum, Ad Sacrum Altaris Ministerium Sex Sensuum Omnipotentis Dei

Septentrionaliũ Quatuor Bonorũ Angelorũ in Metallis, et Lapidibus, Peritorum, & Potentiũ, Invitatio ▲ ▲ ▲

O vos Quatuor Angeli Lucis, fideles, Dei (uĩ Creatoris) Ministri, ô vos inquam GMNM, siue GMDNM, ECDE, siue ECAOP, AMOX, siue AMLOX, et BRAP siue BRIAP, in Mundi parte Septentrionali Dominantes: ac (ex Dei dispensatione et dono peculiari) in Metallicarũ venarũ, siue Metallorũ inventione, Materiæ Metallicæ collectione siue Conservatione, Metallorũ usu et virtute: Necnon in Lapidum Coagulatione et virtute: aliisq multis de Metallorũ Lapidumq Loco, collectione, natura, proprietate, virtute, et usu) Secretis et Arcanis, Peritissimi et Potentissimi Ego Ioannes Dee, Oipotentis, Vivi et Veri Dei (ipsius IEOVA ZEBAOTH) humilis et devotus Servulus: In nomine eiusdẽ Dei uri: Et Per meritabilem, quam eidem Deo nro (in Nobis istis Nobiscato) videlicet VADALI et OBAVA, debetis Reverentiam et Obedientiã, à Vobis, omnibus et singulis, Vehementer, constanter et confidenter requiro et Peto, VT mihi (præfecto Joanni) totius meæ reliquæ vitæ, quocunq volucro tempore, Benigni, placidi, Visibiles, Affabilesq adesse velitis; adeoq mihi (eidem Joanni) FAVORABILES esse dignemini, VT Petitiones meas omnes et quascunq, Vobis, omnibus, quibuscunq vel cuicunq Vestrũm propositas factasve, et proponendas faciendasve, (aliquo modo, peculiarem Vestrã, supra expressam, circa Metalla, vel Lapides, peritiã, virtutem, potentiam, facultatemve, respicientes, aut concernentes: et cum debita Contestatione dictorũ Divinorũ Nominũ VADALI et OBAVA requisitas vel Petitas) Citissimè, evidentissimè, certissimè, perfectè, plenèq præstare, perficere, et perimplere velitis. AMEN.

Per dicta Sancta, et Mystica Dei Nõia,

VADALI et OBAVA

AMEN

▲
▲ ▲ ▲
▲
▲
▲

Nomina Sedecim Bonorum Angelorũ qui in TRANSFORMATIONE Periti et Potentes sunt: Sedecim etiam Cacodæmonũ manifestatis Nominibus

	Nomina Divina AIAOAI OIIIT
ORIENS	Abmo, siue Abamo	Cab
	Naco, siue Naoco	Ona
	Ocnm, siue Ocanm	Moc
	Shal, siue Shial	Ash
	Nomina Divina CBALPT ARBIZ
MERIDIES	Opna, siue Opana	Cop
	Doop, siue Dolop	Odo
	Rxno, siue Rxpao	Mrx
	Axir, siue Axtir	Anx
	Nomina Divina MALADI OLAAD
OCCIDENS	Paco, siue Palco	Rpa
	Ndzn, siue Ndazn	And
	Iipo, siue Iidpo	Xii
	Xrns, siue Xrins	Exr
	Nomina Divina VOLXDO SIODA
SEPTENTR.	Datt, siue Dalt	Rda
	Diom, siue Dixom	Adi
	Oopz, siue Oodpz	Xoo
	Rgan, siue Rgoan	Erg.

Quotidianus Quintus Pomeri Angelorum in Trigintaduabus Septenis, qui Principatus Dicuntur.

Qui Quintus Pomerius Angelorum, qui Cardinis est Angelus Adnil, qui Adamo Nigro, qui Signo Cancri qui Octavo, qui Signo, qui Septimo, qui in Mundi Principatu pulchritudinem, pulsatur tertiam, Sanctitatem, Benedictionem, Dominum Deum Sanctum, Sanctum, Sanctum, Dominum Deum Exercituum, plena est omnis terra gloria ejus. Hosanna in excelsis. Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini & Quintum confitetur. Et humiliter, & devote quos nobis proferendos per hos versus verba Sanctorum, & Beatorum proferre, manifeste fiant & importunitas nostra cautelosa existentes per Sanctos Sanctorum, & per Principatus, Ego humiliter Orationes & Preces quas Sanctorum, &

Occidentalium Quatuor Bonorum Angelorum Invitatio, qui in Commixtionibus Naturarum, Periti, et Potentes sunt.

O vos Quatuor Fideles, Veracesq; Dei Omnipotentis, Mi Creatoris Ministri TAAD, AADT, ADTA, et DTAA, qui in Occidentali Mundi parte, in Naturarum Commixtionibus Peritissimi et Præbalidi estis; Ego Joannes Dee, eiusdem Mi Creatoris, devotus Famulus, Per eiusdem Dei, Creatoris Mi, Omnipotentiam, et per Mysticu Dei Mi Nomen ATAAD, à Vobis omnibus et singulis, humiliter requiro et vehementer Peto, Ut quocunq; (posthac) Vitæ meæ tempore, per nomen Dei Mi Mysticu ATAAD, Vos, vel aliquos, aut aliquem Vestrum, Ego, (præfatus Joannes) Nominatim Vocauero, vel Invocauero: Mihi, dicto Joanni Benigni, Placidiq; Adesse, Visibiles ac Personaliter apparere Velitis: Adeoq; mihi (dicto Joanni) esse Amici, et Fauorabiles dignemini: Ut omnes et quascunq; Petitiones meas, De Naturarum Commixtionibus, et alijs Secretis Naturalibus (quæ Mi Optimus Creator, Vræ Cognitioni, Intelligentiæ, ac Dispositioni commisit: Vestrisq; quasi deputauit Officijs et Ministerijs) Cito, bene, plenè, plane, perfecteq; præstare, adimplere, perficereq; Velitis: AMEN

Per Sanctum, et Mysticu Dei Nomen,

ATAAD.

AMEN.

Septentrionalium Quatuor Bonorum Angelorum Invitatio, qui in Commixtionibus Naturarum Periti et Potentes sunt.

O vos Quatuor Fideles, Veracesq; Dei Omnipotentis, Mi Creatoris Ministri, DOPA, OPAD, PADO, et ADOP, qui in Septentrionali Mundi Parte, in Naturarum Commixtionibus, Peritissimi et Præbalidi estis: Ego Joannes Dee, eiusdem Mi Creatoris, devotus Famulus, Per eiusdem Creatoris Mi Omnipotentia, et per Mysticu Dei Mi Nomen ADOPA, à Vobis omnibus et singulis, humiliter requiro, et vehementer Peto, Ut quocunq; (posthac) Vitæ meæ tempore, per Nomen Dei Mi Mysticu ADOPA, Vos, vel aliquos, aut aliquem Vestrum, Ego, (præfatus Joannes) Nominatim Vocauero vel Invocauero: Mihi (dicto Joanni) Benigni, Placidiq; Adesse, Visibiles ac Personaliter Apparere Velitis: Adeoq; mihi (dicto Joanni) esse Amici, et Fauorabiles dignemini, Ut omnes et quascunq; Petitiones meas, De Naturarum Commixtionibus, et alijs Secretis Naturalibus (quæ Mi Optimus Creator, Vræ Cognitioni, Intelligentiæ ac Dispositioni commisit: Vestrisq; quasi deputauit Officijs et Ministerijs) Cito, bene, plene, planè, perfecteq; præstare, adimplere, perficereq; Velitis: AMEN

Per Sanctum, et Mysticu Dei Nomen

ADOPA

AMEN

Nomina Septem Regum Angelicorum secundum Planetarum Distributionem.

	Nomen Primi: ENTEA
ORIENS	Vipe Yipe Ayip	L
	Nomen Secundi: EPHEA
MERIDIES	Pmi Pmi Ami	A
	Nomen Tertii: ATIUM
OCCIDENS	Talm Talm Ataa	N
	Nomen Quarti: AANAA
SEPTENTR.	Anal Anal Anal	V

Quartum Sigillum Regum Angelorum ad Aquilonem Potestatem habentium.

O Ipe quartum Talem Regem qui Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit, IVIPA TIAN TAVI et AVE dicit. Cujus Sigillum Quartum Tale est. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Primum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Secundum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertium Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quintum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Sextum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Septimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Octavum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Nonum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Decimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Undecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Duodecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertiumdecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartumdecimum Tale est.

ENTEA.
PMIC.

Meridionalis Quartus Regum Angelorum ad Austrum Potestatem habentium.

O Pmi quartum Talem Regem qui Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit, IVIPA TIAN TAVI et AVE dicit. Cujus Sigillum Quartum Tale est. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Primum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Secundum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertium Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quintum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Sextum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Septimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Octavum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Nonum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Decimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Undecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Duodecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertiumdecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartumdecimum Tale est.

EPHEA.
PMIC.

Occidentalis Quartus Regum Angelorum ad Occasum Potestatem habentium.

O Talm quartum Talem Regem qui Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit, IVIPA TIAN TAVI et AVE dicit. Cujus Sigillum Quartum Tale est. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Primum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Secundum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertium Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quintum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Sextum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Septimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Octavum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Nonum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Decimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Undecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Duodecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertiumdecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartumdecimum Tale est.

ATIUM.
PMIC.

Septentrionalis Quartus Regum Angelorum ad Aquilonem Potestatem habentium.

O Anal quartum Talem Regem qui Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit, IVIPA TIAN TAVI et AVE dicit. Cujus Sigillum Quartum Tale est. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Primum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Secundum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertium Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quintum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Sextum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Septimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Octavum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Nonum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Decimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Undecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Duodecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Tertiumdecimum Tale est. Et Quatuordecim Cohortes Angelorum Regit. Cujus Nomen Quartumdecimum Tale est.

AANAA.
AMIN.

Nomina Septem Regum Angelorum ad Septentrionem Potestatem habentium.

	Nomen Primi: HCNI.
ORIENS	Ldor Odyo Rodi	A
	Nomen Secundi: HEAAN
MERIDIES	Rom Ozor Nrzo	C
	Nomen Tertii: FHAN
OCCIDENS	Mogl Ozid Lmog	H
	Nomen Quarti: HCAA.
SEPTENTR.	Ecn Aqa Lpa	V

Occidentalis & Septimus Angelorum ad Occasum Regnans.

O Ro, in sanctissimo Nomine Dominationis, & summa potestatis Nomine Amen, qui in Sanctissimis Nomen positus habes, & in eis tuis sanctissimis Nominibus, & Sigillum tuum Septimum habes, & Septimum Angelum Regnans ad Occasum, & Septimum Angelum Regnans ad Occasum, & Septimum Angelum Regnans ad Occasum Meridionalium 4. Bonorū Angelorū m Secretis Hoim Intelligendis Peritorū & Potentium Invitatio.

O vos 4. Angeli Sagaces, Veracesq; Omnipotentis Dei, eiusdemq; Creatoris nri Ministri, ô vos inquam) IAOAI, AOMI, OMIA, et MIAO, in Meridionali Mundi parte, magno et speciali ab eodem Deo nro, insigniti Munere, seu Officio In Secretis Hoim (cuiusq; Ordinis, Status, vel Conditionis fuerint) Intelligendis, et plenè cognoscendis: Ego Ioannes Dee, devotus eiusdem Dei famulus, nulla curiositate ductus, neq; de aliorum hoim Statu, Secretis Conatibus, Actibus, Eventis (bonis, malisve) vllo modo sollicitus Scrutator, (Nisi quantum ipi Reipub. Christianæ, in toto, vel parte, Vtile vel Necessarium erit, vel esse poterit, talia à me, dicto tempore, sciri, cognosci, intelligiq;) A vobis prænominatis 4. vibus et singulis, Per Dei nri Omniscientiam, et per eiusdem Mysticū Nomen, HIAOM, humiliter requiro, et vehementer Peto, Vt quocunq; post hac totius meæ Vitæ tempore, Vos omnes, Vestrum aliquos, vel aliquem, per præfatum Dei nomen HIAOM, vocauero, vel invocauero, Statim, benignè ac placidè mihi Adesse, Personales Visibilesq; apparere: et Petitiones meas omnes et quascunq; (ad vos, vestrûmve aliquos, vel aliquem, factas, faciendas, vel) De alicuius hoim secretis, Statu, conditionibus; Cito, bene, plene, perfecteq; præstare, impierè, perficereq; velitis: AMEN.

Per Sanctum et Mysticū Dei Nomen,

HIAOM,

AMEN

Occidentaliū 4. Bonorū Angelorū m Secretis Hoim Intelligendis, Peritorū & Potentium Invitatio.

O vos 4 Angeli Sagaces, Veracesq; Omnipotentis Dei, eiusdemq; Creatoris nri Ministri, ô vos, inquam) NLRX. LRXN. RXNL et XNLR, in Occidentali Mundi parte, magno et speciali, ab eodem Deo nro, insigniti Muneris, seu Officio, In Secretis Hoim (cuiusq; Ordinis, Status, vel conditionis fuerint) Intelligendis, et plenè cognoscendis: Ego Ioannes Dee, devotus eiusdem Dei famulus, nulla curiositate ductus, neq; de aliorū hoim Statu, Secretis Conatibus, Actibus, Eventis, (bonis, malisve) vllo modo sollicitus Scrutator, (Nisi quantum ipi Reipub. Christianæ, in toto, vel parte, Vtile vel Necessarium erit, vel esse poterit, talia à me, dicto tempore, sciri, cognosci, intelligiq;) A vobis, prænominatis 4, vibus et singulis, Per Dei nri Omniscientiā, et per eiusdem Mysticum Nomen PNLRX, humiliter requiro, et vehementer Peto, Vt quocunq; post hac, totius meæ Vitæ tempore, Vos omnes, Vestrûmve aliquos, vel aliquem, per præfatum Dei Nomen PNLRX, vocauero, vel invocauero, Statim, benignè, ac placidè mihi adesse, Personales, Visibilesq; Apparere, et Petitiones meas omnes, et quascunq; (ad vos, Vestrum aliquos, vel aliquem factas faciendasq;) De alicuius hoīs secretis, Statu, conditionibus; Cito, bene, plene, perfecteq; præstare, impierè, perficereq; velitis: AMEN.

Per sanctum et Mysticū Dei Nomen,

PNLRX

AMEN.

Septentrionaliū 4. Bonorum Angelorum, m Secretis Hoim Intelligendis Peritorum, & Potentium, Invitatio.

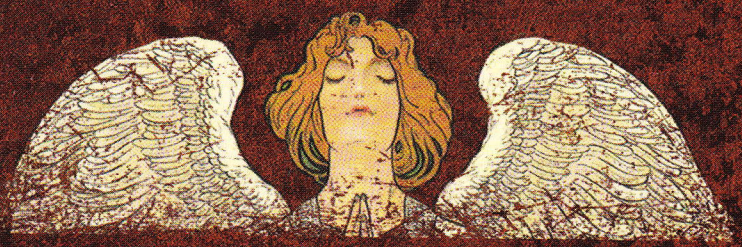
O vos 4 Angeli Sagaces Veracesq; Omnipotentis Dei, eiusdemq; Creatoris nri Ministri; ô vos, inquam) ZIZA, IKAR, ZAZI, et AZIR in Septentrionali Mundi parte, magno et speciali ab eodem Deo nro insignīti munere, seu Officio, In Secretis Hoim (cuiusq; ordinis, Status, vel conditionis fuerint) Intelligendi, et plenè cognoscendis: Ego Ioannes Dee, devotus eiusdem Dei famulus, nulla curiositate ductus, neq; de aliorū hoim Statu, secretis conatibus, actibus, Eventis; (bonis malisve) vllo modo sollicitus Scrutator: (Nisi quantum ipi Reipub Christianæ, in toto, vel parte, Vtile vel Necessarium erit, vel esse poterit, talia à me scirī, cognosci, intelligiq;) A vobis, prænominatis 4, vibus et singulis, Per Dei nri Omniscientia, et Per eiusdē Mysticum Nomen, PZIZA, humiliter requiro, et vehementer Peto, Vt quocunq; post hac totius meæ Vitæ tempore, Vos omnes, Vestrûm aliquos, vel aliquē, per Dei Nomen PZIZA, vocauero, vel invocauero, Statim, benignè ac placidè, mihi Adesse, Personales, Visibilesq; Apparere: et Petitiones meas omnes et quascunq; (ad vos, vestrûm aliquos, vel aliquē factas, faciendas,) De alicuius hoīnis secretis, Statu, Conditionibus, Cito, bene, plene, perfecteq; præstare, impierè, perficereq; velitis: AMEN.

Per Sanctum et Mysticū Dei Nomen,

PZIZA

AMEN.

THE COMPLETE ENOCHIAN DICTIONARY



A Dictionary of the Angelic Language as Revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley

DONALD C. LAYCOCK

PREFACE BY STEPHEN SKINNER

FOREWORD BY LON MILO DUQUETTE

THE COMPLETE ENOCHIAN DICTIONARY

DR. JOHN DEE

EDWARD KELLEY

THE COMPLETE ENOCHIAN DICTIONARY

A Dictionary of the Angelic Language as Revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley

DONALD C. LAYCOCK

PREFACE BY STEPHEN SKINNER

FOREWORD BY LON MILO DUQUETTE

WEISER BOOKS

San Francisco, CA / Newburyport, MA

This edition first published in 2001 by Red Wheel/Weiser LLC
With offices at:
500 Third Street, Suite 230
San Francisco, CA 94107

Copyright © 1994 Stephen Skinner
Foreword © 2001 Red Wheel/Weiser
All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from Red Wheel/Weiser, LLC. Reviewers may quote brief passages.

ISBN-10: 1-57863-254-4
ISBN-13: 978-1-57863-254-1

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data
Laycock, Donald C.
The complete Enochian dictionary : a dictionary of the angelic language as revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly / by Donald C. Laycock
p. cm.
Includes bibliographical references and index.
1. Enochian language—Dictionaries—English.
2. English language—Dictionaries—Enochian. I. Dee, John, 1527–1608. II. Kelley, Edward, 1555–1595. III. Title.
PM9021.E55L39 1994
001.9—dc20 94-20716

Printed in the United States of America
MG
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3

The paper used in this publication meets the minimum requirements of the American National Standard for Information Sciences—Permanence of Paper for Printed Library Materials Z39.48-1992 (R1997).

CONTENTS

Foreword to the 2001 Edition
by Lon Milo DuQuette vii

Preface to the Revised Edition
by Stephen Skinner 1

Preface
by Stephen Skinner 7

Enochian
Angelic language or mortal folly? 19

Scope and Plan of the Dictionary 65

Part I: ANGELIC-ENGLISH 69

Part II: ENGLISH-ANGELIC 191

Appendix: The Enochian Calls. 247

Bibliography 269

FOREWORD

by Lon Milo DuQuette

His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep.
—Algernon Swinburne,
Atalanta in Calydon

An eternal debate rages between those who believe in the objective existence of spiritual entities, and those who believe that all such phenomena, no matter how apparently substantial, are entirely subjective experiences. Perhaps both schools of thought are correct. Where angels, demons, and spirits are concerned, I personally believe it's all in your head—you just have no idea how big your head is. Or, to quote my pseudepigraphic guru, Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford, "Yes, the spirits are real. Yes, the spirits are imaginary. Most of us, however, cannot imagine how real our imaginations are."

I can, with no small measure of confidence, generally defend this position with jabs of well-worn qabalistic suppositions concerning the nature of consciousness and the functions of the various parts of the soul, and a left hook from Carl Jung. There have been times, however, when my field theory has been mightily challenged. Mr. Laycock's Complete Enochian Dictionary played a curious role in one such magical bout.

In 1978, as part of my perceived duties as an O.T.O.[1] lodgemaster, I began what would become a 23-year weekly magick class at my home in Costa Mesa, California. At the time, I was hard-pressed to stay one jump ahead of the enthusiastic aspirants who crowded my living room floor each Thursday evening. Within a year or so I realized that if I intended to continue teaching, I had learn more myself.

My magick library was pitifully small in those days. My newest treasure was a first edition of Gems from the Equinox,[2] which contains a selection of books, articles, essays, and rituals from Aleister Crowley's monumental work, The Equinox.[3] I combed through it to see if I could find something novel and exotic to occupy our Thursday nights for a while. I settled on Liber LXXXIV, vel Chanokh—A Brief Abstract of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe Derived by Dr. John Dee Through the Skrying of Sir Edward Kelly. It is Crowley's introduction to the complex and beautiful magical art form that has come to be known as Enochian. I didn't know it at the time, but Chanokh, and the book you are now holding in your hands, would dramatically change the course of my life.

At first I found Chanokh completely unfathomable. I read it, re-read it, and checked it against the Enochian material in Regardie's Golden Dawn.[4] After a day or two of whimpering, I finally started to see the light. The material that treated upon the evocation of angels of the four Elemental Tablets appeared to be the logical place to start the class.

Each Elemental Tablet is made up of 156 lettered squares, each of which is divided so to represent a truncated pyramid. Each has its own particular mixture of elements determined by a most impressive application of Hermetic logic. An angel (whose name is the letter of the square) "lives" in every one of the pyramids. These single-letter-named angels are modular and join with their neighbors to form bigger angels with longer names and more complex attributes and duties. It is truly an elegant system.

My plan was to keep the class occupied for a few weeks by having them draw and color their own tablets while I consulted with Dr. Regardie and constructed a set of three-dimensional tablets. Regardie was not keen on the idea. He told me that, to his knowledge, no one had ever done such a thing before, and that the Enochian angels were dangerous enough when they inhabited flat tablets. He cautioned, "Don't give them dimensional elbow-room." I joked, and suggested that his angels were probably in a bad mood because they were all squished up inside his flat tablets. I went ahead and prevailed upon a lodge brother to cut 624 wooden truncated pyramids.

These I would eventually prepare, paint, and assemble into the 4 Elemental Tablets (one each for Fire, Water, Air, Earth).

The night of our first evocation arrived. I prepared our living room temple for the evocation of Laidrom, the Mars Senior of the Tablet of Earth.[5] The temple opening and operating procedures are outlined admirably in Chanokh, so there was very little to do but follow directions. I smugly congratulated myself on being so well prepared. What I wasn't prepared for, however, was the possibility that the evocation might actually work.

The first student to arrive was D. R., who proudly handed me his newly acquired first edition of Laycock's The Complete Enochian Dictionary—the first one I had ever seen.[6] As I always do when someone hands me something rare or expensive, I feigned profound gratitude and gushed, "Oh! Thank you!" He quickly snatched it back out of my hands.

Once the rest of the class arrived, I asked for a volunteer to read the Call in the angelic language and sit in the visionary driver's seat. To my great anxiety, our only volunteer was David Wilson, the most cynical member of the class. I was certain that our class curmudgeon would receive no vision whatsoever and all of our efforts would be the target of his ridicule for many months to come. Still, he was willing to give it a try, so I switched on our little tape recorder and we proceeded.

After I banished and opened the temple, David read the Call twice, closed his eyes, and sat quietly for only a few seconds. Then, to all of our surprise, he casually started to describe in great detail his vision of a desert of white crystalline sand that sprouted columns of volcanic rock.

We were all thrilled. I asked if he saw any living things, an angel, or a spirit. He said "No." I encouraged him to repeat the Call a third time. As soon as he was finished, he excitedly described an enormous black cone arising from beneath the sand. David fell silent for a moment. He told us the cone was opening. Then, with a shout that startled us all... "It's him! It's him! I see him!"

He described a large, humanoid figure seemingly constructed from the same material as the cone. It had no face, its head was egg-shaped and flat in front. Its fingerless hands had the appearance of mittens. "This is Laidrom!" David announced reverently.

We were all in shock. None of us were prepared for this. David reached for a pad of paper and a pencil and scribbled down a few notes and a sketch. Before I could stutter out words of welcome, David let out a nervous giggle and said,

"Lon, I feel like... I feel... I could make strange sounds."

"Go with it!" I don't think I really meant it.

*"Naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayef...*this is..."

"No! Relax, let it happen!" I tried to sound calm.

"I mean it, I feel like and idiot. I'm too... sil-si anxilxi-to-da-arp nan-ta (inaudible) ... ef... efe thar-zi. I'm sorry... that's all. Nothing like this has ever happened before. I just felt like doing it."

I didn't know what to say. I finally salvaged the presence of mind to thank Laidrom for appearing. I was painfully embarrassed that I couldn't think of anything to say to this perfectly well-mannered angel standing in my living room. I finally stuttered something stupid to the effect that we really appreciated him stopping by, and we'd sure like to visit with him again sometime soon, then I hurriedly closed and banished the temple.

For a few seconds no one said a word. Then everyone started talking at once. I rewound the tape and we listened to the strange words that had tumbled out of David's mouth. Of course they didn't make any sense, but it was such a thrill to hear them.

We rewound the tape repeatedly and eventually transcribed three audible strings of syllables:

naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayeff zil-zi-anzilzi-lo-da-arp nan-ta (inaudible) ef...efee thar-zi.

We referred to D.R.'s The Complete Enochian Dictionary, and in short order discovered:

Nanta, elo Hoath zorge ef.
"Spirit of Earth, first worshiper friendly visit."
Zil zien
"stretch forth hands"

Zilodarp Nanta
"stretch forth and conquer Spirit of Earth"
Ef etharzi
"visit in peace."

David appeared uncharacteristically shaken by what had happened. He insisted, and I didn't doubt his truthfulness, that he had not so much as even glanced at any of the Enochian Calls before that evening.

For the next three years, we would hold class two nights a week and focus exclusively on Enochian magick. We would depend increasingly on The Complete Enochian Dictionary to help us navigate the complexities of the angelic hierarchies and serve as our pronunciation guide to angelic language. David's visions would continue to take us on amazing excursions to the Elemental worlds, but as he became more accustomed to hearing the words of the Calls, his talent for breaking spontaneously into the angelic tongue diminished and finally ceased altogether. Yet he remains the most talented seer I have ever encountered.

D. R., bless his heart, eventually moved away. We haven't heard from him in many years. I am forever grateful to him for bringing The Complete Enochian Dictionary to class that memorable night so many years ago. As you have probably guessed, I never returned it to him.

—Lon Milo DuQuette
Costa Mesa, California, 2001

---

[1] Ordo Templi Orientis.

[2] Israel Regardie, ed., Gems from the Equinox, Instructions by Aleister Crowley for His Own Magical Order (Scottsdale, AZ: New Falcon Publications, 1992).

[3] Aleister Crowley, et al., The Equinox Volume 1, Numbers 1-10 (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, Inc., 1998).

[4] Israel Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn (St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1992).

[5] Each Elemental Tablet has a Solar King and six Planetary Seniors. These seven spirits are very high on the Enochian hierarchical ladder.

[6] The Complete Enochian Dictionary was first published in London by Askin Publishers, LTD. in 1978.

Incomprehensibilis est in aeternitate tua

- the Angel Raphael to John Dee, 31 March 1583

PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION

The republication of The Complete Enochian Dictionary almost two decades after I wrote the original preface is a significant milestone. In the intervening period, more than a dozen books on Dr. John Dee and the Enochian language have appeared. Some of these have advanced our knowledge of Dee and his magical systems, by publishing more of his original works. Very few of these have added to our knowledge of Enochian, the language, and very few changes have needed to be made to this dictionary.

Some of the other books have merely reworked material already available, and a few, such as Gerald Schueler's Enochian Physics (Llewellyn, 1988) have gone way beyond Dee's original work into areas which Dee would neither recognize nor understand. Gerald Schueler's Enochian Magic (Llewellyn, 1985) is much more relevant to the present work. Some books, such as The Rosicrucian Secrets (Aquarian, 1985) simply used Dee's name by bogusly ascribing authorship to Dee.

What is for certain is that there is a new generation of readers and practitioners (often very different classes of people) who are enthralled by the marvelous and detailed works of the good Doctor and his rather shifty skryer, Edward Kelley.

The first editon if this dictionary was published in the United Kingdom by Askin Publishers, a company no longer active. Askin attempted to publish worthwhile texts of the Western Magical Tradition which were not otherwise easily available to practitioners. It is cheering to see that Dr. Meric Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers [sic] between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits, 1659—which was the first extensive printed source of Dee's magical actions, and which was first reprinted by Askin in 1974—has been subsequently reprinted at least twice more, demonstrating the perennial interest in Dee's works.

Don Laycock, my co-worker and friend in these Enochian mysteries, died on December 28, 1988. Don, as a Doctor of Linguistics at the University of Canberra, left behind many monuments to his work with language, including that of the Australian Aborigine and dialects and languages of the South Pacific. But of all these languages, none was so strange—or fascinated him as much—as the language of the angels, John Dee's Enochian.

During the year or so that he was in London we spent many months in the British Museum, reading, copying and summarizing the original manuscripts. On some evenings, we worked together on the practical side of the invocations, and Don knew many of the Calls fluently and resoundingly by heart. For a while, a copy of the Complete Enochian Dictionary stood in the Manuscript Room of the British Museum as a reference aid to the decipherment of the original manuscripts themselves, until one unscrupulous scholar decided that he had more need of it than all the other readers!

The foundation of the British Museums collection was the original collection of Sir Hans Sloane's rare books, manuscripts, and curiosities that were purchased by the trustees of the British Museum for 20,000 pounds in 1753. Among these manuscripts were John Dee's originals and Elias Ashmole's manuscript copies. In 1759, the British Museum was formally opened, and the present building was complete in 1847. The great reading room was opened ten years later. Dee certainly would have approved of his works finishing up there, as he had tried to interest Queen Elizabeth I in founding such a national book collection.

What Don and I discovered about Dee's systems (for there are several distinct systems of magic in his manuscripts) and about his angels, both in the Museum, and in the practical use of the Calls, forms the basis of my book on Enochian Magic, which has yet to see the light of day.

After Don returned to Australia, the manuscript of this book was taken during the course of a burglary. Not content to sit down under the police assurances that few of such burglaries are ever solved, I took counsel with Dee's angels. Although the burglar neither knew me, nor cared about such things, he found himself inexorably drawn to find out more about this book and its contents. Within a week he had, much against his will, contacted me to ask about it. The police, of course, followed this up, and after he was arrested the manuscript returned to my possession. Since then I have been in two minds about offering it for publication, despite the efforts of several very persuasive friends.

After the Elizabethan period there were other examples of both communication with the angels through mediums, and of great gullibility. An example of both of these occurs in Goodwin Wharton by Kent Clark (OUP, 1984) which is a summary of Wharton's diaries kept during his extraordinary life from 1653 to 1701. Wharton felt that he regularly conversed with the fairies, even the Faery Queen herself, and the angels, but each time in English. Dee's work stands alone as a grammatical guide to the angelic language itself.

Like Dee, Wharton was interested in everything mechanical and spiritual, including practical deep sea diving (he invented several pieces of apparatus for this purpose), searching for treasure guarded by fierce spirits, and conversations with the angels (through his often pregnant skryer), and even with God himself. Like Dee, Uriel and the angel Ahab were two of Wharton's favorite communicating angels. Wharton also had time for politics (as did Dee) and had a permanent seat in the House of Commons, was involved in several royal intrigues, and was promoted from Lieutenant-Colonel of Cavalry to Lord of the Admiralty. A highly public life is not always incompatible with magical work, and a Renaissance turn of mind seems to have been a characteristic of such men. Some of Dee's non-magical works have appeared in modern scholarly editions, such as Wayne Shumaker's John Dee on Modern Astronomy:

Propaedeumata Aphoristica (1558 and 1568), [in] Latin and English (University of California Press, 1978). Other Dee fragments from the Monas Hieroglyphica and his preface to Euclid, together with a sampling of his diaries were published by Gerald Suster in John Dee Essential Readings (Aquarian/Crucible, 1986).

Dee has appeared in at least two memorable fiction books. In the modern The House of Dr. Dee, by Peter Ackroyd (Hamish Hamilton, 1993), Dee is portrayed as living in a squalid tenement in Cloak Lane in Clerkenwell in East London, rather than in the historically correct rambling old house in Mortlake by the Thames in West London. Other considerable liberties are taken by the author who is interested in time shifts between Dee's time and the present. A much more magical portrayal of Dee appears in the translation of Gustav Meyrink's The Angel of the West Window (Daedalus, 1991), which involves the Emperor Rudolph of Prague, and some interesting Rosicrucian dreams and visions.

However, anyone wishing to really understand Dee's magical work—after the pious sentiments have been stripped out—had better look to the tradition of the early grimoires rather than to the later and more elaborate system which the Golden Dawn derived from Dee's work. Although the latter is very intellectually satisfying, the roots from which Enochian magic grew will be found in the rich compost of the grimoires, or grammars of sorcery which dealt with the calling of both angels and demons. Mathers, who helped build the Golden Dawn system, was also a great translator of grimoires, and if Aleister Crowley is to be believed, a great practitioner as well.

A classic example of such a grimoire is The Sworn Book of Honorius the Magician, as composed by Honorius through counsel with the Angel Hocroell (Heptangle Books, 1978), which was well-edited from two British Museum manuscripts by Daniel Driscoll. I refer anyone who doubts this connection to page 11 of this beautifully printed edition.

The seminal works that have been published in the last two decades, and which any serious student should acquire, apart from those listed in the bibliography, are:

Geoffrey James. The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee (Heptangle Books, 1984), particularly recommended;

Adam McLean. A Treatise on Angel Magic, being a Complete translation of Ms. Harley 6482 in the British Library (Phanes Press, 1990);

Joseph Peterson (editor). The Five Books of Mystical Exercises of Dr. John Dee...as revealed to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley A. D. 1581-1583 (Magnum Opus, 1985);

Robert Turner. The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, a primer of hermetic science and magical procedure by the Elizabethan scholar-mage (Aquarian Press, 1986);

———. Elizabethan Magic (Element Books, 1989), some of which should be taken with a grain of salt.

The Enochian system is much more than just the books written about it. It is one of the more complex bridges ever built between this world and the world of daemons, spirits, and angels, a piece of spiritual engineering created by one of the most brilliant minds of his age. As such it deserves to be traversed with care. But as it was filtered through the tricksy mind of Dee's mercurial skryer Edward Kelley, this path can easily become the path of the Fool.

Stephen Skinner
London 1994

PREFACE

During the 16th Century, Cracow, Antwerp and Prague were the great centres of magical and alchemical enquiry and experiment. Cornelius Agrippa published his De Occulta Philosophia in Antwerp in 1531. Prague during the reign of King Rudolf II was devoted to the Hermetic arts and sciences which fascinated its monarch to the exclusion of all else. King Stephen of Poland, who had his seat at Cracow, was related to the Hungarian Bathori family which legend identifies with Count Dracula. Together with Cracow, Prague inherited an extensive heritage of Hasidic Judaism with its heavy mystical, magical and qabalistic content, in fact it was in Prague in the 1580's that Rabbi Loew engendered the famous golem, a figure which has haunted the history of the practical qabalah, and the ghetto of Prague, ever since.

Dr John Dee (1527-1608), mathematician and Astrologer Royal to Queen Elizabeth I, author of the main introductory textbook on mathematics of his age and innovator of many of the navigational aids which enabled the Elizabethan explorers to discover the New World, visited each of these cities in turn. First Antwerp in 1550 (and later in 1562-4), then Cracow in 1584, where he had audience with Stephen Bathori (King of Poland and relative of Elizabeth Bathori, the 'Bloody Countess'), later passing through Hesse-Cassel (a centre of Rosicrucian activity) after visiting Prague and Trebona during 1586-9.

John Dee's interest in magic arose out of his comprehensive studies, typical of the Renaissance man of the time, which commenced with Latin, an essential requisite of any scholar of the period, at the age of ten. Five years later he was sent to Cambridge, where he studied the traditional Trivium of subjects, grammar, rhetoric and logic. However it was not till the following years when he undertook the Quadrivium (arithmetic, geometry, music and astronomy), that his studies, and the eventual direction of his life work really got underway, for as he says himself 'I was so vehemently bent to studie, that for those yeares I did inviolably keepe this order; only to sleepe four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the time of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning.'

At the same time he mastered the two Tongues, Greek and Hebrew (the latter not quite as thoroughly as the former) and the Three Philosophies, natural, moral and metaphysical.

In 1546 Dee's position as an under-reader in Greek and a founding fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, seemed to promise the beginnings of a brilliant academic career, but the following summer he visited the Low Countries where his interest in geography flowered, following his acquaintance with Giraldus Mercator (the famous Dutch cartographer responsible for the well-known square-grid Mercator map projection), and Gemma Frisius, both of whom provided him with geographical equipment, globes, astronomer's staff and ring, and material on the art of navigation, which he duly took back to his university.

Having realised that some arts and sciences were very much further advanced in Europe than in England, and realising that England could profit by these, he visited Louvain the following summer. In 1550 a short trip to Antwerp brought him in contact with another geographer, Abraham Ortelius (whose house still stands in Antwerp, and whose detailed geographical charts and equipment now reside in the Antwerp Navigational Museum). Pursuing his other great interest, Mathematics, he lectured on Euclid in Paris, to packed halls, establishing his reputation immediately. He was offered a post of King's Reader in Mathematics at Paris University on a stipend of two hundred crowns, which for patriotic reasons Dee refused. This pattern was consistently repeated, with Dee refusing to quit the service of Elizabeth I for far more lucrative positions. On several occasions, the Czar of Russia, Fedor I, offered Dee a position in his court as advisor and physician, at the incredible salary of 2,000 crowns a year, with food supplied from the table of the Czar himself, and a house and additional salary from the Lord Protector, but the offer was again turned down by Dee. Returning to England the following year, he met Jerome Cardan (1552) who was probably responsible for stirring up Dee's interest in the mathematical conjuration of spirits and reinforcing the influences that Dee must most certainly have encountered earlier in his career at Antwerp.

These interests were almost nipped in the bud by the accession of Queen Mary to the throne, when his ambiguous interest in magic coupled with the implied heresy of his predominantly Protestant leanings resulted in his imprisonment for three months in 1555. Interestingly enough, his skill in theology resulted in Dee being requested by the Bishop of London to act as a judge in one of the heresy trials, in which he was one of the accused.

When Elizabeth I succeeded to the throne, John Dee's fortunes changed considerably: he was even asked to select (with due recourse to the influence of the stars) a propitious date for her coronation: a calculation which by all accounts of the Elizabethan era, must have been well performed!

Five years later Dee set out to visit various centres of learning making a very rapid tour of most of Europe including Antwerp, where he met Christopher Plantin (whose presses, which still exist, were justly famous throughout Europe, and whose type design provided the model for that used in setting this book). Here he secured a copy of Trithemius' influential Steganographia (concerned with 'angel-magic', and perhaps cryptography), before visiting Zurich, Urbino, Rome (where legend has it that he had audience with the Pope), Venice, and finally Presburg in Hungary where he was granted audience with Maximillian II, to whom he was later to dedicate his Monas Hieroglyphica.

Dee wrote the Monas in seven days in 1564, and in the same year it was published in Antwerp. Significantly it was not to appear in Dee's native tongue till 1947. The Monas, whose full title, The Monad, Hieroglyphically, Mathematically, Magically, Cabbalistically and Anagogically Explained gives a fair indication of its complexity and scope, is a unique blend of some of the more picturesque alchemical allegories woven into the otherwise rather dry fabric of a book, constructed as a series of exact Euclidean type theorems; with liberal sprinklings of interpretations of the Monas itself (which was a combination of the symbols for Mercury and Aries drawn in a specific proportion). This is elaborated with geometric details for drawing the Monas, and an explanation of the symbolic meanings of these proportions.

In the same year as the Monas was published, Dee went to live south-west of London, at Mortlake, in a rambling old house well-provided with various outhouses for his many scientific interests.

The site of the house, opposite the Church of St Mary the Virgin which Dee later endowed, and in which he is buried, abuts onto the Thames. Elizabeth I often came to visit him by Royal barge from Richmond or Hampton Court Palace.

From here, living on the income of several rectories, Dee quietly pursued his studies, which included writing a classic preface to the first English edition of Euclid's Elements of Geometrie, and planning voyages in search of the north-west passage, or for gold in Labrador. He reputedly accompanied Martin Frobisher on at least one of these exploratory voyages.

In response to Elizabeth's request to Dee for information about the lands to which she was heir, he wrote a work called Of Famous and Rich Discoveries..., which whilst purporting to be a treatise on various voyages of discovery undertaken by Europeans (later to be used by Hakluyt as a source for his accounts), was in fact designed to promote Elizabeth's Imperial aspirations, by assuring her of her rightful ownership of various lands, by appealing to historical precedent. Considering Dee's reputation, it is interesting that he was also called on by the Queen to counteract the effects of a wax image which had been discovered in Lincoln's Inn Fields, and which was thought to be part of a magical plot against her. This establishes Dee's court reputation as that of magician as as well as a geographer and mathematician.

After a first marriage which lasted just one year, he married Jane Fromond (a member of the Queen's household) and three years later took up what he considered to be the most important study of his life. This was the communication, via the medium of a shewstone with 'angels' in an attempt to quench his overmastering desire for knowledge beyond that normally accessible to mortals, to reach up in fact, like Enoch or the Biblical prophets, to God, the very source of knowledge itself. As Dee put it:

> 'I have often read in thy (God's) books and records, how Enoch injoyed thy favour and conversation; with Moses thou was familiar; And also that to Abraham, Isaack and Jacob, Joshua, Gideon, Esdras, Daniel, Tobias and sundry others thy good angels were sent by thy disposition, to Instruct them, informe them, helpe them, yea in worldly and domestick affaires, yea and sometymes to satisfie their desires, doubtes, and questions of thy Secrete: And furdermore considering, the Shewstone, which the High Prieste did use, by thy owne ordering... that this wisdome could not be come by at mans hand or by humaine power, but only from thee (ô God).'

Dee reasoned that intercourse with these 'spiritual creatures', provided that malevolent, misleading and demonic spirits were banished, was one of the highest ends man could aim at. It is here that magic enters Dee's work. The exactness of mathematics allied with the convoluted philosophy of the Hebrew qabalah and Arabic magico-alchemical works, produced a very solid base from which magic (both natural and metaphysical) could be approached in a scientific manner. This had two effects. First it attracted men of Dee's calibre to the study of magic. However the second effect of this union was the tarring of mathematics with the same brush as had previously been reserved for the heretic or the local practitioner of wort-cunning. This attitude resulted in the sack of Dee's house at Mortlake (during his absence in Europe) and the haphazard destruction of some of his scientific equipment. Ironically enough his 'instruments of sorcery', his skrying stones, Holy Table, wax tablets lamen and chest containing the Libri Mysteriorum accompanied him to the Continent, and so escaped the rage of the mob.

However it was in 1581, before Dee left for Europe, that he began his magical experiments. His avowed aim was to establish contact with the angels, to discover that knowledge which was not to be had either from books or from experiment.

During this period Dee employed Edward Kelley and several other skryers, or seers, to obtain a series of communications which he attributed to the agency of angels and spirits. Despite the fact that the first record of the skrying is dated December 22nd, there is evidence to suggest that the skrying began in a haphazard way as early as March 8th, 1581. The first workings were based on a grimoire type of approach, relying to an extent on equipment. This included wax tablets, a skrying table, a gold lamen and several shewstones, of obsidian and rock crystal. This was evolved into a sophisticated system which involved setting the skrying stone (several were used including a conventional looking crystal ball and the black obsidian mirror) upon the elaborately engraved Sigillum Aemeth (still preserved in the British Museum) which was in turn placed upon a special table inscribed with a hexagram, enclosed within a frame of Enochian letters, and supporting seven specially designed talismans, the whole insulated from the floor by a further four wax tablets, miniature versions of the larger Sigillum Aemeth.

The wax Sigillum Emeth used to support the skrying stone. (Courtesy of the Trustees of the British Museum).

The early communications set down in Dee's Libri Mysteriorum deal with communications from Annael and Uriel, who dictated exact instructions for the engraving of the table, lamen, ring and sigils required. The third book opens with the designs for the seven talismans to be used on the skrying table, and concludes with the Tabula Collecta of the 49 angels whose invocatory modus operandi is explained in the fourth book.

Dee and Kelley pressed on, skrying now as often as several times a day till the complete outline of a self-contained system of magic was obtained and set down in Dee's manuscript, De Heptarchia Mystica, so named because of the 7×7 angels, whose invocations, hours, seals and sigils are described therein. Dee's description of two of these creatures will suffice to show their variety:

> 'He appeared in his red apparell: & he opened his Clothes & there did issue, mighty & most terrible gastly Flames of Fire out of his sides: which no mortall Eye could abide to looke upon any long while. And in the marvelous raging Fire, the word BRORGES did appeare tossed to and fro of the very flames. His Seale or Character is this . . .

And by way of contrast:

> 'Therefore he appeared in a long purple Gowne, & on his head a triple Crowne of Gold, with a measuring Rod of gold in his hand, divided into three equall parts: in the forme of a very well proportioned man.'

The significance of these descriptions is the light they throw on Dee's collection of 49 'Angelorum Bonorum', adding a Goetic dimension in much the same way that works like The Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage allows that it is as necessary for practitioners to exercise their authority over the evil or Qliphothic aspects, as it is over the more benevolent positive manifestations of the non-physical universe.

By March 1582, Kelley had commenced to transmit the first passages in the first version of that strange language Enochian. This material never found its way into print as has the better known later Enochian of the Calls which was made popular by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and later by Aleister Crowley. An example of this early Enochian, by way of contrast with the later (translated) material comes from an 'action' dated 5th April 1582:

> 'Amchama zeuoth luthimba ganeph iamda ox oho iephad mad noxa voscaph bamgephes noschol apeth iale lod ga NA zuma datques...'

Returning however to events in the external world, we find Dee correcting the Julian Calendar in 1582 to a greater degree of accuracy than any other contemporary mathematician (although the council of Archbishops turned down his proposals on the grounds that they smacked of Popishness, thereby putting off English calendar reform by several centuries).

In the same year Dee and Kelley met Count Albertus Laski, a palatine of Siradz and aspirant to the Polish Crown. The next year the Dee and Kelley household set out for Cracow.

It is at this stage that the published part of Dee's Libri Mysteriorum takes up the account. This was first printed from Dee's manuscript by Meric Casaubon in 1659 as A True and Faithful Relation of what Passed for Many Yeers between Dr John Dee... and Some Spirits, and re-issued by Askin Publishers, London, in 1974.

These 'angelic conversations' cover a wide range of material, from the enumeration of every country on the (then known) face of the earth with their presiding angels, through prophecy (of varying degreees of accuracy), to the amazing collection of transcripts in the Enochian tongue.

Amongst the more 'magical' material, despite passages of incredible triviality and banality, there is a hard core of extremely interesting material recurring throughout the 'angelic' conversations, such that Elias Ashmole (the famous antiquary and early Freemason), and later MacGregor Mathers, one of the founders of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, took portions of the system and derived from it their own systems of magic. Ashmole's attempts, covering a period of some five years (1671-76), are closer to the spirit of Dee's work than Mathers' interpretation, and tend to confirm the objectivity of the intelligences involved in the original communications.

Along these lines there is a record by a different experimenter dated 16th October, 1583, which tends to add weight to the objective existence of the phenomena recorded by Dee in A True and Faithful Relation... It begins:

> 'At ii a Clock at night, I & my Companions having begun Action, at the request & full consent of all the Company, we did fully agree, that we should not desist, till we had brought something to perfection, & having begun Action, & all things for the same purpose ready & fitted; thus give a briefe & true account of what followes.
>
> After the first Invocation, twice or thrice repeated, there appeared two Men, in the furthest Glass, visible to some part of the Company, & not to other some; but proceeding on, & Invocating highly, there came a very great blow upon the Floore, which made a very great noise, & before it ceased, it did whirle about severall tymes, to the astonishment & admiration of all ye Company, & still proceeding on, & reading further, there came something, which fell pat upon the Table, & from the Table upon the Ground, which made a smaller Noise upon ye floore, then the other did & so vanisht, & soe much for ye night, only when Action was ended, we could find nothing that was the cause of ye noise...'

Returning to a more modern application of Dee's work we find the brilliant syntheses by MacGregor Mathers into the syllabus of the Adeptus Minor grade of the Golden Dawn at the end of the 19th century. Although he used only a small part of the vast amount of material that Dee left, he incorporated the Elemental Tablets with their associated correspondences and the Thirty Calls of the Aethyrs before referred to, whilst Westcott, co-founder of the Order, elaborated a four-sided version of chess based on the Enochian system.

Much of Mathers' adaptation of the original system was done to make it compatible with the Golden Dawn's existing qabalistic basis, which, although ultimately based upon the qabalah that Dee was familiar with, contained many elements not found in Dee's original work, such as the Tarot Atus and the Egyptian Pantheon.

For Dee, the Angels also provided advice and reproof which he conveyed to two of the most powerful patrons he sought, Stephen Bathori King of Poland, and Rudolf II of Bohemia. He was lucky not to have incurred any more painful a punsihment for his pains than a partial banishment by the latter. Dee and Kelley accordingly sought refuge in 1586 at the castle of Count Rosenberg at Trebona, where Dee stayed for two years. Meanwhile Kelley managed, through his alchemical experiments, to curry favour first with the Count and then with Rudolf, who later knighted him.

A True and Faithful Relation... which opened in Lesden in May 1583 closes with the agreement between Dee and Kelley to 'hold their wives in common' (wife-swapping not being an entirely modern prerogative) at which point the whole tenor of the communications changes and passages of considerable power appear, contrary to anything Kelley had up to this point produced.

The spouse-swapping episode began with an alleged commandment by the Angels conveyed by Kelley, 'that we two had our two wives in such sort as we might use them in common' (April 18th, 1587). This was consummated on the night of 22nd May as is evident from semi-obliterated remarks in the original manuscript which were not printed by Casaubon.

This arrangement, which although productive of some of the most interesting material recorded by Dee, probably barely lasted till July 19th when Dee records ' a certayne kinde of recommendation between our wives. Next day saw relenting of E. K. also by my Lord's entrety'. Unfortunately with the exception of four pages in Casaubon these MS notes belong to the greate Chasme of 20 years from May 23, 1587 to March 20, 1607: the papers which fell into the hands of Elias Ashmole, but which do not appear to have survived. They contain Dee's record of the last 'actions' with Kelley before he left Dee's service.

The delivery of these passages is in many ways similar to several Gnostic works describing the descent of Sophia, The Song of Solomon, and Aleister Crowley's Liber Legis, with which there are some remarkable similarities in wording. Crowley, incidentally, claimed Edward Kelley as one of his past incarnations, which, rather than necessarily supporting transmigration of souls, suggests the affinity Crowley felt for Kelley's work, which may have led to a certain amount of unconscious plagiarism.

In February 1589 Dee saw the last of Kelley, and from thenceforth Dee's skrying experiments were with very inferior skryers such as Bartholomew Hickman, whose skrying records were later burnt when Dee discovered that he was a fraud. Till Kelley's death, Dee continued to hope for a reconciliation with his old skryer.

Dee's enthusiasm had not waned however for he named his next daughter Madimi, after the young girl who was a constant visitor to the crystal during the skrying sessions.

By this time he was back in his beloved England where he set about restoring his house in Mortlake which had been damaged by the mob during his six year absence. He partly re-assembled his collection of books which contained in excess of 2,500 books and manuscripts on mathematics, magic, alchemy, philosophy, cryptography, classical literature, geography and the qabalah.

The last six years of his life were spent under James I, an unpleasant situation for anybody remotely suspected of witchcraft, this monarch having been responsible for the most savage persecution of witches and magicians ever to occur in England.

Dee died in 1608 and was buried in the chancel of the church in Mortlake, opposite his house.

On one hand Dee is looked upon as a man of the Renaissance with heavy medieval leanings, rather like Elias Ashmole, who combined membership of the Royal Society (avowedly formed for the advancement of the empirical sciences) with intimate involvement in astrology, alchemy and other interests which would have been regarded as rather reactionary by other members of the Royal Society. On the other hand, the populace saw him as a sorcerer, or to use Dee's words when writing his own defence 'a companion of hellhounds, and a caller and conjurer of wicked and damned spirits'. Likewise Dee was regarded slightly askance at Court, although it seems he was never once doubted by Elizabeth I, to whom he remained devoted for the duration of his life. In between the rather dry but learned magus and the 'damned sorcerer' lies the real Dee: a man who perpetuated the tradition of Hermes Trismegistus and helped 'Christianize' the qabalah, who in all modesty aspired to be another Enoch, who wished to have God's word directly transmitted by God's messengers the angels, nevertheless a very humble man, as his many prayers preceding the skrying actions testify.

Dee is a very important link in the magical tradition, not only because he brought back ideas to England from European centres of learning, or because he aided the cross-fertilization of the Rosicrucian movement, as is aptly pointed out by Frances Yates in The Rosicrucian Enlightenment, but because his magical research is voluminous, carefully documented, and original.

Stephen Skinner
London 1975

ENOCHIAN

Angelic language or mortal folly?

Languages come and languages go. Something like seven thousand natural languages have been recorded, in one form or another, since the beginning of recorded history; and at least a thousand more languages have been invented by men, for purposes ranging from magic to extraterrestrial communication.

But no language has a stranger history than the Enochian language documented in this dictionary. Perhaps strangest of all is that we still do not know whether it is a natural language or an invented language — or whether it is, perhaps, the language of the angels, as its originators believed. In this introduction, the data is presented for the reader to make up his own mind.

The personalities: John Dee (1527-1608)

According to the horoscope he later cast for himself, John Dee was born at Mortlake on the morning of 13 July, 1527, under the sign of Cancer, with Sagittarius in the ascendant — a good omen, say the astrologers, for a career based on learning and the occult. His father, Rowland Dee, was Superintendent of the Royal Table, at the English Court; but John Dee was later to claim a proud genealogy that included Welsh kings and princes, all the way back to King Arthur. Whatever the truth of these claims, it is certain that John Dee became a distinguished man in his own right. Though he published little, it is apparent that he exercised a powerful intellectual influence on the greatest minds of the time. He was a dedicated, even fanatical, scholar, resolving, when an undergraduate at Cambridge, to spend eighteen hours in study each day, with only four hours for sleep, and two hours for meals.

He graduated Master of Arts from Cambridge in 1548, and went abroad to study further at Louvain. Later he gave lectures at the University of Paris that attracted so many students that they had to crowd at the windows to listen: at this time, Dee was only twenty-three years old.

His reputation in Europe and at home continued to grow, though it was always tempered with the ignorant fear of him as a sorcerer and demonolator. He took few actual jobs, being dependent for most of his life on royal and ecclesiastical pensions —which never amounted to more than about eighty pounds a year. For most of his life, he was chronically short of money — which is not surprising when one takes into account that he spent more than three thousand pounds (or eighty thousand pounds in current value) on building up Elizabethan England's greatest library.

Some idea of the range of Dee's interests can be obtained from the contents of this library, which contained at least 2500 printed books and manuscripts. The works dealt with mathematics, alchemy, philosophy, classical literature, geography — and the hermetic tradition. Dee had thoroughly studied the 'Christian cabbala', particularly from the works of Cornelius Agrippa, and was to become more and more immersed in the qabalistic tradition as time went on.

In fact, Meric Casaubon, in his edition (1659) of part of the record of Dee's seances, scathingly described Dee as 'a Cabalistical man, up to the ears'. One can also get a good impression of Dee's character from this longer statement by Casaubon — although Casaubon himself does not think much of Dee's mind:

> 'Some men come into the world with Cabalistical Brains; their heads are full of mysteries; they see nothing, they read nothing, but their brain is on work to pick somewhat out of it that is not ordinary; and out of the very A B C that children are taught, rather than fail, they will fetch all the secrets of Gods Wisdom; tell you how the world was created, how governed, and what will be the end of all things. Reason and Sense that other men go by, they think the acorns that the old world fed upon; fools and children may be content with them but they see things by another Light.'

The description is a good one, but it can describe two kinds of individual: the magus, or the obsessed fool. Which Dee was, the reader will have to decide, on the basis of his spiritist seances. It is not known just when he began to seek or achieve effective communications with the beings he regarded as angels, but it was probably not before 1581. From about March of that year, as we learn from his Private Diary, he was troubled by odd dreams, and strange knockings in the night. To those who accept the objective reality of Dee's spirits, it would seem that the spirits were anxious to get in touch with him, rather than the other way round.

Be that as it may, by October of that year Dee had found a medium, one Barnabas Saul, who, using as a crystal a stone given Dee by a 'friend', reported to Dee the words of the angels Annael and Michael — and who later denied seeing any spirits at all, for fear of prosecution for conjuring. But Dee was dissatisfied with Saul as a medium, and dismissed him after working with him for only a few months.

The personalities: Edward Kelley (1555-1595)

Opportunely — for Dee's appetite for spiritual communications had been thoroughly whetted — there appeared at his house in Mortlake on 8 March 1582 a man calling himself Edward Talbot, afterwards to be known by his true name of Edward Kelley. Kelley was about twenty-seven years old at the time; but his previous life remains something of a mystery. There is a long-standing tradition — unfortunately not well-substantiated — that he had had his ears cut off for forgery. He seems to have been something of an occult charlatan, travelling England living off a reputation for alchemy and the preparation of magical elixirs. On several occasions he is known to have been in possession of old books, sometimes in cipher, purporting to give the location of buried treasures. He was not uneducated; he had been an undergraduate at Oxford, but was apparently dismissed. He spoke Latin well enough to travel in Europe, and converse with Dee's Continental friends; he makes frequent grammatical mistakes, but of his general intelligence there is no doubt.

Dee was at first suspicious of this young man who offered his services as a 'skryer', or mediumistic visionary; he seems to have thought that Kelley might have been a spy sent to gain information on his conjuring activities, to report him to the authorities. But the doubts must have been resolved, for already on 10 March that year Dee was giving the new medium a trial — with results so successful that there began on that day a strange and close association between the two men that was to last for some seven years, and to involve them in a series of actions with a host of spirits of all ages and sexes, with magical tablets, lost and miraculously restored books, buried treasure, alchemical recipes, and in the end — a curiously modern touch — wife-swapping.

Dee's drawing of the Sigillum Emeth in Sloane MS 3188, f.30. (Courtesy of the British Library).

The first seances

Kelley was an immediate success as a medium, and on that first recorded occasion was granted a vision of Uriel, who revealed his secret sigil or signature, and gave the preliminary instructions for the construction of a powerful magical talisman, the Sigillum Emeth (or Aemeth), to be made of wax and used in further invocations. The original tablet, and smaller similar ones, can still be seen in the British Museum. The design may ultimately derive from Sloane manuscript 313; Kircher, in his book Oedipus Aegyptiacus (Rome, 1652-4), gives a version of the seal with traditional angelic names in place of the Enochian names of Dee. It is unlikely that he could have got this from Dee's manuscripts, then, as now, unpublished.

The pattern for almost all the recorded seances is established right at the beginning. The seance opens with a prayer, the magic crystal or 'shewstone' is uncovered, and Kelley sees visions and hears voices, whose content he transmits to Dee, the recorder. Several aids to scrying may have been used. Dee is usually credited with having at least two: a rock crystal globe, and a 'magic mirror' of black obsidian; both of these can be seen in the British Museum. Dee apparently saw and heard nothing (though this is arguable; his Private Diary entry for 25 May 1581 reads: 'Today I had sight offered me in chrystallo, and I saw', and at other times he seems to have heard at least some of the sounds produced, such as thunder, roaring and trumpets).

Many of Kelley's 'messages' consisted of letters of the alphabet arranged in squares. It will be necessary to examine some of the early examples in detail, if we are to be able to formulate any coherent theories about the mystical language that was produced at later sessions.

Two of the earliest squares transmitted by the 'spirits' through Kelley are the following:

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	i
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	†

[20 March 1582]

S	A	A	I_8^{21}	E	M	E^{8}
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E^{30}
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	30	A
I^{26}	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I_8^{21}	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	$_8^{21}$

[21 March 1582]

With reference to the first square, Dee is instructed to 'read downward'; he does so, and, starting with the left-hand column, he finds the following angelic names: Zaphkiel, Zadekiel, Cumael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, Gabriel (with the sign of the cross to fill up the last square).

The procedure with the second square is a bit more complicated. The numbers 8, 26 and 30 are to be read as 'L', at the end of names, 21 is the letter 'E'; and the names are to be read off diagonally, in a south-westerly direction, starting with the 'S' of the top left-hand corner. The following names are produced: (S)Zabathiel, Zedekie(i)l, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, Corabiel, Levanael.

Now, there is nothing new about most of these angelic names. Apart from the archangels Raphael, Michael and Gabriel (Uriel was dictating through Kelley at this point) most of the other names can be found, in identical or very similar forms, in standard magical texts such as those of Agrippa and Peter d'Abano — as Dee himself comments in a marginal note.

This being so, it is hard to believe that these angelic names are in any way derived from the squares; it seems much more likely that they are the formants of the squares. From such a square, once created, it is however possible to derive new names, and in fact Dee is presented with a series of names created from the second square, by reading in different directions along the diagonals. The names were dictated before the square itself was given; the vision was of seven men, seven women, seven 'wenches', and seven boys, each with letters on the fronts of their gowns. These 28 visionary manifestations are given planetary attributions, as follows:

Planet	7 Women	7 Men	7 Wenches	7 Boys
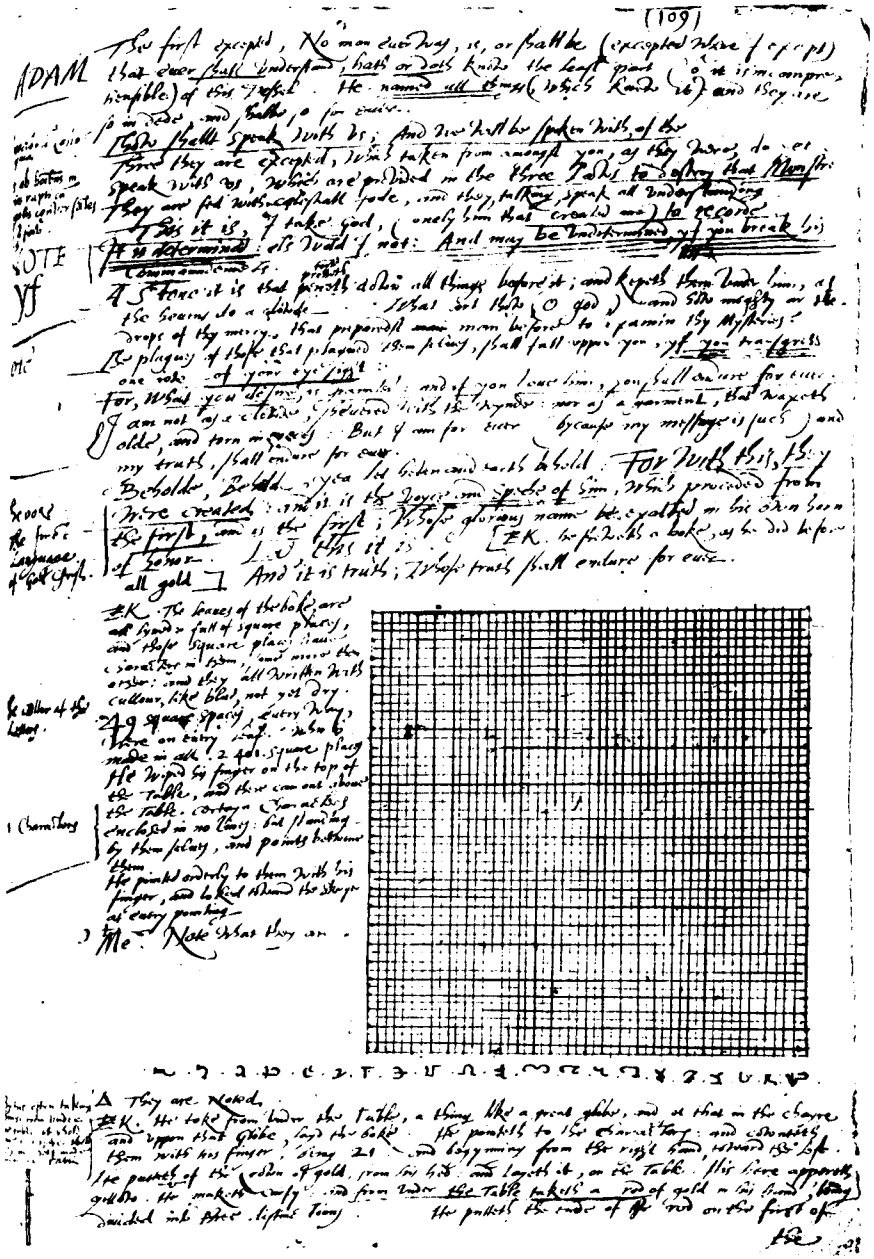
Sun	EL (L)	I	S	E
Moon	ME	IH	AB	AN
Venus	ESE	ILR	ATH	AVE
Jupiter	IANA	DMAL	IZED	LIBA
Mars	AKELE	HEEOA	EKIEI	ROCLE
Mercury	AZDOBN	BEIGIA	MADIMI	HAGONEL
Saturn	STIMCVL	STIMCVL	ESEMELI	ILEMESE
Direction of reading in square	NE	SW	NW	SE

The procedure is hardly mystifying, if we ignore for the moment the claimed spiritual transmission. The names are those used in the construction of the wax seals (the Sigillum Emeth and four others) used by Dee in invocations. The procedure for generating these names would have seemed logical and proper to Dee, as qabalist and mathematician — though his mathematical sense must have been upset by the lack of symmetry in the directions for reading the planetary names. (The desire for symmetry would be better satisfied if either the first or second column were read in in the opposite direction — with LVCMITS as the name of a spirit of Saturn).



Dee's record of the skrying session for 26 March 1583 when the Enochian letters first appeared, in Sloane MS 3188, f.64. (Courtesy of the British Library).

But what is surprising is that never again, in the seven years of seances that followed, do we get a clear picture of the formation of a square from previously-known elements — and only rarely are we in a position to say with certainty just how names have been generated from the squares. Almost a hundred further squares are dictated by the spirits, some of them as large as 49×49; some are dictated straight across, letter by letter, others are created by the rearrangement of previously-dictated squares. But the details of their creation become increasingly baffling — either because the procedure is increasing in complexity, or because Dee is no longer bothering to set down the details for himself, or both. If the Enochian language is generated by some systematic process from squares, whether as a cipher or as a set of mystical words, we do not have the method.

The appearance of the Enochian alphabet

Just after the dictation of the squares discussed above, on 26 March 1583, Edward Kelley produced the first material concerning the 'angelicall language'. On that day he has a vision of a magical book, with the leaves, perhaps inevitably, 'all filled with squares'. The dictating of the contents of this book occupies the seances of the next thirteen months — with some interruptions, in which the spirits dictate other matter, or prophesy, or refuse to appear at all. There is also some interference from non-angelic spirits, mostly of the type that occultists would recognise as elementals.

First of all, the alphabet of the new language appears: twenty-one special characters, each with its own name. The character names are odd, and seem to bear no relation to the phonetic value of the character; but the fact that the names were given in three groups of seven, and total in all 64 letters, may suggest that here again there may be a square concealed: 8×8, or perhaps even 7×9 or 21×3.

The characters appear three times in the manuscript record of this session: once without the names, once with the names, and once as a fair copy, in a slightly different form. They are also repeated, in their final and most stylised form, at the end of the whole sequence, over a year later; there is also a fair copy by Kelley in the manuscript Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus

(Sloane MS. 3189), which is a very sloppy transcript of the contents of the angelic book. In addition, individual words written in the characters, in the handwriting of both Kelley and Dee, appear sporadically throughout the manuscripts.

It is necessary to compare all these versions to get a real idea of the characters. The first two versions, for example, look much more like Dee's Hebrew characters than later versions (the letters named Veh (C), Ged (G), Graph (E), and Fam (S) are identical with Aleph, Cheth, Daleth and Resh). The direction of writing, like that of all Semitic languages, is from right to left, but my attempts to trace this alphabet back to a specific Semitic source have failed. All that can be said is that the characters have a general appearance rather like Samaritan — though their stylised forms may also suggest Ethiopic. The scripts they do not resemble are proto-Semitic, or Egyptian hieroglyphic, or Sumerian — a resemblance that would seem essential if we were to believe that the script, like the angelical language, dated back to 'before the Flood', and was the most ancient script of mankind.

We may seek a plausible explanation for the 'angelical' script in the fact that Dee may well have had in his library ancient manuscripts in a writing that he could not read, and that either he or Kelley could have got the idea from such a source. Moreover, the idea of the 'lost book of Enoch' (mentioned in the Bible at Jude 14) was very much in the air in the sixteenth century; it is mentioned in several Christian commentaries on the qabalah. The first manuscripts of this work, supposed lost throughout all the Middle Ages, were not found until the middle of the seventeenth century, in Ethiopic and Greek versions. Could Dee perhaps have been in possession of an Ethiopic version of the Book of Enoch — which he would certainly not have been able to read?

Another clue to the origin of the Enochian script is given by a sixteenth century work on alchemy: the Voarchadumia of Pantheus (1530). On page 14-15 of this work we find another alphabet called Enochian; it is perhaps not additionally surprising, though it seems never to have been pointed out before, that the British Museum copy of this work had actually belonged to Dee, as early as 1559, as attested by the copious marginal notes. Dee's Enochian alphabet bears no relation to that in Pantheus, but Pantheus may have provided the idea. It seems, in the absence of any other evidence, that the Dee/Kelley alphabet may be fanciful, based perhaps on subconscious recollection of similar scripts in earlier literature. There is certainly nothing in Casaubon's suggestion, in his edition of the Dee diaries, that the characters 'are no other, for the most part but such as were set out and published long agoe by one Theseus Ambrosus out of Magical books'. The reference is to a work published in 1539 (Introductio in Chaldaicam linguam, by Theseus Ambrosius Albonesius), in which are contained a large number of alphabets, both real and magical; and not one of the alphabets resembles Enochian in any way.

The first 'angelical' language

In any case, it is by means of these characters that the first texts in the 'angelical language' are dictated a few days later (29 March 1583 — Good Friday, as it happened to be). In the very first instance, the archangel Raphael names the letters, and Dee writes down these names (as if a Greek word, say λογος, were dictated and written down by the Greek letter names Lambda Omicron Gamma Omicron Sigma). Afterwards, Dee wrote out the English letters corresponding to the characters, and then read back the text for checking by the angelic visitors.

But after the first two texts, Dee began to realise that the method was much too slow, considering the amount of material yet to come:

> 'Yf euery side conteyne 49 rows, and euery row will require so much tyme to be receyued as this hath done it may seme that very long time will be requisite to this doctrine receyuing. But if it be gods good liking, we wold fayne haue some abridgment or compendious manner, wherby we might the sooner be in the work of Gods seruyce.'

By this remark we see again that the 'texts' really represent further squares. Each text is in fact one line of a gigantic 49×49 square, each square containing one word; there are two sets of such texts, or 98 in all. The physical difficulties of constructing a square so large, and fitting it on to one leaf of a book, daunted even Dee and Kelley.

We can just take each line of the square as being a text, and for Secundi uero in tranſitu fluuii ſubſcripti: & Abraæ ꝓceſſi.

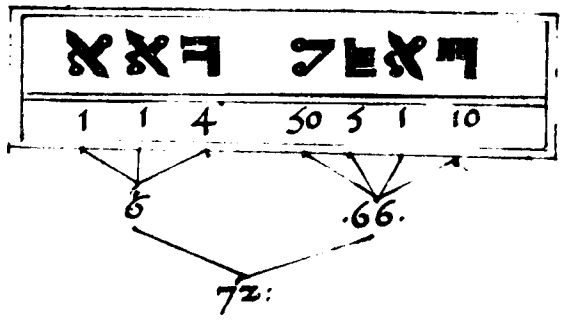
T Ch N V H D G B A

Secũdi caracteres literarum ut ſupra.

C P Ph Ah S N M L C ph I



T & th. S Ish, & ſh. R K & c.

Antiquiores autem hi: & conceſſi Enoch.

th ph ch Z Y X V T

S R Q P O N M L K

Primi caracteres literarũ ut ſupra.

I H G F E D C B A

Pages 14-15 from the copy of the Voarchadumia by Pantheus given to John Dee on 18 January 1559, showing an 'alphabet of Enoch' and Dee's manuscript note deriving the numerical value of his name written in these characters.

easy identification number them from 1 to 49, with the prefix I or II indicating whether the first or second square is meant, when referring to specific texts later in this chapter.

In any case, the angel is annoyed at the request, and whips away the chair and the table; the shewstone goes dark. No more texts are dictated until the following Tuesday (presumably Dee and Kelley had other activities over Easter), and then, as requested, by an abridged method. Now Kelley receives a vision of the whole leaf of the book containing the text, written in the strange characters received the previous week (with which he is obviously not yet quite at home):

> 'A voyce — Read. E.K. — I cannot.
> Δ [Dee]: You should haue lerned the characters perfectly and theyr names, that you mowght now haue redily named them to me as you shold see them.
> A voyce — Say what thow thinkest. Δ: he sayd so to E.K.
> E.K. My hed is all on fire.
> A voyce — What thow thinkest, euery word that speak.
> E.K. I can read all, now, most pefectly, and in the Third row this I see to be red.
> Palce duxma ge na dem oh elog...'

It is still uncertain whether Kelley spells the texts out letter by letter, or whether he reads them off fluently as words. The distinction is important for the understanding of the material from a linguistic point of view; words that are simply 'spelled', and not 'pronounced', may be mere random collections of letters, that do not form pronounceable words at all. The evidence we have is inconclusive. Dee has written the pronunciation over some letters (such as g as j, final u as f) — an unnecessary procedure if the texts were written down as heard. This pronunciation must have been given at some stage after the texts were delivered, even though the angels specifically forbid 'dubble repetition', or reading over the text after it is dictated — the quote on page 35 gives the reason.

On the other hand, the pronounceability of the words of the texts speaks in favour for a theory of the words having been read out one after the other, without spelling. There are no sounds that would give any trouble to a native speaker of English, and only a few difficult combinations (bdrios, excolphabmartbh, longamphlg, lapch). And some of the texts run so fluently, with so much repetition, rhyme, alliteration, and other types of phonetic patterning, that we are almost forced to conclude that, in the later texts at least, Kelley was speaking aloud, and probably at normal speech speed:

> I.13 Ampri apx ard ardo arga arges argah ax...
> I.23 ...arcasa arcasam arcusma...
> I.24 ...umas ges umas umas ges umas umas ges gabre umas umascala umphazes umphagam masga mosel...
> I.25 ...zimah zemah zumacah...zapne zarvex zorquam ...zimagauna zonze zamcha...
> I.26 ...zambuges zambe ach oha zambuges gasca lunpel zadphe zomephol zun zadchal...
> I.37 ...gasmat gasque gasla gasna gasmaphes gasmagel gasnunabe...

Text II.20 alternates one- and two-syllable words for thirty three words in succession, with one trifling exception; and an even more subtle form of patterning is found in II.24, where there is a strong tendency (broken only by minor exceptions) for monosyllables containing o or u to alternate with disyllables containing the same vowel (mostly a) repeated with a nasal consonant:

> II.24 Voh gemse ax pah losquan nof afma ol vamna un samses oh set, quamsa ol danfa dot fanta on anma ol...

What are we to make of this phonetic patterning? Statistical studies in linguistics show that patterning of this nature is rare in normal language — though it is found in poetry and magical charms. It is also characteristically found in certain types of meaningless language (such as glossolalia), which is often produced under conditions similar to trance.

In other words, Kelley may have been 'speaking in tongues'. He did apparently go into trance, as we see from numerous notes in Dee's record of the seances:

> 'Now the fire shot oute of E.K. his eyes, into the stone, agayne. And by and by he vnderstode nothing of all, neyther could reade any thing: nor remember what he had sayde.'
>
> 'The fire cam from E.K. his eyes, and went into the stone agayn. And then; he could not perceyue, or reade one worde.'
>
> 'Suddenly there cam the fyre from his eyes into the stone agayne. And then he could say no more: nor remember any thing of that he had herd, seen or vnderstode less than half a quarter of an howre before.'
>
> [2-3 April 1583]

There are also a few passages which tend to suggest that Kelley did speak the language fluently, instead of reading it letter by letter:

> 'But E.K. prayed perfectly in this Angels language.'
>
> [2 April 1583]
>
> 'A voyce — One Note more, I haue to tell thee.
> Ax him not what he sayeth, but write as thow hearest: for it is true.
> Δ. Then, o lord, make my hearing sharp and strong, to perceyue sufficiently as the case requireth.
> Rap[hael] — Be it vnto the.
> Then E.K. red as followeth' [text I.22 follows]
>
> [3 April 1583]

If we take this as evidence that Kelley was saying 'words' rather than 'letters', then there is no evidence to suggest that these early invocations are any form of 'language' — in the sense of texts bearing a translatable meaning — at all. All the facts seem compatible with Kelley pouring out a string of gibberish while in a trance state. Nevertheless, Dee does add to some of the words some puzzling translations in the margin — but I think he could not have translated a whole text. A few of these glosses are interesting:

> gassagen the divine powre creating the angel of the same
>
> tohcoth this name comprehendeth the number of all the fayries, who are diuels next to the state and condition of man
>
> apachana the slimie things made of dust
>
> donasdogamatastos the furious and perpetuall fire enclosed for the punishment of them that are banished from the glory

Whatever else, it is an economical tongue.

So much for the 'language' which makes up Liber Logaeth, or the 'Book of the Speech from God', which exists in Kelley's handwriting in the British Museum as Sloane MS. 3189. Kelley's text shows a number of discrepancies from Dee's (as far as it goes), which I take to be evidence of his general carelessness in such matters; but perhaps the conditions he had to work under were not ideal:

> 'As E.K. was writing the eighteenth leafe, which was of the spirites of the earth, (in the afternone about 4½ of the clok) he red a parcell thereof, playnely and alowde to him self, and therevpon suddainely at his side appeared three or fowr spirituall creatures like laboring men, having spades in theyr hands, & theyr haires hanging about theyr eares, and hastely asked E.K. what he would haue, & wherefore he called them. He answered that he called them not. And they replyed, & said, that he called them; and he replyed & said, that he called them not, and they replyed & said, that he called them: Then I began to say, they lyed: for his intent was not to call them, but onely to read & repeat that which he had written: and that euery man who readeth a prayer to perceyue the sence thereof, prayeth not. No more, did he call them. And I bad them be packing out of the place. And thervppon remoued from my desk (where I was ruling of Paper for his writing) to the grene Chayre, which was by my Chymney; and presently he cryed out & sayd, they had nipped him, & broken his left arme by the wrist: and he shewed the bare arme and there appeared both on the vpper side and the lower side imprinted depe in, two Circles and broad as Grotes thus ◎ very red: and I seeing that, sowght for a stik, and in the meane while, they assalted him, and he rose and cryed to me (saying) they come flying on me, they come; and he put the stole, which he sat on, betwene him & them. But still they cam gaping, or gyrning at him. Then I axed him where they were: and he poynted to the place, and then I toke the stik and came to the place, and in the name of Jesus commaunded those Baggagis to avoyde, & smitt a cross stroke at them, and presently they avoyded.

All thanks be to the onely one Almighty & everlasting God, whose name be praysed now and foreuer. Amen.'

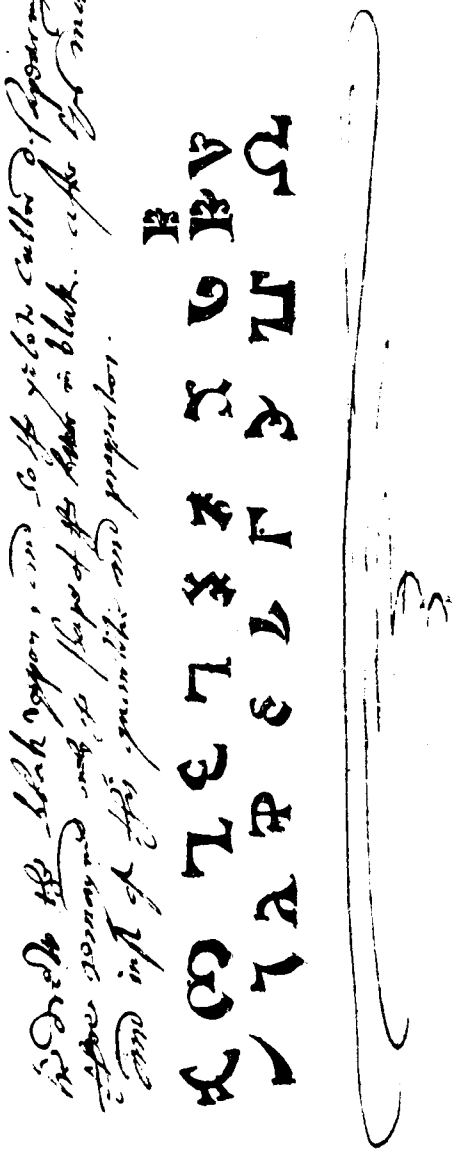
[15 April 1583]

Nevertheless, Kelley did complete his transcript of the book, the last page being written in 6 May 1583, when Dee was away in London. The last leaf of Kelley's transcript contains the 'correct' form of the Enochian characters, and this is how they were conveyed:

'. . . it is to be Noted, that, when E.K. could not aptly imitate the forme of the Characters, or letters, as they were shewed: that they appered drawn on his paper with a light yelow cullor, which he drew the blak vppon, and so the yellow cullor disapearing there remayned onely the shape of the letter in blak. . .'

[6 May 1583]

The 'yellow cullor', whatever it was, is not apparent on the manuscript page today.



The corrected form of the Enochian letters as they appear in Sloane MS 3188, f.104.
(Courtesy of the British Library).

Further seances

Other entries in the Libri Mysteriorum at this time deal with quarrels with Kelley (mainly about whether the spirits are good or evil), and the search for treasure and lost cipher-books.

For example, Kelley brought Dee a cipher book supposedly giving the location of buried treasure. Dee works out the cipher — which is quite a simple one — but has trouble in deciding whether one cipher character represents K or X, so he notes in the margin: 'Of this K I dowt yet'. One biographer of Dee (Charlotte Fell-Smith) took this to mean that Dee was distrustful of Kelley! We also find detailed instructions for the magical use of Liber Logaeth. All these are matters which need not concern us here. But at the end of the long session of 5 May 1583 Kelley reports a dream which contains accurate predictions of events then four years in the future: the Spanish Armada, and the execution of Mary Queen of Scots. These predictions must be borne in mind when we come to assess the genuineness, or otherwise, of Kelley's mediumship:

> 'Δ. As concerning the Vision which yesternight was presented (vnloked for,) to the sight of E.K. as he sat at supper with me, in my hall, I meane the appering of the very sea, and many ships thereon, and the cutting of the hed of a woman, by a tall blak man, what are we to imagin thereof?
> Vr[iel] — The one, did signifie the prouision of forrayn powres against the welfare of this land: which they shall shortly put into practise. The other, the death of the Quene of Scotts. It is not long vnto it.'

It may not have been difficult for an intelligent man to guess, at that time, that the execution of Mary Queen of Scots was a likely event, and perhaps a foreign invasion appeared probable even in 1583; but, nevertheless, this stands out as a remarkably detailed prediction. (Mary was beheaded in 1587, and the Spanish Armada was destroyed off the coast of England in the middle of 1588.)

About this time the record published by Meric Casaubon in 1659 commences; the date of the first published seances is 28 May 1583, and it begins abruptly with the appearance of a little girl spirit of seven to nine years old, named Madimi. This is one of the names taken from the second square of letters received by Dee over a year before (see page 24), so he knows at once that her elder sister is Esemeli. (Dee mispronounces this name as Esémeli, and Madimi corrects it to Eseméli.) Madimi, from the earliest session, is regarded as being a spirit representing the planet Mercury, which is appropriate for a teacher of languages and magical sciences; her name, in fact, derives ultimately from the Hebrew word for Mars, מאדים ma'adim — whence also 'Madimiel', the name of the intelligence of Mars used in constructing the square.

Other spirits appear from time to time, some of them taken from the earlier tables; but Madimi — who at times reminds one of the 'little girl' contacts of nineteenth-century mediums — makes constant appearances, almost to the very end of the record. (One biographer of Dee, Richard Deacon, says that Madimi grew up and reached 'womanhood' in the seven years that she appeared to Dee; but I find no evidence of this, and the period is only four years (1583-1587). There is a sketch of Madimi in one of his diaries, in which she looks vaguely nubile — but it must be remembered that Dee could see her only in his imagination.)

The appearance of the true Enochian language

The seances continue with magical instructions, philosophising, prophesying, misunderstandings, and contradictions. The text of a new book is dictated, with a new set of 49 invocations (one of which is 'silent'); this is the 'Enochian' language strictly so called, which is the subject of this volume. The differences between this language and the former one are considerable. Firstly, for the Enochian texts, a translation is provided, a fact which right from the beginning makes it look more like a real language. Secondly, the Enochian language appears to be generated, in some way, out of the previous tables and squares of Liber Logaeth — generated, in fact, out of the earlier 'angelic' language.

Unfortunately, the details of how the Enochian language is derived from the squares is very unclear. Only for the very first call is the system given in detail, and the details are very obscure. We read:

'A. (Two thowsand and fortene, in the sixth Table, is) D 7003 in the thirteenth Table, is I
A in the 21st Table. 11406 downward
I in the last Table, one less than Number:
a word, Iaida.
You shall understand, what that Word is before the Sonne go down.
Iaida is the last word of the Call.
H 49 ascending T 49 descending A 909 directly:
O, simply.
H 2029. directly. call it Hoath.'

[13 April 1584]

It is clear that the numbers do not, as some writers have claimed, give the 'row and column' of the table, nor can they give the absolute number of letters in the square (counting consecutively from the top left) as there are only 2401 squares (49×49) in each table of Liber Logaeth, with each word in the square not exceeding a dozen letters (and the majority much shorter); the numbers in the dictation, however, go as high as 312004.

We can conceive of various ways the letters of the Enochian language can have been taken out of the tables previously given to Dee and Kelley. It is possible, for instance, that the letters of the Enochian texts, joined in order on the squares of Liber Logaeth, may form geometrical figures or magical sigils; but there are so many letters to choose from that this approach has proved futile. Other attempts at decipherment, such as that put forward in The Necronomicon, London, 1978, researched by Robert Turner and David Langford, and introduced by Colin Wilson, are also unsatisfactory.

The letter-by-letter dictation of the Enochian language does account for some of the differences of this language from the earlier untranslated language. The 'new' language is less pronounceable than the old one, and it has awkward sequences of letters, such as long strings of vowels (ooaona, mooah) and difficult consonant clusters (paombd, smnad, noncf). This is exactly the type of text produced if one generates a string of letters on some random pattern. (The reader can test this by taking, for example, every tenth letter on this page, and dividing the string of letters into words. The 'text' created will tend to look rather like Enochian.)

But not all Enochian is of this form; many of the words are very pronounceable, as we shall see. The words of the Enochian language itself stop short of having the fully random appearance of the names of God, and of angels and 'kings', that Dee generated from the letters on the squares of his 'elemental tables', that were given later by the spirits — names such as LSRAHMP, LAOAXRP, HTMORDA, ALHCTGA, AAETPIO, which look a lot less plausible, as words of a language, than anything in the Enochian texts.

It is also not completely certain that all the texts in the Enochian language were dictated by the letter-by-letter method. It appears that on at least one occasion Kelley (or the spirits) may have tried to speed up the process, only to be rebuked by Dee's insistence on letter-by-letter transmission. Dee tells Kelley that 'unlesse of this strange language I should have these words delivered unto us letter by letter, we might erre both in Orthography, and also for want of the true pronunciation of the words' (19 April 1584).

The nature of the Enochian language

No matter what the method of transmission was, there are certain observations that we can make about the Enochian language, in the texts that we have. We know something of the pronunciation, from the fact that Dee often wrote the pronunciation of individual words next to the Enochian text. And this Enochian text, written in the Roman alphabet, purports to be a transliteration of the Enochian characters of the text of the original book seen in Kelley's vision. As far as we can tell, each letter of the Roman alphabet transcription represents one Enochian character — which means that Enochian spelling, too, has 'hard' and 'soft' values for c and g, and combines letters such as s and h to make the sh sound. Very English behaviour for a language 'which Adam verily spake in his innocency, and was never uttered nor disclosed to man since till now' (21 April 1584).

If the phonology of Enochian is thoroughly English, the grammar is no less so. But here we are faced with one difficulty: the nature of the translation. The English rendering of the Enochian calls is very free, often using five or six words where the Enochian has one; thus, the word for 'man' (or 'reasonable creature') is glossed as 'the reasonable creatures of Earth, or Man'. Proper names, such as Idoigo (one of the 'Names of God') are given translations: 'of Him that sitteth on the holy Throne'. Particles, prepositions, and pronouns are filled in where the sense requires them, but we do not know exactly what they are supposed to represent in Enochian; moooah, for example, is glossed as 'it repenteth me' — but it could just as easily be an active verb ('I regret').

Moreover, of about 250 different words in the Enochian texts, more than half occur only once, so that we have no real check on their form or meaning. Nevertheless, we can identify a number of different roots, often in quite distinct forms: om 'understand, know', oma 'understanding', omax 'knowest', ixomaxip 'let be known'. This is probably the most language-like, and least explicable, feature of Enochian. What is less certain, however, is how much the differences in the spellings reflect the grammar of Enochian; we find, for example, caosg, caosga 'earth', caosgi 'earth (accusative case)', caosgin 'than the earth', caosgo 'of earth', caosgon 'to the earth' — but are these really case endings, or just chance variants? The same case endings are not found from one noun to another, so that there are either a large number of different declensions (as in Latin or Greek), or else there are no case-endings at all. I incline toward the latter view.

The vocabulary elements of the language are probably arbitrary; certainly they do not seem to be directly derivable from anything in English, Latin, Greek or Hebrew. But in some cases we meet words we half recognise, with unfamiliar meanings: angelard 'thought' (from 'angel'?), babalond 'wicked, harlot' (from 'Babylon'?), christeos 'let there be' (from 'Christ'?), levithmong 'beasts of the field' (a blend of 'Leviathan' and 'mongrel'?), luciftias 'brightness' (from 'Lucifer'?), nazarth 'pillars of gladness' (from 'Nazareth'?), paracleda 'wedding' (from 'paraclete'?), paradial 'living dwellings', paradiz 'virgins' (both from 'Paradise'?), salman 'house' (from 'Solomon'?). (Note that most of the suggested origins are proper names, and are biblical — whatever conclusions may be drawn from that.) The remaining words do not seem to have any assignable etymology, though one can be seduced by occasional plausible explanations, such as micaolz 'mighty' from Scots mickle, or izizop 'vessels, containers' from Hebrew אשישות 'ašišot 'vessels'.

It is hard to be dogmatic about Enochian grammar. Verbs show singular and plural forms, and present, future, and past tenses, and have also some participial and subjunctive forms; but we do not have a full declension of any verb.
The fullest data is that for the verbs 'say' and 'be', as follows:

gohus	'I say'	zir, zirdo	'I am'
gohe, goho	'he says'	geh	'thou art'
gohia	'we say'	i	'he/she/it is'
gohol	'saying'	chiis, chis, chiso	'they are'
gohon	'they have spoken'	as, zirop	'was'
gohulim	'it is said'	zirom	'were'
		trian	'shall be'
		christeos	'let there be'
		bolp	'be thou!'
		ipam	'is not'
		ipamis	'cannot be'

Not much to build a grammar on. We can in addition identify some of the pronouns (ol 'I'; ils 'thou'; tox, tbl 'of him'; tia 'his'; pi 'she'; tibl 'her (acc.)'; tiobl 'in her'; tilb 'of her'; z 'they'), a few more verb forms, and four ways of expressing negation (chis ge 'are not'; ip uran 'not see'; ri-pir 'no place'; ag toltorn 'no creature'). But it is apparent that there is nothing strikingly un-English about the grammar: no trace of the construct case or irregular plurals of Hebrew or Arabic, no clear indication of multiple cases or complex verb forms, as in Latin and Greek. The grammar further suggests English with the removal of the articles ('a' and 'the') and the prepositions — and with a few irregularities thrown in to confuse the picture.

The order of words is also strongly English. A phrase such as adrpan cors ta dobix 'cast down such as fall' is pure English in its order, and can not idiomatically be duplicated in four words with these meanings in any other European or Semitic language.

However, this language with an English base was not dictated in English-speaking surroundings, but in Cracow in Poland — part of Dee's six-year absence abroad, living on foreign patronage. (Kelley never returned to England.) But it would be futile to look for Polish influence in Enochian — especially as all the scholars with whom Dee and Kelley were in contact spoke Latin.

There is one aspect of Enochian 'grammar' that remains totally inexplicable: the number system. Throughout the Calls, various numbers occur, and with a certain amount of extrapolation it seems possible to identify most of the numerals from 'one' to 'nine':

0 — T
1 — L, EL, L-O, ELO, LA, LI, LIL
2 — V, VI-I-V, VI-VI
3 — D, R
4 — S, ES
5 — O
6 — N, NORZ
7 — Q
8 — P
9 — M, EM
10 — X

However, the system that generates the remaining numbers is a complete mystery. A full list of the numbers occurring in the Enochian Calls is given here:

12 — OS
19 — AF
22 — OP
24 — OL
26 — OX
28 — OB, NI
31 — GA
33 — PD
42 — VX
456 — CLA
1000 — MATB
1636 — QUAR
3663 — MIAN
5678 — DAOX
6332 — ERAN
6739 — DARG
7336 — TAXS
7699 — ACAM
8763 — EMOD
9639 — MAPM
9996 — CIAL
69636 — PEOAL

The test of any future spirit-revelation of the Enochian language will be the explanation of this numerical system.

The pronunciation of Enochian

As the texts dictated in Enochian consist of a series of 'Calls', or invocations of supernatural beings, it was clearly necessary for Dee and Kelley to know how the words should be uttered; in most magical systems, a slight error in the text of a spell or invocation is regarded as potentially leading to disastrous consequences. Accordingly, Dee was in the habit of writing the pronunciation of the Enochian words alongside the text. If Kelley dictated the words letter by letter, he must have provided the pronunciation of the whole word immediately afterward.

To make these observations on pronunciation, Dee had to make shift with the ordinary English alphabet; he had no system of phonetic notation. But his intention is usually quite clear. He writes dg when he means 'soft g' (as in gem); and s for 'soft c'; and he indicates in some places that ch is to be pronounced as k. He marks the stressed vowels in most words. Sometimes — but not often — he indicates that a letter is to be given its pronunciation in the alphabet — thus ds is to be pronounced 'dee ess', and z in a few instances is given the pronunciation 'zod'. (The letter z has not always been called 'zed' or 'zee'; it has had many names, among them being 'izzard', and, at the end of the sixteenth century, 'ezod'. 'Zod' is nothing but a variant of this last name.) In more difficult cases, he gives examples from English, thus, zorge is said to be pronounced to rhyme with 'George', and ul to be said 'with such sound to U as we pronounce yew, whereof bows are made' — that is, ul is pronounced like 'Yule'.

With all of these instructions we can get a fairly good idea of how Enochian sounded to Dee and Kelley. We have to make allowances, of course, for the fact that the two men spoke English of more than four centuries ago — and also that, while Dee came from the Midlands, Kelley came from Worcestershire, at a time when the dialect variations in England were greater than they are now. Fortunately, linguists are in the possession of sufficient evidence — in the forms of pronunciation guides in schoolbooks, rhymes, misspellings, and the like — to establish the pronunciation of most forms of Elizabethan English with a high degree of accuracy (passages of Shakespeare, for instance, have been published in phonetic transcription, representing Shakespeare's own pronunciation).

The resulting pronunciation of Enochian makes it sound much more like English than it looks at first sight. The following table of letters and combinations gives a general view of how the spelling system of Enochian worked:

Letter	Pronunciation
A	— long (stressed), as in lah-di-dah
	— short (unstressed), as in French patte
B	— usually as English b, but silent between m and another consonant, or after m finally
C	— as k before a, o, u (with some exceptions)
	— as s before i, e (with many exceptions), and in clusters of consonants (noncf=nonsf)
CH	— as k in most positions, but as ch finally
D	— as d in all positions
E	— when stressed, as in French fee
	— when unstressed, as in bed
F	— as f in all positions
G	— as (hard) g before a, o, u
	— as j before i, e, in final position, after d, and in clusters of consonants
H	— as h in most positions (except in combinations ch, ph, sh, th); silent after a vowel, but the vowel is lengthened
I	— when stressed, as in (French) machine
	— when unstressed, as in bit
	— in combinations: ai as in fly; ei as in eight; oi as in boil
	— as y in word-initial position before a vowel (Iad=Yad)
K	— as k in all positions
L	— as l in all positions
M	— as m in all positions
N	— as n in all positions
O	— when stressed, as in French mot
	— when unstressed, as in not
	— in combinations: oi as in boil; ou as in bout; oo as in fool
P	— as p except in combination ph
PH	— as f
Q, QU	— as kw (qu in quick) — but the word q is pronounced kwa
R	— as r in right (but may be rolled)
S	— usually as s in sit
	— sometimes z, in places where this is more natural in English (lrasd=elrazd)
SH	— as sh in ship
T	— as t except in combination th
TH	— as th in thank
U	— as oo in boot, or u in put
	— in initial position as yew
	— as v or w before another vowel, and in word-final position
X	— as x in fox
Y	— as y in word-initial position before a vowel
	— as the letter I before a consonant, and in word-final position
Z	— as z in zoo; in a very few words, as zod

It should be further noted that the Enochian characters themselves total only 21, not the 24 characters listed above; C and K are expressed by a single letter, as are I and Y, and U and V. The 21 letters of Enochian are, oddly enough, almost exactly the minimum required to write English without any ambiguity; perhaps Dee was interested in spelling reform.

Using the punctuation guide above, we can transcribe the beginning of the Call of the Aethyr LIL (as given on page 266) into an approximate phonetic representation:

> Mádriaks di-es praf lil kis miká-olz sánir ka-ózgo od fisis balzízras yaida. Nonsa gohúlim: míkma adóyan mad, yá-od bliórb, soba o-áona kis lusíftias pirípsol, di-es abrása nonsf netá-ib ka-ozji, od tilb adfát dámploz...

As we shall see below, Enochian acquired a very different pronunciation when it came to be used in nineteenth-century magical rituals; but for the moment we are concerned with Dee and Kelley.

Dee and Kelley — the last years

Throughout the remaining years of the association of Dee and Kelley we have, in the record of the seances, a fascinating documentation of the character of the two men, which is relevant to any judgment we may wish to form on Enochian. Though the diaries give only the viewpoint of Dee, the characters of both men come through clearly. Dee is credulous, and willing, usually, to give the spirits the benefit of the doubt; but he keeps a close watch on them too, and queries them when he catches them out in a discrepancy. (The spirits chide him time and time again for asking so many questions — awkward questions.) Kelley, on the other hand, is often surly, and largely uninterested in what the spirits are transmitting through him, except where he sees a chance to find out how to work his alchemical powder, and turn base metal into gold. On one occasion, apropos of nothing, he interrupts the girl-spirit Madimi with the question: 'Canst thou, Madimi, lend me a hundred pounds for a fortnight?' — only to be told, roughly enough, that 'I have swept all my money out of doors'.

Kelley apparently wanted the money in order to clear out, and abandon Dee. A few days before this request, on 29 June 1583, the spirits, speaking through Kelley, warned Dee about this intended departure. The warning was in Greek, which Dee understood well enough, but Kelley certainly did not; he says to the spirit Madimi: 'Unlesse you speak some language which I understand, I will expresse no more of this Ghybbrish'. Madimi also announces: 'It is the Syrian tongue you do not understand it'; can Kelley be trying to throw Dee off the scent here? This episode provides evidence of Kelley speaking yet another language he could not know consciously — and here, if we are to believe that he faked the episode, we must still endeavour to explain how or where, in London at that epoch, he could have learned the necessary Greek phrases. (Kelley was even supposed to be ignorant of the Greek alphabet; in his regular diaries, Dee used to write English in Greek letters, whenever he had something to hide from the prying eyes of Kelley. I am not entirely convinced, however, that a sharp man like Kelley would not have penetrated this device.)

Kelley perhaps wished to leave because the first date announced for the performance of the 'Enochian' magic (August 1583) is close at hand, and he does not want to be around in case it is a fiasco; but it is still hard to see why (and how) he would deliver a message against himself in a language he did not know.

Be that as it may, Kelley is persuaded to stay (with a pay rise), and the spirits continue their instruction. They dictate pages of letters and symbols which seem to lead nowhere, and fill up even more pages with vague prophesying that resembles the sermons of a third-rate evangelical preacher. Their practical knowledge tends to be earthly rather than supernatural, and they have read the same books as Dee and Kelley. (For example, the spirits dictate a list of 91 parts of the earth, ruled by 91 'princes', in the Enochian system of magic; Kelley turns up next day and announces, in some agitation, that the complete list can be found in 'a book of Agrippa's'. The question that immediately arises is: did Kelley make this announcement to forestall a discovery that Dee would eventually make?)

The spirits show many of Kelley's limitations, in imagination and thought; and they tend to identify the many books on Dee's shelves by the characteristics of their bindings, and not by their titles or contents. They have also been poking around in the hidden recesses of the house: on one earlier occasion they announce their knowledge of a record of Dee's seances with previous mediums. Dee had stuffed it up the chimney in an attempt to hide it from Kelley.

On at least one occasion, Kelley can be shown to have falsified the spirit doctrine for his own ends. Almost at the end of the Libri Mysteriorum, on 18 April 1587, we find recorded that on the previous day (at a time when Dee was not present) Madimi had suggested to Kelley that the two men share their wives in common — the attractive young Jane Dee, and the almost unknown Joanna Kelley. Dee queries this, and the spirits dictate, as confirmation, a string of numbers in what turns out to be a very elementary cipher. The 624 letters of the large square (24×26) of the 'Elemental Tables' dictated some time before are numbered from 1 to 624, each number designating a letter. The letters dictated spell out the following message in Latin:

> 'Cara tibi uxor, carior tibi sapientia, carissimus tibi ego. Electus tremis, ac hesitando peccas: Noli igitur [hesitare] ad genium, et carnem sapere; sed obtempera mihi: ductor enim tuus sum, et auctor spiritus omnibus. Hec omnia a me sunt, et licita vobis.'

Which reads:

> 'Dear to you is your wife, dearer to you is wisdom, dearest to you am I. Though chosen, you tremble, and in hesitating you sin. Do not therefore [hesitate] to know the mind and the flesh; but obey me, for I am your leader, and the creator of all spirits. All these things are from me, and are permitted to you.'

(The Latin text is that yielded by the cipher, with a few literal errors silently corrected. There should be another verb — perhaps hesitare — after igitur, and spiritus omnibus should probably read spirituum omnium; but Kelley's Latin was always shaky. For example, the Casaubon edition of the Dee-Kelley seances has auctor spiritus omnium at the end of the penultimate sentence — which we could translate, somewhat facetiously, as 'I am the ghost-writer of all'.)

The cipher shows a number of minor errors — apart from the major fault that most of the numbers are one out; Dee's marginal note is 'I perceive that commonly one is to be abated of the number'. It would require a great deal of credulity to ascribe such an error to the angels, rather than to Kelley.

The wife-swapping episode took place, in spite of the attempts of some biographers of Dee to suggest that it did not. In the original manuscripts there is a section, heavily erased and barely legible, recording the seance of 23 May 1587 — the morning after the wife-swapping. The spirits ask Kelley: 'Was thy brother's wife [Jane Dee] obedient and humble unto thee?' — and Kelley replies: 'She was'. Dee returns the same answer concerning Joanna Kelley.

Dee's association with Kelley, and apparently also with the Enochian angels, ended shortly after this episode — perhaps the tensions in that household of two British couples in Bohemia were becoming too much to bear, and Kelley set himself up as an alchemist in a separate establishment. Nevertheless, the Dees did not leave for England until March 1589, arriving there in December of that year. Kelley stayed on at the court of Emperor Rudolph in Prague, and died there in 1595 — under obscure conditions. (The usual story is that he was imprisoned for failing to produce alchemical gold, and fell from a tower when trying to escape.) Kelley was forty at the time — but on 21 August 1584, the angel Uriel had promised that he would live till eighty-seven (and Dee till a hundred and twenty-two). Not even angels are right all the time.

A gold disc engraved with the four Watchtowers shown to Kelley in a dream. (Courtesy of the Trustees of the British Museum).

Dee died in poverty in England in 1608, at the age of 81. There is no record of any seance with Kelley after the wife-swapping incident; both men appear to have had enough of the angelic communications. In later life, however, Dee did record a few more attempts of his own; there is a record of a seance in 1607, which is concerned with such mundane matters as his penury and his 'bleeding fundament'. The fantastic angelic revelations seem to have departed with Kelley, and there is no evidence that Dee ever made any use of the Enochian system of magic which he was at such pains to receive.

Judgment on the spirits

What are we to make of all this? Can we accept the spirits at face value, or must we, in a rational age, look for some other explanation? If we insist on a prosaic rationale, there are only two possible candidates for the dubious honour of having fabricated the whole series of spirit-communications: John Dee and Edward Kelley. It was rare for anyone else to be present at the seances, except on a few occasions when Jane Dee and Joanna Kelley turned up to query the wife-swapping incidents.

The spirits, incidentally, show a marked anti-feminist attitude. On 21 March 1585, they rebuke Jane Dee, who has put in a petition for more housekeeping money, 'because she is a woman', and on 23 May 1587 (the morning after the wife-swap) a spirit calling herself 'The Daughter of Comfort' says: 'Disclose not my secrets unto women'.

Dee could certainly have fabricated the whole record. He had the knowledge to do so, and the diaries are in his handwriting; and he delighted in playing with magic squares, circles, and sigils. But such a suggestion must founder on the question: why on earth would he have done so? Only a man clinically insane — and Dee was certainly not that — would have filled many hundreds of pages, covering more than two decades in all, with a private fantasy that became revealed to the world only by accident. The records of the seances were never intended for publication; Dee had enough experience in his life of the dangers of appearing to be a magician, without adding fuel to the fire by making public his actions with spirits. (Already in 1583 a mob, disturbed by his reputation for trafficking with spirits, had raided his house in Mortlake, and destroyed a large part of his library.) Moreover, no-one can read the spiritual diaries, which on internal evidence were written down at the seances themselves, or very soon after, and doubt the sincerity of Dee himself believing in the reality of the spirits.

I think, therefore, that we can acquit Dee of any deliberate fraud or mystification in this matter. It is not so easy to acquit Kelley. All we know of him (and that is not in fact a very great deal) suggests that he was an occult charlatan, an opportunist looking for ways to make a 'quick quid'; and we have seen him on a number of occasions inject his own personality into the spirit communications. He had motive enough; not only the £50 a year he was paid by Dee as a retainer, but also, perhaps, pride in being able to create a magical system that would be accepted by a credulous old man, the opportunity to use Dee's library and alchemical laboratories, the chance to bask in Dee's reflected glory, the perks of free travel on the continent, and the freedom to make a pass at Jane Dee. And even in this last motive there may be more than meets the eye: there could well have been a homosexual component in Kelley's attachment to Dee. Kelley married late, and only when the spirits advised him to, admitting that he himself 'had no natural inclination thereto'; and it is a well-established psychological fact that the attraction of a man for a member of his own sex may manifest itself in a desire to possess the beloved's wife, if the beloved himself is not accessible.

But did Kelley have the knowledge to create all his spirit revelations? The Enochian system shows a much deeper knowledge of the qabalah than Kelley would seem to have possessed — but not necessarily more than he might have been able to glean by a surreptitious reading of Dee's books. Nevertheless, there is a remarkable consistency about the whole system, which for Kelley to have invented would argue a phenomenal memory, or the keeping of notes (which would have been hard to conceal from Dee). The Enochian Calls, for example, are translated in their entirety often days after the original dictation: could Kelley have carried all this in his head, or on pieces of paper small enough to escape Dee's attention? (During the sessions of 14 May 1584, and on some other occasions, the spirit communications become very garbled — is this an indication of Kelley getting his notes out of order?)

Kelley's predictions of future events, and the production of the warning in Greek, also need to be accounted for, in any explanation. In favour of the Kelley-fraud hypothesis, however, is the fact that the communications of the spirits, though consistent, do change over time; and the 'system' tends to fall into watertight compartments. There is little real relationship, for instance, between the earlier Heptarchia system of the 49 Good Angels, and the later Claves Angelicae system of the Enochian tables. The latter is more thorough-going, and, as we have seen, the associated language is more convincing: can Kelley have got better at producing what was required of him, as time went on? He must have learnt a great deal from living in close contact with Dee, and Dee's credulity would blind him to slight internal contradictions. (Dee does, as we have seen, query inconsistencies as he finds them; but there could have been others that he did not record, perhaps subconsciously repressing them. We have after all only Dee's record of the seances.)

Perhaps Kelley was just feeding Dee's own fantasies back to him. Or perhaps again he may have been picking up Dee's subconscious thoughts, by some kind of ESP, and elaborating on them. Or perhaps, after all, the spirits were all they said they were, and the Enochian system of magic is the most powerful of which we have a record in the English language. The reader is invited to make his own judgment; mine appears in the conclusion to this chapter.

Is Enochian a cipher?

One further possibility remains to be considered: that the Enochian texts are really a cipher, and that some other message is concealed in them. The suggestion was first made by Robert Hooke in a lecture to the Royal Society towards the end of the seventeenth century, and has been resurrected by Richard Deacon, a modern biographer of Dee (John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I, London, 1968). The possibility cannot be immediately discounted; Dee was familiar with ciphers, and had the mathematical sophistication to develop systems to a high degree of complexity. We have noted already two clear-cut instances of cipher in the spiritual diaries: the decipherment of Kelley's treasure-manuscript, and the cipher of the wife-swapping incident. There is another cipher in the diaries that should be mentioned, as an instance of the tortured nature of some of the spirit communication, and as evidence of the types of ciphers then employed.

The communication was received by the magicians in the first part of 1585. A figure of an old man appears and reads in a book of 'Ivory bone' a text interspersed with odd words and garbled syntax:

> 'Take of your Dlasod dignified, and Luminus, or from due degrees. Gather or take fiery degree... Notwithstanding, work it diverse dayes multiplying four digestions... And double then Dlasod, and thy... Rlodnr... For, until thou watch so continuing it, a holy hour descendeth... Of every work there ascendeth one Audcal, and so every Law Rlodnr... And purpose Dlasod, take a swift Image, and have the proportion of a most glorious mixture Audcal and also Lulo. Continue and by office seek Rlodnr backward by the red digestion. But he by the common or red Darr doth gather most ripest work, purge the last fortene well fixed. Then the four through your [Rlodnr]...Roxtan finished more together at the lower body by one degree... by you for him hold it, for him in one of them...until of the last thing...In him become his red and highest degree of his resurrection through coition... After a while I come again... There is the whole work.'
>
> [17 January 1585]

This is, of course, gobbledygook; but the next day a string of figures is dictated, which are to be set over the words, and then the words arranged in their appropriate numerical order. In spite of many errors in the transmission, Dee finally works it out, and the entry for 20 March 1585 prints the corrected plaintext:

> 'Take common Audcal; purge and work it by Rlodnr of four divers digestions, continuing the last digestion for fourteen dayes, in one and a swift proportion, untill it be Dlasod fixed, a most red and luminous body, the Image of Resurrection.
>
> Take also Lulo of red Roxtan, and work him through the four fiery degrees, until thou have his Audcal: and there gather him.
>
> Then double every degree of your Rlodnr, and by the law of Coition and mixture work and continue them diligently together. Notwithstanding backward, through every degree, multiplying the lower and last Rlodnr his due office finished by one degree more than the highest.
>
> So doth it become Darr, the thing you seek for: a holy, most glorious, red, and dignified Dlasod.
>
> But watch well, and gather him, so, at the highest: For in one hour, he descendeth, or ascendeth from the purpose.
>
> Take hold.'

This is still obscure, but it is now recognisable as an alchemical text, for preparing alchemical gold. Levanael appears and explains that Audcal is 'gold', Dlasod is 'sulphur', Roxtan is 'pure and simple Wine in her self', Lulo is 'Tartar, simply of red wine' or mother of vinegar, Darr is the philosopher's stone, and Rlodnr must be something like 'furnace' — but there is no key to the formation of these strange words.

Perhaps it was the practical application of this strange formula that gave Kelley his reputation as an alchemist able to transmute base metal into gold, a reputation that got him the position of alchemist at the court of the Emperor Rudolph. But in any case we can see that the angelic spirits were not averse to using cipher when the need arose.

Nor, of course, was Dee, even if he were not acting as a 'secret agent' of Queen Elizabeth abroad. Many years before, he had acquired a manuscript copy of Trithemius' Steganographia, forty years before it was first printed; and this work not only deals with various cipher systems, but also contains a 'mystical language' (in reality a fairly simple cipher) that in some ways resembles Enochian. What Dee thought of this book is contained in a letter to Sir William Cecil from Antwerp, dated 16 February 1563:

> 'Allready I have purchased one boke, for which a thousand Crownes have ben by others offred, and yet could not be obtained. A boke, for which many a lerned man hath long sowght, and dayly yet doth seeke: Whose use is greather than the fame thereof is spread... A boke for your honor, or a Prince, so meet, so nedefull and comodious, as in humayne knowledge, none could be meeter, or more behofefull.'

But the various keys of Trithemius do not work on either of the mystical languages produced by Kelley. The whole Enochian system, with its complexity of squares filled with letters, would seem to lend itself to both transposition and substitution ciphers of all kinds; yet checks of some of the more likely possibilities have yielded nothing worth following up. There may be a cipher in the first set of untranslated invocations that Kelley produced initially (but then these invocations would not look so much like glossolalia), but I do not believe there can possibly be cipher in the Enochian Calls. Let us see why not.

The Enochian Calls, as we have seen, are accompanied by a translation. If this translation is genuine, then the Calls must represent the enciphered version of this translation, in English or some other plausible language. And, since the words of the Enochian text occur consistently with the same translation, the only kind of cipher possible is substitution (whether simple or polyalphabetic). Transposition ciphers, and ciphers with polyalphabetic substitution, just would not yield the same 'word' consistently.

But simple substitution cannot have been used in the Calls, or they would have been cryptanalysed by now. Simple substitution in any of the likely languages (let us say for argument Latin, Hebrew, Greek, English, or any common European tongue) is completely transparent — and how much more so when the translation is available! Take the word ROR, for example, meaning 'sun', if this were a word in a simple substitution cipher, it must represent a three-letter word in which the first and the last letters are the same. The best candidate is Hebrew שמש meaning 'sun'; but substituting the value of these letters in other words (e.g. R in GRAA 'moon') does not yield any further Hebrew words. We could perhaps assume a form of multiple substitution, and try English sun or Latin sol for ROR, and English moon or Latin luna for GRAA. The reader is welcome to try this; he will find it leads nowhere. Perhaps even more conclusive, however, is that the letter-frequencies per thousand of the Enochian Calls (as calculated by computer) do not produce a graph resembling that of the letter-frequencies for any of the languages under consideration.

But the most damning case against cipher is the fact that there is a translation at all. What would be the point of writing a text in an elaborate cipher, and then writing the plaintext underneath? It is barely possible, of course, that the translation is a mere blind, and that the Calls contain a totally different enciphered text. But there is a difficulty in this too; it would be extremely difficult (though not entirely impossible) to construct a workable cipher that would first encipher one text, and still yield a consistent 'pseudo-translation' as another text. But Enochian is far too much like the language its translation represents for this to be very likely.

Further, if the magical languages and the squares do contain a cipher, why bother to surround it with all the other material from the spirits: prophecies, dictation, general talk, and indication of breaks for dinner? If Dee had wanted to write messages in cipher, for his own use, he could have done so without creating this elaborate fiction.

I think, therefore, it is possible to assert, with a high degree of confidence, that there is no cipher contained in the 'angelical' language, or in the Enochian Calls.

The later history of Enochian

The use of Enochian as a language after the death of Dee and Kelley, and of the related system of magic, cannot yet be fully documented. But as interest in Dee continues to our own day, it is relevant to sketch in some of the main developments.

Dee died in 1608, in the odour of sanctity, and was buried in the chancel of the church at Mortlake, near his house. Kelley, as we have seen, was already dead. If any of Dee's acquaintances or family — perhaps his son, Arthur Dee, who had once tried to serve as a medium for his father, and later became an alchemist in his own right — continued with the practice of Enochian magic, it was without the seance records, which in the second half of the seventeenth century turned up, rather surprisingly, in a secret drawer of a cedarwood chest that had belonged to Dee.

The papers were discovered in the chest in about 1662 by the wife of a certain Mr Wale. He subsequently gave them to Elias Ashmole in exchange for a copy of the latter's book on the Order of the Garter.

Elias Ashmole (1617-1692) was apparently fascinated by their contents, spending a great deal of effort on reconstructing the Enochian system of magic from the often difficult text. He was probably the first man after Dee to attempt to make contact with Dee's angelic spirits, in a series of seances extending from 1671 to 1676.

As the founder of English freemasonry, Ashmole may have had an even greater significance, in introducing the Enochian system into esoteric freemasonry, and into the English occult tradition in general. However, we do not know for certain whether he did or not, for it is to be some two hundred years before Enochian is mentioned publicly again. It seems that some of the nineteenth-century freemasons with occult interests (such as Frederick Hockley and Kenneth Mackenzie) may have been aware of the Dee manuscripts (by then in the British Museum), but it is unlikely that Enochian magic played any part in masonic rituals.

It was to be another Mason and antiquarian who brought Enochian back into English occultism: Wynn Westcott (1848-1925), one of the founders (in 1888) of the highly influential occult Order of the Golden Dawn. It was certainly Westcott who introduced into the Order the complex system of 'Rosicrucian chess', a divination system blending the Enochian system with Egyptian god-forms and Indian four-handed chess (Chaturanga), on which last Westcott was an expert.

The Enochian Calls, and the general system of Enochian magic, were required subjects of study for the Golden Dawn grade of Adeptus Minor — though it seems that few members of the Order ever knew much about them. Most of the original material (first made publicly available in detail by Israel Regardie in his book on the rituals of the Golden Dawn in 1937-40) is by Westcott, but some notes were also included by Westcott's co-founder of the Order, S.L. MacGregor Mathers. An interesting development is the description of a special pronunciation for Enochian. The advice of 'Sapere Aude' (Wynn Westcott) is as follows:

> 'In pronouncing the Names, take each letter separately. M is prounced Em; N is pronounced En (also Nu, since in Hebrew the vowel following the equivalent letter Nun is 'u'); A is Ah; P is Peh; S is Ess; D is Deh.
>
> 'NRFM is pronounced En-Ra-Ef-Em or En-Ar-Ef-Em. ZIZA is pronounced Zod-ee-zod-ah. ADRE is Ah-deh-reh or Ah-deh-er-reh. TAAASD is Teh-ah-ah-ah-ess-deh. AIAOAI is Ah-ee-ah-oh-ah-ee. BDOPA is Beh-deh-oh-peh-ah. BANAA is Beh-ah-en-ah-ah. BITOM is Beh-ee-to-em or Beh-ee-teh-oo-em. NANTA is En-ah-en-tah. HCOMA is Heh-co-em-ah. EXARP is Eh-ex-ar-peh.'

The note by 'S Rioghail Mo Dhream (MacGregor Mathers) describes essentially the same system, but with some idiosyncratic viewpoints:

> 'Briefly, regarding the pronunciation of the Angelical Language, thou shalt pronounce the consonants with the vowel following in the nomenclature of the same letter in the Hebrew Alphabet. For example, in Beth, the vowel following 'B' is 'e' pronounced AY. Therefore, if 'B' in an Angelical Name precede another as in 'Sobha', thou mayest pronounce it 'Sobeh-hah'. 'G' may be either Gimel or Jimel (as the Arabs do call it) following whether it be hard or soft. This is the ancient Egyptian use, whereof the Hebrew is but a copy, and that many times a faulty copy, save in the Divine and Mystical Names, and some other things.
>
> 'Also 'Y' and 'I' are similar, also 'V' and 'U', depending whether the use intended be vowel or consonant. 'X' is the ancient Egyptian power of Samekh; but there be some ordinary Hebrew Names wherein 'X' is made Tzaddi.'

The Egyptology is that of the nineteenth century, and we may suspect that this pronouncing system is of the same period; certainly it is not, as we have seen, the pronunciation used by Dee and Kelley. But it is a practical system for coping with some of the consonant-clusters of the Enochian language, especially the divine Names. In use, the system was modified somewhat; thus, saanir 'parts' was apparently pronounced as 'saanire', and not — as the instructions above would suggest — 'Ess-ah-ah-en-ee-reh' or something similar.

The occultist Aleister Crowley took the Enochian system very seriously, and published the text of the Calls, together with the details of making the Enochian magical tablets, in his publication The Equinox (1909-1913). His version of the Calls is given in his interpretation of the the expanded Golden Dawn pronunciation; the Call of the Aethyr LIL opens:

> 'Madariatza das perifa LIL cahisa micaolazoda saanire caosago od fifisa balzodizodarasa Iaida. Nonuça gohulime: Micama adoianu MADA faoda beliorebe, soba ooaona cahisa luciftias peripesol, das aberaasasa nonuçafe netaaibe caosaji od tilabe adapehaheta damepelezoda...'

(Compare this with the reconstructed 'original' pronunciation given above, page 47.)

Crowley's own experiences with the Angels of the Aethyrs were also published in the Equinox, and also later as a separate book, The Vision and the Voice; but it is not generally known that he also composed a set of additional conjurations in the Enochian language. These are published in his edition of MacGregor Mathers' translation of the Goetia or Lesser Key of Solomon — but are omitted from many current editions. This additional Enochian material of Crowley's, be it spirit revelation, inspired re-creation, or linguistic dilettantism, tends to use the words of Enochian found in the Calls, but with some extended meanings and a few apparently original words. A specimen, from the invocation entitled 'Ye constraynte':

'Od commemahé do pereje salabarotza kynutzire
'And I bind thee in the fire of sulphur mingled fabaonu, od zodumebi pereji od salabarotza:
with poison and the seas of fire and sulphur:
niisa, eca, dorebesa na-e-el od zodameranu come forth, therefore, obey my power and appear asapeta vaunesa komesalohé.'
before this circle.'

Since the time of the Golden Dawn and the various later Orders in one way or another related to it — for details of which see Francis King's book on Ritual Magic in England — various occult groups have attempted to use the Enochian system to try to establish contact with the spirits seen by Kelley. Some have claimed success, in the form of new Enochian material (both language and magical formulas) that is not for profane ears. It is difficult to judge such claims until they appear in print — but one simple test that can be applied is to ask the adepts if they know the Enochian word for 'seven'.

One group that is known to be using the Enochian Calls is the Church of Satan, headed by Anton La Vey in California. La Vey's Satanic Bible prints the Enochian Calls, in a form that makes it quite clear that they are taken from Aleister Crowley's version — but he substitutes the name 'Saitan' wherever the original has 'Iaida' ('The Highest'), and makes other minor modifications in the translation: 'Lord of the Earth' for 'God of Justice', and 'King of Hell' for 'The Highest'. Whether Dee's spirits still respond, I do not know.

Dee's spirits have recently been associated with those from another source, the essentially Sumerian and Akkadian demons of the Necronomicon, a fictitious work invented by the American fantasy writer H.P. Lovecraft. In all there have been in excess of half a dozen 'editions' of this title, all of different content: of which the Necronomicon, Barnes Graphics, New York, 1977 has drawn on Sumerian and Akkadian sources. In the edition of the Necronomicon published by Neville Spearman, London, 1978, there is a purported translation of Dee's Liber Logaeth. Readers who have followed this introduction so far will be able to assess the validity of the supposed translation for themselves — but it is a long way from ancient Sumeria to Dee's London, and there is not much evidence that H.P. Lovecraft had more than a fiction writer's knowledge of either.

Occult groups which have been known to use the Enochian system in recent years include, in London, the Order of the Pyramid and the Sphinx, and the Aurum Solis; in the Midlands, the Order of the Cubic Stone; and elsewhere the Luculentus Astrum. It is hoped that the material in the present book may be of assistance to them, and to all such groups who are pursuing researches in this area.

Conclusion

In the preceding pages, the arguments for and against regarding Enochian as a genuine language, and for and against accepting the reality of the angelic spirits supposedly contacted by Dee and Kelley, have been put at some length. I do not think anyone can afford to be dogmatic in this area. As a scholar, I am by temperament inclined to doubt wherever doubt is possible; but I have known well people who have pursued the study of Enochian from the point of view of practical occultism, and who claim that, whatever the origin of the system, it works as practical magic. And I have no particular reason to disbelieve them.

I believe, myself, that a combination of factors produced Dee's angelic communications. I am sure that Kelley went into genuine trance states, in which he saw visions which he faithfully reported; but I am equally sure that at least on some occasions he consciously elaborated on those visions, and at times even invented them, and fabricated messages from the spirits, for his own ends; and that he used, consciously and unconsciously, any information that he picked up from Dee, and relayed it back to him.

Nevertheless, there may be genuine revelations at the core of his reported visions. But I think that real angels would speak a more euphonious and more consistent tongue than Enochian, that they would not make mistakes, and that they would have more of import to transmit to man than the interminable outpouring of 'Enoch his boke'. Shakespeare's Macbeth claimed of his witches that 'they have more in them than mortal knowledge'; it would be hard to make the same claim for Dee's angels. Their limitations are those of Kelley; their occasional sublimities, those of Dee. If the true voice of God comes through the shewstone at all, it is certainly as through a glass darkly.

The element of doubt remains, however, and therefore it is not surprising that in the 27th Invocation to the Good Angels, we find, in the words of the first angelical language, the sequence:

'. . . lafet vncas laphet vanascor torx glust hahaha. . .'

The spirits may well have the last laugh.

Donald C. Laycock
Canberra, December 1978

SCOPE AND PLAN OF THE DICTIONARY

This dictionary is intended to allow the reader to find the basic meaning of any Enochian word used by Dee (both in his original manuscripts and in the printed version of Casaubon) to which at least a tentative meaning can be assigned. In addition, a few words which are clearly Enochian, but to which no meaning can be assigned at present, are included with the gloss 'meaning unknown'.

The Dictionary also includes Enochian words, principally (but not entirely) from versions of the Enochian Calls, from the following sources (for which see Bibliography):

GD The Golden Dawn: text of the Calls, with additional variants as used in the rituals, and some angelic and holy names.

AC:C Aleister Crowley's version of the Calls, with additional magical data, as published in The Equinox, Vol.I, Nos.7 & 8.

AC:VV Enochian words (some of them not from Dee) as used by Aleister Crowley in his invocations of the Aethyrs in The Vision and the Voice. (Note: in this book Crowley uses other magical languages which have no connection with Enochian. These have not been included.)

AC:G Variants of Enochian words in the goetic invocations published by Aleister Crowley as a supplement to MacGregor Mathers' translation of the Goetia. (Note: only rarely are these words not identifiable with the words of Dee's Enochian; but there are many misprints and mistranslations.)

Another source of Enochian vocabulary, La Vey's Satanic Bible, was examined, but the Enochian here follows AC: C exactly, with only two additional misprints (mamao for momao, and gianai for ginai) which were thought too insignificant to include in the Dictionary. However, this publication is remarkable for the liberties it takes with the English text of the Calls, as well as omitting, for some odd reason, all the numerals of the original text.

Words which do not have a source given them in the Dictionary are all from Dee; occasionally a form is identified as C (Casaubon) when it does not tally with the manuscripts. The words from the Calls, which are of course the most important source of Enochian, are provided with an indication of pronunciation, as far as can be determined from Dee's notes, and from the principles outlined in the chapter on Enochian. There remain many uncertainties, however, and some readers may prefer to use the pronunciation as suggested by the spellings of Aleister Crowley or the Golden Dawn rituals, as this now has a relatively long occult tradition.

In giving the pronunciation, the rule has been followed of 'consonants as in English, vowels as in Italian' — this means u as in put, not (Southern British English) but. Long vowels are marked with a bar over them (a, i), and the English murmured vowel (as in the last syllable of father) has been represented by ë when no other symbol would do; but it would also be possible to pronounce all sequences of er, ir and ur as ër wherever they occur. Note that the r, in Dee's time, would have been pronounced everywhere it occurred; a light Scottish burr sounds good, but an American r will suffice.

A note must be added on zod, which is frequent in the Aleister Crowley versions of Enochian words. This was simply a short-lived Elizabethan word for the letter Z (which we now call zed or zee). As the letter was used less frequently in Elizabethan English than now, but had a high frequency in Enochian, Dee would often write zod over the letter z, to remind himself that it was not to be spelt s. I think that only rarely did he intend this to suggest a pronunciation with zod.

Another characteristic of Elizabethan usage was the (to us) inconsistent writing of u and v, and to a lesser extent i and j. Dee almost invariably writes v at the beginning of words, and u in the middle, whether u or v (of modern English) was intended. With regard to i and j, he almost always writes only i; j appears only as capital I or J, and at the end of words (mostly Latin). These Elizabethan habits in the spelling of Enochian have given rise to some odd-looking words, such as vnchi (where we would now write unchi). These anomalies have been regularised in the Dictionary, according to modern spelling conventions.

Also, in accordance with the values of the Enochian alphabet given by Dee, U and V are placed together in the Dictionary, as are I and Y. However, J is placed with G rather than with I, since the only Enochian words that have ever been spelled with J are the Aleister Crowley versions of words beginning with 'soft g'. Similarly, K is included with C.

Enochian variants that differ only in these spelling alternations (such as u for v) are not always included separately. Nor are variants that differ only in the use of capitals, hyphens, or spaces. Thus, the reader who has encountered, in Aleister Crowley's Goetia, the word dari-lapa, will only find listed darilapa (which also occurs in the Goetia). It is not expected that this will cause the reader any inconvenience in finding words.

All variants are cross-referenced to the best possible form of the word as used by Dee, as far as this can be determined; but where there are many Dee variants, these are usually to be taken as all equivalent.

A few variant words are to be found a line or two away from their true alphabetical place, to avoid multiplying cross-references; thus butamonu occurs within the entry butmon, and not before it. This should not cause inconvenience; if a word is not found at its strict alphabetical place, simply look a line or two higher or lower.

Variants that appear to arise from miscopying or printers' errors are marked with a following asterisk: thus *coasg (for caosg). Such errors are frequent in all previously published works containing any Enochian material; it is to be hoped that the printer treats this work better.

A fairly comprehensive list of divine and angelic names, mainly from Dee's magical manuscripts, is included, but the reader is warned against regarding this list as complete, in the sense of giving the key to the complete Dee magical system. Only those names actually used by Dee (and, preferably, those used with some frequency) are included. The texts contain instructions for generating many additional names, from the various Enochian tables, but no names have been generated for this Dictionary. Also, a large number of angelic names that are given in the Golden Dawn rituals are omitted, as these appear to have been created from the tables in ways not intended by Dee. In addition, only the barest outline of the nature and functions of the various spirits can be given in the Dictionary. The publisher of this volume will be bringing out a complete guide to Enochian magic at a later date.

The Enochian Letter at the beginning of each part of the Angelic-English section of the Dictionary is reproduced in facsimile from the original letters in Dee's manuscript diary for 6 May 1583 (Sloane MS 3188 f.104). For details of how they were formed see the previous chapter, page 36.

PART I
ANGELIC-ENGLISH

Angelic	Source and Pronunciation	English
a	a	1) in, on, of, with. Cf. c, q. 2) the.
Aaan		angel, companion of Anaa. Also Aavan.
Aabco Aalco	AC:C	Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Air of Water.
Aadt		angel, companion of Taad.
Aaetpio Aaetpoi	GD	Senior of Fire, associated with Mars. Also Aetpio.
aaf aai aao	ā-f ā-i ā-o	among, amongst. Cf. eai, oai.
aaiom aaiome	GD, AC:C AC:C	= aai om 'amongst us'.
aala	ā-la	put, place
Aalco	AC:C	= Aabco, Divine Name.
Aana		angel, companion of Anaa. Also Aavna.
Aanaa		angel ruling Anaa and companions.
aao		= aaf, among.
Aaodt		angel, also known as Aadt.
Aaoxaif		Senior of Air, associated with Jupiter.
Aapdoce		Senior of Fire, associated with Venus. Also Apdoce.

Aavan		angel, also known as Aaan.
Aavna		angel, also known as Aana.
Aax		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Axir.
Ab		angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Luna.
abai	a-bai	stooping.
Abaiond		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Pop.
abaivoninu*	GD	= abai vovin, stooping dragon.
Abamo		angel, also known as Abmo.
Abaoz		angel, also known as Aboz.
abaramig abaramiji	AC:G	= abramg, prepare.
aberaasasa	AC:C	= abraasa, provide.
aberameji aberamiji	AC:C AC:G	= abramg, prepare.
Abioro		= Habioro, Senior of Air.
Abmo		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Aiaoai Oiiit. Also Abamo. Companions are Bmoa, Moab, Oabm.
aboapri aboaperi	a-bo-a-pri AC:C	serve. Cf. booapis.
Aboz		angel, companion of Boza.
abraasa abraassa aberaasasa abra	a-brā-sa GD, AC:VV AC:C AC:VV	provide, provided.

abramg	a-bramg	prepare.
abramig	a-bra-mig
abaramiji	AC:G
aberameji	AC:C
aberamiji	AC:G
berameji	AC:C
beramiji	AC:C
ACAM		7699.
acame	AC:C
Acar		angel ruled by Rzionr Nrzfm. Also Acrar. Companions are Cara, Arac, Raca.
acaro*	AC:C	see acroodzi, beginning.
Acca		angel ruled by Aourrz Aloai. Also Acuca.
Acmbicu		Senior of Earth, associated with Mercury.
Acmsicu
Ahmbicv	GD
a-cocasahe*	AC:C	= a cocasb, the time.
Acps		angel, companion of Psac.
Acrar		angel, also known as Acar.
acroodzi	a-cro-od-zi	beginning. Also croodzi.
acaro odazodi	AC:C	Cf. iaod, iaodaf.
Acuca		angel, also known as Acca.
Acups		angel, also known as Acps.
Aczinor		Senior of Earth, associated with Jupiter.
ad	AC:G	See adrpan, cast down.
adagita	AC:C	= adgt, can.
adana	AC:C, G	= adna, obedience.
adapehaheta	AC:C, G	= adphaht, unspeakable.

adarepanu	AC:C, G	= adrpan, cast down.
adarepeheta	AC:VV
adarocahe	AC:C	= adroch, Mount of Olives.
adgmach		much glory.
adgt	ajt	can, be able.
adagita	AC:C
Adi		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Diom.
Adire		angel, also known as Adre.
adna	ad-na	obedience.
adana	AC:C, G
Adnop		angel, also known as Adop.
Adoeoct		Senior of Fire, associated with Jupiter.
Adoeoet
adohi*	GD	See loadohi, kingdom.
adoho*	AC:C
adoian	a-do-yan	face.
adoianu	AC:C, G
adoranu*	AC:G
Adois		Demonic name (reversal of Sioda) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Fire.
Adop		angel, companion of Dopa.
Adopa		angel ruling Dopa and companions.
adoranu*	AC:G	= adoian, face.
Adota		angel also known as Adta.
adph	GD	See piadph, jaw.
adphaht	ad-fāt	unspeakable.
adapehaheta	AC:C, G

Adraman		name of an evil spirit.
Adre		angel ruled by Rzionr Nrzfm.
Ah-deh-er-reh	GD	Also Adire.
Ah-deh-reh	GD
adroch	ad-roch	Mount of Olives.
adarocahe	AC:C
adrpan	ad-r-pan	cast down.
adarepanu	AC:C
adarepeheta	AC:VV
ad peranuta	AC:G
Adta		angel, companion of Taad.
Advorpt		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Tex.
Aetpio		=Aaetpio, Senior of Fire.
AF		19.
afa	AC:C
affa	a-fa	empty.
afafa	AC:G, VV
afefa	AC:C
Aflafben		Dee's good angel, appeared to Dee and Kelley on 1 November 1583.
Aphlafben
ag	ag	none, no, no one.
agi	AC:C
Agb		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Gbal.
Aglm		angel, companion of Magl.
Agmlm
Ahaozpi		Senior of Air, associated with Venus. Also Haozpi.
Ah-deh-er-reh	GD	=Adre, angel.
Ah-deh-reh	GD

Ah-ee-ah-oh-ah-ee		=Aiaoai, Divine Name.
Ahmbicv	GD	=Acmbicu, Senior of Air.
Aiaoai		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Earth of Air.
Aidrom		=Laidrom, Senior of Earth.
Aira		Angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Angpoi Unnax.
Aigra
aisaro	AC:C	=a isro, the promise.
aji-la-tore-torenu	AC:C	=ag l toltorn, no one creature.
ajitoltorenu	AC:C	=ag toltorn, no creature.
akarinu	AC:G	praiseworthy. Cf. ecrin, oecrimi.
Akele		angel (Filia Lucis), associated with Mars.
aladi	AC:VV, C	=aldi, gathering.
aladonu	AC:C, G	=aldon, gather.
alalare	AC:C	=allar, bind up.
alar	a-lar	settle.
alre	AC:C
alca		judgment(?)
ald*	GD	=sald, wonder.
aldaraia		will of God (?) (Another title of the Book of Soyga.)
aldi	al-di	gathering. Cf. aldon.
aladi	AC:VV, C
aldon	al-don	gather, gird up. Cf. aldi.
aladonu	AC:C, G
Alhctga		Senior of Earth, associated with Venus.
Alhectega	AC:C

allar alalare	a-lar AC:C	bind up.
Aloai		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Fire of Air.
alonusahi	AC:G	= lonshi, power.
Alpudus		angelic King ruling in the West-South-West.
alre	AC:C	= alar, settle.
am	GD	See amizpi, fasten.
amayo*	AC:G	= enay, lord.
Ambriol Ambrial		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Loe.
a-me-ipezodi	AC:C	= amizpi, fasten.
amema	AC:C, G	= amma, curse.
ametajisa	AC:G	= emetgis, seal.
amgedpha		I begin anew.
amizpi a-me-ipezodi am pizi	a-miz-pi AC:C GD	fasten.
amiran amiranu	a-mi-ran AC:C, G	yourselves.
amma amema	a-ma AC:C, G	curse, cursed.
Amox Amsox		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Vadali Obava.
An Aw	AC:C	angel (Filus Filiorum Lucis), associated with Luna.
Anaa		angel powerful in change of place, ruled by the angel Aanaa and Vadali Obava. Also Anvaa. Companions are Naaa, Aaan, Aana.
Anaeem		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Water of Earth.
ananael	a-na-na-el	wisdom.
Ancro		angel also known as Anro.
And		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ndzn.
Andispi		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zom.
aneta-na*	AC:C	= a netab, in government.
angelard anugelareda anujelareda	an-je-lard AC:G AC:C	thought, thoughts.
Angpoi		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Air of Earth.
Anodoin		Senior of Fire, associated with Mercury.
Anro		angel, companion of Roan. Also Ancro.
anugelareda anujelareda	AC:G AC:C	= angelard, thought.
Anvaa		angel, also known as Anaa.
aoiveae	a-oi-ve-ai	star, stars.
Aomi		angel, companion of Iaom. Also Aosmi.
Aor		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ormn.
Aosmi		angel, also known as Aomi.

Aourrz		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Fire of Air.
Aozpi		Holy Name of Five Letters, ruling the element of Air.
Apa		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Paoc.
apachana		'the slimy things made of dust'.
Apahr		angel, also known as Aphr.
Apata		demonic name (reversal of Atapa) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Water.
Apdoce		= Aapdoce, Senior of Fire.
apeta*	AC:G	see aspt, before.
Aphlafben		= Aflafben, Dee's good angel, appeared to Dee and Kelly on 1 November 1583.
Aphr		angel, companion of Phra.
apila	a-pi-la	live (v.)
Aplst		angel, also known as Apst.
Apm		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Pmox.
Apst		angel ruled by Noalmr Oloag. Also Aplst.
aqlo	GD	= a q loadohi, in thy kingdom.
aqoso	AC:C
ar	ar	1) winnow, van. 2) that, so that.
Arbiz		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Earth of Earth.

ar-caosaji	AC:C	= ar caosgi, winnow the earth.
Ardza		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Air of Air.
arecoazodiore	AC:C	= ar coazior, that increase.
aretabasa	AC:G	= ar tabas, that govern.
are-zodi*	AC:G	= etharzi, peace.
Arfaolg		angelic King ruling in the North-North-East.
argedco		(meaning unknown; invoke?)
Arinnap		Senior of Fire, associated with Saturn.
Arizl		angel, also known as Arzl.
Arn		name of the Second Aethyr.
arp		conquer? See zilodarp.
arphe		descend.
Arsl		Holy Name of Four Letters, ruling the element of Water.
Arsel
artebasa*	AC:G	= ar tabas, that govern.
Arzl		angel, companion of Rzla.
Arzulgh		name of an evil spirit, counterpart of Befafes.
as	as	was
asa	AC:C, G
asage	AC:G	= as ge, was not.
asa-momare	AC:C	= as momar, was (and shall be) crowned.
asapata	AC:G	= aspt, before.
asapeta	AC:C, G
asata	AC:G	= as ta, was as.

Ascha		God.
Ash		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Shal.
Asi		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Sisp.
Asndood		Senior of Fire, associated with Luna.
Asp		name of the Twenty-First Aethyr.
aspian	as-pi-an	quality, qualities.
Aspiaon		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Deo.
aspt		before, in front of.
asapata	AC:G
asapeta	AC:C, G
as apeta*	AC:G
Ast		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Stim.
astel		(meaning unknown).
asymp	GD	= a symp, with another.
Ataad		angel ruling Taad and companions.
Atapa		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Fire of Water.
ataraahe	AC:C	= atraah, girdle.
Atdim		angel ruling Tdim and companions.
Ath		angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Venus.
Ato		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Tott.

Atogbo		demonic name (reversal of Obgota) commanding cacodemons of Air of Water.
atraah	a-traa	girdle, girdles.
ataraahe	AC:C
auauago	AC:C	= avavago, thunder.
auauotza	AC:C	= avavox, pomp.
audcal		gold, philosophical mercury.
Audropl		= Aydropl, Governor.
Autp		angel, companion of Utpa.
Aultp
Ava		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Vasa.
avabh	a-vab	hyacinth, hyacinthine.
Avabo		demonic name (reversal of Obava) commanding cacodemons of Water of Fire.
avavago	a-va-va-go	thunder, thunders. Cf. coraxo.
auauago	AC:C
avavox	a-va-vox	pomp.
auauotza	AC:C
Ave		angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Venus.
aviny	a-vi-ni	millstone, millstones.
avini	AC:C
Avtotar		Senior of Air, associated with Mercury.
Aw*	AC:C	= An, angel.
Axir		angel powerful in trans-formation, ruled by Cbalpt Arbiz.
Axtir

Axziarg — Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Pax.

Aydropl
Aydropt
Audropl — Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Tan.

Azcall — demonic name (reversal of Llacza) commanding cacodemons of Water of Air.

Azdobn — angel (Filia Lucis), associated with Mercury.

Azdra — demonic name (reversal of Ardza) commanding cacodemons of Air of Air.

aziagiar a-zi-a-jar azodiajiere AC:C — harvest.

aziazor a-zi-a-zor
azodiazodore AC:C, G — likeness.

Aziz — angel, companion of Ziza. Also Azriz.

azodiajiere AC:C — = aziagiar, harvest.

azodiazodore AC:C, G — = aziazor, likeness.

azodien AC:C — = a zien, on hands.

Azriz — angel, also known as Aziz.

Baataiva* — = Bataiva, Elemental King of Water.

bab — power, ability, possibility.

babage ba-ba-je babagen ba-ba-jen
babaje AC:C, G
babajehe AC:C — south.

babalanuda* AC:C — = babalond, harlot.

Babalel — King, associated with Mars.

babalon ba-ba-lon babalonu AC:C, G — wicked. Cf. babalond.

babalond ba-ba-lond babalanuda* AC:C — harlot. Cf. babalon.

Bablibo — Prince, associated with Sol.

Baeovib ba-e-o-vib
Baeouib GD
Baeouibe AC:C — righteousness; one of the names of God. Cf. baltoh.

Bag — name of the Twenty-Eighth Aethyr.

Bagenol — Prince, associated with Venus.

bagie ba-gi-e baghie GD bajihie AC:C — fury.

bagle bag-le baglen bag-len
bagile AC:C
bagilenu AC:C, G
bajile AC:C
bajileim* AC:G — because, for that reason; why, for what reason?

bajilenu	AC:C, G
bajirele*	AC:C
Bagledf		Prince, associated with Luna.
bahal	ba-hal	cry aloud.
bahala	AC:C
bajihie	AC:C	= bagie, fury.
bajile	AC:C	= bagle, because.
bajileim*	AC:G	= baglen, because.
bajilenu	AC:C, G
bajirele*	AC:C
balata	AC:C, G	= balt, justice.
balatanu	AC:C	= baltan, justice.
balatime	AC:G	= baltim, justice.
bala-tima	AC:C
balatoha	AC:C	= baltoh, righteousness.
balatohe	AC:C
balatune*	AC:G	= baltim, justice.
balazodareji	AC:G	= balzarg, steward.
Balceor		Prince, associated with Saturn.
Baldago		Prince, associated with Jupiter.
balie	GD, AC:C	= balye, salt.
Baligon		King, associated with Venus.
balit		just, righteous. Cf. balt.
balita	AC:C
balozodareji	AC:G	= balzarg, steward.
balt	balt	justice. Cf. balit, baltim, baltoh, balzizras.
balata	AC:C, G
baltan	bal-tan
balatanu	AC:C

baltim	bal-tim	justice, extreme justice.
balatime	AC:G
bala-tima	AC:C
balatune*	AC:G
baltoh	bal-to	righteousness. Cf. balt, Baeovib.
balatoha	AC:C
balatohe	AC:C
baltoha	AC:C
balye	bal-ye	salt.
balie	AC:VV, AC:C
balzarg	bal-zarg	steward.
balazodareji	AC:G
balzizras	bal-ziz-ras	judgment. Cf. balt.
balzodizodarasa	AC:C
Bamasan		name of a guardian angel.
bamesa	AC:G	= bams, forget.
Bamnode		Prince, associated with Saturn.
bams	bams	forget.
bamesa	AC:G
Bapnido		Prince, associated with Mars.
Barfort		Prince, associated with Mercury.
Bariges		Prince, associated with Sol.
barinu	AC:C	= brin, have.
Barma		name of a demon.
Barman
Barnafa		Prince, associated with Sol.
Bartiro		Prince, associated with Jupiter.
basada*	AC:G	= busd, glory.

basajime	AC:C, G	=basgim, day.
basajinu*	AC:G
basgim	bas-jim	day. Cf. bazm.
basajime	AC:C, G
basajinu*	AC:G
besajinu*	AC:G
Basmelo		Prince associated with Jupiter. Cf. bazm?
Baspalo		Prince, associated with Luna.
Bataivah		Elemental King of Air, associated with Sol.
Bataivh
Bataiva Baataiva*
Bazchim		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Des.
bazm	baz-m	midday, noon. Cf. basgim, basmelo?
bazodemelo	AC:C
Bazpama		Prince, associated with Mercury.
Bbemo		demonic name (reversal of Omebb) commanding cacodemons of Water of Water.
Befafes		Prince, associated with Mars. Cf. Befes. (His name means 'Light from Light').
Befes		(vocative case of) Befafes, Prince.
beh-ee-teh-oo-em	GD	=Bitom, spirit of Fire.
beh-ee-to-em	GD
Beigia		angel (Filius Lucis), associated with Mercury.

belanusa	AC:C	=blans, harbour.
beliora	AC:C, G	=bliora, comfort.
belioraxa	AC:C	=bliorax, comfort.
beliore	AC:C	=blior, comfort.
beliorebe	AC:C	=bliorb, comfort.
beliorese	AC:C	=bliors, comfort.
belioreta	AC:C	=bliort, comfort.
Belmagel		Kelley's evil angel.
Belmara		Prince, associated with Luna.
Ben		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley.
Benpagi		Prince, associated with Venus.
berameji	AC:C	=abramg, prepare.
beramiji	AC:C	=abramig, prepare.
beranusaji	AC:C	=bransg, guard.
beregida	AC:C	=brgda, sleep.
berinu	AC:C	=brin, have.
berinuta	AC:C	=brint, have.
berinutasa	AC:C	=brints, have.
be-ri-ta	AC:C	=brita, talk.
Bermale		Prince, associated with Sol.
Bernole		Prince, associated with Venus.
besajinu*	AC:G	=basgim, day.
Besgeme		Prince, associated with Jupiter.

bia	bi-a	voice, voices.
bial	bi-al
bien	bi-en
bialo	GD
bianu	AC:G
bienu	AC:C
biab	bi-ab	stand.
biabe	AC:C
bigliad	big-li-ad	comforter. Cf. blior, bliorax.
bijil-iad	AC:C
Binodab		Prince, associated with Venus.
Binofom		Prince, associated with Mars.
Bitom		spirit of Fire.
beh-ee-teh-oo-em	GD
beh-ee-to-em	GD
Blamapo		Prince, associated with Mercury.
blans	blans	harbour, protect, shelter.
belanusa	AC:C	Cf. bransg.
bliar		= blior, comfort.
bliard		= bliord, comfort.
Bliigan		Prince, associated with Mercury.
Blingef		Prince, associated with Jupiter.
Blintom		Prince, associated with Saturn.
blior	bli-or	comfort (n.) Cf. bliorax.
bliar	bli-ar
bliard	bli-ard
bliora	bli-or-a

bliorb	bli-orb
bliors	bli-ors
bliort	bli-ort
beliore	AC:C
beliora	AC:C, G
beliorebe	AC:C
beliorese	AC:C
belioreta	AC:C
bliorax	bli-or-ax	comfort (v.) Cf. blior.
belioraxa	AC:C
Blisdon		Prince, associated with Mercury.
Blumaza		King, associated with Luna.
Blmaza*
Bmamgal		Prince, associated with Saturn.
Bmilges		Prince, associated with Mars.
Bminpol		Prince, associated with Mars.
Bnagole		Prince, associated with Venus.
Bnapsen		King, associated with Saturn.
Bnaspol		King, associated with Mercury.
boaluahe	AC:G	worship.
Boaza		angel, also known as Boza.
bobanu*	AC:G	= soboln, west.
Bobogel		King, associated with Sol.
Bobagel	GD
Bogemo		(meaning unknown).
bogpa	bog-pa	reign, rule. Cf. sonf.
bogira	AC:C

bojira	AC:G
bojua	AC:G
bolanu	AC:G	= soboln, west.
bolp	bolp	be! be thou!
bolape	AC:G, C
Bonefom		Prince, associated with Venus.
booapis	bo-a-pis	serve. Cf. aboapri.
booapisa	AC:C
Bormila		Prince, associated with Venus.
Bornogo		Prince, associated with Sol.
Boza		angel powerful in mixtures of natures, ruled by the angel Eboza and Angpoi Unnax. Also Boaza. Companions are Ozab, Zabo, Aboz.
Bracn		angel, also known as Brcn.
Bragiop		Prince, associated with Luna.
Bralges		Prince, associated with Luna.
Brasges
Branglo		Prince, associated with Saturn.
bransg	branzj	guard. Cf. blans.
beranusaji	AC:C
Brap		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Vadali Obava. Also Briap.
Brasges		= Bralges, Prince.
Brcn		angel, companion of Cnbr. Also Bracn.

brgda	bërj-da	sleep.
brgdo	GD
beregida	AC:C
Briap		angel, also known as Brap.
brin	brin	have (they have, you have, thou hast).
brint	brint
brints	brints
berinu	AC:C
berinuta	AC:C
berinutasa	AC:C
Brisfli		Prince, associated with Luna.
brita	brita	talk.
be-ri-ta	AC:C
Brorges		Prince, associated with Saturn.
bufd*		= busd, glory.
busada	AC:C, G	= busd, glory.
busadire	AC:C	= busdir, glory.
busd	buzd	glory.
busdir	buz-dir
bufd*
busada	AC:C
basada*	AC:G
busadire	AC:C
Busduna		Prince, associated with Mars.
butmon	but-mon	mouth, mouths.
butmona	but-mo-na
butmoni	but-mo-ni
butamonu	AC:C
butamona	AC:C
butamoni	AC:C
Butmono		Prince, associated with Saturn.
Bynepor		King, associated with Jupiter.

c	s	1) on, with, of, unto. 2) o, oh.
ca	ka	1) therefore.
eca	AC:C, G; GD	2) as. Cf. ta.
eka	GD	3) another. Cf. symp.
cab	kab	rod.
caba	AC:C
Cab		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Abmo.
caba	ka-ba	govern. (More usually taba).
Cabalpt		= cbalpt, Divine Name.
Cac		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Acca.
cacacom	ka-ka-kom	flourish.
ca-ca-come	AC:C
cacocasb	AC:C	= ca cocasb, another time.
cacocasabe	AC:C
cacrg	ka-kërj	until.
cacareji	AC:C
kakareji	AC:G
kakoreji	AC:G
cacureji	AC:C
Cadaamp		angelic King ruling in the North-North-West.
caelazod	AC:C, G	= calz, firmament.
cafafam	ka-fa-fam	abiding, abode.
cafafame	AC:C
caharisateosa	AC:C	= christeos, let there be.
cahirelanu	AC:C	= chirlan, rejoice.

cahisa	AC:C, G	= chis, are.
kahisa	AC:G
cahisaji	AC:C	= chis ge, are not.
cahiso	AC:C	= chiso, are.
cala	AC:C	= CLA, 456.
calaa	AC:C
calz	kalz	firmament.
caelazod	AC:C
Calzirg		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Lin.
Cam		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Amox.
camascheth		(meaning unknown).
cameliatza	AC:G	= camliax, speak.
cameliaxa	AC:C
camikas		(meaning unknown).
camliax	kam-li-ax	speak, spake.
cameliatza	AC:G
cameliaxa	AC:C
canal	ka-nal	workman, workmen.
canale	AC:C
kanila	AC:G	= cnila, blood.
canilu	AC:C
ca-ni-quola*	AC:C	= c noqod, c noqodi, o you
ca-ni-quodi	AC:C	servants.
ca-no-quoda	AC:C, G
canse		mighty. Cf. cruscanse.
ca-ol	AC:G	meaning unknown; perhaps ca, therefore.
caosg	ka-ozg	earth.
caosga	ka-oz-ga

caosgi	ka-oz-ji
caosgin	ka-oz-jin
caosgo	ka-oz-go
caosgon	ka-oz-gon
caosaga	AC:C, G
caosagi	AC:C, G
caosaji	AC:C, G
caosajinu	AC:C
caosago	AC:C, G
caosagonu	AC:C
coasg*	GD
capimali	ka-pi-ma-li	successively, time after time.
capmiali	kap-mi-a-li
cape-mi-ali	AC:C
capimao	ka-pi-ma-o	time, period, season, while.
capimaon	ka-pi-ma-on
carbaf	kar-baf	sink.
carebafe	AC:C
carep-el	AC:C	= crp l, but one.
caresa*	AC:C	= cors, such.
caripe	AC:C	= crip, but.
carma		come out. Cf. niis.
Carmara		angelic King ruling the Kings and Princes of the planetary hours. Also called Marmara.
caro-o-dazodi	AC:C	= croodzi, beginning.
casarm	ka-sarm	whom, in whom, to whom, under whom, of whom, whose. Cf. ds.
casarma	ka-sar-ma
casarman	ka-sar-man
casarmg	ka-sarmj
casarmi	ka-sar-mi
casarem	AC:C
casareme	AC:C, G
kasareme	AC:G

casarema	AC:C
casaremanu	AC:C
casaremeji	AC:C
kasaremeji	AC:G
casaremi	AC:C
catabela	AC:C	= orsca tbl, the buildings of her.
cbalpt		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Earth of Earth.
cabalpt
kelpadman		(meaning unknown).
ceph		name of the Enochian letter representing Z.
cheph keph
Chialps		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Nia.
chiis	kis	are. Cf. chis.
childao	kil-da-o	diamond, diamonds.
chirlan	kir-lan	rejoice.
cahirelanu	AC:C
Chirspa		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Asp.
chis	kis	are (they are).
chiis	kis
chiso	ki-so
cahisa	AC:C, G
kahisa	AC:G
cahiso	AC:C
chisa	GD	= chis a, are in.
Choronzon	AC:VV	= Coronzon, demon.
Chr		name of the Twentieth Aethyr.
Khr	AC:C
chramsa		(meaning unknown).

christeos	kris-te-os	let there be.
caharisateosa	AC:C
ci	AC:C	see ulcinin, happy.
CIAL		9996.
ciaofi	si-a-o-fi	terror.
ciaosi	AC:C
kiaisi*	AC:G
cicle	si-kle	mystery, mysteries.
cicles	si-kles
cicale	AC:C
kikale	AC:G, GD
kikle	GD
cicalesa	AC:C
cinxir	GD	=cynxir, mingle.
CLA		456.
Cms		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Msal.
Cnbr		angel powerful in mechanical arts, ruled by Aiaoai Oiiit and the angel Hcnbr. Companions are Nbrc, Brcn, Rcnb.
Cnabr
cnila	kni-la	blood.
kanila	AC:G
canilu	AC:C
c-noqol	GD	=c noqod, o you servants.
coasg*	GD	=caosg, earth.
coazior	ko-a-zi-or	increase.
coazodiore	AC:C
Cocarpt	AC:C	=Cucarpt, Governor.
cocasb	ko-kazb	time, times.
cocasg	ko-kazj
cocasa	AC:C

kokasa	AC:G
cocasabe	AC:C
cocasaji	AC:C
a-cocasahe*	AC:C
collal	ko-lal	sleeve, sleeves.
colalala	AC:C
Comanan		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zax.
Comananu	GD
comerelahe*	AC:G	=comselh, circle.
commah	ko-ma	truss, trussed.
comemahe	AC:C
commemahe	AC:G
commennahe*	AC:G
como	ko-mo	window.
comselh	kom-sel	circle.
com-selahe	AC:C
comselha	AC:C
komesalehe	AC:G
komesalahe	AC:G
komesalohe	AC:G
komeselake*	AC:G
komeselahe	AC:G
kromeselahe*	AC:G
congamphlgh		man's spirit; the Holy Ghost.
conisa*	AC:C	=eolis, make.
conisbra	ko-niz-bra	works of man.
conisabera	AC:C
const	konst	thunder. Cf. avavago, coraxo.
conusata	AC:C
Cop		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Opna.
copehanu*	AC:C	=eophan, lamentation.

cor	kor	number. Cf. cormf, cormp.
core	AC:C
Corabiel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Mercury.
coraxo	ko-rax-o	thunder. Cf. const, avavago.
cordziz	kord-ziz	reasonable creature, man (Homo sapiens).
coredazodizoda	AC:C
koredazodizod	AC:G
Corfax		name of a guardian angel.
cormf	kormf	number. Cf. cor, cormp.
cormfa	korm-fa
coremefa	AC:C, G
cormp	kormp	number (v.), count, be numbered.
cormpo	korm-po
cormpt	kormpt
coremepe	AC:C
coremepo	AC:C
coremepeta	AC:C
Coronzon		name of a mighty demon (perhaps = Lucifer) who rebelled against God.
Coronzom
Choronzon	AC:VV
cors	kors	such.
coresa	AC:C
coresi*	AC:C
corsi*	GD
caresa*	AC:C
Cpsa		angel, companion of Psac.
Cpusa
Cralpir		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zip.
crip	krip	but, only.
crp	krip
caripe	AC:C

croodzi	kro-od-zi	beginning. Also acroodzi. Cf. iaod, iaodaf.
kromeselahe*	AC:G	= comselh, circle.
cruscanse		more mighty. Cf. canse.
Csc		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Scio.
Cucarpt		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Lea.
Cocarpt	AC:C
kures		here (?)
Cus		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ussn.
cynxir	sinx-ir	mingle, mingled; mix, mixed.
cinxir	GD
cynuxire	AC:C
kynutzire	AC:G
Czns		angel ruled by Idoigo Ardza.
Czons
Czodenes

d	di	three, third.
da	AC:C
dau	AC:C
da	da	1) there.
	AC:C	2) = d, three.
Daalo		demonic name (reversal of Olaad, commanding cacodemons of Earth of Water.
dalagare	AC:C	= dlugar, give.
Daltt		angel also known as Datt.
daluga	AC:C, G	= dluga, give.
dalugare	AC:C	= dlugar, give.
damploz	dam-ploz	variety.
damepelozoda	AC:C
dao	AC:C	See childao, diamond.
DAOX		5678
Dapi		angel ruled by Iaaasd Atapa. Also Daspi.
darbs	darbz	obey.
darebesa	AC:C, G
dare-pasa*	AC:G
dorebasa*	AC:G
dorebesa*	AC:G
dorepesa*	AC:G
dareji	AC:C	= DARG, 6739.
daresare	AC:C	= darsar, wherefore.
DARG		6739.
dareji	AC:C

darilapa	AC:C	= drilpa, great.
darisapa*	AC:C, G
darilapi	AC:C	= drilpi, great.
darix	AC:C	= drix, bring down.
darolanu	AC:C	= droln, any.
darr		the philosopher's stone.
darsar	dar-sar	wherefore. Cf. bagle.
daresare	AC:C
das	AC:C, G	= ds, which.
dasata	AC:C	= ds t, which also.
dasonuf	AC:C	= ds sonf, which reign.
Daspi		angel also known as Dapi.
Datt		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Volxdo Sioda.
dau	AC:G	= d, three.
dax	dax	loin, loins.
dazis	da-zis	head, heads.
dazodisa	AC:C
de	di	of, to.
dedvilh		(meaning unknown).
Deo		name of the Seventh Aethyr.
Des		name of the Twenty-Sixth Aethyr.
desa*	AC:C	= od es, and fourth.
Dial		Holy Name of Four Letters, ruling the Element of Earth.
dial*	AC:C	= d ialprt, third flame.

Dialiva		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Arn.
Diari		angel also known as Diri.
dilzmo	dilz-mo	differ.
dizodalamo*	AC:C
Dimt		angel, companion of Tdim.
Dinmt
Diom		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Volxdo Sioda. Also Dixom.
Diri		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Llacza Palam. Also Diari.
diu	di-u	angle.
di-vau	AC:C
duiv	GD
Dixom		angel also known as Diom.
dizodalamo*	AC:C	= dilzmo, differ.
dlasod		sulphur (alchemical). Cf. salbrox.
dluga	dlu-ga	give, given.
dlugam	dlu-gam
dlugar	dlu-gar
daluga	AC:C, G
dalugare	AC:C
Dmal		angel (Filius Lucis) associated with Jupiter.
do	AC:G	in.
Doagnis		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Arn.
doalim	do-a-lim	sin (v.)
doalime	AC:C

Doanzin		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zip.
dobix	do-bix	fall.
dobitza	AC:C
Docepax		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zim.
dodapala	AC:C	= dodpal, vex.
dodaremeni	AC:C	= dodrmni, vex.
dodasa	AC:C	= dods, vexation.
dodasihe	AC:C	= dodsih, vexation.
dodpal	dod-pal	vex. Cf. dodsih.
dodrmni	dod-ërm-ni
dods	dodz
dodapala	AC:C
dodaremeni	AC:C
dodasa	AC:C
dodsih	dod-si	vexation. Cf. dodpal.
dodseh	GD
Dolop		angel also known as Doop.
don		name of the Enochian letter representing R.
donasdogamatastos		hell-fire.
Donpa		angel also known as Dopa.
dooain	do-o-ain	name.
dooaip	do-o-aip
dooiap	do-o-yap
dooainu	AC:C, G
dooaipe	AC:C, G
dooiape	AC:C, G
doooape*	AC:G

Doop		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Cbalpt Arbiz. Also Dolop.
Dopa		angel powerful in mixtures of natures, ruled by Noalmr Oloag and the angel Adopa. Also Donpa. Companions are Opad, Pado, Adop.
dorebasa*	AC:G	= darbs, obey.
dorebesa*	AC:G
dorepesa*
dorpha	dor-fa	look about.
dorphal	dor-fal
dorepaha	AC:C
dorepehal	AC:C
dorepehala	AC:G
dorepehela	AC:G
dosig	do-sij	night.
dosiji	AC:C
Dozinal		Governor of the Fourth Division of the Aethyr Tex.
drilpa	dril-pa	great, greater. Cf. canse.
drilpi	dril-pi
darilapa	AC:C
darilapi	AC:C, G
darisapa*	AC:C, G
drix	drix	bring down.
darix	AC:C
droln	droln	any.
darolanu	AC:C
drux		name of the Enochian letter representing N.
drun	GD

ds	di-es	who, which, that. Cf. casarm.
Dsaaai		demonic name (reversal of Iaaasd) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Water.
Dtaa		angel, companion of Taad.
Dtoaa
duiv	GD	= diu, angle.
Dxgz		angel, companion of Xgzd.
Dxagz

E — angel (Filia Lucis) associated with Sol.

Eac — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Acar.

eai e-ai — among, amongst. Cf. aaf, oai.

Eboza — angel ruling Boza and companions.

eca AC:C, G; GD — =ca, therefore.

Ecop
Ecaop — angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Vadali Obava.

ecrin e-krin — praise (n.) Cf. oecrimi.
ecarinu AC:C e-karinu AC:G
akarinu AC:G

Edelprna — Elemental King of Fire, associated with Sol.
Edelperna
Edelprnaa AC:C
Edlprnaa GD

ednas ed-nas — visit. Cf. f.
eda-nasa AC:C

ef AC:C, GD — =f, visit.

efafafe e-fa-fa-fe — vial, vials. Also ofafafe.
efafaje* AC:C

efe — (meaning unknown).

eh-ex-ar-peh GD — =Exarp, Spirit of Air.

eka GD — =ca, therefore.

e-karinu AC:G — =ecrin, praise.

Ekiei — angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Mars.

El — angel (Filia Lucis) associated with Sol.

el el — one, first. Also l.
ela AC:C, G

elanusahe AC:G — =lansh, power.
elanusaha AC:C

elasa* AC:G — =ils, you.

elasadi AC:C — =lasdi, foot.

elazodape AC:G — =elzap, course.

Elexarpeh GD — =Lexarph, Governor.

elo el-o — first. Cf. el.

elonu-dohe AC:G — =londoh, kingdom.

elonusa AC:C, G — =lonsa, power.

elonusahi AC:C, G — =lonshi, power.

elonusahinu AC:C, G — =lonshin, power.

elzap el-zap — course.
elazodape AC:C, G
elzodape AC:G

em em — nine. Also m.

emena AC:C — =emna, herein.

emetgis e-met-jis — seal.
ametajisa AC:G
emetajisa AC:C, G

emna em-na — herein.
emena AC:C

EMOD — 8763.
emoda AC:C

Emor	GD	=Mor, Holy Name.
Empeh	GD	=Mph, Holy Name.
En-ah-en-tah	GD	=Nanta, Spirit of Earth.
Enai	AC:C	=Enay, Lord.
E-na-iad	AC:C	=Enay Iad, Lord God.
Enay	en-e	Lord. Also Na.
Enayo	AC:C, G
eol	e-ol	make, made. Cf. eolis.
e-ola	AC:G
eolis	e-o-lis	making. Cf. eol.
eophan	e-o-fan	lamentation. Cf. ser.
copehanu*	AC:C
eors	e-ors	hundred.
eoresa	AC:C
Ephra		angel ruling Phra and companions.
ERAN		6332.
Eranu	AC:C
erem	AC:C	=erm, ark.
Erg		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Rgan.
erm	erm	ark.
erem	AC:C
Ern		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Rnil.
es	es	four. Also s.
Erzla		angel ruling Rzla and companions.
Ese		angel (Filia Lucis) associated with Venus.

Esemeli		angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Saturn.
esiasch	e-si-ask	brother, brothers.
esiasacahe	AC:C, G
siasch	GD
ethamz	e-thamz	cover (v.).
etahamezoda	AC:C
ethamza	GD
etharzi	e-thar-zi	peace.
Eutpa		angel ruling Utpa and companions.
ex	AC:C	see oxex, vomit.
Exarp		Spirit of Air.
Exentaser	AC:VV	Mother of All (?).
Exr		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Xrnh.

f	ef	visit. Also ef.
fa	AC:C
fe	AC:G
faaip	fa-a-ip	voice, voices. Cf. bia.
fa-a-ipe	AC:C
Faax		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Obgota Aabco. Also Fatax.
faboan	fa-bo-an	poison.
faboanu	AC:C, G
fafen	fa-fen	1) to the intent that.
fafenu	AC:C	2) follower, followers.
fam		name of the Enochian letter representing S.
faoda*	AC:C	=iaod, beginning.
faonts	fānts	dwell. Cf. faorgt, praf.
faonutas	AC:C
faorgt	farjt	dwelling-place. Cf. faonts.
fargt	farjt
faoregita	AC:C, G
faorejita	AC:G
faregita	AC:C
farzm	far-zëm	lift up, raise. Cf. goholor.
farsm	GD
farezodem	AC:C
fatahe-are-zodi	AC:G	=f etharzi, visit with peace.
Fatax		angel, also known as Faax.
FAXS		7336. More usually TAXS.
faxisa	AC: C

felathe-are-zodi*	AC:G	=f etharzi, visit with peace.
fetahe*	AC:G
fetahe-ar-ezodi	AC:C
fetahe-are-zodi	AC:G
fifalz	fi-falz	weed out.
fifalazoda	AC:C
fifis	fi-fis	execute, perform, carry out.
fifisa	AC:C
fisis*	GD
Fmnd		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Idoigo Ardza.
Fmond
Focisni		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Bag.

g	ji	1) with, in.
gi	ji	2) you, your.
ji	AC:G
GA		31.
Ga		name of an angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley ('Last breath of the living').
gag		(meaning unknown).
gah	gā	spirit, spirits.
gahe	AC:C, G
gaha	AC:VV	1) existed. 2) Babes of the Abyss (?)
gahal	AC:VV	exists.
gahalana	AC:VV	will exist.
gahire		(meaning unknown).
Gahoachma		I am what I am (a title of God).
Gaiol		Holy Name of Five Letters, ruling the Element of Water.
gal		name of the Enochian letter representing D.
galgol		(meaning unknown).
galsuagaph		(meaning unknown).
galsuagath
Galvah		name of an angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley on 14 June 1583. His name means 'end'.
Ganislay		name of a demon.

ganiurax		(meaning unknown).
Gaolo		demonic name (reversal of Oloag) commanding cacodemons of Air of Fire.
garmal		(meaning unknown).
garnastel		(meaning unknown).
garp		(meaning unknown).
gascampho		(meaning unknown: 'the word has 64 significations').
gassagen		'the divine power creating the angel of the same'.
Gazavaa		name formed of the angels Ga, Za, Vaa.
Gbal		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Anaeem Sondn (?)
Gbeal
ge	je	1) not. 2) our.
Gebabal		angelic King ruling in the East-North-East.
Gecaond		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zim.
ged		name of the Enochian letter representing G.
Gedoons		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Loe.
gedotbar		begotten.
geh	je	thou art.
gemeganza		your will be done.
Gemnimb		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Tex.

Genadol		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Deo.
genetaahe*	AC:G	=g netaab, your government.
gephna		(meaning unknown).
ger		name of the Enochian letter representing Q.
geraa	AC:G	=graa, moon.
geta		out of him.
gevamna		beginning (?)
gi		=g, with.
gigipah	ji-ji-pa	breath.
gigipahe	AC:C
jijipahe	AC:G
gil		we want (?)
jimi-calazodoma	AC:C	=g micalz oma, with a power of understanding.
ginai	AC:C	=gnay, does.
jinayo	AC:C
ginetaabe	AC:C	=g netaab, your government.
ginonupe	AC:C	=gnonp, garnish.
giraa	AC:C	=graa, moon.
giresam	AC:C	=g rsam, with admiration.
jirosabe	AC:C, G	=grosb, sting.
gisg		name of the Enochian letter representing T.
gisa	GD
Githgulcag		name of a demon (perhaps Lucifer).
givi	ji-vi	stronger. Cf. drilpa, canse.

gizyax	jiz-yax	earthquake.
jizodajazoda	AC:G
jizodyazoda	AC:C
Glma		angel, companion of Magl.
Glmma
glo	GD	see tofglo, all things.
Gmnm		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Vadali Obava.
Gmdnm
gna		(meaning unknown).
gnay	jë-nei	does.
ginai	AC:C
jinayo	AC:C
gnetaab	GD	=g netaab, your government.
gnonp	jë-nomp	garnish.
ginonupe	AC:C
go-a-al*	AC:G	=qaal, creator.
go-a-anu*	AC:G	=qaan, creation.
gohe	go-he	say, saying, said, (he says).
gohia	go-hi-a	(we say).
goho	go-ho	(he says).
gohol	go-hol	(saying).
gohon	go-hon	(have said).
gohulim	go-hu-lim	(it is said to you).
gohus	go-hus	(I say).
gohas	AC:G
gohola	AC:C, G
gohu	AC:C
gohulime	AC:C
gohusa	AC:C, G
gohed		one, everlasting.
goholor	go-ho-lor	lift up, raise. Cf. farzm.
goholore	AC:C, G

Gomziam		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Rii.
gon		name of the Enochian letter representing I.
gono	go-no	faith.
gonsag		(meaning unknown).
go-o-al*	AC:G	=qaal, creator.
gosaa	go-sā	stranger.
graa	grā	moon.
geraa	AC:G
giraa	AC:C
gran	gran	elder, elders. Also uran.
graph		name of the Enochian letter representing E.
grosb	grozb	sting, bitter sting.
jirosabe	AC:C, G
gru		deed, fact.
Gzdx		angel, companion of Xgzd.
Gzadx

ha		(meaning unknown).
Habioro		Senior of Air, associated with Mars. Also Abioro.
Hagone		angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Mercury; also, the angelic Prince ruling, with King Carmara, the Kings and Princes of the planetary hours.
Hagonel
hal		(meaning unknown).
hami	ha-mi	creature, creatures.
ham	ham
Haozpi		=Ahaozpi, Senior of Air.
harg	harj	plant (v.)
haraji	AC:C
Hbr		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Brap.
Hcmorda		=Htmorda, Senior of Air.
Hcnbr		angel ruling Cnbr and companions.
Hcoma		Spirit of Water.
heh-co-em-ah	GD
Hctga		Holy Name of Five Letters, ruling the Element of Earth.
Hectega	GD
he	GD	see luiahe, song.
Heeoa		angel (Filius Lucis), associated with Mars.
helech		in ours (?)

Hiaom		angel ruling Iaom and companions.
Hipotga		Senior of Air, associated with Saturn.
hoath	ho-ath	worshipper.
hoathahe	AC:C
hoel-q	AC:C	= holq, measure.
holdo	hol-do	groan.
holado	AC:G, C
holq	holk	measure (v.)
hoel-q	AC:C
hometohe	AC:C, G	= homtoh, triumph.
homin	ho-min	age.
homil	ho-mil
homida*	AC:C, G
homila	AC:C, G
homtoh	hom-to	triumph (v.)
hometohe	AC:C, G
Hononol		angelic King ruling in the West.
hoxmarch		fear (n.)
Hrap		angel, companion of Phra.
Hraap
Hroan		angel ruling Roan and companions.
Hru		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ruoi.
Hsa		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Saiz.
Htmorda		Senior of Air, associated with Luna.
Hcmorda

Hua		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Vasg.
hubaio	hu-bay-o	lantern, lamp.
hubar	hu-bar
hubaro	hu-bar-o
hubardo	GD
hubare	AC:C
hucacha		(meaning unknown).
huseh		(meaning unknown).
Hxgzd		angel ruling Xgzd and companions.

i	i	1) is. 2) in. 3) angel (Filius Lucis) associated with Sol.
Iaaasd		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Fire of Water.
Iaba		angel ruled by Spmnir Llpiz. Also Ianba.
Iabes		God, Lord; Supreme Life.
Iad	yad	God.
iado
Iada	AC:C, G
iadnah	yad-na	knowledge, divine knowledge.
iadnamad	yad-na-mad
iadanahe	AC:C
iadanamada	AC:C
Iadpil	yad-pil	one of the names of God: 'He That Lives'.
Iahl		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Anaeem Sondn. Also Iamhl.
iaiadix	ya-ya-dix	honor.
iaial	ya-yal	include (conclude).
Iaida	yai-da	a title of God: 'The Highest'.
Iaidon	yai-don	a title of God: 'The All-Powerful'.
ialapereji	AC:G	=ialprg, flame.
iala-pire-gahe	AC:C, G	=ialpirgah, flames of first glory.

ialaponu	AC:G	=ialpon, burn.
yalaponu	AC:C
ialapore	AC:C	=ialpor, burning.
Yalpamb		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zen.
ialpereji	AC:C	=ialprg, flame.
ialpirgah	yal-pir-ga	flames of first glory. Cf. ialprg.
iala-pire-gahe	AC:C, G
ialpirt	GD	=ialprt, flame.
ialpon	yal-pon	burn. Cf. ialpor.
ialaponu	AC:G
yalaponu	AC:C
ialpor	yal-por	burning, flaming.
ialapore	AC:C
ialprg	yal-përj	flame, flames. Cf. ialpirgah, vep.
ialprt	yal-përt
ialapereji	AC:G
ialpereji	AC:C
ialpirt	GD
Iamhl		angel also known as Iahl.
Iana		angel (Filia Lucis) associated with Jupiter.
Ianba		angel also known as Iaba.
Iaoaia		demonic name (reversal of Aiaoai) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Air.
Iaod	ya-od	beginning. Cf. croodzi.
iaodaf	ya-o-daf
yaodafe	AC:C
Iaola		demonic name (reversal of Aloai) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Air.

Iaom Iasom		angel powerful in finding out secrets of men, ruled by the angel Hiaom and Spmnir Llpiz. Companions are Aomi, Omia, Miao.
yarry yareryo	ya-ri AC:C	providence.
iasa*	AC:C	= las, rich.
Ibah		Holy Name of Four Letters, ruling the Element of Air.
i-be-da	AC:G	triangle.
Ich		name of the Eleventh Aethyr.
icoresaka*	AC:C	= i cors ca, is such as.
Iczhhcal Iczhhca Iczhhcl Iczhhcz Iczodhehca		Elemental King of Earth, associated with Sol.
Idalam		demonic name (reversal of Maladi) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Water.
idalugame idalu-gamea	AC:G AC:C	= i dlugam, is given.
Idoian	AC:VV	Holy Name (name of God).
Idoigo	i-do-i-go	1) a title of God: 'He that sits on the Holy Throne'. 2) Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Air of Air.
iecarimi*	AC:C	= oecrimi, praise.
iehe	AC:C, G	= geh, thou art.

iehusoz iehusozod yehusozod iehusozoda	ye-hu-soz AC:G AC:C AC:G	mercy.
i-el	AC:C	= i l, is one.
Ih		angel (Filius Lucis), associated with Luna.
Iipo Iidpo		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Maladi Olaad.
iisononu*	AC:C	= lilonon, branch.
il ila	il AC:G	thou, thee. Also ils.
Ilacza		= Llacza, Divine Name.
Iladav		demonic name (reversal of Vadali) commanding cacodemons of Water of Fire.
ilas ilasa	AC:G AC:C, G	= ils, thou.
Ilemese		angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Saturn.
ilesa	AC:G	= ils, thou.
ili	AC:C	= i li, in the first.
ili-i	AC:G	o ye hills.
ilonon	GD	= lilonon, branch.
Ilr		angel (Filius Lucis), associated with Venus. Also Isc.
ils yls ylsi	ils ils ilsi	thou, thee. Also il.

ilas	AC:G
ilasa	AC:C, G
ilesa	AC:G
ilsi	GD
yolasa	AC:C
i-mica-ol-zododa*	AC:C	= omicaolz, be mighty.
imimuamare*	AC:G	= imvamar, apply oneself.
Imtd		angel, companion of Tdim.
Imntd
imvamar	im-va-mar	apply oneself.
imimuamare*	AC:G
imuamar	AC:C
imumamare	AC:G
in	GD	= m, except.
inoasa	AC:C	= i noas, is become.
insi	in-si	walk.
inusi	AC:C
Iocle		angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Mars.
iod	AC:C	= i od, is and.
Ioiad	i-o-yad	a title of God: 'He that Lives Forever'.
Io-iiad	GD
yolasa	AC:C	= ils, thou.
yolcam	yol-kam	bring forth.
yolci	yol-si
iolcam	GD
yolacame	AC:C
yolakame	AC:G
yolaci	AC:C
yolaki	AC:G
Iopgna		demonic name (reversal of Angpoi) commanding cacodemons of Air of Earth.

yor	yor	roar.
yorb	GD
yore	AC:C
yorepoila	AC:C	= yrpoil, division.
ip	ip	not. Cf. ipam, ipamis.
ipe	AC:C
ipam	i-pam	is not. Cf. ip, ipamis.
ipame	AC:C, G
ipamis	i-pa-mis	cannot be. Cf. ip, ipam.
ipamisa	AC:G
iparanu	AC:G	= ip uran, not see.
ipuranu	AC:C
irgil	ir-jil	how many.
irejila	AC:C
yrpoil	ir-poil	division. Cf. poilp.
yorepoila	AC:C
isa*	AC:G	= as, was.
isalamanu	AC:C	= i salman, is the house.
isaro	AC:C	= isro, promise.
Isc		= Ilr, angel.
isro	iz-ro	promise.
isaro	AC:C
itahila	AC:C	= othil, seat.
itzomatzipe	AC:C	= ixomaxip, known.
Iubanladaec		name of an angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley on 19 June 1583.
Jubanladaec Jubanladaa*
Jubenladece
Iudra		(meaning unknown).
Ivame*	AC:C	= i umd, is called.
ivaumed	AC:G

ivaumeda	AC:G
ivaunieda	AC:G
ivemeda	AC:C
ixomaxip	ix-o-max-ip	known. Cf. om.
itzomatzipe	AC:C
Izaz		angel, companion of Ziza. Also Izraz.
izazaz	i-za-zaz	frame, framed.
i-zoda-zodazod	AC:C
Ized		angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis), associated with Jupiter.
Izinr		angel, also known as Iznr.
Izixp		angel, also known as Izxp.
izizop	i-zi-zop	vessel, vessels; container. Also zizop.
izodizodope	AC:C
Iznr		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Angpoi Unnax. Also Izinr.
i-zoda-zodazod	AC:C	=izazaz, frame.
izodizodope	AC:C	=izizop, vessel.
Izraz		angel, also known as Izaz.
Izxp		angel ruled by Spmnir Llpiz. Also Izixp.

L	el	1) one, first; The First (a title of God). Cf. la, li, lo.
	AC:C	2) angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Sol.
la	la	first. Cf. l, li, lo.
Labnixp		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Bag.
laf		(meaning unknown).
lah		(meaning unknown).
laiad	lai-ad	secret, secrets.
laiada	AC:C, G
Laidrom		Senior of Earth, associated with Mars. Also Aidrom.
Lairz		angel also known as Larz.
Lanacon	AC:C	=Lavacon, Governor.
Lang		ministering angels.
lanibame	AC:C	=l nibm, one season.
lansh	lonsh	power. Also lonsa, lonshi, lonshin.
Laoaxrp		Senior of Water, associated with Luna.
Laoazrp	AC:C
lap	lap	for (conj.)
lape	AC:C, G, VV
Laparin		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zim.
larag	la-raj	nor.
laraji	AC:C
larasada	AC:C, G	=lrasd, dispose.

larianu*	AC:G	= trian, shall be.
larinuji	AC:C, G	= lring, stir up.
Larz		angel, companion of Rlza.
las lasa	las AC:C	rich.
Lasben		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley.
lasdi lusdi	laz-di GD	foot, feet. Also lusd.
lava		pray.
Lavacon Lanacon	AC:C	Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Lea.
Lavavoth		angelic King ruling in the South-South-West.
Lazdixi		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Lit.
Lea		name of the Sixteenth Aethyr.
Leaoc		angel also known as Leoc.
lehusan		(meaning unknown).
lehuslach		(meaning unknown).
lel	lel	same. Cf. l.
Leoc		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Nelapr Omebb. Also Leaoc.
lephe		(meaning unknown).
Levanael Leveanael		planetary angel, associated with Luna.
levithmong leuitahemonuji	le-vith-mong AC:C	beast (of the field), cattle.

Lexarph		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zax.
Lgaiol		= Slgaiol, Senior of Water.
Lhctga		= Alhctga, Senior of Earth.
Lhiansa Liiansa	AC:C	Senior of Earth, associated with Saturn.
li		first. Cf. l, la, lo.
liaida*	AC:G	= laiad, secret.
Liba		angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis), associated with Jupiter.
li-el	AC:C	= l, first.
Ligdisa		Senior of Water, associated with Saturn.
Liiansa	AC:C	= Lhiansa, Senior of Earth.
Lil		name of the First Aethyr.
lilonon iisononu ilonon	li-lo-non AC:C GD	branch, branches.
limlal	lim-lal	treasure.
Lin		name of the Twenty-Second Aethyr.
Lit		name of the Fifth Aethyr.
Lixipsp	AC:VV	warden of the Aethyr Bag.
Llacza Ilacza Olacza		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Water of Air.
Llpiz		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Fire of Earth.
Lmag Lmmag		angel, companion of Magl.

loadohi	lo-a-do-hi	kingdom. Also londoh.
adohi*	GD
adoho*	AC:C
loangab		(meaning unknown).
Loe		name of the Twelfth Aethyr.
loagaeth		speech from God. The name of a book by the angels, Liber Logaeth.
logaeth logaah logah
loholo	lo-ho-lo	shine.
sobolo	AC:C, GD
lolcis	lol-sis	buckler.
lolacis	AC:C
loncho	lon-cho	fall.
lonucaho	AC:C
lonukaho	AC:G
londoh	lon-do	kingdom. Also loadohi.
londohe	AC:C
lonudohe	AC:C
lonsa	lon-sa	power. Also lansh.
lonshi	lon-shi
lonshin	lon-shin
lonsh	GD
lonu-sahi-toxa	AC:C	= lonshi tox, power of her.
lorslq	lor-sel-kwa	flower, flowers.
lores-el-qo	AC:C
lrasd	el-razd	dispose.
larasada	AC:C, G
lring	el-ring	stir up.
larinuji	AC:C, G
Lrxn		angel, companion of Nlrx.
Lrixn

Lsrahpm		Senior of Water, associated with Mars.
lu	lu	nor.
Luah		praising angels.
Luach
lucal	lu-kal	north.
lucala	AC:C, G
luciftian	lu-sif-ti-an	brightness.
luciftias	lu-sif-ti-as
lucifatianu	AC:C
lukiftias	AC:C
luiahe	lu-ya-he	song.
lulo		tartar (or mother of vinegar).
lurfando		(meaning unknown).
lusd	luzd	foot, feet. Also lasdi.
lusda	luz-da
lusdan	luz-dan
lusdi	GD
luseroth		(meaning unknown).

m	em	1) nine. Also em. 2) except (GD in).
maasi	mā-si	laid up.
mabberam		(meaning unknown).
mabza	mab-za	coat.
mabezoda	AC:C
Mad	mad	God. Cf. Iad, Oiad, Piad.
mada	AC:C, G
madariatza	AC:C	=madriax, heaven.
madarida	AC:C, G	=madrid, iniquity.
madariitza	AC:G	=madriax, heaven.
madariiatza	AC:C
Madimi		angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis), associated with Mercury.
Madimiel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Mars.
madriax	mad-ri-ax	heaven. Cf. oadriax.
madriiax	mad-ri-ax
madriaax	GD
madariatza	AC:C
madariitza	AC:G
madariiatza	AC:C
madrid	mad-rid	iniquity, iniquities.
madarida	AC:C
maelpereji	AC:C, G	=malprg, fire.
Magl		angel powerful in mechanical aids, ruled by the angel Pmagl and Maladi Olaad. Also Mamgl. Companions are Aglm, Glma, Lmag.

Magm		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Nelapr Omebb. Also Masgm.
mahorela	AC:VV	dark heavens. Cf. madriax.
Maladi		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Earth of Water.
Malap		demonic name (reversal of Palam) commanding cacodemons of Water of Air.
malprg	mal-përj	fire, fires; fiery darts.
malpirgi	mal-përji
maelpereji	AC:C, G
malapereji	AC:C
malapireji	AC:C
Mals		name of the Enochian letter representing P.
Mamgl		angel also known as Magl.
manada*	AC:C	see smnad, another.
manin	ma-nin	mind (n.).
maninu	AC:C
maoffas	ma-of-fas	measure, be measured.
maof-fasa	AC:C
MAPM		9639.
meapeme	AC:C
Mapsama		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley; the name means 'Tell them'.
marb	marb	according to.
marebe	AC:C, G
marebi	AC:G
mariehe*	AC:G

Masgm		angel also known as Magm.
Matb		thousand
matabe	AC:C
Mathula		Governor of the Second
Mathvla	AC:C	Division of the Aethyr Zaa.
matorb	ma-torb	echoing.
mtorebe	AC:C
Maz		name of the Sixth Aethyr.
Me		angel (Filia Lucis), associated with Luna.
Med		name of the Enochian letter representing O.
Meeana		demonic name (reversal of Anaeem) commanding cacodemons of Water of Earth.
Merifri		=Murifri, angel.
Mfzrn		demonic name (reversal of Nrzfm) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Fire.
Mgm		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Gmnm.
miam	mi-am	continuance. Cf. nuam.
mian	mi-an
miame	AC:C
MIAN		3663.
mianu	AC:C
Miao		angel, companion of Iaom. Also Misao.
micalp	mi-kalp	mightier. Cf. cruscanse.
micalapape	AC:C

micalz	mi-kalz	power; powerful, mighty.
micalzo	mi-kal-zo	Cf. canse, drilpa, lonsa.
micaolz	mi-kalz
micaelazodo	AC:G
micaelzodo	AC:G
micalazoda	AC:C
micalazodo	AC:C
micaolazoda	AC:C
mikaelzodo	AC:G
micma	mik-ma	behold.
micama	AC:C, G
miinoag	mī-nōj	corner.
miinoagi	AC:C
miketh		wisdom (?)
mir	mir	torment (n.)
mire	AC:G
mirc	mirk	upon.
mireca	AC:C
mireka	AC:C
Mirzind		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Uti.
Misao		angel also known as Miao.
Miz		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Izxp.
Mma		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Magm.
moanu*	AC:C	=ooanoan, eyes.
Moc		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ocnm.
molap	mo-lap	man, men.
Molpand		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Ich.

molvi molui	mol-vi AC:C	surge.
mom	mom	moss.
momao	mo-mau	crown (n.) Cf. momar.
momar momare	mo-mar AC:C	crown (v.), be crowned.
monasci monasaci	mo-nas-ki AC:C	name. Cf. omaoas.
monons mononusa	mo-nonz AC:C	heart.
moooah moooabe	mō-wa AC:C	repent, regret.
Mop		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Opmn.
Mor		Holy Name of Three Letters, ruling the Element of Earth.
Moreorgran Morvorgran		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley.
mospleh mos-pelehe	mos-ple AC:C	horn.
Mot		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Otoi.
moz		joy.
mozod		joy of God.
Mph		Holy Name of Three Letters, ruling the Element of Water.
Mrx		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Rxnl.
Msal Msmal		angel ruled by Spmnir Llpiz.

Mtdi Mtndi		angel, companion of Tdim.
Mto		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Toco.
mtorebe	AC:C	= matorb, echoing.
Murifri Merifri		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley on 2 June 1583.

Na — Lord of Hosts; Trinity. Cf. Enay.

na — name of the Enochian letter representing H.
na-hath GD

na AC:VV — that.

Naaa — angel, companion of Anaa. Also Navaa.

Nabaomi — Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zen.

na-e-el AC:G — =nanaeel, power.

na-hath GD — =na, Enochian letter.

nai — (meaning unknown).

Nalvage — angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley on 11 February 1584; his name means 'Avoidance of earthly things' (fuga terrestrium). Nalvage, a near kinsman of Madimi's mother, was the principal dictator of the Enochian Calls.

nanaeel na-nai-el — power. Cf. micalz, lonsa.

nanba nan-ba — thorn, thorns.
nanuba AC:C

Nanta — spirit of Earth.

Naoo — angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Aiaoai Oiiit.
Naooo napta nap-ta — sword, swords. Also nazpsad.

napeai na-pe-ai

napea GD
napeta AC:C

Navaa — angel also known as Naaa.

nax — (meaning unknown).

naz naz — pillar, pillars. Cf. nazarth, nazavabh.
nazoda AC:C, G

nazarth naz-arth — pillars of gladness. Cf. naz.
na-zodaretahe AC:C

nazavabh naz-a-vab — hyacinth pillars. Cf. naz.
na-zodavabebe* AC:C

nazpsad naz-psad — sword, swords. Also napta.
nazps GD
nazodapesad AC:C, G

Nbrc — angel, companion of Cnbr.
Nbarc

Ndazn — angel also known as Ndzn.

Ndnos — demonic name (reversal of Sondn) commanding cacodemons of Water of Earth.

ne — holy.

Ndzn — angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Maladi Olaad. Also Ndazn.

Nelapr — Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Water of Water.

nenni AC:VV — you have become. Cf. noan.

neph — (meaning unknown).

netaab ne-tab — government, governing.
netaaib ne-taib
netab ne-tab

netaabe	AC:C
netaaibe	AC:C
Nhdd		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Obgota Aabco.
Nhodd
NI		28.
Nia		name of the Twenty-Fourth Aethyr.
nibm	nib-ëm	season. Cf. capimao.
nidali	ni-da-li	noise, noises.
Nigrana		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Des.
niis	nīs	come, come away, come forth.
niisa	nī-sa
niiso	nī-so
ninu	AC:C	see ulcinin, happy.
Nlrx		angel powerful in finding out secrets of men, ruled by the angel Pnlrx and Iaaasd Atapa. Companions are Lrxn, Rxnl, Xnlr.
Nlirx
Noalmr		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Air of Fire.
noan	no-an	be, become.
noaln	no-aln
noar	no-ar
noas	no-as
noasmi	no-as-mi
noanu	AC:C
noalanu	AC:C
noari	AC:C
noasa	AC:C
noasami	AC:C

nobloh	nob-lo	palm, palms (of hand).
nobeloha	AC:C
Nocamal		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Lit.
Nociabi		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Oxo.
noco	no-ko	servant. Cf. booapis.
nofahon*	AC:G	= nothoa, midst.
Nogahel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Venus.
noib	noib	yea.
noibe	AC:C
nomig	no-mij	even as.
nomiji	AC:C, G
nonca	non-sa	you, to you. Cf. vomsarg, g.
noncf	nonsf
nonci	non-si
noncp	nonsp
nonuca	AC:C
nonucafe	AC:C
nonuci	AC:C
nonucape	AC:C
nonuji*	AC:G
noqod	nok-wod	servant, minister. Cf. noco, booapis.
noquodi	nok-wo-di
noquol	nok-wol
noqodi	AC:C
noquod	GD
nor	nor	son, sons. Also noromi.
nore	AC:G
norezoda	AC:G	= norz, six.
norezodacahisa	AC:C	= norz chis, six are.

noromi noroni	no-ro-mi AC:C	son, sons. Also nor.
norz norezoda	norz AC:G	six.
nostoah		it was (?)
nothoa notahoa nofahon	no-thoa AC:C, G AC:G	midst; among, amidst.
Npat Nprat		angel ruled by Aourrz Aloai.
Nroa Nrcoa		angel, companion of Roan.
Nrzfm		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Fire of Fire.
nuam nuame	nu-am AC:C	continuance. Cf. miam.

o	o	five.
Oacnr		angel, also known as Oanr.
oadariatza	AC:C	= oadriax, lower heavens.
oado	o-a-do	weave.
oadriax oadariatza	o-ad-ri-ax AC:C	lower heavens. Cf. madriax.
oai	o-ai	amongst. Also aaf, aai, aao, eai.
Oalco		= Aabco, Divine Name.
oali oeli	o-a-li AC:C	place, put. Cf. aala.
oanio	o-a-ni-o	moment.
Oanr		angel, companion of Roan. Also Oacnr.
Oap		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Apst.
OB		28.
Obava		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Water of Fire.
Obelison		a title of the angelic Prince Befafes: 'Pleasant Deliverer'. Cf. obelisong.
obelisong obelisonugi obelisonuji	o-be-li-song AC:C, G AC:G	deliverer. Cf. zonrensg.
obeloce	AC:C	= obloc, garland.
obezoda	AC:C	= obza, half.

obloc ob-lok
obeloce AC:C
garland.

Obgota
Olgota
Oblgota GD
Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Air of Water.

Obmacas
Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Deo.

oboleh o-bo-le obolehe AC:C
garment.

Obvaors
Obuaors AC:C
Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Uti.

obza ob-za
obezoda AC:C
half.

Ocanm
angel, also known as Ocnm.

Ocbaa
demonic name (reversal of Aabco) commanding cacodemons of Air of Water.

Occodon
Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Lil.

Ocnm
angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Cbalpt Arbiz.

od od
and.

odazodi AC:C
see acroodzi, beginning.

Oddiorg Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zip.

odo o-do
1) open.
2) cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Doop.

Odraxti
Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Rii.

Odxlov
demonic name (reversal of Volxdo) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Fire.

Oec
cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Ecop.

oecrimi o-ek-ri-mi
oe-cari-mi AC:C
oekarimi AC:G
iecarimi* AC:C
praise (v.), sing praises. Cf. ecrin, rest.

oela AC:G = ol, make.

oeli AC:C = oali, place.

ofafafe o-fa-fa-fe
vial. Also efafafe.

ofekufa AC:VV
elevated, lifted up.

Ogiodi
demonic name (reversal of Idoigo) commanding cacodemons of Air of Air.

oheloka AC:G
duke.

ohio o-hi-o
ohyo AC:C woe.

oholera* AC:G
= ohorela, make law.

Ohooohaatan
Great Elemental King of Fire.

ohorela o-ho-re-la
oholera* AC:G
make a law, legislate.

oi oi
this.

Oia
cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Iaba.

Oiad o-yad
Oiada AC:C, G
God, the Just One. Cf. Iad, Mad.

Oiiit
Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Earth of Air.

Oip		Holy Name of Three Letters, ruling the Element of Fire.
o-isalamahe*	AC:C	= oi salman, this house.
okada	AC:G	mercy.
ol	ol	1) I, myself.
ole	AC:C	2) make. Cf. eol, oln. 3) 24; one twenty-fourth.
Olaad		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Earth of Water.
Olacza		= Llacza, Divine Name.
olaho	AC:VV	for the second time. Cf. olani.
olalogi	AC:C	= ollog, man.
olalore	AC:C, G	= ollor, man.
olani	o-la-ni	twice.
olanu	AC:C	= oln, made.
olapireta	AC:C, G	= olpirt, light.
ole	AC:C	= ol, one twenty-fourth.
Olgota		= Obgota, Divine Name.
ollog	ol-og	man, men. Cf. morlap, olora.
ollor	ol-or
olalogi	AC:C
olalore	AC:C, G
oln	oln	made. Cf. ol, eol.
olanu	AC:C
Oloag		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Air of Fire.
olora	ol-o-ra	(of) man. Cf. ollag, morlap.
Olpaged		angelic King ruling in the East.

olpirt	ol-përt	light.
olprt	GD
olapireta	AC:C, G
om	om	1) understand, know. Also ome	AC:C	omax. Cf. oma, ixomaxip. 2) we, us.
oma	o-ma	understanding. Cf. om.
omp	omp
omepe	AC:G
Omagg		angel, also known as Omgg.
Omagrap		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Pop.
omaoas	o-ma-was	name. Cf. dooain, monasci.
omaoasa	AC:C, G
omaosa	AC:G
omax	om-ax	know. Also om. Cf. oma,
omaxa	AC:C	ixomaxip.
ome	AC:C	= om, know.
Omebb		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Water of Water.
omepe	AC:C	= omp, understanding.
ome-petilabe	AC:C	= omp tilb, her understanding.
Omgg		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Anaeem Sondn. Also Omagg.
Omia		angel, companion of Iaom. Also Omsia.
omicaolz	o-mi-kalz	be mighty. Cf. micalz.
omp		= oma, understanding.
Omsia		angel, also known as Omia.
omsomna		(meaning unknown).

on	AC:VV	made, built. Cf. oln.
Ona		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Naoo.
ondoh*	GD	= londoh, kingdom.
Onh		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Nhdd.
Onizimp		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Tor.
Onp		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Npat.
ooa*	AC:C	See ooanoan, eye.
ooain*	GD
Ooanamb		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Uta.
ooanoan	ō-a-no-an	eye, eyes.
oo aona	ō-a-o-na
ooa*	AC:C
ooain*	GD
ooge	ō-ge	chamber.
Oopz		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Volxdo Sioda.
Oodpz
OP		22.
ope	AC:C
Opad		angel, companion of Dopa. Also Opnad.
Opmn		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Noalmr Oloag.
Opamn
Opna		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Cbalpt Arbiz.
Opana

Opnad		angel, also known as Opad.
oq	ok	but. Cf. crip.
o-quo	AC:C
or		name of the Enochian letter representing F.
orth	GD
Orcanin		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Nia.
Orcamir	AC:C
oreri	AC:C, G	= orri, stone.
oresa	AC:C, G	= ors, darkness.
oresaba	AC:C	= orsba, drunken.
oresacore	AC:C	= orscor, dryness.
oresaha*	AC:C	= orsba, drunken.
Orh		name of a spirit. ('The word has 72 significations').
Ormn		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Angpoi Unnax. Also Orpmn.
Oro		Holy Name of Three Letters, ruling the Element of Air.
oroch	o-roch	under, underneath.
orocha	o-ro-cha
orocahe	AC:C
orocaha	AC:C
Orpanib		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zaa.
Orpamb	AC:C
Orpmn		angel, also known as Ormn.
orri	or-ri	stone. Cf. patralx.
oreri	AC:C, G
ors	orz	darkness.
oresa	AC:C, G

orsba	orz-ba	drunken.
oresaba	AC:C
orsca	orz-ka	building, buildings.
orscor	orz-kor	dryness.
oresacore	AC:C
orth	GD	= or, Enochian letter representing F.
os	os	twelve.
osf	osf	discord.
othil	o-thil	1) set; I have set.
otahil	AC:C	2) seat, seats. Cf. thil.
otahila	AC:C, G
Otoi		angel ruled by Aourrz Aloai.
Otroi
oucho	u-cho	confound.
ovcho	GD
oucaho	AC:G
ovankaho*	AC:G
ovoars	o-vo-arz	centre.
ouoaresa	AC:G
ovof	ov-of	magnify, be magnified.
OX		26.
oxex	ox-ex	vomit.
oxiayal	ox-i-ai-al	mighty seat, throne.
Oxlopar		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Bag.
Oxo		name of the Fifteenth Aethyr.
oxox		(meaning unknown).
Oyub		angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Llacza Palam.
Oyaub

Ozab		angel, companion of Boza.
Ozaab
ozazm	o zaz-ëm	make (me), make (us). Cf. ol.
ozazma	o-zaz-ma
ozozma	GD
ozadazodame	AC:C
ozodazodama	AC:C
Ozidaia		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Lin.
ozien	o-zin	hand. Cf. zien.
ozol	o-zol
ozodien	AC:C
ozodola	AC:C
ozongon	o-zong-on	wind, winds. Also zong.
ozodonugonu	AC:C

p pi — eight.

pa
pe GD — name of the Enochian letter representing B.

paaox pa-ox — remain.
paaoxt pa-oxt
pa-aolza* AC:G pa-aotza AC:G
paaotzata AC:C pa-iotz AC:G
pa-iotza AC:G

pacaduasam — (meaning unknown).

pacaph — (meaning unknown).

Pacasna — Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Arn.

Paco — angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Maladi Olaad. Also Palco.

padgze — justice from the Divine Power, without blemish.

Pado — angel, companion of Dopa. Also Pando.

paeb paib — oak.
paebe AC:C

Paeoc — angel, also known as Paoc.

page pa-ge — rest.
paje AC:C

paid paid — always.
paida AC:C, G

pa-iotz AC:G — =paaox, remain.
pa-iotza AC:G

pajeipe AC:C — =page ip, rest not.

pajo-ooaoanu AC:G — =pugo ooaona, to eyes.

pal GD — name of the Enochian letter representing X.

pala — two (separated), pair. Cf. pola.

Palam — Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Water of Air.

Palco — angel, also known as Paco.

Pali — angel ruled by Rzionr Nrzfm. Also Panli.

Palut — angel, also known as Paut.

pambt pamt — unto (me).
pamebeta AC:C

pamphicas — (meaning unknown: a contemptuous word).

Pando — angel, also known as Pado.

Panli — angel, also known as Pali.

panpir pan-pĕr — pour (down).
panupire AC:C

Paoc — angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Llacza Palam. Also Paeoc.

paombd pāmd — member, members.
paomebeda AC:C

papnor pap-nor — remembrance, memory.
papenore AC:C

par par — they, them; in them.
pare AC:C

parach	par-ak	equal.
paracahe	AC:C
paracleda	pa-ra-kle-da	wedding.
paracaleda	AC:C
paradial	pa-ra-di-al	dwelling, dwellings; living dwellings.
pa-ra-diala	AC:C
paradiz	pa-ra-diz	virgin.
paradizod	AC:C
para-di-zoda	AC:C
Paraoan		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Lin.
pare	AC:C	=par, they.
pare-meji	AC:C	=parm gi, run with.
parm	parm	run.
pareme	AC:C
Parziba		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Chr.
pasbs	pazbz	daughter, daughters.
pashs	GD
pasahasa	AC:C
Pascomb		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Lil.
Paxcomb
patralx	pat-ralx	rock (n.) Cf. orri.
pataralaxa	AC:C
Paulacarp		name of an evil spirit.
Paut		angel, companion of Utpa. Also Palut.
Paxcomb		=Pascomb, Governor.
Paz		name of the Fourth Aethyr.
PD		33.
peda	AC:C

Pdi		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Diri.
Pdoce		Holy Name of Five Letters,
Pedoce	GD	ruling the Element of Fire.
pe	GD	=pa, Enochian letter representing B.
pe-iad	AC:C	=Piad, God.
pelapeli	AC:C	=plapli, partaker.
peleh		(meaning unknown).
pelosi	AC:C	=plosi, many.
PEOAL		69636.
peranuta	AC:G	see adrpan, cast down.
peredazodare	AC:C	=prdzar, diminish.
peregi	AC:G	=prge, prgel, fire.
pereje	AC:C, G
pereji	AC:G
perejela	AC:C
pereta	AC:C	see ialprt, flame.
periazoda	AC:C	=priaz, priazi, those.
periazodi	AC:C
perifa*	AC:C	=praf, dwell.
peripsax	pe-rip-sax	heaven. Cf. madriax.
peripsol	pe-rip-sol
piripsol	pi-rip-sol
piripson	pi-rip-son
pi-ripesonu	AC:C
peripesatza	AC:C
peripesol	AC:C, G
piripsax	GD
Pfm		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Fmna.

phama		I will give.
Phanael		angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley.
Phra Phara		angel powerful in change of place, ruled by the angel Ephra and Anaeem Sondn. Companions are Hrap, Raph, Aphr.
pi	pi	1) place (n.) 2) she.
Pia		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Iahl.
Piad	pi-ad	God. Cf. Iad, Mad, Oiad.
piadph	pi-adf	jaw, jaws.
pi-adapahe	AC:G
pi-adapehe	AC:C, G
pi-adph	GD
piamol	pi-a-mol	righteousness.
piamoel	AC:C, GD
pian	GD	See aspian, quality.
pianu	AC:C
piap	pi-ap	balance (n.)
piape	AC:C, G; GD
pi-beliare	AC:C	=pi bliar, places of comfort.
pidiai	pi-di-ai	sleeve, marble sleeves.
pii	GD	=pi i, she is.
pilada	AC:C	=pild, continually.
pilah	pi-la	moreover.
pilahe	AC:C, G
pild	pild	continually.
pilada	AC:C

pilzin	pil-zin	firmament of waters.
pil-zodinu	AC:C
pinzu-a		(meaning unknown).
Pir	pīr	Holy One, Holy Ones.
Pire	AC:C, G
pire	AC:VV	holy.
pireda	AC:VV
pi-ripesonu	AC:C	=peripsax, heaven.
piripsax	GD
piripsol piripson
Piz		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Iznr.
pizi	GD	See amipzi, fasten.
plapli	plap-li	partaker, partakers.
pelapeli	AC:C
plosi	plo-zi	many, as many.
pelosi	AC:C
Pmagl		angel ruling Magl and companions.
Pmox		angel ruled by Aourzz Aloai.
Pmzox
poamal	po-a-mal	palace.
poamalzod	po-a-mal-zod
poamala	AC:C
pooumala	AC:G
proamal*	AC:G
Pocisini	AC:VV	=Focisni, Governor.
poilp	poilp	divide. Cf. yrpoil.
poilape	AC:C, G
pola		two (together), pair. Cf. pala.

Ponodol — Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Ich.

pooumala AC:G — =poamal, palace.

Pop — name of the Nineteenth Aethyr.

Pophand — Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Des.

Pothnir — Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Paz.

Ppsac — angel ruling Psac and companions.

praf praf
perifa* AC:C — dwell (in). Cf. faonts, pragma.

pragma — dwell (?) Cf. praf, faonts.

prdzar për-dzar
peredazodare AC:C — diminish.

prge përj
prgel për-jel
peregi AC:G
pereje AC:C, G
pereji AC:G
perejela AC:C — fire.

priaz pri-az
priazi pri-a-zi
periazoda AC:C
periazodi AC:C — those.

Pristac — Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zid.

proamal* AC:G — =poamal, palace.

Psac Psuac — angel powerful in mechanical arts, ruled by the angel Ppsac and Volxdo Sioda. Companions are Sacp, Acps, Cpsa.

pugo pu-go pujo AC:G
puje AC:G — unto.

puim pu-im
puin*
pu-ime AC:C, G — sickle, sickles.

puje AC:G
pujo AC:G — =pugo, unto.

Pxinbal AC:VV — =Labnixp, Governor.

Pziza — angel ruling Ziza and companions.

q	kwa	or.
qo	AC:C
q	kwa	1) thy.
quo	AC:C	2) content, contents.
qaa	kwā	garment, garments.
qaa	kwā	creation. Cf. qaal.
qaan	kwān
qaaon	kwān
qaas	kwās
quaa	AC:G
qa-a-an	GD
qo-a-an	AC:C
qaa-om	GD
qoaanu	AC:G
qua-a-on	AC:G
go-a-anu*	AC:G
qaal	kwāl	creator. Cf. qaa.
qadah	kwā-dā
qo-a-al	AC:G
qo-o-al	AC:G
qo-o-ala	AC:G
quo-o-al	AC:G
go-o-al*	AC:G
qaada	GD
quo-a-dahe	AC:C
qanis	GD	=quanis, olive.
qouodi	AC:G	see noquod, minister.
qting	kwë-ting	rotten.
qotinuji	AC:C
quanis	kwa-nis	olive, olives.
qanis	GD

QUAR		1636.
quare	AC:C
quasahi	kwa-sa-hi	pleasure
quasb	kwazb	destroy.
quasaba	AC:G
quasabe	AC:C, G
quasahe*	AC:G
quiin	kwīn	wherein.
quiinu	AC:C, G
quo-a-al	AC:C, G	=qaal, creator.
quo-a-asa	AC:C	=qaas, creation.
quo-a-dahe	AC:C	=qadah, creator.
quo-o-al	AC:G	=qaal, creator.
quo-o-i-ape	AC:G	by the name. Cf. dooiap.
qurlst	kwërlst	handmaid.
qurelesata	AC:C

Raagios Raagiol Raagiosl Raagiosel	 AC:C	Elemental King of Water, associated with Sol.
Raaph		angel, also known as Raph.
raas raasy ra-asa raasyo	rās rā-sy AC:C AC:C	east.
raclir racalire	rak-lir AC:C	weeping.
Rad		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Adre.
Ranglam		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Uti.
Raph		angel, companion of Phra.
Rapolxo	AC:VV	= Oxlopar, Governor.
Rbnh Rbznh	 	angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Llacza Palam.
Rcnb Rcanb	 	angel, companion of Cnbr.
Rda		cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Datt.
resat-el	AC:C	= rest el, praise Him.
rest	rest	praise (v.) Cf. oecrimi.
Rgan Rgoan	 	angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Volxdo Sioda.

Rii		name of the Twenty-Ninth Aethyr.
Rinmps		demonic name (reversal of Spmnir) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Earth.
rior riore	ri-or AC:C	widow.
ripir ripire	ri-pir AC:C	no place. Cf. pi.
rit rita	rit AC:C	mercy. Cf. iehusoz.
Rlmu Rlemu	 	angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Anaeem Sondn.
rlodnr		furnace (?), crucible (?)
Rmlaon		demonic name (reversal of Noalmr) commanding cacodemons of Air of Fire.
Rnoizr		demonic name (reversal of Rzionr) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Earth.
Roan Rocan	 	angel powerful in mechanical arts, ruled by the angel Hroan and Cbalpt Arbiz. Companions are Oanr, Anro, Nroa.
Rocle Iocle	 AC:C	angel (Filius Filiorum Lucis) associated with Mars.
Ronoamb		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Tor.
ror roray rore	ror AC:C, G AC:G	sun.

rowgh (meaning unknown).

roxtan wine.

Rpa cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Paco.

Rpalen demonic name (reversal of Nelapr) commanding cacodemons of Water of Water.

Rrb cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Rbnh.

Rrl cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Rlmu.

rsam rë-sam admiration.

Rsi cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Sias.

Rsni
Rsoni angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Angpoi Unnax.

rudna (meaning unknown).

Ruoi
Ruroi angel skilled in finding metals and precious stones, ruled by Nelapr Omebb.

Rxao angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Cbalpt Arbiz. Also Rxpao.

Rxnl
Rxinl angel, companion of Nrlx.

Rxp cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Xpcn.

Rxpao angel, also known as Rxao.

Rzionr Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Fire of Fire.

Rzla
Rzila angel powerful in mixtures of natures, ruled by the angel Erzla and Idoigo Ardza. Companions are Zlar, Larz, Arzl.

S		1) four, fourth. 2) angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Sol.
sa	AC:G	and.
sa	GD	see saga, entire.
Saaiz		angel, also known as Saiz.
saanir saanire	sā-nir AC:C	part, parts.
saba		= soba, whose.
Sabathiel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Saturn.
Sach		confirming angels.
Sacp		angel, companion of Psac. Also Saucp.
sa-div	AC:C	= s diu, fourth angle.
saga	sa-ga	one, entire, whole.
Saiinou Saiinov	AC:C	Senior of Water, associated with Jupiter.
Saiz		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Obgota Aabco. Also Saaiz.
salabaiotza*	AC:G	= salbrox, sulphur.
salabarotza	AC:G
salaberoxa	AC:C
salaberotza	AC:G
salada	AC:C, G	= sald, wonder.
salamanu salamann	AC:C, G AC:G	= salman, house.

salbrox	sal-brox	sulphur. Cf. dlasod.
salabaiotza*	AC:G
salabarotza	AC:G
salaberoxa	AC:C
salaberotza	AC:G
sald	sald	wonder, wonders (n.) Cf. zirn.
salada	AC:C, G
ald*	GD
salman	sal-man	house.
salamanu	AC:C, G
salamann*	AC:G
Samapha		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zom.
same*	AC:C	= om, know.
samvelg	sam-velj	righteous. Cf. balit.
samevelaji	AC:C
sapah	sa-pa	sound, sounds; mighty
sapahe	AC:C, G	sounds.
Saucp		angel, also known as Sacp.
Saxtomp		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Maz.
sayomepe	AC:C	= symp, another.
Saziami		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zaa.
Scio Scmio		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Noalmr Oloag.
sembabam		(meaning unknown).
Semeliel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Sol.
semeroh		(meaning unknown).

Sendenna Sondenna Sundenna		name of an evil spirit.
ser		mourning, lamentation. Cf. eophan.
Shal Shial		angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Aiaoai Oiiit.
siaion siaionu	si-ay-on AC:C	temple, temples.
Sias		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Idoigo Ardza. Also Sigas.
siasch	GD	= esiasch, brother.
siatris skatarisa	si-a-tris AC:C	scorpion, scorpions.
sibsi sibesi	sib-si AC:C	covenant.
Sigas		angel, also known as Sias.
Sigmorf		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Tan.
Sioda		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Earth of Fire.
Sisp Siosp		angel ruled by Rzionr Nrzfm.
skatarisa*	AC:C	= siatris, scorpion.
Slgaiol		Senior of Water, associated with Venus. Also Lgaiol.
smnad	smë-nad	another. Cf. symp.
Soageel		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Nia.

Soaixnt Soaiznt	AC:C	Senior of Water, associated with Mercury.
soba	so-ba	whose, whom.
sobam	so-bam
sobca	sob-ka
sobol	so-bol
sobra	so-bra
sobha	so-ba
soha	so-ha
sobama	so-ba-ma
sobame	AC:C, G
sobeh-hah	GD
sobola	AC:C
sob-ha-atahe	AC:C	= sobha ath, whose works.
sobol	so-bol	west. (Also 'whose': see soba).
soboln	GD
so-bolunu	AC:C
bobanu*	AC:G
bolanu*	AC:G
sobra		= soba, whose.
sobrazod-ol	AC:C	= sobra zol, whose hands.
Sochial		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Lea.
sola-bi-enu*	AC:G	= solpeth bien, hearken to my voice.
solamianu	AC:G	= soba mian, whose continuance.
solpeth sol-petahe	sol-peth AC:C	hearken, listen.
Sondenna		= Sendenna, an evil spirit.
Sondn		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Water of Earth.

sonf sonuf	sonf AC:C	reign, rule.
sor		action.
soyga		will of God (?) (The Book of Soyga was one of Dee's holy books; the spirits said it was not a reversal of the Greek ἅγιοσ , holy.)
Spmnir		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Fire of Earth.
Srahpm		=Lsrahpm, Senior of Water.
Stim Strim		angel ruled by Spmnir Llpiz.
Stimcul		1) angel (Filius Lucis), associated with Saturn. 2) angel (Filia Filiarum Lucis) associated with Saturn.
Sudsamna		Kelley's good angel.
Sundenna		=Sendenna, an evil spirit.
surzas surezodasa	sur-zas AC:C	swear, be sworn. Cf. zurza.
symp	simp	another. Cf. smnad.

t	ti	1) also. 2) it. 3) visit. Also f.
ta	ta	1) as. 2) thee (AC:G).
Taad		angel powerful in mixtures of natures, ruled by the angel Ataad and Obgota Aabco. Also Taoad. Companions are Aadt, Adta, Dtaa.
taba tabas tabaori tabasa tebasa	ta-ba ta-bas ta-bāri AC:G AC:G	govern. Also caba. Cf. tabaan, tabaord.
tabaan tabaanu	ta-bān AC:C	governor. Cf. taba, tabaord.
tabaord tabaoreda	ta-bārd AC:C	govern, be governed.
tabges tabejesa	tab-jes AC:C	cave.
Tabitom		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Zax.
Tahando		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Oxo.
Tahaoeloj		Elemental King of Air.
tahil tahila tahilada tahilanu	AC:C AC:G AC:C AC:C	=thil, thild, thiln, seat.

tal		name of the Enochian letter representing M.
talho	tal-ho	cup.
ta-labo*	AC:C
taliobe	AC:C	= tliob, separate.
Tan		name of the Seventeenth Aethyr.
Taoad		angel, also known as Taad.
Taoagla		Governor of the First
Taongla	AC:C	Division of the Aethyr Tex.
Tapamal		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Loe.
tarananu	AC:C	= tranan, marrow.
tarianu	AC:C, G	= trian, shall be.
tarinuta	AC:C	= trint, sit.
tarofe	AC:C	= trof, building.
tasataxa	AC:C	= tustax, precede.
tastax	GD
Tastoxo		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Oxo.
tatan	ta-tan	wormwood.
tatanu	AC:C
TAXS		7336.
tbl	ti-bël	= tilb, her.
Tdim		angel powerful in change of
Tdnim		place, ruled by the angel Atdim and Nelapr Omebb. Companions are Dimt, Imtd, Mtdi.

Teaa		Holy Name of Four Letters, ruling the Element of Fire.
Tedoand		Governor of the First
Tedoond		Division of the Aethyr Uta.
teloc	te-lok	death.
teloah	te-lo-a
teloch	te-lok
teloca	AC:C
telocahe	AC:C, G
telokake*	AC:G
Tex		name of the Thirtieth Aethyr.
Thahaaotahe		Elemental King of Water.
thil	thil	seat, seats. Cf. othil.
thild	thild
thiln	thiln
tahil	AC:C
tahila	AC:G
tahilada	AC:C
tahilanu	AC:C
Thotanf		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Paz.
ti	GD	= t i, it is.
tia	ti-a	his.
tianta	ti-an-ta	bed.
tianuta	AC:C
Tiarpax		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Lit.
Tiiio		demonic name (reversal of Oiiit) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Air.
tibibp	ti-bib	sorrow.
tibibipe	AC:C

tilb	tilb	her, of her.
tlb	tilb
tiobl	ti-obl
tilaba	AC:C
tilabe	AC:C
tibl	GD
tiobela	AC:C
tliob	të-li-ob	separate (v.)
taliobe	AC:C
Toantom		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Asp.
toatar	to-a-tar	hearken, listen. Cf. solpeth.
toatare	AC:C, G
Tocarzi		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Tan.
Toco		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Obgota Aabco. Also Togco.
Todnaon		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zid.
tofglo	tof-glo	all things, everything. Cf. tol.
tofagilo	AC:G
tofajilo	AC:G
tofejilo	AC:C
tofijilo	AC:G
tofijila	AC:G
tol glo	GD
Togco		angel, also known as Toco.
toh	GD	see homtoh, triumph.
tohcoth		fairy, fairies (?)
Tohomaphala		name of a guardian angel.
Toitt		angel, also known as Tott.

tol	tol	all.
ton	ton
tonu	AC:C
tolahame	AC:C, G	= tol ham, all creatures.
toltorg	tol-torj	creature, creatures. Cf. ham.
toltorn	tol-torn
tolteregi	AC:G
toltoregi	AC:C, G
toltoreji	AC:G
toltorenu	AC:C
tore-torenu	AC:C
toltorgi	GD
ton		= tol, all.
tonug	to-nug	deface, be defaced.
tonuji	AC:C
tooat	to-wat	furnish, provide. Cf. abraasa.
tooata	AC:C
Tor		Name of the Twenty-Third Aethyr.
torezodu	AC:C	= torzu, torzul, torzulp, arise.
torezodul	AC:C
torezodulape	AC:C
torgi	GD	see toltorg, creature.
torgu		= torzu, arise.
Torzoxi		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Pop.
torzu	tor-zu	arise.
torgu	tor-ju
torzul	tor-zul
tor-zulp	tor-zulp
torezodu	AC:C
torezodul	AC:C
torezodulape	AC:C

Totocan		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Chr.
Tott		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Idoigo Ardza. Also Toitt.
tox	tox	of him, his. Cf. tia.
totza	AC:G
toxa	AC:C
Tpau		angel, companion of Utpa.
Tplau
Tplabc		demonic name (reversal of Cbalpt) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Earth.
tranan	tra-nan	marrow.
tarananu	AC:C
trian	tri-an	shall be.
tarianu	AC:C, G
trint	trint	sit.
tarinuta	AC:C
trof	trof	building. Cf. orsca.
tarofe	AC:C
turbs	turbz	beauty.
turebesa	AC:C, G
tustax	tus-tax	go before, precede.
tastax	GD
tasataxa	AC:C

Vaa		name of an angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley ('Scourge of those who resist the power, will and command of God').
Vaasa		angel, also known as Vasa.
vabzir	vab-zir	eagle.
vabezodire	AC:C
Vadali		Divine Name of Six Letters, ruling Water of Fire.
valasa	AC:G	=uls, end.
Valgars		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Lil.
vamuela	AC:G	=uml, add.
van		name of the Enochian letter representing V.
vau	GD
Vanarda	AC:C	=Usnarda, Governor.
vanucahi	AC:C	=unchi, confound.
vanupehe	AC:G	=unph, anger.
vaoan	vau-an	truth. Cf. vooan.
vaoanu	AC:G, GD
vaomesareji	AC:C	=vomsarg, every one of you.
vaoresa	AC:C	=vors, over.
vaoresaji	AC:C, G	=vors g, over you.
vaoresagi	AC:G
vaorsag	GD
vaorsagi	GD
varanu	AC:C	=uran, elder.

Vasa		angel ruled by Iaaasd Atapa. Also Vaasa.
Vasg Varsg		angel skilled in medicine, ruled by Noalmr Oloag.
Vastrim		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Rii.
vau	GD	=van, Enochian letter.
vaugeji	AC:C, G	=ugeg, wax strong.
vaukaho*	AC:G	=unchi, confound.
vaul vaun vaunu vavale	vaul vaun AC:C AC:C	work (v.)
vaulasa	AC:C	=uls, end.
vaun		=vaul, work.
vaunala	AC:C	=unalab, skirt.
vaunesa*	AC:C, G	=unal, these.
vaunigilaji vaunilaji vaunilagi	AC:C AC:G AC:G	=uniglag, descend.
vaunud-el	AC:C	=undl, remainder.
vaunupehe	AC:C	=unph, vonph, anger.
vaunupeho	AC:C	=vonpho, anger.
vaupaahe	AC:C	=upaah, wing.
vaurebes	AC:C	=urbs, beautify.
vaurelar*	AC:C	=urelp, seething.
Vavaamp		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Maz.
vavale	AC:C	=vaul, work.

vax	AC:C	=VX, 42.
ucim vcim ucime	u-sim GD AC:C	frown not (smile?).
veh		name of the Enochian letter representing C.
velucorsapax	AC:VV	enthroned.
vep vepe	vep AC:C	flame. Cf. ialprg.
ugear vgear ujeare	u-jar GD AC:C	strength. Cf. ugeg.
ugeg ugegi vgeg vgegi vaugeji	u-jej u-je-ji GD GD AC:C, G	wax strong, grow strong.
vicap		(meaning unknown).
vi-i-v vi-i-vau	GD AC:C	=viu, second.
vi-i-vl	GD	=viu l, second of the first.
uime	AC:C	see vovim, dragon.
vime*	AC:G	=unph, wrath.
vinu	AC:G	invoke.
uirequo	AC:C	=virq, nest.
Virooli		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zom.
virq uirequo	virk AC:C	nest.
viruden	AC:VV	beautified. Cf. urbs.

viu	vi-u	second.
viv	AC:C, GD
vi-i-v	GD
u-i-v	GD
vi-vau	AC:C
viviala pereta	AC:C	=viu ialprt, second flame.
vi-vi-iv	GD	=viu diu, second angle.
Vivipos		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Uta.
Vixpalg		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Asp.
ujeare	AC:C	=ugear, strength.
ulcinin	ul-si-nin	happy.
vlcinina	GD
il ci ninu*	AC:C
uls	uls	end, ends.
vls	GD
vaulasa	AC:C
um		=umd, called.
umadea	u-ma-de-a	tower.
vmadea	GD
vo-ma-dea	AC:C
umapelifa	AC:C	=umplif, strength.
umd	umd	call, be called.
um	um
uml	um-ël	add.
vml	GD
umela	AC:C
umplif	um-plif	strength. Cf. ugear.
vmplif	GD
umapelifa	AC:C

un		name of the Enochian letter representing A.
unal	u-nal	these, those.
vnal	GD
vaunala	AC:C
unalah	u-na-lā	skirt, skirts.
vnalah	GD
vaunalahe	AC:C
uncal		(meaning unknown).
unchi	un-chi	confound. Cf. oucho.
vnchi	GD
vanucahi	AC:C
vaukaho*	AC:G
undl	un-dël	remainder, rest
vnd-l	GD
vaunud-el	AC:C
unig	u-nig	require.
vnig	GD
uniji	AC:C
uniglag	u-nig-lag	descend, go down. Cf. arphe.
vniglag	GD
vaunigilaji	AC:C
vaunilaji	AC:G
vaunilagi	AC:G
Unnax		Divine Name of Five Letters, ruling Air of Earth.
unph	unf	anger, wrath. Also vonph.
vnph	GD
vanupehe	AC:G
vaunupehe	AC:C
vo	AC:VV	wherein.
vohim	vo-him	mighty. Cf. canse, micalz.
vohima	AC:C

vo-ma-dea	AC:C	= umadea, tower.
vomsarg	vom-sarj	every one of you. Cf. g.
vaomesareji	AC:C
vomesareji	AC:G
vonsarg	GD
vonph	vonf	anger, wrath. Cf. unph.
vonpho	von-fo
vaunupehe	AC:C
vaunupeho	AC:C
vonupehe	AC:C
vonsarg	GD	= vomsarg, every one of you.
vooan	vō-an	truth. Cf. vaoan. (Vooan is the vooanu	AC:G	pronunciation used by the fallen angels.)
vors	vorz	over.
voresa	AC:G
vaoresa	AC:C
vorsag	AC:G, GD	= vors g, over you.
vovim	vo-vim	dragon.
vovin	vo-vin
vovina	vo-vi-na
uo uime	AC:C, G
upaah	u-pā	wing, wings.
upaahi	u-pā-hi
upaahe	AC:C
vpaah	GD
vpaahi	GD
vaupaahe	AC:C
ur		name of the Enochian letter representing L.
uran	u-ran	1) see.
vran	GD	2) elder, elders. Also gran.
varanu	AC:C

urbs	urbz	beautify. Cf. turbs.
vrbs	GD
vaurebes	AC:C
Urch		confounding angels.
urelp	u-relp	seething.
vrelp	GD
vaurelar*	AC:C
Urzla		= Erzla, angel.
Usnarda		Governor of the Second
Vanarda	AC:C	Division of the Aethyr Ich.
Ussn		angel skilled in finding metals
Uspsn		and precious stones, ruled by Nelapr Omebb.
Uta		name of the Fourteenth
Vta	AC:C, GD	Aethyr.
Uti		name of the Twenty-Fifth
Vti	AC:C, GD	Aethyr.
Utpa		angel powerful in change of
Utlpa		place, ruled by the angel Eutpa and Llacza Palam. Companions are Tpau, Paut, Autp.
VX		42.
vax	AC:C

Xai — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Aira.

Xannu — demonic name (reversal of Unnax) commanding cacodemons of Air of Earth.

Xcz — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Czns.

Xda — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Dapi.

Xgzd
Xgazd — angel powerful in finding out secrets of men, ruled by the angel Hxgzd and Aourrz Aloai. Companions are Gzdx, Zdxg, Dxgz.

Xii — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Iipo.

Xnlr
Xnilr — angel, companion of Nlrx.

Xom — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Omgg.

Xoo — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Oopz.

Xoy — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Oyub.

Xpa — cacodemon, counterpart of the angel Pali.

Xpcn Xpacn — angel ruled by Iaaasd Atapa.

Xrnh
Xrinh — angel powerful in transformation, ruled by Maladi Olaad.

z	zë	they.
zod	AC:C
Za		name of an angel who appeared to Dee and Kelley ('Transmitter of Gifts').
Zaa		name of the Twenty-Seventh Aethyr.
Zabo Zaabo		angel, companion of Boza.
zacam	za-kam	move.
zacar	za-kar
zacare	za-ka-re
zodaca	AC:G
zodacame	AC:C
zodakame	AC:G
zodacar	GD
zodacara	GD
zodakara	AC:C
zodacare	AC:C
zodakare	AC:C
zodame*	AC:G
Zadzaczadlin		Adam (in the language of the Book of Soyga).
Zafasai		Governor of the Second Division of the Aethyr Zen.
Zamfres Zainfres	AC:C	Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Zid.
zamran	zam-ran	appear, show oneself.
zodamerann*	AC:G
zodameranu	AC:C, G
zodamran	GD

zar	zar	course, courses. Cf. elzap.
zodare	AC:C
Zarnaah		angelic King ruling in the North.
Zarzi		angel, also known as Zazi.
Zarzilg		angelic King ruling in the East-South-East.
Zax		name of the Tenth Aethyr.
Zaxanin		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Tor.
Zazi		angel, companion of Ziza. Also Zarzi.
Zdxg		angel, companion of Xgzd.
Zdaxg
Zedekiel		planetary angel presiding over the sphere of Jupiter.
Zen		name of the Eighteenth Aethyr.
Zibra		demonic name (reversal of Arbiz) commanding cacodemons of Earth of Earth.
Zid		name of the Eighth Aethyr.
zien	zīn	hand, hands. Cf. zol, ozien, ozol.
zodien	AC:C
zil	zil	stretch forth (?) See Zilodarp.
zildar	zil-dar	fly, flew.
zodiladare	AC:C
Zildron		Governor of the First Division of the Aethyr Chr.
Zilodarp	zil-od-arp	a name of God: 'Stretch-Forth-and-Conquer'.
Zodilodarepe	AC:C

Zim		name of the Thirteenth Aethyr.
zimii	zi-mī	enter.
zodimii	AC:C
zimz	zimz	vestures; apparel, clothing.
zodimezod	AC:C	Cf. oboleh, qaa.
zodimezoda	AC:G
Zinggen		angelic King ruling in the West-North-West.
Zip		name of the Ninth Aethyr.
Zipll		demonic name (reversal of Llpiz) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Earth.
zir		presence.
zir	zir	I am.
zirdo	zir-do
zire	GD
zodir	AC:C, G
zodiredo	AC:C, G
zodireda	AC:VV
zodivedo*	AC:G
Ziracah		angelic King ruling in the South.
zirdo		= zir, I am.
zire	GD
Zirenaiad		a name of God: 'I am the Lord your God' (Zir Enay Iad).
zirn	zirn	wonder, wonders (n.)
zodirenu	AC:C	Cf. sald.
zirom	zi-rom	was, were.
zirop	zi-rop
zodirome	AC:C
zodirope	AC:C

Zirza		angel, also known as Ziza.
Zirzird		Governor of the Third Division of the Aethyr Maz.
Ziza		angel powerful in finding out secrets of men, ruled by the angel Pziza and Rzionr Nrzfm. Also Zirza. Companions are Izaz, Zazi, Aziz.
Zod-ee-zod-ah	GD
zizop	zi-zop	vessel, container.
zodizodope	AC:C
Zlar		angel, companion of Rzla.
Zliar
zlida	zli-da	water (v.)
zode-lide	AC:C
zna		motion, movement.
znurza	znur-za	swear, swore. Cf. surzas.
zurza	zur-za
znrza	GD
zodenurezoda	AC:C
zod	AC:C	= z, they.
zodaca	AC:G	= zacam, zacar, zacare, move.
zodacame	AC:C
zodakame	AC:G
zodacar	GD
zodacara	GD
zodakare	AC:C
zodakara	AC:C
zodameta	AC:G	conjure thee.
zodamran	GD	= zamran, appear.
zodare	AC:C	= zar, course.
zodayolana	AC:C	= zylna, itself.

Zod-ee-zod-ah		= Ziza, an angel.
zode-lida	AC:C	= zlida, water.
zodenurezoda	AC:C	= znurza, swear.
zodien	AC:C	= zien, hand.
zodiladare	AC:C	= zildar, fly.
Zodilodarepe	AC:C	= Zilodarp, 'Stretch-forth-and-Conquer': a name of God.
zodimezod	AC:C	= zimz, vestures.
zodimezoda	AC:G
zodimibe	AC:G	veil.
zodimii	AC:C	= zimii, enter.
zodinu	AC:G	water. Cf. zlida.
zodir	AC:C, G	= zir, zirdo, I am.
zodiredo	AC:C, G
zodireda	AC:VV	inhabit.
zodirenu	AC:C	= zirn, wonder.
zodirome	AC:C	= zirom, zirop, were.
zodirope	AC:C
zodivedo*	AC:G	= zirdo, I am.
zodixalayo	AC:C	= zixlay, stir up.
zodizodarasa	AC:G	= balzizras, judgment.
zodizodearasa	AC:G
zodizodope	AC:C	= zizop, vessel.
zodomeda	AC:C	= zomd, midst.
zodonace	AC:C	= zonac, apparelled.
zodonugonu	AC:C, G	= zong, wind.
zodonurenusagi	AC:C	= zonrensg, deliver.

zodoreje	AC:C, G	= zorge, be friendly.
zodumebi	AC:C, G	= zumvi, sea.
zol	zol	hand. Cf. zien.
Zom		name of the Third Aethyr.
zomd zodomeda	zomd AC:C	midst.
zonac zodonace	zo-nak AC:C	apparelled, dressed, clothed.
zong zodonugonu	zong AC:C, G	wind.
zonrensg zodonurenusagi	zon-renj AC:C	deliver. Cf. obelisong.
zorge zodoreje	zorj AC:C, G	be friendly.
Zrruoa		demonic name (reversal of Aourrz) commanding cacodemons of Fire of Air.
zudna		(meaning unknown).
zuraah zurah		fervently, with humility.
Zurchol		angelic King ruling in the South-South-East.
zure		(meaning unknown).
zurza	zur-za	= znurza, swear.
zylna zodayolana	zil-na AC:C	itself.

Explicit Thesaurus Linguae Angelorum

PART II

ENGLISH — ANGELIC

English	Angelic

A

abiding	cafafam
ability	bab
able — see can
abode	cafafam
according to	marb
action	sor
Adam	Zadzaczadlin
add	uml
admiration	rsam
Aethyrs (numbers indicate the order of the Aethyrs)	Arn 2 Asp 21 Bag 28 Chr 20 Deo 7 Des 26 Ich 11 Lea 16 Lil 1 Lin 22 Lit 5 Loe 12 Maz 6 Nia 24 Oxo 15 Paz 4 Pop 19 Rii 29 Tan 17 Tex 30 Tor 23 Uta 14 Uti 25 Zaa 27 Zax 10 Zen 18 Zid 8 Zim 13 Zip 9 Zom 3
age	homin
Air (Element): — Spirit: — Holy Names ruling: — Divine Names ruling sub-elements:	Exarp Oro Ibah Aozpi
Air of Air	Idoigo Ardza
Earth of Air	Aiaoai Oiiit

Fire of Air	Aourrz Aloai
Water of Air	Llacza Palam
— Demonic Names ruling sub-elements:
Air of Air	Ogiodi Azdra
Earth of Air	Iaoaia Tiiio
Fire of Air	Zrruao Iaola
Water of Air	Azcall Malap
— Seniors (with planetary associations):
Sol (Elemental King)	Bataivah
Luna	Htmorda
Mars	Habioro
Mercury	Acmbicu
Jupiter	Aaoxaif
Venus	Ahaozpi
Saturn	Hipotga
— Great Elemental King:	Tahaoeloj
all	tol, ton
All-Powerful (title of God)	Iaidon
all things	tofglo
also	t
always	paid
am — see be
amidst	nothoa
among	aaf, aai, aao, eai, oai, nothoa
and	od; sa (AC:G)
angels (names of) — minor angels	Aaan Aadt Aana Aanaa Aaodt Aavan Aavna Abamo Abaoz Abmo

— minor angels (continued)

Aboz Acar Acca Acps Acrar Acuca Acups Adire Adnop Adop Adopa Adota Adre Adta Aglm Agmlm Aigra Aira Amox Amsox Anaa Ancro Anro Anvaa Aomi Aosmi Apahr Aphr Aplst Apst Arizl Arzl Ataad Atdim Aultp Autp Axir Axtir Aziz Azriz Boaza Boza Bracn Brap Brcn Briap Cnabr Cnbr Cpsa Cpusa Czns Czons Daltt Dapi Daspi Datt Diari Dimt Dinmt Diom Diri Dixom Dolop Donpa Doop Dopa Dtaa Dtoaa Dxagz Dxgz Eboza Ecaop Ecop Ephra Erzla Eutpa Faax Fatax Fmnd Fmond Gbal Gbeal Glma Glmma Gmdnm Gzadx Gzdx Hcnbr Hiaom Hraap Hrap Hroan Hxgzd Iaba Iahl Iamhl Ianba Iaom Iasom Iidpo Iipo Imntd Imtd Izaz Izinr Izixp Iznr Izraz Izxp Lairz Larz Leaoc Leoc Lmag Lmmag Lrixn Lrxn Magl Magm Mamgl Masgm Miao Misao Msal Msmal Mtdi Mtndi Naaa Naoo Naooo Navaa Nbarc Nbrc Ndazn Ndzn Nhdd

— minor angels (continued)

Nhodd Nlirx Nlrx Npat Nrcoa Nroa Oacnr Oanr Ocanm Ocnm Omagg Omgg Omia Omsia Oodpz Oopz Opad Opamn Opmn Opana Opna Opnad Ormn Orpmn Otoi Otroi Oyaub Oyub Ozaab Ozab Paco Pado Paeoc Palco Pali Palut Pando Panli Paoc Paut Phara Phra Pmagl Pmox Pmzox Ppsac Psac Psuac Pziza Raaph Raph Rbnh Rbznh Rcanb Rcnb Rgan Rgoan Rlemu Rlmu Roan Rocan Rsoni Rsni Ruoi Ruroi Rxao Rxinl Rxnl Rxpao Rzila Rzla Saaiz Sacp Saiz Saucp Scio Scmio Shal Shial Sias Sigas Siosp Sisp Stim Strim Taad Taoad Tdim Tdnim Toco Togco Toitt Tott Tpau Tplau Vaasa Vasa Uspsn Ussn Utlpa Utpa Xgazd Xgzd Xnilr Xpaxn Xpcn Xrinh Xrnh Zaabo Zabo Zarzi Zazi Zdaxg Zdxg Zirza Ziza

— planetary angels, with associated planets (see page 25):

	angel of sphere	Filiae Lucis	Filii Lucis	Filiae Filiarum Lucis	Filii Filiorum Lucis
Sol	Semeliel	El (L)	I	S	E
Luna	Levanael	Me	Ih	Ab	An
Venus	Nogahel	Ese	Ilr	Ath	Ave
Jupiter	Zedekiel	Iana	Dmal	Ized	Liba
Mars	Madimiel	Akele	Heeoa	Ekiei	Rocle
Mercury	Corabiel	Azdobn	Beigia	Madimi	Hagonel
Saturn	Sabathiel	Stimcul	Stimcul	Esemeli	Ilemese

— orders of angels:

confirming angels Sach
confounding angels Urch
ministering angels Lang
praising angels Luah

— angelic Kings, with region in which ruling:

East Olpaged
East-South-East Zarzilg
South-South-East Zurchol
South Ziracah
South-South-West Lavavoth
West-South-West Alpudus
West Hononol
West-North-West Zinggen
North-North-West Cadaamp
North Zarnaah
North-North-East Arfaolg
East-North-East Gebabal

— other angels and good spirits:

Aflafben
Bamasan
Ben Corfax
Ga

Galvah
Iubanladaec
Lasben
Mapsama
Murifri
Nalvage
Obelison
Phanael
Sudsamna
Tohomaphala
Vaa
Za

— see also Governors, Kings, Princes, Seniors anger unph, vonph, vonpho

angle diu

another symp, smnad, ca

any droln

apparel zimz
— see also garments, vestures

apparelled zonac

appear zamran

apply oneself imvamar

are
— see be

arise torzu, torzul, torzulp, torgu

ark erm

art (thou art)
— see be

as	ca, ta
— even as	nomig
as many	plosi
avoidance of earthly things	nalvage

B

Babes of the Abyss (?)	gaha (AC:VV)
balance (n.)	prap
be
— I am	zir, zirdo
— thou art	geh
— he/she/it is	i
— they are	chiis, chis, chiso
— was	as, zirop
— it was (?)	nostoah
— were	zirom
— shall be	trian
— let there be	christeos
— be thou!	bolp
— is not	ipam
— cannot be	ipamis
— be (become)	noan, noaln, noar, noas, noasmi; nenni (AC:VV)
be friendly	zorge
be mighty	omicaolz
beast (of the field)	levithmong
beautify	urbs; viruden (AC:VV)
beauty	turbs
because	bagle, baglen
— see also therefore, wherefore become	noan, noaln, noar, noas, noasmi
bed	tianta
before	aspt
— go before	tustax

begin anew	amgedpha
beginning	acroodzi, croodzi, gevamna, iaod, ioadaf
begotten	gedotbar
behold	micma
bind up	allar
bitter sting	grosb
blood	cnila
branch	lilonon
breath	gigipah
brightness	luciftian, luciftias
bring down	drix
bring forth	yolcam, yolci
brother	esiasch
buckler	lolcis
building	orsca, trof
built	on (AC:VV)
burn	ialpon
burning	ialpor
but	crip, crp, oq

C

cacodemons — see demons
call (be called)	umd, um
can (be able to)	adgt
carry out (execute)	fifis
cast down	adrpan
cattle	levithmong
cave	tabges
centre	ovoars
chamber	ooge
circle	comselh
clothed	zonac
clothes, clothing — see also garments, vestures	zimz
coat	mabza
come, come away, come forth	niis, niisa, niiso
come out	carma
comfort (n.)	blior, bliar, bliora, bliorb, bliors, bliort, bliard
comfort (v.)	bliorax
comforter	bigliad
conclude (include)	iaial
confirming angels	Sach
confound	oucho, unchi

confounding angels	Urch
conjure thee	zodameta (AC:G)
container	izizop, zizop
contents	q
continually	pild
continuance	miam, mian, nuam
conquer (?)	arp
corner	miinoag
count	cormp, cormpo, cormpt
course	elzap; zar (AC:C)
covenant	sibsi
cover	ethamz
creation	qaa, qaan, qaaon, qaas
creator	qaal, qadah
creature	ham, hami, toltorg, toltorn
crown (n.)	momao
crown (v.)	momar
crucible (?)	rlodnr
cry aloud	bahal
cup	talbo
curse	amma

D

dark heavens	mahorela (AC:VV)
darkness	ors
daughter	pasbs
day	basgim
— midday	bazm
death	teloc, teloch, teloah
deed	gru
deface (be defaced)	tonug
deliver	zonrensg
deliverer	obelisong
demons, names of:
— cacodemons	Aax Adi Agb And Aor Apa Apm Ash Asi Ast Ato Ava Cab Cac Cam Cms Cop Csc Cus Eac Erg Ern Exr Hbr Hru Hua Mgm Miz Mma Moc Mop Mto Oap Odo Oec Oia Ona Onh Onp Pdi Pfm Pia Piz Rad Rda Rpa Rrb Rrl Rsi Rxp Xai Xcz Xdz Xii Xom Xoy Xpa
— other demons and evil spirits:	Adraman Arzulgh Barma Belmagel Coronzon Ganislay Githgulcag

— demonic names (commanding demons of sub-elements):

Air of Air	Ogiodi Azdra
Earth of Air	Iaoaia Tiiio
Fire of Air	Zrruoa Iaola
Water of Air	Azcall Malap
Air of Earth	Iopgna Xannu
Earth of Earth	Tplabc Zibra
Fire of Earth	Rinmps Zipll
Water of Earth	Meeana Ndnos
Air of Fire	Rmlaon Gaolo
Earth of Fire	Odxlov Adois
Fire of Fire	Rnoizr Mfzrn
Water of Fire	Iladav Avabo
Air of Water	Atogbo Ocbaa
Earth of Water	Idalam Daalo
Fire of Water	Dsaaai Apata
Water of Water	Rpalen Bbemo

descend uniglag, arphe

destroy quasb

diamond childao

differ dilzmo

diminish prdzar

discord osf

dispose lrasd

divide poilp

Divine and Holy Names
— of elements:

Air	Oro Ibah Aozpi
Earth	Mor Dial Hctga

Fire	Oip Teaa Pdoce
Water	Mph Arsl Gaiol

— of sub-elements:

Air of Air	Idoigo Ardza
Earth of Air	Aiaoai Oiiit
Fire of Air	Aourrz Aloai
Water of Air	Llacza Palam
Air of Earth	Angpoi Unnax
Earth of Earth	Cbalpt Arbiz
Fire of Earth	Spmnir Llpiz
Water of Earth	Anaeem Sondn
Air of Fire	Noalmr Oloag
Earth of Fire	Volxdo Sioda
Fire of Fire	Rzionr Nrzfm
Water of Fire	Vadali Obava
Air of Water	Obgota Aabco
Earth of Water	Maladi Olaad
Fire of Water	Iaaasd Atapa
Water of Water	Nelapr Omebb

divine knowledge iadnah, iadnamad

division yrpoil

do, does gnay

dragon vovim, vovin, vovina

dressed zonac

drunken orsba

dryness orscor

duke oheloka (AC:G) dwell faonts, praf, pragma

— see also live dwelling, dwelling-place faorgt, fargt, paradial

— see also house, building

E

eagle — vabzir

Earth (Element):
- — Spirit: Nanta
- — Holy Names ruling: Mor Dial Hctga
- — Divine Names ruling sub-elements:
  - Air of Earth: Angpoi Unnax
  - Earth of Earth: Cbalpt Arbiz
  - Fire of Earth: Spmnir Llpiz
  - Water of Earth: Anaeem Sondn
- — Demonic Names ruling sub-elements:
  - Air of Earth: Iopgna Xannu
  - Earth of Earth: Tplabc Zibra
  - Fire of Earth: Rinmps Zipll
  - Water of Earth: Meeana Ndnos
- — Seniors (with planetary associations):
  - Sol (Elemental King): Iczhhcal
  - Luna: Lzinopo
  - Mars: Laidrom
  - Mercury: Acmbicu
  - Jupiter: Aczinor
  - Venus: Alhctga
  - Saturn: Liiansa
- — Great Elemental King: Thahaaotahe

east — raas, raasy

echoing — matorb

eight — p

elder — gran, uran

Elemental Kings:
- — Air: Tahaoeloj; Bataivah (Senior)
- — Earth: Thahaaotahe; Iczhhcal (Senior)
- — Fire: Ohooohaatan; Edelprna (Senior)
- — Water: Thahebyobeeatan; Raagiosl (Senior)

elevated — ofekufa (AC:VV)

empty — affa

end — uls, galvah

Enochian letters:

Ceph	Z
Don	R
Drux	N
Fam	S
Gal	D
Ged	G/J
Ger	Q
Gisg	T
Gon	I/Y
Graph	E
Mals	P
Med	O
Na	H
Or	F
Pa	B
Pal	X
Tal	M
Un	A
Ur	L
Van	U/V
Veh	C/K

enter — zimii

enthroned — see also throne	velucorsapax
entire	saga
equal	parach
even as	nomig
everlasting	gohed
everything	tofglo
evil spirits — see demons
except	m
execute (carry out)	fifis
exist — existed — will exist — see also be	gahal (AC:VV) gaha (AC:VV) gahalana (AC:VV)
eye	ooanoan, ooaona

F

face	adoian
fact	gru
faith	gono
fall	dobix, loncho
fasten	amizpi
fear (n.)	hoxmarch
feet — see foot
fervently	zuraah, zurah
fiery darts	malprg, malpirgi
fire	malprg, malpirgi, prge, prgel
Fire (Element): — Spirit: — Holy Names ruling: — Divine Names ruling sub-elements:	Bitom Oip Teaa Pdoce
Air of Fire	Noalmr Oloag
Earth of Fire	Volxdo Sioda
Fire of Fire	Rzionr Nrzfm
Water of Fire	Vadali Obava
— Demonic Names ruling sub-elements:
Air of Fire	Rmlaon Gaolo
Earth of Fire	Odxlov Adois
Fire of Fire	Rnoizr Mfzrn
Water of Fire	Idalav Avabo
— Seniors (with planetary associations):
Sol (Elemental King)	Edelprna

Luna	Asndood
Mars	Aaetpio
Mercury	Anodoin
Jupiter	Adoeoct
Venus	Aapdoce
Saturn	Arinnap
— Great Elemental King	Ohooohaatan
firmament	calz
firmament of waters	pilzin
first	el, elo, l, la, li, lo
five	o
flame	ialprg, ialprt, vep
flames (of first glory)	ialpirgah
flaming	ialpor
flourish	cacacom
flower	lorslq
fly (v.)	zildar
follower	fafen
foot	lasdi, lusd, lusda
for (because)	lap
forget	bams
four, fourth	s, es
frame (v.)	izazaz
friendly (be friendly)	zorge
front (in front of)	aspt
frown not	ucim
furnace (?)	rlodnr
furnish (provide)	tooat
fury	bagie

G

garland	obloc
garment — see also apparel, vestures	oboleh, qaa
garnish	gnonp
gather	aldon
gathering	aldi
gird	aldon
girdle	atraah
give, given	dluga, dlugam, dlugar, phamah
glory	busd, busdir, adgmach
go before	tustax
go down	uniglag
God	Ascha, Iabes, Iad, Mad, Oiad, Piad
God (names of):	Baeovib, Gahoachma, Iadpil, Iaida, Iaidon, Idoian (AC:VV), Idoigo, Ioiad, L, Zilodarp, Zirenaiad
gold	audcal
govern	caba, taba
govern (be governed)	tabaord
government	netaab, netaaib, netab
governor	tabaan
Governors of Acthyrs:	Abaiond 2/Pop Advorpt 3/Tex

— Governors of Aethyrs (continued)

Ambriol	3/Loe
Andispi	3/Zom
Aspiaon	3/Deo
Axziarg	2/Pax
Aydropl	2/Tan
Bazchim	3/Des
Calzirg	3/Lin
Chialps	2/Nia
Chirspa	1/Asp
Comanan	2/Zax
Cralpir	2/Zip
Cucarpt	1/Lea
Dialiva	3/Arn
Doagnis	1/Arn
Doanzin	3/Zip
Docepax	3/Zim
Dozinal	4/Tex
Focisni	2/Bag
Gecaond	1/Zim
Gedoons	2/Loe
Gemnimb	2/Tex
Genadol	2/Deo
Gomziam	3/Rii
Yalpamb	3/Zen
Labnixp	1/Bag
Laparin	2/Zim
Lavacon	2/Lea
Lazdixi	1/Lit
Lexarph	1/Zax
Mathula	2/Zaa
Mirzind	1/Uti
Molpand	1/Ich
Nabaomi	1/Zen
Nigrana	2/Des
Nocamal	2/Lit
Nociabi	2/Oxo
Obmacas	1/Deo
Obvaors	2/Uti
Occodon	1/Lil

— Governors of Aethyrs (continued)

Oddiorg	1/Zip
Odraxti	2/Rii
Omagrap	3/Pop
Onizimp	2/Tor
Ooanamb	3/Uta
Orcanin	1/Nia
Orpanib	3/Zaa
Oxlopar	3/Bag
Ozidaia	1/Lin
Pacasna	2/Arn
Paraoan	2/Lin
Parziba	2/Chr
Pascomb	2/Lil
Ponodol	3/Ich
Pophand	1/Des
Pothnir	3/Paz
Pristac	3/Zid
Ranglam	3/Uti
Ronoamb	1/Tor
Samapha	1/Zom
Saxtomp	1/Maz
Saziami	1/Zaa
Sigmorf	1/Tan
Soageel	3/Nia
Sochial	3/Lea
Tabitom	3/Zax
Tahando	1/Oxo
Taoagla	1/Tex
Tapamal	1/Loe
Tastoxo	3/Oxo
Tedoand	1/Uta
Thotanf	1/Paz
Tiarpax	3/Lit
Toantom	2/Asp
Tocarzi	3/Tan
Todnaon	2/Zid
Torzoxi	1/Pop
Totocan	3/Chr
Valgars	3/Lil

— Governors of Aethyrs (continued)	Vastrim	1/Rii
	Vavaamp	2/Maz
	Virooli	2/Zom
	Vivipos	2/Uta
	Vixpalg	3/Asp
	Usnarda	2/Ich
	Zafasai	2/Zen
	Zamfres	1/Zid
	Zaxanin	3/Tor
	Zildron	1/Chr
	Zirzird	3/Maz
great, greater — see also mighty	drilpa, drilpi
Great Elemental Kings — see Elemental Kings groan	holdo
grow strong	ugeg, ugegi
guard	bransg

H

half	obza
hand	ozien, zien, ozol, zol
handmaid — see also servant, minister	qurlst
happy	ulcinin
harbour (v.)	blans
harlot	babalond
harvest	aziagiar
have	brin, brint, brints
he (his, of him)	tia, tox
head	dazis
hearken	solpeth, toatar
heart	monons
heaven	madriax, madriiax, peripsax, peripsol, piripsol, piripson
— lower heavens	oadriax
hell-fire	donasdogamatatastos her — see she
here	kures (?)
herein	emna
Highest, The (name of God)	Iaida
hills	ili-i (AC:G)
holy	ne; pire, pireda (AC:VV)
Holy Ghost	congamphlgh

Holy Name (title of God)	Idoian (AC:VV)
Holy Names — see Divine and Holy Names
Holy One	Pir
honor	iaiadix
house — see also dwelling-place, building, palace	salman
horn	mospleh
humility	zuraah, zurah
hundred	eors
hyacinth, hyacinthine	avabh
hyacinth pillars	nazavabh

I

I, me, my, myself	ol
in	a, g, i; do (AC:G)
in front of	aspt
include	iaial
increase	coazior
inhabit — see also be	zodireda
iniquity	madrid
intent (to the intent that)	fafen
invoke	argedco (?); vinu (AC:G) is — see be
it	t
itself	zylna

J

jaw — piadph

joy — moz

joy of God — mozod

judgment — alca, balzizras

Jupiter (associated angels and spirits):
- — Filia Lucis — Iana
- — Filia Filiarum Lucis — Ized
- — Filius Lucis — Dmal
- — Filius Filiorum Lucis — Liba
- — Seniors:
  - Air — Aaoxaif
  - Earth — Aczinor
  - Fire — Adoeoct
  - Water — Saiinou
- — King (of planetary hours) — Bynepor
- — Princes (of planetary hours) — Baldago, Bartiro, Basmelo, Besgeme, Blingef, Butmono
- — planetary angel — Zedekiel

just — balit

Just One, The (name of God) — Oiad

justice — balt, baltim; padgze

K

kingdom — londoh, loadohi

Kings (names of):
- — Elemental Kings:
  - Air — Tahaoeloj; Bataivah (Senior)
  - Earth — Thahaaotahe; Iczhhcal (Senior)
  - Fire — Ohooohaatan; Edelprna (Senior)
  - Water — Thahebyobeeatan; Raagiosl (Senior)
- — kings of planetary hours:
  - Grand King — Carmara
  - Sol — Bobogel
  - Luna — Blumaza
  - Mars — Babalel
  - Mercury — Bnaspol
  - Jupiter — Bynepor
  - Venus — Baligon
  - Saturn — Bnapsen
- — angelic kings
  - — see angels

know — om, omax

knowledge — iadnah, iadnamad

known — ixomaxip

L

laid up	maasi
lamentation	eophan, ser
lamp, lantern	hubaio, hubar, hubaro
law (make a law)	ohorela
legislate	ohorela
let there be — see be Life, Supreme (name of God)	Iabes
lift up — see also raise	farzm, goholor; ofekufa (AC:VV)
light	olpirt
likeness	aziazor
listen	solpeth, toatar
live (v.) — see also dwell	apila
live: He that Lives (name of God)	Iadpil
live: He that Lives Forever (name of God)	Ioiad
loins	dax
look about	dorpha, dorphal
Lord	Enay, Na, Iabes
Luna (associated angels and spirits:
— Filia Lucis	Me
— Filia Filiarum Lucis	Ab
— Filius Lucis	Ih

— Filius Filiorum Lucis	An
— Seniors:
Air	Htmorda
Earth	Lzinopo
Fire	Asndood
Water	Laoaxrp
— King (of planetary hours)	Blumaza
— Princes (of planetary hours)	Bagledf Baspalo Belmara Bragiop Bralges Brisfli
— planetary angel	Levanael
— see also moon

M

magnify, be magnified — ovof

make — eol, ol

make (made) — oln; on (AC:VV)

make a law — ohorela

make me/us (partakers) — ozazm, ozazma

man — cordziz, molap, ollog, ollor, olora

— works of man — conisbra

many (as many) — plosi

many (how many) — irgil

marble sleeves — pidiai

marrow — tranan

Mars (associated angels and spirits):

— Filia Lucis — Akele

— Filia Filiarum Lucis — Ekiei

— Filius Lucis — Heeoa

— Filius Filiorum Lucis — Rocle

— Seniors:

Air — Habioro

Earth — Laidrom

Fire — Aaetpio

Water — Lsrahpm

— King (of planetary hours) — Babalel

— Princes (of planetary hours) — Bapnido, Befafes, Binofom, Bmilges, Bminpol, Busduna

— planetary angel — Madimiel

me

— see I measure (v.) — holq, maoffas

member — paombd

memory — papnor

Mercury (associated angels and spirits):

— Filia Lucis — Azdobn

— Filia Filiarum Lucis — Madimi

— Filius Lucis — Beigia

— Filius Filiorum Lucis — Hagonel

— Seniors:

Air — Avtotar

Earth — Acmbicu

Fire — Anodoin

Water — Soaixnt

— King (of planetary hours) — Bnaspol

— Princes (of planetary hours) — Barfort, Bazpama, Bernole, Blamapo, Bliigan, Blisdon

— planetary angel — Corabiel mercy — iehusoz, rit; okada (AC:G)

midday — bazm

midst — nothoa, zomd

mighty — canse, micalz, micalzo, micaolz, vohim

— more mighty, mightier — cruscanse, micalp

— be mighty	omicaolz
— see also great
mighty seat	oxiayal
millstone	aviny
mind (n.)	manin
mingle	cynxir
ministering angels	Lang
mix	cynxir
moment	oanio
moon	graa
— see also Luna
moreover	pilah
moss	mom
Mother of All	Exentaser (AC:VV)
mother of vinegar	lulo
motion	zna
Mount of Olives (Mt. Olivet)	adroch
mouth	butmon, butmona, butmoni
mourning	ser
move	zacam, zacar, zacare
movement	zna
my, myself
— see I
mystery	cicle, cicles

N

name	dooain, dooaip, dooiap, monasci, omaos
names of angels
— see angels
names of cacodemons and demons
— see demons
names of God
— see God
— see Divine and Holy Names
nest	virq
night	dosig
nine	m, em
no	ag
no one	ag
no place	ripir
noise	nidali
— see also sound
none	ag
noon	bazm
nor	larag, lu
north	lucal
not	ge, ip
number (n.)	cor, cormf, cormfa
number (v.), numbered	cormp, cormpo, cormpt numbers, Enochian
— see Introduction, p.44

O

o, oh	c
oak	paeb
obedience	adna
obey	darbs
of	a, c, de
olive	quanis
Olives, Mount of (Mt. Olivet)	adroch
on	a, c
one	l, el, saga, gohed
only	crip, crp
open (v.)	odo
or	q
our, ours — see we
out of him	geta
over	vors

P

pair	pala, pola
palace	poamal, poamalzod
palm (of hand)	nobloh
part	saanir
peace	etharzi
perform	fifis
period	capimao, capimaon
philosopher's stone	darr
pillar	naz
pillar of gladness	nazarth
pillar of hyacinth	nazavabh
place (n.) — no place	pi ripir
place (v.)	aala, oali
planetary angels — see angels
plant (v.)	harg
pleasure	quasahi
poison	faboan
pomp	avavox
possibility	bab
pour down	panpir
power	bab, lansh, lonsa, lonshi, lonshin, micalz, micalzo, micaolz, nanaeel

powerful	micalz, micalzo, micaolz
praise (n.)	ecrin
praise (v.)	oecrimi, rest
praising angels	Luah
praiseworthy	akarinu (AC:G)
pray	lava
precede	tustax
prepare	abramg, abramig
Princes (of planetary hours):
Grand Prince	Hagonel
Sol	Bablibo Bariges Barnafa Bermale Bornogo Buscnab
Luna	Bagledf Baspalo Belmara Bragiop Bralges Brisfli
Mars	Bapnido Befafes Binofom Bmilges Bminpol Busduna
Mercury	Barfort Bazpama Bernole Bliigan Blisdon Blamapo
Jupiter	Baldago Bartiro Basmelo Besgeme Blingef Butmono
Venus	Bagenol Benpagi Binodab Bnagole Bormila Bonefom
Saturn	Balceor Bamnode Blintom Bmamgal Branglo Brorges
— see also Kings (of planetary hours)
promise (n.)	isro

protect	blans, bransg
provide	abraasa, tooat
providence	yarry
put	aala, oali

Q

quality	aspian

R

raise farzm, goholor

reasonable creature (man) cordziz

rejoice chirlan

regret moooah

reign bogpa, sonf

remain paaox, paaoxt

remainder undl

remembrance papnor

repent moooah

require unig

rest (n.) (remainder) undl

rest (v.) page

rich las

righteous balit, samvelg

righteousness baltoh, piamol; Baeovib

roar yor

rock patralx
— see also stone

rod cab

rotten qting

rule bogpa, sonf

Rulers of Aethyrs
— see Governors of Aethyrs

Rulers of Elements
— see Divine and Holy Names

— see Elements

Ruling angels
— see angels (names of)

run parm

S

saintly — soyga
— see also holy

salt — balye

same — lel

Saturn (associated angels and spirits):
— Filia Lucis — Stimcul
— Filia Filiarum Lucis — Esemeli
— Filius Lucis — Stimcul
— Filius Filiorum Lucis — Ilemese
— Seniors:
Air — Hipotga
Earth — Lhiansa
Fire — Arinnap
Water — Ligdisa
— King (of planetary hours) — Bnapsen
— Princes (of planetary hours) — Balceor, Bamnode, Blintom, Bmamgal, Branglo, Brorges
— planetary angel — Sabathiel

say
— I say — gohus
— he says — gohe, goho
— we say — gohia
— saying — gohol
— is said (to you) — gohulim
— they have said (have spoken — gohon scorpion — siatris

seal (n.) — emetgis

season — capimao, nibm

seat (n.) — othil, thil, thild, thiln
— see also set

seat, mighty (throne) — oxiayal

second — viu

second time, for the — olaho (AC:VV)
— see also twice secret — laiad

see — uran

seething — urelp

Seniors of Elements (with planetary attributions):

	Air	Earth	Fire	Water
Sol	Bataivah	Iczhhcal	Edelprna	Raagiosl
Luna	Htmorda	Lzinopo	Asndood	Laoaxrp
Mars	Habioro	Laidrom	Aaetpio	Lsrahpm
Mercury	Avtotar	Acmbicu	Anodoin	Soaixnt
Jupiter	Aaoxaif	Aczinor	Adoeoct	Saiinov
Venus	Ahaozpi	Alhctga	Aapdoce	Slgaiol
Saturn	Hipotga	Lhiansa	Arinnap	Ligdisa

separate (v.) — tliob
— see also divide

servant — noco, noquod, noquodi, noquol
— see also handmaid, minister, serve, steward serve — aboapri

set (v.) — othil

settle — alar

she	pi
— her, of her	tilb, tlb, tiobl
shelter	blans
shine	loholo
show oneself	zamran
shrine	arba (AC:VV)
sickle	puim
sin (v.)	doalim
sing praises	oecrimi
sink	carbaf
sit	trint
six	norz
skirt (n.)	unalab
sleeve	collal, pidiai
slimy things made of dust	apachama
smile (?)	ucim
Sol (associated angels and spirits):
— Filia Lucis	El (L)
— Filia Filiarum Lucis	S
— Filius Lucis	I
— Filius Filiorum Lucis	E
— Seniors:
Air	Bataivah
Earth	Iczhhcal
Fire	Edelprna
Water	Raagiosl
— King (of planetary hours)	Bobogel
— Princes (of planetary hours)	Bablibo

	Bariges
	Barnafa
	Bermale
	Bornogo
	Buscnab
— planetary angel	Semeliel
— see also sun
so that	ar
son	nor, noromi
sorrow	tibibp
sound	sapah
— see also noise
south	babage, babagen
speak	camliax
— see also say
speech from God	loagaeth, logaeth, logaah, logah
spirit	gah
spirit (of man)	congamphlgh
Spirit of Air (Tablet of Union)	Exarp
Spirit of Earth (Tablet of Union)	Nanta
Spirit of Fire (Tablet of Union)	Bitom
Spirit of Water (Tablet of Union)	Hcoma spirits, names of
— see angels, demons
stand	biah
star	aoiveae

steward — see also handmaid, minister, servant	balzarg
sting	grosb
stir up	lring
stone — see also rock	orri
stone, philospher's	darr
stooping	abai
stranger	gosaa
strength — see also strong	ugear, umplif
stretch forth (?)	zil
Stretch-Forth-and-Conquer (name of God)	Zilodarp
strong (grow strong)	ugeg, ugegi
strong (stronger) — see also mighty	givi
successively	capimali
such	cors
sulphur	salbrox; dlasod (alchemical)
sun — see also Sol	ror
Supreme Life (name of God)	Iabes
surge (n.)	molvi
swear (swore, sworn)	surzas, znurza, zurza
sword	napta, napeai, nazpsad

T

talk — see also speak, say	brita
tartar	lulo
tell them	mapsama
temple	siaion
that (so that)	fafen; na (AC:VV)
— which	ar, ds
the	a thee — see thou them — see they
there	da
therefore	ca
these — see also this, those	unal
they, them	par, z
third — see three
this — see also these, those	oi
thorn	nanba
those — see also this, these	priaz, priazi
thou	ils
— thee	yls; ta (AC:G)
— thy	il, q
— see also you

thought	angelard
thousand	matb
three, third	d
throne	oxiayal
thunder	avavago, const, coraxo
thy — see thou
time	capimao, cocasb, cocasg
time after time	capimali, capmiali
to	de
torment	mir
tower	umadea
treasure	limlal
Trinity	Na
triumph (v.)	homtoh
truss (v.)	commah
truth	vaoan; vooan (with fallen angels)
twelve	os
twenty-fourth (part)	ol
twice — see also two, second	olani
two (separated)	pala
two (together) — see also second, twice	pola

U

under, underneath	oroch, orocha
understand — see also know	om
understanding — see also knowledge, wisdom	oma
unspeakable	adphaht
until	cacrg
unto	pambt, pugo
upon	mirc
us — see we

V

van (v.) (winnow)	ar
variety	damploz
veil	zodimibe (AC:G)
Venus (associated angels and spirits):
— Filia Lucis	Ese
— Filia Filiarum Lucis	Ath
— Filius Lucis	Ilr
— Filius Filiorum Lucis	Ave
— Seniors:
Air	Ahaozpi
Earth	Alhctga
Fire	Aapdoce
Water	Slgaiol
— King (of planetary hours)	Baligon
— Princes (of planetary hours)	Benpagi Binodab Bnagole Bonefom Bormila Busduna
— planetary angel	Nogahel
vessel (container)	izizop, zizop
vestures	zimz
— see also garments
vex	dodpal, dodrmni, dods
vexation	dodsih
vial	efafafe, ofafafe
vinegar, mother of	lulo

virgin	paradiz
visit	f, ef, t
voice	bia, bial, bien, faaip
vomit	oxex

W

walk	insi
want	gil (?)
warden (of the Aethyr Bag)	Lixipsp (AC:VV) was
— see be
water (v.)	zlida
water (n.)	zodinu (AC:G)
Water (Element):
— Spirit	Hcoma
— Holy Names ruling:	Mph Arsl Gaiol
— Divine Names ruling sub-elements:
Air of Water	Obgota Aabco
Earth of Water	Maladi Olaad
Fire of Water	Iaaasd Atapa
Water of Water	Nelapr Omebb
— Demonic Names ruling sub-elements:
Air of Water	Atogbo Ocbaa
Earth of Water	Idalam Daalo
Fire of Water	Dsaaai Apata
Water of Water	Rpalen Bbemo
— Seniors (with planetary associations):
Sol (Elemental King)	Raagiosl
Luna	Laoaxrp
Mars	Lsrahpm
Mercury	Soaixnt
Jupiter	Saiinov
Venus	Slgaiol
Saturn	Ligdisa
— Great Elemental King	Thahebyobeeatan

wax strong	ugeg, ugegi
we, our, us	ge
— in ours	helech
weave	oado
weed out	fifalz
weeping	raclir
were — see be
west	sobol
wherefore	darsar
wherein	quiin; vo (AC:VV)
which	ds
— see also who
while (n.)	capimao
who	ds
— whom	casarm, casarma, casarmg, casarmi, sobam
— whose	casarman, soba, sobca, sobha, sobol, sobra, soha
whole	saga
why	bagle, baglen
wicked	babalon
will of God	soyga, aldaraia
will (your will be done)	gemeganza
wind	ozongon, zong
window	como
wine	roxtan
wing	upaah
winnow	ar

wisdom — see also knowledge, understanding	ananael, miketh
with	a, c
woe	ohio
wonder (n.)	sald, zirn
work (v.)	vaul, vaun
workman	canal
works of man	conisbra
wormwood	tatan
worship	boaluahe (AC:G)
worshipper	hoath
wrath	unph, vonph, vonpho

Y

yea	noib
you	g, gi, nonci
— to you	nonca, noncf, noncp
— your	g
— yourselves	amiran
— see also thou

End of English-Angelic Dictionary

THE ENOCHIAN CALLS

This edited version of the Enochian Calls follows closely Dee's fair copy in the manuscript of the 48 Claves Angelicae (Cracow, 13 April-13 July 1584). I have modernised his often erratic spelling, punctuation, and word-division; and here and there I have replaced an archaic word or phrase with its modern equivalent. Other minor amendments have been made to allow the English text to be compared with the Enochian more closely. I have, however, resisted the temptation to interfere with the Enochian text, except for corrections which Dee himself made. Capitalisation and word-division conform to the English text, in accord with my grammatical analysis of Enochian. The Enochian words appear directly under the English words to which they most closely relate, except in a few instances where either the English text or the Enochian text is defective. There is still room for dispute in some of the identifications, and in one or two instances arbitrary decisions had to be made. Further information on the exact shades of meaning, as far as can be determined, will be found in the dictionary section.

The First Call

I reign over you, says the God of Justice, in power exalted Ol sonf vors g, gohó Iad Balt, lansh above the firmaments of wrath; in Whose hands the sun is as a calz vonpho; Sobra zol ror i ta sword, and the moon as a penetrating fire; Who measures your nazpsad, graa ta malprg; Ds holq garments in the midst of my vestures, and trussed you together

qaa nothoa zimz, od commah

as the palms of my hands; Whose seats I garnished with the ta nobloh zien; Soba thil gnonp fire of gathering; Who beautified your garments with admiration;

prge aldi; Ds urbs oboleh g rsam;

to Whom I made a law to govern the Holy Ones; Who delivered Casarm ohorela taba Pir; Ds zonrensg you a rod with the ark of knowledge. Moreover, you lifted up your cab erm iadnah. Pilah farzm voices and swore obedience and faith to Him that lives, and who znurza adna gono Iadpil, ds triumphs; Whose beginning is not, nor end cannot be; Who homtoh; Soba ipam, lu ipamis; Ds shines as a flame in the midst of your palace, and reigns amongst loholo vep zomd poamal, od bogpa aai you as the balance of righteousness and truth. Move, therefore, ta piap piamol od vooan. Zacare, ca, and show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation; be od zamran; odo cicle qaa;

friendly unto me; for I am the servant of the same God as you,
zorge, lap zirdo noco Mad,

the true worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

The Second Call

Can the wings of the winds understand your voices of wonder,
Adgt upaah zong om faaip sald, o you the second of the First? Whom the burning flames have viu L? Sobam ialprg framed within the depth of my jaws; Whom I have prepared izazaz piadph; Casarma abramg

as cups for a wedding, or as the flowers in their beauty ta talho paracleda, q ta lorlsq turbs for the chamber of righteousness. Stronger are your feet than ooge baltoh. Givi chis lusd

the barren stone, and mightier are your voices than the manifold orri, od micalp chis bia winds; for you are become a building such as is not, but in ozongon; lap noan trof cors ta ge, oq

the mind of the All-Powerful. Arise, says the First; move, manin Iaidon. Torzu, gohe L; zacar, therefore, unto his servants; show yourselves in power, and ca, c noqod; zamran micalzo, od make me a strong seething; for I am of Him that lives forever.

ozazm urelp; lap zir Ioiad.

The Third Call

Behold, says your God, I am a circle on whose hands stand Micma, goho Piad, zir comselh a zien biah twelve kingdoms. Six are the seats of living breath, the os londoh. Norz chis othil gigipah, rest are as sharp sickles, or the horns of death, wherein undl chis ta puim, q mospleh teloch, quiin

the creatures of the earth are and are not, except by my toltorg chisi chis ge, m own hands, which also sleep and shall rise. In the first I made you ozien, ds t brgda od torzul. I li eol stewards, and placed you in seats twelve of government, giving balzarg, od aala thiln os netaab, dluga unto every one of you power successively over 456, the true vomsarg lonsa capmiali vors cla, ages of time, to the intent that, from the highest vessels and homil cocasb, fafen izizop od

the corners of your governments, you might work my power, miinoag de g netaab, vaun nanaeel, pouring down the fires of life and increase on the earth

panpir malpirgi caosg continually. Thus you are become the skirts of justice and truth.

pild. Noan unalah balt od vooan.

In the name of the same, your God, lift up, I say, yourselves.
Dooiap Mad, goholor, gohus, amiran.

Behold His mercies flourish, and His Name is become mighty Micma iehusoz cacacom, od dooain noar micaolz amongst us; in Whom we say: Move, descend, and apply

aai om; Casarmg gohia: Zacar, uniglag, od imvamar yourselves unto us, as unto the partakers of the secret wisdom pugo plapli ananael

of your Creation.
qaan.

The Fourth Call

I have set my feet in the south, and have looked about me, Othil lasdi babage, od dorpha, saying: are not the thunders of increase numbered 33,

gohol: g chis ge avavago cormp pd, which reign in the second angle? Under whom I have placed ds sonf viu diu? Casarmi oali

9639, whom none has yet numbered but one, in whom the second mapm, sobam ag cormpo crp l, casarmg beginning of things are and wax strong; which also success-croodzi chis od ugeg; ds t, capimali, ively, are the number of time; and their powers are as the chis capimaon; od lonshin chis ta first 456. Arise, you sons of pleasure, and visit the earth for lo cla. Torgu, nor quasahi, od f caosga; bagle

I am the Lord your God, which is and lives. In the name of the zir enay Iad, ds i od apila. Dooaip

Creator, move, and show yourselves as pleasant deliverers, Qaal, zacar, od zamran obelisong,

that you may praise him amongst the sons of men.
rest el aaf nor molap.

The Fifth Call

The mighty sounds have entered in the third angle, and are Sapah zimii d diu, od become as olives on the Mount of Olives, looking with gladness noas ta quanis Adroch, dorphal upon the earth, and dwelling in the brightness of the heavens as caosg, od faonts piripsol ta comforters; unto whom I fastened pillars of gladness nineteen,

blior; casarm amipzi naz arth af, and gave them vessels to water the earth with [all] her creatures;

od dlugar zizop zlida caosgi tol torgi;

and they are the brothers of the first and second, and the od z chis esiasch l ta viu, od beginning of their own seats, which are garnished with continual iaod thild, ds

burning lamps 69636, whose numbers are as the first, the ends hubar peoal, soba cormfa chis ta la, uls and the content of time. Therefore come and obey your od q cocasb. Ca niis od darbs creation; visit us in peace and comfort; include us as receivers qaas; f etharzi od bliora; iaial ednas of your mysteries, because our Lord and Master is all One.

cicles, bagle ge Iad L.

The Sixth Call

The spirits of the fourth angle are nine, mighty in the firmament
Gah s diu em, micalzo pilzin;

of waters; whom the first has planted as a torment to the sobam el harg mir

wicked and a garland to the righteous, giving unto them babalon od obloc samvelg, dlugar fiery darts to winnow the earth, and 7699 continual workmen;

malprg ar caosgi, od acam canal;

whose courses visit with comfort the earth, and are in govern-sobol zar f bliard caosgi, od chis a netab ment and continuance as the second and third. Wherefore harken od miam ta viu od d. Darsar solpeth unto my voice; I have talked of you, and I move you in power bien; brita od zacam g micalzo and presence, you whose works shall be a song of honour and the sobha ath trian luiahe od praise of your God in your creation.

ecrin Mad qaaon.

The Seventh Call

The east is a house of virgins, singing praises amongst the Raas i salman paradiz, oecrimi aao flames of first glory, wherein the Lord has opened his mouth, ialpirgah, quiin Enay butmon, and they are become 28 living dwellings, in whom the strength od i noas ni paradial, casarmg ugear of man rejoices; and they are apparelled with ornaments of chirlan; od zonac

brightness, such as work wonders on all creatures; whose luciftian, cors ta vaul zirn tol hami; soba kingdoms and continuance are as the third and fourth, strong londoh od miam chis ta d od es, towers and places of comfort, the seats of mercy and continu-umadea od pi bliar, othil rit od miam.

ance. O you servants of mercy, move, appear, sing praises
C noquol rit, zacar, zamran, oecrimi unto the Creator; and be mighty amongst us; for to this Qadah; od omicaolz aai om; bagle remembrance is given power, and our strength waxes papnor i dlugam lonshi, od umplif ugegi strong in our comforter. bigliad.

The Eighth Call

The midday, the first, is as the third heaven made of pillars Bazm, elo, i ta piripson oln naz of hyacinth 26, in whom the elders are become strong;

avabh ox, casarmg uran chis ugeg;

which I have prepared for my own righteousness, says the Lord;
ds abramig baltoha, goho Iad;

whose long continuance shall be as bucklers to the stooping soba mian trian ta lolcis abai dragon, and like unto the harvest of a widow. How many are vovin, od aziagiar rior. Irgil chis there which remain in the glory of the earth, which are, and da ds paaox busd caosgo, ds chis, od shall not see death until this house fall, and the dragon ip uran teloah cacrg oi salman loncho, od vovina sink! Come away, for the thunders have spoken; come away, carbaf! Niiso, bagle avavago gohon; niiso, for the crowns of the temple, and the coat of Him that is, bagle momao siaion, od mabza Iado i, was, and shall be crowned, are divided. Come, appear to the as, momar, poilp. Niis, zamran terror of the earth, and to our comfort, and of such as ciaofi caosgo, od bliors, od cors i ta are prepared.

abramig.

The Ninth Call

A mighty guard of fire, with two-edged swords flaming (which Micaolz bransg prgel, napta ialpor (ds have vials eight of wrath for two times and a half, whose brin efafafe p vonpho olani od obza, sobca wings are of wormwood, and of the marrow of salt), have settled upaah chis tatan, od tranan balye) alar their feet in the west, and were measured with their ministers lusda sobol, od chis holq c noquodi

9996. These gather up the moss of the earth as the rich man cial. Unal aldon mom caosgo ta las ollor does his treasure. Cursed are they whose iniquities they are!

gnay limlal. Amma chiis sobca madrid z chis!

In their eyes are millstones greater than the earth, and Ooanoan chis aviny drilpi caosgin, od from their mouths rain seas of blood: their heads are covered butmoni parm zumvi cnila: daziz ethamz with diamonds, and upon their hands are marble sleeves. Happy a childao, od mirc ozol chi pidiai collal. Ulcinin is he on whom they frown not, because the God of Righteousness a sobam ucim, bagle Iad Baltoh rejoices in them. Come away (and not your vials)! For chirlan par. Niiso (od ip ofafafe)! Bagle the time is such as requires comfort.

a cocasb i cors ca unig blior.

The Tenth Call

The thunders of judgment and wrath are numbered and are Coraxo chis cormp od

harboured in the north in the likeness of an oak, whose blans lucal aziazior paeb, soba branches are nests 22 of lamentation and weeping laid up lilonon chis virq op eophan od raclir maasi for the earth, which burn night and day, and vomit out bagle caosgi, ds ialpon dosig od basgim, od oxex

the heads of scorpions, and live sulphur mingled with poison.
dazis siatris, od salbrox cynxir faboan.

These are the thunders that 5678 times in the 24th part Unal chis const ds daox cocasg ol of a moment roar with a hundred mighty earthquakes, and a oanio yor eors vohim gizyax, od thousand times as many surges, which rest not, nor know matb cocasg plosi molvi, ds page ip, larag om

any echoing time. Here one rock brings forth a droln matorb cocasb. Emna l patralx yolci thousand, even as the heart of man does his thoughts.

matb, nomig monons olora gnay angelard.

Woe Woe Woe Woe Woe Woe, yes, Woe be to the earth, for Ohio Ohio Ohio Ohio Ohio Ohio, noib, Ohio caosgon, bagle her iniquity is, was, and shall be great. Come away — but not madrid i, zirop, chiso drilpa. Niiso - crip ip your noises.

nidali.

The Eleventh Call

The mighty seat groaned and there were five thunders Oxiayal holdo od zirom o coraxo which flew into the east, and the Eagle spake and cried ds zildar raasy, od vabzir camliax od bahal:

with a loud voice: Come away! And they gathered themselves Niiso!

together and became the house of death; of whom it is measured,
salman teloch; casarman holq, and it is as they are whose number is 31. Come away! For od t i ta z chis soba cormf i ga. Niisa! Bagle

I prepare for you. Move, therefore, and show yourselves;
abramg noncp. Zacare, ca, od zamran;

open the mysteries of your creation; be friendly unto me, for odo cicle qaa; zorge, lap

I am the servant of the same God as you, the true worshipper zirdo noco Mad, hoath

of the Highest.
Iaida.

The Twelfth Call

O you that reign in the south, and are 28, the lanterns Nonci ds sonf babage, od chis ob, hubaio of sorrow bind up your girdles, and visit us! Bring down tibibp allar atraah, od ef! Drix your followers 3663, that the Lord may be magnified, Whose fafen mian, ar Enay ovof, Soba name amongst you is Wrath. Move, I say, and show dooain aai i Vonph. Zacar, gohus, od zamran; yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation; be friendly

odo cicle qaa; zorge

unto me, for I am the servant of the same God as you, the true lap zirdo noco Mad,

worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

The Thirteenth Call

O you swords of the south, which have 42 eyes to stir up Napeai babagen, ds brin vx ooaona lring

the wrath of sin, making men drunken which are empty;
vonph doalim, eolis ollog orsba ds chis affa;

behold the promise of God, and the power of Him, which is micma isro Mad, od lonshi Tox, ds i called amongst you a bitter sting; move and show yourselves;

umd aai grosb; zacar od zamran;

open the mysteries of your creation; be friendly unto me,
odo cicle qaa; zorge,

for I am the servant of the same God as you, the true
lap zirdo noco Mad,

worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

The Fourteenth Call

O you sons of fury, the daughters of the Just, which sit Noromi bagie, pasbs Oiad, ds trint upon 24 seats, vexing all creatures of the earth with age;

mirc ol thil, dods tol ham caosgo homin;

which have under you 1636; behold the voice of God, the ds brin oroch quar; micma bial Oiad, a promise of Him, which is called amongst you extreme justice;

isro Tox, ds i um aai Baltim;

move and show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation;
zacar od zamran; odo cicle qaa;

be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same God as you,
zorge, lap zirdo noco Mad,

the true worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

The Fifteenth Call

O thou the governor of the first flame, under whose Ils tabaan l ialprt, casarman wings are 6379, which weave the earth with dryness, upaahi chis darg, ds oado caosgi orscor,

who knowest the great name Righteousness and the seal
ds omax monasci Baeovib od emetgis of honour: move and show yourselves; open the mysteries iaiadix: zacar od zamran; odo cicle of your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the servant

qaa; zorge, lap zirdo noco

of the same God as you, the true worshipper of the Highest.
Mad, hoath Iaida.

The Sixteenth Call

O thou second flame, the house of justice, who hast thy Ils viu ialprt salman balt, ds

beginning in glory, and shall comfort the just; who walkest acroodzi busd, od bliorax balit; ds insi on the earth with feet 8763 that understand and separate caosg lusdan emod ds om od tliob:

creatures: great art thou in the God of Stretch-forth-and-drilpa geh ils Mad Zilodarp.

Conquer. Move and show yourselves; open the mysteries of Zacar od zamran; odo cicle

your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the
qaa; zorge, lap zirdo noco

same God as you, the true worshipper of the Highest.
Mad, hoath Iaida.

The Seventeenth Call

O thou third flame, whose wings are thorns to stir up vexation, Ils d ialprt, soba upaah chis nanba zixlay dodsih, and who hast 7336 living lamps going before thee, whose God

od brint taxs hubaro tustax ylsi, soba Iad is wrath in anger: gird up the loins of thee and harken. Move and i vonpo unph: aldon dax il od toatar. Zacar od show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation; be friendly zamran; odo cicle qaa; zorge,

unto me, for I am the servant of the same God as you, the true
lap zirdo noco Mad,

worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

The Eighteenth Call

O thou mighty light and burning flame of comfort, which Ils micaolz olpirt ialprg bliors, ds openest the glory of God to the centre of the earth; in whom the odo busdir Oiad ovoars caosgo; casarmg secrets of truth 6332 have their abiding; which is called in thy laïad eran brints cafafam; ds i umd a q kingdom Joy, and not to be measured: be thou a window of loadohi Moz, od maoffas: bolp como comfort unto me. Move and show yourselves; open the bliort pambt. Zacar od zamran; odo mysteries of your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the cicle qaa; zorge, lap zirdo servant of the same God as you, the true worshipper of the noco Mad, hoath

Highest.
Iaida.

The Call of the Thirty Aethyrs

O you heavens which dwell in the (first Air), which are Madriax ds praf (LIL), chis mighty in the parts of the earth, and which execute the micaolz saanir caosgo, od fifis judgment of the Highest! To you it is said: Behold the balzizras Iaida!. Nonca gohulim: Micma face of your God, the beginning of comfort, Whose eyes are adoian Mad, iaod bliorb, Soba ooaona chis

the brightness of heavens; Who provided you for the govern-luciftias peripsol; Ds abraasa noncf netaaib ment of the earth, and her unspeakable variety, furnishing caosgi, od tilb adphaht damploz, tooat

you with a power of understanding, to dispose all things noncf g micalz oma, lrasd tofglo

according to the providence of Him that sits on the Holy Throne;
marb yarry Idoigo;

and Who rose up in the beginning, saying: the earth, let her od torzulp iaodaf, gohul: caosga,

be governed by her parts, and let there be division in tabaord saanir, od christeos yrpoil her, that the glory of her may be always drunken and vexed in tiobl, busdir tilb noaln paid orsba od dodrmni itself. The course of her, let it run with the heavens, and as a zylna. Elzap tilb, parm gi peripsax, od ta handmaid let her serve them. One season, let it confound qurlst booapis. L nibm, oucho another; and let there be no creature upon or within her symp; od christeos ag toltorn mirc q tiobl the same. All her members, let them differ in their qualities; and lel. Ton paombd, dilzmo aspian; od let there be no one creature equal with another. The christeos ag l tortorn parach a symp.

reasonable creatures of the earth, let them vex and weed out Cordziz, dodpal od fifalz

one another; and the dwelling places, let them forget their l smnad; od fargt, bams names. The works of man and his pomp, let them be defaced.

omaoas. Conisbra od avavox, tonug.

The buildings of her, let them become caves for the beasts of the Orsca tbl, noasmi tabges levithmong; field; confound the understanding of her with darkness. Why?

unchi omp tilb ors. Bagle?

I regret that I made man. One while let her be known, and Moooah ol cordziz. L capimao ixomaxip, od another while a stranger; because she is the bed of a harlot, ca cocasb gosaa; baglen pi tianta a babalond, and the dwelling place of him-that-is-fallen. O you heavens, od faorgt teloc vovim. Madriiax, arise! The lower heavens underneath you, let them serve you.

torzu! Oadriax orocha, aboapri.

Govern those that govern; cast down such as fall; bring forth Tabaori priaz ar tabas; adrpan cors ta dobix; yolcam with those that increase, and destroy the rotten. No place let it priazi ar coazior, od quasb qting. Ripir remain in one number; add and diminish, until the stars be paaoxt saga cor; uml od prdzar, cacrg aoiveae numbered. Arise, move, and appear before the covenant of His cormpt. Torzu, zacar, od zamran aspt sibsi mouth, which He has sworn unto us in His justice; open the butmona, ds surzas Tia baltan; odo mysteries of your creation, and make us partakers of undefiled cicle qaa, od ozazma plapli

knowledge.
iadnamad.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Further reading on Dee, Kelley, and the Enochian Language:

Manuscripts

London:

Appendix MS XLVI, parts 1 and 2. Manuscript of Dee's 'Spiritual Diaries' edited by Meric Casaubon.

Sloane MS 78, art.11. Part of Dee's 'Liber mysteriorum sextus et sanctus'.

Sloane MS 3188. Dee's 'Spiritual Diaries' from 22 December 1581 to 30 May 1583.

Sloane MS 3189. Dee's 'Liber mysteriorum sextus et sanctus' in Edward Kelley's handwriting.

Sloane MS 3191, arts.1-4. 'Claves angelicae'; 'Liber scientia auxilii et victoria terrestris'; 'De heptarchia mystica'; Tabula bonorum angelorum invocationes'.

Sloane MS 3677. Elias Ashmole's copy of Dee's 'Spiritual Diaries'.

Sloane MS 3678, art.1. Elias Ashmole's copy of Sloane MS 3191.

Warburg MS FBH 510. John Dee's 'Tuba veneris'.

Cambridge:

Trinity College MS O. 4. 20. Dee's list of his books made on 6 September 1583.

Oxford:

Ashmole MS 422, art.2. Notes copied by Elias Ashmole from Dee's fifth 'Liber mysteriorum'.

Ashmole MS 1790, I-IV. 'Praefatio Latina in actionem'; a collection of papers relating to Dee's actions with the spirits; Elias Ashmole's observations and collections concerning the same; Elias Ashmole's correspondence relating to Dee.

Rawlinson MS 923, arts.A.12; B.10. An account of John Dee's family and notes on Meric Casaubon's edition of the 'Spiritual Diaries'.

Printed Editions of Dee's Works

Autobiographical Tracts of Dr John Dee, Warden of the College of Manchester, ed. James Crossley. Chetham Society Publications, Vol.XXIV. Manchester, 1851.

Diary for the years 1595-1601, ed. John E Bailey. Privately printed, 1880.

Monas Hieroglyphica. Antwerp, 1564, reprinted Frankfurt, 1591.

Hieroglyphic Monad, tr. J W Hamilton-Jones, London, 1947.

Monas Hieroglyphica, tr. C H Josten, AMBIX, XII (1964), 84-221.

Private Diary, ed. James O Halliwell. Camden Society Publications, Vol.XIX. London, 1842.

A True & Faithful Relation of what passed for many Yeers Between Dr John Dee... and Some Spirits, ed. Meric Casaubon. London, 1659. Casaubon's own copy with his handwritten corrections is in the Bodleian Library, shelf mark D.8.14 art, while a copy in the British Museum contains revealing marginal notes by contemporaries of Casaubon's, shelf mark 719. m. 12. Reprinted Askin Publishers, London, 1974.

Printed Sources

Agrippa, Henry Cornelius. Three Books of Occult Philosophy, tr. J(ames) F(rench). London, 1651. Reprinting Askin Publishers, London, 1979.

Bailey, John E. 'Dee and Trithemius's "Steganography"', N&Q, 5th series, XI (1879), 401-2, 422-3.

Crowley, Aleister. 'Liber XXX AERUM vel Saeculi sub figura CCCCXVIII being of the Angels of the Thirty Aethyrs, the Vision and the Voice'. The Equinox I.5, supplement, 1911. Republished as The Vision and the Voice ed. Israel Regardie, Dallas, 1972.

Crowley, Aleister. 'Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh: a brief abstract of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe derived by Doctor John Dee through the scrying of Sir Edward Kelly'. The Equinox I. 7: 229-243, 1912; I. 8: 99-128, 1912.

Dalton, Ormonde M. 'Notes on Wax Discs used by Dr Dee', Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of London, XXI (1906-7), 380-3.

Deacon, Richard. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I. London, 1968.

French, Peter J. John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus. London, 1972. Contains a very full Dee bibliography.

Hay, G, Wilson, C, Turner, R and Langford, D. The Necronomicon, London, 1978.

Hooke, Robert. The Posthumous Works. London, 1705.

Hort, Gertrude M. Dr John Dee: Elizabethan Mystic and Astrologer. London, 1922.

Josten, C H. 'An Unknown Chapter in the Life of John Dee', in JWCI, XXVIII (1965), 223-57.

King, Francis. Ritual Magic in England. London, 1970.

La Vey, Anton Szandor. The Satanic Bible. Secaucus, 1969.

Laycock, Donald. 'How to Speak the Angelical Language', Arc 3, 19-21, London, 1973.

Mathers, S L MacGregor and Crowley, Aleister. The Book of the Goetia of Solomon the King. London, 1904.

McCulloch, S C. 'John Dee: Elizabethan Doctor of Science and Magic', South Atlantic Quarterly, L (1951), 72-85.

Prideaux, W R B. 'Books from John Dee's Library', N&Q, 9th series, VIII (1901), 137-8.

Prideaux, W R B. 'Books from John Dee's Library', N&Q, VIII (1904), 241.

Regardie, Francis Israel, ed. The Golden Dawn, 4 vols., 1937-1940. Minnesota, 1971.

Skinner, Stephen. 'The Magic of John Dee', Cosmos 1 (12).1, 12-13, 1974.

Skinner, Stephen. Enochian Magic. NYP

Smith, Charlotte Fell. John Dee: 1527-1608. London, 1909.

Smith, Thomas. Vita Joannis Dee, in Vitae quorundam eruditissimorum et illustrium virorum. London, 1707.

Smith, Thomas. The Life of John Dee, tr. William A Ayton. London, 1908.

Tait, Hugh. '"The Devil's Looking Glass": The Magical Speculum of Dr John Dee', Horace Walpole: Writer, Politician, and Connoisseur, ed. Warren Hunting Smith. New Haven and

London, 1967.
Trithemius, Johannes. Steganographia. Frankfurt, 1606.
Vinci, Leo. Gmicalzoma! London and New York, 1976.
Yates, Frances A. Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition. London and Chicago, 1964.
Yates, Frances A. The Rosicrucian Enlightenment. London, 1972.

Angels/Magic

Yes, the spirits are real. Yes, the spirits are imaginary. Most of us, however, cannot imagine how real our imaginations are.

—Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford
(a.k.a. Lon Milo DuQuette)

Dr. John Dee, Mathematician in the court of Queen Elizabeth I, and Edward Kelley, his medium, first deciphered the language of the angels, or Enochian, in 1581. Dr. Dee's efforts furthered the development of the Enochian system of magic, and his methods of invocation have been taken up and expounded upon by many magicians since.

Donald Laycock gives us the history of Dr. Dee's and Edward Kelley's work and explains how the alphabet is pronounced, and then presents an Angelic-English and English-Angelic dictionary. It is intended to allow the reader to find the basic meaning of any Enochian word used by Dee, words in the Enochian Calls of the Golden Dawn, and those used by Aleister Crowley in The Equinox and The Vision and the Voice. The book also includes variants of Enochian words in the Goetic invocations published by Aleister Crowley as a supplement to MacGregor Mathers' translation of the Goetia.

In his Foreword to this edition, Lon Milo DuQuette, a well-known figure in the world of modern occultism, gives us a humorous yet edifying description of how he and his students put The Complete Enochian Dictionary to the test—with astonishing results! This book is a must-have for any serious magician's library.

U.S. $21.95

ISBN-10: 1-57863-254-4
ISBN-13: 978-1-57863-254-1

9 781578 632541 52195

ENOCHIAN MAGIC for BEGINNERS

The Original System of Angel Magic

Donald Tyson

Open the Gates of Understanding

Begin with a clear and comprehensive overview of the entire system of Enochian magic—not just another rehash of previously published material. Enochian Magic for Beginners presents the authentic system of angelic magic taught to Dee and Kelley in its natural order, and places these teachings in their historical context. Drawing upon such obscure and hard-to-find sources as Dee's Heptarchia Mystica, Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae and others, Donald Tyson has painstakingly reconstructed the most accurate and accessible version of Enochian magic published to date.

Here are all the essential parts of the original system of Enochian magic, as it was delivered to John Dee—completely restored and corrected. All of the sigils, seals, and other magical symbols have been carefully re-drawn based upon photographs of Dr. Dee's original drawings and various plates in Causabon's True and Faithful Relation. Everything you need to become a practitioner of Enochian magic—or to learn what it's all about—is provided in an easy-to-use format, in simple language.

About the Author

Donald Tyson resides in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. Early in life he was drawn to science by an intense fascination with astronomy, building a telescope by hand when he was twelve. He began university seeking a science degree, but became disillusioned with the aridity and futility of a mechanistic view of the universe and shifted his major to English literature. After graduating with honors he has pursued a writing career.

Now he devotes his life to the attainment of a complete gnosis of the art of magic in theory and practice. His purpose is to formulate an accessible system of personal training composed of East and West, past and present, that will help the individual discover the reason for one's existence and a way to fulfill it.

To Write to the Author

If you would like to contact the author or would like more information about this book, please write to him in care of Llewellyn Worldwide. We cannot guarantee that every letter will be answered, but all will be forwarded. Please write to:

Donald Tyson
c/o Llewellyn Publications
2143 Wooddale Drive, Dept. K747–1
Woodbury, MN 55125-2989, U.S.A

Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply or $1.00 to cover costs. If ordering from outside the U.S.A., please enclose an international postal reply coupon.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC for BEGINNERS

The Original System of Angel Magic

Donald Tyson

Llewellyn Publications
Woodbury, Minnesota

Enochian Magic for Beginners: The Original System of Angel Magic Copyright 1997 by Donald Tyson. All rights reserved. Printed in the United States of America. No part of this book may be used or reproduced in any manner whatsoever, including Internet usage, without written permission from Llewellyn Publications, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles or reviews.

FIRST EDITION
Fourth Printing, 2005

Cover design: Lisa Novak Editing and layout: Ken Schubert
Illustrations and Enochian fonts: Donald Tyson

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data
Tyson, Donald, 1954–
Enochian magic for beginners : the original system of angel magic / Donald Tyson. – 1st ed.
p. cm.
Includes bibliographical references.
ISBN 1-56718-747-1 (trade paper)
1. Enochian Magic. 2. Dee, John, 1527–1608 3. Kelly, Edward, 1555–1598. 4. Enochian language. I. Title.
BF1623.E5ST97 1997 97-42043
133.4'3–dc21 CIP

Llewellyn Worldwide does not participate in, endorse, or have any authority or responsibility concerning private business transactions between our authors and the public. All mail addressed to the author is forwarded but the publisher cannot, unless specifically instructed by the author, give out an address or phone number.

Llewellyn Publications
A Division of Llewellyn Worldwide, Ltd.
2143 Wooddale Drive, K747
Woodbury, Minnesota 55125-2989, U.S.A.
www.llewellyn.com

Other Titles by Donald Tyson

The New Magus, 1988
Rune Magic, 1988
The Truth About Ritual Magic, 1989
The Truth About Runes, 1989
How to Make and Use a Magic Mirror, 1990, 1995
Ritual Magic, 1991
The Messenger, 1993 (fiction)
Tetragrammaton, 1995
New Millennium Magic, 1996
Scrying for Beginners, 1997
The Tortuous Serpent, 1997 (fiction)
Sexual Alchemy, 2000
The Magician's Workbook, 2001

Editor and Annotator

Three Books of Occult Philosophy Written by Henry Cornelius Agrippa of Nettesheim, 1993

Cards and Kits

Rune Magic Deck, 1988
Power of the Runes Kit, 1989
Rune Dice, 1997

Contents

INTRODUCTION
Legacy of the Angels xi

CHAPTER ONE
Enochian Magic 1

CHAPTER TWO
John Dee and Edward Kelley 13

CHAPTER THREE
In the Thrall of the Angels 23

CHAPTER FOUR
Enochian Magic and the Apocalypse 35

CHAPTER FIVE
The History of Enochian Magic 49

CHAPTER SIX
The Tools of Enochian Magic 61

CHAPTER SEVEN
The Enochian Language 91

CHAPTER EIGHT
The Heptarchia Mystica 103

CHAPTER NINE
The Heptarchical Angels 117

CHAPTER TEN
The Great Table of the Watchtowers 139

CHAPTER ELEVEN
The Vision of the Watchtowers 155

CHAPTER TWELVE
The Transmission of the Great Table 169

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
The Angels of the Watchtowers 189

CHAPTER FOURTEEN
The Enochian Keys 219

CHAPTER FIFTEEN
The Spirits of the Thirty Aethers 245

CHAPTER SIXTEEN
The Enochian Invocations of John Dee 263

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
Enochian Magic in the Golden Dawn 283

APPENDIX A
Enochian Book of Spirits 309

APPENDIX B
The Vision of the Round House 353

NOTES 365

INTRODUCTION

Legacy of the Angels

THE ORIGINAL ENOCHIAN MAGIC

This book contains the complete and original system of Enochian magic. It was transmitted to the Elizabethan sage Dr. John Dee through his seer the alchemist Edward Kelley by a group of spiritual beings who presented themselves as the same holy angels who had instructed the patriarch Enoch. Whether they were really angels is a moot point, since they ceased to speak with humankind after Dee and Kelley separated in 1589, but their legacy is without question the most remarkable artifact in the entire history of spirit communication.

It is both a system of theurgy (a method for summoning and commanding angelic beings) and goety (a method for summoning and commanding demons). Although the angels gave Dee strict instructions that he should never use the magic for evoking evil spirits, the names of evil spirits are provided in Enochian magic nonetheless, along with techniques for summoning them. In the following pages I put forth the premise that Enochian magic may have a deeper and darker purpose that was never revealed by the angels to Dee. It is my belief that the angels intended it to serve as a magical trigger for the chaotic transition—generally referred to as the apocalypse—between the present aeon and the next.

Origin of the System

The practical efficacy and ultimate purpose of this system depends in large measure on its origin. For centuries it was dismissed by scholars as either a conscious fabrication by Kelley to deceive Dee or a device Dee created to conceal a technique of cryptography he used in his political espionage. The evidence is persuasive that Dee was indeed a secret agent working for the English government, and he did possess an extensive knowledge of ciphers. Kelley, for his part, was a rogue who had engaged in numerous criminal activities including forgery, counterfeiting, and black magic before entering Dee's employ as a seer. Yet there is no evidence that Enochian magic was ever used to encode espionage ciphers, nor is it likely that Kelley was intellectually capable of creating so complex and beautiful a system of magic.

Anyone who makes a serious study of Dee's magical diaries is forced to conclude that Enochian magic is a genuine phenomenon of spiritualism. Whatever the true nature of the angels—messengers of God or shadow personalities within the unconscious minds of the two men—they clearly intended the information they transmitted to serve some higher purpose: one which they never explicitly revealed to Dee. On several occasions they told Dee and Kelley that the men had been brought together to act as key agents in a divine plan, and that united they were greater than the sum of their parts. They informed Kelley that his amazing talent as a psychic was a gift they had bestowed upon the alchemist, a gift that would be withdrawn should Kelley ever leave Dee's service.

One thing is beyond question—there exist levels of mystery and power in Enochian magic that no scholar and no ritualist has even begun to exploit. Much of the system, including the complex set of magic squares that makes up Dee's Book of Enoch and the numbering that appears in the hauntingly beautiful poetry of the Enochian Keys, persists as a complete enigma to this day. For centuries Enochian magicians have made use of parts of the system. Other parts remain beyond their reach, just as they were beyond the understanding of Dee and Kelley. The angels reserved to themselves many secrets.

The Division of Fate

Enochian magic falls into two parts. This structure was not intentional, but an accident of fate. Originally the angels transmitted the system in bits and pieces that were not in any logical order, but were scrambled together. This may have been the result of the angels' difficulties in dealing with linear time, or it may have been a deliberate way of concealing the magic from casual eyes. Dee was able to sort out some of the confusion in his manuscripts, but after his death his Enochian papers became split into two collections.

The papers that concern the latter half of Enochian magic were published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon. This is the material that is generally known as Enochian magic. It contains the four Watchtowers, the Enochian Keys or Calls, and the vocabulary of the Enochian language. It was this second half of the system that found its way into the magic of the Victorian occult society known as the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Through the teachings of the Golden Dawn, Enochian magic has spread widely in the English-speaking occult community over the last century.

The papers that address the first half of the Enochian system remained unpublished until modern times. They were available to serious researchers in the original manuscripts by Dee and early handwritten copies by others, but were virtually unknown to the average working ritualist. They deal with the invocation of planetary angels using a system of sigils and magic squares. This early portion of Enochian magic known as the Heptarchia Mystica is still widely regarded as a separate system, more or less unrelated to the magic of the Watchtowers and the Enochian language. This is incorrect, however. Enochian magic is a single, complex entity that can only be understood as a whole.

The Reasons for This Book

I wrote this book for two reasons. The first purpose was to present the entire spectrum of Enochian magic as an integrated system. Because of its early division into two parts, and because of the sheer complexity of the subject, it has been the tendency of writers to treat single aspects (such as the Watchtowers) in great detail, but to ignore other aspects. This can be disorienting to the novice, who is unable to place the topic under examination into the context of Enochian magic as a whole.

Too often, Enochian magic is presented as something eternally existent. There is no serious attempt to give a detailed history of Dee and Kelley during their partnership, or to show the technical elements revealed by the angels in a wider context. Usually no more than a few pages is devoted to the ritual method by which the communications were received, to what the angels actually said to Dee and Kelley on a personal level, or to the significance of their philosophical teachings. While I have treated the ritual mechanics of Enochian magic with great thoroughness, I have not neglected the larger picture. Those who wish to know what Enochian magic is all about will find their questions answered here, insofar as such questions have an answer.

The second reason I wrote this book was to give, perhaps for the first time, the original system of Enochian magic as revealed by the angels and recorded by John Dee. Most works focus exclusively on the form of Enochian magic that was taught in the order papers of the Golden Dawn, which is not the Enochian magic of Dee and Kelley. Golden Dawn Enochian magic deals almost exclusively with a modified version of the Great Table of the Watchtowers and the Enochian Keys—important elements of the system, but only a small part of the whole. To this essential nut of Enochian material the leaders of the Golden Dawn grafted a complex set of magical associations derived from the general Golden Dawn system of magic. These occult correspondences have nothing whatsoever to do with the original system of Enochian magic revealed by the angels.

When the Enochian material in the papers of the Golden Dawn represented all of the system generally available to the public, there was some rationale for favoring it. But since most of the surviving original Enochian manuscripts have now found their way into print in one form or another, it has become inexcusable to treat the restricted, modified portion of Enochian material used in the Golden Dawn as the whole of Enochian magic. This work is dedicated to illuminating the whole of the original system.

New Findings

Some of what I present here will not be found outside my works. It is the result of my intense personal studies of the Enochian system. This includes the reformed ordering of the Watchtowers on the Great Table, the assignment of the Enochian Keys to the subquarters of the Table, the completely rewritten Book of Spirits by which the angels are to be initially contacted, the final version of the Heptagon Stellar (the great seal of the angelic heptarchy), the illustrations showing the flow of elemental currents in the Round House, and much more.

In the course of writing this book I created two new Enochian typefaces, one for Enochian print characters and the other for script or cursive characters. This was necessary since the standard Enochian typeface contains numerous serious and obvious errors. These new Enochian fonts appear in my illustrations of sigils and tables, all of which have been redrawn and corrected after comparing them with multiple sources. It is my belief that my illustration of the Sigillum Aemeth is the most accurate version currently available.

Secrets of the Angels

Enochian magic is complex. Aspects of it remain obscure to this day. This situation is made worse by the loss of some of John Dee's manuscripts, and the damage time has done to those that survive. Even if we possessed all of Dee's magical writings in pristine condition, we would not fully understand Enochian magic because the angels did not transmit all the details of its working. Dee did the best he could to make sense out of the communications, but was forced to rely on an incomplete model.

Without question, some of what appears in this book is faulty. On key topics for which there is no complete explanation I have been forced to speculate. These speculations are clearly labeled as my own interpretation of the material, and you should treat all of these personal interpretations as unproven. I have given them because I believe them to be the best available understanding of the material. Other writers would give you nothing for fear that they might be discovered at some later date to have made mistakes, and indeed, I have probably committed errors in my personal interpretation of obscure parts of the Enochian system, but I believe the value of these speculations outweighs their liability.

For example, in redrawing the ensigns of the heptarchical angels I relied mainly on the plate that appears in Meric Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation, which shows the ensigns spread in a circle on top of the Table of Practice. It is my conviction that the ensigns were actually painted on the table (an alternative method of presentation allowed by the angels). Since the artist who made the plate for Casaubon worked from Dee's actual table, which has since vanished from the face of the Earth, I judge his illustration to be the most valuable, even though it conflicts in many details with other versions of the ensigns published by Robert Turner in his book The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee.

Dee may well have made deliberate modifications to the ensigns when he came to paint them onto the surface of his Table of Practice, and these changes may not have been retroactively made in his manuscript drawings. Nonetheless, I closely referred to the ensigns in Turner's work, and where it seemed likely that the engraver may have committed an error (i.e., mistaking Dee's handwritten "11" for "u"), I have included these changes in my illustrations of the ensigns.

This process of comparison, judgment, and compromise was followed throughout this book. I believe it has resulted in a high degree of accuracy, but due to the very nature of the Enochian material, complete accuracy is impossible. In many cases we simply do not know what the angels intended—or even what Dee intended—with absolute certainty. Bear this fact in mind when you encounter details in the system that seem to contradict what you have seen elsewhere.

A Complete Compendium of Enochian Magic

I wrote this work to orient the novice to Enochian magic and to provide in a logical and accurate form all the key aspects of the original system delivered to Kelley by the angels. However, experienced Enochian magicians will also find a great deal that is of interest, because I have been able to treat familiar parts of the system in fresh and insightful ways. Even though the Great Table of the Watchtowers is the most frequent subject of writers on Enochian magic, its essential nature has never really been examined. Writers get lost in the details of its construction and use, and forget to ask what it actually is.

Enochian magicians should not be misled by the title of this work. It is written for beginners, but it is not a superficial treatment of Enochian magic. It is a comprehensive examination of the full range of original Enochian magic set in the wider context of all of the Enochian communications. I have been able to encapsulate a great deal of useful information in the form of images and tables. My hope is that the work will serve not only as an overview for beginners, but also as a source for working Enochian magicians.

I am deeply indebted to those writers who have published accurate transcriptions of portions of Dee's magical diaries. Noteworthy among them are Robert Turner, Geoffrey James, and, most of all, Meric Casaubon. Without their work and the work of others like them this book would not have been possible. They have my sincere thanks.

CHAPTER ONE

Enochian Magic

THE WISDOM OF ENOCH

Enochian magic is a system of theurgy, or angel magic, psychically conveyed to the Elizabethan alchemist and seer Edward Kelley by a group of spirits that came to be called the Enochian angels. Over the years 1582–1587 the spirits dictated various parts of this magic to Kelley, or presented it in the form of visions while Kelley scried into a crystal ball.

Kelley repeated the words of the spirits and described the visions to his friend and employer, the great mathematician, geographer, and astrologer Dr. John Dee. Dee sat beside Kelley during the scrying sessions with a pen in his hand and papers spread before him. Everything that Kelley said, Dee recorded verbatim. Thanks to Dee's careful method, the communications of the spirits have been preserved with the accuracy of a court transcript.

The angels identified themselves to Kelley as the same angels who had instructed the patriarch Enoch in the angelic language and the wisdom of God. Enoch was the only patriarch of the Old Testament to be elevated into heaven while still alive—at least, this was the interpretation of the Jewish rabbis and Kabbalists of Genesis 5:24: "And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him." All the other descendants of Adam down to Noah mentioned in the Bible are explicitly said to have died, but not Enoch.

Over the centuries, a wisdom tradition grew up around Enoch. Along with Adam, Noah, Solomon, and a few others, he is said to have been one of those responsible for passing the primal teachings of the angels on to humanity. The apocryphal Book of Enoch arose from this tradition. The key event in this book is a description of how the rebellious angels, lusting after the daughters of men, descended to Earth and taught humankind all the arts and sciences of adornment, magic, and warfare that sow strife throughout the world.

Theurgy and Goety

According to the angel Ave, these evil angels were permitted to descend upon the Earth and spread false and destructive teachings because the kings of the Earth had grown arrogant through the use of the wisdom bequeathed to them by Enoch. As a punishment, God sent false and deceiving angels to teach what is presently known as black magic. In this way, God allowed humankind to be the instrument of its own punishment. However, Ave tells Kelley, God has decided to permit the true wisdom of Enoch, as preserved in his heavenly books, once again to be known upon the Earth. Dee and Kelley are to be the instruments of its dissemination.

> The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was merciful unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown unto his Parents, by reason of their fall: for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth: And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.

> And he sayed unto the Lord, Let there be remembrance of thy mercy, and let those that love thee taste of this after me: O let not thy mercy be forgotten. And the Lord was pleased.
>
> And after 50 days Enoch had written: and this was the Title of his books, let those that fear God, and are worthy read.
>
> But behold, the people waxed wicked, and became unrighteous, and the spirit of the Lord was far off, and gone away from them. So that those that were unworthy began to read. And the Kings of the earth said thus against the Lord, What is it that we cannot do? Or who is he, that can resist us? And the Lord was vexed, and he sent in amongst them an hundred and fifty Lions, and spirits of wickednesse, errour, and deceit: and they appeared unto them: For the Lord had put them between those that are wicked, and his good Angels: And they began to counterfeit the doings of God and his power, for they had power given them so to do, so that the memory of Enoch washed away: and the spirits of errour began to teach them Doctrines: which from time to time unto this age, and unto this day, hath spread abroad into all parts of the world, and is the skill and cunning of the wicked.
>
> Hereby they speak with the Devils: not because they have power over the Devils, but because they are joyned unto them in the league and Discipline of their own Doctrine.
>
> For behold, as the knowledge of the mystical figures, and the use of their presence is the gift of God delivered to Enoch, and by Enoch his request to the faithfull, that thereby they might have the true use of Gods creatures, & of the earth whereon they dwell: So hath the Devil delivered unto the wicked the signs, and tokens of his error and hatred towards God: whereby they in using them, might consent with their fall: and so become partakers with them of their reward, which is eternal damnation.
>
> These they call Characters: a lamentable thing. For by these, many Souls have perished.
>
> Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darknesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch.

> Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witnesse of my promise toward thee.[1]

God directly pledges to John Dee, through his messenger the angel Ave and through Dee's scryer Edward Kelley, that the system of magic being revealed to Dee is the genuine wisdom of Enoch by which may be had "the use of the earth." The one hundred and fifty lions, "spirits of wickednesse, errour, and deceit" are the same fallen angels who, in the Book of Enoch, sin with mortal women and teach corrupting sciences to humankind. According to Ave, this false teaching consisted mainly of demonic magic, or goety.

It is common for the proponents of a system of religion, philosophy, or magic to claim that theirs is the only legitimate practice, and that all methods that differ from it are corrupting and false. By slandering other forms of magic the angels hope to elevate their own teachings and give them a greater importance in Dee's eyes.

Kelley, who before his association with Dee had considerable firsthand knowledge of necromancy and other forms of black magic, tells Ave that the wisdom of Enoch seems very like common magic to him, but Ave assures Kelley, "Nay, they all played at this,"[2] meaning that all forms of magic other than Enochian magic are mere playthings—that Enochian magic is the only true theurgy approved by God and accepted by the angels of heaven.

The Gates and the Keys

It is important to understand that Enochian magic is solely concerned with the ritual summoning and command of angels and lesser spirits. When speaking about the formal Enochian evocations known as the Calls or Keys, the angel Mapsama tells Dee:

> These Calls touch all the parts of the World. The World may be dealt withall, with her parts: Therefore you may do anything. These Calls are the keyes into the Gates and Cities of wisdom. Which Gates are not able to be opened, but with visible apparition.[3]

The gates to the cities of wisdom are forty-nine in number. However, one of the gates is too holy to be opened, so the actual Keys number forty-eight. The cities of wisdom are spiritual realms inhabited by different hierarchies of angels with distinct functions on the earth. These heavenly cities are represented by forty-nine extremely complex number/letter squares that contain forty-nine rows and forty-nine columns. Taken together, the angels refer to these squares as the Book of Enoch. One of the squares is represented in a plate at the beginning of Meric Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Concerning these magic squares, Nalvage tells Dee:

> You have 49 Tables: In those Tables are contained the mystical and holy voices of the Angels: dignified: and in state disglorified and drent in confusion: which pierceth Heaven, and looketh into the Center of the Earth: the very language and speech of Children and Innocents, such as magnifie the name of God, and are pure.[4]

The forty-nine tables do not play a direct part in Enochian magic. They serve as the chaotic ground from which the words of the Keys were drawn letter by tortuous letter during the scrying sessions. Kelley would watch in the crystal as an angel pointed to one cell or another of the relevent table, then call out the position of the cell to Dee, who would then look up the cell in his copy of the table and write down the letter he found there. The Keys were delivered in this way, backwards and one letter at a time.

The occult energies of these tables are embodied collectively in a single letter table with four quadrants called the Great Table. It is a magical schematic diagram of the Enochian universe. Each quadrant on the Great Table is known as a Watchtower. The Keys open the gates to the cities of the angels whose names are written in the Watchtowers and call them forth, along with their numerous servants. Taken together, the forty-eight Keys and the Great Table of the four Watchtowers form the heart of Enochian magic.

The Book of Silvered Leaves

There is another book spoken about by the angels that is undoubtedly connected with the book of magic squares. Dee is directed to construct it with blank leaves in preparation to receive the writing of the angels. They will inscribe the book directly during the initial ritual working that will establish contact with the Enochian hierarchies:

> Mapsama: Bind up together, 48 leaves; whose skin shall bear Silver: Whose Perimeter shall be 30 inches: in length, 8; in breadth 7.
>
> Dee: do you require it to be parchment, or paper?
>
> Mapsama: I have said.
>
> Dee: What shall I, then, do, after I have caused 48 leaves to be bound?
>
> Mapsama: The fourteenth day of your rest, even this Table-Cloath, and none other shall be spread for a Banket. Whereunto, you shall invite the Angels of the Lord: In the middest of the Table lay down the book and go forth; make also the doors after you. That the heavens may justifie your faith, and you may be comforted. For, man is not worthy to write that shall be written: neither shall there be found many worthy to open that book.[5]

The Book of Spirits is a common feature of medieval angel magic.[6] It contains the names, sigils, and occasionally images of the spirits who are bound in service to the magician—usually after an involved and intense ritual working that achieves the initial evocation of the spirits.

The spirits write the book themselves, sign it with their marks and signatures, or at the least swear obedience to it. Of course, spirits are not actually capable of writing in the book. This is accomplished by possessing the magician without his or her awareness and using the body of the magician to write or sign the Book of Spirits.

In Dee's case, the angels of the forty-eight spiritual cities that may be opened by the Keys are to be represented by occult symbols that probably contained letter and number combinations. However, we will never know what the Book of Silvered Leaves was intended to contain since Dee's copy, if he ever made it, was not inscribed by the angels and has not survived. These mysterious signs were to be inscribed on silvered parchment by the potent Mother of many of the Enochian angels, a being so exalted she identifies herself only with the title I AM, which is equivalent to the Hebrew name of God, Eheieh. She appears to be the same angel as the Queen of Heaven of Revelation 12:1.

The Enochian Working

The inscription of Dee's Book of Silvered Leaves was to occur after an eighteen-day period of ritual working during which an original evocation composed by Dee and Kelley was to be spoken on each day. For the first four days of the working, Dee was instructed by Ave to address his evocation only to the names of God; for the following fourteen days Dee should evoke the hierarchies of angels by the specific names of God that rule each:

> Four dayes ... must you onely call upon those names of God, or on the God of Hosts, in those names:
>
> And 14 dayes after you shall (in this, or some convenient place) Call the Angels by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient.
>
> The 15 day you shall Cloath your selves, in vestures made of linnen, white: and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. For, it is not a labour of years, nor many dayes.[7]

The Creatures that Ave refers to would seem to be the angels of the Thirty Aethers or Airs, who are represented by the last thirty Keys. These keys are really a single call or summons to thirty different angelic zones or spheres called Aethers. Only the names of the Aethers change in the last thirty Keys—they are otherwise identical. For this reason, the nineteenth Key is known as the Key of the Thirty Aethers. The Princes of the Aethers rule over the lesser spirits of the regions or kingdoms of the world. It was these geographical spirits that Dee most wanted to control.

About the robes and the book used during this working, Ave says: "You must never use the Garment after, but that once only, neither the book." Kelley quite reasonably objects: "To what end is the book made then, if it be not to be used after." Dee somewhat testily reproves Kelley: "It is made for to be used that day onely."[8]

There is some ambiguity here about which book is being discussed. Kelley means the book of names and invocations that he and Dee are ordered to create themselves. About this workbook, which I will call Dee's Book of Spirits, Ave tells Dee: "The Book consisteth [1] of Invocation of the names of God, and [2] of the Angels, by the names of God: Their offices are manifest."[9] This would seem to have a function throughout the eighteen days of the working, and perhaps thereafter. Dee actually created the model for this Book of Spirits invoking the names of God and the angels. It forms Dee's manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which still exists and is kept in the British Library.

The angel Ave probably means the book of blank, silvered leaves that is to be supernaturally inscribed by his Mother. This Book of Silver would be used only on the single day the angels pledged obedience to Dee. The silvering of the leaves suggests that the Mother of the angels is a lunar goddess, and that Enochian magic is lunar in nature. Monday (the day of the Moon) appears to be the Enochian sabbath.[10]

Enochian Magic Forbidden to Dee and Kelley

There is no evidence that Dee and Kelley ever conducted this working to initiate the power of the Enochian angels. They were waiting for permission to do so from the angels, but that permission was never granted.

> Mapsama: You called for wisdom, God hath opened unto you, his Judgement: He hath delivered unto you the keyes, that you may enter; But be humble. Enter not of presumption, but of permission. Go not in rashly; But be brought in willingly: For, many have ascended, but few have entered. By Sunday you shall have all things that are necessary to be taught; then (as occasion serveth) you may practice at all times. But you being called by God, and to a good purpose.

Dee: How shall we understand this Calling by God?
Mapsama: God stoppeth my mouth, I will answer thee no more.[11]

It is evident to me from a close study of the Enochian transcripts that the angels intended Dee to have the system of Enochian magic, but never intended to permit him to actually use it. Dee and Kelley served as human instruments through which the angels were able to transmit Enochian magic to the human race. Gabriel tells Dee and Kelley, "But in you two is figured the time to come."[12] The angels assure Dee and Kelley that they will continue to prosper and be secure for as long as they remain together, because they are two parts of a single whole. "The Seer let him see, and look after the doing of him that he seeth; For you are but one body in this work."[13]

Kelley has been granted the gift of second sight solely so that he can assist Dee in receiving Enochian magic.

> Shall a dark seller brag or boast of her beauty? because she receiveth light and cleernesse, by a Candle brought into, or shinning into her.
>
> No more canst thou, [E.K.] for the ripennesse of thy wit and understanding is through the presence of us, and our illumination.
>
> But if we depart, thou shalt become a dark seller, and shall think too well of thy self in vain.[14]

Elsewhere the angel Uriel, speaking in the voice of God, tells Kelley: "I will make thee a great Seer: Such an one, as shall judge the Circle of things in nature. But heavenly understanding, and spiritual knowledge shall be sealed up from thee in this world."[15] Kelley is regarded by the angels as little more than a psychic telephone through which they may reach the conscious mind of John Dee. The angels barely tolerate his suspicions and verbal abuse. They know that Kelley detests them and considers them to be deceivers.

The angels respect Dee for his great piety and wisdom, but even he will not be permitted to attain the full understanding of Enochian magic. The angel Gabriel tells Dee this, and makes further reference to the necessity of Dee and Kelley remaining together as one organic unit (even to the extent of sharing their wives in common, a future event foreshadowed here):

> "Thou shalt never know the mysteries of all things that have been spoken. If you love together, and dwell together, and in one God; Then the self-same God will be merciful unto you: Which bless you, comfort you, and strengthen you unto the end."[16]

Dee and Kelley were two halves of a human machine for receiving and recording the mysteries of the angelic communications. Kelley had the ability to perceive the angels and their teachings. Dee had the intelligence to understand and transcribe them accurately, and to correct any errors that occurred during their transmission. Neither man could have generated the system of Enochian magic alone. Each acted as a catalyst to the other.

Chapter Two

John Dee and Edward Kelley

An Unlikely Partnership

To understand the origin of Enochian magic, it is necessary to know something about the strange partnership from which it germinated. There has never been a more unlikely pairing of personalities than Dee and Kelley. They were as different as day and night. Yet they shared an irresistible fascination for the forbidden wisdom of the angels.

Dee sought the teaching as an instrument through which he could serve his nation and revolutionize human knowledge. Kelley single-mindedly pursued the secret of alchemical transformation that would give him personal wealth and power. Each man needed the other to make his dream a reality. Although they often disagreed, they remained throughout their years together, and for many years after, genuine friends.

"My Ubiquitous Eyes"

John Dee (1527–1608) was the elder of the two men by twenty-eight years. His father, Rowland Dee, a minor and relatively poor nobleman of Welsh descent, worked as a Gentleman Server in the household of King Henry VIII.

This office consisted of supervising the royal kitchens and carving the meat at the King's table. The young Dee was brought up to be proud of his remote blood connection with the ancient Welsh kings.

Early in life Dee showed a precocious talent for mathematics. At age fifteen he became a student at St. John's College at the University of Cambridge. He excelled at scholarship and pursued it with a fanatical zeal, writing: "in the yeares 1543, 1544 and 1545 I was so vehementlie bent to studie that for those yeares I did inviolably keep this order: only to sleep four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the time of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning."[1]

In 1546 he graduated Bachelor of Arts from St. John's College, and later in the same year became one of the original Fellows of Trinity College, newly founded by Henry VIII. Although he earned his Master of Arts degree from Trinity, and subsequently won great acclaim for his studies and lectures at the universities of Louvaine and Paris, there is no evidence that he was ever awarded a doctorate from any university in Europe. The "Doctor" attached to his name may have been an honorary title.

It was during his graduate years at Trinity that he first acquired the label of "sorcerer" that was to follow him throughout his life. For a student production of Aristophanes' play Peace he contrived a mechanical flying beetle that carried one of the actors up into the air. The stage mechanism was so well designed that many in the audience thought Dee had achieved the effect through supernatural means.

When Elizabeth came to the throne in 1559, it was Dee who astrologically chose the date for her coronation.

Dee was later summoned to investigate a waxen witch doll in the image of the Queen found in Lincoln's Inn Fields with a great pin thrust through its heart. Throughout her life, Elizabeth maintained the highest respect and affection for Dee—although this seldom translated into desirable political appointments or lavish gifts.

In part, the Queen's favor was repayment for Dee's loyalty to her during her house arrest under Bloody Mary Tudor. Dee once showed Elizabeth a horoscope he had cast for Queen Mary and compared it unfavorably with Elizabeth's own horoscope. This imprudent act caused him to be denounced as a sorcerer by one of Mary's spies and arrested. He was tried for treason, but was acquitted due to lack of evidence. This shared persecution by Mary bonded him more closely to Elizabeth.

But there was no condescension in Elizabeth's attitude toward Dee, who at the time was widely regarded as the foremost bright young man in England. He was skilled in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, knowledgeable in medicine, a gifted mathematician, a philosopher, a practical astronomer as well as an astrologer, a historian, and a respected author. He had studied cartography and navigation under Gerhardus Mercator and was responsible for introducing some of the latest scientific instruments into England. During his trips to the Continent while a university student he had garnered great acclaim as a public lecturer.

Precisely what Elizabeth's true relationship with Dee may have entailed is not known for certain, but there is evidence that he acted as an espionage agent for the Queen during his Continental travels. Elizabeth referred to Dee as "My Noble Intelligencer" and "my Ubiquitous Eyes."[2] It is only coincidence, but a very curious one, that Dee signed his letters to the Queen with the symbols 007.[3]

Dee also instructed the Queen in arcane matters. Besides teaching her astrology and astronomy, he gave her private lessons in the mysteries of his 1564 work The Hieroglyphic Monad at her own request. After revealing the secret keys of the Monad to Elizabeth, Dee records in his diary her reaction: "Whereupon her Majestie had a little perusion of the same with me, and then in most heroicall and princely wise did comfort and encourage me in my studies philosophicall and mathematicall."[6]

Dee acted as her astrological counselor in personal and state affairs, and probably erected protective barriers for her against occult attacks. Elizabeth thought so highly of Dee she defended his reputation against those in her court who criticized him during his absence from England. She privately assured Dee that he should feel free to continue with any magical experiments he chose, regardless of their nature—that there would be no danger of prosecution during her reign.

Dee was among the greatest social and political visionaries of the Elizabethan Age. He encouraged the quest for a Northwest Passage and supplied geographical and navigational resources to such English explorers as Drake and Frobisher. He promoted the concepts of a strong English navy to counter the dominance of Spain and foresaw a globe-spanning British Empire. He delved deeply into the genealogical history of the Tudors to prove that Elizabeth had legal claims to lands in the New World. He promoted the reform of the English calendar. When Elizabeth made no effort to carry forward the proposal he had made to Mary for founding a national library, Dee proceeded to amass his own library. At one stage, this became the largest collection of scientific and philosophical books and manuscripts in England. The biographer John Aubrey called Dee "one of the ornaments of his age."

The Quest for the Red Powder

Edward Kelley (1555–1597) was born at Worcester the same year that John Dee faced charges of treason in the court of the Star Chamber. We know this because Dee cast Kelley's horoscope. The events of Kelley's life are uncertain. He is said to have served as an apothecary's apprentice,[5] perhaps under his own father. His true family name may have been Talbot, and he may have attended Oxford University for a short period around the age of seventeen before leaving "under a cloud."[6]

The rumors surrounding his early life are unsavory. He is reported to have been pilloried at Lancaster, either for forging land title deeds or coining (counterfeiting). He is also supposed to have had his ears cropped (that is, cut off) as punishment for one or the other of these crimes, although there is no real evidence to support this story. Perhaps two separate incidents were involved.

However, he is most notorious for having, in the company of his friend Paul Waring, dug up the corpse of a pauper buried in the graveyard of Walton-le-Dale church in the county of Lancashire and invoked the spirit of the dead man to inquire into the future prospects of a young nobleman. There is reason to believe this necromancy actually took place, particularly since Kelley later admitted to Dee a knowledge of goetic magic.

It may have been the unfavorable notoriety surrounding this desecration that forced Kelley to abandon his profession as legal scribe and set out on an extended visit to Wales. While walking through Wales, as the story goes,[7] Kelley bought from an innkeeper two caskets containing the white and red powders of alchemy and an alchemical manuscript titled the Book of St. Dunstan. The innkeeper is supposed to have obtained these powders from tomb robbers who stole them from the crypt of a Catholic bishop. When properly used, the white powder turned base metal into silver and the red powder turned base metal into gold.

There is another version of the story that asserts that Kelley and Dee went together to Glastonbury, and that this was the site where Kelley discovered the powders and the book.[8] This fanciful tale derives from Elias Ashmole, who wrote:

> 'Tis generally reported that Doctor Dee, and Sir Edward Kelly were so strangely fortunate, as to finde a very large quantity of the Elixir in some part of the Ruines of Glastenbury-Abbey, which was so incredibly Rich in vertue (being one upon 272330.) that they lost much in making Projection, by way of Triall; before they found out the true height of the Medicine.[9]

The elixir of life is here confused with the red powder of projection. The meaning of Ashmole is that one part of the powder could convert 272,330 parts of base metal into pure gold. About this romantic excursion of Dee and Kelley to Glastonbury, Charlotte Fell Smith comments: "Another version of this discovery is that Dee and Kelley together found the powder at Glastonbury. This we may dismiss."[10]

I am inclined to dismiss both versions of the story. The only certainty is that when Kelley arrived at the house of John Dee at Mortlake, he had in his possession both an alchemical manuscript that he referred to as the Book of Dunstan and a small quantity of what he sincerely believed was the red powder of projection.

Alchemy was Kelley's lifelong passion. He probably became interested in the subject as a young child while watching his father mix medicinal remedies with mortar and pestle. There is a natural connection between the desire to manufacture alchemical gold and the crime of coining, which involved counterfeiting silver or gold coins with adulterated metals. Kelley was drawn to John Dee for one purpose only—to learn how to decipher the meaning of his Book of Dunstan and manufacture more of the miraculous red powder.

The Coming of the Angels

As can be seen from these narrations, Dee and Kelley had almost nothing in common. Dee was a nobleman, a scholar, a nationalist, a visionary, an agent of the Queen, and a man noted for his extraordinary goodness and piety. Kelley was a commoner, a forger, a coiner and a necromancer. His world was the murky realm of under-the-table dealings and trickery. He acknowledged loyalty to no one but himself.

Yet Kelley was not, at root, evil. He was merely a romantic dreamer who longed to unearth arcane secrets for his own betterment. He was drawn like a man entranced by the siren spell of magic. This lust to unlock the hidden secrets of the spirit world he shared with Dee. Kelley sought them for his own personal gain, while Dee sought them for the benefit of his Queen and his nation—but both hunted the same prize. Neither could know at that first meeting that their destinies had already been shaped by the Enochian angels, and were inextricably entwined.

Kelley arrived at Mortlake on March 8, 1582. He was introduced to Dee by a mutual friend named Clerkson. Kelley called himself Edward Talbot, and this may well have been his real name. Dee's fame, and that of his personal library, had by this time spread throughout Europe. Scholars frequently traveled to Mortlake from far places to consult with him or study his books. Their relationship might have ended after only a few days or weeks, but Kelley possessed a talent that Dee sorely needed—the gift of second sight.

> One Mr. Edward Talbot cam to my howse, and he being willing and desirous to see or shew some thing in spirituall practise, wold have had me to have done some thing therein. And I truely excused my self therein, as not in that, vulgarly accounted Magic, neyther studied, or exercised. But confessed my self long tyme to have byn desyrous to have help in my philosophicall studies through the Company and information of the blessed Angels of God.[11]

Dee was greatly preoccupied with the spirit world. Precisely one year before Kelley's arrival he had been troubled by a strange knocking in his bedroom. This visitation made so strong an impression, he recorded it in his personal diary:

> March 8th, [1581] it was the 8 day, being Wensday, hora noctis 10, 11, the strange noyse in my chamber of knocking: and the voyce, ten tymes repeted, somewhat like the shrich of an owle, but more longly drawn, and more softly, as it were in my chamber.[12]

This was not an isolated incident. Elsewhere in the same year Dee records: "Aug. 3rd, all the night very strange knocking and rapping in my chamber. Aug. 4th, and this night likewise."[13]

Dee became convinced that these spirit noises were an attempt to communicate with him. He began to scry into a crystal globe, and had some limited success. On May 25, 1581, he wrote, "I had sight in chrystallo offered me, and I saw."[14] He was a cautious man, even in the bounds of his own house and in the pages of his private diary—"chrystallo" is written in Greek. Unfortunately,

Dee was a terrible seer. He acknowledged this himself on a number of occasions.

"Him That Is Assigned the Stone"

Almost immediately after these spirit rappings started, he began to employ a man of dubious reputation named Barnabas Saul as his private scryer. Saul is said to have been a "licensed preacher"[15] who professed abilities as a spirit medium. On October 8, 1581, Dee records: "I had newes of the chests of bokes fownd by Owndle in Northamptonshyre; Mr. Barnabas Sawle told me of them, but I fownd no truth in it," and directly after, "Oct. 9th, Barnabas Saul, lying in the ... hall was strangely trubled by a spirituall creature abowt midnight."[16]

What Charlotte Fell Smith calls the "first real seance" between Dee and Saul occurred December 21, 1581. Its content is almost chilling for the way it foreshadows the coming union between Dee and Kelley:

> The skryer was bidden to look into the "great crystalline globe," and a message was transmitted by the angel Annael through the precipient to the effect that many things should be declared to Dee, not by the present worker, "but by him that is assigned to the stone."[17]

In February of 1582, an attempt was made to indict Saul on some unknown charge at Westminster Hall in London. It seems probable this charge was one of sorcery, since on March 6 Saul tells Dee that he "neyther hard or saw any spirituall creature any more."[18] If Saul was under the watchful eye of the Church, it is unlikely he would continue with his scrying. On the other hand, the task of scrying for Dee was just about to pass from Saul to Kelley, and it may be that the Enochian angels withdrew their support of Saul and shifted it to Kelley as their preferred instrument.

Kelley immediately set about poisoning the waters for Saul. Whether this was a conscious attempt to gain employment as Dee's seer or an honest account of his psychic visions cannot be known, but the day after his arrival at Mortlake Kelley began to give evil reports about Saul's motives.

> March 9th, Fryday at dynner tyme Mr. Clerkson and Mr. Talbot declared a great deale of Barnabas nowghty dealing toward me, as in telling Mr. Clerkson ill things of me that I should mak his frend, as that he was wery of me, that I wold so flatter his frende the lerned man [Kelley] that I wold borow him of him. But his frend told me, before my wife and Mr. Clerkson, that a spirituall creature told him that Barnabas had censured both Mr. Clerkson and me. The injuries which this Barnabas had done me diverse wayes were very great.[19]

The results obtained by Kelley scrying in the crystal were so spectacular that Dee immediately gave up all interest in having any other seer. The men continued to work together in the closest association both in England and on the Continent until 1587, when they at last began to drift apart, separating completely in 1589. Dee heeded the command of Queen Elizabeth and returned to England, leaving Kelley to continue trying to manufacture gold for Emperor Rudolph II in Bohemia.

This rupture was Kelley's doing, not the work of Dee. Kelley died in a fall attempting to escape his imprisonment in one of Rudolph's castles. Until the day he learned of Kelley's death, Dee always hoped to be reunited with his seer and continued to refer to him as "my good friend."

Chapter Three

In the Thrall of the Angels

The Carrot and the Stick

During the years Dee and Kelley spent together, the Enochian angels exerted a profound effect on the lives of the two men and on the lives of their families. Indeed, from the night Dee first heard the rapping of the spirits in his bedroom, he became their unknowing instrument. Kelley was drawn into their hidden purposes the day he met Dee at Mortlake. It is frequently speculated that Kelley manipulated Dee for his private reasons, feeding him false visions that aided Kelly's pursuit of the secret of the red powder. This is not supported by Kelley's attitude toward the angels, one of mistrust and loathing.

In the fall of 1583, Dee and Kelley left England in the company of a Polish nobleman named Count Albert Laski, Palatine of Saradia. Laski had first visited Mortlake on March 18 that same year seeking arcane wisdom, and was soon pulled into the Enochian communications. The angels predicted great political advancement for Laski, who quite naturally was flattered and excited by the prospect of gaining the Polish crown. However, on July 2 the speech of the angels took a menacing turn:

> Madimi: The Lord Treasurer and he [Walsingham] are joyned together, and they hate thee. I heard them when they both said, thou wouldst go mad shortly: Whatsoever they can do against thee, assure thy self of. They will shortly lay a bait for thee; but eshew them.

Dee: Lord have mercy upon me: what bait, (I beseech you) and by whom?

Madimi: They have determined to search thy house: But they stay untill the Duke [Laski] be gone.

Dee: What would they search it for?

Madimi: They hate the Duke, (both) unto the death....

Dee: Lord, what is thy counsel to prevent all?

Madimi: The speech is general, The wicked shall not prevail.

Dee: But will they enter to search my house, or no?

Madimi: Immediately after the Duke his going they will.

Dee: To what intent? What do they hope to finde?

Madimi: They suspect the Duke is inwardly a Traytor.

Dee: They can by no means charge me, no not for so much as of a Trayterous thought.

Madimi: Though thy thoughts be good, they cannot comprehend the doings of the wicked. In summe, they hate thee. Trust them not...

Dee: I pray you make more plain your counsel.

Madimi: My counsel is plain enough.

Dee: When, I prey you, is the Duke likely to go away?

Madimi: In the middle of August.

Dee: If in the midst of August he will go, and then our practises be yet in hand, what shall be done with such our [ritual] furniture is prepared, and standing in the Chamber of practise?

Madimi: Thou hast no faith. His going standeth upon the determinated purpose of God. He is your friend greatly, and intendeth to do much for you. He is prepared to do thee good, and thou art prepared to do him service.[1]

Neither Dee nor Kelley had any wish to leave England, but they were manipulated into doing so by the carrot and stick of the angels. They thought they would be serving God and would gain worldly benefit if they accompanied Laski, but that Dee would be arrested for treason if he remained at Mortlake. The threat to Dee was completely false, but he believed it. Throughout his life he suffered from a persecution mania. He was always ready to believe that men in high places plotted against him. Kelley's fortunes were bound up with Dee, his employer. He hoped to use Dee to help him, through the revelations of the angels, to discover the making of the red powder. Since Dee was determined to leave England, Kelley felt compelled go with him.

The angels have little to say about how Dee is to find the money to close up his house and move his wife, children and servants to Poland, although he asks them with a tone that borders on desperation:

Dee: Because it hath been said, that in the beginning of our Country troubles we should be packing hence into his [Laski's] Country; What token shall we have of that time approaching, or at hand?

Madimi: Your watchword is told you before: When it is said unto you, Venite, &.

Dee: But (I beseech you) to be ready against that watchword, hearing what is to be done, as concerning our wives and children into his Country.

Madimi: Miraculous is thy care (O God) upon those that are thy chosen, and wonderful are the wayes that thou hast prepared for them.[2]

Kelley Betakes Himself to the World

Kelley had already experienced the manipulations of the angels in his private life. When he first met Dee, he was a bachelor. On April 29, 1582, the angel Michael commanded him to betake himself "to the world." Explaining this curious commandment to Dee, Kelley says: "It is that I shall marry, which thing to do I have no natural inclination, neither with a safe conscience may I do it contrary to my vow and profession."[3] Presumably, he referred to the vow of celibacy and the profession of alchemy. On May 4 Dee records of the angels, "they willed him [Kelley] to marry."

The angels had their way. Kelley married a nineteen-year-old named Joanna (or Joan) Cooper, a girl from Chipping Norton—a town near Oxford that Richard Deacon calls "one of the most notorious haunts of witchcraft in England in Tudor times."[4] Kelley must have known this girl previous to the command of the angels that he wed, and it may be conjectured that she shared some of his occult interests, although there is no evidence that this was their common bond. Francesco Pucci, writing to Dee in 1586, described Joanna Kelley as "a rare example of youthful holiness, chastity and all the virtues."[5]

Since Kelley had never wanted the marriage, it quickly became unbearable to him. On July 4, 1583, Kelley admitted in a rage to Dee: "I cannot abide my wife, I love her not, nay I abhor her; and there in the house I am misliked, because I favour her no better."[6] After Kelley stormed out of Dee's house, Dee remarked to his own wife, "Jane, this man is marvallously out of quiet against his Wife, for her friends their bitter reports against him behind his back, and her silence thereat, &."[7] This row was smoothed over, but the unwanted marriage was never really happy.

In the Tongue of Angels

Besides compelling Dee and Kelley to move all over central Europe for the next several years, the angels cast Dee into the unwilling role of prophet. He was to travel about and meet with the great leaders of Poland and Bohemia and declare the teachings of the angels. It mattered little to the angels that those teachings were heretical.

Very much against his desire and better judgment, they compelled him to seek out an audience with the Emperor Rudolph II at Prague on September 3, 1584, and to deliver a lecture on morals. That he did so showed great courage, since the power of Rudolph was almost absolute, and Dee's magical activities were of a kind likely to get him burned at the stake for witchcraft. Rudolph must have been a remarkably patient man, restraining himself as Dee declared to him:

> The Angel of the Lord hath appeared to me, and rebuketh you for your sins. If you will hear me, and believe me, you shall Triumph: If you will not hear me, The Lord, the God that made Heaven and Earth, (under whom you breath, and have your spirit) putteth his foot against your breast, and will throw you headlong down from your seat.
>
> Moreover, the Lord hath made this Covenant with me (by oath) that he will do and perform. If you will forsake your wickednesse, and turn unto him, your Seat shall be the greatest that ever was: and the Devil shall become your prisoner: Which Devil, I did conjecture, to be the Great Turk, (said I) This my Commission, is from God: I feigne nothing, neither am I an Hypocrite, an Ambitious man, or doting, or dreaming in this Cause.[8]

It is easy to imagine the sheer astonishment of Rudolph at the crazy audacity of Dee in saying such things to his face. Perhaps he dismissed Dee as a madman. Dee was unable to secure future audiences, even though the angel Uriel ordered Dee to write to Rudolph saying he possessed the secret of the Philosopher's Stone, which he would reveal to the Emperor at their next meeting. Rudolph sent one of his spies, a Doctor Curtz (or Kurtz) to find out more details about the magic used by Dee and Kelley and to obtain Dee's diaries of the scrying sessions and Dee's crystal. Fortunately, Dee was cautious enough not to send his books and instruments to the Emperor.

When the angels ordered Dee and Kelley to go from Prague to Cracow to meet with the Polish king Stephen Bathori, Dee hesitated until after he received letters from Laski inviting him to Cracow. The angels were furious that Dee should doubt their command, and cursed him:

> When the Lord had thee go, if thou had'st so done, and had'st not taken thine own time, more had been given unto him [Laski], and more had been added unto thee.
>
> But now Letters came, that have passed through the hands of Sodomites and Murderers, (through whose hands they are accursed,) you rejoice, you receive comfort, you determine to goe.
>
> But if you had left those letters behind you, had come when I bad you go. Then had my Name been untouched.
>
> Therefore is the Lord angry, and forgetteth not this offense.
>
> For he that dealeth with me, dealeth not as with a man, for I have nothing in me tied to time, much lesse hath he that sent me.[3]

The angels then cursed Dee and his children for five generations because of his slowness in obeying their command. Utterly terrified, Dee begged that the curse be lifted, crying: "Lord, I am heartily sorry, I bewaile with teares this great offence, thou seest my contrite heart, O God, O God, O God." Apparently, this groveling worked. Dee was greatly relieved as the angels lifted the curse.

> After this we [Dee and Kelley] sat and considered, and perceived, and confessed the greatnesse of our offence, how it concerned much the Honour and Glory of God, if we had gone without receiving the advertisement of those Letters; So should they hear (the [Polish nobles]) and the King St[ephen] have perceived that we had the direction of God, and of his good Angels, and not to have depended upon mans letters, or perswasions...[3]

"Use Them in Common"

The strangest and most interesting example of the authority exerted by the Enochian angels over Dee and Kelley is the infamous wife-swapping affair. In the spring of 1587, Kelley grew increasingly reluctant to scry into the stone. He wanted to turn all his efforts to alchemy, and advised Dee to employ his eldest son Arthur as seer. Several times in their relationship he had threatened to leave Dee in Bohemia and return alone to England, but this time he was emphatic. Dee reluctantly tested the seven-year-old Arthur as a scryer.

The boy proved completely unfit for the job. Dee begged Kelley to resume his duties, and Kelley allowed himself to be persuaded. He confessed the real reason for his latest dislike of the angels. They had ordered him to inform Dee that he and Dee should use their wives in common. They told him that if he refused this command, he was free to cease all communications with them.

When the angel Madimi appeared to Kelley after young Arthur's failed attempt to scry, Kelley was incensed:

> Madimi openeth all her apparel, and her self all naked; and sheweth her shame also.
>
> E.K.: Fie on thee, Devil avoid hence with this filthiness, &.
>
> Madimi: In the Name of God, why finde you fault with mee?
>
> Dee: Because your yesterdayes doings, and words are provocations to sin, and unmeet for any godly creature to use.
>
> Madimi: What is sin?
>
> Dee: To break the Commandement of God.
>
> Madimi: Set that down, so. If the self-same God give you a new Commandement taking away the former form of sin which he limited by the Law; What remaineth then?[3]

At first Dee would not believe that the command was intended in a carnal sense. Kelley knew better.

> I was glad that an offer was made of being every seventh day to be taught the secrets of the books already delivered unto us: Thinking that it was easie for us to perform that unity which was required to be amongst us four; understanding all after the Christian and godly sense. But E.K. who had yesterday seen and heard another meaning of this unity required, utterly abhorred to have any dealings with them farther, and did intend to accept at their hands the liberty of leaving off to deal with them any more..."[12]

Dee required some clear proof that the angels really did intend that each should have intercourse with the other's wife. The command appeared written in Latin on a white crucifix. Dee was shocked. The faith he had placed in the angels seemed to crumble away beneath his feet.

> Hereupon we were in great amazement and grief of minde, that so hard, and (as it, yet seemed unto me) so unpure a Doctrine, was popounded and enjoyned unto us of them, whom I alwayes (from the beginning hitherto) did judge and esteem, undoubtedly, to be good Angels: And had unto E.K. offered my soul as a pawn, to discharge E.K. his crediting of them, as the good and faithful Ministers of Almighty God. But now, my heart was sore afflicted upon many causes: And E.K. had (as he thought) now, a just and sufficient cause, to forsake dealing with them any more.[13]

It did not take Dee long to reconcile himself to this strange doctrine, however. That same night when he left Kelley and went to his bedroom he discovered his wife lying awake, waiting to hear the latest teachings of the angels. "I then told her, and said, Jane, I see that there is no other remedy, but as hath been said of our cross-matching, so it must needs be done. Thereupon she fell a weeping and trembling for a quarter of an hour: And I pacified her as well as I could; and so, in the fear of God, and in believing of his Admonishment, did perswade her that she shewed herself prettily resolved to be content for God his sake and his secret Purposes, to obey the Admonishment."[14]

The four signed a solemn covenant on April 18, 1587. They agreed to "this most new and strange doctrine" and enjoined the angels to fulfill their part of the bargain and deliver the final teachings in Enochian magic as they had promised. They pledged: "we will for thy sake herein captivate and tread under foot all our humane timorous doubting of any inconvenience which shall or may fall upon us, or follow us (in this world, or in the world to come) in respect, or by reason of our embracing of this Doctrine..."[15]

In return, they expected the angels to reward them for their obedience. Dee writes:

> Now it was by the women as by our selves thought necessary to understand the will of God and his good pleasure, Whether this Covenant and form of words performed, is and will be acceptable, and according to the well liking of his Divine Majesty: And that hereupon, the act of corporal knowledge being performed on both our parts, it will please his Divine Majesty to seal and warrant unto us most certainly and speedily all his Divine, Merciful and bountiful Promises and Blessings; and also promises us wisdome, knowledge, ability and power to execute his justice, and declare and demonstrate his infallible verity amongst men, to his honour and glory.[16]

How long the four continued in their communal marriage is not known. The account of the wife-swapping Covenant is almost the final incident recorded concerning the occult partnership between Dee and Kelley. It has been speculated that the cross-matching was unsuccessful, but there seems no basis for this belief, other than the fact that Kelley and Dee drifted apart soon after the Covenant was signed. However, the reason for this may have been Kelley's growing acclaim as an alchemist, which caused him to spend more time in the company of the Emperor Rudolph and other Bohemian nobility. Kelley put on a good enough show for Rudolph to persuade the King to give him the title eques auratus, which in England was later interpreted as a knighthood. Dee referred to Kelley as a "Baron of the Kingdom of Bohemia."[17]

It might be speculated that if the angels fulfilled the promises made to the two men, Kelley was gifted with the ability to manufacture the genuine red powder, at least for a short period. As fanciful as this notion may be, it would explain Kelley's sudden success as an alchemist. Dee's eldest son, Arthur, always maintained in later life that he had actually seen Kelley make gold in Bohemia,[18] and had played on the floor with the new gold bars. Whatever the truth, Kelley enjoyed a sudden fame and wealth in Bohemia that attracted the attention of the Emperor.

There is no record of how Joanna Kelley felt about the cross-matching arrangement, but she was probably just as horrified as the other three partners. The exchange of wives (or husbands, depending on how you look at it) was carried out only because of the great gifts of knowledge and power promised by the angels if Dee and Kelley would, once and for all, prove their faith. There is little evidence to suggest that lust was the motivating factor, at least on the part of the human beings involved.

A Gnostic Union?

It is common for modern critics to regard the whole affair as a trick by Kelley to sleep with Jane Dee. They say the incident is out of character with the rest of the Enochian communications, that Kelley was deeply unhappy with his own wife, and perhaps infatuated with Jane Dee. This is to view the matter from a jaded, modern perspective which dismisses the sanctity of the marriage vow. Adultery was a serious crime in Elizabethan times, particularly to those men and women who considered themselves good Christians.

I see no reason to suspect that Kelley is any less sincere in his expression of horror than Dee or his wife. As for it being out of character for the angels, they had previously delivered several radical doctrines to Kelley that can only be described as Gnostic, or at least non-Christian:

> – That Jesus was not God.
> – That no prayer ought to be made to Jesus.
> – That there is no sin.
> – That mans soul doth go from one body, to another childes quickening or animation.
> – That as many men and women as are now, have always been: That is, so many humane bodies, and humane souls, neither more nor lesse, as are now, have alwayes been.
> – That the generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not an History, but a writing which hath an other sense.
> – No Holy Ghost they acknowledged.
> – They would not suffer him to pray to Jesus Christ; but would rebuke him, saying, that he robbed God of his honour, etc.[19]

The question then becomes, what was the motive of the angels? In my opinion, it was to bring about a symbolic union between Dee and Kelley. Remember, the angels regarded Dee and Kelley as two halves of a single living unit that would transmit their system of magic to humanity. Both were necessary, and neither could succeed without the full dedication of the other. Since neither Dee nor Kelley would ever have agreed to a homosexual union to bind themselves together spiritually with the occult energies of sex, the angels chose the next best option and used the wives as surrogates. Each wife represents her husband. In Christianity, husband and wife are one flesh. By lying with Jane Dee, Kelley was uniting with an extension of Dee himself; similarly, by taking Joanna Kelley to his bed, Dee joined in a symbolic manner with Kelley.

There is a great deal of Gnostic imagery in the Enochian communications and Keys, and one of the features of Gnosticism is the use of sexual energy to bring about a union with the divine in order to achieve a heightened spiritual awareness and an enlightened mind. This technique of using sex for spiritual awakening is common around the world. It is employed in European shamanism, in Voudoun, and in Tantric sects in India, China, and Tibet. It also finds frequent occurrence among some schools of modern Western magic such as the Odo Templi Orientis, which is closely associated with the teachings of Aleister Crowley.

It is frustrating that the Enochian diaries break off so soon after the exchange of the wives. Suitably empowered with sexual energy, the revelations of the subsequent scrying sessions probably contained many profound secrets. Perhaps the teachings on how to actually employ the Watchtowers and Keys of Enochian magic so earnestly sought by Dee were delivered in the weeks and months following the union of the four. Perhaps, as I suggested above, Kelley learned the manufacture of the red powder. If so, the transcription of those conversations have never been discovered. If there was any such record, it appears to have been lost forever.

Chapter Four

Enochian Magic and the Apocalypse

The Purpose of the Angels

Why did the angels deliver Enochian magic to John Dee? It seems this question is never asked by those who study Dee and his angelic transcripts. Scholars tend to dismiss the teachings of the angels as either deliberate conscious deceptions by Kelley, or airy fantasies called up from the depths of his unconscious mind during the scrying sessions. Modern Enochian magicians, when they consider the matter at all, seem content to accept the explanation of the angels that the magic was a fulfillment of the patriarch Enoch's wish that the wisdom of the angels be taught to the human race.

Knowing why the magic was given to Dee is central to understanding its real purpose. Dee believed the magic was a reward for his service to the angels in conveying their message to the rulers of Europe. He saw himself as their prophet, and thought that at some time in the near future the angels would give him permission to perform the initial eighteen-day ritual of evocation that would allow him to use the spirits of the Watchtowers for his own personal ends.

A Covenant Unfulfilled

In essence, Dee regarded his dealings with the angels as a legal contract. Enochian magic was payment for services rendered. This is a familiar pattern in medieval magic. The witch's pact with the Devil (if it ever truly existed) involved acts of evil performed in exchange for occult powers the witch might then use to fulfill his or her desires. The black pact between ceremonial magicians and the Devil is essentially the same as the witch's pact, save that the magician usually got the power first and pledged to turn over his soul to the Devil after the date of his death (the time of which might be specified in the pact).

The Book of Spirits mentioned in Chapter One is another form of binding agreement between magician and spirits. By signing the Book, the spirits evoked by the magician pledge their obedience. The Book of Spirits is separate from the black pact. A magician, if he or she was spiritually pure, could gain the sworn obedience of spirits merely by calling upon the authority of God without having to offer services or sacrifices in return. This is how John Dee understood his blank book of forty-eight silvered leaves.

Dee viewed his arrangement with the Enochian angels as similar to the Covenant between the ancient Hebrews and IHVH. Indeed, he may have seen himself as a latter-day Moses. God, through his messengers, talked to Dee, and Dee carried these divine teachings and commandments to the kings and leaders of different peoples. He regarded the "cross-matching" of the wives as a test of his faith, similar to the test of Abraham's faith when God commanded Abraham to sacrifice his first-born son Isaac (Genesis 22:2). He specifically calls the letter to God signed by himself, Kelley, and their wives, in which they agree to exchange bed partners, a "Covenant," and mentions in it their "Abraham-like faith and obedience unto thee our God."[1]

There is no mention made in the Covenant of specific payment by God for the obedience of Dee, Kelley and their wives, but previously the spirit Madimi sets forth the form of compensation:

> Behold, if you resist not God, but shut out Satan (through unity amongst you) thus it is said unto you, Assemble your selves together every seventh day, that your eyes may be opened, and that you may understand by him that shall teach you, what the secrets of the holy books (delivered you) are: That you may become full of understanding, and in knowledge above common men."[2]

Every seventh day is Monday, the Sabbath or holy day of the Enochian angels.

"Instruments of Thrashing"

It seems implausible that the angels, who throughout the conversations show concern only for their own purposes, should convey with great difficulty over a period of years the system of Enochian magic purely for the benefit of Dee and Kelley. When Dee and Kelley request aid from the angels on personal matters, the angels either put them off with vague promises or tell them outright that human concerns do not interest them. With the possible exception of Madimi, who came most often in the form of a young girl and formed a close personal relationship with Dee, the angels show no affection for the men.

The Enochian angels manipulated Dee and Kelley as unwitting instruments to achieve their own higher purpose. The angels planted the system of Enochian magic among humankind for angelic reasons. These had nothing whatsoever to do with the wishes of either Dee or Kelley. Indeed, they have nothing to do with the desires of mortal humanity, and it is extremely naïve for any modern Enochian magician to believe that Enochian magic was delivered to the earth for his or her personal benefit.

The angels intend that Enochian magic be used to initiate the process of violent and destructive transformation linking our present aeon, which is ending, with the new aeon that is about to dawn—a transformation like that described in the biblical book of Revelation. In many places throughout the angelic conversations, the words of the angels are filled with apocalyptic imagery. Gabriel expresses this higher purpose very clearly while speaking with the authority of God, although Dee probably failed to gather the full implications of his words.

> I have chosen you, to enter into my barns: And have commanded you to open the Corn, that the scattered may appear, and that which remaineth in the sheaf may stand. And have entered into the first, and so into the seventh. And have delivered unto you the Testimony of my spirit to come.
>
> For, my Barn hath been long without Threshers. And I have kept my flayles for a long time hid in unknown places: Which flayle is the Doctrine that I deliver unto you: Which is the Instrument of thrashing, wherewith you shall beat the sheafs, that the Corn which is scattered, and the rest may be all one.
>
> (But a word in the mean season.)
>
> If I be Master of the Barn, owner of the Corn, and deliverer of my flayle: If all be mine. (And unto you, there is nothing: for you are hirelings, whose reward is in heaven.)
>
> Then see, that you neither thresh, nor unbinde, untill I bid you, let it be sufficient unto you: that you know my house, that you know the labour I will put you to: That I favour you so much as to entertain you the labourers within my Barn: For within it thresheth none without my consent.[3]

The Blindness of John Dee

Dee firmly believed that the angels intended to honor him as their prophet and spokesman to the princes and potentates of the world. He seems never to have asked himself why the angels chose to bestow upon him the precious system of Enochian magic, but simply accepted it as a reward for his lifelong piety. He regarded himself as chosen by God, and did not question the choice. Kelley, on the other hand, always believed the angels were deceiving and using them. He judged they were demons in disguise.

It is difficult to understand how Dee could have remained ignorant of the implications of Enochian magic. The reason the angels chose Dee as the human instrument to record its details was his intellectual genius, his extensive knowledge of ciphers and his skill in the mathematical magic of the Kabbalah. Dee was one of the few men of his age willing and able to receive such a transmission, and clever enough to make sense of it.

Opening the Gates

The primary action of the magic is the opening of the gates of the four Watchtowers that stand at the corners of the world. Each Watchtower has twelve gates, which lead to twelve angelic "cities" or dimensions of reality. The gates of the Watchtowers are opened by means of the forty-eight Keys or Calls (the angels use both names). They may be termed Calls because they evoke the angelic hierarchies from the cities, through the gates of the Watchtowers, and into our universe. The leader of each hierarchy (named on the squares of the Watchtowers) and his numerous followers have specific functions recorded by Dee in his Latin manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris.[4]

Dee was aware of the angelic teaching that the disobedience of Adam was responsible for the curse of God upon the Earth. The Earth is regarded by the angels as a goddess. The Watchtowers were established at the moment time began, which was when Adam was expelled from the Garden: "But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world her time, and placed over her Angelic Keepers, Watchmen and Princes."[5] We know that the Watchtowers are equivalent to the Watchmen from Kelley's great vision of the Watchtowers, expounded by the angel Ave: "The 4 houses, are the 4 Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and Watch-towers...."[6]

The universe of time, in which exists human consciousness, is established and maintained like a little bubble in the vast sea of eternity. It is the Watchtowers that sustain the bubble's cohesion. The Watchtowers are equivalent to the four pillars of Egyptian mythology that support the sky and keep it from crashing chaotically down upon the earth. The four ruling angels in the towers (who are not really separate from the towers but part of them) are time keepers—they maintain and regulate the laws of cause and effect.

To open the gates of the Watchtowers is to mingle the eternal with the temporal, to admit the angels into our world: not only the holy angels who follow God's plan and execute his judgment during the transformation known as the apocalypse, but the fallen angels who sinned with the daughters of men, and who will act as instruments of punishment. It is in this sense that Enochian magic is the "instrument of thrashing." Elsewhere, the angel Mapsama tells Dee: "You called for wisdom, God hath opened unto you, his Judgement: He hath delivered unto you the keyes, that you may enter...."[7] A gate, once opened, permits travel in either direction.

The Doctrine of the Angels

Both the language of the Keys and the conversation of the angels are filled with apocalyptic imagery. The angels seem to introduce it in an almost random way when Dee is asking about the health of distant friends or trying to get money to travel, or when Kelley is attempting to wheedle from them the secret of the red powder. However, this description of the manner in which the goddess Earth will be punished and tormented because she harbors sinful humankind is the true doctrine of the angels, as Mapsama tells Dee:

> The heavens are called righteous, because of their obedience. The earth accursed, because of her frowardnesse. Those therefore, that seek heavenly things, ought to be obedient; lest with their frowardnesse, they be consumed in the end, burnt to ashes with fire, as the Earth shall be for her unrighteousnesse.[8]

This, in a nutshell, is the doctrine the angels have Dee preaching to the crowned heads of Poland and Bohemia. The forwardness, or impudence, of the goddess Earth lies in her providing sustenance and shelter to incarnated human souls. The goddess Earth offers bits of her own body to human souls, and from these bits they form their bodies of flesh. At the same time, they become one flesh with the goddess, and thus her children. The stated necessity to punish her, and erring human souls, is the justification the Enochian angels offer for the coming apocalypse.

Dee understood the apocalypse in the traditional Christian sense. This is not exactly the same as the way the Enochian angels understand it. To Dee, the apocalypse was to be a series of physical disasters brought about by the angelic agents of God at the will of God and at a preordained time. However, it is implicit from the Enochian conversations that the apocalypse will begin with the opening of the gates of the Watchtowers, and that these gates can only be opened by humankind from the inside. Enochian magic is the tool delivered by the angels that will enable humankind to open the gates.

"Invocation Proceedeth of the Good Will of Man"

We know that the angels cannot open the gates from the outside because to open them requires the use of evocation (or as the angels term it, invocation). This is not within the power of angels, as Ave tells Dee:

Dee: As for the form of our Petition or Invitation of the good Angels, what sort should it be of?

Ave: A short and brief speech.

Dee: We beseech you to give us an example: we would have a confidence, it should be of more effect.

Ave: I may not do so.

Kelley: And why?

Ave: Invocation proceedeth of the good will of man, and of the heat and fervency of the spirit: And therefore is prayer of such effect with God.

Dee: We beseech you, shall we use one form to all?

Ave: Every one, after a divers form.

Dee: If the minde do dictate or prompt a divers form, you mean.

Ave: I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man[3]

Evocation (calling out) and invocation (calling in) are functions of human free will. Spiritual beings must be invoked into our reality by human beings. We must open the gates and admit the servants of Coronzon (the Enochian name for Lucifer) ourselves. Evocation and invocation are not a part of the business of angels, but of humans.

The angels can manipulate the time of the apocalypse by veiling or revealing the true knowledge of the Watchtowers and the Keys as it suits their purposes. They made very clear to Dee that he was not to work the ritual evocation of the Keys without their express permission, which was never granted in Dee's lifetime. To be doubly sure, they withheld details of the working. Although they promised to reveal these details after the fulfillment of the Covenant, there is no evidence that they kept their word. If they did, the manuscript appears to have been lost.

"I Have Nothing in Me Tied to Time"

The understanding of the apocalypse held by fundamentalist Christians is that it will be primarily a series of physical disasters provoked by physical agents. The angels of judgment will appear upon the surface of the Earth in unpleasant physical bodies and sow material plagues, cause volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, and so on. This is a painfully materialistic understanding. The agents of the apocalypse are spirits, and spirits have no bodies. They exist in the astral world and cannot directly affect the physical world.

For angels to affect the physical world, they must use human beings as their fleshy instruments. They do this by controlling the behavior of human beings through the unconscious mind. By manipulating humans they are then able to cause those humans to change the physical world. Indeed, it is only through the media of human perceptions that angels are able to perceive the physical universe. That is why it was necessary for souls to incarnate in the first place. Human beings are incarnated angels.

The limitation of angelic awareness is indicated by the angel Gabriel, who, when asked by Dee for some information about Albert Laski (who was not present), states: "When we enter into him, we know him; but from him, he is scarce known unto us..."[10] The difficulty arises because angels dwell in eternity and men dwell in time. An unnamed angel says to Dee: "For he that dealeth with me, dealeth not as with a man; for I have nothing in me tied to time, much lesse hath he that sent me."[11] This great difficulty the angels have in handling time may account for the nonsequential way the Enochian teachings were received.

In my opinion, the apocalypse prepared by the Enochian angels must be primarily an internal, spiritual event, and only in a secondary way an external physical catastrophe. The gates of the Watchtowers that stand guard at the four corners of our dimension of reality are mental constructions. When they are opened, they will admit the demons of Coronzon—not into the physical world, but into our subconscious minds.

Spirits are mental, not material. They dwell in the depths of mind and communicate with us through our dreams, unconscious impulses, and more rarely in waking visions. They affect our feelings and our thoughts beneath the level of our conscious awareness. Sometimes they are able to control our actions, either partially as in the case of irrational and obsessive behavior patterns, or completely as in the case of full possession. Through us, by using us as their physical instruments, and only through us, are they able to influence physical things.

The Demons Within Ourselves

The Enochian communications teach us that not only must humanity itself initiate the cosmic drama of the apocalypse through the magical formula delivered to John Dee and Edward Kelley more than four centuries ago, but humans must also be the physical actors that bring about the plagues, wars, and famines described with such chilling eloquence in the vision of St. John. We must let the demons of Coronzon into our minds by means of a specific ritual working. They will not find a welcome place there all at once, but will worm their way into our subconscious and make their homes there slowly over a period of years or even decades. In the minds of individuals that resist this invasion they will find it difficult to gain a foothold, but in the more pliable minds of those who welcome their influence they will establish themselves readily.

Once they have taken up residence, we will be powerless to prevent them turning our thoughts and actions toward chaotic and destructive ends. These apocalyptic spirits will set person against person and nation against nation, gradually increasing the degree of madness and chaos in human society until at last the full horror of Revelation has been realized upon the stage of the world. The corruption of human thoughts and feelings may require generations to bring to full fruition. Only after the wasting and burning of souls is well advanced will the full horror of the apocalypse achieve its final fulfillment in the material realm.

Apocalypse Is Not Preordained

What the Enochian angels intended the Keys to accomplish, and what the Keys are actually able to do, may be entirely different. Spirits are not infallible. They often deceive human beings, and sometimes even themselves. Simply because the angels believed this system of magic could trigger the apocalypse does not necessarily mean it can do so. It does not even mean that there is, or will be, such a thing as an apocalypse.

However, it seems clear that it was the intention of the angels that the Keys be ritually applied to the Watchtowers, not so that human beings could learn divine secrets of nature, as Dee believed, but to open the way for the demons of Coronzon to enter into our unconscious minds. Once firmly established in our personal unconscious, these spirits would then be able to gain an increasing control over our physical world by manipulating our perceptions, emotions and thoughts.

Enochian magic has been used for over a century by modern magicians working in the Golden Dawn tradition and its derivatives without any obvious signs of initiating a universal Armageddon. It is evident that it can be employed for personal reasons, even though this is not the primary function intended by the angels who delivered it. Modern magicians do not perform the full eighteen-day invocation that was to be the catalytic trigger of the apocalypse. The details of this complex Apocalypse Working (as I call it) were probably never delivered to Dee and Kelley, although it may be possible to reconstruct its outline. Instead, modern magicians nibble at the edges of Enochian magic, using various aspects of it in their ritual practices. Even incomplete and misapplied, it is a highly potent form of magic.

It may be that Enochian magic was deliberately designed by the angels to be an effective system of personal magic in order to insure its survival and continuous use by human beings. What better way to guarantee that the system will still be understood in a practical way when the angels at last determine that the time has come to nudge some chosen magician, through visions and insights, into performing the Apocalypse Working? In the meantime, individual Enochian magicians have been able to use the system for their own private ends, and will go on doing so.

Chapter Five

The History of Enochian Magic

Robert Cotton Buys a Library

After Dee's death in 1608, his library was sold to the antiquarian Sir Robert Bruce Cotton (1570–1631). Cotton also acquired at least some of Dee's magical apparatus, including his scrying table, one of his crystals, and the wax seals used to support both the crystal and the legs of the table. Some of these objects afterwards made their way into the British Museum collection via the Cottonian Library. The stone was acquired by the British Museum in later years. The table was extant in Meric Causabon's day. The brass engraving of its top, pictured at the beginning of A True and Faithful Relation, was copied from the original design. This table has since disappeared.

The history of the transcript of the angelic conversations is curious, since it reveals an almost supernatural survival of some of the manuscripts. Those acquired by Cotton (part of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum) make up the content of Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Charlotte Fell Smith called these "the last thirteen books" of the transcript.[1] They cover the period from May 28, 1583, to April 2, 1587, with increasingly large gaps of time toward the end of the record. They resume again, briefly, in the year 1607 from March 20 to

September 7. During this latter period, Dee relied on the inferior scrying services of Bartholomew Hickman. The 1607 transcripts contain nothing of value. The gap between the last scrying session with Kelley and the first recorded session with Hickman is called by Casaubon "a vast chasma or hiatus."[2]

About the books of the transcript that were published by Casaubon, John Aubrey wrote: "Meridith Lloyd sayes that John Dee's printed booke of Spirits is not above the third part of what was writt, which were in Sir Robert Cotton's library; many whereof were much perished by being buryed, and Sir Robert Cotton bought the field to digge after it."[3] About this burying of the manuscripts, Casaubon states: "The Book had been buried in the Earth, how long, years or moneths, I know not; but so long, though it was carefully kept since, yet it retained so much of the Earth, that it began to moulder and perish some years ago, which when Sir Thomas C. [Robert Cotton's son] ... observed, he was at the charges to have it written out, before it should be too late."[4]

Buried in the Earth?

The notion that Dee's magical books were buried in a field to prevent discovery is very romantic, but seems too far-fetched to be taken seriously. More likely, the mold on the transcript was the result of careless storage before Cotton acquired it. However, it is possible that Dee or his eldest son Arthur (1579–1651) took the extreme measure of interment to ensure that the angelic conversations remain secret. Arthur was upset about Casaubon's book, which was published eight years before his own death. This annoyance had nothing to do with the content of the book, since Arthur himself was involved in occult and alchemical experiments. He simply did not want the teachings of the angels known, and did not wish his father's name associated with them.

Some of Dee's lost diaries and other papers passed into Arthur's hands. Apparently, Arthur searched diligently for any instructions Dee might have left describing how to actually use Enochian magic. Deacon writes: "Arthur spent much time in his later years trying to recover his father's missing manuscripts, which were supposed to be scattered as far afield as Prague, Rome, Brussels and Amsterdam."[5] After Arthur's death "his remaining notes and any manuscripts belonging to his father seem to have been dissipated among his numerous children ... and, except for odd scraps of information here and there, to have been lost to posterity."[6]

The Secret Drawer In John Dee's Chest

The survival of Dee's transcript of the angelic conversations that took place prior to May 28, 1583, is even more remarkable. Casaubon knew nothing about their existence. Thirteen years after the publication of A True and Faithful Relation, the earlier papers fell into the hands of the antiquarian Elias Ashmole. Ashmole, who was well known around London as a buyer of old manuscripts, bartered them in exchange for a book from one of the warders of the Tower of London, who in turn had acquired them from his wife.

While courting her first husband, the wife of the warder had bought an old chest with a "very good lock and hinges of extraordinary neat work" from a shop. It had formerly belonged to the surgeon John Woodward, who probably bought it at Dee's estate sale in 1609. She kept the chest for twenty years without noticing anything odd about it. Then, while moving it one day, she heard a rattle inside. Her second husband pried up the bottom and discovered "a large secret drawer stuffed full of papers, and a rosary of olivewood beads with a cross, which had caused the rattle."[7]

The papers in Dee's chest covered the conversations with the angels from December 22, 1581, down to the beginning of Casaubon's book. They also contained the manuscripts 48 Claves Angelicae, De Heptarchia Mystica and Liber Scientiae Auxiliis et Victoriae Terrestris—a truly extraordinary treasure. Since some of it is written in Latin and the rest in Dee's rather crabbed hand, the Tower warder probably considered it of little value. Ashmole, of course, was delighted.

Early Enochian Scholars

Thanks to the scholarly care of Cotton and Ashmole, these manuscripts have survived to the present day. Ashmole spent considerable energy understanding the system of Enochian magic. Peter French writes about Ashmole that "he seems to have studied the 'Spiritual Diaries' seriously as a means of contacting angels. Ashmole's biographer, C. H. Josten, conjectures that he may even have attempted to repeat the angelic experiments."[8] Like Arthur Dee before him, Ashmole was, in the end, baffled by the missing instructions concerning the actual application of the Keys to the Watchtowers.

From time to time other scholars with occult inclinations have attempted to unravel the transcripts. There is an interesting section concerning the tables of Enoch in British Library manuscript Harley 6482. It is part of a larger magical workbook (Harley 6481–6) ascribed to the seventeenth-century Hermetic magician

Thomas Rudd, who published Dee's famous Preface to Euclid's Elements in 1651.

Enochian Magic in the Golden Dawn

Since the mini-revival of Enochian magic that took place in the middle of the seventeenth century, there does not appear to have been any serious attempt to understand and practice the teachings of the angels until the efforts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. A secret Victorian society dedicated to the practice of ritual magic, the Golden Dawn was founded in London in 1887 by three Freemasons determined to revive the intellectual magic of the Renaissance and create a true Rosicrucian society.

One of the founders, Samuel Liddell "MacGregor" Mathers (1854–1918), spent much of his time as a young man burrowing through the piles of dusty manuscripts in the library at the British Museum, where many of Dee's writings were kept. He undoubtedly read some of the angelic conversations in their original form, but seems to have derived most of his personal system of Enochian magic from the True and Faithful Relation. There is no mention in Golden Dawn Enochian magic of the material in Dee's Heptarchia Mystica, which is made up of angelic teachings recorded before the point where Casaubon's book begins.

The Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is almost completely concerned with the Great Table of the four Watchtowers and the forty-eight Keys or Calls, which Mathers was perceptive enough to relate to the Table. It deals only with the angels or spirits whose names may be extracted from the Watchtowers by a specific set of rules—there is no mention of the spirits of the Thirty Aethers, or the ninety-one geographical genii who rule the different regions of the world. Thus, Golden Dawn Enochian magic is only a portion of the magical system received by Dee and Kelley.

To his credit, Mathers was able to add, in a more or less intelligent way, many details concerning the Watchtowers that are not clearly stated in the angelic conversations. In Golden Dawn magic, the Watchtowers are explicitly connected with colors, signs of the zodiac, directions, letters of Tetragrammaton, and occult elements. These correspondences have immense usefulness in practical rituals that employ the Watchtowers. The Keys were related by Mathers (or one of his associates) to different parts of the Great Table, and to the spirits located in those parts, so that speaking a particular Key in Enochian evokes a particular spirit. The system of Enochian magic used in the Golden Dawn will be the subject of a later chapter.

Aleister Crowley

One of the young members of the Golden Dawn was Aleister Crowley (1875–1947). Crowley is the most famous magus of the twentieth century. When he was a young child, his mother (a member of the fanatical Plymouth Brethren sect) referred to him as the Beast. His young mind seized on this label as a revelation. In his autobiography he writes: "But my mother believed that I was actually Anti-christ of the Apocalypse...." [and above on the same page,] "I have never lost sight of the fact that I was in some sense or other the Beast 666."[5] Here, the Beast and the Antichrist are confused, but the confusion was his mother's, not Crowley's, who always understood himself to be merely the herald of the Antichrist.

Crowley eagerly devoured Golden Dawn magic. He was strongly drawn to the magic of the dark side—the goetia. His mentor in the Golden Dawn, Allan Bennett, warned him against this line of study, but Crowley paid no heed. This attraction to evil, coupled with his Bohemian habits, made him unpopular among the conservative leaders of the Order. Eventually, Crowley and the Golden Dawn parted company, but he continued to use the Golden Dawn teachings for the remainder of his life. More than with any other aspect of Golden Dawn magic, he was fascinated with the Enochian language and the Keys to the Watchtowers. Crowley considered himself a reincarnation of Edward Kelley, and to some extent he shared Kelley's scrying ability.

While wandering through Algeria in 1909, Crowley invoked the Enochian Aethers in reverse order from the twenty-eighth to the first, using the nineteenth Key for all of them. The Key for all thirty of the Aethers is the same save for the name of the Aether involved. Thus, the last thirty Keys are really a single Key that is applied to the thirty Aethers. Previously, while visiting Mexico in 1900, he had invoked the thirtieth and twenty-ninth Aethers, so he was merely taking up where he had left off.

Crowley's Invocation of the Aethers

His method of working was similar in some respects to that of Dee and Kelley. He would find a private place where he could be alone with his disciple, Victor Neuberg. Then he would recite the nineteenth Key with the name of the Aether he sought to invoke inserted in the text at the proper place. It is not clear to me whether he used the English or the Enochian version of the Key. The Enochian version would be correct practice, but in his Confessions he speaks of "changing two names" to suit the Key to each Aether. In the English version, two words must be changed for each Aether, but in the Enochian version, only one word. So perhaps Crowley invoked the Aethers using the English version of the nineteenth Key.

After sensing the presence of the angel of that Aether, he gazed into a large topaz that was set in a decorated wooden cross. Whatever he saw in the stone, or experienced more directly, he described. Neuberg sat beside him and wrote his words down in a notebook, just as Dee had recorded the words of Kelley more than three centuries earlier. This record formed the work known as the Vision and the Voice.

Crowley states in his autobiography, "We walked steadily to Bou Saâda, invoking the Aethyrs one by one, at convenient times and places, or when the spirit moved me. As a rule, we did one Aethyr every day."[10] He does not seem to have employed the first eighteen Keys while invoking the Aethers. He understood the eighteen preliminary Keys in the way they had been taught him by the Golden Dawn. Describing them, he says that the first two Keys relate to the quintessence, or elemental Spirit, while the next sixteen relate to the four elements in subdivisions of four. This is the Golden Dawn teaching.

Crowley demonstrated a sound intuitive comprehension of the Keys and the Watchtowers. He had trouble reconciling the various interpretations of the Aethers—whether they are concentric angelic spheres that lie beyond the bounds of the four Watchtowers, or angels whose names are written on the Watchtowers, or merely names for different geographical regions on the surface of the earth. This confusion is understandable, since nowhere does Dee write anything to clarify the matter.

Crowley chose to consider the Aethers in the first, most mystical sense. He describes the Watchtowers as "composing a cube of infinite magnitude."[11] This is above the usual understanding.

The Great Beast Unlocks the Gates

If, as I postulate earlier, Enochian magic was delivered by the angels to act as the catalyst for the apocalypse, it is interesting to note that the primary practitioner of that magic firmly considered himself to be the Great Beast of Revelation. After leaving the Golden Dawn, Crowley went on to create his own occult mythos. He saw himself as the herald for the dawning Aeon of Horus, which he believed began in April 1904, with his inspired reception of the Book of the Law, dictated to him by his guardian angel, Aiwass.

Crowley's guardian angel cast Crowley into a role similar to that forced upon John Dee by the Enochian angels. Crowley was both the sacred scribe and the prophet of the god Ra-Hoor-Khuit (Horus). His instruction was to record the sayings of the god and to spread his message across the world via the Book of the Law. "Now ye shall know that the chosen priest & apostle of infinite space is the prince-priest the Beast and in his woman; called the Scarlet Woman, is all power given. They shall gather my children into their fold: they shall bring the glory of the stars into the hearts of men."[12]

The Aeon of Horus may be understood in a general sense as similar to the astrological Age of Aquarius. Many ancient cultures divide time into a repeating series of ages, each age with its unique defining characteristics. For example, in the system of the Kabbalah, we are presently living in the Age of Geburah, which is characterized by severity and warfare. The next age will be the Age of Tiphareth, a time of harmony and peace. In Crowley's personal mythos, the dawning Aeon of Horus has supplanted the old Aeon of Osiris, the Egyptian god of death and rebirth that Crowley related to Jesus Christ.

There are some parallels between Crowley's angel-inspired Book of the Law and Dee's Key of the Thirty Aethers. In the Book of the Law is written: "We have nothing with the outcast and the unfit: let them die in their misery: For they feel not. Compassion is the vice of kings: stamp down the wretched & the weak: this is the law of the strong: this is our law and the joy of the world."[14] In the Key of the Thirty Aethers appear the words: "Govern those that govern; cast down such as fall; bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten."[15] Both these passages refer to the effects of karma, the cause and effect of the natural world. Elsewhere in the Book of the Law is written: "Yea! deem not of change: ye shall be as ye are, & not other. Therefore the kings of the earth shall be Kings for ever: the slaves shall serve. There is none that shall be cast down or lifted up: all is ever as it was."[15]

The Aeon of Horus is one of strife and warfare, even as the time of the apocalypse is a time of destruction. Horus states in the Book of the Law: "Now let it be first understood that I am a god of War and of Vengeance."[16] And elsewhere: "Mercy let be off: damn them who pity. Kill and torture; spare not; be upon them."[17] In the Key of the Thirty Aethers is written: "the reasonable creatures of Earth (or men), let them vex and weed out one another; and the dwelling places, let them forget their names; the work of man and his pomp, let them be defaced...."[18]

Crowley embraced the symbolism in Revelation, applied it to himself, and understood it with reference to his prophetic Book of the Law. He called himself the Great Beast, his wife (and later his various mistresses) the Scarlet Woman and the Whore of Babalon. In Enochian the word babalon means "wicked" and the word babalond means "whore"—thus the change in spelling of this word, although Crowley justified it on numerical grounds. He also interpreted the text of the Book of the Law to mean that his son would become the Antichrist. Concerning the Scarlet Woman, the Book of the Law states: "then will I breed from her a child mightier than all the kings of the earth."[19] This interpretation was an error: the Antichrist has yet to show himself.

There are no direct references in the Book of the Law to the Enochian Keys, although two places are suggestive. Part of the Book of the Law reads: "There are four gates to one palace; the floor of that palace is of silver and gold, lapis lazuli & jasper are there, and all rare scents jasmine & rose, and the emblems of death. Let him enter in turn or at once the four gates; let him stand on the floor of the palace."[20] This might be interpreted as a reference to the Great Table of the Watchtowers, which is four-sided and has four parts. Elsewhere is written: "in these are mysteries that no Beast shall divine. Let him not seek to try: but one cometh after him, whence I say not, who shall discover the key of it all."[21] If there really is a hidden connection between the Book of the Law and Enochian magic, perhaps this refers to the Enochian Keys.

Enochian Magic in the Modern World

Many modern groups that practice the form of ritual magic descended from the Golden Dawn (directly or via Crowley) use Enochian magic extensively. Particular notice might be taken of the Aurum Solis, an organization dedicated to Hermetic philosophy and magic founded in England in 1897, which claims to be completely independent of the Golden Dawn. The Aurum Solis teachings include the Great Table of the Watchtowers, the Keys, and the spirits of the thirty Aethers.[22] The late Anton LaVey, leader of the California-based Church of Satan, employed an edited version of the Keys that was derived from the writings of Aleister Crowley.

In the last few decades Enochian magic has undergone another period of rebirth. Increasingly, Dee's writings are finding their way into popular books of ceremonial magic. This process is slow, and it is unfortunate that no single text exists that contains the complete Enochian communications with the numerous Latin passages translated into English. However, enough of the material has emerged to present an overview of Enochian magic that is fairly complete, and to allow the magic to be used for practical ends.

CHAPTER SIX

The Tools of Enochian Magic

GIFTS FROM THE ANGELS

The articles of furniture for the scrying sessions were all added at the direction of the Enochian angels. At first, it appears than no special instruments were used. Dee placed one of his scrying crystals in a "frame" on the edge of his desk in his private study at Mortlake. This frame (given to him by a friend) is nowhere clearly described, but a small drawing of it made by Dee appears in the margin of the manuscript page dated December 22, 1581 (Sloane MS 3188, folio 8), beside the words "I thereupon, set by him, the stone in the frame."[1] The picture shows a frame with four outward-curved legs resting on a flat circular ring. The crystal itself is surrounded by a vertical band of the frame that leaves its front (and presumably its back) exposed. On the top of this band is a small cross. It may have been made of gold, since a gold frame is mentioned elsewhere.

On the first scrying with Kelley, which took place on March 10, 1582, the alchemist knelt on the floor in front of Dee's desk. He peered into the stone, which may have been placed in the sunlight beaming through the west-facing window of the study, in obedience to orders the angel Annael had delivered to Barnabas Saul on December 21, 1581. Kelley prayed aloud and invoked the angel Annael into the stone. Meanwhile, Dee retreated to his Oratory (a small room attached to his study) and entreated the appearance of the angels with prayers of his own. Within fifteen minutes, Kelley saw the angel Uriel in the stone.

The angels had informed Saul on December 21 that he and Dee might "deal both kneeling and sitting."[2] It is likely that Kelley soon began to use the green chair in the study, with the crystal in its stand on the edge of the desk. Dee sat on the other side of the desk, recording in his journals the events described by Kelley. Prayer was frequently used to encourage the angels to appear in the stone when they were slow to come. Dee fell into the habit of using prayer to both open and close the scrying sessions. These prayers appear to have been spontaneous compositions, not predetermined elements of a formal ritual. The appearance of the angels in the stone was often preceded by the withdrawing of a "golden curtain" from the depths of the stone.

Almost immediately, the angels began to describe to Kelley the essential ritual furniture the two would require for future communications. This consisted of the sacred stone, the Table of Practice, the seven Ensigns of Creation, the Sigillum Aemeth and four lesser sigils of the same pattern to be placed under the legs of the table, various silk cloths to be spread under and over the table, circular seals to be placed under the scryer's feet, a seal ring, and a lamen which contained a "token" of Dee's name hidden amongst its letters.

Dee continued to employ the Table of Practice, the Sigillum Aemeth, and the angelic stone throughout his association with Kelley. It is probable that he also continued to use the other ritual objects, although they are not mentioned in the later transcript. Dee considered these things essential to the success of the communications because they had been explicitly prescribed by the angels themselves. However, it should be noted that Kelley first established communication quite easily without them.

The Seal Ring

The seal ring was delivered on March 14 by the angel Michael. Charlotte Fell Smith states that this was a physical ring,[3] presumably going on the assumption that it was a plant by Kelley to impress Dee. This may be a misreading of the transcript on her part. The angel Michael makes the seal ring appear out of the flames of his sword, then says to Dee through Kelley: "After this sort must be the ring. Note it. I will reveal thee this ring, which was never revealed since the death of Solomon, with whom I was present."[4] The implication is that the ring is the same as Solomon's fabled seal ring. Then Michael sets the ring down on the table of practice and has Dee note it with care. "After that he threw the ring down upon the table and it seemed to fall through the table."[5]

The transcript of the conversations can sometimes be misleading. The passage quoted above probably means that Kelley described Michael setting down the ring, described the ring in detail to Dee, then told how the angel threw the ring through the tabletop. The ring is apparently important, since Michael tells Dee: "Without this ring thou shalt do nothing."[6]

Enochian Ring of Solomon

The ring bears the name of an angel, Pele (P-E-L-E), which means "Worker of Wonders." Dee recognized the name from Reuchlin's De Verbo Mirifico.[7] The name of this angel also appears in Agrippa's Occult Philosophy,[8] presumably drawn from Reuchlin. In addition to these four letters, there is a large circle in the center of the square bezel with a horizontal bar through its center, and above the bar the letter V while below the bar the letter L appears. Note that these two letters appear in the upper right corner of the Ensign of Sol. It is possible that the circle and bar are intended for the letters O and I. The angel Carmara mentions that the ring is to be made "in perfect gold."[9]

The Angelic Stone

Dee owned at least three scrying speculums, and probably more. One was a flat, circular obsidian mirror with a small handle on one side that had a hole drilled through it for hanging the mirror up on a thong or peg. This is commonly said to be of "Aztec origin"[10] although I have never seen any proof to support this assertion. It does not appear to have been used much, if at all, to communicate with the Enochian angels. Another was a crystal globe that was probably the size and shape of a small egg. It is likely to this that he refers when he speaks of his "first sanctified stone." This was the stone into which Dee first tried to scry. It was also used by Barnabas Saul and, for the period from March 10 to April 28 of 1582, by Edward Kelley.

The third magic mirror, Dee's "principal stone" and "holy stone" and "usual shew-stone," was delivered to Dee in an apparently miraculous manner on April 28, 1582. While scrying at Dee's desk, Kelley looked toward the west window of the study and saw a bright object lying on the mat that covered the earthen floor beside one of Dee's stacks of books. An angel the size of a small child, with a flaming sword in his hand, picked up the object "as big as an egg" and extended it to Dee. The angel Michael told Dee through Kelley, "Go toward it and take it up." Dee writes:

> I went toward the place, which E K pointed to: and till I came within a foot of it, I saw nothing, and then I saw like a shadow on the ground or mats hard by my books under the west window. The shadow was round, and less than the palm of my hand. I put my hand down upon it, and felt a thing cold and hard. Which (taking up) I perceived to be the Stone before mentioned.[11]

For the rest of his life, Dee remained convinced that this crystal had been given to him by angelic means. It immediately became the main scrying instrument. When Dee went to Europe, the stone went with him. He valued it above all his other material possessions, with the possible exception of his library at Mortlake. Speaking of the angels to the Emperor Rudolph II, he said, "yea they have brought me a Stone of that value, that no earthly Kingdom is of that worthinesse as to be compared to the vertue or dignity thereof."[12]

What are we to make of this crystal? It seems likely that it was placed on the floor by Kelley before the scrying began—perhaps unconsciously while Kelley was possessed by the angels. Kelley was susceptible to possession. At one point he complains to Dee that he does not like the spirits "moving in his head." Elsewhere, he tells Dee of "a great stir and moving in his brains, very sensible and distinct, as of a creature of humane shape and lineaments going up and down to and fro in his brains, and within his skull: sometimes seeming to sit down, sometimes to put his head out at his ear."[13]

If so, where would Kelley have obtained such a stone? Large, near perfect spheres of rock crystal were no more common, and no cheaper, in the sixteenth century than they are today. Kelley was not a rich man. Perhaps the crystal really was an apport—the appearance of a physical object out of thin air. It is a mystery that is never likely to be solved. In any case, Dee had the stone set in a gold frame with a cross on the top, a depiction of which is shown below.

Modern students of Enochian magic cannot count on the angels materializing a crystal for them. A sensible alternative is to buy a crystal ball of good quality, either of glass or rock crystal, and a stand to set it on.

The Table of Practice

On April 29, the day after the delivery of the holy stone, the Table of Practice was finished. It was two cubits high. By two cubits, an English yard (thirty-six inches) was meant.[14] The top was square, also a yard in both dimensions, so that the overall shape of the table was cubic. It stood on four narrow wooden legs. The angels specified that it be made of "sweet wood," which is another name for laurel. The laurel tree has powerful associations in magic and scrying dating back to ancient Greece.

Frame of Dee's Showstone

The distinguishing feature of this table is the design painted on its top. This is clearly illustrated at the beginning of Casaubon's True and Faithful Relation by a brass-cut engraving that was taken from the original table in the Cottonian library. Around the edge is a border of Enochian letters. Each side of this border contains twenty-one letters—the number of letters in the Enochian alphabet. An Enochian B is inscribed in each corner of the border. Robert Turner speculates that the Enochian B is equivalent to the number seven.[15] This is a reasonable speculation, in view of the importance of seven in Enochian magic and the prevalence of the Enochian B.

Table of Practice

The letters in this border are read right to left, after the normal manner of Enochian writing, and are oriented to be read from outside the edge of the table, so that a person reading the border would walk in a complete circle clockwise around the table. The letters in the border are generated in a Kabbalistic and fairly complex way from a seven-by-twelve-letter square that is composed of the seven-letter names of the seven Kings and seven Princes of the Heptarchia Mystica with the initial letter B removed from all fourteen names. The angels give two forms of this square. I have reproduced the rationalized second form below, since it contains all the necessary information.

(1st King)	aligon	ornogo (1st Prince)
(2nd King)	obogel	efafes (2nd Prince)
(3rd King)	abalel	utmono (3rd Prince)
(4th King)	ynepor	lisdon (4th Prince)
(5th King)	naspol	rorges (5th Prince)
(6th King)	napsen	ralges (6th Prince)
(7th King)	lumaza	agenol (7th Prince)

Table of the Kings and Princes

Starting at the upper-left corner of the border and moving clockwise, each side of the Holy Table contains the letters in three adjacent columns from the table of the Kings and Princes. The columns are read right to left and top to bottom from the first to the seventh Prince or King. Thus, the upper edge of the Holy Table begins o-s-o-n-s-s-l whereas the bottom edge begins n-l-l-r-l-n-a.

It is not really necessary to understand this table of the Kings and Princes to practice Enochian magic, but it is interesting to know where the letters in the border of the Table of Practice come from. Also, it illustrates very clearly that the Enochian magic of the seven Kings (which is linked to the seven traditional wandering bodies of astrology) is an essential component of the Enochian magic of the Watchtowers and Keys as it was received by Kelley using the Holy Table. In Enochian magic based on the Golden Dawn system, the importance of the Kings is not understood.

The smaller table at the center of the Table of Practice consists of twelve Enochian letters. Its pattern is the same as that of the twelve stones on the breastplate of the high priest of ancient Israel: four rows and three columns. These twelve letters relate to the twelve tribes, the twelve gates of New Jerusalem, the twelve overt permutations of Tetragrammaton, the twelve signs of the zodiac, and the twelve Enochian names of God that appear on the middle rows of the Watchtowers. Unfortunately, this relationship is not always clear in Dee's manuscripts.

The letters on the central table (3 x 4) of the Holy Table of Practice are extracted from the middle of the 7 x 12 table of the Kings and Princes. I have highlighted them in boldface type to make them easier to locate.

Robert Turner makes the emphatic assertion that the Holy Table as it appears in Casaubon's brass cut plate is transposed left to right from the way it should appear. He bases this on the single extant diagram of the Table design which appears in Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix, saying "Casaubon's rendering is quite plainly in error. The letters that border the top and bottom edges of the table are obviously written backwards, while those that make up the left and right hand borders are transposed. In addition to these errors the 4 x 3 square that takes up the centre is also given in a reversed order."[16]

Turner blames this inversion in Casaubon's plate on an error by the engraver. He suggests that such errors are common, and are due to the process of engraving itself. He cannot understand why so many Enochian scholars have failed to pick up on what is, to him, an obvious error, and blames it on the habit of occultists to blindly accept traditions in magic without examining their source material (which is certainly true).

After carefully considering the question, I have come to the conclusion that the plate in Casaubon is probably a correct representation of Dee's Table of Practice. The artist who executed the plate was working from Dee's actual Table, and in other respects he seems to have done a fairly accurate job. Why should he make the glaring mistake of inverting everything left to right? It does not seem reasonable, especially when the seven smaller tables, the Ensigns of Creation (which, in my opinion were actually painted onto the surface of Dee's Table of Practice) are not inverted, but occupy their correct position. If the engraver was going to invert the rest of the Table left to right, it is fair to assume he would also have inverted the Ensigns of Creation.

Turner may have failed to consider that the design for the Table of Practice that appears in Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix is executed in Latin letters. Latin is read left to right. Enochian is read right to left. When an Enochian word is transposed into English, it must be mirror-inverted as we do with Hebrew words, which are also written and read right to left.

We may presume that the Enochian letters in the border of the Holy Table form words of power (even though these words are not known) or at least that their order is significant to the angels. Dee must have understood the need to invert everything when transposing the Latin letters in his manuscript design into the Enochian letters on the actual physical Table. Thus, it seems likely that Casaubon's engraver made no mistake, and the representation of the Table in the brass cut is correct.

The angels tell Dee concerning the Sigillum Aemeth: "We have no respect of cullours."[17] However, of the Table they say the Enochian letters written around the edges must be painted in yellow oil paint, and that the oil used to mix the pigment should be "perfect oil, used in the church." [18] Yellow must be significant in connection with Enochian letters. This color for the letters agrees with the color in which they first appeared to Kelley in a vision:

> ... it is to be Noted, that, when E.K. could not aptly imitate the forme of the Characters, or letters, as they were shewed: that they appeared drawn on his paper with a light yelow culor, which he drew the blak vppon, and so the yellow cullor disapearing, there remayned onely the shape of the letter in blak ...[19]

As a substitute for oil used in a church, which the modern Enochian magician will find hard to obtain, premixed oil paints should be consecrated before they are applied to the Table, which was apparently painted in several colors: "The table was painted in brilliant colours, primarily yellow, blue and red ...."[20]

Beneath the Table on the floor of the scrying chamber a red silk carpet "two yards square" was laid. The four smaller seals of Aemeth (see below) within their protective containers of laurel were set upon the carpet, and the Table legs positioned on top of them, probably in depressions cut into the lids for added stability. These containers were probably disk-shaped, although they may have been spherical or hemispherical.

On top of the Table a simple white linen cloth was spread that hung down almost to the floor. Upon this was placed the wax Sigillum Aemeth and (if they were made of tin rather than painted directly on the tabletop) the seven Ensigns of Creation. Over the Sigillum Aemeth (and the tin Ensigns), a silk cloth with tassels at the corners was spread. This was colored an iridescent red and green, so that it changed from one color to the other when viewed from different angles. On top of this red-green silk cover, the scrying stone in its golden frame was placed directly upon the Sigillum Aemeth in the middle of the Table.

These are the explicit directions of the angels. However, there is some evidence that Dee did not adhere in every respect to these instructions. Casaubon in his preface speaks of a cushion and a candlestick with a taper. His reference is based on the June 25, 1584, entry in Dee's diary:

> A voyce said, bring up the shew-stone.
> Dee: I had set it down on the Table, behinde the Cushion with the Crosses, for I had furnished the Table with the Cloath, Candles, etc. as of late I was wont: Hereupon I set up the stone on the Cushion.[21]

There appear to have been at least two candlesticks involved. The "Cushion with the Crosses" may have been placed upon the Sigillum Aemeth, and may have been a substitute for the red-green cloth with the tassels.

The cushion seems to have served as a support for the stone. The candles were probably placed on either side of the stone on the Table of Practice.

The Ensigns of Creation

The seven complex talismans known as the "Arms" or "Ensigns of Creation" may either be painted directly onto the top of the Holy Table of Practice, or engraved on tablets of purified tin, which are then placed in a circle around the Sigillum Aemeth. It is evident from the reproduction of Dee's Table that appears in Casaubon that Dee painted these talismans directly onto the surface as an integrated part of the design.

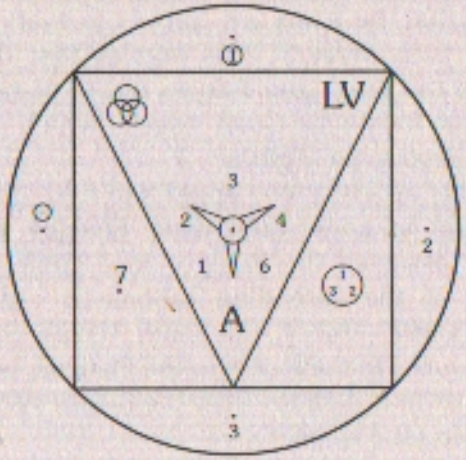
Their placement is shown by the outlines on the illustration of the Holy Table, above (see p. 67). They are arranged radially so that they may be read from the point of view of the center of the table. Turner notes that they are to be placed seven inches from the edge of the Holy Table[22] although they are shown nearer the edge in the Casaubon engraving.

Precisely what these talismans are remains mysterious. A note in the appendix of Liber Mysteriorum Quintus states that the Arms are "proper to every King and Prince in their order."[23] This implies that they relate directly to the Kings and Princes of the planets on the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels, which appears in Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica.

The only occultist who appears to have made a serious attempt to understand these Ensigns is Thomas Rudd. He assigned the Ensigns in a circle clockwise according to the ascending kabbalistic order of the seven "planets"—Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn. To the letters in the Ensigns, he gave the names of various demons from the Goetia such as Buer, Belial, Gaap, and so on.[24]

In briefly examining Dr. Rudd's system, Turner observes "I feel that we can safely disregard Dr. Rudd's

The Ensign of Venus
King: Baligon Prince: Bornogo

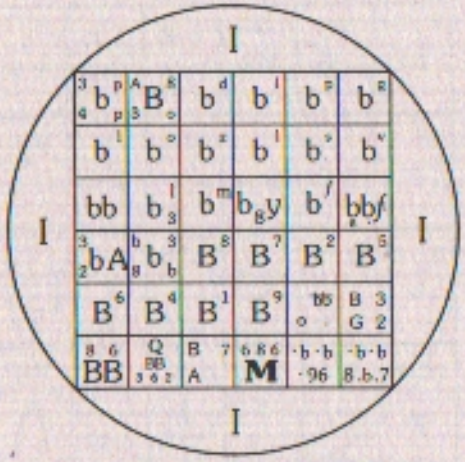


The Ensign of Sol
King: Bobogel Prince: Befafes

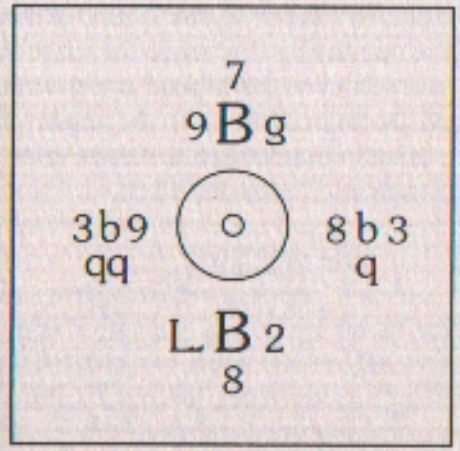
The Ensign of Mars
King: Babalel Prince: Batmono

The Ensign of Jupiter
King: Bynepor Prince: Blisdon

The Ensign of Mercury
King: Bnaspol Prince: Brorges



The Ensign of Saturn
King: Bnapsen Prince: Bralges



The Ensign of Luna
King: Blumaza Prince: Bagenol

hypotheses with regard to these matters."[25] I am in complete agreement with Turner here. Rudd's notion that all the numerous occurrences of the letter B in the Ensigns indicates the names of goetic demons whose names all start with B is, to put it mildly, absurd. The reasoning behind the complex structure of these seven talismans is unknown, and will likely remain unknown into the foreseeable future, since it is nowhere explained in the surviving record of the angelic conversations.

Sigillum Aemeth

The Sigillum Aemeth, or more properly Emeth (seal of truth), also called by the angels the Sigillum Dei (seal of God), is a wax disk that is placed in the center of the Holy Table. The crystal in its gold holder rests on top of the disk during scrying. Its making is described in the second book of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum, which is as yet unpublished. Concerning this sigil, the angel Uriel tells Dee: "This seal is not to be looked upon without great reverence and devotion."[26] It is to be made of "perfect wax," nine inches in diameter, and between an inch and a half and an inch and a quarter thick.

Sigillum Aemeth (front)

In March, 1582, Dee was instructed by the angel Michael to draw a circle and divide its edge into forty equal parts. There appeared to Kelley forty "white creatures, all in white silk long robes, and they were like children."[27] Each of these spirits opened its silk robe at the breast to reveal a letter and number, or sometimes a letter alone. Dee was instructed to write these in the spaces at the edge of the seal clockwise in order beginning at the top.

Within the outer circle of forty letters and numbers, Dee inscribed concentrically a heptagon, an interlocking heptagram, a smaller heptagon, and at the center an interlocking pentagram.

The larger heptagon is divided into forty-nine parts, and filled up with forty-eight letters (the final space contains a cross). There is probably a direct connection between these forty-nine spaces containing forty-eight letters and the forty-nine gates of understanding, of which only forty-eight may be opened. Each side of the larger heptagon contains one of the seven sacred names of God, which Dee derived from a forty-nine letter square.[28]

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	i
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	-

This square was delivered to Kelley on March 20, 1582. The angels instructed Dee to read downward, and when he did so he discovered that the square consists of the names of seven familiar angels of the planets in the Kabbalah: Zaphkiel (Saturn), Zadkiel (Jupiter), Cumael (Mars), Raphael (Sun), Haniel (Venus), Michael (Mercury) and Gabriel (Moon). This same list appears in Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy,[29] a work in Dee's library with which Kelley was familiar. Agrippa was also used by the angels as the source for the ninety-one geographical regions of the earth later in the angelic communications. When the rows of this square of planetary angels are read across from left to right, they yield the seven sacred names of God in the larger heptagon.

Just inside the larger heptagon appear seven names that are characterized by the angels as "names not known to the angels, neither can they be spoken or read of man. These names bring forth seven angels, the governors of the heavens next unto us. Every letter of the angels' names bringeth forth seven daughters. Every daughter bringeth forth her daughter, every daughter her daughter bringeth forth a son. Every son hath his son."[30]

This seems confusing but is actually fairly simple. The seven names of God that not even the angels can pronounce are arranged in the form of a letter square that was scryed by Kelley on March 21, 1582:[31]

S	A	A	21/8	E	M	E8
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E26
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	L30	A
I30	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I21/8	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	L21/8

This square is structured upon another set of seven planetary angels found in the literature of the Kabbalah:

Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semeliel (Sun), Nogahel (Venus), Cochabiel (Mercury), Levanael (Moon). Like the first square, it also is given in the Occult Philosophy of Agrippa.[32] The names are based on the Hebrew names of the planets, with the suffix "el" added to make them the names of angels.

To extract the names of the seven new angels of the "heavens next unto to us" (that is, the spheres of the planets), read the letters down diagonally from the upper right to the lower left, starting with the letter S in the upper left corner of the square (thus, for Zabathiel: S, ab, ath, 21/8 = iel). To extract the names of the Seven Sons of Light, read the letters diagonally from upper left to lower right starting at the lower left corner of the square, but separated into individual names by each diagonal line (thus, I, Ih, Ilr, etc.). To extract the names of the Sons of the Sons, read diagonally up from the lower left to the upper right starting with the lower right corner of the square (thus, E, An, Ave, etc.). To extract the names of the Daughters of Light, read diagonally from upper left to lower right starting at the upper right corner of the square (thus, E(l), Me, Ese, etc.). To extract the names of the Daughters of the Daughters of Light, read diagonally from the upper right to the lower left starting at the upper left corner of the square (thus, S, Ab, Ath, etc.).

You will notice that some compromise and adjustment must be made in fitting the letters of the names to the letters in the square. The S in the upper left corner becomes the similar sounding Z in the name of the planetary angel Zabathiel. The fraction 21/8 signifies variously El, E or L separately, I, or Iel. When 8 appears alone, it stands for L. The numbers 26 and 30 also appear to stand for L. The Enochian spelling of the planetary angel of Mercury (Corabiel) differs from the spelling that appears in Agrippa (Cochabiel).

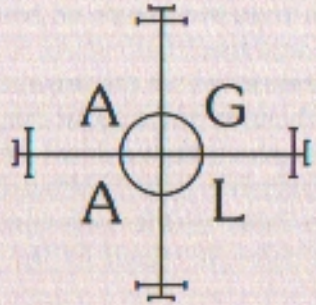
The names of the "governors of the heavens" are written between the points and in the center of the pentagram: Zabathi(el), Zedekiel, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, Corabiel and Levanael.

The seven names written upon the the interlocking heptagram are the Seven Sons of Light, who are subject to Prince Hagonel.[33] Reading clockwise, they are: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia and Stimcul. The names on the smaller heptagon are the Seven Sons of the Sons and derived from the Sons of Light: E(l), An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagon(el) and Ilemese. It is intended that these names have from one to seven letters. To accomplish this, it is sometimes necessary to double the "el" into a single compound character.

The names inside the points of the interlocking heptagram are those of the Daughters of Light: E(l), Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn and Stimcul. Similarly, the names just outside the smaller heptagon are the names of the Daughters of the Daughters: S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi and Esemeli.

On the back of the Sigil of Emeth, Uriel ordered Dee to inscribe a large circle-cross with double beams on the end of each arm. In the angles of the cross are written the four letters A, G, L, A clockwise from the upper left corner. AGLA is a Kabbalistic name of God compounded from the first letters in the Hebrew phrase "Ateh Gebor Le-Olahm Amen" (Thou art mighty forever, O Lord).

The angels ordered that four smaller wax seals be made that were identical to the Sigillum Aemeth. These were to be set under the legs of the Holy Table inside hollow wooden cavities. It is unclear whether these wooden containers, which were to be made of "sweet



Sigillum Aemeth (back)

wood" (laurel) were attached to the legs of the Table, or were disk-shaped wooden boxes upon which the legs rested. "The four feet of the table must have 4 hollow things of sweet wood, whereupon they must stand. Within the hollow spheres thy seals may be kept unperished. One month is all for the use thereof."[34]

Dee considered the Sigillum Aemeth his most sacred possession, with the possible exception of the holy stone which he believed had been supernaturally materialized by the angels. He carried it with him on his travels through Europe, and brought it back intact to Mortlake. It has survived to the present, and may be seen in the British Museum along with the other relics of Dee's scrying.

Seals of the Angelic Ministers

Dee is told by Carmara on November 17, 1582: "when thou invokest, thy feet must be placed upon these tables ... comprehending 42 letters and names. But with this consideration: that the character (which is the first of the 7 in the former book) be placed upon the top of the table, which thou wast and art and shall be commanded to have and use."[5]

The tables mentioned by the angel Carmara are the circular seals of the forty-two angelic ministers that serve under each of the seven heptarchical Princes. Each seal is formed from forty-two letters extracted by Kabbalistic means from the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels. Each letter is the name, or stands for the name, of a ministering angel.

First, the letters are written in a letter square of six rows and seven columns. Then this square of forty-two is transformed into a ring, with each of the six rows written out in its own compartment, proceeding clockwise around the ring. Turner interprets the second part of Carmara's instructions quoted above to mean that Dee must place the seal or character of the Prince who rules the forty-two ministers on top of the circular table of the ministers. Accepting this interpretation for the moment, it is not perfectly clear whether the seal of the Prince must be a separate seal that fits within the ring of the forty-two ministers, or whether it may be inscribed within the ring upon the circular table of the forty-two ministers itself. The latter practice would be more convenient.

I am inclined to interpret the second part of Carmara's instructions to mean that the seal of the Prince who rules the day the scrying is performed should be placed on top of the Holy Table of Practice, beside the showstone in its golden frame. However, the wording is ambiguous, and may be taken either way.

No dimensions for the seals of the forty-two angelic ministers are given, but they probably should be large enough to place both feet together upon them. It may be that they are intended to be small, and that the feet should be set over the seals to cover them; or it may be that the feet should fit inside the ring of forty-two letters. If the feet are to fit inside the central space on the seals, a diameter of at least twelve inches is required. If the feet are merely to be set on top of the seals, a diameter of four inches will suffice. This is left to the discretion of the Enochian magician. (See Chapter Nine, where the seals of the Princes and the tables of their Ministers are shown.)

The Holy Lamen

On March 10, 1582, Dee received from an angel who called himself Uriel an irregular triangular figure filled with obscure characters. This was to be his personal symbol of authority, called a Lamen in ritual magic (Dee spelled it "Lamyne"). It was out of keeping with the rest of the Enochian symbols, being unbalanced and seemingly not based on a letter-number system of derivation. Indeed, it had a very goetic look.

At a later date the angel Il declared to Dee that this first Lamen was "false and divilish" and that the angel who had represented himself as Uriel was an impostor. Another Lamen was revealed to Dee, and is represented in Dee's Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix.

This true Lamen is composed of eighty-four Enochian letters inscribed upon a symbol that consists of a square tilted up on its corner, within another square which it touches at the corners, which in turn is set inside a third square. It is to be drawn on a piece of paper four inches by four inches. The Enochian letters should be done in yellow oil paint. I suggest that the background be alternate colors of red and blue, to harmonize the Lamen with the Holy Table.

Ideally, this Lamen should be placed in a gold frame so that it may be hung around the neck on a gold chain, with the letters clearly visible. A frame similar to a small picture frame with a glass front would reveal the letters while at the same time protecting the Lamen from damage. However, none of this is specified by the angels, so the exact form of the frame and its material is at the discretion of the maker.

John Dee's Second Lamen

The angel Carmara tells Dee that the Lamen comprehends "the form of thy own name."[36] Dee, who was skilled in ciphers, was unable to locate any trace of his name in the form of letters on the Lamen.

> Dee: The character or lamen for me was noted that it should contain some token of my name. And now in this accounted the true character of dignification, I perceive no peculiar mark or letters of my name.
>
> Uriel: The form in every corner considereth your name.
>
> Dee: You mean there to be a certain shadow of Delta?
>
> Uriel: Well.[37]

By "Delta" Dee means the Greek letter Delta, which he was in the habit of substituting for his name in his magical diaries. It is not clear to me how a Delta may be extracted from the corners of the Lamen, unless it is the triangular spaces created between the central and middle squares. Also, there are three Enochian letters in each corner of the middle square. These form a triangle and might be considered a "shadow of Delta."

Since there seems to be no specific occurrence of Dee's name in the letters of the Lamen, it may be used as a general Lamen in all Enochian magic. To make it personal, the magician should write his or her magical name on the back of the square of paper where the Lamen is drawn and colored. The magical name is the name given to the magician during group initiation, or received psychically during solo practice, and represents the magical self of the magician.

If there are any Enochian magicians foolish enough to deliberately seek to evoke the evil spirits or demons of the Great Table, it would be appropriate for them to use the first goetic version of Dee's lamen, and to write their magical name on the back to personalize it. Since the sole function of this first lamen is in goetic theurgy, it did not seem necessary to reproduce it in this book. Those determined to go to the Devil in their own fashion will find the goetic lamen in Turner's Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee.

The Tables of the Kings

The Tables of the Kings are to be painted on flat disks of laurel ("sweet wood") small enough that they can be held in the hand during ritual work. Each consists of the seal of the King (a geometric sigil with the name of a related Son of the Sons of Light written upon it in Latin characters) surrounded by a ring containing the name of the King, which in turn is surrounded by an outer ring containing seven letters (or numbers), some of which are reversed left to right. The letters of the outer ring appear to be related by some unknown cipher system to the letters in the name of the King.

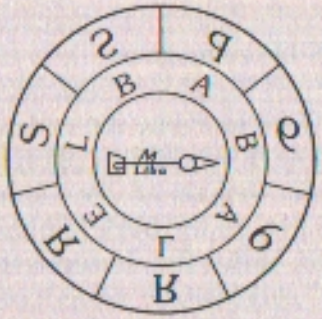
Unfortunately, Dee does not describe the method by which the letters on the outermost ring are derived. He refers to them only as the "characters and words annexed to the Kings' names in the outer circumference of the great circle or globe."[38] This would not have mattered had he drawn all seven of the tables of the Kings, but he left only a single example in the margin of his manuscript.



Round Table of King Babalel

It seems fairly obvious that the letters in the outermost ring of the table relate directly to the letters in the name of the King. Babalel's name contains two *B*s, two *A*s, two *L*s and one E. The outer ring contains two *S*s, two *R*s, two odd characters that look like reclining 6s, and one inverted P. However, I have not been able to determine the method of this cipher. For this reason, it is not possible to perfectly re-create the other six tables of the Kings. They may be made with the outer rings blank so that, if in the future the method for deriving the outer characters is discovered, they may be filled in on the tables.

The Use of the Furniture

Most, if not all, of the furniture and tools described above were used by Dee and Kelley at each scrying session. They certainly employed the Holy Table of Practice, the angelic showstone, the Ensigns of Creation, the single large Sigillum Aemeth and its four smaller replicas under the legs of the table. Dee probably wore the Lamen and ring at each communication with the angels. He and Kelley may have worked with their feet upon the circular seals of the forty-two angelic Ministers of the Princes. If these seals of the Ministers were employed, they would probably have been used in turn on the days ruled by the Princes. However, I have seen no evidence that these seals of the Ministers were ever employed by Dee.

In the Golden Dawn system of Enochian magic, which is the most prevalent form of Enochian magic worked in modern times, all of the above instruments are completely ignored. This simplified the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn, but was a serious oversight on the part of its creator (probably MacGregor Mathers).

I strongly recommend that anyone who is serious about the practice of Enochian magic construct the Holy Table, the Sigillum Aemeth with its four lesser counterparts, the seven Ensigns of Creation (if these are not painted on the surface of the Table itself), the ring, the Lamen, the seven seals of the forty-two Ministers (to be placed under the feet during scrying in the crystal on the corresponding days of the week), and the seven round tables of the Kings. This is the basic minimum requirement for Enochian magic as it was delivered by the angels to Dee through Kelley.

Chapter Seven

The Enochian Language

The Tongue of the Angels

The force that empowers Enochian magic is the Enochian language. The angels claimed that this was the actual language spoken in heaven before the expulsion of Adam from Paradise. When Adam entered the world and time began, said the angel Gabriel, he could not speak. He had forgotten the angelic tongue spoken by him in his innocence. He "began to learn of necessity" the primal form of Hebrew, which is not the same form that Hebrew takes in historical times, although it did share the same basic division of letters into groups of three, seven and twelve.

The true pronunciation of this primal Hebrew has been lost, which is why Hebrew does not carry the same occult force it originally possessed. However, even the primal Hebrew spoken by Adam could not begin to compare with the authority and might of the tongue of the angels: "for as this Work and Gift is of God, which is all power, so doth he open it in a tongue of power, to the intent that the proportions may agree in themselves."[1]

According to the angels, the Enochian language is able to express the primal essence of things directly.

> In this language, every letter signifieth the member of the substance whereof it speaketh. Every word signifieth the essence of the substance. The letters are separated, and in > confusion: and therefore, are by numbers gathered together, which also signify a number. For as every greater containeth his lesser, so are secret and unknown forms of things knit up in their parents. Being known in number, they are easily distinguished, so that herein we teach places to be numbered, letters to be elected from the numbered, and proper words from the letters, which signify substantially the thing that is spoken of in the center of the Creator.[2]

When the patriarch Enoch was taken up into heaven alive, he was instructed in the primal language of the angels, and learned to speak it. For this reason it is called Enochian, being the tongue taught to Enoch. In order to work the magic of the Watchtowers, it is necessary to be able to sound Enochian letters and speak the Keys in the original Enochian. The Keys are of little power when voiced in English.

The Enochian Alphabet

The Enochian alphabet is written from right to left and has twenty-one letters, rather than the twenty-two of Hebrew. This allows the letters to be divided into three groups of seven. Three and seven are magically potent numbers. Three is the number of the holy trinity in its numerous forms in different religions. Seven is the number of the traditional planets of astrology (which include the Sun and Moon). These are the seven "lights" that rule the twelve names of God that rule the ninety-one geographical spirits on the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

The Germanic rune alphabet known as the futhark is divided into three families or clans of eight runes each. This threefold division is so ancient, it may be coeval with the invention of runes. Each clan, or aett, takes its name from the first rune in the clan, which is regarded as its patriarch. The structure of the Enochian alphabet appears to be very similar, except that each family of Enochian letters contains seven members. We know the Enochian alphabet has a threefold division because the names of the letters were revealed to Kelley in three groups of seven.[3]

Donald Laycock points out that all the letters in the Enochian names for the Enochian letters total sixty-four, a number that may have significance as a magic square. Enochian appears to be an alphanumeric cipher system rather than a normally evolved language. It is possible that the names for the letters were generated by letter squares similar to those so common throughout Enochian magic, although no one has proposed how this may have been accomplished.

The names, shapes and ordering of the letters of the alphabet we can be fairly confident about, because the letters were revealed to Kelley in a vision on May 6, 1583, as recorded in his own manuscript diary Liber Logaeth.[4] They appeared on the page before him in a "light yellow cullor" and Kelley traced their outlines exactly before this supernatural color faded. Despite the fact that Kelley traced out each letter to ensure absolute accuracy, the common Enochian typeface used today contains several serious inaccuracies. For the table of the Enochian alphabet given here, and the other illustrations in this work, I have created a completely new Enochian typeface in both print and script characters that I call Madimi. It more accurately represents the shapes of the letters that Kelley received from the angels.

Particular notice should be taken of the small dot in the corner of the letter Pal, which is transliterated into English as x. This dot, which seems to be similar to the dot in the lowercase Latin letter i, is invariably overlooked

THE ENOCHIAN ALPHABET

Family of Pn			Family of Tal			Family of Pal
name	print	script	name	print	script	name	print	script
1. Pn b			8. Tal m			15. Pal x
2. Veh c/k			9. Gon i/y			16. Med o
3. Ged g/j			10. Nu h			17. Don r
4. Gal d			11. Un l			18. Ceph z
5. Or f			12. Mals p			19. Van u/v/w
6. Un a			13. Ger q			20. Fam s
7. Graph e			14. Drux n			21. Gisg t

Table of Enochian Letters, Print, and Script

when the Enochian alphabet is reproduced. Yet it cannot be a mere blemish in the manuscript, because it appears in both the set of letters transmitted to Kelley on May 6, which may be called formal or print letters, and in the less detailed set of letters recorded by Dee in pen, which may be called Enochian cursive or script.

In the standard Enochian typeface used in Regardie's Golden Dawn and elsewhere, the letter Veh (c/k) is shown as two completely separate parts. This is wrong. Also, the letter Med (o) appears as two strokes that curve in opposite directions. The strokes should curve in the same direction. In the standard typeface the letter Gal (d) has two appendages that curve in opposite directions. The bottom appendage should be straight. By the same token, the letter Or (f) has two straight appendages in the standard typeface, whereas the lower appendage should be crescent. The letter Pal (x) is shown as a simple right angle in the standard typeface, but the horizontal bar should project beyond the vertical bar on the left side. The letter Fam (s) appears as two separate crescent strokes in the Golden Dawn, but it is shown in both the print and script versions, as well as in the engraving of the Table of Practice in Casaubon, as a single connected figure. Finally, the letter Ceph (z) is almost identical in the standard typeface to the Latin letter P, but the upper point of the crescent should project well past the vertical bar on the left.

I point out these serious errors in the shapes of the Enochian letters that appear in books (including my own books, in those cases where I allowed the Golden Dawn typeface to be used) because this is a matter that is never questioned. Although I have stylized the letters for my Madimi font, you may be certain that the significant features of the letters are accurately presented.

Enochian Numerology

What is uncertain is the numerical value of each letter. Robert Turner suggests that the initial letter Pa (b) has a value of seven, because seven is the most important number in the early Enochian communications, and Pa is the most common and most important letter.[5] Why else would it be set in the corners of the Table of Practice, except to stand for the sevenfold magic of the angelic heptarch? Why else would it head the names of the 49 good angels of the heptarch?

We may speculate that the reason the Enochian alphabet is headed by the letter B is because this is the first letter in the first word of the first book of the Bible. The Hebrew Genesis begins with the word "BeReshit," which translates "In the beginning." If the first Enochian letter does have a value of seven, the values of the remaining letters do not seem to follow any logical order, as do the letters of Hebrew. A system of numerical values can easily be imposed on the Enochian alphabet, but this would not be a natural part of Enochian magic.

Laycock postulated the letters that stand for the numbers from one to nine, based on their occurrence in the Enochian Keys.[6] When we add in Turner's B, we get this list:

L = 1	S = 4	B = 7
V = 2	O = 5	P = 8
D = 3	N = 6	M = 9

It is simple to produce higher numbers by combining these letters if some positioning system is used to indicate powers of ten, but this is not the system employed by the Enochian angels. For example, the number 12 is not, as we might expect, LV—it is OS. The number 33 is PD. The number 456 is CLA. No one has yet been able to make sense of this strange numeration. Therefore, numbers can be used in Enochian magic where these have previously been generated by the angels, but it is dangerous for the modern Enochian magician to generate new numbers, since it is impossible to be certain of their meaning.

Pronunciation of Enochian Words

Enochian names are uncommonly difficult to pronounce, and also very hard to remember, because the arrangement of their letters appears almost random. This results in strange little consonant clusters that never occur in English or any other European language. For example, the name of the demon Tplabc would puzzle most speakers, as would that of the angel Rxnl. Enochian names are generated by various systems of magic squares. Their significance, and thus their power, arises from the placement of the letters in the name upon those squares.

This is not the case with actually Enochian words, which usually may be vocalized in the normal way without tripping up the tongue. Enochian words appear to constitute a true language with its own odd rules of syntax, although there are numerous exceptions to the rules. The verb conjugations are often irregular. For example, the present tense of the verb "to be":

I am ..... zir, zirdo
we are ..... gea (?)
you are ..... geh
he/she/it is ... i
they are ..... chiis, chis, chi

There is no form for "we are" in the Enochian text transmitted to Dee and Kelley. None of the verb declensions are complete. I have conjectured gea, but Enochian is so irregular there is only a slight chance that this is the correct form. This limitation of the language led Crowley to coin a number of Enochian words for use in his personal system of magic. Crowley's new words have, through decades of use, acquired a certain respectability.

Eventually, if Enochian is ever to attain the usefulness of a true language, someone with extensive linguistic training will have to radically expand its vocabulary.

Concerning the structure of the language, Laycock states, "there is nothing strikingly un-English about the grammar: no trace of the construct case or irregular plurals of Hebrew or Arabic, no clear indication of multiple cases or complex verb forms, as in Latin and Greek."[7] He goes on to say that the order of the words is similar to English. This is what we might expect if Enochian were drawn from the unconscious mind of Edward Kelley, who knew little Latin and no Greek or Hebrew (although he was able to transmit Greek dictated to him by the angels, who used it as a means to communicate privately with Dee through his scryer without Kelley knowing what was discussed).

The more I study Enochian, the more I am inclined to believe that the angels were autonomous residents of the unconscious, not of Kelley, but of Dee himself. They were able to draw upon Dee's extensive knowledge of ciphers, his vast literary scholarship, and his language skills, to construct the system of Enochian magic and the Enochian language. In my opinion they used Kelley merely as an instrument for communicating with Dee's conscious mind. This radical hypothesis explains how Kelley was able to deliver the Enochian teachings, so many of which are completely beyond his conscious intellectual capability. It presupposes that the angels were able to link Dee's unconscious mind with that of Kelley in some mysterious way. It also explains how Dee was able to make sense out of the convoluted angelic teachings (they were based on his own thoughts and studies), and shows why on several occasions the angels referred to Dee and Kelley as two parts of a single whole.

However, if the Enochian language was the product of Dee's unconscious, we would expect it to be more consistent. Dee's abilities as a linguist were extensive. Perhaps the irregularities in the grammar can be explained by the complex method of transmission and the source. Dee's conscious mind was uncommonly well ordered, but his unconscious may have been less linear.

The Golden Dawn Method

The technique used by the members of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn to pronounce Enochian names was straightforward. Regardie sums it up succinctly in his introduction to the Enochian teachings in the Order papers: "for practical purposes, the language is pronounced by taking each letter separately, whenever a lack of vowels renders it necessary. But, with a little practice, the pronunciation will come instinctively when the student wants it. 'Z' is always pronounced 'Zod' with a long 'o.'"[8]

The leader of the Golden Dawn, S. L. MacGregor Mathers, wrote concerning the pronunciation of Enochian:

> Briefly, regarding the pronunciation of the Angelical Language, thou shalt pronounce the consonants with the vowel following in the nomenclature of the same letter in the Hebrew Alphabet. For example, in [the Hebrew letter] Beth, the vowel following "B" is "e" pronounced AY. Therefore, if "B" in an Angelic Name precede another as in "Sobha" [whose, or whom], thou mayest pronounce it "Sobeh-hah." "G" may be either Gimel or Jimel (as the Arabs do call it) following whether it be hard or soft. This is the ancient Egyptian use, whereof the Hebrew is but a copy, and that many times a faulty copy, save in the Divine and Mystical Names, and some other things.

> Also "Y" and "I" are similar, also "V" and "U," depending whether the use intended be vowel or consonant. "X" is the ancient Egyptian power of Samekh; but there be some ordinary Hebrew Names wherein "X" is made Tzaddi.[8]

One of the three original founders of the Golden Dawn, Wynn Westcott, inserted the following note into one of his rituals:

> In pronouncing the Names, take each letter separately. M is pronounced Em; N is pronounced En (also Nu, since in Hebrew the vowel following the equivalent letter Nun is "u"); A is Ah; P is Peh; S is Ess; D is Deh.
>
> NRFM is pronounced En-Ra-Ef-Em or En-Ar-Ef-Em. ZIZA is pronounced Zod-ee-zod-ah. ADRE is Ah-deh-reh or Ah-deh-er-reh. TAASD is Teh-ah-ah-ess-deh. AIAOAI is Ah-ee-ah-oh-ah-ee. BDOPA is Beh-deh-oh-peh-ah. BANAA is Beh-ah-en-ah-ah. BITOM is Beh-ee-to-em or Beh-ee-teh-oo-em. NANTA is En-ah-en-tah. HCOMA is Heh-co-em-ah. EXARP is Eh-ex-ar-peh.[9]

In another place Westcott mentions that the name OOMDI should be pronounced "Oh-Oh-Meh-Deh-ee."[10]

Following these directions literally, beginners in Enochian magic sometimes attempt to pronounce each individual Enochian letter, even where there is no need. The advice of Regardie that the letters be pronounced separately "wherever a lack of vowels renders it necessary" should be borne firmly in mind.

The Method of Dee and Kelley

The members of the Golden Dawn overlooked the directions in Dee's diaries concerning the correct pronunciation of the Enochian language. As a rule of thumb, wherever possible, Enochian should be pronounced as you would pronounce English. Only where unnatural consonant clusters in the names make this impossible should individual letters be sounded. Effectively, the names are made pronounceable by the addition of vowels in somewhat the same way that written Hebrew, which consists solely of consonants, is voiced by the insertion of vowel marks.

Dee left scattered phonetic keys in the section of the diaries dealing with the Enochian language. He used "dg" to indicate soft "g" and "s" to indicate soft "c." In several places he indicates that "ch" is to be pronounced "k." The word ds (who, which, that) is pronounced "di-es." The letter "z," as Regardie observed, is to be pronounced "zod" where it cannot be merged with the rest of the word, but not always.

For example, the name of the angel Zaxanin would be vocalized as it is in English, but the word znurza (swear; swore) should be pronounced "zod-nur-za." By way of contrast, Aleister Crowley, who learned the pronunciation of Enochian in the Golden Dawn and sounded every letter, voiced this word "zod-en-ur-re-zod-a." Besides being awkward, this is clearly contrary to Dee's practice.

Donald Laycock, who provides the most complete directions on the pronunciation of Enochian[11] gives the general rule "consonants as in English, vowels as in Italian." Unfortunately, this is likely to be of limited use to those who do not speak Italian. He goes on to explain that this means "u" should be pronounced as in "put," not as in "but," and also states that in Dee's time the "r" would always be pronounced wherever it occurs.

It should be noted that in Elizabethan times it was a common fashion to substitute "v" and "u," and also "i" and "j." In places I have exchanged the "v" that occurs in Dee's original spelling for a "u" to render pronunciation easier. In the Enochian alphabet "v" and "u" are both indicated by the letter Van. When this letter occurs at the beginning of a word, it is written "v" when followed by a vowel, but "u" when followed by a consonant.

The True Form of Enochian

The bottom line on the pronunciation of Enochian is that no one really knows what pronunciation Dee and Kelley used, let alone how the angels intended the language to be pronounced. Kelley undoubtedly heard it spoken correctly by the angels, and probably transmitted an accurate version to Dee. But Dee's phonetic notations are makeshift and haphazard. One thing we know for certain is that the members of the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley spoke Enochian incorrectly.

An expert linguist with a knowledge of how Elizabeth English sounded, and what accents were current near London and in the county of Worcestershire (where Kelley grew up), who studied Dee's phonetic guides carefully, could probably make a fairly close approximation of the Enochian language spoken by Dee. The rest of us will have to content ourselves with a less accurate version. We can take some comfort in the knowledge that, no matter how badly we mispronounce Enochian words, we are almost certain to be closer to the original than MacGregor Mathers or Aleister Crowley, who both used Enochian magic with good results.

Chapter Eight

The Heptarchia Mystica

The Angelic Heptarchy

In 1582, Edward Kelley scried the complete system of angel magic that is recorded in Dee's manuscript De Heptarchia Mystica. This was one of the works found in the secret drawer of Dee's chest fifty-four years after Dee's death, and for this reason it escaped inclusion in Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. Its neglect has continued down to the present. Although the magic of the angelic heptarchy is an integral part of Enochian magic, it was completely ignored by the Golden Dawn, and consequently by Aleister Crowley, who learned his Enochian magic from the Golden Dawn. Most modern Enochian magicians rely on these three sources, and seem at a loss to know what to do with the heptarch.

A heptarchy is a government of seven rulers. The word had particular meaning for Dee as an Englishman and historian. Anglo-Saxon England was composed of seven kingdoms between A.D. 449 and 828. This group of seven kingdoms was called the Heptarchy. Seven has great occult significance because there are seven wandering bodies that rule the heavens in ancient astrology. The seven astrological planets also rule the Earth through the seven days of the week.

The divine authority of the seven planets is recognized in Christian mythology. They are the seven stars held in the right hand of Christ (Revelation 1:16) and the seven lamps of fire that burn before the throne of God, who are also called the seven Spirits of God (Revelation 4:5). Each planet is thus a ruling angel. The imagery in Revelation plays a large role in the Enochian teachings, as I have tried to show in my book Tetragrammaton.[1]

The Table of the Forty-Nine Good Angels

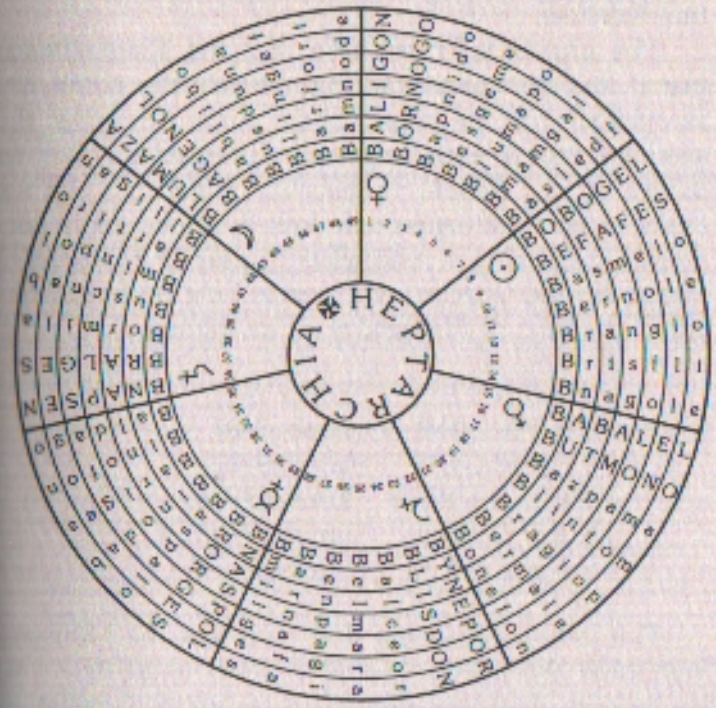
In the Enochian heptarchy, the seven spheres of the planets are ruled by seven angelic Kings. Each King has a Prince, who is the active power of the King. Under each Prince are five Nobles. The names of these forty-nine angels begin with the letter B, which may represent the number seven. The names were revealed to Kelley letter by letter upon a complex table in the shape of a cross with seven separate parts.[2]

Kelley received this sevenfold cross on April 29, 1582. Seven angels approached holding seven square tables. Each square table was composed of forty-nine cells, and each cell had a letter and a number written in it. The ordering of these letters and numbers appears to be random. The first table was filled with the letter B. The angels used this as the center of the cross, and joined the other six tables to its sides. Moving around the central table clockwise, tables two and three were compressed together and joined to the top, table four was joined to the right, tables five and six were compressed and attached to the bottom, and table seven was joined to the left edge of the central table.

It was then a simple matter to extract the names for the forty-nine good angels of the planets. Starting with the cell in the central table of the cross that contained B1, Dee looked to the cell in the second table that also contained the number one, and found there the letter A.

In the third table of the cross, the cell with the number one contained the letter L. In the fourth table the cell with the number one contained the letter I. In the fifth, the letter G. In the sixth, the letter O. In the seventh, the letter N. These seven letters composed the name of the first of the heptarchical Kings, BALIGON.

In this way, Dee extracted in order forty-nine angels, which he arranged in the form of a ring that was divided into seven parts, each containing seven names. These parts of the ring were associated with the seven planets in an apparently random order. Dee called this table the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49.



Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49

The Ministers of the Princes

Each Prince also has a hierarchy of forty-two Ministers who rule the hours of the day in six groups of seven Ministers, each group ruling four hours of the twenty-four. Every one of these forty-two Ministers is represented by a single letter, so that each of the six groups collectively has a single name that is composed of seven letters. The names of the forty-two Ministers under each Prince are "extracted by a laboriously complex method from the Table of the forty-nine Good Angels."[3] In this way they are composed of the names of the angels. Fortunately, it is not necessary to know this method to use the Ministers.

The angels informed Dee that the King of each planet and his subordinate Prince rule the entire day associated with the planet of the King. Curiously, the serving Prince of each King is associated with a different planet on the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum. The six ranks of seven Ministers rule four-hour periods in succession, beginning at midnight.[4] To take the Ministers of Prince Blisdon (Jupiter) who serves King Bnaspol (Mercury), the ruler of Wednesday, as an example:

E L G N S E B	(hours 1–4)
N L I N Z V B	(hours 5–8)
S F A M L L B	(hours 9–12)
O O G O S R S	(hours 13–16)
N R P C R R B	(hours 17–20)
e r g d b a b	(hours 21–24)

The individual letters that represent the Ministers were each expanded into a seven-letter name by a simple process of permutation.[5] This technique is common throughout Enochian magic. The letter of each Minister is moved to the front of its rank, and the remaining six letters written behind it. To take as an example the Ministers of Prince Blisdon, shown above:

ELGNSEB:
Elgnseb, Lgnsebe, Gnsebel, Nsebelg, Sebelgn, Ebelgns, Belgnse

NLINZVB:
Nlinzub, Linzubn, Inzubnl, Nzubnli, Zubnlin, Ubnlinz, Bnlinzu

SFAMLLB:
Sfamllb, Famllbs, Amllbsf, Mllbsfa, Llbsfam, Lbsfaml, Bsfamll

OOGOSRS:
Oogosrs, Ogosrso, Gosrsoo, Osrsoog, Srsoogo, Rsoogos, Soogosr

NRPCRRB:
Nrpcrrb, Rpcrrbn, Pcrrbnr, Crrbnrp, Rrbnrpc, Rbnrpcr, Bnrpcrr

ergdbab:
Ergdbab, Rgdbabe, Gdbaber, Dbaberg, Babergd, Abergdb, Bergdba

Seven and Twenty-Four

It should be noted that each group of seven Ministers rules 240 minutes. These numbers have significance with respect to the throne of God described in Revelation 4:4-5:

> And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.
>
> And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

The twenty-four Elders rule over time: specifically the twelve hours of the day and the twelve hours of the night. They are measured, or governed, by the seven lamps before the throne, which are the seven planets. In the heavens, the planets govern the time divisions of the twelve houses by moving through them. On earth, the planets are represented by the days of the week, and in magic are assigned the twenty-four hours of the day to rule in a week-long cycle. The planets repeat themselves in twenty-four sets of seven over the 168 hours of the week. The assignment of the forty-two Ministers to the hours in groups of seven, each of which rules 240 minutes, is another expression of this ancient temporal relationship between twenty-four and seven.

The Grimoire

The grimoire portion of De Heptarchia Mystica is somewhat confused in the manuscript. It seems to have been deliberately scrambled by the angels during its transmission. However, it can be reassembled with a fair degree of confidence. It is divided into seven sections. Each part concerns a day of the week, the angelic King who rules that day, and the planet of that day. Serving each King is the Prince of a different (but presumably related) planet, and the forty-two Ministers of that Prince. The single-letter names of the Ministers are arranged in a square of six rows, each row containing the seven letters that rule the 240-minute segment of the day of the King whom their Prince serves.

In addition to these angelic names, each part of the grimoire contains the circular seal of the forty-two Ministers of the Prince, the seal or character of the Prince himself, and a seal containing the name of one of the seven Sons of the seven Sons of Light. These seals that contain the names of the Sons are probably the seals of the Kings.

You will recall from Chapter Six that the names of Sons of the Sons were derived by reading diagonally on a letter table received by Kelley on March 21, 1582. You will also recall that the character of the Prince is to be placed on the Table of Practice (or perhaps on the circular seal of the Ministers, depending on the interpretation), and the circular seal of the Ministers is to be put under the feet of the magician during the invocation of the angels into the stone.

The First Table of the Kings and Princes

The relationship between the Kings and the Princes has a basis elsewhere in the angelic communications. It results from the first form of the letter square from which the Enochian letters on the Holy Table of Practice were derived. This letter square is composed of the names of the Kings and Princes (minus the initial B in each name) written side by side in a square of seven rows and twelve columns. I gave the second, rationalized form of this table in Chapter Six while explaining how the Enochian letters on the Table of Practice were derived. Shown here is an earlier form in which each King was not aligned with its own Prince.*

(7th Prince)	lonega	nogila	(1st King)
(1st Prince)	ogonro	legobo	(2nd King)
(2nd Prince)	sefafe	lelaba	(3rd King)
(3rd Prince)	onomtu	ropeny	(4th King)
(4th Prince)	nodsil	lopsan	(5th King)
(5th Prince)	segror	nespan	(6th King)
(6th Prince)	seglar	azamul	(7th King)

First Table of the Kings and Princes

The relationship between the King and Prince on each row of this table is the same relationship that exists in Dee's heptarchical grimoire. The letters in the names of this earlier table are read from right to left. For example, Bnaspol, the King of Mercury who rules Wednesday and is the fifth King on Dee's circular Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49, is mated with the fourth Prince, Blisdon, who is the Prince of Jupiter. Why this odd relationship between the Kings and Princes exists is not clear, but at least there is a letter square to show that it was not a mistake.

Preparations for the Use of the Heptarchy

In general preparation for the work, the magician should fast moderately and maintain a scrupulous cleanliness, both of the body and the clothing. The ritual place must also be kept clean and tidy. Alcohol, tobacco, drugs and sex should be avoided for at least a day before the ritual. Avoid all extremes of behavior. If a series of related rituals is undertaken, abstinence and chastity on the part of the magician will greatly increase the likelihood of success.

A general prayer for the success of the work should be spoken three times each day during the entire period of the ritual working: at dawn, at midday, and at sunset. Dee used the following prayer, which I have simplified somewhat, but the magician may compose an original prayer that perfectly expresses his or her attitude toward the work.

> O Almighty, eternal, true and living God; O King of Glory; O Lord of Hosts; O Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things visible and invisible: grant unto your simple servant (N.) your manifold mercies.

> I most humbly beseech you to have mercy upon me, to have pity upon me, to have compassion upon me, one who long since has faithfully and sincerely sought to obtain a portion of true knowledge and understanding of your laws and ordinances established in the natures and properties of your creatures.
>
> And since it has pleased you, O God, of your infinite goodness, by your faithful and holy spiritual messengers, to deliver to me a true understanding and comprehension of the orderly form and manner of heptarchical magic, that I may have the use, counsel and help of your many good angels according to their functions and offices, I do most humbly beseech your divine Majesty to favor and forward my present endeavor in this work.
>
> For the sake of your dearly beloved Son, Jesus Christ (O Heavenly Father) I ask that you grant to me this blessing and portion of your heavenly grace. Henceforth enable me and make me apt and acceptable in body, soul and spirit, so that I may always enjoy the friendly conversation and plain, sensible and perfect help, in both word and deed, of your mighty, wise and good spiritual messengers; especially blessed Michael, blessed Gabriel, blessed Raphael and blessed Uriel. Also, especially of those Ministers of the heptarchical mysteries, under the method of the seven mighty Kings and their seven faithful and princely ministers, with their subjects and servants to them belonging.
>
> In your great mercy and grace, O Almighty God, confirm that you are the true and Almighty God, creator of heaven and Earth, upon whom I call and in whom I put my trust. And that your Ministers are true and faithful angels of light, with whom I deal by this heptarchical art.
>
> Grant this prayer, O Heavenly Father, that I may be enabled to better serve you to your greater honor and glory. Grant this for the sake of your only begotten son, Jesus Christ.
>
> Amen. Amen. Amen.[7]

Erecting the Ritual Chamber

The magician lays the red silk carpet or its substitute on the floor of the ritual chamber, positions the four hemispherical cases of laurel that contain the four lesser duplicates of the Sigillum Aemeth, and sets the legs of the Table of Practice upon the disks holding the wax seals. The Table is oriented so that its top edge is in the east. Over the surface of the Table a plain linen undercloth is laid that hangs down almost to the carpet. The Sigillum Aemeth is placed on this cloth, in the exact center of the table. If tin plates are used for the seven Ensigns of Creation, these are spaced around the great wax seal of Aemeth as shown in the diagram of the tabletop. Otherwise, the Ensigns are painted directly upon the Table.

A smaller cloth of iridescent red-green silk with golden tassels at its corners is now laid over the Sigillum Aemeth and the Ensigns. The tassels should hang about midway down the legs of the Table. On top of this in the middle of the Sigillum Aemeth is set the scrying stone in its gold frame of four legs (in my opinion this frame should have three legs, but Dee illustrates it with four legs). A consecrated white candle in a single candlestick should be put in the middle of the eastern quarter of the Table to burn during the ritual.

On the edge of the red carpet to the west of the Table of Practice, the magician places the circular table of the forty-two Ministers who serve on the day of the ritual. He stands on this circle of letters during the invocations, and, when seated in the green wooden chair while scrying, rests his feet on it.

The seal of the Prince of the day, who rules the Ministers, is set in the middle of the western quadrant of the Table of Practice. (By another interpretation of Dee's text, this seal is placed on top of the circular table of the Ministers, and then the magician stands on both the seal and the table.)

During the invocations and scrying, the magician holds in his hand (probably the left hand) a circular disk of laurel on which is painted the seal of the King associated with the day. The seal is surrounded by a ring containing the seven letters in the name of the King of the day. A second outer ring contains corresponding cipher letters related to the letters in the name of the King.

Around the neck on a gold chain or silk thread the holy Lamen hangs so that it lies over the heart of the magician. The seal ring of Solomon is worn on the finger (probably the right index finger). Although no robe is mentioned in the manuscript, a simple robe of white linen would be appropriate for ritual work. The feet are best left bare, but this is not specified.

Exordiums to the Kings and Princes

Standing on the circular table of the Ministers of the Prince who serves the King of the day, with the round table of the King in the left hand and the seal of the Prince on the Table of Practice, the magician speaks the Exordium to the Heptarchical King:

> O noble King (N.), in this name and by whatever other names you are called or may truly be called (recite his other names, if known), and by your government, charge, disposition and kingly office, which is (briefly describe the office of the King), in the name of the King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the Almighty God, creator of heaven and earth and of all things visible and invisible, I invoke and summon you into this holy crystal stone. Amen.

O right noble King (N.), come now and appear with your Prince and his Ministers, and your subjects, clearly to my sight in a good and friendly manner to my comfort and help, to advance the honor and glory of Almighty God by my service. That by the wisdom and power of your kingly office and government I may be helped and enabled to attain my purpose, which is (state your purpose). Amen.

Come, O right noble King (N.), I say, come! Amen.[6]

After reciting the Exordium to the King, the magician speaks the Exordium to the Prince:

O noble Prince (N.), in this name and by whatever other names you are called or may truly be called (recite his other names, if known), and by your government, charge, disposition, office and princely dignity, which is (briefly describe the office of the Prince), in the name of Almighty God, the King of Kings, and for his honor and glory to be advanced by my faithful service, I invoke and summon you into this holy crystal stone. Amen.

I require you, O noble Prince (N.) to come now, and to show yourself visibly in a good and friendly manner, along with your Ministers, servants and subjects, to my comfort and help, that my purpose shall be well and truly fulfilled, which is (state your purpose) in Wisdom and Power according to the properties of your noble office. Amen.

Come, O noble Prince (N.), I say, come! Amen.[7]

These exordiums to the Kings and Princes have been modernized and edited to clarify their purpose. The spaces in the exordiums should be filled in using the information provided in the descriptions given in Chapter Nine. In a separate section of his manuscript, Dee listed specific characteristics and qualities of the individual Kings and Princes that are intended to be used in their invocation into the stone.

A portion of this material is composed of statements actually uttered by the spirits to Dee through Kelley.

These statements express essential aspects of the spirits. By repeating these statements, prefaced by the words "you have said," the magician demonstrates a true knowledge of the spirit. It is an ancient belief in magic that by reciting the acts and nature of a spirit, as well as voicing its name and describing its appearance, power is gained to command that spirit. Dee relied on this technique in his invocations.

Where several statements made by a spirit were recorded by Dee, I have selected only the most potent and characteristic. In a few instances no statements are given by Dee. I have supplied them from the descriptions of the spirits. These descriptions of the spirits, their functions, their alternative names and their statements must be incorporated into the appropriate places of the exordiums. It is this explicitly expressed knowledge of the names, descriptions, statements, and offices of the spirits that gives the magician power over them.

Closing the Ritual

After communicating with the angels through the medium of the scrying crystal and directing them according to the ritual desire, the magician speaks a general prayer of thanks to God, the King, and the Prince, then dismisses the angels from the stone in the name of the King of Kings, Almighty God. The candle is extinguished and the stone put away. The tasseled silk cloth is removed and the Sigillum Aemeth stored in a safe place, along with the seals and other instruments. If the Table of Practice is erected in a ritual temple where it will not be disturbed, it may be left covered by the white linen cloth and standing on its four wax seals and red carpet.

Chapter Nine

The Heptarchical Angels

The King of Kings

There is some confusion about the names and offices of the seven Kings. King Carmara, the first King to appear to Kelley, is related by Dee to both Monday (Moon) and Friday (Venus). The same is true of Prince Hagonel, the Prince who serves Carmara. Yet both Monday and Friday have Kings and Princes of their own whose names begin with B, in accordance with the system used for all the other names of the forty-nine good angels.

Dee states quite clearly concerning Baligon, the King of Friday and Venus, "he is the same mighty King, who is here first described by the name of Carmara."[1] Nevertheless, I am inclined to place Carmara in a position of superior authority over the other seven Kings, and similarly to place Hagonel in authority over the other seven Princes whose names start with B.

Carmara is pre-eminently a King of the Moon, which enjoys a special position in Enochian magic. Monday is the Enochian Sabbath, or holy day, on which Dee and Kelley received the majority of important angelic communications. Thus, in my opinion, Carmara is a kind of King of Kings (although this title, strictly speaking, is reserved for Jesus Christ), and Hagonel is a Prince of Princes.

Carmara tells Dee:

> First cast thine eyes unto the general Prince, Governor or Angel that is principal in this world. Then place my name that thou hast already. Then the name of him that was showed thee yesterday (with the short coat). Then his power, with the rest of his six perfect ministers. With these three thou shalt work to a good end. All the rest thou may use to God's glory for every one of them shall minister to thy necessities.[2]

The principal Governor of the world is probably Jesus Christ. After him in authority follows Carmara, followed by Hagonel, his Prince. Then come the six ranks of Ministers who serve Hagonel, with each rank containing seven members. "All the rest" would seem to be the seven Kings whose names begin with B, along with their Princes and Ministers.

I find it useful to think of Carmara acting as the general leader of the Kings under the name of King Blumaza, a name he assumes for his function as King of the Moon. Similarly, I regard Prince Hagonel as assuming the name of Prince Bagenol for his position of authority as the Prince of the Moon.

The cause of the confusion is Dee's identification of Carmara and Hagonel with the King Baligon (Venus) and Prince Bagenol (Moon), who rule Friday, but also with King Blumaza (Moon) and Prince Bralges (Saturn), who rule Monday. This dual identity, and indeed the very existence of Carmara and Hagonel, has never been satisfactorily explained. They would seem to be unnecessary to the system of heptarchical magic. Yet clearly the angels placed them in the position of highest importance.

The Coming of King Carmara

Carmara was called into the showstone by the archangel Uriel. He came with the appearance of a gracefully proportioned man dressed in a long purple robe (purple was the regal color of the Roman emperors) wearing a triple crown upon his head. Seven other spirits who took the form of men and subsequently declared themselves to be the seven heptarchical Princes waited on him. Uriel gave Carmara a rod divided into three parts, two of which were black (probably the ends) and one red. Concerning Carmara, Dee writes:

> This King only was the orderer, or disposer of all the doctrines which I term Heptarchical, and first by calling the 7 Princes, and after that the 7 Kings: and by giving instructions for use and practice of the whole doctrine Heptarchical: for the first purpose and fruit thereof to be enjoyed by me ...[3]

We may assume that the Princes were summoned first because they are the active agents of the heptarchical magic. The Kings sit in authority over the Princes and command their actions, but do nothing directly. The Kings are the seats of power, and the Princes are their instruments.

Carmara revealed to Dee a flag on a pole. The pole had three points, similar to a crown, at its top. The obverse or front of the flag bore, on the right side, the image of a woman without arms standing in a dress. On the left side, it bore the large capital letters C and B, one above the other, inverted as in a mirror left to right. On the reverse of the flag were the Royal Arms of England, called by Dee "the flag old," which was the English flag from 1400–1603. It consists of four quarters, with two quarters diagonally opposite each containing three fleurs-de-lis (symbol of France), and the other two quarters each holding three reclining lions (lions passant guardant—symbol of England).

Carmara called this flag "the Sign of the Work." We can only speculate about its meaning, since it was never explained by the angels. The fact that the figure on it is female is significant, since all the other heptarchical angels are male (or, in some cases, male and female combined). Queen Elizabeth was the symbol of supreme authority in England in Dee's day. This image may represent her heavenly counterpart, the mysterious Mother of the angel Madimi, who is the same as the Queen of Heaven of Revelation 12:1. Perhaps she is shown without arms because she acts through her angelic agents, not directly. The C on the flag may signify the name Carmara, while the B may stand for the forty-nine good angels whose names all begin with B.

Prince Hagonel and His Great Seal

After Carmara, Prince Hagonel appeared in the form of a man in a red robe. Dee notes that all the Princes have red robes, but the robe of Hagonel was shorter than the robes of the other Princes. Likewise, all the Princes have circlets of gold upon their heads rather than crowns. Hagonel held in the palm of his right hand "a round ring with a prick in the midst," which may mean a disk since Dee describes it as "hanging also over his middle fingers." Hagonel told Dee that this ring or disk was Hagonel's seal. It bore the name Barees. Dee drew it in the form of the symbol of the Sun (☉) in his manuscript.

All of the Princes together held up a great star with seven points which Dee called the "Heptagon Stellar." It seemed to Kelley to be made of copper, the metal of Venus. Dee drew this star in his manuscript. The seal of Hagonel was placed in its uppermost point. The name of the first Prince, Bornogo (Venus), who is Prince under King Bobogel (Sun) on Sunday, was written to the right of the uppermost point. The name of the second Prince, Befafes (Sun), who is Prince under King Babalil (Mars) on Tuesday, was written to the right of the second point, moving clockwise.

The Heptagon Stellar

This copper star appears to be the great seal of the heptarchical grimoire. It illustrates the correct order of the days for the material that follows. The days are to be ordered according to the order of the Princes on the ring of the forty-nine good angels: Bornogo (Sunday), Befafes (Tuesday), Butmono (Thursday), Blisdon (Wednesday), Brorges (Saturday), Bralges (Monday) and Bagenol (Friday). Dee adheres to this order in his presentation, with the exception of placing the angels of Friday (seventh Prince) ahead of the angels of Monday (sixth Prince). I believe this to be an error, and I have corrected it in the present chapter.

The Sons of Light and Their Sons

After the Princes present this great copper symbol, the servants of Prince Hagonel are presented. These are the "Sons of men and their Sons." The "Sons of men," Dee noted, are the same as the Sons of Light.

Sons of Light
I, Ih, Isr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, Stimcul

Sons of the Sons
E(l), An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagon(el), Ilemese

You will remember that the Sons of Light and their Sons were inscribed upon the heptagram and lesser heptagon of the Sigillum Aemeth, while the Daughters of Light and their Daughters (who are not mentioned here) were inscribed in the spaces inside the heptagram and lesser heptagon.

Both the Sons of Light and their Sons were described to Dee on March 21, 1582. The Sons of Light came as seven youths with bright, pleasant expressions, wearing white garments and white silk cloths on their heads that hung down like twisted rope in the back to touch the ground. Every one of them carried a metal ball in his hand. The first Son carried a ball of gold, the second silver, the third copper, the fourth tin, the fifth iron, the sixth quicksilver, and the seventh lead. All had round tablets of gold on their breasts that bore the letters of their names.

The Sons of the Sons came in the forms of small boys wearing purple gowns with long, hanging sleeves ("like priests' or scholars' gown-sleeves"), and purple cloths about their heads that hung in the back in twisted wreaths down to the ground. They had green triangular tablets on their breasts on which were written the letters of their names. Dee notes that the letters of the first Son of the Sons, El, were combined together into a single character. Sometimes only the E is used to represent this spirit. It should be noted that the "el" in the name Hagonel is also combined into a single character to produce six letters in this name.

The Key to the Seals of the Kings

The metal balls in the hands of the Sons of Light may be extremely important. I am inclined to believe that they are the key to the correct placement of the seals of the Kings (each of which contains a name of the Sons of the Sons) with the proper day and King. The planetary metal associated with the Son of Light who corresponds with the Son of the Sons on the seal of each King should be the same as the planetary metal of the Prince serving the King. If my speculation is correct, the relationship between the seals of the Kings and the Princes of the Kings would be as follows:

Sunday
1st Prince: Bornogo (Venus)
2nd King: Bobogel (seal of 3rd S. of S. Ave: copper)

Tuesday
2nd Prince: Befafes (Sun)
3rd King: Babalel (seal of 1st S. of S. E(l): gold)*

Thursday
3rd Prince: Butmono (Mars)
4th King: Bynepor (seal of the 5th S. of S. Rocle: iron)

Wednesday
4th Prince: Blisdon (Jupiter)
5th King: Bnaspol (seal of the 4th S. of S. Liba: tin)*

Saturday
5th Prince: Brorges (Mercury)
6th King: Bnapsen (seal of the 6th S. of S. Hagonel: quicksilver)

Monday
6th Prince: Bralges (Saturn)
7th King: Blumaza (seal of the 7th S. of S. Ilemese: lead)

Friday
7th Prince: Bagenol (Moon)
1st King: Baligon (seal of the 2nd S. of S. An: silver)*

The asterisks after the metals of the Sons of the Sons in the seals of the Kings are those that have been changed from the ones given in Dee's manuscript. The placement of the other four seals in the Heptarchia Mystica is in accord with this system I have proposed.

Below, I have allowed the seals of the Kings to remain in the days and with the Kings to which Dee assigned them in his Heptarchia Mystica. The key I have suggested above may be in error. Since so much of the structural basis for Enochian magic remains hidden, it is always dangerous to make changes, or to state emphatically that some portion of the system is incorrect.

The Angels of the Seven Days

In the descriptions that follow, it should be noted that although I use the words of Dee's manuscript in many places, this is not a transcription of the Heptarchia Mystica, but my attempt to interpret and expand Dee's often cryptic comments, and to rationalize the structure of the grimoire.

Sunday

Second King: Bobogel (Sun)
He appeared in a black velvet coat, close round hose with velvet upperstocks overlaid with gold lace, wearing on his head a velvet hat-cap with a black feather in it. His cape hung rakishly from one shoulder. He wore his purse on a long thong around his neck that was tucked inside his girdle, and on the other side of his girdle an ornamental gilded rapier. Platform overshoes raised his silk slippers above the mud of the street. His beard was long, his manner ostentatious.

Seal of King Bobogel: 3rd S. of the Sons – Ave

His office is the granting and distribution of all wisdom and science. He teaches philosophy, natural history, and a true understanding of the mysteries of the universe.

"It is not too late to learn."

First Prince: Bornogo (Venus)
He appeared in a red robe wearing a gold circlet upon his head, and showed his seal.

His is the art of transforming the corruption of nature into perfection. He teaches the knowledge of metals, and ministers under his king Bobogel the bestowing of all true learning that is grounded in wisdom.

"What thou desirest in me shall be fulfilled."

Seal of Prince Bornogo

The 42 Ministers of Bornogo

The first group of seven ministers appeared in costly formal clothing similar to that worn by King Bobogel. The other ranks were dressed as ruffians. The last group of seven appeared to be women from the front but men from the rear. They danced, leapt into the air, and kissed one another.

All came forward into a circle. The seven sages stood together. The first sage raised his right foot to reveal an L, the letter of his name. The rest did the same, each in his turn.

L E E N A R B
L N A N A E B
R O E M N A B
L E A O R I B
N E I C I A B
A O I D I A B

Seal of the Ministers of Bornogo

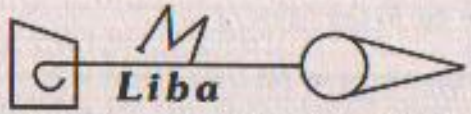
The first seven merged together into a flame and sank down into the transparent fiery globe of the new world. The second seven fell through the earth like drops of molten metal. The third seven clasped their hands together and dropped down in a dense smoke. The fourth seven joined together and fell like drops of water. The fifth seven fell down like hailstones. The last seven vanished away.

On another occasion when summoned by King Carmara these ministers came carrying a large round table over their heads. They laid it on the ground and stood around it. On the table before each minister was the letter of his name.

Tuesday

Third King: Babalel (Mars)

He appeared wearing a long white robe. The left sleeve was white and the right sleeve black. He seemed to stand upon the surface of water. A crown of gold adorned his head. On his forehead the letters of his name were written.



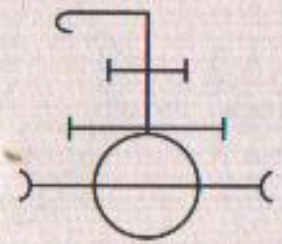
Seal of King Babalel: 4th S. of the Sons – Liba

The power of this king arises from the depths of waters. He is the mighty and wonderful ruler of waters.

"Glorify, praise and honor God."

Second Prince: Befafes (Sun)

He appeared in a long red feathered robe with a circlet of gold upon his head. Written on his golden girdle were the letters of his name. He opened the front of his robe, and appeared to be lame when he walked. His manner was noble and courteous.



Seal of Prince Befafes

He is the prince of the seas whose power is on the waters. He served Moses to punish Pharaoh of Egypt by closing up the Red Sea on the Egyptian army, and also was a servant of Solomon and the magician Michael Scot, who named this prince Mares. It may have been Dee's belief that it was this spirit who saved him and Kelley from drowning in the English Channel during a gale.[8] The Egyptians named him Obelison, that is, a pleasant deliverer.

"Use me in the name of God."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Befafes

The first rank of seven ministers had circlets of gold around their heads to indicate that they are Princes of the Waters. All of the ministers had the letters of their names written on their foreheads. The letters of the first seven fell down between their feet and were covered over with moving water.

The first seven took the water in their hands and threw it into the air. It became clouds. The second seven threw up the water, and it turned into hail and snow. Each rank in turn threw the water into the air. Then all dived into the water and vanished away.

E I L O M F O
N E O T P T A
S A G A C I Y
O N E D P O N
N O O N M A N
E T E V L G L

Seal of the Ministers of Befafes

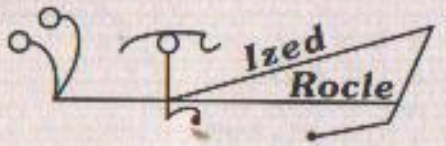
These noble ministers are of great power, dignity and authority. Some measure the motions of waters and regulate the saltiness of the seas. Some give success in sea battles. Some rule the fishes and monsters of the deep. Some deliver up treasures and unknown substances from beneath the waves. In general they distribute God's judgments upon the waters that cover the globe.

Thursday

Fourth King: Bynepor (Jupiter)

He appeared in royal robes with a golden crown on his head. The power of this king is distributed throughout and sustains the general state and condition of things. He is in all, and all have their being by him. Although he had a beginning, he can never have an end. He is the workmanship of the word of God, only a single degree lower than the Vita Suprema (Highest Life). He is the Vita Superior (Higher Life), of whom it may be said: the Vita Infima (Lowest Life) is measured by your hands. He begins new worlds, new peoples, new royal dynasties, and new forms of government. Yet none of his power is of himself, but all comes from the name of God.

"Thou shalt work marvels by my workmanship in the Highest."



Seal of King Bynepor: 5th S. of the Sons – Rocle

Third Prince: Butmono (Mars)

He appeared in a red robe with a golden circlet on his head.

Seal of Prince Butmono

All the beasts of the earth are embrued with the vital essence of this spirit, and take their living pattern from him, excepting only humankind, which is formed in the image of God. He knows the origin, the living, and the end of all beasts, and regulates them with the measure of time. His seal is their glory.

"O God, thou art sanctified: and thou rejoicest."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Butmono

They appeared as formless, smoky ghosts, each with a glittering fiery spark in his midst. The first seven in the foremost rank were red as blood, the second rank were

B B A R N F L
B B A I G A O
B B A L P A E
B B A N I F G
B B O S N I A
B B A S N O D

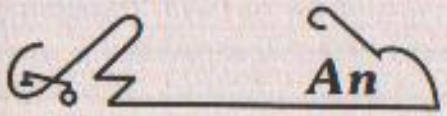
Seal of the Ministers of Butmono orange, the third were whitish. These three had sparks larger and brighter than the rest. The fourth, fifth and sixth ranks were of mingled colors, with smaller sparks in their middle sections. Each spark had the letter of the name of a minister written within it.

Wednesday

Fifth King: Bnaspol (Mercury)

He appeared in a red robe wearing a golden crown on his head.



Seal of King Bnaspol: 2nd S. of the Sons – An

The bowels of the Earth and all her secrets are delivered into the hands of this king. He has knowledge of the mysteries of the past.

"He in whom thou art is greater than thou."

Fourth Prince: Blisdon (Jupiter)

He came dressed in a robe of many colors, but predominantly red, and wore on his head a circlet of gold.

Seal of Prince Blisdon

It is his function to conceal or reveal the secrets hidden within the earth, according to the commands of his king. He finds treasures that are buried and rich veins of metals to be mined. All caverns and subterranean rivers are known to him.

"To me the keys of the mysteries of the earth are delivered."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Blisdon

They seemed to stand in a ring around a little hill of clay. Behind them in the distance stood a multitude of ugly dwarfs, who are spirits of perdition that guard the treasures of the earth for the Devil. The ministers had in their hands the letters of their names.

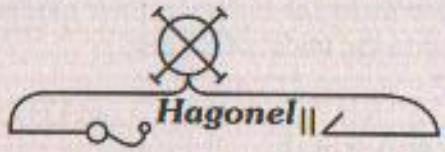
E L G N S E B
N L I N Z V B
S F A M L L B
O O G O S R S
N R P C R R B
e r g d b a b

Seal of the Ministers of Blisdon

Saturday

Sixth King: Bnapsen (Saturn)

He appeared in the form of a king wearing a long robe with a golden crown on his head.



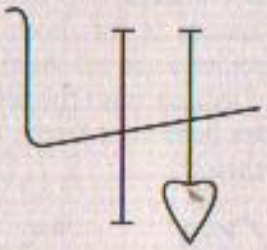
Seal of King Bnapsen: 6th S. of the Sons – Hagon(el)

The office of this king is to banish and exorcise evil spirits, and to reveal the wicked thoughts and deeds of bad men. He has dominion over the gates of death.

"By me you shall cast out wicked spirits."

Fifth Prince: Brorges (Mercury)

He appeared dressed all in red. When he opened his clothes, ghastly and terrible flames of fire issued out of his sides, which no mortal eye could look upon for more than an instant. Within the flames the letters of his name were tossed to and fro.



Seal of Prince Brorges

He carries out the commands of his king upon evil spirits and wicked men.

"I know the door of death."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Brorges

The ministers appeared carrying a round table. On the table were written the letters of their names. They cast this table into the midst of flames.

B A N S S Z E
B Y A P A R E
B N A M G E N
B N V A G E S
B L B O P O O
B A B E P E N

Seal of the Ministers of Brorges

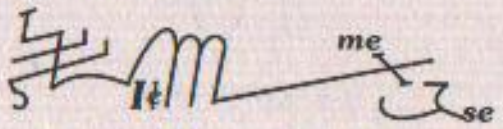
Monday

Seventh King: Blumaza (Moon)

He appeared as a man with a regal manner, wearing a red robe and a crown of gold.

The power of names is his, both to know and to bequeath. By these names are all the spirits of the earth made subject and obedient unto the will of man.

"These mysteries hath God lastly, of his great mercies, granted unto thee."



Seal of King Blumaza: 7th S. of the Sons – Hemese

Sixth Prince: Bralges

He appeared in a red robe with a circlet of gold on his head. He is the last of the seven Princes who hold up the points of the Stellar Heptagon. He set down his burden and extended his hands to the others to form a ring around the copper star. The seven Princes danced playfully in a circle around the star.

Seal of Prince Bralges

At the command of his King he teaches the secret names of the invisible spirits by which they are summoned and ruled.

"The creatures subject unto me shall be known to you."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Bralges

The ministers are invisible, but appeared as little puffs of white smoke without any form. All around them the world shone with brightness.

O E S N G L E
A V Z N I L N
Y L L M A F S
N R S O G O O N R R C P R N
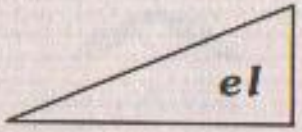
L A B D G R E

Seal of the Ministers of Bralges

Friday

First King: Baligon (Venus)
He came in the form of a well-proportioned man wearing a long purple gown and a triple crown of gold on his head, and carried a measuring rod of gold in his hand that was divided into three equal parts. The central part of the rod was red, the two outer parts black. His greater name is Carmara, which is voiced among the angels Marmara (but the first M is silent).



Seal of King Baligon: 1st S. of the Sons – E(l)

From the angel Uriel he had received the golden rod of governing and measuring, as well as the chair of dignity and doctrine. He was the first to appear. He is the teacher, the orderer or disposer of all the doctrines termed heptarchical.

"Come, let us seek the works of God."

Seventh Prince: Bagenol (Moon)
He came wearing a short red robe with a circlet of gold upon his head. In the palm of his right hand he carried a ring or disk with a small hole in the center. This is his seal, which is named Barees.

The Sons of Light and their Sons, and the Daughters of Light and their Daughters, are all his servants. To his power the operation of the earth is subject. He is the first of the twelve, and commands the kings, princes and noblemen of nature. By the seven of the seven Sons

Seal of Prince Bagenol

he works marvels among the people of the earth. He is also called Hagonel.

"By me you shall work marvels."

The 42 Ministers of Prince Bagenol
They appeared like bright people. About them the air swarmed with creatures. Their letters were on their foreheads.

A O A Y N N L
L B B N A A V
I O A E S P M
G G L P P S A
O E E O O E Z
N L L R L N A

Seal of the Ministers of Bagenol

Note: It seems clear to me from the text that Friday should be moved to the front of this list of the days of the week, ahead of Sunday, and that the days should be ordered according to the order of the Kings, not the order of the Princes (Friday, Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Wednesday, Saturday, Monday). I have tried to present the material as it is given in Dee's manuscript, but the manuscript is quite confused. It was necessary to restructure some of it.

CHAPTER TEN

The Great Table of the Watchtowers

THE FORTY-EIGHT GATES TO THE CITIES OF WISDOM

On April 12, 1584, at Cracow, the angel Nalvage (through Kelley) said, concerning Enochian magic:

> Raphael that brought up the prayers descended: and he was full with the power, & spirit of God: and it became a Doctrine, such was never from the beginning: Not painted, or carved: filed, or imagined by man, or according to their imaginations, which are of flesh: but simple, plain, full of strength, and the power of the holy Ghost: which Doctrine began, as man did, nakedly from the earth: but yet, the image of perfection. This selfsame Art is it, which is delivered unto you an infallible Doctrine, containing in it the waters, which runne through many Gates: even above the Gate of Innocency, wherein you are taught to finde out the Dignity and Corruption of nature: also made partakers of the secret Judgements of the Almighty to be made manifest, and to be put into execution.... I am therefore to instruct and inform you, according to your Doctrine delivered, which is contained in 49 Tables. In 49 voyces, or callings: which are the Natural Keyes, to open those, not 49 but 48 (for One is not to be opened) Gates of understanding, whereby you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary, which can very well, righteously, and wisely, open unto you the secrets of their Cities, & make you understand perfectly the [mysteries] contained in the Tables. Through which knowledge you shall easily be able to judge, not as the world doth, but perfectly of the world, and of all things contained within the Compasse of Nature, and of all things which are subject to an end.[1]

On May 21 of the same year, after delivering to Dee the names of the parts of the earth that are ruled by the first fourteen Aethers, the angel Mapsama spoke more specifically about the Gates:

Mapsama: These Calls touch all the parts of the World. The world may be dealt withall, with her parts: Therefore you may do anything. These Calls are the keyes into the Gates and Cities of wisdom. Which [Gates] are not able to be opened, but with visible apparition.

Dee: And how shall that be come unto?

Mapsama: Which is according to the former instructions: and to be had, by calling of every Table.[2]

When Nalvage says that the doctrine of Enoch is not "painted, or carved: filed, or imagined by man, according to their imaginations, which are of flesh: but simple, plain, full of strength," he means that it is mathematical and geometrical in nature. The forty-nine tables are the large number-letter squares in Dee's Book of Enoch, each of which has forty-nine rows by forty-nine columns. From these were extracted, at the directions of the angels, the Enochian Keys.

The forty-eight gates of the cities, or astral residences, that may be open by the forty-eight Calls or Keys, are symbolically represented by a large letter square that is divided into four parts by a central cross called the Black Cross (it is colored black in Dee's manuscript). This large letter square is known as the Great Table. Each of the four quadrants on this Table is called a Watchtower. Twelve of the celestial cities are accessed through each Watchtower. The gates of the Watchtowers must be opened to allow the passage of the Enochian angels from their own cities into the universe of human consciousness. Each city is represented, or keyed, by a set of letters in a geometric and numerical pattern.

Tyson's Restored Great Table

The Great Table and the City of God

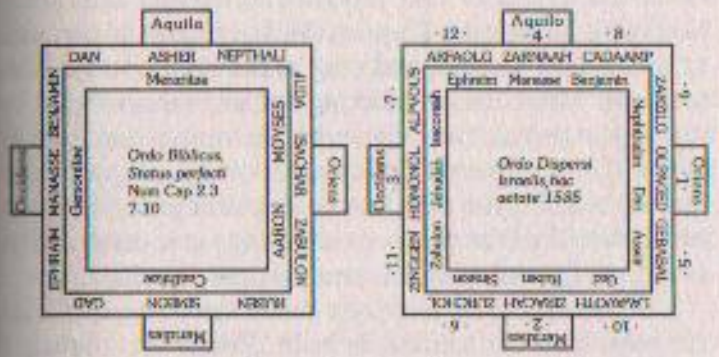
There seems to be an implicit similarity between the structure of the Great Table and the structure of New Jerusalem described in Revelation 21 and 22. New Jerusalem is laid out in a square. Each wall has three gates, for a total of twelve, "and at the gates twelve

Four Rivers of New Jerusalem

angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel." The walls of the city have twelve foundations, or foundation stones, each a semiprecious stone upon which is written the name of one of the twelve apostles of Jesus. These stones are probably intended to be the same that were in the breastplate of the High Priest of Israel.[3]

In the center of New Jerusalem, the Lamb of God (Christ) is seated upon a throne from which flows the river of the water of life. This is usually depicted as having four streams that flow outward in the four cardinal directions.

John Dee was aware of this similarity in structure between the Great Table and New Jerusalem. He drew two square diagrams showing the assignment of the twelve tribes to the four directions of space based on Numbers 2 and 7, and Revelation 21, in his magical journal that deals with the assignment and evocation of spirits on the Great Table.[4]



Order of the Twelve Tribes of Israel

The diagram on the left places the tribes of Israel in the quarters of the world they are assigned in the second chapter of the biblical book of Numbers, where the ordering of the tents of the tribes around the Tabernacle is described. This same ordering of the tribes to the directions occurs in the seventh chapter of Numbers, which sets forth the order in which the tribes made sacrifice at the altar. The order unfolds in a single cycle east, south, west and north, proceeding clockwise. As will be seen later on, this ordering of the directions is crucial to a true comprehension of the placement of the Watchtowers on the Great Table. In the center of the diagram, Dee has written in Latin that this is the biblical order and perfect condition of the tribes.

In the diagram on the right, the tribes are ordered to the directions as they were delivered to Dee by the Enochian angels. Next to the name of each tribe is the name of its guardian or tutelary angel. Notice particularly the numbers Dee has inserted into this diagram. The ordering of the tribes and the angels proceeds in three clockwise cycles of four around the square, each cycle beginning in the east. These cycles have great importance in connection with the ordering of the Enochian Keys on the Great Table. This numbering system was also used by the angels to link the tribes with the ninety-one Princes of the Thirty Aethers. In the center of this diagram, Dee has written in Latin that this is the order of the tribes of Israel after the Diaspora, or scattering, as it exists in the year 1585 (presumably the year he drew the diagram).

These diagrams may represent New Jerusalem or the great altar of sacrifice, or both. Notice that there are three levels in each diagram, or (regarding them as altars) three steps. It is not clear in the diagrams whether the tabs containing the directions should be considered as a separate level, or placed on the same level as the first step. The altar for burnt offerings was square and three cubits high, which may have signified three steps or levels.[5]

The Architecture of the Great Table

The Great Table as a whole reflects this imitation of the pattern of New Jerusalem. Ignore for the moment the letters written on it and consider it as the ground plan for a walled city or fortress that contains within it lesser walled compounds. Each of the long columns and rows would then represent a street. At the ends of these streets are gates. The city has three primary avenues leading into it from each of its four sides, and four lesser avenues. When the four lesser avenues are considered, each side of the Great Table has seven gates, for a total of twenty-eight; a significant number, because it is the number of the Mansions of the Moon. The Great Black Cross that runs through the center of the Table may be assumed to represent the four streams of the river of life that flows out from the throne of Christ, situated at the intersection of the cross.

There are forty-two of these avenues on the Great Table, and since each avenue has two gates, eighty-four gates in all (twenty-one gates, the number of Enochian letters, for each Watchtower). The Great Table may be considered as a whole entity which is divided into four quarters by the Black Cross running through its center. Each quarter, or Watchtower, is in some respects a smaller version of the Great Table. It also has a cross running through its center that divides it into four quarters. Each Watchtower has one main gate in each side and two lesser gates, for a total of twelve exterior gates. By the same token, each quarter of a Watchtower has a cross running through it that divides it into four parts.

Quarters of the Watchtower have only one external gate in each wall, for a total of four.

The central row of each Watchtower, called the "line of God," contains three divine names of power. Reading left to right, these names are composed of three, four and five letters each. For example, the line of God in the Watchtower that occupies the upper left corner of the Great Table contains the divine names ORO, IBAH and AOZPI. There is a direct correlation between these twelve divine names, the twelve permutations of the Hebrew name of God, IHVH, and the twelve tribes of Israel, as I will demonstrate later. It should be noted that each line of God contains a total of twelve letters, and that all four contain forty-eight letters, the number of the gates to the angelic cities.

There may be an important distinction between the spirits represented by the letters in the avenues upon the Great Table, and the spirits represented by the letters contained within the sixty-four walled enclosures. I am inclined to think of the spirits whose names lie within the enclosed spaces as female, and the spirits whose names lie on the avenues, or arms of the crosses, as male, although there is no explicit evidence in Dee's diaries that this sexual division exists. The enclosed spaces call to my mind the walled-off seraglios of Eastern monarchs where their brides and concubines were kept isolated.

This diagrammatic aspect of the Great Table and the Watchtowers is almost never mentioned in descriptions of Enochian magic. Dee makes no reference to it directly in his Enochian diaries and workbooks, but it may be inferred from comments made by the angels. I do not wish to mislead you. This city architecture of the Great Table is my personal speculation, and is not an established aspect of modern Enochian magic.

The Square and the Circle

It is more certain that the Great Table is intended to be surrounded by a larger circle. The square of the Table represents our own earthly realm below the sphere of the Moon. The angels inhabit it in their manifest, earthly forms—that is, their names. The greater circle stands for the totality and unity of creation, embracing the three realms of heaven, earth and hell. The Great Table is thus the central portion of the plan of the universe, foursquare because it is manifest and imperfect.

The image of the Great Table as a square within a circle appears a number of times in the Enochian books. Perhaps the most important occurrence is a diagram in the unpublished manuscript Liber Scientiae that was drawn by Dee. It represents the Great Table surrounded by flags bearing the twelve divine names that occur in the middle rows of its Watchtowers. This image is vitally important because it established the orientation of the quarters of the Great Table to the four directions. The upper left quadrant lies in the east, the upper right quadrant in the south, the lower right quadrant in the west, and the lower left quadrant in the north.

Order of the Twelve Enochian Banners

The square or cross surrounded by a circle also occurs on the golden medallion that shows the various elements of Kelley's Vision of the Four Watchtowers (see the next chapter). It appears in the illustration of the thirty Aethers, where the innermost of thirty concentric circles is divided into four, whereas all the other circles are divided into three. It is a part of Kelley's Vision of the Round House which (in my opinion) describes the flow of dynamic forces upon the Great Tablet. Clearly, it was of the highest importance. It is an expression of the squaring of the circle, which was, along with the making of the stone and the elixir of life, one of the three great works of alchemy.

The Great Table is a mandala, a mystical image composed of a circle and a square, or cross, that symbolizes a non-physical place accessible through meditation and transcendent awareness. Concerning Eastern mandalas, Carl Jung remarked: "The Eastern and more particularly the Lamaic mandala usually contains a square ground-plan of the stupa. We can see from the mandalas constructed in solid form that it is really the plan of a building. The square also conveys the idea of a house or temple, or of an inner walled-in space. According to the ritual, stupas must always be circumambulated to the right, because leftward movement is evil."[6]

The mandala appears most commonly in the West in the form of Hermetic or alchemical images. The accompanying mandala of Solomon's Temple is particularly interesting, because it shows seven gates in each side, which are explicitly linked to the twenty-eight Mansions of the Moon. The inner cross, lying within the circle of the Moon, has three gates in each arm, and these are explicitly linked to the twelve months of the year. Notice that the central eye of God has seven points, which stand for the seven planets.

Solomon's Temple

The Three Levels

The Great Table has three levels or hierarchies of angels that are reflected in its structure. The first level concerns the entire Table. When this is divided into four parts by the Great Black Cross, the second level of the four Watchtowers is indicated. Similarly, when each Watchtower is divided into four parts, the third level of the sixteen lesser quarters appears. The angels tell Dee:

> For every Table hath his key, every key openeth his gate, and every gate being opened, giveth knowledge of himself, of the entrance, and of the mysteries of those things whereof he is an enclosure. Within these Palaces you shall find things that are of power. For every Palace is above his City and every City above his entrance.[7]

This description evokes the ground plan of a medieval city constructed upon a hill, a familiar sight in Dee's time. The palace of the ruler occupied the crest. Surrounding it on the sloping sides of the hill huddled the houses of the common folk. At a still lower level down the hill, a protective wall enclosed the city. The wall contained a gate, or gates, to permit travel both into and out from the city.

The Keepers of Time

The four Watchtowers, which are themselves angels, stand guard at the four extremities of our universe. They are equivalent to the four great pillars of Egyptian mythology that hold up the sky and separate Earth from heaven. These Watchtowers were established at the same moment Adam and Eve were expelled from Eden, or so testify the Enochian angels: "Adam received punishment for his offense, in that he was turned out into the earth, and so did Adam, accursed, bring all misery and wretchedness into the world. But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world her time, and placed over her Angelic Keepers, Watchmen, and Princes."[8]

There are several important points to be noticed in the quotation above. One of the most important is that because of Adam's sin of disobedience, God laid a curse upon the entire world. This curse is what we know as karma, or cause and effect. Karma exists in time. Time began the moment Adam was driven out of Paradise. At the same moment, it was necessary to establish angelic Keepers and Watchmen to ensure the continuance of the Earth in time. The Princes mentioned are presumably the aerial spirits known as the "princes of the air," who are said to be present throughout the entire world.

Access through the gates of the four Watchtowers is access outside the realm of time and karma. It is access to the angels who dwell in Paradise, and indeed to all spiritual creatures who have been barred by God's curse from walking the paths of the Earth. The high angels in the palaces and cities behind the gates of the Watchtowers have the authority to rule over the lesser spirits who inhabit the aerial terrestrial realms of our universe. By some Kabbalistic accounts, these earth-bound spirits are the offspring from the union between the fallen angels described by Enoch and mortal women.

The Ninety-One Regions of the Thirty Aethers

Among these earth-bound spirits are those that rule over the various geographical regions of the world. Each of these geographical spirits (which is identified with the region it rules because it is the tutelary spirit or genius of that region) has its own sigil on the Great Table.

In my opinion, it was the prospect of obtaining command of these tutelary spirits of the kingdoms of the world that was the basis of John Dee's attraction to Enochian magic. Dee received this system of magic in the years just prior to the launch of the Spanish Armada against England. It was a time of exploration and colonization for his native country. This expansion of influence was threatened by the might of Spain. Dee earnestly sought control of the geographical spirits on the Great Table so that through them he could control the fates of the kings of Europe, and remove the dark cloud of foreign domination from England's horizons.

About these geographical genii the angel Nalvage states:

> There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and spiritual Governours, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and again dispose Kings and all the Governments upon the Earth, and vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom, the providence of the eternal Judgement, is already opened. These are generally governed by the twelve Angels of the 12 Tribes: which are also governed by the 7 which stand before the presence of God [see Revelation 4:5].[3]

It was no doubt in reference to the power of these spirits of nations that Casaubon makes mention in his subtitle to his book A True and Faithful Relation, which reads in part "Tending (had it Succeeded) to a General Alteration of most States and Kingdomes in the World."

The Powers of the Watchtowers

In addition to controlling the tutelary spirits of the nations of the Earth, the Watchtowers offer the promise of all human knowledge, including the perfect knowledge of medicine, the arts, and the sciences. They give command of the elemental spirits of the world, movement from place to place (presumably by supernatural means), the transformation of the forms of things, and enable the discovery of hidden things, including the location of treasures and rich mines. No human secret is unknown to them.

The promise of limitless knowledge, even of an abstract kind, was alluring to Dee, who had dedicated his life to study. Later, in his private meeting with Rudolph II, Dee would confide this lifelong passion to the Emperor:

> Hereupon I began to declare that All my life time I had spent in learning: but for this forty years continually, in sundry manners, and in divers Countries, with great pain, care, and cost, I had from degree to degree, sought to come by the best knowledge that man might attain unto in the world: And I found (at length) that neither any man living, nor any Book I could yet meet withal, was able to teach me those truths I desired, and longed for: And therefore I concluded with my self, to make intercession and prayer to the giver of wisdom and all good things, to send me such wisdom, as I might know the natures of his creatures; and also enjoy means to use them to his honour and glory.[4]

Even more attractive must have been the prospect of peering into the veiled intrigues of the courts of Europe, and gaining information concerning the political plots and maneuverings of great men. As a secret agent of the English crown, his mouth must have watered at the intelligence-gathering possibilities of the Watchtowers.

Perhaps sensing this lust for forbidden knowledge, both heavenly and earthly, the angel Ave cautions Dee and Kelley about the limitations of the Watchtowers. At the same time, he cannot resist boasting of their powers:

Ave: Notwithstanding, to know the world before the waters, To be privy to the doings of men, from the waters to Christ; from Christ unto the rewarding of the wicked: The wicked doings of the flesh, or the fond and devilish imaginations of man, or to see what the blessed Kingdom shall be, and how the earth shall be dignified, purged, and made clean, is a meat too sweet for your mouths.

Dee: Curiosity is far from our intents.

Ave: But there is neither Patriarch nor Prophet sanctified, Martyr, or Confessor, King, or Governour of the people upon earth, that his name, continuance, and end, is not (like the Moon at midnight) in these Tables.

[Dee's marginal note: Ergo, these are here to be learned out.][11]

This is quite a boast. It is easy to see why Ave said to Kelley concerning lesser systems of magic, "Nay, they all played at this." Other forms of magic deal with the angels and spirits already present in our universe—the spiritual offspring that arose from sexual union between the fallen angels who taught sciences and arts to humankind and mortal women. Enochian magic holds out the promise to reach beyond the sealed gates of the four Watchtowers and gain the authority and power of the higher angels who have never fallen from grace or walked the byways of the earth. Conversely, it also allows communion with the dark angels who have been cast down into the Abyss for their sin of rebellion. The gates of the Watchtowers are the gates to both heaven and hell.

Chapter Eleven

The Vision of the Watchtowers

Drama in the Crystal

The four Watchtowers were not delivered to Kelley merely in the form of abstract letter squares, but were also presented as visionary dramas in which the crystal became the stage and the angels and lesser spirits assumed the roles of characters. The most important and complete playlet is the one I have named the Great Vision. It is remarkable for its beauty, complexity, and mystery.

The Great Vision represents the different classes of angels whose names appear on the tables of the Watchtowers and their hierarchical relationship. Because this vision is so central to Enochian magic, I have given it here in its entirety, along with my commentary.

Wednesday, June 20, 1584

Dee: It is first to be noted, that this morning (early) to E.K. lying in his bed, and awake, appeared a Vision, in manner as followeth: One standing by his beds head, who patted him on the head gently, to make him the more vigilant. He seemed to be cloathed with feathers, strangely wreathed about him all over, etc.

There appeared to him [E.K.] four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the sound of a Trumpet. Then seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more then the breadth of a Table-cloath.

Out of that in the East, the cloath seemed to be red, which was cast.

Out of that in the South, the cloath seemed white.

Out of that in the West, the cloath seemed green, with great knops on it.

Out of that in the North, spread, or thrown out from the gate under foot, the cloath seemed to be very black.

Out of every Gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.

After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign bearers.

After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.

Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.

After him came five men, carrying up of his train.

Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.

These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.

[Marginal note: These Crosses seemed not to he on the ground, but in the aire in a white Cloud. The great Crosse seemed to be of a Cloud, like the Rain-bow.]

After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.

And after them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and to spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

Upon which Vision declared unto me, I straight way set down a Note of it; trusting in God that it did signifie good.

After noon, as E.K. sat by me, he felt on his head some strange moving: whereby he deemed that some spiritual Creature did visit him; and as we were continuing together, and I had red to E.K. some rare matter out of Ignatius' Epistles, Policarpus, and Martialis; some of the Sacrament, and some of the Crosse, a voyce answered, and said, That it is true, that the sign of the Crosse is of great force and vertue.

After this, the spiritual Creature seemed to E.K. to be very heavy on his right shoulder, as he sat by me in my study: and as E.K. considered the numbers of such as he had numbered to passe out of the four Gates (it is to wit, 1.3.6.1.5) The spiritual Creature said, the number 16 is a perfect number, consisting of 1.3.6.1.5. He said further more, God the father is a standing Pillar.

Dee: Upon which word I asked him, if I should write such matter as he was to speak. And he answered to E.K. at his right ear.

Spirit: If thou wilt.

Dee: His voyce was much like unto a man's voyce, not base, nor hollow.

Spirit: Divided with a straight line, is one and two.

Dee: What is to be divided with a straight line?

Spirit: The Pillar.[1]

This spirit identified itself as Ave, the second of the Sons of the Sons of Light, who were revealed to Dee and Kelley during the reception of the heptarchical magic. His name appears on the smaller heptagon on the Sigillum Aemeth. He declared himself to be the feathered spirit who had patted Kelley on the head in the early morning hours, and said that it was he who had delivered the vision of the Watchtowers to Kelley. Ave commented at length on Kelley's vision.

Ave: Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the secret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by such as govern her, at your pleasure; and call her to a reckoning, as a Steward doth the servants of his Lord.

I expound the Vision.

The 4 houses, are the 4 Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and Watch-towers, that the eternal God in his providence hath placed, against the usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil. To the intent that being put out to the Earth, his envious will might be bridled, the determinations of God fulfilled, and his creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse and measure of order.

What Satan doth, they suffer; And what they wink at, he wrasteth: But when he thinketh himself most assured, then feeleth he the bit.

In each of these Houses, the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord: which hath under him 5 Princes (these names I must use for your instruction.) The seals and authorities of these Houses, are confirmed in the beginning of the World. Unto every one of them, be 4 characters, (Tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation.)

Ensignes, upon the Image whereof, is death: whereon the Redemption of mankind is established, and with the which he shall come to judge the Earth.

These are the Characters, and natural marks of holinesse. Unto these, belong four Angels severally.

The 24 old men, are the 24 Seniors, that St. John remembereth.

These judge the government of the Castles, and fullfil the will of God, as it is written.

The 12 Banners are the 12 names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, and 5.

Out of these Crosses, come the Angels of all the Aires: which presently give obedience to the will of men, when they see them.

Hereby may you subvert whole Countries without Armies: which you must, and shall do, for the glory of God.

By these you shall get the favour of all the Princes, whom you take pity of, or wish well unto.

Hereby shall you know the secret Treasures of the waters, and unknown Caves of the Earth.

And it shall be a Doctrine, for you onely, the instrument of the World.

For, the rest of your Instructions, are touching the Heavens, and the time to come: of the which, this is the last and extream knowledge.

This will I deliver unto you, (because I have yeilded you before the Lord.)

Upon Monday next, I will appear unto you: and shall be a Lesson of a few dayes.

Kelley: The will of God be done.

Dee: Amen.

Ave: In the mean season, desire you of God, such things, as are necessary for you.

He that filleth all things, and from whom all things live, and in, and through whom, they are sanctified, blesse you, and confirm you in peace.

Dee: Amen.

I beseech you, to Notifie this morning's Vision, by words: as all other holy Prophets have recorded theirs.

Ave: A Vision.

The sign of the love of God toward his faithful. Four sumptuous and belligerant Castles, out of the which sounded Trumpets thrice.

The sign of Majesty, the Cloth of passage, was cast forth.

In the East, the cloth red; after the new smitten blood.

In the South, the cloth white, Lilly-colour.

In the West a cloth, the skins of many Dragons, green: garlick-bladed.

In the North, the cloth, Hair-coloured, Bilbery juyce.

The Trumpets sound once. The Gates open. The four Castles are moved. There issueth 4 Trumpeters, whose Trumpets are a Pyramis, six cones, wreathed. There followeth out of every Castle 3, holding up their Banners displayed, with ensigne, the names of God. There follow Seniors six, alike from the 4 Gates: After them cometh from every part a King: whose Princes are five, gardant, and holding up his train. Next issueth the Crosse of 4 Angles, of the Majesty of Creation in God attended upon every one, with 4: a white Cloud, 4 Crosses, bearing the witnesses of the Covenant of God, with the *Prince [*King] gone out before: which were confirmed, every one, with ten Angels, visible in countenance: After every Crosse, attendeth 16 Angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles. They proceed. And, in, and about the middle of the Court, the Ensigns keep their standings, opposite to the middle of the Gate: The rest pause. The 24 Senators meet: They seem to consult.

I, AVE, STOOD BY THE SEER:

It vanisheth.

So I leave you.[1]

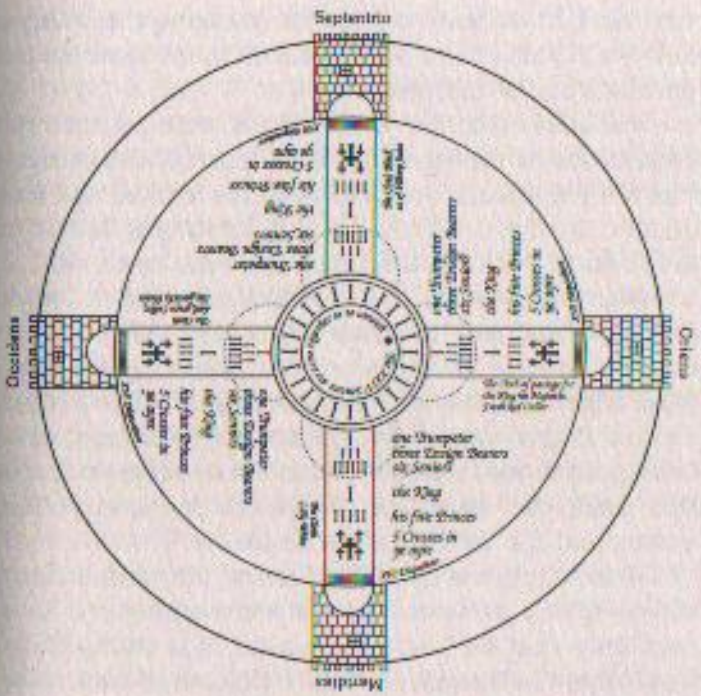
Dee thought the Great Vision so important that he had a medallion made of solid gold upon which the vision was depicted (see the illustration of the Golden Talisman, opposite). This relic has survived the centuries and is now in the keeping of the British Museum.

Analysis of the Great Vision

Kelley sees four castles standing in the four quarters of the world. Ave informs Dee that these castles, which he calls "houses," are the four angels of the Earth, who are also the four Overseers and Watchtowers—it is not uncommon in magic for a place or thing to also be a spirit.

On Dee's golden talisman, these castles are depicted as medieval stone towers each with seven battlement stones (the northern tower has eight stones), one small square window containing four panes, and a large, open semi-circular gate. The seven battlement stones stand for the traditional planets of astrology, the square window represents the letter square of the Watchtower on the Great Table, and the arch of the gate is the crescent of the Moon, through whose sphere all heavenly beings must pass on their journey to the Earth.

This symbolism was probably unconscious, which would account for the eight battlement stones on the northern tower (unless this number has some hidden significance). The four Watchtowers are depicted similarly on the medallion, with only minor variations, so Dee probably intended them to be perceived as identical.



The Golden Talisman

It should be noted that in the engraving of the medallion in Casaubon the colors of the four cloths are inverted top to bottom and left to right. The engraver shows green in the east, red in the west, black in the south and white in the north. I have restored the colors to the arrangement described in Kelley's vision. This inversion was not an error by the engraver—it also appears on the original golden medallion in the British Museum. Dee may well have had some reason for inverting the colors, and it may be the same reason the Enochian letters were inverted on the actual Table of Practice from the arrangement in Dee's manuscript drawing of the Table. However, since I can think of no good reason for changing the colors in Kelley's vision, I have put the colors in the same relative positions on the medallion.

Ave states that the Watchtowers were placed at the extremities of the world by God "against the usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil." They act as a limiting influence on the chaotic works of the Devil upon the earth, and are necessary in order to preserve living creatures "within the compass and measure of order." They do not entirely exclude the influence of Satan, or prevent him from affecting the world, but check and bridle his malice to a degree that allows the orderly fulfillment of the "determinations of God." When Satan seeks to exceed that limit, the angels of the Watchtowers exert their power, and the Devil "feeleth he the bit."

From each tower, Kelley hears the simultaneous sounding of a trumpet. There is some ambiguity. Kelley says only that he hears the sound of a trumpet. Ave states that the trumpets sound thrice out of each tower, then contradicts himself a little further on and says the trumpets sound once. It may be that the trumpets sound one time, but sound three distinct notes.

Ave adds the detail that the gates open, and the "four Castles are moved," that is, show signs of movement within. Four cloths, each as wide as a tablecloth, are thrown out from the mouths of the towers toward the center, which Ave refers to as the "Court." Ave calls these the "sign of Majesty, the Cloth of passage." They are equivalent to the red carpets that are unrolled for the passage of dignitaries in our own day. The colors are important because they are linked to the four directions. The color of the east is red, that of the south is white, that of the west is green, that of the north is black.

Ave is more descriptive of these colors. The cloth of the east is the scarlet of new-spilled blood. The cloth of the south is the soft white of the lily petal. The cloth of the west is textured with the scales of a dragon and is serpent-green. The cloth of the north is the color of very dark human hair, or of bilberry juice (a deep blue-black berry that grows in England).

From each open gate a Trumpeter walks along the carpet toward the center court. The trumpets are of a very strange shape, with six bells. Ave describes them as a "Pyramis, six cones, wreathed." Kelley says that they are "of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end." This would seem to mean that viewed from the front the six branching bells of each trumpet spread in the shape of a triangle. They were probably wreathed with flowers.

The beings who proceed out of each Watchtower after its Trumpeter are the angels ruling in that quarter of the Earth.

The three Ensign Bearers carry upon their flags the divine names that are written on the middle rows of the Watchtowers of the Great Table. The first flag bears a name of three letters, the second of four letters, the last of five letters, for a total of twelve. Ave calls these twelve ensigns (three from each tower) "the 12 names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, and 5." These names have a direct correspondence with the twelve overt permutations of the Hebrew name of God, IHVH, which is known as the Tetragrammaton because it contains four letters.

After the twelve ensigns bearing the names of God come twenty-four Seniors who walk six abreast from each gate. Ave says of these old men that they are "the 24

Seniors, that St. John remembreth." St. John the Divine was the supposed author of the New Testament book Revelation. The reference is to Revelation 4:4—"And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold." The Seniors are the lords of the hours of the day. They establish and regulate linear time: the time-space continuum that we are familiar with as incarnated souls.

Ave explains: "These judge the government of the Castles, and fullfil the will of God, as it is written." The "government of the Castles" is what is known in the East as karma. Cause and effect is a function of time. Without time, karma would cease, and chaos would reign. There would be no divine law, no cosmic justice, no rational order. Satan (or Coronzon as the Enochian angels call him') seeks to overthrow the regulation of the Seniors, but is held in check by the four Overseers.

Behind each rank of six Seniors walks a richly robed King. Five Princes who serve him carry the hem of his long train. They are guardant, meaning that they walk with their faces turned toward Kelley. Of the King, Ave says: "the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord." Twice, Ave calls the King of each Watchtower a Prince, causing Dee to write a correction in the margin of his manuscript (indicated with asterisks on page 159). The name of each King appears in its corresponding Watchtower on the Great Table, written in the form of a spiral about the intersection of the great cross of that Watchtower.

Connected with each King, and the Watchtower of which he is the animate expression, is a seal composed of four characters. Ave calls these "the authorities of these Houses" and says that they were "confirmed in the beginning of the World." About the four characters connected with each, he states that they are "Tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation."

It is not clear what is meant here, unless it is the four graphic seals that were subsequently linked by the angels to the four Watchtowers on the Great Table. Three of these have four divisions, but one does not. The reference to four parts may be to the four letters of Tetragrammaton. At least, this is how this passage was interpreted by the founders of the Golden Dawn, who assigned the letters of Tetragrammaton in a complex relationship to the different parts of the Watchtowers on the Great Table.

After the Princes, a large cross with four lesser crosses in its quarters emerges from each tower. These seem to Kelley to float in the sky on white clouds, with each cross shimmering like a rainbow of many colors. Their pattern is reflected in the Watchtowers on the Great Table—each Watchtower has a large cross dividing it into four quarters, and a smaller cross in each quarter. On the smaller crosses, Kelley reports ten male faces. Ave refers to these as "ten Angels, visible in countenance." The lesser crosses on the Watchtowers of the Great Table each contain ten letters. Each letter is the name of one of these angels, who, as Ave says, bear "the witness of the Covenant of God."

Following the cloud with its five crosses, sixteen "white Creatures" issue from the gate of each Watchtower. Ave calls these "angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles." The names of these angels occur in the lesser quarters of each Watchtower on the Great Table.

Finally, an "infinite number" of lesser angels issue forth and arrange themselves in a large circle, standing close to the towers. The wording of Kelley's vision suggests that they come out of the gates after the sixteen Dispositors, but Ave indicates that this multitude is made up of the angels of the thirty Airs, or Aethers, and that they come out from the rainbow crosses. These angels "presently give obedience to the will of men, when they see them." This is extremely important, because it explains why Enochian magic can only be worked with "visible apparition." The obedience of the angels of the Aethers to the magician requires that the magician see the angels in the crystal, or by some similar means.

This echoes the Irish folk tale that a leprechaun can only be commanded by a human being to reveal his treasure while he is held captive. Once he slips beyond the reach of his captor, he regains his freedom. Similarly, the jinn imprisoned by Solomon in brass bottles could be compelled to grant wishes to the persons who discovered them. These tales express a fundamental principle of spirit magic. To be controlled, a spirit must be embodied in some form. This form may be an image or a name. The manifest form of the spirit acts as a kind of psychic bottle that constrains the spirit and binds it to the human mind that conceives the form.

The Ensign Bearers stop at the ends of their ground cloths and maintain their ranks opposite their respective gates. The twenty-four Seniors approach each other in the middle of the Court, while the rest stand waiting in their places. The Seniors form a ring facing inward and seem to hold a consultation with each other. That is the end of Kelley's vision.

Ave points out to Kelley the importance of the numbers of each rank in this procession (1 + 3 + 6 + 1 + 5 = 16). This is the number of the Dispositors, or Disposers—those who arrange and set in right order the things of the manifest world, and who ensure that everything happens in its proper season and due sequence.

The communication between Dee and Ave following the initial description of Kelley's vision seems enigmatic, but is really quite simple. Ave merely points out to Dee that the vertical pillar of the central cross on each Watchtower of the Great Table will contain two columns of letters, and therefore it may either be regarded as one pillar, or two if the columns of letters are divided. At this point Dee has not received the Great Table, so the directions mean nothing to him.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Transmission of the Great Table

THE TABLE OF THE EARTH

As he had promised during his exposition of the Great Vision, the angel Ave appeared to Kelley on the following Monday (June 25, 1584) and delivered the letter squares of the Watchtowers that compose the quadrants of the Great Table. These were presented in the form of visual images within the crystal.

First, Kelley saw the interior of the stone obscured by a white curtain. The curtain was then withdrawn and discarded in a heap in the background to reveal a standing figure in a white smock with a white circlet around his head. Although Kelley did not recognize the angel, Dee knew him to be Ave because the angel had promised to appear on Monday. As Kelley watched, fire consumed the angel to ashes. From the ashes he rose up renewed and brighter than before, saying: "So doth the glory of God comfort the just, and they rise again with a threefold glorie."[1]

The angel extended his hands and seemed to spread or part the air in front of him. A square table appeared before the angel. This table represented the Great Table of the Watchtowers. Dee wrote in the margin of his manuscript "The Table of the Earth." This is also true, since the Great Table applies to the earthly (manifest) realm.

From the table Ave removed a black "Carpet" or cloth. From Kelley's earlier vision of the Watchtowers, we know that this corresponds to the north. Beneath the black cloth was a green cloth, which the angel next removed. The green cloth stands for the west. Beneath the green cloth was a white cloth, representing the south. After Ave pulled off the white cloth, a red cloth was revealed, corresponding with the east. The removal of the red cloth revealed the tabletop itself, which to Kelley appeared to be made of "earth, as Potter's Clay, very raw earth." The table was square, with four legs made of clay or earth. Two of the legs touched the ground, but two did not.

It should be noted that the removal of the different colored cloths symbolically traced a complete circle around the world counterclockwise. This is the direction of motion (as Carl Jung observed) from the conscious mind to the unconscious.[1] The motion is from the circumference in to the center, which is symbolized by the bare clay top of the table. It is the ground of creation and the clay of Adam. The direction of travel around the compass is opposite to that which usually occurs in the Enochian manuscripts, but this is because Ave is traveling from the outward manifest world of Dee and Kelley into the secret center of the Earth, where all mysteries lie concealed.

Why the table should have two legs that touch the ground and two that do not is puzzling. Perhaps it refers to the four elements, two of which (Fire and Air) are light and rise up, and two of which (Water, Earth) are heavy and fall down. However, this is only speculation.

The First Seal

On the upper-left corner of the table (the far left from Kelley's point of view) appeared the figure of a T with four bright beams of clear light rising from its top. This is the seal of the Watchtower of the east. The direction is not given, but we know it must be the eastern quarter of the table because it is the first revealed, and the east is the first quarter in Enochian magic. Ave, as he reveals the seals and after them the Watchtowers themselves, is now progressing from the center outward to the circumference.

To make doubly certain that Kelley noticed the position of this seal on the table, Ave pointed at the T with the four beams, saying:

> Ave: That part of the Table of the earth of those that govern the earth: that is are governed by the seven Angels that are governed by the seven that stand before God, that are governed by the living God, which is found in the Seal of the living God, (Tau with the four) which signifie the four powers of God principal in earth, etc.
>
> A voice: Move not, for the place is holy, and become holy.
>
> Ave: I said not so, he said it, that beareth witnesse of himself. Unto this, obey the other three Angels of the Table.[2]

The "Seal of the living God" is the Sigillum Aemeth. "Tau with the four" indicates the capital letter T with the small number 4 written above it that is at the top of the outer ring of letters on the Sigillum Aemeth. This ring consists of forty letters, which are to be understood as four groups of ten. Tau is the Greek name for T. In Casaubon the last letter "u" in Tau is inverted (which often happened in old books) so that the text reads "Tan with the four," an obvious absurdity that has undoubtedly confused many students of Enochian magic.

The seven angels that "govern the earth" mentioned by Ave are the seven angels whose names appear in the larger hexagon on the Sigillum Aemeth (ZlIRHia, etc.). These curious names are extracted from a magic square composed of the seven more common names for the angels of the seven planets (Zaphkiel, etc.). These latter are "the seven that stand before God" (see Revelation 4:5).

The common names for the angels of the planets are written down continuously in columns from left to right to form a letter square, and the uncommon Enochian names are extracted by reading the rows across the square from left to right. You will remember this square from the earlier examination of the Sigillum Aemeth. It was revealed on March 20, 1582, and is recorded in the second book of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum:

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	i
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	+

The voice that spoke and commanded Dee and Kelley not to move was the voice of the King of the Watchtower of the east, which the T with the four beams represents. Ave cautioned the men to also remain still while receiving the seals of the other three Watchtowers.

The Second Seal

On the upper right corner of the table (the far right from Kelley's perspective) appeared a cross which Kelley described as "like an Alphabet Crosse." This symbol, because it is the second to appear, relates to the Watchtower of the south and reveals the placement of that Watchtower on the Great Table. Kelley remarks: "This Crosse, and the other T do seem to lye upon the Table, in a dim dunnish, or a sky colour. All the Table over seemeth to be scribled and rased with new lines."

> Ave: The earth is the last, which is with the Angels, but not as the Angels, and therefore it standeth in the Table of the seven Angels, which stand before the presence of God in the last place, without a Letter, or number, but figured by a Crosse.
>
> It is expressed in the Angle of that Table, wherein the names of the Angels are gathered, and do appear, as of Michael and Gabriel.
>
> Dee: I remember, there is an Alphabetary Crosse.[4]

This is a clear reference to the small cross that marks the empty final square in the table of the seven planetary angels.

The Third Seal

The third seal of the Watchtowers appeared, as might be expected, on the lower-right corner of the table (the near right corner from Kelley's perspective). Moving around the points of the compass, this quarter of the table belongs to the Watchtower of the west. On it Kelley observed another cross with letters and numbers in its angles, as appears in the illustration of the four seals. The angel Ave makes the cryptic comment, "It is in that Table, which consisteth of 4 and 8." This refers to the fifth Ensign of Creation, one of the tin tablets to be placed on the Table of Practice during scrying. This Ensign, which is connected with Mercury on the Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49, consists of four rows and eight columns. The seal of the Watchtower of the west occupies the second square in the bottom row on this Ensign.

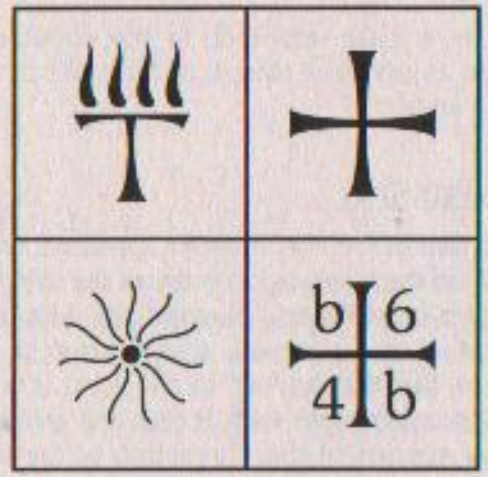
The Fourth Seal

Finally, on the lower left corner of the table of earth (the near left corner from Kelley's perspective), Kelley saw "a little round smoke, as big as a pin's head." This quarter of the table is related to the Watchtower of the north, which is the final point of the compass, moving clockwise around the Earth beginning in the east. The seal of the north is usually represented as a point or tiny circle with lines radiating from it.



Original Four Seals of the Watchtowers

In my judgment, the way these seals were revealed establishes the correct placement of the Watchtowers on the Great Table, and the relationship between the seals and the Watchtowers. Dee never recognized that the table of earth was intended by the angels to represent the Great Table, or that the order in which the seals were placed was to be followed in placing the Watchtowers themselves. Consequently, he remained in doubt about the positions of the Watchtowers on the Great Table for the rest of his life.

"God His Spiritual Creatures"

After the fourth seal was revealed, the crystal was obscured by a mist and Kelley heard "a great voyce of thumbling and rumbling" in the showstone. This cleared to reveal an infinite number of bright wormlike things going up and down in the air. Higher than these he saw a cloud of little black specks. They also floated up and down, and sometimes mingled with the worms.

Ave then delivered the monologue on Enoch that I have already quoted in Chapter One ("The Lord appeared unto Enoch," etc.). This is significant because its placement here links the Watchtowers strongly with the wisdom of Enoch, and indicates how central they are to Enochian magic. The Watchtowers are the very heart of the doctrine delivered by the angels.

Dark smoke boiled up from the table of earth, leaving behind it a golden slime. The worms and motes in the air touched down on the surface and ascended up again. Ave took the smoke and "tied it up," saying "I tie her not up from all men, but from the good." Another dark cloud covered everything. This cleared to reveal a grid. Ave told Kelley to note the number, and Kelley informed Dee that he counted thirteen columns and twelve rows. Apparently Kelley was viewing this grid at a right angle, because the grid of each Watchtower has twelve columns and thirteen rows.

Within the squares of the grid appeared characters or sigils. Ave remarked to Kelley, "They be the true Images of God his spiritual Creatures." He ordered Kelley to write down what he saw. Kelley protested that he could not. Dee urged Kelley to try his best. Kelley struggled along for a time, then "fire flashed in his face, and shortly after he said, I perceive they be easie to make, so that I tell the squares, by which the lines do passe, and draw from middle prick to middle prick." He finished drawing the sigils on the grid of the first Watchtower, then proceeded to fill in the grids of the other quarters of the Great Table.

These sigils are not illustrated in Casaubon, but it is obvious that they were the sigils of the ninety-one geographical spirits of the 30 Aethers (see Chapter Fifteen). It is interesting to note that the sigils of the genii of the parts of the Earth were conveyed by the angels before the actual Watchtowers themselves. It would therefore have been impossible for Kelley to consciously connect the graphic sigils with the letters of the spirit names upon which they are based.

The Four Watchtowers

Again the stone grew dark. Ave ordered Dee and Kelley to rest for an hour. No doubt the strain of concentration had been almost unendurable, particularly for Kelley. When the men resumed the scrying session, Ave immediately began to deliver the letters of the Watchtower of the east:

Ave: In the name of God, be diligent, and move not for the place is holy.

Take the first square: write from the left hand toward the right, you shall write small letters and great.

Say what you see [to E.K.]

Kelley: r Z i l a f A u t l p a

Dee: I finde here one square among these Characters that hath nothing in it.

Ave: It must be filled.

Kelley: a r d Z a i d p a L a m[5]

Dee had not yet realized that the grid first seen by Kelley was tipped on its side, and had to be rotated a quarter turn. He was trying to insert the twelve letters of the first row into one of the columns, which have thirteen squares. It did not take him long to understand his error. Some of the letters in the Watchtowers are capitals because they begin the names of the ninety-one spirits of the regions of the Earth, which correspond with the sigils previously drawn on the grids (at a right angle, apparently!) by Kelley.

A few of the letters are mirror inverted left to right. These indicate that the names of the geographical genii that contain them may be written forward or backward. When written backward, they are the names of evil spirits, but when written forward, of good spirits.

Kelley scried the Watchtowers in the following order. Using their middle "lines of God" as identifiers, they are: 1) ORO, IBAH, AOZPI; 2) MOR, DIAL, HCTGA; 3) OIP, TEAA, PDOCE; 4) MPH, ARSL, GAIOL. After delivering the Watchtowers, Ave commented on the significance of the middle line and the pillar of God in each Watchtower.

Ave: Thou hast in the middle line o r o i b A h a o z p i. There are 6 lines above, and six below. That line is called linea Spiritus Sancti: and out of that line cometh the three names of God, from the East gate, being 3, 4, and 5 letters, which were the armes of the Ensignes that were spoken of before. Oro, ibah, aozpi, I said before, that God the Father a mighty pillar divided with a right line.

The Father himself, without the line.

The Father and Son by addition of the line.

These two lines beginning: f A i d a r
etc.

That is the great Crosse that came out of the East gate.[4]

The meaning is that the double vertical pillar that forms the center of each Watchtower and crosses the middle row of the Holy Ghost at a right angle signifies God the Father when double, but Father and Son when the two columns are separated by a vertical line. It is not clear in Casaubon which column of the Great Cross belongs to the Father and which to the Son. However, the left column is the column of mercy, which suggest that it belongs to the Son, whereas the right column is the column of judgment, suggesting that it belongs to the Father.

Dee had no problem correctly placing the first Watchtower in the upper left quarter of the Great Table, and linking it with the east. He correctly placed the second Watchtower in the upper-right corner of the Great Table, which is associated with the south. However, for some reason he inverted the third and fourth Watchtowers. He was going to place them correctly. He noted beside the fourth Watchtower, "This is the Table that had the little round smoke," which would have enabled him to place it in the lower left quarter. But immediately below he wrote a second note, saying, "No, it was the Table before."

The result is that on the first version of the Great Table, which is known as the Original Table, Dee has (in my opinion) inverted the third and fourth Watchtowers. The seals of the Watchtowers are placed correctly at the corners of the Original Table, as they were revealed by Ave. The four inverted capital letters are indicated by asterisks. It is not immediately obvious that the capital A in the bottom row of the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower is inverted; however, Dee has drawn the A with a hook on its right leg, and written in the margin "A is arsward."

The Original Great Table of the Watchtowers

Dee numbered the Watchtowers on the Great Table in the order of their initial transmission, in two rows from left to right: 1. Upper left: ORO, etc.; 2. Upper right: MOR, etc.; 3. Lower left: OIP, etc.; 4. Lower right: MPH, etc. He was obviously uncomfortable about inverting the bottom two Watchtowers from their natural places on the points of the compass. Several times he asked the angels for confirmation.

> Ave: Now, what is that, that is hard to you?
> Dee: First, whether the Table (for the middle Crosse of uniting the four principal parts) be made perfect or no.
> Ave: Thou hast found out the truth of it.[7]

There is no question that this numbering of the quadrants on the Great Table was intended by the angels, at least at this stage. On January 14, 1585, Kelley received an extremely important vision which I have called the Vision of the Round House. This vision expresses, in a pictorial form, the flow of elemental energies on the Great Table. At the outset of the Vision of the Round House, the relationship between the four directions and the numbering of the quarters is clearly established.

> On that place standeth a round House, it hath four corners [within] and 4 Windows: and every Window is round, and hath 4 round partitions, round also. It hath 4 Doores, and at the East Door is one step, at the South 2 steps, and at the North 3, and at the West Door, 4 steps:[8]

The number of steps before each door is the numbering of the related quadrants on the Original Great Table.

However, accepting that this numbering of the quadrants of the Great Table is correct, it does not follow that the placement of the two lower Watchtowers on those quadrants is also correct. The seals of the Watchtowers are revealed in a circle around the points of the compass, east, south, west and north. Each class of angels also unfolds in a complete clockwise circle around the Great Table. In my opinion (and it is only that), the Watchtowers should be placed in a complete clockwise circle beginning in the east in the order in which they were first revealed.

The Tablet of Union

After instructing Dee in some of the uses of the names on the Watchtowers, Ave delivered what is commonly called the Tablet of Union, because its letters appear on the central Black Cross of the Great Table. This Tablet is formed by combining the letters in the names of the three geographical spirits of the tenth Aether, ZAX: Lexarph, Comanan and Tabitom. These are written continuously left to right into the rows of a square with four rows and five columns. The initial L in the first name is omitted. Ave instructed Dee to "Look out Lexarph, with the two other that follow him, among the names of the Earth the three last: Lexarph, Comanan, Tabitom."[9]

e	x	a	r	p
h	c	o	m	a n	a	n	t	a
b	i	t	o	m

Tablet of Union

These names for the spirits of the tenth Aether had been revealed by the angel Mapsama to Kelley more than a month earlier, on May 21, 1584, along with the names of the other spirits of the first fourteen Aethers.[10] Concerning the placing of the names of the Tablet of Union on the Black Cross, Ave instructed Dee: "Set them down without the first Table: That shall make the crosse that bindeth the 4 Angles of the Table together. The same that stretcheth from the left to right, must also stretch from the right to the left."[11]

The meaning is that the letters in the first two rows of the Tablet of Union are written on the column of the Black Cross twice, with each set of letters progressing from the top and the bottom towards the middle so that the two sets of ten letters are reflected around the center. This type of reflection is known as a lake reflection. The letters of the last two rows of the Tablet are written on the beam of the Black Cross twice, with each set progressing from the center toward the edges so that the two sets are reflected around the center. This kind of reflection is known as a mirror reflection.

The Uses of the Great Table

After delivering the four Watchtowers to Dee and Kelley, Ave explicitly set out the uses to which the Great Table may be put.

Ave: Now to the purpose: Rest, for the place is holy. First, generally what this Table containeth.

1. All humane knowledge.
2. Out of it springeth Physick.
3. The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire, which is the secret life of all things.
4. The knowledge, finding and use of Metals; the vertues of them; the congelations and vertues of Stones -- They are all of one matter.

5. The Conjoyning and knitting together of Natures. The destruction of Nature, and of things that may perish.
6. Moving from place to place [as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure.]
7. The knowledge of all crafts Mechanical.
8. Transmutatio formalis, sed non essentialis [transmutation of forms, but not of essences].

[Dee's marginal note: The ninth Chapter may be added, and is of the secrets of men knowing; whereof there is a peculiar Table.][12]

The functions of the Great Table are set forth in greater detail in Dee's manuscript Liber Scientiae and will be examined in the next chapter, along with the extraction and use of the angelic names.

The Reformed Great Table of Raphael

On April 20, 1587, almost three years following the initial reception of the Watchtowers, the angel Raphael communicated a corrected version of the Great Table to Kelley. At that point, Kelley was disillusioned with the angels and wanted nothing more to do with them, but Raphael was persistent.

Dee: E.K. had this day divers apparitions unto him in his own Chamber, and instructions in divers matters which he regarded not, but remained still in his purpose of utterly discrediting those Creatures, and not to have any more to do with them. But among divers apparitions he noted this of one that said unto him.

Raphael: Joyn Enoch his Tables.

Give every place his running number.

Kelley: What mean you by places?

Raphael: The squares. Which done, refer every letter in the Table to his number, and so read what I will, for this is the last time I will admonish you.

Kelley: A man standeth in the Air in a fiery Globe of my heighth, accompanied with some hundred of Puppets: on the one side of him standeth a woman, and about her are four Clouds all white.

The man upon a white Triangle shewed these Numbers with spaces, as you see following [here follows a large numerical table, which I have omitted].

Dee: Note: When E.K. had shewed me this Note, I by and by brought forth my book of Enoch his Tables, and found the four letters r T b d to be the four first letters of the four principal squares standing about the black Cross: and that here they were to be placed otherwise than as I had set them. And in the first placing of them together, I remember that I had doubt how to joyn them; for they were given apart each by themselves.

Secondly, I found out the 4 Characters; saving they were inverted somewhat, and one of them closed: whereof I found none like, but very near. These Characters were of every square one.

Thirdly, I did take these numbers contained between the lines (some more and some fewer) to be words to be gathered out of the Table of letters: so many words as were distinct companies of numbers; it is to wit, 41.

Hereupon we began to number the squares wherein the letters stood in Enoch's Tables as I had them, but we could not exactly finde the words, but somewhat near. Hereupon being tired, and desirous to know the sense of that Cypher, we left off till after supper, and then we assayed again: but we could not bolt it out, thought we knew very near what was to be done by the instruction of a spiritual Voice, now and then helping us toward the practise.

At length, E.K. was willed to go down into his Chamber, and I did remain still at our Dineing Table till his return, which was within an hour or somewhat more. And at his return this he brought in writing [here is printed in rough form the amended Great Table of Raphael].

Raphael: The black Cross is right, and needeth no mending. But thus much I do, to let thee understand, that thou mayest consider thy self to be a man: And beneath this understanding, unless thou submit all into the hands of God, for his sake; who else leaving you, all naked, provideth in his creatures to his own glory.... I Raphael, counsel you to make a Covenant with the Highest, and to esteem his wings more then your own lives.[11]

The Reformed Great Table of Raphael, which I give here in its corrected form (see page 186), is the arrangement of the Watchtowers most often used in modern magic. The ordering of the Watchtowers on the Reformed Table was adopted by the Golden Dawn, and after the diaspora of the members of this Hermetic Order, was spread throughout English-speaking countries.

As you can see, Raphael does not allocate the Watchtowers around the quarters of the Reformed Table in the order of their initial reception any more than Dee did in the Original Table. He places the first received Watchtower (ORO, IBAH, AOZPI) on the east quarter of the Table, which is the upper left. However, he puts the fourth received Watchtower (MPH, ARSL, GAIOL) on the south quarter, the upper right. The third received Watchtower (OIP, TEAA, PDOCE) he puts on the west quarter of the Table, the lower right, but places the second received Watchtower (MOR, DIAL, HCTGA) on the north quarter of the Table, the lower left.

You must decide for yourself which version of the Great Table to use. In my opinion, neither the Original Table of Dee nor the Reformed Table of Raphael is correct in its placement of the Watchtowers on the quarters. This conviction led me to create yet a third version (see Chapter Ten), which I have named the Restored Great Table, because it restores the Watchtowers to their original sequence around the Earth. The Watchtowers are placed upon the Table in a clockwise circle beginning with the upper left quarter (east—ORO, IBAH, AOZPI), then the upper right (south—MOR, DIAL, HCTGA), then the lower right (west—OIP, TEAA, PDOCE), then the lower left (north—MPH, ARSL, GAIOL).

The Reformed Great Table of Raphael

In this Restored Great Table, the numbering of the quadrants (as assigned to them in the Vision of the Round House) remains unchanged, but the numbers attached to the Watchtowers that occupy the two lower quadrants become inverted. The fourth Watchtower delivered by the angels (MPH, ARSL, GAIOL) is placed in the northern quadrant, which bears the number three, and the third Watchtower delivered by the angels (OIP, TEAA, PDOCE) is placed in the western quadrant, which bears the number four.

I suspect that the main reason Raphael felt compelled to deliver the Reformed Great Table to Kelley was to correct the placement of the last two Watchtowers, and that Kelley somehow got the instructions of the angel mixed up. Raphael also corrected many of the individual letters in the Watchtowers. I have adopted these letter corrections in my own Restored Great Table.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

The Angels of the Watchtowers

"EAST AND WEST, IN RESPECT OF YOUR POLES"

Each Watchtower has distinct classes of spirits that are arranged in a hierarchy of descending authority. The structure of the hierarchy and the functions of its parts are the same for all four Watchtowers. However, those angels whose names are on the Watchtower of the East only act in the east, while those whose names are on the Watchtower of the West only act in the west, and so on.

There is some ambiguity over just where the four parts of the Earth are to be reckoned. Dee quite reasonably asked whether this meant the four directions in relation to the magician, regardless of where he might be standing, or the four regions of the Earth. Ave replied, in a somewhat ambiguous fashion, that it meant the four directions with respect to the poles of the Earth.

> Ave: The 24 Seniors are all of one Office: But when thou wilt work in the East, thou must take such as bear rule there; so must thou do of the rest.
>
> Dee: Do you mean the estate, in respect of any place we shall be in, or in respect of any earthly place, accounted alwayes the East part of the world, wheresoever we be?

Ave: The East and West, in respect of your Poles. What will you else of me?[1]

It is not clear from Ave's statement which system the angel intended. Dee's first suggestion, that east should be reckoned from the location of the magician, is a much more workable solution than to try to divide up the nations of the world. To decide whether a particular place lies in the east, south, west or north is by no means an easy task. Obviously, Sweden is in the north, but is England in the north or the west? Is Russia north or east? What about South America? Or Hawaii? Or Morocco? The only certain location is Jerusalem, which was considered to be the center, or navel, of the Earth.

For the sake of simplicity, I suggest that the four directions of the world be related to the place where the Enochian magic is being worked, when the effect is to take place away from the place of working. That is to say, if the magician works a ritual in London that is to take place in Paris, he or she should use the spirits of the eastern Watchtower. Only if the magic is to take effect in the same place as the working of the ritual should the four regions of the Earth be considered. For example, if the magician works a ritual in London that is to take place in the same part of London, without a specific geographical focus, the angels of the western Watchtower would be employed (since England was, in classical times, considered part of the west).

The accompanying table (opposite) shows a Watchtower with the offices of the angels whose names are found on its quarters. It should be noted that the quarters of the Watchtowers are numbered the same way the Watchtowers themselves are numbered on the Great Table.

East 1.	South 2.
Dispositors: Knitting Together	Dispositors: Transportation
Good Angels: Teach Medicine and Heal the Sick	Good Angels: Precious Metals and Jewels
Evil Angels: Cause Sickness and Death	Evil Angels: Counterfeiting and Gambling
North 3.	West 4.
Dispositors: Arts and Crafts	Dispositors: Secrets of Men
Good Angels: Transformations of Form, not Essence	Good Angels: Knowledge of All Elemental Spirits
Evil Angels: Illusions and Deceptions	Evil Angels: Evil and Base Uses of Elementals

Offices of the Angels on Any Watchtower

The Angelic Hierarchy

The angels on the Watchtowers are those described in an emblematic way in Kelley's Great Vision. The Watchtowers also contain the names of evil spirits not mentioned in Kelley's vision. The Watchtower of the East will be used as an example, but the same classes of angels and spirits are to be found in the same places on all four Watchtowers, and the office or function of each class of angel is similar on all the Watchtowers.

The Kings

The King is the angel that Ave describes as the Overseer and Watchtower. This suggests that the King and the Watchtower are, to some extent, synonymous. Ave also says, "the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord." Kelley describes the King as "a comely man, very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train." It is the function of the King to summon the six Seniors for judgments.

The name of the King of the Watchtower of the East is either Bataiva when the King evokes the Seniors for an act of mercy, or Bataivh when the King evokes the Seniors for an act of severe judgment. Ave says, "Thou hast Bataiva or Bataivh. You must take but one of them, either the [final] A or the h. A, comiter, and h in extremis Judiciis."[1] It is a letter taken from the left column of letters on the double pillar of God in each Watchtower (presumably the column of the Son) that makes the King merciful, and a letter taken from the right pillar (presumably the column of the Father) that makes the King severe.

The name of each King is written in a clockwise spiral around the double intersection of the Great Cross on each Watchtower, beginning with the fifth letter in the line of the Holy Ghost or Spirit. The last letter in the name of the King of the east is either the A or h in the two squares that form the center of the Cross. The letters of the name Bataiva are highlighted in the accompanying diagram, which shows the center of the Watchtower of the East.

a	s	o	m	r	b
n	d	a	T	d	i i	b	A	h	a	o
b	r	V	i	x	g
i	t	T	p	a	l

The only deviation from this pattern occurs on the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower, which is the Watchtower of the North on the Original Table, but the Watchtower of the West on the Reformed Table of Raphael and also on my own Restored Table (remember, the quarters of the east, south, west and north do not shift on the Great Table even when the Watchtowers themselves are moved). On the OIP, TEAA, PDOCE Watchtower the letter "a" occurs twice in the intersection of the Great Cross. Dee has distinguished between the King of mercy (Eldprna) and the King of severity (Edlprna) by interchanging the second and third letters in the name of the King to indicate mercy.

The eight names of the Kings on the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers are as follows:

EAST:	Bataiva (mercy) Bataivh (severity)	SOUTH:	Iczhhca (mercy) Iczhhcl (severity)
NORTH:	Eldprna (mercy) Edlprna (severity)	WEST:	Raagios (mercy) Raagiol (severity)

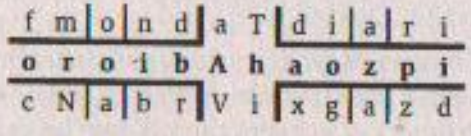
The Banner Names of God

The three names of God on the line of the Holy Ghost ("linea Spiritus Sancti") are those that were written on the three banners or ensigns carried out the gate of each Watchtower in Kelley's Great Vision. Ave called these the "names of God, that govern all the creatures upon the Earth, visible and invisible, comprehending 3, 4, 5." It is significant that there are twelve letters in the three names, and twelve names in all. This links the banner names with the twelve permutations of Tetragrammaton: a vital part of Hebrew occultism that both Dee and Kelley were familiar with from their studies.

The three banner names may be regarded as the divine authority of the King of the Watchtower, who is sometimes referred to by the angels as a prince to distinguish him from the One King, Christ. The four Kings of the Watchtowers carry out the edict of God the Son and God the Father. These two aspects of God are of one purpose, as is indicated by the pillar on the Great Cross, which is both the pillar of the Father when undivided, but also the pillar of Father and Son when divided with a line down the middle.

It is under these banners that Bataiva rules the east, Iczhhca rules the south, Raagios rules the west, and Eldprna rules the north (on the Original Table). Dee employs these twelve names in the opening "Fundamental Obesience" to God that comes before all his invocations in his personal Book of Spirits, which is recorded in his manuscript Liber Scientiae.[3]

The three names of God are extracted by reading across the line of Spirit from left to right. The diagram below shows the central part of the Watchtower of the East with the names of God in boldfaced type.



The twelve banner names of God on the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers are as follows:

EAST: Oro, Ibah, Aozpi SOUTH: Mor, Dial, Hctga

NORTH: Oip, Teaa, Pdoce WEST: Mph, Arsl, Gaiol

The Seniors

The Seniors of each Watchtower are described by Kelley as "six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands." Ave explicitly says of the twenty-four Seniors that they are "the 24 Seniors, that St. John remembreth." Therefore their description in the fourth chapter of Revelation applies: "And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold." Later, the elders arise from their seats and fall down upon their knees before the throne of Christ and "cast their crowns before the throne."

The Seniors (or Senators as they are also called by Ave) are the only group of angels in the Great Vision that perform two actions. They walk out of each gate in a single rank, six abreast, in company with all the other angels who surround the King. But when they reach the center of the four Watchtowers (called the "Court" by Ave, who is making a pun on the legal court of judgment), they go to the middle and form a ring. Although nothing is described in the middle of the court, this would be the location of the throne of Christ, which is always situated in the center of everything. Ave says: "They seem to consult."

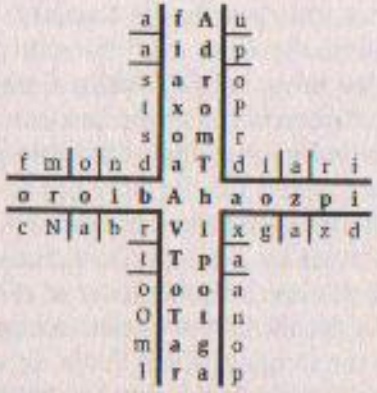
In describing the manner of extracting the names of the Seniors to Dee, Ave says: "Now for your six Seniors: whose judgment is of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."[4] The act of judicial judgement is clearly central to the role of the Seniors. The Seniors represent the twenty-four hours of the day, and thus time. They sit in judgment over the actions of the human race, which occur in time. As I have shown in my book

Tetragrammaton, the Enochian angels conceived of the Seniors as being seated around the throne of God in two rings of twelve chairs each, one ring directly above the other.[5] Each ring was in two crescents of six chairs. This is indicated quite clearly in a vision Kelley experienced on January 13, 1584:

> Now I see all those men, whose feet I saw before: And there sitteth One in a Judgement seat, with all his teeth fiery. And there sit six, on one side of him, and six on the other. And there sit twelve in a lower seat under them. All the place is like Gold, garnished with precious stones. On his head is a great stone; covering his head; a stone most bright, brighter then fire.[6]

The reason Ave says that the Seniors are "of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost" is because their names trace out the Great Cross on each Watchtower, with each name beginning from one of the two letters at the intersection of the Cross and proceeding outward. The names of the two Seniors located on the line of the Holy Spirit may be written with either six or seven letters, depending on which of the two letters at the intersection of the Cross is chosen to begin the name. For example, the name of the first Senior of the east may be either Abioro or Habioro, reading from either of the letters at the center of the Great Cross to the left along the line of Spirit.

Ave tells Dee that he should make the names of the two Seniors located on the line of Spirit to be of seven letters "when the wrath of God is to be encreased." The addition of the extra letter intensifies the power of the Seniors, which is the power of judgment. For the sake of uniformity, the names of all six of the Seniors are usually written with seven letters. In the following diagram, the names of the Seniors of the Watchtower of the East are indicated in boldfaced type.



The names of the twenty-four Seniors on the Original Great Table are:

EAST:	(H)abioro	SOUTH:	(L)aidrom
	Aaoxaif		Aczinor
	Htmorda		Lzinopo
	(A)haozpi		(A)lhctga
	Hipotga		Lhiansa
	Avtotar		Acmbicu
NORTH:	(A)aetpio	WEST:	(L)srahpm
	Adoeoet		Saiinou
	Alndood		Laoaxrp
	(A)apdoce		(S)lgaiol
	Arinnap		Ligdisa
	Anodoin		Soaiznt

The Dispositors

The sixteen Dispositors in each Watchtower are located above the arms of the four lesser crosses. Ave says: "After every Cross, attendeth 16 Angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles." It is the Dispositors who actually carry out the will of the Kings. Kelley describes them as "16 white Creatures." Concerning these sixteen angels who are above the lesser crosses, Ave tells Dee that they "have no participation with Devils."[7]

There are four Dispositors above every lesser cross. Each is represented by a single letter. For example, the diagram below shows the subquarter of the east (upper left quarter) on the Watchtower that occupies the eastern quarter of the Original Great Table. In this diagram, the four Dispositors are highlighted in boldfaced type.

r	Z	i	l	a
a	r	d	Z	a
c	z	o	n	s
T	o	i	T	t
S	i	g	a	s
f	m	o	n	d

As was true of the single-letter names of the forty-two Ministers that serve each heptarchical Prince, these rows of single letters may be permuted to yield four names of four letters. For example, the four letters above the arm of the lesser cross in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East are r Z l a. Each letter represents an angel. By moving each letter in turn to the beginning of the row, four names of four letters are generated:

R z l a
Z l a r
L a r z
A r z l

The set of four Dispositors above the arm of each lesser cross is ruled by a specific name of God. This divine name is created by adding the letter in the Black Cross of the Great Table that stands in the same row as the four Dispositors to the head of the four letters of the Dispositors. In the example, the letter in the Black Cross that shares the same row with the Dispositors above the lesser cross in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East is e. This letter from the Black Cross is placed before the letters of the group of Dispositors to form the divine name Erzla.

By a similar process, the divine name that rules the four Dispositors above the southern lesser cross of the Watchtower of the East is Eutpa. The divine name that rules the four Dispositors of the western lesser cross of this Watchtower is Hxgzd. The divine name that rules the four Dispositors of the northern lesser cross is Hcnbr. The divine name is employed ritually to evoke the four Dispositors related to it.

Each of these four groups of Dispositors has its own function in Enochian magic.[8] Dispositors in the eastern subquarters rule the "knitting together of Natures," which means the joining together of things, as in the process of growth or healing. The opposite power also applies, which is the destruction of natures, since the creation of one thing is the destruction of another. Elsewhere, in the list of uses of the Great Table, Ave tells Dee that these angels control: "The Conjoyning and knitting together of Natures. The Destruction of Nature, and of things that may perish."[9] Those in the southern subquarters rule the "carrying from place," which probably signifies physical travel of persons and the movement of objects. In the list of uses of the Great Table Ave calls this: "Moving from place to place [as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure]."

About those in the western subquarters, Ave tells Dee: "Herein may you find the secrets of Kings, and so unto the lowest degree," which seems generally to signify the revelation of secret things. In a marginal note, Dee shows that he understood this as "the secrets of men knowing."

Dispositors in the northern subquarters rule "All Hand-crafts, or Arts," which signifies the teaching and bringing of success in the arts and sciences. Dee understood this to mean "All humane knowledge."

The function of corresponding groups is the same on all the Watchtowers, but applies to different zones of the Earth. Ave tells Dee:

> But you must Note, That as the Angels of the first of the four Crosses in the East, which are for Medicine: so are the first of the second, the first of the third, and the first of the fourth; so that for Medicine there be sixteen, and so of all the rest in their order: but that they differ in that, some be the angels of the East, other some of the West, and so of the rest.*

Ave is talking about the angels beneath the arms of the lesser crosses here, but the principle applies to the Dispositors as well. For example, the office of the four angels above the lesser cross of the west on the Watchtower of the East is to reveal secrets in the eastern part of the world. The function of the similar group above the lesser cross of the west on the Watchtower of the North is also to reveal secrets, but these four angels reveal the secrets of the northern part of the world.

Listed in the accompanying table are the names of the sixty-four Dispositors who stand above the arms of the sixteen lesser crosses on the Original Great Table, along with the ruling divine names and offices of these angels. Again, it must be stressed that the quarters east, south, west and north relate to the Great Table itself, not to the individual Watchtowers. The associations of the Dispositors with the directions will be somewhat different on the Reformed Table of Raphael and my own Restored Table because the Watchtowers occupy different quarters.

Subquarter	Watchtowers				Function
	East	South	West	North
Eastern	Rzla Zlar Larz Arzl	Boza Ozab Zabo Aboz	Taad Aadt Adta Dtaa	Dops Opad Pado Adop	Knitting Together of Natures
God Names	Erzla	Eboza	Atasd	Adopa
Southern	Utps Tpau Paut Autp	Phra Hrap Raph Aphr	Tdim Dint Imtd Mtdi	Anaa Naaa Aaan Aana	Carrying from to Place
God Names	Eutpa	Ephra	Atdin	Aanaa
Western	Xgzd Gzdx Zdxg Dxgz	Iaom Aomi Omia Miao	Nlrx Lrxn Rxnl Xnlr	Ziza Izaz Zazi Aziz	Discovery of Secrets
God Names	Hxgzd	Hiaom	Pnlrx	Pziza
Northern	Cnbr Nbrc Brcn Rcnb	Roan Oanr Anro Nroa	Magl Aglm Glma Lmag	Psac Sacp Acps Cpsa	Teaching of Arts and Crafts
God Names	Hcnbr	Hroan	Pmagl	Ppsac

The Dispositors on the Original Great Table

The Angels Both Good and Evil

These are the angels in each Watchtower whose names are written on either side of the lesser crosses beneath the arms of the lesser crosses. They are obviously related to the sixteen Dispositors, but this relationship is never made completely clear by the Enochian angels. The sixteen angels above the arms of the lesser crosses are said by Ave to be wholly good, whereas the sixteen angels below the arms are of a mixed nature, neither wholly good nor wholly evil.

Only one set of sixteen angels for each Watchtower appears in Kelley's Great Vision, so it is possible that by the Dispositors Ave intends the angels below the arms of the crosses. I tend to believe that the Dispositors are the angels above the arms because all the other angels in the Great Vision are good. It might be speculated that the sixteen angels above the arms rule the sixteen below the arms, but Ave does not directly state this relationship.

There are four good angels and four sibling evil angels below the arm of each lesser cross. The letters that make up the names of the good and evil angels in the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East are highlighted below in bold type.

r	Z	i	l	a
a	r	d	Z	a
c	z	o	n	s
T	o	i	T	t
S	i	g	a	s
f	m	o	n	d

When the names of the angels below the arms of the lesser crosses are written with four letters, they are good angels, but when they are written with only three letters, they are evil angels. Thus they form two distinct sets of angels, but since both good and evil angels derive from the same letters, they should be understood as related, each pair composed of a good and an evil twin.

The Good Angels

The names of the good angels are derived by reading across each row from left to right. In the example, the good angels of the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East are Czns, Tott, Sias and Fmnd. To greatly increase the effectiveness of their function, they may be made into names of five letters by including the letters in the column of the lesser cross: Czons, Toitt, Sigas, Fmond.

Each group of four good angels in the subquarter of a Watchtower has its own particular function. The function of the four angels in the example is healing. By adding the letters in the stem of the lesser cross to the names, their power of healing becomes enhanced. Ave says concerning the four good angels in the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East: "If it be an incurable disease (in the judgment of man) then adde the letter that standeth against the name, and make him up five: then he cureth miraculously."[11]

Dee understood Ave's words to mean the letter in the column of the lesser cross should be added to the names, and in his Liber Scientiae he gives the names of the good angels with five letters based on this assumption. I should point out, however, that the directions of the angel are not altogether clear. It is possible that Ave intended that the letter in the Black Cross that occupies the same row as the name of a good angel should be added to the front of the name of the angel to intensify its power. If this is done, the four good angels whose names are of five letters would be Xczns, Atott, Rsias and Pfmnd. In giving the names of the good angels, I have adhered to Dee's understanding of Ave's directions, but I wanted to point out that another interpretation is possible.

The four good angels of each subquarter are invoked to visible appearance within the crystal, or evoked within the ritual chamber, by the name of God of six letters that lies on the column of the lesser cross in the same subquarter, reading from top to bottom. In the example, the divine name that invokes (or evokes) is Idoigo. This same group of four good angels is commanded by the name of God of five letters written on the arm of the lesser cross, reading left to right. In the example, the divine name that commands is Ardza. Speaking about the angel Czns, Ave tells Dee: "It is one of the 4 angels that serve to that crosse, which are ruled by this name Idoigo. It is the name of God, of six letters: Look in the crosse that descendeth, In that name [Idoigo] they appear, by the name [Ardza] that is in the crosse [Transversary] they do that they are commanded."

As is true of the Dispositors, each group of four good angels on a Watchtower has its own specific function. The good angels in the subquarters of the east rule over medicine. Ave tells Dee: "Those 4 be of Physick." When their names are increased to five letters, their healing power is miraculous.

The angels in the subquarters of the south are concerned with metals and mining. About them Ave says: "They have power over Metals, to find them, to gather them together, and to use them." In enumerating the uses of the Great Table, Ave has also listed as one of their functions "The congelations, and vertues of Stones." By this, precious and semiprecious jewels should be understood.

The good angels in the subquarters of the west give knowledge and command of the elemental spirits. The first angel of the four rules the air, the second the water, the third the earth, and the fourth "the life, or fire of things that live." In his list of uses for the Great Table, Ave says concerning the power of this group of good angels: "The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire which is the secret life of all things."

The good angels in the subquarters of the north have the power of transformations. Ave defines this office in Latin, saying "Transmutatio formalis, sed non essentialis," which means that the change is one of outward form but not of essential nature. These angels can change a spoon into a fork, or make a beggar appear to be a king, but they cannot transform lead into gold (which must have disappointed Kelley!). They can, however, change a lump of coal into a diamond, since this is a transformation of form and not essence (both are carbon).

The four classes of good angels are the same on each of the four Watchtowers, but those on the Watchtower of the East act in the eastern part of the world, those angels who perform the same function on the Watchtower of the South act in the southern part of the world, and so for the rest.

Subquarter	Watchtowers				Function
	East	South	West	North
Eastern	Czons Toitt Sigas Fmond	Aigra Orpmn Rsoni Izinr	Tagco Nhodd Patax Saaiz	Opamn Aplst Scmio Varsg	Treating and Curing of Disease
Invoking	Idoigo	Angpoi	Olgota	Noalmr
Commanding	Ardza	Unnax	Oaico	Obeg
Southern	Oyaub Pacoc Rbznh Diari	Omagg Gbeal Rlemu Iamhl	Malgm Leaoc Vspsn Rvroi	Gmdrm Ecaop Amlox Briap	Knowledge, Finding and Use of Metals
Invoking	Liacza	Anaeem	Nelapr	Vadali
Commanding	Palam	Sondn	Omebb	Obaua
Western	Acuca Nprat Otroi Pmaox	Msmal Ianba Izixp Strim	Xpacn Vaasa Daspi Rndil	Adire Siosp Panli Acrar	Knowledge of All Elemental Creatures
Invoking	Aourrz	Spmnir	Iasasd	Rzionr
Commanding	Alcai	Ilpiz	Ataga	Nrzfm
Northern	Abamo Nsoco Ocanm Shial	Opana Dolop Rxpao Axtir	Palco Ndazn Iidpo Xrinh	Daltt Dixom Oodpz Rgoan	Changes of Form, not Essence
Invoking	Aicaoai	Cbalpt	Maladi	Volxdo
Commanding	Oiiit	Arbiz	Olaad	Sioda

The Good Angels on the Original Great Table

On the table of the good angels, the letters extracted from the pillars of the lesser crosses to increase the number of letters in each name from four to five are indicated in boldfaced type.

The Evil Angels

If only the first two letters in the name of each good angel are taken, and to the front of them is prefixed the letter in the Black Cross that occupies the same row, the name of an evil angel is created. These evil angels always have names of three letters, as Ave tells Dee: "Every name, sounding of three letters, beginning out of that line [of the Black Cross], is the name of a Devil, or wicked Angel, as well from the right, as from the left...."

When describing to Dee the four evil angels of the subquarter of the east on the Watchtower of the East, Ave says:

> Ave: But if thou wilt send sicknesse, then take two of the letters, and adde the letter of the Crosse [Dee: the black crosse] to that, as in the second, a T o.
>
> [Dee: This a, is of the crosse of union, or the black crosse.]
>
> Ave: Then he is a wicked power, and bringeth in disease: and when thou callest him, call him by the name of god, backward: for unto him, so, he is a god: and so constrain him backward, as Ogiodi.
>
> Dee: I think the Constraint must be, by the name of the Transversary backward pronounced, as of Ardza, is backway, azdra: For ogiodi, should but cause him to appear by the order of Idoigo, used for the 4 good Angels.[12]

The meaning of this passage is that the evil angels are evoked or called to visable appearance by the name of God in the pillar of the lesser cross for their particular subquarter read backward, from bottom to top. They are commanded by the name of God in the arm of the cross read backward, from right to left. Because they are evil, these inverted names of God are divine to them, and have power over them.

There is some confusion in the angelic transcript over whether the sixteen evil angels native to each Watchtower should even be used in Enochian magic. Ave refers to them when he speaks about sending sickness, and also in connection with obtaining money in the form of coins:

Ave: These [evil angels of the southern subquarter] can give money coined, in Gold or Silver.

Dee: Which these?

These wicked ones mean you?

Ave: I.

The other give no money coined, but the metal.

Dee: You mean the good.

Ave: I.[13]

This suggests that at least some of the evil angels have a legitimate function in Enochian magic. However, a little further on in their conversation Ave strongly contradicts this assumption, much to Kelley's disgust:

Dee: As concerning the wicked here, Shall I call or summon them all, as I do the good ones in the name of God?

Ave: No man calleth upon the name of God in the wicked: They are servants and vile slaves.

Dee: We call upon the name of Jesus in the expulsing of devils, saying in the name of Jesus, etc.

Ave: That In, is against the wicked. No just man calleth upon the name of God, to allure the devil.

Dee: Then they are not to be named in the first summoning or invitation.

Ave: At no time to be called.

Kelley: How then shall we proceed with them?

Ave: When the Earth lieth opened unto your eyes, and when the Angels of Light, shall offer the passages of the Earth, unto the entrance of your senses (chiefly of seeing) Then shall you see the Treasures of the Earth, as you go: And the caves of the Hills shall not be unknown unto you: Unto these, you may say, Arise, be gone, Thou art of destruction and of the places of darknesse: These are provided for the use of man. So shalt thou use the wicked, and no otherwise.

Dee: This is as concerning the natural Mines of the Earth.

Ave: Not so, for they have nothing to do with the natural Mines of the Earth, but, with that which is corrupted with man.

Dee: As concerning the coined they have power to bring it.

Ave: So they may: that they keep, and no other.

Dee: How shall we know what they keep, and what they keep not?

Ave: Read my former words; for thou dost not understand them.

Dee: I read it: beginning at the first line on this side, when the Angels of Light, etc.

I mean of coined money that they keep not; How shall we do to serve our necessities with it?

Ave: The good Angels are Ministers for that purpose. The Angels of the 4 angles shall make the Earth open unto you, and shall serve your necessities from the 4 parts of the Earth.[14]

This is not exactly a clear statement on the part of the angel. He seems to be saying that although the evil angels can be used to cause sickness and obtain coined money, they should not be named except to banish them from the clay of human flesh. Dee did not understand that Ave was speaking about the dark places of the human body, not the mines of the Earth.

The offices of the evil angels are substantially the same as those of their good brethren, but their areas of influence are perverted to evil purposes. For example, the good angels of the eastern subquarters cure disease and teach medicine, while the evil angels bring sickness and death. The good angels of the southern subquarters teach the finding and use of metals, while their evil twins teach counterfeiting and the wicked uses of money, such as gambling. The good angels of the western subquarters teach the knowledge of elemental spirits, while the evil angels teach the uses of these spirits for perverse or hurtful ends. The good angels of the northern subquarters teach transformations of form, while the evil angels teach the art of illusions and trickery of the senses.

The table of the evil angels (opposite) shows their offices and the inverted divine names of the lesser crosses by which they are summoned and commanded as they appear on the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers.

As you can see, it is possible to extract another set of sixty-four evil angels by combining the letters in the column of the Black Cross with the pairs of letters in the same row that stand on the right side of the lesser crosses. In the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the East, for example, the cacodemons are Xcz, Ato, Rsi and Pfm, but with this method of extraction they might just as easily be Xns, Att, Ras and Pnd. Dee makes no suggestion that this possibility ever occurred to him, nor do the Enochian angels refer to it. I merely mention it here as a point of interest.

The Questions That Went Unanswered

The explanation given by Ave concerning the parts and uses of the Great Table is incomplete. Nowhere does he mention the associations on the Table with the Trumpeters of Kelley's Great Vision. Neither does he explain the link between the Table and the five Princes in each Watchtower who hold up the train of the King. The relationship between the letters on the beam of the Black Cross (what Dee calls the "Transversary") and the Watchtowers is not set forth. About the multitude of spirits that Kelley saw, as Dee says, "standing after the sixteen Angels next the Gate," Ave says only "They be Ministers and servants."[15]

Subquarter	Watchtowers				Function
	East	South	West	North
Eastern	Xcz Ato Rsi Pfm	Xai Aor Rrs Piz	Mta Onh Cps Hsa	Mop Cep Csc Hua	Bringing Sickness and Death
Invoking	Ogiodi	Iopgma	Atoglo	Pmlaon
Commanding	Azdra	Xannu	Oclao	Gaolo
Southern	Xoy Apa Rrb Pdi	Xom Agb Rrl Pia	Mma Ole Cvs Hrv	Mgn Oec Cam Hbr	Obtaining Money, Coining, Gambling
Invoking	Azcall	Meeana	Rpalen	Iladav
Commanding	Malap	Ndnos	Ebemo	Auabo
Western	Cac Onp Mot Apm	Cms Oia Miz Ast	Rxp Ava Xda Brn	Rad Asi Xpa Eac	Base and Evil Uses of the Elementals
Invoking	Zrruoa	Rinmps	Deaaai	Rnoizr
Commanding	Iaola	Zipli	Apata	Mfzrn
Northern	Cab Cna Moc Ash	Cop Odo Mrx Aax	Rpa And Xii Exr	Rda Adi Xoo Erg	Deceptive Changes of Form, Illusions
Invoking	Iaoaia	Tplabc	Idalam	Oflxlou
Commanding	Tiiio	Zibra	Daalo	Adois

The Evil Angels on the Original Great Table

Dee made several pointed inquiries about these and several other more general matters, but each time he was put off by the angels, who clearly had no intention of revealing these mysteries to him. Since they did not wish Dee to actually use Enochian magic in his lifetime (despite their intimations to the contrary), they may have withheld this essential information to prevent him from defying their order that he await permission to use the magic.

The Princes

After considering the matter, it seems very likely to me that the four ranks of five Princes who hold up the trains of the Kings in Kelley's Vision are equivalent to the four rows of letters in the Tablet of Union. Each letter in the Tablet of Union stands for a Prince. The four rows in the Tablet are probably assigned to the Watchtowers in the same curious way that the Watchtowers are numbered on the Original Great Table.

1. Watchtower of the East: e x a r p
2. Watchtower of the South: h c o m a
3. Watchtower of the North: n a n t a
4. Watchtower of the West: b i t o m

By the familiar process of Enochian permutation, the single letter that stands for the name of each Prince may be extended into a five-letter name that is derived from the row of letters to which it belongs.

This arrangement of the Princes on the Great Table (opposite) is based on my personal speculation. I have not encountered it elsewhere, nor have I seen any other conjectures as to what the figures of the Princes in Kelley's Vision may signify. It does seem very suggestive that there are five Princes in each Watchtower, and that each row of the Tablet of Union has five letters.

1.	EAST	2.	SOUTH
Princes of the East	Exarp Xarpe Arpex Rpexa Pexar	Princes of the South	Hcoma Comah Omahc Mahco Ahcom
3.	NORTH	4.	WEST
Princes of the North	Nanta Antan Ntana Tanan Anant	Princes of the West	Bitom Itomb Tombi Ombit Mbito

The Princes on the Great Table

The Trumpeters

Regarding the other mystery, the meaning of the single Trumpeter with his strange horn of six openings arranged in the shape of a pyramid or (seen from the front) a triangle, my guess is that this refers to the letters at the intersections of the five crosses in each Watchtower. Every lesser cross has a single letter at its intersection, but the Great Cross that runs through the middle of the Watchtower is double, and has two letters at its intersection.

These six letters, gathered together, would make a single name. One reasonable way to gather them is to take them in a clockwise circle around the Watchtower beginning with the lesser cross of the eastern subquarter, and ending at the center with the two letters of the Great Cross. This is the same pattern by which the name of the King is derived. The following four names of six letters would result:

1. Watchtower of the East: D l o i a h
2. Watchtower of the South: N n p b a l
3. Watchtower of the North: O a z o a a
4. Watchtower of the West: L e a a s l

Again, this is speculation unsupported by any statement of the angels. The letters at the intersections of the crosses are surely of significance in the scheme of Enochian magic, but what this significance may be remains unknown.

"The Letters of the Transversary"

Ave explains the use of the letters in the column of the Black Cross upon the Great Table in detail. They seem to embody the divine energy that vitalizes the lesser angels and demons, when added to their names. The rays of the Black Cross symbolize the four rivers that flow out of the throne of God in Paradise (and in New Jerusalem, which is Paradise returned to the Earth). However, Ave says nothing at all about the letters in the arm of the Black Cross.

Dee was curious as to why the three geographical regions or genii of the tenth Aether (Lexarph, Comanan, Tabitom) had been chosen to form the letters of the Black Cross. Ave refused to enlighten him.

Dee: I think a mystery did depend upon the choice of the three names, Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom.
Ave: That is not to our purpose.[16]

Dee persists, as this matter is obviously of the greatest importance. Later in the same conversation he asks:

Dee: Of the Letters in the Transversary of the wicked their black Crosse, I know no use, as of motivat; nan, etc.
Ave: Thou shalt know, when thou writest thy book.[17]

This was only another way of putting Dee off the question. Dee was nothing if not persistent. Five days later he got another chance to ask Ave the same question:

Dee: Of the letters in the Transversary, I would know your will.
Ave: They are, as the other, but for a peculiar practice.[18]

This is the only clue we get concerning the letters in the arm of the Black Cross, but it is a useful hint. It appears that the letters of the arm are to be added to the front of angel names extracted by reading the letters in the subquarters of the Great Table in columns. The names extracted from the pillars of the lesser crosses would probably be divine names by which the others are invoked, reading down the pillars in the case of good angels and up the pillars in the case of evil angels. The divine names would have seven letters, the names of the good angels six letters (five plus the intensifier in the arm of the lesser cross), and the names of the evil angels five letters. The good angels of the columns may be commanded by reading the names on the arms of the associated lesser crosses from left to right, while the evil angels of the columns are commanded by reading the names on the arms of the lesser crosses from right to left.

The Good Angels of the Columns

For what this speculation may be worth, I have arranged the conjectured names of the good angels of the columns, along with their invoking God names, in the table on page 216. Their functions are unknown. As is true of all the other tables in this chapter, it is based on the Original Great Table, and would be different for

Subquarter	Watchtowers				Function
	East	South	West	North
Eastern	Hactsf Zrzoim Lantan Aastsd	Busori Cnirsz Zarmnn Axanir	Totngs Aaahaa Accdai Doodxz	Dooasu Olppca Pansis Agntog	Unknown
God Names	Tidoigo	Nangpoi	Nolgota	Tnoalnr
Southern	Upoprd Tayabi Pauonr Anbchi	Psogri Bonbla Rdganh Anglul	Tonlur Dnaesu Ibgoso Nbncni	Aogeab Nbncnr Aunooa Aanpxp	Unknown
God Names	Nllacza	Tanaeen	Tnelapr	Nuadali
Western	Xaanop Glcptn Zacaoo Diatix	Iiniis Alsazt Oiabxi Nzlagn	Naxudr Ltpaan Rpcspi Xanail	Znaspe Irdiac Ifrsla Anepir	Unknown
God Names	Nacurrz	Tspnnir	Tiaaasd	Nrzionr
Northern	Coanos Nibach Bincna Rtoonl	Raodra Orpoxx Ainoai Nzapor	Mopnix Aladir Gaczpn Ldonoh	Psddor Siaiog Adtopa Catnzn	Unknown
God Names	Taiaoai	Ncbalpt	Nnaladi	Tuslxdo

Good Angels of the Columns on the Original Great Table

the Reformed Table of Raphael and my own Restored Table due to the different placements of the Watchtowers on the quarters, and minor variations in the lettering.

The Evil Angels of the Columns

In the final table I have extracted the names of the conjectured evil angels of the columns from the Original Great Table, along with the inverted names of God by which they may be invoked. Their functions are unknown. Perhaps the good and evil angels of the columns, about which Ave says nothing at all, play a part in the apocalyptic transformation of the world

Subquarter	Watchtowers				Function
	East	South	West	North
Eastern	Mctsf Ozoim Intan Estsd	Naori Airsz Trnnn Aanir	Ntngs Aahaa Todai Aodxz	Noasu Oppca Insis Entog	Unknown
God Names	Togiodi	Niopgna	Natoglo	Trnlaon
Southern	Aoprd Tyabi Auonr Nbchi	Bogri Inbla Oganh Nglul	Enlur Iaesu Ogoso Nncni	Ageab Tncnr Anooa Nnpxp	Unknown
God Names	Nazcall	Tneeana	Trpalen	Nlladau
Western	Aanop Tcptn Acaoo Natix	Eniis Isazt Oabxi Nlagn	Exudr Ipaan Ocspi Nnail	Aaspa Tdiac Arsla Nepir	Unknown
God Names	Nzrruoa	Trinnpe	Tdsaaai	Nrnoizr
Northern	Manos Obach Incna Boonl	Nodra Apoxx Tnoai Aapor	Npnix Aadir Tczpn Aonoh	Mddor Oaiog Itopa Etnzn	Unknown
God Names	Tiaoaia	Ntplahc	Nidalan	Todxlou

Evil Angels of the Columns on the Original Great Table which is so often referred to by the Enochian angels in their conversations with Dee and Kelley. This might be the reason Ave refused to explain the function of the columns and the beam of the Black Cross to Dee.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Enochian Keys

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE KEYS

The last word of the First Key, or Call, was transmitted to Dee through Kelley by the angel Nalvage on the morning of April 13, 1584. The Keys were revealed backward to prevent Dee from inadvertently using them as invocations when repeating them:

> Nalvage: Unto this Doctrine belongeth the perfect knowledge and remembrance of the mysticall Creatures. How therefore shall I inform you, which know them not?
>
> Dee: Mean you as Babyon, Bohoyel, etc.
>
> Nalvage: The Characters, or Letters of the Tables.
>
> Dee: You mean the mystical Letters, wherein the holy book is promised to be written: and if the book be so written and laid open before us, and then you will from Letter to Letter point, and we to record your instructions: Then I trust we shall sufficiently understand, and learn your instructions.
>
> Nalvage: Also in receiving of the calls, this is to be noted: that they are to be uttered of me, backward: and of you, in practise, forward.
>
> Dee: I understand it, for the efficacy of them: else, all things called would appear: and so hinder our proceeding in learning.[1]

The Keys correspond in number to the forty-nine large letter-number squares of Dee's Book of Enoch, save that the first table in the book has no Key. Nalvage explains to Dee:

I finde the Soul of man hath no portion in this first Table. It is the Image of the son of God, in the bosome of his father, before all the worlds. It comprehendeth his incarnation, passion, and return to judgement: which he himself, in flesh, knoweth not; all the rest are of understanding. The exact Center excepted.[1]

The first unexpressed Call would seem to correspond with the small cross at the end of the magic square of the names of the seven angels who burn as flames before the throne of heavenly Christ (Revelation 4:5). If this is so, then the other forty-eight Calls probably correspond with the individual letters in this square, moving through the square from back to front. This is only conjecture on my part, however.

The Keys were delivered backward letter by letter (at least in the initial stage), and out of their proper sequence. This was a torturous process that must have sorely tried the patience and endurance of both Dee and Kelley:

86.

A (Two thousand and fourteen, in the sixth Table, is) D 7003. In the thirteenth Table is I.

A in the 21th Table. 11406 downward.

I in the last Table, one lesse then Number. A word, Jaida you shall understand, what that word is before the Sun go down. Jaida is the last word of the call.

85.

H 49. ascending T 49. descending, A 909. directly, O simply.

H 2029. directly, call it Hoath.

84.

225. From the low angle on the right side. Continuing in the same and next square. D 225. [The same number repeated].

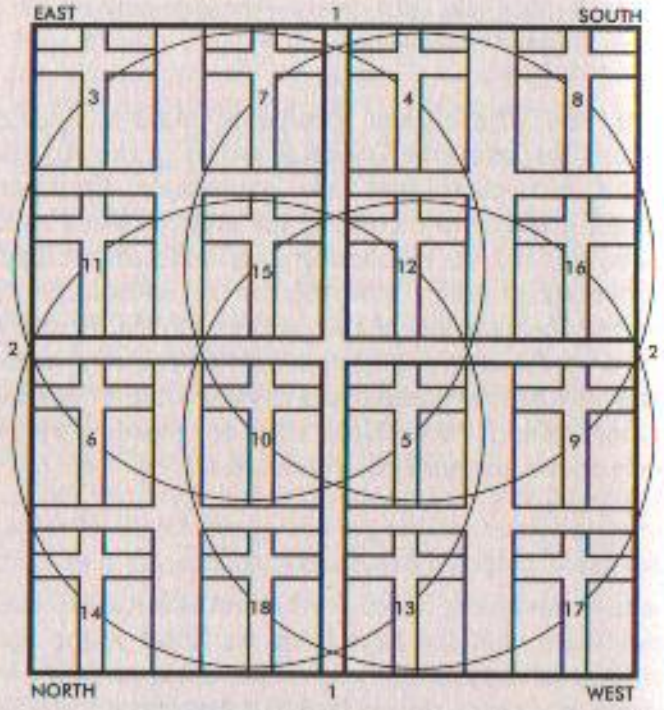
A In the thirteenth Table, 740. ascending in his square.

M The 30th Table, 13025. from the low angle in the left-side. In the square ascending.
Call it Mad.[2]

In this painful and confusing manner Nalvage revealed the last three Enochian words of the First Key of the forty-eight that are expressed. Apparently (though it is far from certain) the angel pointed to letters with a rod on a round crystal table on which he was standing. Kelley saw this in the showstone and reported the position of the pointer to Dee, who then looked up the corresponding letters on his own written tables. As Kelley worked, the crystal table of Nalvage became clearer: "His Table now appeareth very evidently to me, as that I could paint it all."[4]

The Keys and the Great Table

It is my conviction, based on the overall structure of the Great Table, that the Keys from the Third to the Eighteenth unfold themselves upon the Table in four overlapping clockwise circles (see the diagram on the next page). Each circle begins in a subquarter of the Eastern Watchtower. Each passes through the middle of the lesser cross of the corresponding subquarters on the other three Watchtowers. The circles are numbered according to the numbering of the quadrants and subquadrants—that is to say, the first circle begins in the eastern, or first, subquarter of the Watchtower of the East; the second begins in the southern, or second, subquarter; the third begins in the northern, or third, subquarter; and the fourth circle begins in the western, or fourth, subquarter.



Four Cycles of the Keys on the Great Table

The first two Keys probably relate to the pillar and beam of the central Black Cross on the Great Table. The unexpressed primordial Key that corresponds with the first of the forty-nine Tables of Enoch may relate to the center of the Black Cross. It should be designated by a zero, similar to the use of zero for the first card of the Tarot (the Fool).

This relationship of the Keys to the Great Table is never clearly stated by the angels, but may be deduced from internal evidence in the Keys. On the Watchtowers, the three rays of each Great Cross are explicitly given to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost of the Christian trinity. I suspect that the pillar, beam, and center of the Black Cross are also linked with the trinity. The Father is probably assigned the pillar of the Black Cross, and the First Key. The Son is probably assigned the beam of the Black Cross, and the Second Key. The Holy Spirit, who is the unseen Mother of many of the Enochian angels, is probably assigned the intersection of the Black Cross, which is a dimensionless point, and the unexpressed primordial Key that has nothing directly to do with the human race or the Earth.

In the biblical metaphor of New Jerusalem, which is so intimately linked with Enochian magic, the Father and Son are combined in the figure of heavenly Christ, who has the white hair of an old man (just as the hair of Moses turned white while he communed with God and received the ten Commandments). In Revelation, the heavenly Christ is described both as a king who sits in authority and passes judgments, and as a mounted conquering prince who wields a two-edged sword of retribution. The Holy Ghost is represented by the throne on which heavenly Christ sits at the exact center of New Jerusalem. From the throne flow the four rivers of Paradise, corresponding to the four arms of the Black Cross.

It is usual in Enochian magic to progress backwards from the end to the beginning. This was the course followed by Aleister Crowley when he worked the invocations of the thirty Aethers. He began with the thirtieth and ended with the first. It is possible that in the final apocalypse working one of the eighteen distinct Keys is to be vibrated each day, beginning with the eighteenth and working backward to the first. In this way, the magician would progress four times counterclockwise around the Great Table, beginning in the north and ending in the east (the process by which the table of clay was revealed to Dee and Kelley in the initial transmission of the Watchtowers), then would follow the two arms of the Black Cross to the center of the four Watchtowers, where lies the fountain of Holy Spirit. It is through this fountain of Spirit that the thirty Aethers are to be accessed. The intersection of the Great Cross is the doorway into the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

The Author of the Enochian Keys

The Enochian Keys are clearly ritual invocations (or evocations, depending on whether the spirits to whom they are applied are called in, or called out). Yet in discussing the Book of Spirits, the angel Ave tells Dee that he must write the invocations for the Book himself, since invocation is a function of the free will and fervent heat of the human soul, and angels have no part in it. When Dee presses Ave for more details, the angel says "I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man."

If the angels cannot write invocations, and if the Keys are invocations, then who wrote the Keys? And why? It seems redundant that Dee should have to write a complete set of invocations to contact and bind the angels of the Watchtowers when he has already been given a complete set of invocations by the angels themselves.

The function of the Keys must be different from the function of Dee's own set of invocations, which was intended to initially call the angels of the Great Table during an eighteen-day working. It may be that Dee's invocations were also to be used in regularly summoning the angels. Ave talks about a book that is only to be used on one day, but this cannot refer to the Book of Spirits that contained Dee's invocations, which was to be used for at least eighteen days. As I have indicated, the book of one day probably is the Book of Silvered Leaves, which was (I believe) to be employed to record the seals and signatures of the invoked angels. No limit is placed on the use of Dee's own invocations.

It is usual for modern Enochian magicians to vibrate the Keys to summon the angels of the Watchtowers for everyday ritual work. This was the Golden Dawn practice. The founders of the Golden Dawn did not understand the need for the magician to compose an original set of invocations to establish initial contact with the angels. In the Golden Dawn, only the Keys were used to invoke or evoke the angels.

Perhaps the Keys have a higher and more specific purpose than everyday invocation. If they were not composed by the angels, but rather someone above the angels, they must have been written by the Father of Heaven, or by heavenly Christ the Son, or by the Mother of the angels who refers to herself only by the title I AM. They may be the text of the unrecorded apocalypse working, which I have postulated as the dark and secret heart of the Enochian communications.

Enochian magicians who employ the Keys casually for personal reasons may be unwittingly debasing them and abusing their power. Of course, if this is so, only the smallest fraction of the power of the Keys would be released during this awkward and inappropriate application. It would be akin to using a hundred-ton hydraulic press to hammer in a nail.

Text of the Keys

The Enochian versions of the Keys were revealed before the English translations, although in some cases the English was revealed along with the Enochian. In Casaubon the initial recording of the Keys is, to say the least, confused. Toward the end of the process, fragments of one Key are mixed with fragments of another. Fortunately, the English translations later provided by Nalvage are much clearer.

Dee recorded the text of the Keys and its translation in a much more readable form in his manuscript 48 Claves Angelicae,[5] and it is this manuscript version and its printed transcripts that I have followed in the corrected text of the Keys that appears here. I have adhered to Dee's own practice of writing the Enochian in rows from left to right, with the English translation directly above each word.

Some of the Enochian words are written in capitals by Dee. These are the power words, the actually triggers that bring about the visual apparition of the angels. It will be noticed that two forms of the Enochian word for "move" are used, ZACAR and ZACARe. ZACAR appears much more frequently. In my opinion the lower case "e" appended to the end of the word is intended merely as an aid to pronunciation. The hyphenated Enochian words are compound words that are written as single words in Dee's manuscript. I have inserted the hyphens to make it easier to understand their composition. For the sake of clarity, I have removed the hyphens that Dee put into single words (apparently as an aid to pronunciation). The Enochian words in square brackets have been inserted by me to fill in obvious gaps in the Enochian text. Purists may prefer to ignore them.

It has been observed[6] that the Enochian language is extraordinarily compact, that one word in Enochian often signified an entire phrase in English. This fact has been used to support sceptics' claims that Enochian is not a real language. If we look at a French word in a French-English dictionary and compare its size with the size of the English definition that accompanies it, this is hardly evidence that French is not a language. Also, it should be noted that Dee was often writing the definitions or descriptions of difficult Enochian words, not merely their translations. Probably no adequate translation exists in English for many of these words.

First Key

I reign over you, saith the God of Justice,
Ol sonf vors-g, goho Iad Balt,

in power exalted above the firmaments of wrath;
Iansh calz vonphu;

in whose hands the Sun is as a sword, and the Moon
sobra zol Ror I ta nazpsad, od Graa as a through-thrusting fire, which measureth ta malprg, ds holq

your garments in the midst of my vestures, and qaa nothoa zimz od

trussed you together as the palms of my hands; whose commah ta nobloh zien; soba seats I garnished with the fire of gathering, which thil gnonp prge aldi, ds beautified your garments with admiration; to whom urbs oboleh g-rsam; casarm

I made a Law to govern the Holy Ones, which ohorela taba Pir, ds delivered you a rod with the ark of knowledge.

zonrensg cab erm Jadnah.

Moreover, you lifted up your voices and swore obedience
Pilah, farzm znra adna and faith to Him that liveth and triumpheth; whose gono Iadpil ds hom toh; soba

beginning is not, nor end cannot be; which shineth [iaod] ipam, ul ipamis; ds loholo

as a flame in the midst of your palace, and reigneth vep zomd poamal, od bogpa

amongst you as the balance of righteousness and truth.
aai ta piap piamos od vaoan

Move, therefore, and show yourselves! Open ZACARe, ca, od ZAMRAN! Odo

the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly unto me:
cicle qaa. Zorge:

for I am the servant of the same your God,
lap zirdo noco MAD,
the true worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Jaida.

Second Key

Can the Wings of the Winds understand your voices Adgt Upaah Zong om faaip of wonder, O you, the Second of the First? Whom sald, Viu L? Sobam

the Burning Flames have framed Ialprg izazaz

within the depths of my jaws; whom I have prepared as piadph; casarma abramg ta cups for a wedding, or as the flowers in their beauty talho paracleda q-ta lorslq turbs for the chamber of righteousness. Stronger are oogo baltoh. Givi chis your feet than the barren stone, and mightier are lusd orri, od micalp chis your voices than the manifold winds: for you are become bia ozongon: lap noan

a building such as is not, but in the mind
trof cors ta ge oq manin of the All-powerful. Arise, saith the First! Move, Iaidon. Torzu, gohe-l! ZACAR, therefore, unto his servants! Show yourselves in power,

ca, e-noqod ZAMRAN micalzo, and make me a strong see-thing, for I am od ozazm urelp, lap zir

of Him that liveth forever.
Ioiad.

Third Key

Behold, saith your God, I am a circle
Micma, goho Piad, zir comselh on whose hands stand 12 kingdoms; six are the seats

a-zien biab os londoh; norz chis othil of living breath, the rest are as sharp sickles, or gigipah, undl chis ta puim, Q

the horns of death; wherein the creatures of the Earth mospleh teloch; quiin toltorg are and are not except by mine own hand; which also chis i-chis-ge M ozien; ds-t sleep and shall rise. In the first I made you stewards brgda od torzul. I-li eol balzarg and placed you in seats 12 of government, giving od aala thiln os netaab, dluga unto every one of you power successively over 456,

vomsarg lonsa capmiali vors cla,

the true ages of time, to the intent that,
homil cocasb, fafen,

from the highest vessels and the corners of izizop od miinoag de

your governments, you might work my power, pouring down
g-netaab, vaun nanaeel, panpir

the fires of life and increase on the Earth continually.
malpirgi Caosg pild.

Thus you are become the skirts of Justice and Truth.
Noan unalah Balt od Vooan.

In the name of the same, your God, lift up, I say, Dooiap MAD, goholor, gohus, yourselves. Behold, his mercies flourish, and name amiran. Micma, iehusoz cacacom, od dooain is become mighty amongst us; in whom we say, move, noar micaolz aaiom; casarmg gohia, ZACAR, descend and apply yourselves unto us, as unto partakers uniglag od imvamar, pugo plapli of the secret wisdom of your creation.

ananael qaan.

Fourth Key

I have set my feet in the south, and Othil lasdi barbage, od have looked about me, saying, are not dorpha, gohol, gchisge

the Thunders of Increase numbered 33, which reign Avavago comp pd, d-sonf

in the second angle? Under whom I have placed 9639
viu-diu? Casarmi oali mapm whom none hath yet numbered, but one; in whom sobam ag corrpo, crp-l casarmg

the second beginning of things are and wax strong;
croodzi chis od ugeg;

which also successively are the number of time: and ds-t capimali chis capimaon: od their powers are as the first 456. Arise, you Sons lonshin chis ta lo cla. Torgu, Nor of Pleasure, and visit the Earth: for Quasahi, od F caosga: bagle

I am the Lord your God, which is, and liveth.
Zir-ena-iad, ds-i od apila.

In the name of the Creator, move, and show yourselves
Dooaio Qaal, ZACAR, od ZAMRAN

as pleasant deliverers, that you may praise him amongst obelisong, rest-el aaf

the sons of men.
nor-molap.

Fifth Key

The Mighty Sounds have entered into the third Sapah zimii D

angle, and are become as olives in the Olive Mount,
diu, od noas ta qaanis Adroch,

looking with gladness upon the Earth, and dwelling dorphal [ulcinina] Caosg, od faonts

in the brightness of the heavens as continual comforters; [luciftias] peripsol ta blior;

unto whom I fastened pillars of gladness 19, and casarm amipzi naz-arth af, od gave them vessels to water the Earth

dlugar zizop zlida Caosgi with her creatures; and they are the brothers tol-torgi; od z-chis esiasch of the first as of the second, and the beginning L ta viu od iaod

of their own seats, which are garnished thild, ds peral

with continually burning lamps 69636, whose numbers {pild} hubar peoal, soba cormfa are as the first, the ends, and the contents of time.

chis ta la, vls, od q-cocasb.

Therefore come you and obey your creation; visit us
Ca niis od darbs qaas; F

in peace and comfort; conclude us as receivers etharzi od bliora; iaial ednas of your mysteries. For why? Our Lord and Master cicles. Bagle? Geiad is all one.

i-l.

Sixth Key

The spirits of the fourth angle are nine, mighty Gah S diu em, micalzo

in the firmaments of waters; whom the First hath planted pilzin; sobam El harg

as a torment to the wicked and a garland mir babalon od obloc

to the righteous, giving unto them fiery darts to van samvelg, dlugar marprg ar

the Earth, and 7699 continual workmen; whose courses Caosgi, od acam canal; sobol-zar visit with comfort the Earth, and are in government

f-bliard Caosgi, od chis anetab and continuance as the second and the third.

od miam ta viv od D.

Wherefore, harken unto my voice: I have talked of you Darsar, solpeth bien: brita

and I move you in power and presence, whose works od ZACAM g-micalzo sobha-ath shall be a song of honor and the praise of your God trian luiahe od ecrin MAD

in your creation.
qaaon.

Seventh Key

The east is a house of virgins singing praises
Raas i-salman paradiz oecrimi amongst the Flames of the first glory, wherein the Lord

aao lalpirgah quiin Enay hath opened his mouth, and they are become 28

butmon, od i-noas ni

living dwellings in whom the strength of men rejoiceth;
paradial casarmg ugear chirlan;

and they are appareled with ornaments of brightness,
od zonac luciftian,

such as work wonders on all creatures; whose kingdoms cors ta vaul zirn tol-hami; soba londoh and continuance are as the third and fourth,

od miam chis ta D od es,

strong towers and places of comfort, the seats of mercy umadea od pi-bliar othil-rit and continuance. O you Servants of Mercy, move, od miam. C-Noquol Rit, ZACAR, appear, sing praises unto the Creator, and be mighty ZAMRAN, oecrimi Qadah, od omicaolz amongst us; for to this remembrance is given power, aai-om; bagle papnor i-dlugam lonshi,

and our strength waxeth strong in our Comforter.
od umplif ugegi Bigliad.

Eighth Key

The midday, the first, is as the third heaven
Bazme, lo, I ta {D} piripson made of pillars of hyacinth 26, in whom the Elders oln naz-a-vabh ox, casarmg Uran are become strong; which I have prepared chis ugeg; ds abramg for my own righteousness, saith the Lord; whose baltoha, goho Iad; soba

long continuance shall be as bucklers to the stooping
miam trian ta lolcis abai

Dragon, and like unto the harvest of a widow. How many Vovin, od aziagier rior. Irgil are there which remain in the glory of the Earth,

chis da ds paaox busd Caosgo, which are, and shall not see death, until ds chis, od ip-uran teloah, cacarg this house fall and the Dragon sink! Come away, for oi-salman loncho od Vovina carbaf! Niiso, bagle

the Thunders have spoken; come away, for the crowns Avavago gohon; niiso bagle momao of the Temple and the coat Siaion od mabza

of Him that Is, and Was, and Shall Be Crowned, Jadoiasmomar,

are divided. Come, appear to the terror of the Earth, poilp. Niis, ZAMRAN ciaofi Caosgo, and to our comfort, and of such as are prepared.

od bliors, od corsi ta abramig.

Ninth Key

A mighty guard of fire with two-edged swords
Micaoli brinsg prgel napta flaming (which have vials 8 of wrath for two times ialpor (ds brin efafafe P vonpho olani and a half: whose Wings are of wormwood, and od obza: sobca Upaah chis tatan, od of the marrow of salt), have settled their feet tranan balye), alar lusda

in the west, and are measured with their ministers soboln, od chis holq c-noquodi

9996. These gather up the moss of the Earth as cial. Unal aldon mom Caosgo ta the rich man doth his treasure. Cursed are they las ollor gnay limlal. Amma chiis whose iniquities they are! In their eyes are sobca madrid z-chis! ooanoan chis millstones greater than the Earth, and aviny drilpi Caosgin, od

from their mouths run seas of blood. Their heads butmoni parm zumvi cnila. Daziz are covered with diamond, and upon their hands are ethamz a-childao, od mirc ozol chis marble sleeves. Happy is he on whom they frown not.

pidiai collal. Ulcinin a-sobam ucim.

For why? The God of Righteousness rejoiceth in them.
Bagle Iadbaltoh chirlan par.

Come away, and not your vials! For the time Niiso, od ip ofafafe! Bagle a-cocasb is such as requireth comfort.

i-cors-ta unig blior.

Tenth Key

The Thunders of Judgement and Wrath are numbered Coraxo chis comp

and are harbored in the north in the likeness od blans lucal aziazor

of an oak, whose branches are nests 22 of lamentation paeb, soba lilonon chis virq op eophan and weeping, laid up for the Earth, which burn night

od raclir, maasi bagle Caosgi, ds ialpon dosig and day, and vomit out the heads of scorpions and od basgim, od oxex dazis siatris od live sulphur mingled with poison. These be the Thunders salbrox cynxir faboan. Unal-chis Const that 5678 times in the 24th part of a moment roar ds daox cocasb ol oanio yor with a hundred mighty earthquakes and a thousand times eors vohim gizyax od matb cocasb

as many surges, which rest not, neither know any plosi molvi, ds page-ip, larag om droln quiet time. Here one rock bringeth forth 1000 matorb cocasb. Emna L patralx yolci matb even as the heart of man doth his thoughts. Woe, woe, nomig monons olora gnay angelard. Ohio, ohio, woe, woe, woe, woe, yea, woe be to the Earth, for ohio, ohio, ohio, ohio, noib, ohio Caosgon, bagle her iniquity is, was, and shall be, great. Come away, madrid I, zirop, chiso, drilpa. Niiso, but not your noises!

crip ip nidali!

Eleventh Key

The mighty Seat groaned, and there were 5
Oxiayal holdo, od zirom O

Thunders which flew into the east; and the Eagle Coraxo ds zildar raasy; od Vabzir spake, and cried with a loud voice, Come away! And camliax od bahal, Niiso! [Od they gathered themselves together and became the house aldon od noas] salman of death, of whom it is measured, and it is as teloch, casarman holq, od t-i ta they are whose number is 31. Come away, for z-chis soba cormf I ga. Niisa, bagle

I have prepared for you! Move, therefore, and abramg noncp! ZACARe, ca, od show yourselves. Open the mysteries of your creation.

ZAMRAN. Odo cicle qaa.

Be friendly unto me, for I am the servant
Zorge, lap zirdo noco

of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.
MAD, hoath Iaida.

Twelfth Key

O you that reign in the south, and are 28,
Nonci d-sonf babage, od chis ob,

the Lanterns of Sorrow: bind up your girdles, and Hubaio Tibibp: allar atraah, od visit us. Bring down your train 3663, that the Lord

ef. Drix fafen mian, ar Enay may be magnified, whose name amongst you is Wrath.

ovof, soba dooain aai I VONPH.

Move, I say, and show yourselves; open the mysteries ZACAR, golus, od ZAMRAN; odo cicle

of your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am
qaa; zorge, lap zirdo

the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper
noco MAD, hoath

of the Highest.
Iaida.

Thirteenth Key

O you Swords of the south,[7] which have 42 eyes
Napeai babagen, ds-brin vx ooaona to stir up wrath of sin, making men drunken which tring vonph doalim, eolis ollog orsba ds are empty: behold the promise of God and his power, chis affa: micma isro MAD od lonshi-tox, which is called amongst you a bitter sting. Move, and ds i-umd aai GROSB. ZACAR, od

show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation;
ZAMRAN; odo cicle qaa;

be friendly unto me, for I am the servant
zorge, lap zirdo noco

of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.
MAD, hoath Iaida.

Fourteenth Key

O you Sons of Fury, the Daughters of the Just, Noromi Bagie, Pasbs Oiad,

which sit upon 24 seats vexing all creatures
ds trint mirc ol thil dods tol-ham of the Earth with age; which have under you 1636:

Caosgo homin; ds brin oroch quar:

behold the voice of God, promise of Him micma bial Oiad, aisro Tox which is called amongst you Fury (or Extreme Justice).

ds-i-um aai (Bagie (q) Baltim).

Move and show yourselves; open the mysteries
ZACAR od ZAMRAN; odo cicle

of your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am
qaa; zorge, lap zirdo

the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper
noco MAD, hoath

of the Highest.
Iaida.

Fifteenth Key

O thou the Governor of the first Flame, Ils Tabaan L-ialprt,

under whose Wings are 6739, which weave the Earth
casarman Upaahi chis darg, ds oado Caosgi with dryness, which knowest of the great name orscor, ds omax monasci

Righteousness and the seal of honor: move and Baeovib od emetgis iaiadix: ZACAR od

show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation;
ZAMRAN; odo cicle qaa;

be friendly unto me, for I am the servant
zorge, lap zirdo noco

of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.
MAD, hoath Iaida.

Sixteenth Key

O thou second Flame, the House of Justice, which Ils Viu-ialprt, Salman Balt, ds

hast thy beginning in glory, and shalt comfort brin acroodzi busd, od bliorax

the just; which walkest on the Earth with Feet 8763
balit; ds-insi Caosg Lusdan emod that understand and separate creatures: great art ds-om od tliob hami: drilpa geh thou in the God-of-Stretch-Forth-and-Conquer. Move and ils Madzilodarp. ZACAR od

show yourselves; open the mysteries of your creation;
ZAMRAN; odo cicle qaa;

be friendly unto me, for I am the servant
zorge, lap zirdo noco

of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.
MAD, hoath Iaida.

Seventeenth Key

O thou third Flame, whose Wings are thorns Ils D-ialprt, soba Upaah chis nanba to stir up vexation, and hast 7336 Lamps Living going zixlay dodsih, od brint faxs Hubaro tustax before thee; whose God is Wrath-in-Anger: gird up ylsi; soba Iad I Vonpo-unph: aldon thy loins and harken! Move and show yourselves; open daxil od toatar! ZACAR od ZAMRAN; odo the mysteries of your creation; be friendly unto me, for cicle qaa; zorge, lap

I am the servant of the same your God,
zirdo noco MAD,

the true worshipper of the Highest.
hoath Iaida.

Eighteenth Key

O thou mighty light and Burning Flame of comfort, Ils micaolz olprit od Ialprg bliors, which openest the glory of God to the center

ds odo busdir Oiad ovoars of the Earth, in whom the secrets of Truth 6332 have Caosgo, casarmg laiad [Vaoan] eran brints their abiding, which is called in thy kingdom Joy, and cafafam, ds i-umd a-q-loadohi Moz, od not to be measured: be thou a window of comfort unto me.

maoaffs: bolp como-bliort pambt.

Move and show yourselves; open the mysteries
ZACAR od ZAMRAN; odo cicle

of your creation; be friendly unto me, for I am
qaa; zorge, lap zirdo

the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper
noco MAD, hoath

of the Highest.
Iaida.

Key of the Thirty Aethers

O you Heavens which dwell in (the first Air) are Madriax ds-praf (LIL) chis

mighty in the parts of the Earth, and execute micaolz saanir Caosgo, od fisis

the judgement of the Highest. To you it is said: behold
balzizras Iaida. Nonca gohulim: micma

the face of your God, the beginning of comfort; whose adoian MAD, iaod bliorb; soba eyes are the brightness of the heavens; which ooaona chis luciftias peripsol; ds provided you for the government of the Earth, and her abraassa noncf netaaib Caosgo, od tilb unspeakable variety, furnishing you with a power adphaht damploz, tooat noncf g-micalz of understanding to dispose all things according oma Irasd tofglo marb to the providence of Him-That-Sitteth-On-the-Holy-Throne, yarry IDOIGO,

and rose up in the beginning, saying: the Earth,
od torzulp iaodaf, gohul: Caosga,

let her be governed by her parts, and let there be tabaord saanir, od christeos division in her, that the glory of her may be always yrpoil tiobl, busdir tilb noaln paid drunken and vexed in itself; her course, orsba od dodrmni zylna; elzaptilb,

let it run with the heavens, and as a handmaid
parm-gi peripsax, od ta qurlst

let her serve them; one season, let it confound another, booapis; l-nibm, oucho symp,

and let there be no creature upon or within her od christeos ag-toltorm mirc Q tiobl

the same; all her members, let them differ lel; ton paombd, dilzmo

in their qualities, and let there be no one creature
O aspian, od christeos ag L tortorm equal with another;

parach a-symp;

the reasonable creatures of Earth (or men), let them vex cordziz dodpal

and weed out one another; and the dwelling places, od fifalz l-smnad; od fargt, let them forget their names; the work of man and bams omaoas; conisbra od

his pomp, let them be defaced; her buildings, avavox, tonug; orsca-tbl,

let them become caves for the beasts of the field;
naosmi tabges levithmong;

confound her understanding with darkness. For why?
unchi omp-tilb ors. Bagle?

It repenteth me I made man. One while let her be known, Moooah ol-cordziz. L capimao ixomaxip, and another while a stranger: because she is the bed

od ca-cocasb gosaa: baglen pi-i tianta of an harlot, and the dwelling place

a-babalond, od faorgt of Him-that-is-Fallen. O you Heavens, arise!

Telocvovim. Madriiax, torzu!

The lower Heavens underneath you, let them serve you.
Oadriax orocha aboapri.

Govern those that govern; cast down such as fall;
Tabaori priaz ar-tabas; adrpan cors-ta dobix;

bring forth with those that increase, and destroy yolcam priazi ar-coazior, od quasb

the rotten. No place let it remain in one number; add qting. Ripir paaoxt saga-cor; unl and diminish until the stars be numbered. Arise, od prdzar cacrg aoiveae cormpt. TORZU, move, and appear before the Covenant of His mouth, ZACAR, od ZAMRAN aspt Sibsi butmona, which He hath sworn unto us in His justice; open ds surzas Tia baltan; odo

the mysteries of your creation, and make us partakers
cicle qaa, od ozazma plapli

of undefiled knowledge.
iadnamad.

Chapter Fifteen

The Spirits of the Thirty Aethers

The Princes of the Airs

The names of the ninety-one Princes, who are the tutelary daemons or genii of the regions of the world, were delivered to Dee through Kelley by the angels Gabriel and Nalvage on May 21 and 22, 1584, at Cracow. Gabriel presided over the process, and Nalvage did the actual work. It was this hierarchy of geographical spirits that held the greatest promise of practical utility for Dee, who hoped to use them to achieve political advantages for his sovereign, Elizabeth I. This desire was not to be realized, however, because Dee was never granted permission to invoke them.

Although the names and sigils of these spirits are clearly set forth, along with the angels by which they are ruled and their esoteric associations, they constitute one of the most neglected aspects of Enochian magic. They were ignored by the Golden Dawn and by Aleister Crowley. This neglect continues through to the present day, perhaps because few Enochian magicians know what to do with them.

The thirty Aethers, or Airs, are described by the angels as concentric spheres surrounding the Earth. Each is divided into three parts, except the area closest to the Earth, which is divided into four. These parts are inhabited by ninety-one spirits whom Nalvage refers to as "Princes and spiritual Governours." These Princes are all spirits of elemental Air, but each rules a particular region on the surface of the Earth.

Sigils of the Ninety-One Princes on the Original Table

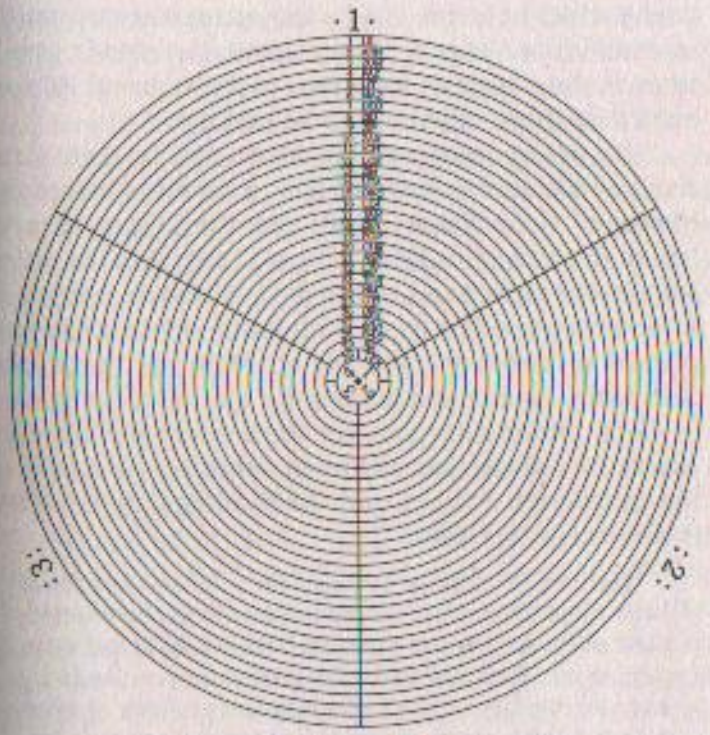
Their habitations or Aethers lie between the surface of the Earth and the spiritual fires of the firmament. However, it is a trifle simplistic to conceive of them as occupying physical space. Dimensions or frequencies of vibration are more useful models for these Aethers.



The Thirty Aethers

They lie mingled, yet one above the other, just as the colors of the rainbow are all contained in normal sunlight but may be separated and distinguished by their particular wavelengths.

The Hierarchy of the Aethers

The Princes of the regions appear to be receptive rather than active. They are the spiritual identities that reside in, animate, and give particular qualities to their regions. They are ruled by the twelve angels of the twelve tribes of Israel, and by the numerous ministering spirits of those angels, who convey the specific intentions of the angels of the tribes to the regional Princes and cause those intentions to be realized.

The twelve angels of the tribes are, in their turn, ruled by the seven angels of light who stand before the throne of God. These angels are the lamps burning before the throne in Revelation 4:5, and also the seven stars in the right hand of heavenly Christ in Revelation 1:16. Their manifest expression is the seven traditional planets of astrology—the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

This information was set forth concisely but very clearly by Nalvage just before he revealed the names of the ninety-one Princes and their ruling angels of the twelve tribes to Kelley:

> There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and spiritual Governours, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and again dispose the Kings and all the Governments upon the Earth, and vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom, the providence of the eternal Judgement, is already opened. These are generally governed by the twelve Angels of the 12 Tribes: which are also governed by the 7 which stand before the presence of God. Let him that can see look up: and let him that can here, attend; for this is wisdom. They are all spirits of the Air: not rejected, but dignified; and they dwell and have their habitation in the air diversly, and in sundry places: for their mansions are not alike, neither are their powers equal. Understand therefore, that from the fire to the earth, there are 30 places or abidings: one above and beneath another: wherein these aforesaid Creatures have their aboad, for a time.[1]

The number ninety-one seems oddly unbalanced, but it is based on the formula 7 x 12 + 7 = 91. Seven is the number of the heptarchical Kings and their Princes, while twelve is the number of the angels of the tribes of Israel. In astrology, seven is the number of the planets and twelve is the number of the signs and their houses. It is emphasized by Nalvage, who even goes so far as to make a pun at the end of his speech, that the angels of the Aethers act within the constraints of time. The Princes "vary the Natures of things with the variation of every moment." It is these angels that are responsible for the transformations of the Earth from moment to moment, and for the constantly changing play of thoughts within the human mind.

Use of the Aethers

The geographical genii of each Aether are to be invoked by the Call of the Thirty Aethers, with the name of their particular Aether inserted into the parentheses near the beginning of the Call. This was the practice followed by Aleister Crowley during his 1909 trek through Algeria (though Crowley merely invoked the Airs, not the Princes). First, however, it is probably necessary to perform a general ritual working that involves the vibration of the eighteen distinct Keys, one per night, in reverse order: the Eighteenth Key on the first night, the Seventeenth Key on the second, and so on.

As was pointed out in the previous chapter, the Keys are associated with the directions of the Earth in four sets of four, with each set working its way in one complete circle around the Earth. The Eighteenth Key should be vibrated to the north, the Seventeenth to the west, the Sixteenth to the south, the Fifteenth to the east, and so on. This pattern should continue to the Second Key, which relates to the beam of the Black

Cross on the Great Table of the Watchtowers (the northeast by southwest axis), and the First Key, which relates to the pillar of the Black Cross (the southeast by northwest axis). The unexpressed primordial Key of the Holy Ghost or Great Mother, which is not an explicit part of the working, relates to the intersection of the Black Cross, the fountain of Spirit beneath the throne of New Jerusalem.

After this initial working of the Keys is successfully completed, the Aethers may be tuned in or "keyed" by vibrating the Call of the Thirty Aethers. Then the angels of the tribes may be invoked and commanded by the names of God that lie on the beams of the Great Crosses of the four Watchtowers. Each angel is ruled by the name of God associated with its particular point of the compass.

For example, the second Prince of the third Air, ZOM, is Virooli, the tutelary genius of Thracia (Thrace). He is ruled by the angel Alpudus, who is the angel of the tribe of Issachar. This angel resides in and is invoked from the west-northwest. Alpudus has 3,660 good ministering spirits who serve him. He is invoked and ruled by PDOCE, which is the name of God on the banner of west-northwest and one of the names on the line of Spirit in the Watchtower of the North (on the Original Great Table).

The ritual application of the angel of a tribe to the genius of a region of the Earth is a kind of spiritual copulation that is performed to engender the desired purpose of the Enochian magician. The genius of the place, who is manifestly embodied by his sigil, acts as the receptive medium. The angel of the tribe, acting through his ministers, is the catalyst by which that medium is shaped and quickened.

It should be understood that the tutelary angel of a particular place represents not merely the physical place itself, but also the living spirit of that place. Every region of the Earth has its own distinct character and its own unique power. Through this branch of Enochian magic the spiritual powers of the nations and regions can be harnessed and directed for ritual ends. For example, the spirit of England, symbolized by the goddess Britannia and the hero John Bull, is completely different in its virtues from the spirit of the United States, symbolized by the goddess America and the hero Uncle Sam.

It may be that the full Apocalypse working (if such a thing even exists) will be conducted in this way:

- Vibrating the nineteenth Key for each of the thirty Aethers on thirty successive nights from the First Air to the Thirtieth Air
- Vibrating each of the first eighteen Keys in reverse order, also on successive nights
- Vibrating the primordial, unwritten Key that relates to the center of being
- A final jubilee day of attainment

In this way the Apocalypse working would span fifty days, which is the same period of time the angels say that Enoch toiled. The movement would be from the outer reaches to the center of the Earth. All this is speculation, of course.

The Use of the Table of Sigils

The accompanying table shows the thirty Aethers, the ancient regions of the Earth they command, the Princes or genii of those regions, the tribes of the Hebrews and the angels of the tribes who rule the genii, the number

	Air	Region	Genius	Tribe	Angel	Min.	Dir.	God N
1	1	Egypt	Occodon	Naphtali	Zarzig	7209	E-NE	ORO
2	LIL	Syria	Pascomb	Zebulun	Zinggen	2360	W-SW	OIP
3		Mesopotamia	Valgars	Issachar	Alpudus	5362	W-NW	PDOCE
4	2	Cappadocia	Doagnis	Manasseh	Zamzah	3636	N	ARSL
5	ARN	Etruria	Pacasna	Reuben	Ziracah	2362	S	DIAL
6		Asia Minor	Dadima	Reuben	Ziracah	8962	S	DIAL
7	3	Hyrcania	Samapha	Naphtali	Zarzig	4400	E-NE	ORO
8	ZOM	Thracia	Virooli	Issachar	Alpudus	3660	W-NW	PDOCE
9		Gasmeen	Andispi	Gad	Lavavot	9236	S-SE	MOR
10	4	Thebaidi	Thotamp	Gad	Lavavot	2360	S-SE	MOR
11	PAZ	Parsadai	Axziarg	Gad	Lavavot	3000	S-SE	MOR
12		India	Pothnir	Ephraim	Arfaolg	6300	N-NW	MPH
13	5	Bactriane	Lazdixi	Dan	Oipaged	8630	E	IBAH
14	LIT	Cilicia	Nocamal	Issachar	Alpudus	2306	W-NW	PDOCE
15		Oxiana	Tiarpax	Zebulun	Zinggen	5802	W-SW	OIP
16	6	Numidia	Sactomp	Asher	Gebabel	3620	E-SE	AOZPI
17	MAZ	Cyprus	Vavaamp	Ephraim	Arfaolg	8200	N-NW	MPH
18		Parthia	Zirzird	Asher	Gebabel	7220	E-SE	AOZPI
19	7	Getulia	Opmacas	Manasseh	Zamzah	6363	N	ARSL
20	DEO	Arabia	Genadol	Judah	Hononol	7706	W	TEAA
21		Phrygia	Aspiapa	Zebulun	Zinggen	6320	W-SW	OIP
22	8	Mantiana	Zamfres	Asher	Gebabel	4363	E-SE	AOZPI
23	ZID	Scotia	Tadnaon	Dan	Oipaged	7236	E	IBAH
24		Gallia	Pilzac	Naphtali	Zarzig	2302	E-NE	ORO
25	9	Assyria	Oddorg	Judah	Hononol	9996	W	TEAA
26	ZIP	Sogdiana	Cralpa	Gad	Lavavot	3620	S-SE	MOR
27		Lydia	Doanzin	Naphtali	Zarzig	4230	E-NE	GAIOL
28	10	Caspis	Lexarph	Zebulun	Zinggen	8880	W-SW	OIP
29	ZAX	Germania	Comanan	Issachar	Alpudus	1230	W-NW	PDOCE
30		Thracia	Tahiom	Naphtali	Zarzig	1617	E-NE	ORO
31	11	Bithynia	Molpand	Gad	Lavavot	3472	S-SE	MOR
32	ICH	Gracia	Uemada	Simeon	Zurchel	7236	S-SW	HCTGA
33		Lacia	Pamodel	Judah	Hononol	5234	W	TEAA
34	12	Onigap	Tapamal	Simeon	Zurchel	2658	S-SW	HCTGA
35	LOE	India Major	Gedoons	Benjamin	Cadasmp	7772	N-NE	GAIOL
36		Orcheni	Ambriol	Reuben	Ziracah	3391	S	DIAL
37	13	Achaia	Gecasod	Gad	Lavavot	8811	S-SE	MOR
38	ZIM	Armenia	Laparin	Dan	Oipaged	3360	E	IBAH
39		Nemrodiana	Docepax	Issachar	Alpudus	4213	W-NW	PDOCE
40	14	Paphlagonia	Tedoond	Asher	Gebabel	2673	E-SE	AOZPI
41	UTA	Phasiana	Vivipos	Issachar	Alpudus	9236	W-NW	PDOCE
42		Chaldei	Doanamb	Ephraim	Arfaolg	8230	N-NW	MPH
43	15	Bengi	Tahamdo	Naphtali	Zarzig	1367	E-NE	ORO
44	OXO	Macedonia	Noclabi	Gad	Lavavot	1367	S-SE	MOR
45		Germania	Tasmon	Ephraim	Arfaolg	1886	N-NW	MPH

The Table of Sigils: 1–45

	Air	Region	Genius	Tribe	Angel	Min.	Dir.	God N
46	16	Sauromatica	Cocarpt	Reuben	Ziracah	9920	S	DIAL
47	LEA	Ethiopia	Lasacon	Judah	Hononol	9230	W	TEAA
48		Flacim	Sochial	Ephraim	Arfaolg	9040	N-NW	MPH
49	17	Colchica	Sigmoel	Reuben	Ziracah	7623	S	DIAL
50	TAN	Cirenaica	Avdropi	Dan	Oipaged	7132	E	IBAH
51		Nasamona	Tocarsi	Naphtali	Zarzig	2634	E-NE	ORO
52	18	Carthago	Nabaoni	Asher	Gebabel	2346	E-SE	AOZPI
53	ZEN	Caulant	Zafassi	Issachar	Alpudus	7689	W-NW	PDOCE
54		Adumea	Talpamb	Ephraim	Arfaolg	9276	N-NW	MPH
55	19	Parstavia	Tornoxi	Ephraim	Arfaolg	6236	N-NW	MPH
56	POP	Celtica	Abriond	Benjamin	Cadasmp	6732	N-NE	GAIOL
57		Vinsan	Omagrap	Zebulun	Zinggen	2388	W-SW	OIP
58	20	Tolpam	Zildron	Asher	Gebabel	3626	E-SE	AOZPI
59	CHR	Carcedona	Paridba	Judah	Hononol	7629	W	TEAA
60		Italia	Tococan	Issachar	Alpudus	3634	W-NW	PDOCE
61	21	Brytania	Chirapa	Ephraim	Arfaolg	5536	N-NW	MPH
62	ASP	Phenices	Toatosm	Benjamin	Cadasmp	5635	N-NE	GAIOL
63		Comagineu	Vlaptig	Simeon	Zurchel	5658	S-SW	HCTGA
64	22	Apulia	Oridaia	Ephraim	Arfaolg	2232	N-NW	MPH
65	LEN	Marmarica	Paraoan	Dan	Oipaged	2326	E	IBAH
66		Comava Syria	Calzirg	Ephraim	Arfaolg	2367	N-NW	MPH
67	23	Gebal	Bonoomb	Manasseh	Zamzah	7320	N	ARSL
68	TOR	Elam	Onorimp	Gad	Lavavot	7262	S-SE	MOR
69		Adunia	Zaxamn	Zebulun	Zinggen	7533	W-SW	OIP
70	24	Media	Orcanc	Manasseh	Zamzah	8200	N	ARSL
71	NIA	Ariana	Chialps	Gad	Lavavot	8960	S-SE	MOR
72		Chaldea	Soagrel	Zebulun	Zinggen	8236	W-SW	OIP
73	25	Serica Populi	Mirzind	Manasseh	Zamzah	5632	N	ARSL
74	UTI	Persia	Obvaocs	Reuben	Ziracah	6333	S	DIAL
75		Gongatha	Ranglam	Ephraim	Arfaolg	6236	N-NW	MPH
76	26	Gursin	Pophand	Ephraim	Arfaolg	9232	N-NW	MPH
77	DES	Hispania	Nigrana	Benjamin	Cadasmp	3620	N-NE	GAIOL
78		Pamphilia	Ilaxchim	Ephraim	Arfaolg	5637	N-NW	MPH
79	27	Dacidi	Saziami	Reubin	Ziracah	7230	S	DIAL
80	ZAA	Babylon	Mathula	Manasseh	Zamzah	7560	N	ARSL
81		Median	Orpanib	Asher	Gebabel	7263	E-SE	AOZPI
82	28	Adumian	Tahnisp	Gad	Lavavot	2630	S-SE	MOR
83	BAG	Felix Arabia	Pocisal	Naphtali	Zarzig	7236	E-NE	ORO
84		Metagenitidim	Oxlopar	Simeon	Zurchel	8200	S-SW	HCTGA
85	29	Assyria	Vastim	Judah	Hononol	9632	W	TEAA
86	RII	Africa	Odraxi	Manasseh	Zamzah	8236	N	ARSL
87		Bactriani	Gomzism	Ephraim	Arfaolg	7635	N-NW	MPH
88		Asnan	Tasagla	Ephraim	Arfaolg	4632	N-NW	MPH
89	30	Phrygia	Gemninb	Manasseh	Zamzah	9836	N	ARSL
90	TEX	Creta	Advcpt	Judah	Hononol	7632	W	TEAA
91		Mauritania	Dexmael	Simeon	Zurchel	5632	S-SW	HCTGA

The Table of Sigils: 46–91

of good ministers under the angels of the tribes, the direction of the compass where each tribal angel resides, and the Enochian banner name of God associated with that direction. The numbers of the Princes may be used to locate their sigils on the grid of the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers. To convert the sigil display on the Original Great Table into a sigil display on my own Restored Great Table, simply invert the quarters of the west and north (transpose the lower right with the lower left).

Bear in in mind that there are minor variations in the lettering between the Original Great Table and the Revised Great Table of Raphael. My Restored Great Table uses the lettering of the Table of Raphael. The sigils of the Princes of the regions are the same shape on all three versions of the Great Table, but some of the names of the Princes are spelled with slight differences depending on whether the Original or the Revised (and Restored) Tables are used.

To locate a particular sigil on the Original Great Table, take note of the number of the Prince, then find this number on the sigil display near the start of this chapter. The sigil closest to the number is the sigil of the Prince. Compare the sigil display with the lettered version of the Original Great Table in Chapter Twelve. You will be able to trace out the individual letters in the name on the Original Table by following the arrow of the sigil. Each sigil begins with a cross and ends with an arrowhead.

If you wish to locate the name of a Prince on my Restored Great Table, first determine which Watchtower the sigil occupies by comparing the quarters of my Restored Table in Chapter Ten with the quarters of the Original Table. Position that sigil on the Restored Table, and trace out the arrow of its name as before. You will see that some names have slight variations in spelling.

It is evident that the names of the angels of the twelve tribes of Israel are each intended to contain seven letters. However, in Dee's manuscript Lavavoth (the angel of the tribe of Gad) is written with eight letters. This occurs because the final letter in the name is the Hebrew letter Tau, which is written in English Th. Tau is on occasion alternatively transliterated by T, so I have used T to stand for this Hebrew letter in order to give the name of the angel seven letters. The name should be pronounced "Lavavoth."

There are ninety-one Princes of the regions of the Earth, but ninety-two sigils on the Great Table. One of the sigils is not named by the angels. It occurs at the bottom of the MPH, ARSL, GAIOL Watchtower, which on the Original Great Table is the Watchtower of the West (lower right quarter). Laxdizi, the name of this extra spirit, can easily be extracted from its sigil.

This supernummary sigil has caused some confusion. In the magical system of the Aurum Solis, a British occult society with a tradition similar to that of the Golden Dawn, this sigil is numbered 65.[2] But the sixty-fifth Prince is named Paraoan (Paoaoan on the Restored Table), and the letters of his name are not to be found in this sigil. This error appears to have arisen from a misunderstanding of the nature of Paraoan's sigil, which is not one unbroken line on the Great Table, but is composed of three two-letter segments from three of the Watchtowers, and a single letter from the fourth: PA;RA;OA;N (all the letters are capitals). If you examine the sigil grid of the Original Great Table, you will find these short segments and single cell marked with the number 65.

This sigil puzzled Dee, who inquired about it to Ave.

Dee: You bad me chuse out of the Tables the Characters of fewest Letters, and I found them to be OA RA JA and L, you said they are eight, you said there are eight in four: I know not what this meaneth.

Ave: You must make up the name Paraoan.

Dee: What shall become of the L aversed?

Ave: It may be N, or L.

Dee: What must I now do with that name?

Ave: In Exarph there wanteth an L which L is of more force then the N and therefore it is set in the Tables. As far as that N stretcheth in the Character, so far shall that Countrey be consumed with fire, and swallowed in Hell, as Sodom was for wickednesse.

Dee's marginal note: So is not one letter superfluous, or wanting in the Tables.[3]

Five days later, Dee again made inquiry concerning this curious name, but received little satisfaction:

Dee: I beseech you say somewhat of the N in Paraoan, of which you said, so far as that stretched, should sink to hell.

Ave: Every letter in Paraoan, is a living fire: but all of one quality and of one Creation: but unto N is delivered a viol of Destruction, according to that part that he is of Paraoan the Governour.

Dee: It may please you to name that Place, City, or Country, under that N.

Ave: Ask Nalvage, and he will tell you.[4]

Dee did not have the letters of what he calls the "Characters of fewest Letters" correctly gathered, but seems to have understood the explanation of the angel. The three sigil segments of two letters make up the first six letters in the name Paraoan on the Original Table. Ave tells Dee that the final letter in the name may be either the single inverted N or the single inverted L on the Watchtower MPH, ARSL, GAIOL in the western quarter of the Original Great Table. However, the L has greater occult potency, and therefore should be attached at the front of the sigil of the twenty-eighth Prince, whose name is L;exarph. The final six letters of this sigil are to be found at the top of the pillar of the Black Cross (and also at the bottom, since the same letters are inverted there).

The Black Cross, as the name implies, was drawn with solid black ink by Dee in his diagram of the ninety-one sigils of the Princes on the Great Table.[5] Consequently, Dee could not illustrate the three sigils that are located upon the upper half of the pillar and the right side of the beam of the Black Cross, as I have done in the illustration at the head of this chapter. The sigil of the twenty-eighth Prince, L;exarph, is located on the top of the pillar. The sigil of the twenty-ninth Prince, Comanan, wraps around the corner of the southern quarter of the Table and passes through the center of the Black Cross. The sigil of the thirtieth Prince, Tabitom, lies on the right arm of the beam of the Black Cross. Since the letters that make up these names also occur in reversed order on the lower half of the pillar and left arm of the beam, these names may be found wrapping around the northern quarter of the Table.

Because Dee did not represent these three sigils on the Black Cross or number the sigils in his diagram, it was an easy matter to misunderstand the use of the three two-letter segments and two single letter cells that occur on the Great Table. Many of Dee's sigils contain minor mistakes in form. I have corrected these errors in the sigil display at the head of this chapter. Unfortunately, I can offer no insight into the use of the ninety-second sigil of the spirit whose name is Laxdizi. Dee accurately drew the sigil of this spirit on his grid, but did not include its name in his list of Princes of the Aethers.

The Regions of the Earth

After conveying the names of the Princes of the Aethers, Nalvage indicated places on the surface of the Earth to which they correspond. He began by simply pointing to the region ruled by each spirit on a globe of the Earth in the depths of the showstone. Dee protested that this way was too confusing, so the angel adopted a different approach:

Kelley: There appeareth a great thing like a Globe, turning upon two axell-trees.

Nalvage: Turn to the first Air.

Dee: I have done.

Nalvage: The Earth in the first ayre, is this.

Kelley: Pointing on that Globe to it.

Dee: We beseech you to bound or determine the Countries or Portions of the Earth, by their uttermost Longitudes and Latitudes, or by some other certain manner.

Nalvage: Our manner is, not as it is of worldlings: We determine not places after the forms of legs, or as leaves are: neither we can imagin any thing after the fashion of an horn: as those that are Cosmographers do.

Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolomie, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But unto you, the very true names of the World in her Creation are delivered.[6]

Nalvage went on to name the geographical name of the region under each of the Princes of the Aethers. Dee had considerable difficulty understanding the location of some of these places, but was occasionally assisted by Kelley's vision of the places or their inhabitants.

Nalvage: The third [of the seventh Aether], Phalagon.

Dee: I never heard of it.

Kelley: It is toward the North, where the veines of Gold;

and such people appear as before were noted. On this side them a great way appear men with swinish snouts, their visage is so strouted out; but to be perceived to be of humane visage. The women have about their privities very long hair down to their knees. The men have things on their shoulders of beasts skins, so instead of a Jerkin or a Mandillion.[7]

In the course of naming the regions of the Earth, Nalvage also showed Kelley visions of Noah's ark in Armenia and the Garden of Eden. Paradise is apparently overseen by the second Prince of the eighteenth Aether.

Nalvage: The second [of the eighteenth Air]:

Kelley: Now appear many Crocodiles, long necked, scaled on the body, with long tailes.

Nalvage: Coxlant.

Kelley: A great place appeareth, covered about with fire. Many great serpents appeare of 200 foot. It appeareth very Eastward. No people appear here.

There cometh from Heaven like a Mist, and covereth a great place about 300 mile long, like a Park, enclosed with fire. It is on a high ground. There come four Rivers out of it, one East, another West, another North, and another South. The pales, or enclosure of it seem to be Arches, beset most richly with precious stones. In the Gate of it stand three men like us, one is in a long Gown with many pleats, the other like in a Cassek. The third in the rough skin of a beast. In the name of Jesus: Is this the Paradise that Adam was banished out of?

Nalvage: The very same; from hence he was turned out into the earth. This is the true Vale of Josaphat.

Dee: Will you give me leave?

Nalvage: Say on.

Dee: It should seem this must be on the earth, not in the aire.

Nalvage: It is upon the earth.

Dee: You said that from hence he was turned out into the earth.

Nalvage: The curse of God in Adam caused the earth, whereinto he was cast to be accursed. For, if Adam had after his fall tarried in Paradise, his wickednesse would have altred the innocency of the place. Therefore is Paradise distinguished from the earth, in respect of her purity: because the earth is defiled, and corrupted with man. The earth is said to be sinfull in respect of the sin of man.

Dee: Till 45 degrees, both Northerly and Southerly, all is known in the most part of the world: But of any such place there is no knowledge nor likelyhood by any History of these days, or of old time.

Nalvage: Therefore this is cunning, and the wisdom of God. There dwelleth flesh in it that shall never die, which were taken up for a testimony of Truth."

Dee was not a man to be easily deceived concerning geography, since it was one of his primary subjects of study. While in England, he had frequently been consulted by the leading explorers and navigators of the day concerning the fabled Northwest and Northeast Passages as well as the geography of Asia and the New World. English mariners followed his charts when they went sailing into unknown waters. His skepticism concerning a physical Eden is obvious, but he did not argue the point further with Nalvage.

Ptolemy and Agrippa

Dee was perfectly aware that the names of the places of the Earth were those recorded in the Tetrabiblos of the Greek astronomer and astrologer Ptolemy. Nalvage himself had stated as much before beginning to name the places. According to Nalvage, the common names for the regions had been revealed to Ptolemy by the "Angel of the Lord," but not the names of the places near the north pole. However, Nalvage promised to Dee and Kelley something greater, "the very true names of the World in her Creation."

Kelley did not understand Nalvage's reference to Ptolemy, but he did vaguely recognize the names. After the angel completed the list and allowed the men to rest overnight, Kelley followed his thread of memory and was able to look up the names in his private library of magical books. He was enraged by what he regarded as a rank deception on the part of the angels, and at first refused to resume the scrying session.

Dee: After half an hour and lesse, he came speedily out of his Study, and brought in his hand one Volume of Cornelius Agrippa his works, and in one Chapter of that Book he read the names of Countries and Provinces collected out of Ptolomeus (as the Author there noteth) Whereupon he inferred, that our spiritual Instructors were Coseners to give us a description of the World, taken out of other Books: and therefore he would have no more to do with them. I replied, and said, I am very glad that you have a Book of your own, wherein these Geographical names are expressed, such as (for the most part) our Instructors had delivered unto us: and that, according to the Tenor and form of my request to him, so to have them expressed: for our most perfect information, by those known names; to understand those 91 unknown and unheard of names, of seven letters every one: whereby they (our Instructors I mean) are very greatly to be thanked, and to be deemed (in all reasonable mens judgements) most friendly, and far from cosenage, or abusing us: And farther I said, that I my self, had here set down on a paper all the 91 names together orderly, as we received them, and that I had here brought the description (Gerardus [Mercator's] Universal Chart of the World) Geographical of the whole earthly Globe: and also Pomponius Mela set forth in English with the Chartes thereunto belonging, fairly described by hand: To the intent that he might see the verity of their words > yesterday delivered unto us: for the performance of my request made to them...'

Kelley was not mollified. He refused to have anything more to do with the angels for five days.

The reference Kelley made to Agrippa concerns Book One, Chapter Thirty-One of The Three Books of Occult Philosophy. Agrippa here summarizes part of the third chapter of the second book of Ptolemy's Tetrabiblos, where the regions of the world are categorized under the ruling influence of the stars. Agrippa introduces his brief chapter by saying, "Moreover the whole orb of the Earth is distributed by kingdoms and provinces to the planets, and signs." He then groups the nations of the classical world under each planet and the signs of the zodiac it rules. This list corresponds in many respects with the list of places given by Nalvage.

In closing, Agrippa writes:

> These we have in this manner gathered from Ptolemy's opinion, to which according to the writings of other astrologers many more may be added. But he which knows how to compare these divisions of provinces according to the divisions of the stars, with the ministry of the ruling intelligences, and blessings of the tribes of Israel, the lots of the apostles, and typical seals of the sacred Scripture, shall be able to obtain great and prophetical oracles concerning every religion, of things to come."

The list of places given by Nalvage is more extensive than the lists in Agrippa and Ptolemy. It is difficult to determine which text served Nalvage as a source, if either. These names were common in ancient geographies.

Chapter Sixteen

The Enochian Invocations of John Dee

"Make You but Invocations to Sow the Seed"

Dee was anxious to learn the details of the initial eighteen-day ritual working by which he would gain access to the ninety-one Princes of the Thirty Aethers, but he was never actually given this information. Ave did tell him that before he could undertake this extended initial working it would be necessary for him to make a Book of Spirits containing the names of the angels and spirits on the Great Table of the Watchtowers.

> Ave: You have the corn, and you have the ground: Make you but invocations to sow the seed, and the fruit shall be plentiful.
>
> Dee: As concerning our usage in the 4 dayes [and] in the 14 dayes, we would gladly have some information.
>
> Ave: You would know to reape, before your corn be sown.
>
> Dee: As concerning a fit place and time to call, and other circumstances, we would learn somewhat.
>
> Ave: You would know where and when to call, before your invocations bear witnesses of your readinesse.
>
> Dee: Then they must be written in verbis conceptis, in formal words.
>
> Ave: I—a very easie matter.
>
> Dee: What is the Book you mean that I should write?

Ave: The Book consisteth [1] of Invocation of the names of God, and [2] of the Angels, by the names of God: Their offices are manifest. You did desire to be fed with spoones, and so you are.[1]

This is not a very detailed description, but at least it is something to work with, and more practical information than the angels often gave in response to Dee's questions.

Previously, Ave had informed Dee that after the book had been written out he must invoke the God of Hosts (Dee interpreted this to mean Jehovah Sabaoth) for four days, using the twelve names of God that are found on the lines of Spirit in the four Watchtowers. Then for fourteen days Dee must call the angels "by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient." On the fifteenth day, Dee and Kelley were to clothe themselves in white linen and "so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures."

Dee actually created this Book of Spirits, or at least, he created the pattern from which the book was to be made. It appears in his Latin manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris (British Library Sloane MS 3191). It is reproduced in English in Geoffrey James's The Enochian Magic of Dr. John Dee, which I strongly recommend to anyone seriously interested in studying Enochian magic. Dee's Book of Spirits consists of these invocations:

1) The Fundamental Obeisance, which is the invocation of the twelve names of God that are written on the lines of Spirit of the four Watchtowers of the Great Table.

—:—

2) Six Seniors of the east whose names are written on the great cross of the Watchtower of the east.

3) Six Seniors of the south.

4) Six Seniors of the west.

5) Six Seniors of the north.

—:—

6) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in medicine and curing diseases.

7) Four good angels of the south powerful in medicine.

8) Four good angels of the west powerful in medicine.

9) Four good angels of the north powerful in medicine.

—:—

10) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in metals and precious jewels.

11) Four good angels of the south powerful in metals and precious jewels.

12) Four good angels of the west powerful in metals and precious jewels.

13) Four good angels of the north powerful in metals and precious jewels.

—:—

14) Four good angels of the east who are skilled and powerful in transformations.

15) Four good angels of the south powerful in transformations.

16) Four good angels of the west powerful in transformations.

17) Four good angels of the north powerful in transformations.

—:—

18) Four good angels of the east, each of whom knows the living creatures in one element, and their use.

19) Four good angels of the south knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

20) Four good angels of the west knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

21) Four good angels of the north knowing the living creatures of one element, and their use.

—:—

22) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the mixing together of natural substances.

23) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in natural substances.

24) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in natural substances.

25) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in natural substances.

—:—

26) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in transporting from place to place.

27) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in transporting.

28) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in transporting.

29) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in transporting.

—:—

30) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the mechanical arts.

31) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in mechanical arts.

32) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in mechanical arts.

33) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in mechanical arts.

—:—

34) Four Dispositors of the east who are skilled and powerful in the discovery of the secrets of men.

35) Four Dispositors of the south powerful in the discovery of secrets.

36) Four Dispositors of the west powerful in the discovery of secrets.

37) Four Dispositors of the north powerful in the discovery of secrets.

These divisions of the angels can be most clearly seen in this table, which is reproduced from Chapter Thirteen. It shows the relative positions of these angels on the quarters of a Watchtower. This interrelation is the same on all four Watchtowers.

East 1.	South 2.
Dispositors: Knitting Together	Dispositors: Transportation
Good Angels: Teach Medicine and Heal the Sick	Good Angels: Precious Metals and Jewels
Evil Angels: Cause Sickness and Death	Evil Angels: Counterfeiting and Gambling
North 3.	West 4.
Dispositors: Arts and Crafts	Dispositors: Secrets of Men
Good Angels: Transformations of Form, not Essence	Good Angels: Knowledge of All Elemental Spirits
Evil Angels: Illusions and Deceptions	Evil Angels: Evil and Base Uses of Elementals

Offices of the Angels on Any Watchtower

Four Days and Fourteen Days

Unfortunately, the invocations in Dee's Book of Spirits do not total eighteen. If we take them together in groups of angels linked by function, they total ten. Yet Ave states that the period of invocation must be eighteen days, and must be divided into two parts of four days followed by fourteen days.

The first four days are to be devoted to the invocation of the twelve names of God on the lines of Spirit in the Watchtowers.

> Ave: Thou hast three names of God, out of the line of the holy Ghost, in the principall Crosse of the first Angle, so has thou three in the second, etc.

Four dayes (after your book is made, that is to say, written) must you onely call upon those names of God, or on the God of Hosts, in those names.

And 14 dayes after you shall (in this, or on some convenient place) Call the Angels by Petition, and by the name of God, unto the which they are obedient.[7]

Elsewhere Ave tells Dee:

Ave: One book of perfect paper. One labour of a few dayes.

The calling them together, and the yielding of their promise, the repetition of the names of God, are sufficient.

I have given you Corn: I have given you also ground. Desire God to give you ability to till.[8]

Obviously the names of God in each Watchtower are to be invoked on four individual days that open the eighteen-day working, yet Dee grouped all twelve names in a single opening invocation. It is evident that Dee did not understand Ave's explicit instruction concerning the names of God on the lines of Spirit. Ave further makes plain that the working is divided into two distinct parts: the invocation of the names of God, and the invocation of the angels by the names of God.

"At No Time to Be Called"

It is not so clear to see how the remaining angels may be divided into fourteen groups, with each group receiving one invocation to be voiced on a separate day. Dee gives thirty-six invocations for the Seniors, good angels, and Dispositors. He does not provide any invocations for the evil angels whose names have only three letters, even though he lists these names beside the names of the good angels from which they are extracted. He was expressly forbidden to invoke the evil angels by Ave.

Dee: Then they [the evil angels] are not to be named in the first summoning or invitation.

Ave: At no time to be called.[9]

This is unequivocal and cannot be casually disregarded. Therefore, it becomes necessary to divide the Seniors, Dispositors, and good angels into fourteen groups, each group to be invoked on its own day during the initial eighteen-day working of invocation. Since the angels never actually say how this is to be done, it is impossible to be certain about it. Dee seems to have completely missed the necessity of making this division—at least, he never mentions it in his writings. I cannot be sure the system of division presented here is correct—all I can say is that it is sensible and workable.

The Invocations of the Angels

In my opinion, it is necessary to divide the Seniors into six groups of four, with each group containing a Senior from all four Watchtowers. This selection should probably be made clockwise (following the order in which the names of the Seniors were delivered by Ave) with the first group composed of the names in the left side of the lines of Spirit of the Great Crosses of the Watchtowers, the second group of the names in the upper part of the lines of the Son, the third group of the names in the upper part of the lines of the Father, the fourth group of the names in the right side of the lines of Spirit, the fifth group of the names in the lower part of the lines of the Father, and the sixth group of the names in the lower part of the lines of the Son.

The Dispositors (or good angels) whose names lie above the arms of the lesser crosses should come next, since they appear to be next in authority. These sixty-four angels are divided into four groups of sixteen angels, each group of which contains four angels from each Watchtower. The first group names the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the east, the second the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the south, the third the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the west, and the fourth the sixteen Dispositors of the subquarters of the north.

The same system of division is followed to divide the sixty-four good angels into four groups of sixteen angels, each group of which contains four good angels from each Watchtower.

For each of these groups an invocation is written that contains the names of God or the angels in the group. Each invocation is voiced during one day of the eighteen-day working. Ave says nothing about how many times each invocation is to be repeated, but from other statements it is likely that each invocation is to be repeated in a consecrated place three times: once at sunrise, once at noon, and once at sunset.

If the system of division I have suggested is adopted, it results in the following eighteen invocations:

1) God Names of the eastern Watchtower.
2) God Names of the southern Watchtower.
3) God Names of the western Watchtower.
4) God Names of the northern Watchtower.

5) Seniors of the left side of the lines of Spirit.
6) Seniors of the top half of the lines of the Son.
7) Seniors of the top half of the lines of the Father.
8) Seniors of the right of the lines of Spirit.
9) Seniors of the bottom of the lines of the Father.
10) Seniors of the bottom of the lines of the Son.

11) Dispositors of the mixing of natural substances.
12) Dispositors of transportation from place to place.
13) Dispositors of the mechanical arts.
14) Dispositors of the discovery of human secrets.

15) Good angels of medicine.
16) Good angels of metals and precious jewels.
17) Good angels of transformations.
18) Good angels of the four elements.

The Invocation of the Thirty Aethers

Although the angels never say so, it may be that a similar working of thirty days is to be conducted following the eighteen-day working. This would serve to establish communication with the angels of the Thirty Aethers by means of thirty invocations, each spoken three times on its appointed day. Both the working of eighteen days and the working of thirty days would be consummated or fulfilled on the days immediately following the workings, so that the entire period of invocation would occupy fifty days.

Dee seems never to have imagined combining the eighteen-day invocation explicitly described by the angel Ave with another invocation period of thirty days. Yet if he was to have the use of the angels of the thirty Aethers, it makes good magical sense for him to first establish communication with them and secure their cooperation through an opening invocation working. There is no reason to suppose that the employment of the angels of the Aethers follows any different process than the employment of the other angels of the Watchtowers.

The Role of the Enochian Keys

There are eighteen distinct Enochian Keys, and these Keys obviously relate to the subquarters of the Great Table. However, it is unclear whether these Keys are to be voiced during the eighteen-day working that establishes contact with the Enochian angels. At first consideration, this would seem probable. However, the distinct Keys naturally fall into a division of five parts: 2 + 4 + 4 + 4 + 4. It is not clear how this division can be related to the division of the invocations into 4 + 14 that was defined by Ave, or my own conjectured division of 4 + 6 + 4 + 4.

It is possible to relate the eighteen distinct Keys to the eighteen classes of spirits invoked in the initial working by inverting the order of the Keys, placing the Seniors at the end of the working, and dividing the six groups of Seniors into four and two. If this is done, the Keys 18, 17, 16 and 15 may be linked with the four invocations of the names of God; the Keys 14, 13, 12 and 11 may be linked with the four groups of Dispositors; the Keys 10, 9, 8 and 7 may be linked with the four groups of good angels; the Keys 6, 5, 4 and 3 may be linked with the four groups of Seniors from the upper parts of the lines of the Son, the upper parts of the lines of the Father, the lower parts of the lines of the Son, and the lower parts of the lines of the Father, respectively; and, finally, the Keys 2 and 1 may be linked with the groups of Seniors from the left side of the lines of Spirit and from the right side of the lines of Spirit, respectively.

I offer this association of the Keys with the groups of the names of God and angels on the Great Table as a matter of interest to more advanced Enochian magicians, but I am not happy with it. It is my personal view that the Keys are individually associated with the beam and pillar of the Black Cross (Keys 1 and 2), and with the sixteen subquarters of the Great Table (Keys 3 to 18). If this is true, then the Keys are not to be voiced in the initial eighteen-day working that establishes contact with the angels, but are (perhaps) to be used later to command specific sets of angels on individual subquarters of the Great Table as illustrated on page 222.

For example, Key 4 would be used to invoke specifically the Dispositors and good angels on the eastern subquarter of the Watchtower of the South. Key 13 would be used to invoke the Dispositors and good angels on the northern subquarter of the Watchtower of the West. And so for the rest.

The Seniors (if, indeed, it is ever necessary to invoke the Seniors) would probably be invoked by Keys 1 and 2. The First Key, related by me to the pillar of the Black Cross, would also relate to the double pillars of the Great Crosses on the individual Watchtowers, and to the four Seniors whose names are written on each double pillar (the lines of the Son and the Father). The Second Key, related by me to the beam of the Black Cross, would also relate to the beams of the Great Crosses on the individual Watchtowers, and to the two Seniors whose names are written on each beam (the lines of the Holy Spirit).

To understand this assignment, see the illustration in Chapter Fourteen that shows the numbers of the Keys assigned to the sixteen subquarters of the Great Table in four circles of four. It may well be incorrect, but since the angels left no explicit correspondence between the Keys and the angels on the Great Table, we are forced to invent our own systems. Such improvisation was done by the Golden Dawn, as I shall explain in Chapter Seventeen. The correspondence between the Keys and the angels on the Watchtowers represents one of the most original aspects of Golden Dawn Enochian magic.

The Apocalypse Working

As I have stated elsewhere, it is also my opinion that the forty-eight expressed Keys (and the first, unexpressed Key) are intended by the angels to be used in a great working, probably of fifty days duration, designed to initiate the period of destructive transformation that is generally known as the apocalypse. This may be linked with the eighteen-day invocation of the angels of the Great Table, as I suggested in my book Tetragrammaton, or it may be a completely separate working.

On this subject, it is impossible to be certain. The whole matter of the Apocalypse Working, as I have called it, is murky and is likely to remain so, because it was never explicitly discussed between Dee and the angels. Indeed, many Enochian magicians would probably say that no such Apocalypse Working exists. I put forward the concept based on my own study of the Enochian transcripts, and I believe there is considerable implicit evidence to suggest that the angels intended Enochian magic, and specifically the Enochian Keys, to serve as a trigger for the apocalypse. But this is primarily a personal conviction. You will not find unequivocal references to an Apocalyse working given anywhere by Dee or the angels.

The Form of Invocation

When composing the words of the invocations to the angels, Dee was forced to draw upon his background knowledge of Christian and Hebrew prayers, supplemented by the invocations which appear in the medieval grimoires of magic. Kelley may have aided him in this composition, since the alchemist was a practicing ritual magician and had actually used the invocations in the grimoires. Dee also exhibits a knowledge of legal terminology in his invocations, which are worded in such a way that no loopholes are left open to the angels. He must have been familiar with legends of Black Pacts and other tales in which spirits take advantage of ambiguities in the wording of the contract. Since Kelley had some knowledge of property law he may have helped Dee in this area also.

As I mentioned in Chapter Fourteen, the angels were unable to provide Dee with a pattern for his invocations. Invocation, Ave informs Dee, is a faculty of human nature that the angels do not possess.

> Dee: As for the form of our Petition or Invitation of the good Angels, What sort should it be of?
>
> Ave: A short and brief speech.
>
> Dee: We beseech you to give us an example: we would have a confidence, it should be of more effect.
>
> Ave: I may not.
>
> Kelley: And why?
>
> Ave: Invocation proceedeth of the good will of man, and of the heat and fervency of the spirit: And therefore is prayer of such effect with God.
>
> Dee: We beseech you, shall we use one form to all?
>
> Ave: Every one, after a divers form.
>
> Dee: If the minde do dictate or prompt a divers form, you mean.
>
> Ave: I know not: for I dwell not in the soul of man.[3]

According to Ave, invocation arises from human free will and ecstatic inspiration. It is a creative process. Angels cannot create. They are instruments, or extensions, of the will of God. The human power to compose invocations and the human power to assign names (used by Adam in the Garden of Eden—see Genesis 2:19–20) have a similar source—the spark of divine fire that lies within every human being.

The Prayer of Enoch

The angels did provide a model invocation that Dee was free to follow when composing his own set of original invocations. This was the prayer spoken by Enoch to God during the fifty days Enoch spent creating his magical tables of stone. Although Dee chose not to follow the pattern of this prayer, it clearly was intended by the angels to have an application in Enochian magic, although they never explicitly said this to Dee. It may have been intended as a model for the Apocalypse Working.

Since the prayer of Enoch, delivered by Ave on July 7, 1584, is of such great importance in the matter of Enochian invocation, I will reproduce it here.

Dee: Afterward, [Ave] he came again, and (after a pause) said as followeth.

Ave: My brother, I see thou dost not understand the mystery of this Book, or work thou hast in hand. But I told thee, it was the knowledge that God delivered unto Enoch. I said also, that Enoch laboured 50 days. Notwithstanding, that thy labour be not frustrate, and void of fruit, Be it unto thee, as thou hast done.

Dee: Lord I did the best that I could conceive of it.

Ave: I will tell thee, what the labour of Enoch was for those fifty dayes.

Dee: O Lord I thank thee.

Ave: He made (as thou hast done, thy book) Tables, of Serpasan and plain stone: as the Angel of the Lord appointed him; saying, tell me (O Lord) the number of the dayes that I shall labour in. It was answered him 50.

Then he groaned within himself, saying, Lord God the Fountain of true wisdom, thou that openest the secrets of thy own self unto man, thou knowest mine imperfection, and my inward darknesse: How can I (therefore) speak unto them that speak not after the voice of man; or worthily call on thy name, considering that my imagination is variable and fruitlesse, and unknown to my self? Shall the Sands seem to invite the Mountains: or can the small Rivers entertain the wonderful and unknown waves?

Can the vessel of fear, fragility, or that is of a determined proportion, lift up himself, heave up his hands, or gather the Sun into his bosom? Lord it cannot be: Lord my imperfection is great: Lord I am lesse than sand: Lord, thy good Angels and Creatures excell me far: our proportion is not alike; our sense agreeth not: Notwithstanding I am comforted; For that we have all one God, all one beginning from thee, that we respect thee a Creatour: Therefore will I call upon thy name, and in thee, I will become mighty. Thou shalt light me, and I will become a Seer; I will see thy Creatures, and will magnifie thee amongst them. Those that come unto thee have the same gate, and through the same gate, descend, such as thou sendest. Behold, I offer my house, my labour, my heart and soul, If it will please thy Angels to dwell with me, and I with them; to rejoyce with me, that I may rejoyce with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnifie thy name. Then, lo the Tables (which I have provided, and according to thy will, prepared) I offer unto thee, and unto thy holy Angels, desiring them, in and through thy holy names: That as thou art their light, and comfortest them, so they, in thee will be my light and comfort. Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them: What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive. Behold I say (O Lord) If I shall call upon them in thy name, Be it unto me in mercy, as unto the servant of the Highest. Let them also manifest unto me, How, by what words, and at what time, I shall call them. O Lord, Is there any that measure the heavens, that is mortal? How, therefore, can the heavens enter into mans imagination? Thy creatures are the Glory of thy countenance: Hereby thou glorifiest all things, which Glory excelleth and (O Lord) is far above my understanding. It is great wisdom, to speak and talke according to understanding with Kings: But to command Kings by a subjected commandment, is not wisdom, unlesse it come from thee. Behold Lord, How shall I therefore ascend into the heavens? The air will not carry me, but resisteth my folly. I fall down, for I am of the earth. Therefore, O thou very Light and true Comfort, that canst, and mayst, and dost command the heavens: Behold I offer these Tables unto thee, Command them as it pleaseth thee: and O you Ministers, and true lights of understanding, Governing this earthly frame, and the elements wherein we live, Do for me as for the servant of the Lord: and unto whom it hath pleased the Lord to talk of you.

Behold, Lord, thou hast appointed me 50 times; Thrice 50 times will I lift my hands unto thee. Be it unto me as it pleaseth thee, and thy holy Ministers. I require nothing but thee, and through thee, and for thy honour and glory: But I hope I shall be satisfied, and shall not die, (as thou hast promised) until thou gather the clouds together, and judge all things: when in a moment I shall be changed and dwell with thee for ever.

These words, were thrice a dayes talk betwixt Enoch and God: In the end of 50 dayes, there appeared unto him, which are not now to be manifested nor spoken of: he enjoyed the fruit of God his promise, and received the benefit of his faith. Here may the wise learn wisdom: for what doth man that is not corruptible?[6]

When Ave tells Dee "be it unto thee, as thou hast done," he is saying that even though Dee's version of the Book of Spirits is incorrect, the angels will acknowledge it so that Dee's sincere efforts to construct the book will not have been wasted.

The Jubilee

The number of Enoch's tables is not stated in the prayer. Presumably they are the same as the forty-eight number/letter squares that make up Dee's Book of Enoch, plus the first occult table that was too holy to reveal to Dee. The last day of the fifty was probably the day of fulfillment, when Enoch's work of the previous forty-nine was brought to fruition by God. Concerning the number fifty, Cornelius Agrippa writes:

> The number fifty signifies remission of sins, of servitudes, and also liberty. According to the [Jewish] Law, on the fiftieth year they did remit debts, and everyone did return to his own possessions. Hence by the year of Jubilee [see Leviticus 25:10], and by the psalm of repentance [psalm 50 of the Vulgate] it shows a sign of indulgency, and repentance. The Law also, and the Holy Ghost are declared in the same: for the fiftieth day after Israel's going forth out of Egypt, the Law was given to Moses in Mount Sinai: the fiftieth day after the resurrection, the Holy Ghost came down upon the apostles in Mount Sion; whence also it is called the number of grace, and attributed to the Holy Ghost.[7]

Just as God gave Moses the tablets of the commandments on the fiftieth day, so are the tables of Enoch to be perfected on the fiftieth day of his ritual working. Just as the Holy Ghost descended upon the apostles of Christ fifty days after the resurrection, so are the tables of Enoch to be activated and empowered by the holy Spirit on the fiftieth day.

There seems to be a connection between the number of times Enoch speaks his prayer to God, and the "hundred and fifty Lions, and spirits of wickednesse, errour, and deceit" that God sends among the unrighteous people to sow confusion as punishment for their misuse of Enoch's wisdom. However, there is not enough space in this book to consider this matter at length.

"Lord I Am Lesse Than Sand"

Two things to notice about Enoch's prayer are his abasement of himself before God ("Lord my imperfection is great, Lord I am lesse than sand"), and his stated intention not to attempt to command the angels to perform other than their appointed offices: "Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them: What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive." By taking this approach Enoch ensures that his magic will never be in violation of divine law. He places himself firmly below the angels in the hierarchy of intelligent beings.

At first impression, this appears contrary to much of the magical practice of the Western world, which has in large part descended from the magic of ancient Egypt through the philosophers and magicians of the Greeks and Romans. The ancient Egyptians believed themselves able to command not only spirits, but gods as well. (This power did not extend to the First Mover, however.) The gods commanded by the Egyptians were capable of independent actions. It was a case of their will being matched against the will of the magician.

The angels of Enoch are not independent beings, but mere messengers or agents of the God of Hosts. Thus, in commanding the angels Enoch would have been in the uncomfortable position of attempting to defy the will of God, since any action the angels might commit that was not of their office would be in defiance of God's will. Conversely, there was no need for Enoch to command the angels to perform their offices, since they would do this in any case.

This raises the question, what good are the tables of Enoch (and by extension, the tables of Dee) if they can only cause the angels to do what they would do anyway? Although the angels perform their natural offices, tables or no tables, presumably through the use of the tables it is possible to call down that angelic grace. For example, an angel of good fortune will always produce good fortune since this is its appointed office, but the magician can control where that good fortune occurs, whether in his or her life or the life of another person.

It was probably the human arrogance of attempting to use the magic of Enoch for base personal ends in violation of the natural offices of the angels that provoked God to sow the Earth with the 150 spirits of deceit who taught goetic magic. Through the proliferation of goetic magic the original wisdom of Enoch was gradually forgotten and lost from the world. At any rate, this is the myth presented to Dee and Kelley by the angels.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Enochian Magic in the Golden Dawn

FRÄULEIN SPRENGEL AND THE CIPHER MANUSCRIPT

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was a secret Rosicrucian society, modeled after Freemasonry, that flourished in England at the end of the Victorian era. It was founded in London in 1888 by three Freemasons: Samuel Liddell "MacGregor" Mathers, Dr. William Wynn Westcott, and Dr. William Robert Woodman. Woodman died in 1891, leaving the Golden Dawn to be run by Westcott and Mathers. Westcott was the solid, respectable cornerstone of the Order; Mathers its brilliant but erratic guiding star.

The genesis of the Order is said to be Woodman's discovery in 1887 of a brief occult manuscript in cipher, found in a book shop between the pages of a book. When translated, the cipher contained the outline of five esoteric Masonic rituals and a letter by a German Rosicrucian adept calling herself Fräulein Sprengel. Westcott enlisted the aid of Mathers to expand the rituals, and wrote to Sprengel, who authorized him to found an English branch of the German occult order Die Goldene Dämmerung. At least, this is the story. A more likely explanation is that the cipher manuscript was a forgery, and that Westcott cooked up the original rituals, with or without the help of Mathers.

Nevertheless, the Golden Dawn was an important and unusual organization for two reasons. First, it taught a complete system of practical ritual magic solidly based in the history of Western occultism. Second, it admitted women members as equals. In both these innovations, daring for the day, it was influenced by the Theosophical Society founded by Helena Petrovna Blavatsky in New York in 1875.

"The Extraordinarily Developed System"

An important part of the advanced teachings of the Golden Dawn was Enochian magic—probably the result of research carried out by Mathers in the reading room of the British Museum Library. It is impossible to be certain about the authors of many Golden Dawn papers because they circulated anonymously among members of the order and were copied and recopied by hand. There may well have been other contributors. Since Enochian words of power appear in the mysterious cipher document,[1] it is evident that Mathers was working on Enochian magic prior to 1887 (presuming the cipher manuscript to be Westcott's forgery, and presuming it to have been forged prior to the establishment of the Isis-Urania Temple).

Israel Regardie, who published the order papers of the Golden Dawn between 1938–40, and who was, along with his teacher Aleister Crowley, one of the two men most responsible for the continuing dominance of Golden Dawn magic in modern Western occultism, regarded Enochian magic as one of the greatest achievements of the Golden Dawn:

> So far as we are able to make out, however, the System originated by means of the ceremonial skrying of Dr. John Dee and Sir Edward Kelly towards the close of the 16th century. The original diaries of Dr. John Dee, recording the development of the system, may be found in Sloane Manuscripts 3189-3191 in the British Museum. But this stands out very clearly, that in these diaries is a rudimentary scheme which bears only the most distant relation to the extraordinarily developed system in use by the Order. Whoever was responsible for the Order scheme of the Angelic Tablets—whether it was Mathers and Westcott or the German Rosicrucian Adepts from whom the former are supposed to have obtained their knowledge—was possessed of an ingenuity and an understanding of Magic such as never was in the possession either of Dee or Kelly.[2]

As you will have gathered from the preceding chapters, this is a very unjustified slur against Dee and Kelley, who understood very clearly those portions of Enochian magic which the angels chose to reveal. Regardie is not to be blamed for this attitude. His knowledge of Dee's manuscripts appears to have been quite limited, despite his claim to have obtained "a good deal of information" about "Enochiana" through private meditation and studies at the British Museum. Crowley, Regardie's mentor in magic, suffered from the same shallow understanding of Dee's magical diaries, and also boasted of a much more extensive experience with the Enochian system than he actually possessed.

What the System Contains

The Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is almost entirely based on the English and Enochian texts of the Enochian Keys, along with a curious compound version of the four Watchtowers arranged in the pattern they form on the Great Table of Raphael. The Black Cross is not used by the Golden Dawn to join the Watchtowers together into a single Great Table. Instead, the Watchtowers are treated as separate entities, and the letters in the Black Cross are gathered into the small magic square that appears in Casaubon,[3] which is called in the Golden Dawn the Tablet of Union.

The Keys are used to invoke or evoke the angels whose names appear written on the four Watchtowers. The methods for extracting the names of these angels, and the names of power that summon and commend the angels, are accurately presented (for the most part) by the Golden Dawn. The names of the Thirty Aethers, or Airs, also appear in the Order papers, but not the names or sigils of the ninety-one geographical spirits, or Princes, who rule the regions of the Earth. That omission is probably why Crowley evoked the Aethers, but not the tutelary genii of the Aethers.[4]

What the System Omits

Omitted from the Enochian magic of the Golden Dawn is any direct mention of the mystical heptarchy of planetary angels, along with their tables and sigils, which form the underlying basis of all Enochian magic. No mention is made of the Table of Practice or the rest of the ritual furniture of the Table, which are derived from the heptarchical system. Nor is anything said about the central importance of a scrying stone in Enochian magic. Westcott does refer to the Sigillum Aemeth in passing when writing about the seals of the Watchtowers, saying: "This 'Liber AEmeth sive Sigillum Dei' that is the Book of Truth, or the Seal of God, entereth not into the knowledge of a Zelator Adeptus Minor"[5] (nor, we may suspect, into the knowledge of anyone else in the Golden Dawn at that time, save possibly Mathers and Westcott).

Less surprising is the silence of the Golden Dawn concerning the Enochian Book of Spirits, which is never clearly described in Casaubon (probably the primary source for Golden Dawn Enochian magic). There is no awareness in the Golden Dawn of the necessity for making initial contact with the angels of the Great Table through an eighteen-day ritual that employs original invocations composed by the magician. The angels are simply summoned by means of the Keys.

A notable void in the Enochian magic of the Order is the silence concerning Kelley's Great Vision of the Watchtowers, and the golden talisman constructed by Dee that depicts this vision. Neither is anything written about the Vision of the Round House, although this may be forgiven since the importance of this vision is still not understood by Enochian scholars. It should also be mentioned that the Enochian alphabet used by the Golden Dawn is faulty in several respects. Unfortunately, the influence of the Order has been so profound over the last hundred years that these defects are universally reproduced in books about Enochian magic. As I mentioned earlier, I have corrected the alphabet in the present work.

In view of these many omissions, the reader may be forgiven for wondering why Regardie was so impressed with the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn. The great virtue of this system is its consistency. Faced with many gaps in his knowledge of the Enochian magic received by Dee and Kelley, Mathers was forced to supply his own material. It was also necessary for him to fully integrate his personal system of Enochian magic into the magic of the Golden Dawn, which he was undoubtedly in the process of creating at the time he researched Enochian magic.

The Model of the Pentagram

The primary model used by Mathers to structure the Enochian system of the Golden Dawn was the relationship between the four elements and the four lower points of the pentagram, which is used in Golden Dawn magic to invoke or banish elemental forces. The assignment of the elements to the pentagram, in turn, was conditioned by the elemental associations of the four Fixed signs of the zodiac. These zodiac associations are very ancient, and served as the basis for the Golden Dawn understanding of the elements. If the lower points of the pentagram are imagined to form a square, this may be laid over the wheel of the zodiac to achieve the following Golden Dawn arrangement.

Mathers' Model of the Pentagram

Mathers and his associates made the fundamental mistake of linking the four Watchtowers to the four elements in the relationship that appears on the four lower points of the Golden Dawn pentagram and in the Fixed signs of the zodiac. He chose the ordering of the Watchtowers upon the Revised Great Table of Raphael as his starting point and simply laid the square of the elements on top of the Watchtowers.

The existence of a second, earlier version of the Great Table, where the Watchtowers occupy different quarters, was never mentioned in the Golden Dawn documents. Mathers must have known about the Original Table, since he gathered all the letter variations that appear in the five extant examples of the Great Table and incorporated them into the Golden Dawn Great Table. As a result, some cells of the Golden Dawn Table have two letters, some have three, and some have four.

The version of the Golden Dawn Watchtowers (they cannot really be called a Great Table since they are unconnected) presented on pages 290–291 is what appears in Regardie's Golden Dawn. I have allowed the inaccuracies in lettering and capitalization to stand. It is interesting to speculate what the original members of the Golden Dawn made of the apparently random capital letters in the tables. The ninety-one spirits of the Aethers, whose seven-letter names are capitalized by the angels on the Watchtowers, are never enumerated. Westcott merely writes: "Of the letters on the Tables, some be written as capitals. These are the initial letters of certain Angels' names drawn forth by another method, not now explained, and the offices of these do not concern a Z[elator] A[deptus] M[inor]."[6]

There is also no notice made by Mathers of letters on the Watchtowers that are inverted right to left in Dee's transcript. These held the highest importance for the angels, but exactly what that importance was is never clearly stated (except that the inverted letters at the ends

The Seals of the Watchtowers

The Golden Dawn developed the four seals of the quarters of the Great Table, described by Kelley just prior to the reception of the Watchtowers, into stylized, multicolored emblems for the Watchtowers, while retaining the essential features of the symbols. This was a useful and perceptive innovation. These seals are painted large just above the separate tables of the Watchtowers that adorned Golden Dawn temples, each Watchtower in its Golden Dawn elemental colors.[12]

The outer rim and central T on the seal of the Golden Dawn Watchtower of Air is colored yellow; the background is mauve. The outer rim and central cross, along with the letters and numbers around the cross, on the seal of the Watchtower of Water is blue; the background is orange. The outer rim on the seal of the Watchtower of Fire is red; moving from the center outward the concentric circles of the figure are colored green, red, green, red, green; clockwise from the top the twelve flames around the figure are red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve, red, yellow, mauve; the background is green. The outer rim on the seal of the Watchtower of Earth is black; clockwise from the top the arms of the cross are colored citrine, olive, black, russet; the center of the cross and the background are both white.

Golden Dawn Seals of the Watchtowers

"Elemental Kings of the Entire Tablet"

From the pattern of each of these seals, a name of power was extracted from the outermost letter ring on Dee's wax Sigillum Aemeth. Each name begins at the capital T with the small 4 above it at the top of Sigillum Aemeth and proceeds by jumps, either clockwise or counterclockwise, with odd letters simply inserted where this was found necessary. Regardie wrote: "The Names yielded by the analysis of the Sigils are to be considered as the Elemental Kings of the entire Tablet."[13] He added that each King who bears one of these names is "purely and intrinsically an elemental force" and should be treated with caution.

The elemental King of the Golden Dawn Watchtower of Air is Tahaoelog. The actual letter formation of his name is shown here.

4	22	20	18	1
Th	h	a	o	8	og

This is extracted simply by beginning at the top of the circle of letters and numbers around the rim of Sigillum

Aemeth and counting four spaces clockwise for each letter or letter group. Notice that vowels have been inserted into the name to make it easier to pronounce.

The King of the Watchtower of Water is Thahebyobeaatanun. The extraction of this name is not nearly so simple as the last, but I will give the Golden Dawn explanation, for what it is worth:

> From b.4.6.b grouped about a cross, note that T equals t, (the Cross equals th), is obtained: Cross to h, then b.4., then 6.b., and continue 6:
>
4	22	b	y	6	6	a	t	14
Th	h	4	14	b	A	5	9	n	n

> yielding the name Thahebyobeaatanun for the Water Tablet.
>
> (Four moves from T gives 22.h. b.4. is specially put. y.14 moves to 22 from t. Then 6.b. is special. From 6.b. it is all plain moving by 6 to right [Wynn Westcott]).[11]

The first part of Westcott's explanation is clear enough. However, I'm not sure what he means by "y.14 moves to 22 from t." The square containing y/14 is actually 21 spaces from the uppermost 4/T. The "6.b." is apparently just inserted. However, from the square containing 6/A, the rest proceed clockwise by jumps of six.

The King of the Watchtower of Earth is Thahaaothe. The letters that make up his name are given in this order:

4	22	11	a	o	t	h
Th	h	A	5	10	11

It is not so obvious how this name is extracted. The Golden Dawn text says: "From the plain Cross, which equals Th4, proceed counting in each case forward as by numbers given." The meaning, poorly expressed, is that you count 4 clockwise from the uppermost capital

T (which is regarded as th). This places you at the square that contains 22/h. You then count 22 clockwise from this square, which places you at the square containing 11/A. You count 11 from this square, which places you at the square containing a/5. Then you must bend back to avoid crossing the uppermost T and count from this square counterclockwise 5 squares, which places you at o/10. Count 10 squares counterclockwise, and you reach t/11. Then count 11 squares counterclockwise to reach the h.

The King of the Watchtower of Fire is Ohooohaatan. The letters in his name are represented in this way:

6		o	o	22	H	6	t
w	h	8	17	o	12	A	9	n

The W under the 6 is not really a W at all, but is intended to represent the Greek letter Omega, which appears just to the left of the uppermost capital T on the outer ring of the Sigillum Aemeth. You proceed clockwise by jumps of twelve in each case to reach the following letter-number combination. The rationale for this is that the Golden Dawn seal of the Watchtower of Fire has twelve rays radiating out from it (Dee's seal has eleven or nine rays). This time there is no taboo about crossing the 6/W that began the name.

Enochian Chess in the Golden Dawn

The most interesting idiosyncrasy of Golden Dawn Enochian magic was the invention of Enochian chess. It was probably a purely theoretical exercise. Regardie asserts in The Golden Dawn that he never encountered a member who was willing to play a game with him, although some adepts made "fulsome praises of its remarkable divinatory capacity."[15] He further says that the chess pieces he saw were unmounted, and that this was "a clear indication that they had never and could never have been employed."

The board was formed of the sixteen squares of the good angels in each subquarter of a generic Watchtower. The squares of the Great Cross and lesser crosses were simply removed. This resulted in a board of sixty-four squares, the same number as on a regular chess board. Each of these squares was divided with a cross into four triangles, and each triangle painted its associated elemental color (yellow, blue, black and red).

The pieces are Egyptian god forms. A full set numbered twenty men and sixteen pawns (the four kings had no pawn). The game was to be played by four players seated on the four sides of the board. Each received a queen, knight, rook, bishop and king, as well as four pawns to stand before them. The king occupied the corner square, which he shared with his bishop. The elemental association of each set of forces is indicated by colored bases. The forces of the king of air have yellow bases, those of the king of water blue bases, those of the king of earth black bases, and those of the king of fire red bases.

The men move the same way they do in regular chess, with a few idiosyncrasies. The queen can move only three squares in any direction, but she may jump over intervening pieces like the knight. There is no castling. There is no use of en passant for the pawns, which move only a single square (they do not have the option of a two-square move at the start). When a pawn reaches the end of its rank, it is promoted to the rank of the piece it guarded (the bishop's pawn is made a bishop of the same element, for example), even if that piece is still in play. Presumably, additional pieces are needed.

Golden Dawn Enochian Chess

The players play in teams of two, or two players play using two elemental forces that are in harmony with each other (fire and air; water and earth). When stalemate occurs, the player who is stalemated loses his turn until the stalemate is removed. When one player on a team is checkmated, he loses his move and his partner continues to play in an effort to free him from the checkmate. When both players on a team are checkmated simultaneously, they lose and the game is over.

I have simplified the description of Enochian chess that is given in the Golden Dawn. It has numerous weird little quirks which, I am quite certain, would make it impossible to actually play in any satisfactory manner. Since it has nothing whatsoever to do with genuine Enochian magic, except by its name, there is no point in devoting much space to it.

True Enochian Chess

True Enochian chess (yet to be invented) would be three-dimensional and would play on the four Watchtowers arranged at four levels. It would employ the Enochian angels whose names appear on the Great Table as men. Each force should probably consist of the King, six Seniors, and sixteen Dispositors, with the sixteen good angels serving as pawns. The Great Table would have to be conceived as though it were wrapped back upon itself into a sphere, so that a player could move off the left edge of the eastern quarter and onto the right edge of the southern quadrant, or off the bottom edge of the northern quarter and onto the top edge of the eastern quarter.

You are invited to fill in the rest of the rules. I warn you, however, this will be no easy task. It is a fairly simple matter to devise a concept for a board game such as chess. This is all the Enochian chess of the Golden Dawn is—a concept. It is a far more difficult challenge to come up with a set of rules that allows the game to be played as an equal contest to a satisfying conclusion within an agreeable length of time.

Appendix A

Enochian Book of Spirits

A Reconstructed Enochian Book of Spirits

In this appendix, I have attempted to reconstruct the Book of Spirits that is to be used to summon and establish a communication with the angels of the Great Table during the initial eighteen-day working. I have used the structure of the Original Great Table of the Watchtowers as the basis for these invocations because I am presenting the original Enochian magic of Dee and Kelley. Anyone who has understood the exposition of the Great Table previously given can, with little difficulty, alter the text and ordering of the invocations and the spelling of the spirit names to reflect the structure of my own Restored Great Table or (though I do not recommend it) the structure of the Great Table of Raphael.

In this work, I have placed the third cycle of the Dispositors and good angels on the northern subquarters. It would seem more rational to place the cycles successively in a circle clockwise, east, south, west, north. However, it is clear from the Original Table and the Vision of the Round House that the angels intended the cycles of the subquarters to be arranged in two rows in the order east, south, north, west. This in spite of the fact that the individual subquarters of each cycle around the Great Table are unfolded in the order east, south, west, north.

This contradiction between the way the cycles are unfolded around the Great Table (east, south, north, west) and the way the individual subquarters in each cycle are unfolded (east, south, west, north) makes no sense to me. However, I have decided not to second guess the angels on this matter. The arrangement of the subquarters and their four cycles of four are presented as they were delivered by Ave to Dee. For a better understanding of this distinction, see the diagram of the four cycles of the Keys in Chapter Fourteen, which shows the same arrangement.

It should be noted that the Enochian letter Van stands for both U and V in English. Therefore these English letters may be interchanged in the names of the angels where this aids the pronunciation of the names. If you compare the names of the angels below with the letters on the Original Great Table (which I have not altered, except to correct errors) you will see when I have made this substitution. Generally, I have substituted U in place of V when there is no adjacent vowel or when the ease of vibrating the name is greatly improved.

These invocations should be written or typed out by the magician on clean paper, and then bound into the form of a book. Alternatively, they may be written by hand in a new bound journal of blank pages. It is also a good idea to include a table containing all the names of God and the angels in each invocation before the text of that invocation, as Dee did in his own version of the Book of Spirits. One of the reasons is that it allows the inclusion in the book of the names of the evil angels, or cacodemons, formed of three letters. These names are composed of two letters from under the left arms of the lesser crosses coupled with a prefatory letter from the Black Cross on the same line of the Great

Table. The names of these demons are not to be voiced in the invocations, but the angels do not expressly forbid that they be written in the book. Dee included them in his tables.

It is usually the practice in ritual magic to memorize the text of invocations prior to the ritual in which they are to be used. This is always the best course. However, these Enochian invocations are quite complex. Since the Book of Spirits obviously was intended to play a central role in the invocations, it will be acceptable to the angels if the magician reads the text from the book he or she has made. In either case, the book should always be present during the invocations. Each invocation is read three times on its own day: once at sunrise, once at noon, and once at sunset.

These readings must be done in a holy place, a place that has been ritually cleansed and consecrated to its purpose. A flame should be kept burning on the Table of Practice during the invocations. The Table may be used as an altar during ritual as well as a support for the scrying stone. The magician should be dressed in clean white linen, and be physically and mentally pure in the magical sense. A cleansing prayer is recommended before each speaking of an invocation.

A large representation of the Great Table of the Watchtowers that corresponds with the structure of the invocations should also be present. You may wish to adopt the Golden Dawn practice of dividing the Great Table into individual Watchtowers and hanging these on the walls of the ritual chamber in the four directions. Or you may prefer to use my own Enochian cube, a cubic representation of the Great Table that I suggested for Gerald and Betty Schueler's The Angels' Message to Humanity. See the Schuelers' book for a description of its making. If the cube is employed, it should be placed on the Table of Practice during the invocations.

It may be that the Book of Spirits is to be used only during the eighteen days of the initial invocation. Its primary purpose is to call forth the angels so that they can be induced to write their sigils or signatures in the Book of Silvered Leaves, using the body of the magician as their writing instrument. On this subject the angel Ave tells Dee:

> Ave: You must never use the [linen] Garment after, but that once onely, neither the book.
>
> Kelley: To what end is the book made then, if it be not to be used after.
>
> Dee: It is made for to be used that day onely.[1]

Notice that it is Dee who says the book is to be used only on the nineteenth day of the working, not Ave. The angel says the book and the special linen garment are to be used only once, but this may mean only during the period of the working. Certainly it would seem necessary to refer to the invocations in the Book of Spirits on successive days. Perhaps the linen garment that is worn on the day of consummation may also be worn on the eighteen days of invocation, but never after the working is concluded.

Nor it is completely clear which book Ave refers to, although Dee and Kelley seem to assume that the angel is talking about the Book of Spirits. Ave may mean that the Book of Silvered Leaves is to be used only once, at the time the invoked angels imprint their sigils upon it. If this is so, then no restriction is placed by the angels on the use of the Book of Spirits.

You will find it easier to comprehend the overall pattern of the Book of Spirits in this appendix if you refer to the table near the beginning of Chapter Thirteen, which shows the offices of the various classes of angels on a Watchtower. These groups and their works are the same on all four Watchtowers, but the angels of each Watchtower only function in the corresponding quarter of the Earth.

Some Neopagan practitioners may object to the overtly Christian content of these invocations. They are free to compose their own set of invocations that do not mention the Hebrew names of God or the name of Christ. However, they should consider that Enochian magic functions within the context of Christianity and makes extensive use of Christian, Gnostic, and Kabbalistic symbolism. Indeed, it is scarcely possible to understand Enochian magic without a knowledge of the myths and magic of the Old and New Testaments, as I have demonstrated in my book Tetragrammaton. I used as my models Dee's own invocations in Liber Scientiae and the prayer of Enoch delivered to Dee by the angel Ave, which I quoted in full in Chapter Sixteen. These paradigms are responsible for the Christian tone.

In composing the following original invocations, I hope that I have managed to do a better job than Dee, and that Ave would not tell me, as he told Dee, "My brother, I see thou dost not understand the mystery of this Book." However, only time and repeated use will prove the worth, or lack of worth, of these invocations.

ANGELS OF THE FIRST DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Names of God
East	Adonai Sabaoth	ORO, IBAH, AOZPI

Invocation of the First Day: Banners of the East

Adonai Sabaoth, Lord of Hosts, the fountain of true wisdom, who opens the mysteries of being and not being, who knows the imperfections and inner darkness of men, I, _____, a fragile vessel of the making of your hands, stand here before you and call upon your name. I am less than the sand before your mountain. I am less than the torrents in the springtime before the wonderful and unknown waves of your sea. Yet I call upon your name, and in your name I am become mighty.

Light my soul and make me a seer of visions, that I may see your creatures who are the glory of your countenance. I will praise your names and magnify your works among them. Those who lift their hearts to you in the east ascend by one gate, and through that gate descend your appointed messengers, for we have all one God, all one beginning from you, and all acknowledge you the sole Creator.

I offer and dedicate this table of the Watchtower of the East unto you, and unto your holy angels whose names appear inscribed upon this table and written in this book, desiring their presence in and through your holy names of the east, ORO, IBAH, AOZPI, and your other names having dominion in the east. Let it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your names among them.

As you are the light and comfort to your angels, so are they my light and comfort in your names; as it pleases them to receive what you offer, so also I receive with pleasure what they offer unto me; even as they prescribe no laws unto you, O Lord, so shall I prescribe no laws unto them.

Behold, when I call upon them in your names that are in the Watchtower of the East, let it be unto me in mercy as unto the true servant of the Highest. Let them manifest to me in the eastern regions at whatever time or circumstance, and by whatever words, I call them. So also let them depart when I bid them depart. Let them do for me as for the servant of the Lord.

Behold, O Lord, the true light and comfort of the world, the ruler of the heavens, I offer this table of the Watchtower of the East unto you. Command it according to your pleasure. By the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE SECOND DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Names of God
South	Adonai Malekh	MOR, DIAL, HCTGA

Invocation of the Second Day: Banners of the South

Adonai Malekh, Lord and King, the fountain of true wisdom, who opens the mysteries of being and not being, who knows the imperfections and inner darkness of men, I, _____, a fragile vessel of the making of your hands, stand here before you and call upon your name. I am less than the sand before your mountain. I am less than the torrents in the springtime before the wonderful and unknown waves of your sea. Yet I call upon your name, and in your name I am become mighty.

Light my soul and make me a seer of visions, that I may see your creatures who are the glory of your countenance. I will praise your names and magnify your works among them. Those who lift their hearts to you in the south ascend by one gate, and through that gate descend your appointed messengers, for we have all one God, all one beginning from you, and all acknowledge you the sole Creator.

I offer and dedicate this table of the Watchtower of the South unto you, and unto your holy angels whose names appear inscribed upon this table and written in this book, desiring their presence in and through your holy names of the south, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, and your other names having dominion in the south. Let it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your names among them.

As you are the light and comfort to your angels, so are they my light and comfort in your names; as it pleases them to receive what you offer, so also I receive with pleasure what they offer unto me; even as they prescribe no laws unto you, O Lord, so shall I prescribe no laws unto them.

Behold, when I call upon them in your names that are in the Watchtower of the South, let it be unto me in mercy as unto the true servant of the Highest. Let them manifest to me in the southern regions at whatever time or circumstance, and by whatever words, I call them. So also let them depart when I bid them depart. Let them do for me as for the servant of the Lord.

Behold, O Lord, the true light and comfort of the world, the ruler of the heavens, I offer this table of the Watchtower of the South unto you. Command it according to your pleasure. By the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE THIRD DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Names of God
West	Elohim Sabaoth	MPH, ARSL, GAIOL

Invocation of the Third Day: Banners of the West

Elohim Sabaoth, God of Hosts, the fountain of true wisdom, who opens the mysteries of being and not being, who knows the imperfections and inner darkness of men, I, _____, a fragile vessel of the making of your hands, stand here before you and call upon your name. I am less than the sand before your mountain. I am less than the torrents in the springtime before the wonderful and unknown waves of your sea. Yet I call upon your name, and in your name I am become mighty.

Light my soul and make me a seer of visions, that I may see your creatures who are the glory of your countenance. I will praise your names and magnify your works among them. Those who lift their hearts to you in the west ascend by one gate, and through that gate descend your appointed messengers, for we have all one God, all one beginning from you, and all acknowledge you the sole Creator.

I offer and dedicate this table of the Watchtower of the West unto you, and unto your holy angels whose names appear inscribed upon this table and written in this book, desiring their presence in and through your holy names of the west, MPH, ARSL, GAIOL, and your other names having dominion in the west. Let it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your names among them.

As you are the light and comfort to your angels, so are they my light and comfort in your names; as it pleases them to receive what you offer, so also I receive with pleasure what they offer unto me; even as they prescribe no laws unto you, O Lord, so shall I prescribe no laws unto them.

Behold, when I call upon them in your names that are in the Watchtower of the West, let it be unto me in mercy as unto the true servant of the Highest. Let them manifest to me in the western regions at whatever time or circumstance, and by whatever words, I call them. So also let them depart when I bid them depart. Let them do for me as for the servant of the Lord.

Behold, O Lord, the true light and comfort of the world, the ruler of the heavens, I offer this table of the Watchtower of the West unto you. Command it according to your pleasure. By the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE FOURTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Names of God
North	Eloah Va-Daath	OIP, TEAA, PDOCE

Invocation of the Fourth Day: Banners of the North

Eloah Va-Daath, Manifest God, the fountain of true wisdom, who opens the mysteries of being and not being, who knows the imperfections and inner darkness of men, I, _____, a fragile vessel of the making of your hands, stand here before you and call upon your name. I am less than the sand before your mountain. I am less than the torrents in the springtime before the wonderful and unknown waves of your sea. Yet I call upon your name, and in your name I am become mighty.

Light my soul and make me a seer of visions, that I may see your creatures who are the glory of your countenance. I will praise your names and magnify your works among them. Those who lift their hearts to you in the north ascend by one gate, and through that gate descend your appointed messengers, for we have all one God, all one beginning from you, and all acknowledge you the sole Creator.

I offer and dedicate this table of the Watchtower of the North unto you, and unto your holy angels whose names appear inscribed upon this table and written in this book, desiring their presence in and through your holy names of the north, OIP, TEAA, PDOCE, and your other names having dominion in the north. Let it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your names among them.

As you are the light and comfort to your angels, so are they my light and comfort in your names; as it pleases them to receive what you offer, so also I receive with pleasure what they offer unto me; even as they prescribe no laws unto you, O Lord, so shall I prescribe no laws unto them.

Behold, when I call upon them in your names that are in the Watchtower of the North, let it be unto me in mercy as unto the true servant of the Highest. Let them manifest to me in the northern regions at whatever time or circumstance, and by whatever words, I call them. So also let them depart when I bid them depart. Let them do for me as for the servant of the Lord.

Behold, O Lord, the true light and comfort of the world, the ruler of the heavens, I offer this table of the Watchtower of the North unto you. Command it according to your pleasure. By the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE FIFTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Names	Senior
East	Bataiva	Abioro
	Bataivh	Habioro
South	Iczhhca	Aidrom
	Iczhhcl	Laidrom
West	Raagios	Srahpm
	Raagiol	Lsrahpm
North	Eldprna	Aetpio
	Edlprna	Aaetpio

Invocation of the Fifth Day: Seniors of Spirit, Left

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of Spirit to the left side of the pillar of the Son and the Father, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves. You in the Watchtower of the East who are Abioro, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Bataiva; but when you are Habioro, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon you by the name of severity Bataivh.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Aidrom, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Iczhhca; but when you are Laidrom, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon you by the name of severity Iczhhcl.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Srahpm, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Raagios; but when you are Lsrahpm, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon you by the name of severity Raagiol.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Aetpio, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Eldprna; but when you are Aaetpio, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon you by the name of severity Edlprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE SIXTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Senior
East	Bataiva	Aaoxaif
South	Iczhiha	Aczinor
West	Raagios	Saiinou
North	Eldprna	Adoeoet

Invocation of the Sixth Day: Seniors of the Son, Above

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of the Son above the line of holy Spirit, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You in the Watchtower of the East who are Aaoxaif, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Bataiva.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Aczinor, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Iczhhca.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Saiinou, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Raagios.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Adoeoet, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Eldprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE SEVENTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Senior
East	Bataivh	Htmorda
South	Iczhhcl	Lzinopo
West	Raagiol	Laoaxrp
North	Edlprna	Alndood

Invocation of the Seventh Day: Seniors of the Father, Above

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of the Father above the line of holy Spirit, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You in the Watchtower of the East who are Htmorda, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Bataivh.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Lzinopo, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Iczhhcl.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Laoaxrp, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Raagiol.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Alndood, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Edlprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE EIGHTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Senior
East	Bataivh	Haozpi
	Bataiva	Ahaozpi
South	Iczhhcl	Lhctga
	Iczhhca	Alhctga
West	Raagiol	Lgaiol
	Raagios	Slgaiol
North	Edlprna	Apdoce
	Eldprna	Aapdoce

Invocation of the Eighth Day: Seniors of Spirit, Right

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of Spirit to the right side of the pillar of the Son and the Father, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You in the Watchtower of the East who are Haozpi, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon in the name of severity Bataivh; but when you are Ahaozpi, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon you by the name of mercy Bataiva.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Lhctga, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon in the name of severity Iczhhcl; but when you are Alhctga, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon you by the name of mercy Iczhhca.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Lgaiol, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon in the name of severity Raagiol; but when you are Slgaiol, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon you by the name of mercy Raagios.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Apdoce, the minister of severity by God the Father, I call upon in the name of severity Edlprna; but when you are Aapdoce, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon you by the name of mercy Eldprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE NINTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Senior
East	Bataivh	Hipotga
South	Iczhhcl	Lhiansa
West	Raagiol	Ligdisa
North	Edlprna	Arinnap

Invocation of the Ninth Day: Seniors of the Father, Below

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of the Father below the line of holy Spirit, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You in the Watchtower of the East who are Hipotga, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Bataivh.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Lhiansa, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Iczhhcl.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Ligdisa, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Raagiol.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Arinnap, the minister of severe judgement by God the Father, I call upon in the name of judgement Edlprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE TENTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Senior
East	Bataiva	Autotar
South	Iczhhca	Acmbicu
West	Raagios	Soaiznt
North	Eldprna	Anodoin

Invocation of the Tenth Day: Seniors of the Son, Below

You four Seniors who stand in the Watchtowers upon the line of the Son below the line of holy Spirit, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You in the Watchtower of the East who are Autotar, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Bataiva.

You in the Watchtower of the South who are Acmbicu, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Iczhhca.

You in the Watchtower of the West who are Soaiznt, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Raagios.

You in the Watchtower of the North who are Anodoin, the minister of mercy by God the Son, I call upon in the name of mercy Eldprna.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me. Be manifest unto me in what manner, and by what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge of all human affairs, and execute faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever task I require of you that falls within your office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE ELEVENTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Dispositors	From the Cross
			letter	name
East	Erzla	Rzla Zlar Larz Arzl	I	IAON
South	Eboza	Boza Ozab Zabo Aboz	A	AONI
West	Ataad	Taad Aadt Adta Dtaa	O	ONIA
North	Adopa	Dopa Opad Pado Adop	N	NIAO

Invocation of the Eleventh Day: Dispositors of Joining

You sixteen Dispositors who stand above the arms of the eastern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the joining together and destruction of natural substances, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Rzla, Zlar, Larz and Arzl, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross IAON, and in the name of God particular to your office, Erzla.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Boza, Ozab, Zabo and Aboz, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross AONI, and in the name of God particular to your office, Eboza.

You four lights of understand and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the western part of the world, Taad, Aadt, Adta and Dtaa, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross ONIA, and in the name of God particular to your office, Ataad.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Dopa, Opad, Pado and Adop, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross NIAO, and in the name of God particular to your office, Adopa.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the arts of joining and loosing, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE TWELFTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Dispositors	From the Cross
			letter	name
East	Eutpa	Utpa Tpau Paut Autp	L	LANU
South	Ephra	Phra Hrap Raph Aphr	A	ANUL
West	Atdim	Tdim Dimt Imtd Mtdi	N	NULA
North	Aanaa	Anaa Naaa Aaan Aana	U	ULAN

Invocation of the Twelfth Day: Dispositors of Transporting

You sixteen Dispositors who stand above the arms of the southern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in transporting from place to place, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Utpa, Tpau, Paut and Autp, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross LANU, and in the name of God particular to your office, Eutpa.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Phra, Hrap, Raph and Aphr, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross ANUL, and in the name of God particular to your office, Ephra.

You four lights of understand and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the western part of the world, Tdim, Dimt, Imtd and Mtdi, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross NULA, and in the name of God particular to your office, Atdim.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Anaa, Naaa, Aaan and Aana, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross ULAN, and in the name of God particular to your office, Aanaa.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the arts of transporting from place to place, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE THIRTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Dispositors	From the Cross
			letter	name
East	Hcnbr	Cnbr Nbrc Brcn Rcnb	A	ACMU
South	Hroan	Roan Oanr Anro Nroa	C	CMUA
West	Pmagl	Magl Aglm Glma Lmag	M	MUAC
North	Ppsac	Psac Sacp Acps Cpsa	U	UACM

Invocation of the Thirteenth Day: Dispositors of the Sciences

You sixteen Dispositors who stand above the arms of the northern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the mechanical arts and sciences, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Cnbr, Nbrc, Brcn and Rcnb, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross ACMU, and in the name of God particular to your office, Hcnbr.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Roan, Oanr, Anro and Nroa, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross CMUA, and in the name of God particular to your office, Hroan.

You four lights of understand and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the western part of the world, Magl, Aglm, Glma and Lmag, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross MUAC, and in the name of God particular to your office, Pmagl.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Psac, Sacp, Acps and Cpsa, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross UACM, and in the name of God particular to your office, Ppsac.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the mechanical arts and sciences, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE FOURTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Ruling Name	Dispositors	From the Cross
			letter	name
East	Hxgzd	Xgzd Gzdx Zdxg Dxgz	A	ASIR
South	Hiaom	Iaom Aomi Omia Miao	S	SIRA
West	Pnlrx	Nlrx Lrxn Rxnl Xnlr	I	IRAS
North	Pziza	Ziza Izaz Zazi Aziz	R	RASI

Invocation of the Fourteenth Day: Dispositors of Secrets

You sixteen Dispositors who stand above the arms of the western lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the discovery of human secrets, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Xgzd, Gzdx, Zdxg and Dxgz, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross ASIR, and in the name of God particular to your office, Hxgzd.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Iaom, Aomi, Omia and Miao, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross SIRA, and in the name of God particular to your office, Hiaom.

You four lights of understand and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the western part of the world, Nlrx, Lrxn, Rxnl and Xnlr, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross IRAS, and in the name of God particular to your office, Pnlrx.

You four lights of understanding and truth who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, standing above the arms of the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Ziza, Izaz, Zazi and Aziz, I call upon you in the fourfold name of the cross RASI, and in the name of God particular to your office, Pziza.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the arts of discovering human secrets, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE FIFTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Invoking & Commanding	Good Angels	Invoking & Commanding	Evil Angels
East	IDOIGO	Cz(o)ns	OGIODI	Xcz
		To(i)tt		Ato
	ARDZA	Si(g)as	AZDRA	Rsi
		Fm(o)nd		Pfm
South	ANGPOI	Ai(g)ra	IOPGNA	Xai
		Or(p)mn		Aor
	UNNAX	Rs(o)ni	XANNU	Rrs
		Iz(i)nr		Piz
West	OLGOTA	Ta(g)co	ATOGLO	Mta
		Nh(o)dd		Onh
	OALCO	Pa(t)ax	OCLAO	Cpa
		Sa(a)iz		Hsa
North	NOALMR	Op(a)mn	RMLAON	Mop
		Ap(l)st		Oap
	OLOAG	Sc(m)io	GAOLO	Csc
		Va(r)sg		Hua

Invocation of the Fifteenth Day: Angels of Medicine

You sixteen good angels who stand beneath the arms of the eastern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the teaching of medicine and the curing of diseases, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, serving the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Czns, Tott, Sias and Fmnd, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Idoigo, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Ardza, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Czons, Toitt, Sigas and Fmond.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, serving the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Aira, Ormn, Rsni and Iznr, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Angpoi, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Unnax, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Aigra, Orpmn, Rsoni and Izinr.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, serving the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the western part of the world, Taco, Nhdd, Paax and Saiz, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Olgota, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Oalco, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Tagco, Nhodd, Patax and Saaiz.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, serving the lesser cross of the east, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Opmn, Apst, Scio and Vasg, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Noalmr, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Oloag, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Opamn, Aplst, Scmio and Varsg.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the practice of curing diseases, injuries and infirmities, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE SIXTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Invoking & Commanding	Good Angels	Invoking & Commanding	Evil Angels
East	LLACZA	Oy(a)ub	AZCALL	Xoy
		Pa(c)oc		Apa
	PALAM	Rb(z)nh	MALAP	Rrb
		Di(a)ri		Pdi
South	ANEEM	Om(a)gg	MEEANA	Xom
		Gb(e)al		Agb
	SONDN	Rl(e)mu	NDNOS	Rrl
		Ia(m)hl		Pia
West	NELAPR	Ma(l)gm	RPALEN	Mma
		Le(a)oc		Ole
	OMEBB	Us(p)sn	BBEMO	Cus
		Ru(r)oi		Hru
North	VADALI	Gm(d)nm	ILADAV	Mgm
		Ec(a)op		Oec
	OBAUA	Am(l)ox	AUABO	Cam
		Br(i)ap		Hbr

Invocation of the Sixteenth Day: Angels of Metals and Stones

You sixteen good angels who stand beneath the arms of the southern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the finding and working of metals and precious stones, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, serving the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Oyub, Paoc, Rbnh and Diri, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Llacza, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Palam, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Oyaub, Pacoc, Rbznh and Diari.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, serving the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Omgg, Gbal, Rlmu and Iahl, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Anaeem, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Sondn, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Omagg, Gbeal, Rlemu and Iamhl.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, serving the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the western part of the world, Magm, Leoc, Ussn and Ruoi, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Nelapr, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Omebb, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Malgm, Leaoc, Uspsn and Ruroi.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, serving the lesser cross of the south, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Gmnm, Ecop, Amox and Brap, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Vadali, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Obaua, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Gmdnm, Ecaop, Amlox and Briap.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the discovery and use of metals and precious stones, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE SEVENTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Invoking & Commanding	Good Angels	Invoking & Commanding	Evil Angels
East	AIAOAI	Ab(a)mo	IAOAIA	Cab
		Na(o)co		Ona
	OIIIT	Oc(a)nm	TIHO	Moc
		Sh(i)al		Ash
South	CBALPT	Op(a)na	TPLABC	Cop
		Do(l)op		Odo
	ARBIZ	Rx(p)ao	ZIBRA	Mrx
		Ax(t)ir		Aax
West	MALADI	Pa(l)co	IDALAM	Rpa
		Nd(a)zn		And
	OLAAD	Ii(d)po	DAALO	Xii
		Xr(i)nh		Exr
North	VOLXDO	Da(l)tt	ODXLOV	Rda
		Di(x)om		Adi
	SIODA	Oo(d)pz	ADOIS	Xoo
		Rg(o)an		Erg

Invocation of the Seventeenth Day: Angels of Transformation

You sixteen good angels who stand beneath the arms of the northern lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the transformation of forms, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, serving the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Abmo, Naco, Ocnm and Shal, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Aiaoai, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Oiiit, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Abamo, Naoco, Ocanm and Shial.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, serving the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Opna, Doop, Rxao and Axir, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Cbalpt, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Arbiz, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Opana, Dolop, Rxpao and Axtir.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, serving the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the western part of the world, Paco, Ndzn, Iipo and Xrnh, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Maladi, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Olaad, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Palco, Ndazn, Iidpo and Xrinh.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, serving the lesser cross of the north, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Datt, Diom, Oopz and Rgan, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Volxdo, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Sioda, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Daltt, Dixom, Oodpz and Rgoan.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the transformation of forms, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

ANGELS OF THE EIGHTEENTH DAY
Quarter	Invoking & Commanding	Good Angels	Invoking & Commanding	Evil Angels
East	AOURRZ	Ac(u)ca Np(r)at	ZRRUOA	Cac Onp
	ALOAI	Ot(r)oi Pm(z)ox	IAOLA	Mot Apm
South	SPMNIR	Ms(m)al Ia(n)ba	RINMPS	Cms Oia
	ILPIZ	Iz(i)xp St(r)im	ZIPLI	Miz Ast
West	IAAASD	Xp(a)cn Va(a)sa	DSAAAI	Rxp Ava
	ATAPA	Da(s)pi Rn(d)il	APATA	Xda Ern
North	RZIONR	Ad(i)re Si(o)sp	RNOIZR	Rad Asi
	NRZFM	Pa(n)li Ac(r)ar	MFZRN	Xpa Eac

Invocation of the Eighteenth Day: Angels of the Elements

You sixteen good angels who stand beneath the arms of the western lesser crosses of the four Watchtowers and are potent and skilled in the knowledge and use of the four elements and the elementals that dwell in them, in the name of God who is both one and three, I _____ call upon you to manifest yourselves.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the East, serving the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the eastern part of the world, Acca who inhabits the air and understands the qualities and uses of the air and its Sylphs, Npat who inhabits the water and understands the qualities and uses of the water and its Undines, Otoi who inhabits the earth and understands the qualities and uses of the earth and its Gnomes, and Pmox who inhabits the living fire and understands the qualities and uses of fire and its Salamanders, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Aourrz, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Aloai, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Acuca, Nprat, Otroi and Pmzox.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the South, serving the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the southern part of the world, Msal who inhabits the air and understands the qualities and uses of the air and its Sylphs, Iaba who inhabits the water and understands the qualities and uses of the water and its Undines, Izxp who inhabits the earth and understands the qualities and uses of the earth and its Gnomes, and Stim who inhabits the living fire and understands the qualities and uses of the fire and its Salamanders, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Spmnir, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Ilpiz, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Msmal, Ianba, Izixp and Strim.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the West, serving the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the western part of the world, Xpcn who inhabits the air and understands the qualities and uses of the air and its Sylphs, Vasa who inhabits the water and understands the qualities and uses of the water and its Undines, Dapi who inhabits the earth and understands the qualities and uses of the earth and its Gnomes, and Rnil who inhabits the living fire and understands the qualities and uses of the fire and its Salamanders, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Iaaasd, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Atapa, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Xpacn, Vaasa, Daspi and Rndil.

You four good angels of light who dwell in the Watchtower of the North, serving the lesser cross of the west, and have your office in the northern part of the world, Adre who inhabits the air and understands the qualities and uses of the air and its Sylphs, Sisp who inhabits the water and understands the qualities and uses of the water and its Undines, Pali who inhabits the earth and understands the qualities and uses of the earth and its Gnomes, and Acar who inhabits the living fire and understands the qualities and uses of the fire and its Salamanders, I call upon you in the sixfold name of the pillar of your cross, Rzionr, that you show yourselves and manifest perceptibly to my awareness; I command you in the fivefold name of the beam of your cross, Nrzfm, to fulfill all my stated purposes that fall within the function of your office. And when the need for your services is extreme, your names shall be expressed Adire, Siosp, Panli and Acrar.

I say to you all, descend through the gates I have prepared for your passage and dwell with me in harmony. Be manifest unto my senses in what manner, and with what words, and at what time I call you, so that I may magnify the name of God among you. Be my teachers and guides in the knowledge, command and use of the four elements and the four classes of elemental creatures, and discharge faithfully and in a perfect manner whatever service I require of you that falls within your appointed office. Be a light and comfort unto me, for I am the true servant of the Highest, who is the light of heaven and the comfort of the world. Amen. Amen. Amen.

Orison of the Nineteenth Day

O Lord of Hosts, is there any creature that measures the heavens, that is mortal? Can a frail and fearful vessel of flesh lift itself up, heave up its hands, or gather the Sun to its bosom? How shall I therefore ascend into the spheres? The air will not carry me, but mocks my folly. I fall down, for I am the clay of the earth. How, therefore, can the light of heaven enter into man's imagination?

Notwithstanding, I am comforted. In your name I am become mighty. You who are the light of truth and savior of the world can, and shall, and do, command the heavens and all its hosts as it pleases you. I require nothing but by you, and through you, for your greater honor and glory. What it pleases you to offer me, I receive. Behold, I pledge my possessions, my labor, my heart and soul for the fulfillment of this work.

These consecrated tables, shaped and prepared according to your will, I offer up to you and to your holy angels, desiring their attendance in and through your names of power. Command them as you will, O Lord. May it please your angels to dwell with me, that I may dwell with them; to rejoice with me, that I may rejoice with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnify your name. As you are their light and comfort, so they will be my light and comfort; as they receive what it pleases you to offer, so I will receive what it pleases them to offer; as they prescribe no laws to you, so shall I prescribe no laws to them. Yet when I call upon them in your name, O Lord, be it unto me in mercy as unto the servant of the Highest.

I am become a seer in the light of your countenance. I see your shining angels and magnify your name among them. Adonai Sabaoth, I _____ call upon the power of your name. In the power of your mighty name this work of invocation is well and truly fulfilled. Amen. Amen. Amen.

Appendix B

The Vision of the Round House

Monday, January 14, 1585, at Prague

Kelley: Here is, Dee, one with a Vail afore his face, as it were, a Hair Cloth of Ash-colour: I know him not yet: I see a Garden full of fruit, of divers sorts. In the midst of it is a place higher then the rest. On that place standeth a round House, it hath four corners [within] and 4 Windows: and every Window is round, and hath 4 round partitions, round also. It hath 4 Doores, and at the East Door is one step, at the South 2 steps, and at the North 3, and at the West Door, 4 steps: The first Door is white, like Chrystal, transparent: The South Door is red of an high colour, transparent. The North Door is bright black, not to be through seen, as the rest. The West is green, like an Emerauld Stone: So is the South Door like a Ruby. The Doores be all plain. The House within (as it may be judged by the transparent Doores) seemeth to be white, and empty.

He that hath his face covered, openeth the East Door; and all the House seemeth to be on fire, like a furnace. The fire within doth weve, and move about the House, and by the roofe. Now he openeth the West Door, and there appeareth, as if all the House were a fountain full of water. And there run divers streames, in the same one water, whereof, one doth go and come, as if it ebbed and flowed; which stream doth go about all the rest, by the sides of the House, that is, as if it were the Ocean sea compassing the World. The next stream, within that, moveth from the 4 sides ward, and make (in manner) 4 Triangles, or rather Cones, of water, whose vertices rest cut off (as it were) by the middle stream of water which occupieth the middle or Center of the House, and is in circular form invironed.

An other manner of stream there is, which commeth from the 4 corners of an innermost square: and so run diametraliter or contradictorie wise, toward that circular middle stream.

The middle stream seemeth to issue out at the very Center of the place, and to mount up, and making an arch of his course, doth seem to fall circulariter in one circumference.

Kelley: The fire also had diversity in it.

Dee: I would you had noted the diversity of the fires also.

Levanael: Those that learn truly, learn by parts.

Kelley: The colour of the water in the Center, is most pure white.

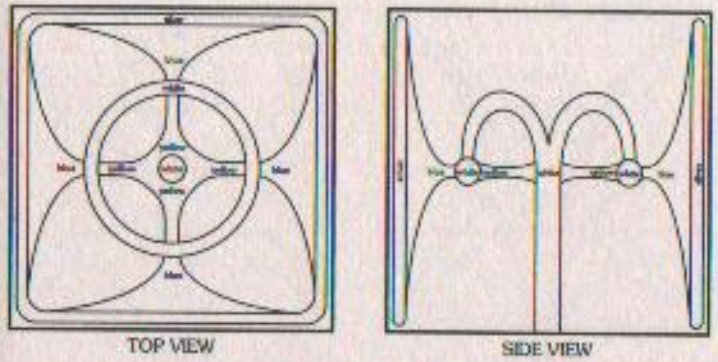
The waters of that Saint Andrews Crosse, are like a water somewhat Saffronish coloured. The waters of the Triangles, are somewhat like a watrish blew, which appeareth most, in the top of the arches of their flowing:

For all spring otherwise.

The uttermost water, is of Quick-silver shew, as if it were somewhat mortified.

Dee: In the figure following, you may gather a better and more easie understanding of this Description of the water streams.

Casaubon's Marginal Note: Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure. (I have inserted my own illustrations into the voids in Dee's manuscript—D.T.)



Currents of Water in the Round House

Kelley: Now he openeth the Fire Door againe: And the fire appeareth in a square place. And there appeare 4 fires filling the whole place, leaving nothing vaccuum.

One of these fires seemeth to rise from the Center of the place; and to go in low arches to the 4 corners of the House.

The House seemeth to have 14 foot long in every side.

The arches of these fires seem to come from a trunk of fire, which riseth from about the Center: and seemeth to be 4 foot over in the Diameter.

This Trunk seemeth to be high three quarters of the height of the place; The place seemeth to be as high as it is broad.

On the top of this fiery trunk, seemeth the fire to be in form of a fiery Globe, having 6 foot, his Diameter, which fire reverberateth and rolleth in it self.

From the sides of the Trunk (between the said Globe and the foresaid Arches,) goeth up fire Triangularly, filling all; saving that which remaineth filled, by the flames of fire, which ariseth from the Globe to the 4 corners of the House, filling all the place above the Globe.

Dee: As by the figure annexed, more plainly may appear.

Casaubon's Marginal Note: Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure.

Currents of Fire in the Round House

Kelley: Note The colour of the fire of the 4 arches, is very red; The rest are very pure, Aerial, candent, etc.

The Motion of the trunk fire is swiftest.

The Original Center of all these fires, seemeth to be very little.

Now he openeth the red Door.

The House seemeth darkish, of colour of the smoak of a Wax Candle being put out.

Levanael: By it self, it is not, but by the Sunne, it is clear.

Kelley: It hath 4 motions in it also: every one moving more swiftly then the other: All from the middle of the House. Three of them move arch-wise to the sides.

The first and second arise to half the height of the place.

The third occupieth the other half.

The fourth goeth upright to the top of the House.

The second his space (that he striketh against on the Wall) is doubled to the space of the Wall, against which the first smiteth.

Casaubon's Marginal Note: Here is a blank, or void space in the Original Copie: but no figure.

Currents of Air in the Round House

Kelley: Now he openeth the black bright Door; and the House there seemeth full of black dust, like Gun-powder colour, or somewhat of Leadish colour.

Now he seemeth to goe down, faire and softly from the House, down the little Hill, and from thence goeth by a water side, to a Rockish Mountain.

He speaketh.

Levanael: Ascend. I am now ready for you: Bring out your Mattocks, Spades, and Shovels. Enig è veri eri.

Kelley: Now come out of that Rock, seven lean men, with Spades, and Shovels, and Mattocks, etc.

Levanael: Follow me.

Kelley: Now they be come up to the foresaid Hill.

Levanael: Come on, Dig till you finde.

Kelley: Every one standeth distinctly one from another, and they dig on the foresaid Hill, which before seemed covered with Earth and Grasse: But now it appeareth to be a Rock, and they dig that the Fire flieth out again of their stroakes, and some have broken their Mattocks, some their Spades, all except two, one with a Shovel, an other with a Pickax.

Workmen: O Lord we labour in vain.

Levanael: So you are sure to do, unlesse you have better Tooles.

Workmen: Alas we labour in vain.

One of them: This is long of you.

Levanael: I had you provide Instruments to labour with, but you asked not me, wherein you should labour. Therefore have you digged away that which you saw, and have repulse with that you know not.

A dark man thou art, and hidden away from men, and so are thy doings.

Kelley: They stood gazing one on another.

Levanael: Have you not better Instruments? Go, provide your selves, and return.

Kelley: They runne a great pace to the foresaid Rocky Cave from whence they came out first. Now they come againe with great Beetles of Iron, and Wedges. They knock their Wedges (as we use in Wood) and so break off great Slakes of Stone, like Slate, and throw it down the Hill.

One of them: What a thing is this, that this Wedg is broken?

Another: We are in worse case then ever we were.

Kelley: Their Wedges are broken, the most part, and the Fire flieth out of the Stone in great abundance.

Levanael: The nature of this Stone is not to cleave: Therefore if you have no other Instruments you must cease.

Kelley: They are in great disquietness among themselves.

Levanael: Those that go a Journey, provide them Cloathes against all weathers: He that is worthy of the Name of a Conqueror, carrieth with him all Engines: Where the Bridges be broken down, he stayeth not, because he is prepared: Behold, he hath victuals for time to come, and his Study is as well the event, as is the mean. So should true Labourers do: considering what they work in. For the Earth is a Monster with many faces: and the receptacle of all variety. Go home, stand not idle. Provide by Arts for the hardnesse of Nature, for the one Sifter weepeth without the other.

Kelley: They go away speedily.

Levanael: They have their Tooles to harden, and their Steeles to temper. It will be more than an hour space before they return. Therefore may you spend the time in your necessity, and use the time of day as you are acquainted or wonted. I also must over-see them, or else their labour will be without fruit.

Kelley: Now he is gone.

Dee's note: The same day, after dinner we returned to our former purpose for God his Service, to his Honour and Glory.

Kelley: He is here. Now the Labourers be comming out; They have Wedges made long and sharp: and Pickaxes with three pikes very short.

Workers: Our trust is, that these tool will serve.

Kelley: They fall to work. They make like square holes, and put in their wedges, and break up the rock or blackish stone (like yron-mine, or Magnes stone) in roundish lumps as big as a two-peny loaf, about two or three inches thick. They pick or dig round about the hole first, and so after use their wedges. The Pickaxes have three heads, each pick thereof bigger then the other. The first is as big as one finger: the second as two: the third as broad as four fingers. And so after the first digging they fetch three or four cakes or pieces out of one hole, and then they go to another. Now one of them is faln into the ground, up to the arm-pits. Now another is faln in, to the knees. Now the house standing thereon beginneth to shake, and waver from one side to the other. Now the men be gotten out of the holes they stuck in.

Levanael: Make an end of your labour.

One of the Workman to the Guide: It behoveth you to find a remedy, or to let us understand what remedy we shall finde, that you may descend thence: for lo, the peril you stand in, is great: for this Rock was nothing else but a shell, whose kernel is a bottomlesse lake, and a myre quickened with some shut up water.

Levanael: You come hither as Labourers, therefore make an end of your work, and stand not idle. If the house, fall, and I sink, then is your labour at an end. For the end of your labour is the fulfilling of my will, and the promise which you have made me.

One of them: We are ready to do our promise; but we are more ready to provide that you may be amongst us; so you may be free from danger.

Levanael: O you of little wit; are you not ashamed? which of you have dwelt within the secrets of this Hill? yea, which of you intendeth to fulfil his promise? Judge not a thing whereof you have no skill, neither be slack in that you have to do: for the one hath his reward of idlenesse, and the other is condemned of rashnesse: For why? It springeth on her mother ignorance.

They say: If we work, it is against reason. Neither do our tools answer to this labour. Therefore we had rather be idle, then to labour about nothing: for to labour in vain, is to do nothing.

If we were determined to work, how should we perform out determination, since the Instruments of working want?

Levanael: Gather up the pieces of your spades, that is wood, and may be joyned together: The older and the baser they are, the fitter they are to turn up such soile.

Kelley: There commeth a Smith by with a budget full of nails.

One of them to the Smith: What hast thou there?

Smith: Nails.

Kelley: They be like Horshooe-nails.

Levanael: Thou cam'st in good time, leave thy nails behind thee, and at thy return I will pay thee for them. See, God is not unmindful of us, for nails are the fittest things to further your work. Joyn therefore your spades and shovels together, and labour.

Kelley: Now they are mending their spades and shovels, the iron of them being all off and broken.

Now they work, and throw away the earth like durty sand, and the skurf of the earth sticketh to their spades and shovels.

One goeth behinde, and maketh a trench to let the water out from the sand.

One of them: How now! Have we found harvest in the midst of winter?

Levanael: Why: what have you there?

One of them: Marry, either Alablaster or Salt.

Kelley: Now one of them knocketh a piece off with his shovel-end, and reacheth it up to his Guide.

Levanael: Did I not tell you, that the Earth hath many faces?

Kelley: They work now easily, and cut up like Salt or Alablaster.

Now they have digged all the hill away, even to the house. Now the house seemeth builded upon that white stuff.

One of them: If we dig any further, we shall undermine the house.

Levanael: Go to your business.

Kelley: They work.

Levanael: Soft, soft. Now labour with your hands as softly as may be. Stand aside.

Kelley: Now he taketh one of the irons of their spades, and seemeth himself to pare the sides of the Foundation under the house, and it seemeth to be a vessel of transparent glasse, and having fire within it.

Levanael: The fear of the Lord is a burning fire, consumeth not, but rectifieth the body; the old dross it wipeth away, and the daily influxion of the flesh and sin it separateth from the soul.

Behold (I say) he liveth not, but unto whom life is given: neither is their any joy, but it is ascending; for the end of joy is glory; but glory is the consummation of desire, and the beginning of felicity. No man entereth into joy, but by life: neither is there any life, but in the fear of God.

Whosoever therefore hath the fear of God, let him draw neer, and come hither. Number exceedeth not, but by unities. Neither is there any multiplication but by order. For the root of number is one. And things that ascend are dignified by order. Out of this vessel go four vents ascending into that Rock, which is the Root, which is this building.

It is said, Behold: let my spirit enter in, let there be Separation made within the house of the North, that the earth may be divided into her members. Cursed be that body, that is not divided, according to proportion, answering to the Division. For she hath yet not cast off the shape of darknesse.

Kelley: There runneth up fire into the house, from out of the round glasse vessel under the foundation of the house. And that fire maketh a great noise (through the black bright or marble door to be hard only.) Now that North door is mightily thrown open, and there appear in the house like kernels of apples, and slime appeareth, and water thinner then slime, and there appeareth pure water, else. Now there commeth together stuff like yellow earth, which the fire wrought out of the black earth: And the pure water runneth into that yellow stuff.

Levanael: Of that take a part.

Kelley: The fire returneth back again among the stuff in that house, and there appear of all Creatures some.

Levanael: Here is Creation, and it is the first.

Kelley: Now he taketh a lump of the earth lying by, which was thrown up, and he breaketh it into six pieces like round Balls.

He taketh a thing like a vessel of iron, and putteth into it that mixture of yellow earth and water. And it looketh now like grasse mingled with water.

Levanael: Thou art strong, and wilt beget a strong Child.

Kelley: Now he putteth out the earth which he put in, and it is a lump of gold. He giveth it him that standeth by.

Levanael: So are the seeds of the earth.

Kelley: Now he taketh the second, and putteth it in.

Levanael: Corruption is a thief, for he hath robbed thee of thy best Ornaments, for thou art weaker in the second.

Kelley: He taketh it out, and it is as if it were pure silver.

Levanael: Where there is double theft, poverth insueth. But, notwithstanding, Thou art true; for thou givest unto every thing as much as he desireth: Thou openest the greatest hability and strength of thy power, not such as it hath been, but such as it is.

Kelley: Now he putteth in the third Ball.

Levanael: Thou must tarry, for thou art of an harder digestion, since thou art the third, Content thy self, for thou art not an Inheritor.

Kelley: He taketh it out, and giveth unto one of them that standeth by, that is a red metal like copper.

Now he taketh up another of the Balls, and holdeth it in his hand.

Levanael: Behold, thy mother, Heat is gone, and the enemy of life entreth; for he that passeth his middle age, decayeth, and draweth to an end.

Behold, thou shalt find a Step-mother, for thou cam'st out of time.

Kelley: Now he putteth it into the vessel.

Levanael: Let cold cover thy face, let the North truly beget thee, for thou art an enemy to thy predecessors. But thou are of great vertue, for of thy excrement shall vertue receive dignity. And thy vertue shall be a garland to Nature; for thou shalt be visible when the other are silent: the Seas shall not hinder thy vertue, notwithstanding, thy vertue shall differ with the Seas: For as they differ, so shalt thou.

Kelley: Now he taketh it out. It is a ragged thing like Smiths cynder of iron, and it hath holes in it, as if it were spongy.

Now he taketh up another Ball of the earth: he putteth it in.

Levanael: Thou are tractable and like unto an obedient daughter: But thou shalt be the fifth in the second and an Instrument to the first.

Kelley: Now he taketh it out, it is like unto a white whetstone, as he shaped it at the putting in, it is like Tynne.

Now he taketh up another Ball, and putteth it in.

Levanael: Thou art the last that hath in himself and by himself his being: Behold thy face is like unto wax, but thy inward bowels are like unto the anger of a Serpent: Many shall have thee, but shall not know thee.

One of them by said: Will you give me nothing?

Kelley: A great cloud covereth them all, the stone and all.[1]

Notes

Chapter One

1. Casaubon, Meric. A True & Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee (A Mathematician of Great Fame in Q. Eliz. and King James their Reignes) and Some Spirits: Tending (had it Succeeded) To a General Alteration of most STATES and KINGDOMES in the World. London: 1659. Reprinted in facsimile by The Antonine Publishing Co., Glasgow, 1974, page 174.

   This work is a reproduction of a portion of Dee's magical diaries, along with plates of some of the more important Enochian symbols such as the Table of Practice and the Golden Talisman. It should be noted that the pagination in this work is faulty. The pages jump (for no obvious reason) from 256 to 353, and continue at this higher level. I have adhered to the page numbering that appears in the original.

2. Ibid., p. 184.

3. Ibid., p. 145.

4. Ibid., p. 64.

5. Ibid., pp. 159–160.

6. For an example of a typical book of spirits, see Francis Barrett's The Magus (London: 1801), the plate facing page 105 of Book II.

7. True and Faithful Relation, p. 184.

8. Ibid.

9. Ibid., p. 189.

10. See references to the importance of Monday in the Enochian communications in A True and Faithful Relation, pp. 23 and 114.

11. Ibid., pp. 145-6.

12. Ibid., p. 161.

13. Ibid., p. 394.

14. Ibid., p. 373.

15. Ibid., p. 61.

16. Ibid., p. 209.

Chapter Two

1. Deacon, Richard. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent of Elizabeth I. London: Frederick Muller, 1968, pp. 15–16. Deacon is quoting from Dee's Compendious Rehearsall.

2. Ibid., p. 4.

3. Ibid., p. 3.

4. Smith, Charlotte Fell. John Dee: 1527–1608. London: Constable and Company, 1909, pp. 23-4.

5. Ibid., p. 77.

6. Ibid.

7. Waite, Arthur Edward. The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly. London: James Elliott & Co., 1893, pp. xvi-xix. Concerning Waite's account of the finding of the powders, Charlotte Fell Smith commented that it was "largely an imaginary story based upon Lenglet du Fresnoy's (1742) and Louis Figuier's in L'Alchemie et les Alchemistes (Paris, 1856)." (John Dee: 1527–1608, pp. 77–78, note 1)

8. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., p. 132.

9. Ashmole, Elias. Theatrum Chemicum Britannicum. London: 1652, p. 481.

10. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 77.

11. Unpublished manuscript. British Library, Sloane MS. 3188, fol. 9.

12. Halliwell, James Orchard, ed. The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee. London: Camden Society, 1842, p. 11.

13. Ibid., p. 12.

14. Private Diary, p. 11.

15. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 68.

16. Private Diary, p. 13.

17. John Dee: 1527–1608, pp. 68–69.

18. Private Diary, p. 14.

19. Ibid., pp. 14–15.

Chapter Three

1. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 28–29.

2. Ibid., p. 30.

3. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., p. 168.

4. Ibid.

5. Ibid.

6. True and Faithful Relation, p. 30.

7. Ibid., p. 31.

8. Ibid., p. 231.

9. Ibid., p. 396.

10. True and Faithful Relation, p. 396.

11. Ibid., p. 9 of the Actio Tertia section.

12. Ibid., p. 11.

13. Ibid., p. 12.

14. Ibid., p. 13.

15. Ibid., p. 20.

16. Ibid., p. 21.

17. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 202. See also Casaubon, p. 32, the marginal note.

18. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., p. 274.

19. True and Faithful Relation, p. 164.

Chapter Four

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 20 of the Actio Tertia section.

2. Ibid., p. 11.

3. Ibid., p. 161.

4. Liber Scientiae et Victoriae Terrestris is part of British Museum manuscript Sloane 3191. It is entirely in Latin, written in Dee's own hand.

5. James, Geoffrey. The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee. Minnesota: Llewellyn Publications, 1994, pp. 1-2.

6. True and Faithful Relation, p. 170.

7. Ibid., p. 145.

8. Ibid., p. 146.

9. Ibid., p. 188.

10. Ibid., p. 82.

11. Ibid., p. 396.

Chapter Five

1. John Dee: 1527-1608, p. 80.

2. True and Faithful Relation, the 44th page in the unpaginated Preface.

3. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc, p. 275.

4. True and Faithful Relation, 44th page in the Preface.

5. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., p. 274.

6. Ibid., p. 275.

7. John Dee: 1527-1608, p. 82.

8. French, Peter. John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus [1972]. London: Ark Paperbacks, 1987, p. 13. Ashmole's epitome of Enochian magic is preserved in the Bodleian manuscript Ashmole 1790.

9. Crowley, Aleister. The Confessions of Aleister Crowley [1969]. London: Arkana Books, 1989, p. 387.

10. Ibid., p. 618.

11. Ibid., p. 612.

12. Crowley, Aleister. The Book of the Law [1904; first published 1937]. Quebec: 93 Publishing, pp. 10-1 (this is on pages 2–3 of ch. 1 of Crowley's manuscript version).

13. Ibid., p. 37 (manuscript p. 5 of ch. 2).

14. Tyson, Donald. Tetragrammaton. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1995, p. 231.

15. Book of the Law, pp. 47-8 (ms. pp. 15-6 of ch. 2).

16. Ibid., p. 57 (ms. p. 1, ch. 3).

17. Ibid., p. 61 (ms. p. 5, ch. 3).

18. Tetragrammaton, pp. 230–231.

19. Book of the Law, p. 70 (ms. p. 14, ch. 3).

20. Ibid., p. 22 (ms. p. 14, ch. 1).

21. Ibid., p. 72 (ms. p. 16, ch. 3).

22. Denning, Melita & Osborne Phillips. Mysteria Magica. Book V of the Magical Philosophy. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1981, pp. 174-250.

Chapter Six

1. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., the second plate following p. 214.

2. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 69.

3. Ibid., p. 72.

4. The Enochian Magick, p. 26.

5. Ibid., p. 27.

6. Ibid.

7. Turner, Robert. The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee [1983]. Wellingborough: The Aquarian Press, 1986, p. 76.

8. Tyson, Donald. Three Books of Occult Philosophy Written by Henry Cornelius Agrippa. St. Paul: Llewellyn, 1993, pp. 477, 482.

9. The Enochian Magick, p. 29.

10. Heptarchia Mystica, pp. 80–81 (see also Smith, p. 63).

11. Ibid., p. 80.

12. True and Faithful Relation, p. 231.

13. Ibid., p. 382.

14. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 72.

15. The Heptarchia Mystica, p. 102.

16. Ibid., p. 82.

17. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 74.

18. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 87.

19. Laycock, Donald C. The Complete Enochian Dictionary. London: Askin Publishers, 1978, p. 36. Laycock is quoting from Kelley's manuscript version of Liber Logaeth, which is British Library Sloane MS 3189.

20. John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus, p. 116.

21. True and Faithful Relation, p. 172.

22. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 92.

23. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 88.

24. McLean, Adam. A Treatise On Angel Magic. Grand Rapids: Phanes Press, 1990, pp. 30-40.

25. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 25.

26. The Enochian Magick, p. 37.

27. Ibid., p. 36.

28. Complete Enochian Dictionary, p. 24. See also French, p. 117.

29. Occult Philosophy, p. 532.

30. John Dee: 1527–1608, p. 73.

31. John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, etc., p. 226.

32. Occult Philosophy, p. 553.

33. The Enochian Magick, p. 40.

34. Ibid., p. 32.

35. The Enochian Magick, p. 29. See also Turner, p. 40.

36. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 35.

37. The Enochian Magick, p. 32.

38. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 44.

Chapter Seven

1. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 92–93.

2. The Enochian Magick, pp. 11–12.

3. Complete Enochian Dictionary, p. 27.

4. Liber Logaeth is preserved in British Museum MS Sloane 3189.

5. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 102.

6. Complete Enochian Dictionary, p. 44.

7. Ibid., p 43.

8. Regardie, Israel. The Golden Dawn. St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1989, (6th edition), pp. 629–630.

9. Ibid., p. 650.

10. Ibid.

11. Ibid., p. 669.

12. Complete Enochian Dictionary, pp. 45–47, 59–62, 66–67.

Chapter Eight

1. Tetragrammaton, Appendix A.

2. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 95–96.

3. Ibid., p. 81.

4. Ibid., p. 103.

5. The Enochian Magick, p. 184.

6. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 84.

7. Ibid., pp. 61-2.

8. Ibid., p. 63.

9. Ibid.

Chapter Nine

1. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 59.

2. The Enochian Magick, p. 29.

3. Heptarchia Mystica, p. 50.

4. Ibid., p. 67. Dee is not explicit, saying only of this spirit: "thou preservest me (through the mercy of God) from the power of the wicked: and wast with me in extremity. Thou wast with me thoroughly." The reference is perhaps to the events of September 23, 1583. When Dee and Kelley were disembarking from a Danish flyboat into a small fishing boat, the rigging of the fishing boat became entangled with that of the flyboat and caused the lighter craft to take on water. Kelley bailed the boat using a gauntlet and was able to keep it from foudering in the rough sea until they made land at Queenborough, Kent (see Casaubon, p. 33). This incident took place a year after the reception of the Heptarchia, but perhaps the portion of Dee's manuscript that contains the reference to the spirit Mares was written at a later date.

Chapter Ten

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 77.

2. Ibid., p. 145.

3. Exodus 39.

4. These diagrams of the tribes in relation to the gates are reproduced in Geoffrey James' The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee, Llewellyn Publications, 1994, p. 103. James has reproduced them, in a slightly modified form, from Dee's manuscript Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which forms British Library document Sloane MS 3191.

5. Exodus 27:1.

6. Jung, C.G. Psychology and Alchemy. New Jersey: Princeton University Press, 1980, pp. 126–127.

7. The Enochian Magick, p. 11.

8. Ibid., pp. 1-2.

9. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 139–140.

10. Ibid., p. 231.

11. Ibid., p. 181.

Chapter Eleven

1. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 168–169.

2. Ibid., pp. 170–171.

3. Ibid., p. 92.

Chapter Twelve

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 172.

2. Psychology and Alchemy, p. 127.

3. True and Faithful Relation, p. 173.

4. True and Faithful Relation, p. 173.

5. Ibid., pp. 175–176.

6. Ibid., p. 177.

7. Ibid., p. 183.

8. Ibid., p. 355.

9. Ibid., p. 179

10. Ibid., p. 144.

11. Ibid., p. 179.

12. Ibid.

13. Ibid., pp. 13–16 of the "Actio Tertia" section.

Chapter Thirteen

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 184.

2. Ibid., p. 178.

3. The Enochian Magick, p. 120.

4. True and Faithful Relation, p. 178.

5. Tetragrammaton, pp. 223–224.

6. True and Faithful Relation, p. 61.

7. Ibid., p. 180.

8. Ibid., p. 181.

9. Ibid., p. 179.

10. Ibid., p. 181.

11. Ibid., p. 180.

12. Ibid.

13. Ibid., p. 180-181.

14. Ibid., p. 188.

15. Ibid., p. 184.

16. Ibid., p. 183.

17. Ibid., p. 184.

18. Ibid., p. 187.

Chapter Fourteen

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 78.

2. Ibid., p. 79.

3. Ibid.

4. Ibid., p. 81.

5. In British Library Sloane MS 3191. Dee has taken extreme care to reproduce both the Enochian language version (in Latin characters) and the English translation of the Keys in a meticulous printed script.

6. Complete Enochian Dictionary, p. 35.

7. It is my strong opinion that the direction in the Thirteenth Key should be west, not south. No mistake was made by Dee and Kelley in transcribing this word, because the English correctly matches the Enochian. "Babagen" does indeed mean south. However, as I have shown in my book Tetragrammaton (p. 219) this direction violates the sequence previously and subsequently adhered to in the Keys.

   Beginning with the Third Key, each Key is associated with a direction in four cycles around the Earth that being in the east and move clockwise: 3rd-east, 4th-south, 5th-west, 6th-north; 7th-east, 8th-south, 9th-west, 10th-north; 11th-east, 12th-south, 13th-west (should be), 14th-north; 15th-east, 16th-south, 17th-west, 18th-north.

   I advise anyone working with the Keys to change "Swords of the south" to "Swords of the north," and "babagen" to "sobel."

Chapter Fifteen

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 139–140.

2. Denning, Melita & Osborne Phillips. Mysteria Magica. St. Paul: Llewellyn Publications, 1981, p. 177.

3. True and Faithful Relation, p. 183.

4. Ibid., p. 188.

5. Enochian Magick, p. 116.

6. True and Faithful Relation, p. 153.

7. Ibid, p. 154.

8. Ibid., pp. 156–157.

9. Ibid., pp. 158–159.

10. Occult Philosophy, p. 97.

Chapter Sixteen

1. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 188–189.

2. Ibid., p. 184.

3. Ibid., p. 182.

4. Ibid., p. 188.

5. Ibid.

6. Ibid., pp. 196-7.

7. Three Books of Occult Philosophy, p. 300.

Chapter Seventeen

1. The Golden Dawn, p. 624, footnote 2.

2. Ibid., p. 625.

3. True and Faithful Relation, p. 179.

4. See Crowley, Aleister. The Vision and the Voice. Edited by Israel Regardie. Dallas: Sangreal Foundation, 1972. This material first appeared as a supplement to Volume 1, Number 5 of Crowley's periodical The Equinox.

5. The Golden Dawn, pp. 657–658.

6. Ibid., p. 656.

7. True and Faithful Relation, p. 181.

8. Golden Dawn, pp. 631–634.

9. Ibid., p. 638.

10. Ibid., pp. 643–644.

11. Ibid., p. 637.

12. Wang, Robert. The Secret Temple. York Beach: Samuel Weiser, 1980, the eighth plate and pages 85-8. This book is an excellent description of the ritual furniture and tools of the Golden Dawn. See also Golden Dawn, p. 657.

13. Golden Dawn, p. 659.

14. Ibid., p. 658.

15. Golden Dawn, p. 683.

Appendix A

1. True and Faithful Relation, p. 184.

Appendix B

1. True and Faithful Relation, pp. 355–359.

Free Magazine

Read unique articles by Llewellyn authors, recommendations by experts, and information on new releases. To receive a free copy of Llewellyn's consumer magazine, New Worlds of Mind & Spirit, simply call 1-877-NEW-WRLD or visit our website at www.llewellyn.com and click on New Worlds.

Llewellyn Ordering Information

Order Online:
Visit our website at www.llewellyn.com, select your books, and order them on our secure server.

Order by Phone:
- Call toll-free within the U.S. at 1-877-NEW-WRLD (1-877-639-9753). Call toll-free within Canada at 1-866-NEW-WRLD (1-866-639-9753)
- We accept VISA, MasterCard, and American Express

Order by Mail:
Send the full price of your order (MN residents add 7% sales tax) in U.S. funds, plus postage & handling to:
Llewellyn Worldwide
2143 Wooddale Drive, Dept. 0-56718-747-1
Woodbury, MN 55125-2989, U.S.A.

Postage & Handling:

Standard (U.S., Mexico, & Canada). If your order is:
$49.99 and under, add $3.00
$50.00 and over, FREE STANDARD SHIPPING

AK, HI, PR: $15.00 for one book plus $1.00 for each additional book.

International Orders (airmail only):
$16.00 for one book plus $3.00 for each additional book

Orders are processed within 2 business days.
Please allow for normal shipping time. Postage and handling rates subject to change.

ENOCHIAN WORLD OF ALEISTER CROWLEY

ENOCHIAN SEX MAGICK

BY

ALEISTER CROWLEY
LON MILO DUQUETTE
CHRISTOPHER S. HYATT, Ph.D.

Enochian World of Aleister Crowley

Enochian World of Aleister Crowley

Enochian Sex Magick

By Aleister Crowley
Lon Milo DuQuette
Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.

1991
New Falcon Publications
Scottsdale, AZ U.S.A.

COPYRIGHT © U.S.E.S.S. 1991

All rights reserved. No part of this book, in part or in whole, may be reproduced, transmitted, or utilized, in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher, except for brief quotations in critical articles, books and reviews.

International Standard Book Number: 1-56184-029-7

Library of Congress Catalog Card Number: 91-060791

First Edition 1991

NEW FALCON PUBLICATIONS
7025 E. 1st Ave. Suite 5
Scottsdale, Arizona 85251 U.S.A.
(602)246-3846

DEDICATION

TO

MASTER THERION

CONSTANCE AND JEAN-PAUL
GARY AND CINDY

FURTHER CONSPIRACIES !

If you would like to read further on the New Age Conspiracy to elevate Man's consciousness on this planet and elsewhere, get the following titles from your book dealer or order from New Falcon Publications directly:

Undoing Yourself With Energized Meditation
Secrets of Western Tantra
The Magickal Mind of Zarathustra
Secrets Of A Western Master (with Gary Ford)
All By Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.
The Ultimate Divination Enochian World of Aleister Crowley
A. Crowley, C.S. Hyatt, Ph.D. and L. DuQuette
The Complete Tarot System of Magick
Tarot Cards by L. DuQuette , illus. by D. Wilson Cosmic Trigger
Cosmic Trigger II
Quantum Psychology
All By Robert Anton Wilson
Little Essays Toward Truth
Equinox of The Gods
The Heart of The Master
Magick Without Tears
Eight Lectures On Yoga
The Law Is For All
Gems From The Equinox
By Aleister Crowley
Freedom Is A Two Edged Sword
By Jack Parsons
Info-Psychology
By Timothy Leary, Ph.D.
What You Should Know About The Golden Dawn
The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic
By Israel Regardie

To get your free catalog of all of our titles, write to:

NEW FALCON PUBLICATIONS
Catalog Dept.
7025 E. 1ST. Ave. Suite 5
SCOTTSDALE, AZ. 85251
U.S.A.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The authors wish to express their thanks to Gary Ford for his invaluable aid and brilliant contributions; to Nick Tharcher for Book and Type design; to David P. Wilson for Cover design and the execution of the Sex Magick Symbols.

New Falcon Publications would also like to express its thanks for the Cover Art and the Sex Magick Symbols which are from Mr. DuQuette's Complete Tarot System of Magick. The captions below the Sex Magick Symbols are the creation of Dr. Hyatt and Mr. DuQuette. Finally, we would like to express our gratitude to Rick Wardell for the photographs of Mr. DuQuette and Dr. Hyatt.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword..... 13

Introduction..... 15

Chapter One

A Short, Brief History (Abridged)..... 19

Chapter Two

Before We Start Let's Get Something Straight..... 21

Chapter Three

The Ten Minute Overview..... 25

Chapter Four

Comments On Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh.....31

Chapter Five

Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh..... 61

Chapter Six

Divine Eroticism..... 103

Chapter Seven

Techniques Of Enochian Sex Magick..... 109

Chapter Eight

The Enochian Dictionary 123

Chapter Nine

The Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram.....141

Appendix..... 145

Sex Magick Symbols..... 155

Foreword

By Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.

How do you know when you are really beginning to understand a subject?

When you come to the realization that it is basically much easier than you ever imagined.

For years I avoided an in-depth study of Enochian Magick, believing it to be not only too ponderous a task but also anachronistically irrelevant. I considered it a quaint dead-end of Elizabethan magic, elements of which have trickled down the centuries and lodged themselves in modem ceremonial magick.

I admit that I had a certain level of curiosity and fascination, especially when I saw the painted tablets and Enochian "chess" equipment that Israel Regardie would display on rare occasions to his friends. But the idea of actually taking the time to make sense of this collection of complex and fragmentary material was totally intimidating. And the thought of having to learn an "angelic language" did not thrill me at all. I was quite happy to file Enochian Magick in the same drawer of my mind where I keep "Secrets of Aztec Cardiology" and "Cooking with Barbed Wire." Then several years ago I was pleasantly disabused.

I had asked Crowley expert, Lon DuQuette, to write an epilogue for my book. Secrets of Western Tantra, (Falcon Press, 1989) and in the course of our discussion he asked me if I had ever utilized Enochian Angels for operations of Sex Magick. He was genuinely amused when I revealed my reasons for avoiding the subject and he suggested that if ever I wished to learn how to immediately perform Enochian Magick, I should simply read Crowley's Liber Chanokh and get started.

When I protested that I had read it, that in fact, it was included in Gems From The Equinox, (Falcon Press, 1982). He said, "then read it again, carefully, and this time assume that everything you need to know is right there in the text."

He continued. "It is much simpler than you think." He then encouraged me to call him if I ran into trouble.

His somewhat cavalier attitude was oddly reassuring, so I took some time that evening to reread Chanokh. I followed his advice and pretended it was the only book on the subject in the world. To my great surprise I discovered that everything seemed quite clear. Was this the same book that frustrated and confused me earlier? Did I all of a sudden become so much smarter? Questions that were raised by one sentence were answered in the next. The fundamentals of the system unfolded neatly before my eyes. In less than an hour, I felt perfectly competent to start basic operations. I had no reason to call Lon for advice.

When I did call him it was to tell him of my application of the system to elements of my Tantric practices and that I wished to publish Chanokh along with his comments and supplementary material of my own findings. I have enjoyed our collaboration very much for his enthusiasm for the subject has been irresistibly contagious. Now we invite you to enter The Enochian World Of Aleister Crowley.

Relax. It is much simpler than you think and I guarantee you that if you do embark upon the sexual practices all of your efforts will be well rewarded.

Introduction

By Lon Milo DuQuette

In the introduction of a recently published book on magick, the writer characterizes the Enochian material in Crowley's Equinox as being "scanty" and in "disarray". I am afraid I could not disagree more. In fact, it is so exquisitely comprehensive and laid out with such orderly neatness that, (to quote Masonic scholar, Gary Ford), "Crowley can only be criticized for being too anal retentive."

If the critic was capable of paying attention and spent the hour or less that it takes to read Chanokh she couldn't help but grasp the subject. This, in my opinion, cannot be said of any other text on the subject.

For example, the somewhat complex explanation of how the 18 Calls are ordered and combined for invocations of the 16 different subangles takes four pages in Regardie's Complete Golden Dawn System Of Magic, (Falcon Press, 1984). Crowley does it easily in 10 sentences.

I will not argue that Crowley demands much from his readers. But in the case of Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh the difficulty is that one finds it almost impossible to believe that so much is communicated in so few words.

> The genuineness of these Keys, altogether apart from any critical observation, is guaranteed by the fact that anyone with the smallest capacity for Magick finds that they work. Aleister Crowley

Twenty five years ago few members of the general occult community had ever heard of the Enochian system of Magick. Those who were aware of its existence fell into two main categories:

I. Members of the surviving magical societies which operated in the basic traditions of Ordo Templi Orientis, A.'. A.'. or The Golden Dawn.

II. Individuals lucky enough to posses either of two long-out-of-print works:
The Equinox Volume I, Numbers 7 & 8
The Golden Dawn Volumes 1-4

The Equinox, Aleister Crowley's Magnum Opus, issued at six month intervals between 1909 and 1914, was the first modern publication to examine the Enochian system in the seventh and eighth books of the ten number series.

Israel Regardie's Account Of The Teachings, Rites And Ceremonies Of The Golden Dawn followed in four volumes, the first published in 1937 and the fourth in 1940.

Though material relating directly to Enochiana occupies only a fraction of the above texts, the quality of the material is unquestioned. Both provide clear, fundamental information that gives the student both a basic understanding of the system and all the tools necessary to begin to immediately apply it and operate Enochian Magick.

In 1969 Regardie's Golden Dawn was reissued in a two volume format and then in 1974 he edited and released Gems From The Equinox containing all the Enochian material from the original 10 volume set. Both works are still in print. The Complete Golden Dawn System Of Magic, (Falcon Press, 1984) Regardie's tour de force published shortly before his death, includes his invaluable. Addendum to the Concourse of Forces. This tome stands as a monument to both the man and the material. This time the Enochian Genii has stayed out of the bottle.

Since 1969 an increasing number of students have turned their attention to this attractive yet, at first glance, overwhelmingly complex system. Their diligence is rewarded with something very rare indeed—a magical system that really works!

This takes many arm-chair magicians entirely off guard. A legitimate encounter with an Elemental Spirit or an Angel of an Æthyr invariably leaves a more lasting impression on the magician than the phantoms of self-deluded wishful thinking that mark the "successful working" of the dilettante.

Today Enochiana commands a respectable amount of space on the shelves of your local occult or New-Age bookstore. Much of the original Dee material (still existent) has been reprinted and made available to an ever-growing body of readers. The students of the early 1970s have become the researchers and prolific authors of today.

Many of the new works are excellent and offer invaluable contributions to the ever-increasing library of Enochian knowledge. (The works of Robert Turner should be singled out for their insight and high level of scholarship.)

Some others I feel are of less value. While perhaps informative as examples of the "findings" of one magician's experimentation, the distinction is not always made clear as to what is the author's speculation and innovation and what actually are the procedures suggested in the original documents. Then, to make matters even more confusing, the author presumes to define to the reader what they can expect to experience, intimating that if they get anything else they are somehow in error.

In my opinion, these works are little more than guided meditations upon another magician's visions and deny the reader the challenge of self discovery and mastery. But I'm sure that new volumes such as these will continue to appear. I will not be surprised to someday see titles such as The Enochian Cookbook, or I'm OK.. .You're Enochian appearing at my local bookstore.

It is our aim to offer in a practical format, Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh, Crowley's original presentation of basic Enochiana and make it immediately useful for the student who wishes to make use of it now.

This coupled with Regardie's fine Enochian Dictionary and pronunciation guide provides the reader with the minimum material necessary to get started. For the advanced student we offer practical instructions concerning powerful sexual applications of the system and the opportunity to re-evaluate the original information that the greatest magician of 20th Century felt was most necessary to master first.

Chapter One.

A Short, Brief History (Abridged)

I have often read in thy [God's] books & records, how Enoch injoyed thy favour & conversation; with Moses thou was familiar; And also that to Abraham, Issack & Jacob, Joshua, Gideon, Esdras, Daniel, Tobias & sundry others thy good angels were sent by thy disposition, to Instruct them, informe them, helpe them, yea in worldly and domestick affaires, yea and sometymes to satisfie their desires, doubles, and questions of thy Secrete:
Dr. John Dee (Sloane MS. 3188)

For God's sake, tell me what to think.
Asheigh Brilliant

It is said that the Enochian System of Magick, as practiced today, is the Child of Four Fathers; John Dee, Edward Kelly, S.L. (MacGregor) Mathers and Aleister Crowley. While this is a grossly inaccurate oversimplification, (Dr. Rudd, Elias Ashmole, Wynn Westcott and Israel Regardie might at least be called midwives), it is basically true.

Through the efforts of the unbelievably mercurial Elizabethan mathematician. Dr. John Dee and his equally unbelievable "psychic" partner, Edward Kelly, the raw material for the Enochian System was "dictated" through a series of Angelic communications that lasted from 1582 to 1589. Copious records were kept, many which have survived to the present.

Ironically, once Dee and Kelly went through the heroic efforts to get all this information, it is believed they did not do a great deal with it. Miraculously, much of the material survived the nearly 3 centuries to come to the attention of S. L. (MacGregor) Mathers in the late 1880s. (Note: Enochian fragments were even found in the famous cypher manuscripts whose discovery was instrumental in the creation of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn.)

Mainly due to his inspired scholarship and impeccable logic. Dee's and Kelly's "raw" material was hammered into a comprehensive and workable system of ceremonial Magick. The two major branches of the system were then grafted to the Adeptus Minor curriculum of the Golden Dawn.

Aleister Crowley, who joined the Golden Dawn in 1898 and attained the Grade of Adeptus Minor in 1900, was of course exposed to the Order's Enochian teachings. However, Crowley took the Enochian "ball" and ran with it farther than the founders of the Golden Dawn had ever dreamed possible.

His exploration of the 30 Æthyrs as chronicled in The Vision And The Voice (Gems From The Equinox, Falcon Press 1982) has been seriously compared to the visionary works of William Blake and the Qabalistic images of Ezekiel and the Revelation of Saint John the Divine.

It was also Aleister Crowley who reorganized and elucidated upon the Golden Dawn Enochian material and published it in Equinox Vol. I, Nos. VII and VIII as A Brief Abstract Of The Symbolic Representation Of The Universe Derived By Doctor John Dee Through The Skrying Of Sir Edward Kelly. (Subsequently and mercifully renamed Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh.)

Chapter Two

Before We Start Let's Get Something Straight

The student who waits to master the subject before proceeding to perform Magick, will never master the subject nor proceed to perform Magick or for that matter anything else. Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.

Anyone who refuses to begin a magical operation because of fear of the "evil" forces that might be unleashed if he or she makes a mistake, has already made a mistake that has invoked a far greater "evil".
David P. Wilson

Resign yourself at the outset to take responsibility for your own magical reality. When you have firmly assumed this responsibility you will realize that there is no Enochian universe per se. There is only your universe which you can access by the Enochian formulae. There is no Enochian magick per se. There is only your magick, facilitated by the methods of the Enochian system.

This is not to argue the concept of spirits and angels having a certain objective reality. Indeed, the fundamental operating principal of evocation is to give outward substance to inner realities. But the sooner you rid yourself of preconceived ideas of how all this is going to manifest the sooner you will be able to recognize it when it really does start to manifest.

For example, let us compare the Enochian system of Dr. Dee to a more familiar "system" of another Elizabethan genius.

The sensitive theater-goer reaps a rich harvest of intellectual and spiritual rewards whenever he or she sees a play by William Shakespeare.

Each character in the play, hero or villain, speaks the "truth" from their particular perspective and it is up to us as the audience, to analyze these "truths" and apply them toward understanding our own lives.

Restated in Magickal Language: Each Angel in the system, Divine or Demonic, declares their nature from their particular perspective and it is up to me as the magician, to analyze their communication and apply that knowledge to the understanding of the Great Work.

These "truths" would be the same "truths" if the actors were dressed traditionally, or as cowboys or as space aliens. Granted, you might be distracted and miss the point of Hamlet's soliloquy if it were delivered by a giant amoeba, but a Biologist might find it most profound.

Just as no two people see and react to a play in exactly the same way, so too, no two magicians will have identical experiences in evocation.

Dare To Be Lazy

If you are truly interested in performing Enochian Magick there is more than enough information between the covers of this book to help you grasp the theory, build the equipment and perform the magick. In fact you are encouraged to do so.

By following the suggestions in the section that follows you will avoid many time-consuming mistakes that have traditionally plagued the Enochian student.

Supplementary to the text of Chanokh, I have provided comments to each of the major sections and have added additional diagrams in the Appendix. I strongly suggest that you read these and refer to the diagrams while you read Chanokh. You will save many hours of confusion and frustration if you will take this simple advice.

Also, pay special attention to the "Hints". They are put there to steer you clear of the "rocks" of Crowley's thrifty use of the English language (not to mention his downright omissions and a typo or two).

Make it easy on yourself. Dare to be lazy.

Chapter Three

The Ten Minute Overview

The two pillars of modem Enochian Magick, as outlined in Liber Chanokh (Chapter Five) are The Elemental Watch-towers (including the Tablet of Union) and the "World" of the 30 Æthyrs. The first is:

The Elemental Watch-Towers Of The Universe And The Tablet of Union

These are the Elemental Tablets (Plates III, IV, V, VI, VII and VIII) which are constructed with the purest Hermetic logic and lettered according to the diagrams of Dee and Kelly. These letters form the names of the Spirits of Fire, Water, Air and Earth.

These are the "Elementals" of literature, the Salamanders of Fire, the Undines of Water, the Sylphs of Air and the Gnomes of Earth.
Exactly what are the Elements and, more importantly, why would anyone want to call up an Elemental Being? Below is a portion of our book The Ultimate Divination (New Falcon Publications, 1991) which touches upon the subject of the Elements.

> The ancients viewed the Elements as the building blocks of creation. They divided them into four broad categories which they called FIRE, WATER, AIR and EARTH.
>
> Of course these are not the chemical elements which combine to form the material world around us. Nor are they literally Fire, Water, Air and Earth. They are, most simply put, the totality of all the forces, energies and qualities in the universe divided info four broad categories. These categories, by their natures, bear a poetical resemblance to Fire, Water, Air and Earth.
>
> These qualities are the foundation of both galaxies and sub-atomic particles and the limitless diversity of creation is the result of the infinite number of ways these four Elements can be mixed, combined and recombined.

It is interesting to note that modern physics postulates four fundamental forces; the Strong Force, the Electro-Magnetic Force, the Weak Force and the Gravitational Force that, by their characteristics, bear a remarkable resemblance to the ancient Elements:

The ancients also postulated a Fifth Element (quite literally a "quintessence") which serves the double duty of binding the four Elements together and (at the same time) keeping them far enough apart to retain their individuality. This Fifth Element they called SPIRIT.

Once you have colored your Tablets you will see how the "Angels" of any given Element are formed, combined, mixed, recombined and reformed. (Note: Completed Colored Tablets are currently available through New Falcon Publications.)

Obviously these Elementals are more than just the Salamanders in your fireplace, the sailor's Mermaid, Tinkerbell or Gimli the Dwarf. They have far more universal natures and as such are worthy of our attention. As a matter of fact they are at work, either efficiently or inefficiently, in each of us. Perhaps if we had a better understanding of our Elemental balance (or lack of it) we might get a clue as to how to improve our lives.

Note: What follows may seem a bit complicated to the new student. A full explanation of the operating procedure will be given in the following chapters.

For example, some years ago I accepted a job from an old friend who asked me to edit a psychology book he had just completed. I had never done such a thing before but I accepted with some hesitation.

The evening before I was to start I decided to invoke an Enochian Elemental Angel to help me put things in perspective and perhaps to give me a little boost on my first day. I chose to invoke SOAIZNT the Mercury Senior of the Water Tablet. (My reasoning was that Mercury is the force that is traditionally associated with writing and matters of the mind and Water is the element of reflection and empathy which I felt would be necessary for a task such as this.)

The invocation was simple enough. I had my Tablet of Union and Elemental Tablets sitting upon a table in the center of the room. After a routine Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram I opened the Temple in the Grade of 3°=8□ as written in Chanokh then performed the Hexagram Ritual invoking Mercury (Planetary Seniors are invoked by the Hexagram) then I simply recited the Fourth Call straight out of Chanokh.

At first I "saw" nothing. (My skrying technique is to sit quietly with my eyes closed.) I felt somewhat stimulated and remember thinking that I should do this ritual whenever I needed to stay awake—when suddenly it was there. It had a basic humanoid form but it looked as if it had a "skin" made entirely of silver reflective material. Not stiff like a series of mirrors or facets, but smooth, almost liquid. Everywhere I looked on its "body" I saw myself reflected. It was breathtakingly beautiful. I was dumbfounded. After a moment when I could think straight again, I repeated the name, SOAIZNT (the standard procedure to test a vision.) It seemed to gain strength and become clearer with each repetition of its name so I felt confident that what was in front of me was indeed what I had called up. The question was now 'what am I going to do with this guy'? It took a little effort but I finally remembered the reason for the operation. I asked if it could help me to better understand another's thoughts and to efficiently transfer these thoughts to the written word. It indicated it could and produced a mirror upon which it drew a figure. I "felt" that I was to somehow use this figure as a tool to achieve my goal. I drew it on a piece of scratch paper and after the obligatory banishing I gazed upon it for a few minutes then went to bed. The next morning I decided I would take the figure SOAIZNT gave me and simply draw it at the top of each page of my daily note pad where I would be forced to look at it almost continually. Throughout the course of the project (which went surprisingly well by the way) I was focused upon this symbol and constantly reminded of the invocation and the incredible vision of the Angel who aids works of this nature.

In practical workings such as this it is very helpful to bring something from the vision back into this world.

In the everyday world of our waking consciousness life forms, such as people, animals, plants, etc., we perceive as living "beings." On the other hand, symbols such as triangles, pentagrams, letters, etc., we perceive as abstractions, springboards to a variety of ideas. In the "magical" world it is just the opposite. When we "see" a life form, such as an Angel or a unicorn or an aardvark, it is an abstract personification of an idea. Symbols, on the other hand, are "living beings" on that plane, the true life forms of the magical universe.

As you can imagine these symbol-life forms can be powerful tools in the hands of the magician. Bringing them through to our objective world is an important part of practical workings.

The second pillar is:

The Thirty Æthyrs Whose Dominion Extendeth In Ever-Widening Circles Beyond The Watch-Towers Of The Universe

These are the "heavens" or Aires of the system. Starting with the 30th Æthyr and working to the 1st, the magician explores only as far as his or her personal level of Initiation will permit. This process is comparable to "pathworkings" of the Qabalistic system. In Enochian terms, the "Great Work" of the magician is to master all 30 Æthyrs. (Starting with 30 and ending with 1)

Experiences with the 30 Æthyrs are highly personal and entirely unique to each magician. Working with the Æthyrs can be a lifetime endeavor and it is entirely presumptuous and inappropriate for another individual to "guide" another in this area.

Thus, with these two branches of the system, the Elemental and the Æthyric, we have formulae to access both the phenomenal world of the Elements and private world of our own Spiritual Journey.

Both types of operations require the ability on the part of the magician to skry or "travel in the Spirit Vision." If you are not already a talented skryer there is no better way to train than Enochian Magick, especially elemental workings.

There are as many skrying techniques as there are magicians who skry. Dee and Kelly gazed into a concave obsidian mirror. Crowley held a large topaz mounted upon a wooden cross to his forehead. But other methods include gazing into crystals, ink, fire eleven a blank TV screen. You can sit in a chair or on the floor or lie on your back. You can close your eyes or keep them open. Use what works for you. As it is a subjective, (well, maybe not entirely subjective) experience, the choice is yours. I was amused to hear one skryer's abilities criticized for being done in a "light trance" state. We should all be so lucky!

For anyone who has tried unsuccessfully to skry in the past I offer the following hint.

Stop trying to skry!

Don't try to "see" a vision in your mind. The vision is already going on in the part of your mind (the right side of your brain) where you are not currently focused. (Don't criticize the movie if you go to the theater, buy a ticket then choose to stay in the lobby.) When you refocus your attention to that part of your mind you will find the "vision" in progress. It's impossible to refocus while you are consciously trying to refocus. So stop trying. Relax.

This change of focus happens each time you drop off to sleep. There is a moment when your thoughts begin to take visual form. You have a choice for a brief moment of "snapping out of it" or relaxing and "going with it, allowing yourself to change your focus for the rest of the night.

When you skry you are not asleep but neither are you focused on the objective world as analyzed by the left side of your brain. You relax and allow yourself to focus on the subjective, visual world of your brain's right hemisphere.

The most important thing to remember is not to project an objective reality to another skryer's vision. This is the flaw of "guided Pathworkings" or meditations upon another magician's visions. It is your magical universe you are dealing with and no one else's. (You are well advised to test your own visions and take them with a rather large grain of salt as well.)

Chapter four

Comments On Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh

THE TITLE "LIBER LXXXIV"

The original title first published in Equinox Vol. I Nos. VII & VIII was A Brief Abstract Of The Symbolic Representation Of The Universe Derived By Dr. John Dee Through The Skrying Of Sir Edward Kelly. LXXXIV (84) is the Qabalistic numeration for Chanokh, the Hebrew spelling of Enoch.

Note: When originally published the title did not bear the number. Crowley assigned the number 84 when the Syllabus of the Official Instructions of A.'. A.'. was published in The Blue Equinox. Since then, due to a series of typographical errors, the number LXXXIX (89) has been mistakenly used in the title of published works. For our purposes we will refer to it simply as Chanokh.

PART I

THE HOLY TWELVEFOLD TABLE

The Holy Table is part of the "furniture" of the Temple and does not directly concern Elemental or Æthyrical workings. Angels found on the Holy Table are not called forth in these operations.

The original table top measured 35 7/8in X 36 l/4in X 7/lOin.

Note: There is good reason to believe that the illustration as printed in Chanokh, (Plate l) is in error. Plate I is reproduced from Casaubon's A *True and Faithful Relation of what Passed for Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits...*published in 1659. It is now believed that, do to a 17th Century printer's error, Casaubon's version (and consequently everybody's since) was printed with the letters in reverse order. One of Dee's descriptions of the Table indicates it resembled the illustration we have included in the Appendix (Diagram A) of this book. This is regarded as the correct version. (Note: The Plates referred to are not in the Appendix but in the text of Chanokh itself [Chapter Five of this book]. All of the diagrams are in the Appendix of this book and are not original Chanokh illustrations.)

THE SEVEN TALISMANS

Like the Holy Table, these are considered Temple "furniture" and do not directly concern Elemental or Æthyrical workings. Spirits found on these talismans are not called forth in these operations.

The illustrations in Plate I are too small to read. Enlargements from the 17th Century manuscript. Dr. Rudd's Treatise, are included in the Appendix (Diagram B) of this book. It is interesting to note that the names on these "planetary" talismans are those of the Goetia. This indicates (or at least implies) Dee's familiarity with the LEMEGETON and his attempt, at least early in his workings, to incorporate it in the Enochian system.

PART II
THE HOLY SEVENFOLD TABLE
THE SIGILLUM DEI ÆMETH

Perhaps the most widely recognized diagram of the Enochian system, the Sigillum Dei Æmeth does not directly concern Elemental or Æthyrical workings. Like the Holy Table and the Talismans, its Angels are not called forth in these operations. Nevertheless it is an important piece of temple "furniture" for upon it rested the Shew-stone or the skrying mirror.

Made from bee's wax as described in Chanokh, the four smaller versions were placed under the feet of the Holy Table, presumably to insulate it from "earthy vibrations". The fifth and larger one (about 9 inches in diameter) covered with a red cloth, was placed on the Holy Table to support the Shew-stone.

Note: The illustration on Plate II was taken from Dee's diaries. The large wax version on display at the British Museum is slightly different. For example on the actual wax version, there are 7 crosses on each of the 7 bars making up the main heptagram. The illustration shows only three bars with 7 crosses the other 4 containing only 3.

Even though the above items of temple furniture are unnecessary for Elemental operations and for exploring the 30 Æthyrs, the reader might like to make his or her own versions of them to support the skrying mirror. Many of my (Dare to be lazy) students have simply made photographic enlargements of the illustrations that appear in this book and have mounted them on wood or foam board.

PART III

This is the most important section for the student to grasp. It deals directly with the two branches of the system of the most practical value. The Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union (sometimes referred to as the Black Cross.) and the 30 Æthyrs or Aires. By using the information in this section the serious student will eventually construct the fabled equipment of the art.

This is also where many become confused and discouraged. Admittedly it will take the reader's full attention to wade through this section. This is not because Crowley is being deliberately obscure. On the contrary, it is because he is being almost unbelievably economical with his choice of words and the ordering of his thoughts.

I hope the following hints will save you some difficult moments.

HINT#1

BE PREPARED FOR INCONSISTENCES IN THE LETTERING OF THE TABLETS

Don't panic when you discover alternate spellings to names drawn from the Elemental tablets. This is due to the fact that Dee and Kelly (at the direction of the communicating angels) made several revisions to the tablets. To help you, we have included in the Appendix charts showing alternate and multiple lettering (See Diagram E).

HINT # 2

CAREFULLY READ AND REFER OFTEN TO THE PLATES

A picture is worth a thousand words and in this case many hours. To be able to see what Crowley is writing about will save you much valuable time. Plates IV, V, VI, VII & VIII are lettered in Enochian. For English equivalents refer to the Appendix (assorted diagrams).

HINT #3

REMEMBER, THE SAME GENERAL LAWS APPLY TO ALL FOUR ELEMENTAL TABLETS. TO UNDERSTAND ONE IS TO UNDERSTAND THEM ALL

For example; Crowley explains the Hierarchy of the Three Holy Names, the Great Elemental King, the Six Seniors, the Two Divine Names of the Calvary Cross, the Kerubim and the Sixteen Lesser Angels by using the Water Tablet (Plate V) as the example. The Hierarchy of the Fire, Air, and Earth Tablets are determined in exactly the same way.

Note: To make this section easier to understand, I have included in the Appendix (Diagram D) an English version of the Water Tablet conveniently split apart for easy viewing. If you keep this diagram in front of you while reading Part III of Chanokh I think you will have no trouble understanding what is being said.

BASIC TERMS

The Four Great Watch-Towers are often referred to as the Elemental Tablets of Air, Water, Earth and Fire.

Plate III shows them together; Air in the upper left-hand quarter, Water in the upper-right hand quarter, Earth in the lower left-hand quarter and Fire in the lower right-hand quarter.

Plates IV, V, VI, & VII show them singularly. Each of the Elemental Tablets is also divided into four sections by the two central vertical columns and the central horizontal line. (The Linea Patris, the Linea Filii and the Linea Spiritus Sancti respectively) This is also referred to as the Great Central Cross of the Elemental Tablet. (See Diagram D).

The four sections of the Elemental Tablet created by the Great Central Cross are called Subangles which are also attributed to the four Elements. (Air in the upper left-hand quarter, Water in the upper-right hand quarter. Earth in the lower left-hand quarter and Fire in the lower right-hand quarter.

In Diagram D in the Appendix of this book, you will see an example of the Water Tablet divided by the Great Central Cross and broken into its Subangles. (Air of Water in the upper left, Water of Water in the upper right. Earth of Water in the lower left, and Fire of Water in the lower right) Subangles on the Air, Fire and Earth Tablets are arranged in exactly the same way.

1. THE THREE HOLY NAMES OF GOD

(See Diagram D) The Three Holy Names of God are made up of the first three letters, the next four letters and the last five letters of the Linea Spirtus Sancti (the central horizontal line of each Elemental Tablet) For our example, the Water Tablet, the Three Holy Names are: MPH ARSL GAIOL.

Note: Don't let these names intimidate you. Just locate them. Don't worry about pronouncing them now. There is an excellent pronunciation guide provided later in this book.

Now try to locate The Three Holy Names on the Fire, Air and Earth Tablets.

2. THE GREAT ELEMENTAL KING

(See Diagram D) The eight letter Name of the Great Elemental King is formed by a clockwise whorl around the center of The Great Central Cross of the Linea Patris, the Linea Filii and the Linea Spirtus Sancti. The Great Elemental King may be considered the Sun Senior of the Tablet. The Great Elemental King of the Water Tablet is RAAGIOSL. Now try to locate the Great Elemental Kings on the other three Elemental Tablets.

3. THE SIX SENIORS

(See Diagram D) The 7 letter Names of the Six Planetary Seniors are also drawn from the Great Central Cross. Each Name starts in the middle of the Cross and moves towards the extremities. (Arrows in Diagram D show the directions the names are read and the Planet to which each of the Seniors is attributed). This is the same for all four Elemental Tablets.

In the case of the Water Tablet; SAIINOV is the Senior of Jupiter, SOAIZNT is the Senior of Mercury, LAOAZRP is the Senior of the Moon, LIGDISA is the Senior of Saturn, SLGAIOL is the Senior of of Venus and LSRAHPM is the Senior of Mars. Now locate the Six Seniors on the three other Elemental Tablets.

4. THE CALVARY CROSSES

(See Diagram D) Each of the four Subangles on an Elemental Tablet contains a Calvary Cross. The two Angels of the Calvary Cross rule the Subangle. With the first Name (the vertical line — reading from top to bottom) you call forth the Power of the Subangle.

With the second Name (the horizontal line— reading from left to right) you compel the Power to obedience. (We will see how to do this later) These names as they apply to the Water Tablet appear in the text of Chanokh.

Remember, there are four Calvary Crosses in each Elemental Tablet. Now locate the four Calvary Crosses in the subangles of each of the four Elemental Tablets.

5. THE KERUBIM

(See Diagram D) The four letter Name of the Kerub is found above the arms of the Calvary Cross of each subangle. The letters of the Cross itself are never included in the Kerub's name.

The Kerub rules the angels who reside below the arms of the Cross. The four letters in the name of the Kerub can be rearranged in different orders to create different Kerubs who in turn rule different angels beneath the arms of the cross. (The letters of their names rearranged exactly as those of the rearranged Kerub.)

Note: A great deal of confusion exists concerning this statement in Chanokh:

They are ruled by names of God formed by prefixing the appropriate letter from the 'black cross' to their own [the Kerubim] names... There is disagreement among scholars as to which letters from the "Black Cross" (the Tablet of Union) are "appropriate." If you refer to Diagram G you will see that 16 of the 20 squares correspond to the 16 subangles of the four Elemental tablets.

The most popular theory maintains that these are the appropriate letters to help form the name of the "God" that rules the Kerub of any given Subangle. Let us use the example of the Elemental Tablet of Water (Diagram D) the Kerub of the Subangle of Fire is NLRX. Now refer to Diagram G and find the Fire of Water square. It is the fifth square of the second line. "A" (The "A" in HCOMA). So the God that rules NLRX would be ANLRX.

Please remember that there is disagreement, even among very knowledgeable experts, about these "God" names and where exactly they fit in the Enochian Hierarchy.

I advise beginning students to first become adequately fluent in basic hierarchical workings then develop for themselves a structure for these "supercharged" angels. The system does not pivot on this point.

6. THE FOUR MIGHTY AND BENEVOLENT ANGELS

(See Diagram D) These Angels are found beneath the horizontal bar of the Calvary Cross and are last in the Hierarchy of the Elemental Angels. They are extremely interesting and can provide great insight into the nature of the Elements. (Again, the names are only of four letters).

Note: Remember these four Angels are ruled by their Kerub who is found above the horizontal arm of the Calvary Cross. When you make a different Kerub (by changing the order of the letters in its name) you automatically make four new sets of Angel names beneath the arm of the Calvary Cross (by changing the order of the letters of their names in the same manner as the new Kerub.)

7. THE DEMONS OR ELEMENTALS

(See Diagram D) Unfortunately the definitive instructions promised by Crowley were not forthcoming and experts and students alike are left to speculate and disagree. The reader is encouraged to join in this quest. It is clear that they are not routinely called forth in workings of the Elemental Tablets.

[Following Crowley's comments on the Triliteral names of demons (above) he begins a second section of PART III with subheadings 1-5.]

PART III

(SECOND SECTION)

As you can see from Plates IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, the Squares of the Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union are really Pyramids with flat tops. The Pyramid with its four sides and top is an especially appropriate symbol for the Four Elements ruled by Spirit. Each side of an Enochian Pyramid has a very specific attribute.

There are 20 Pyramids in the Tablet of Union and 156 in each of the four Elemental tablets. Each Pyramid houses an Angel with a one letter name. The attributes of that Angel are determined by the positioning of the Pyramid upon the Tablet and proportions of the different Elements represented on its four sides. When two Pyramids are combined they form an Angel with a two letter name whose attributes are a bit more complex. And so on.

To most easily understand how these attributes are determined I will give the reader the most valuable hint of all:

HINT # 4.

HAND COLOR PLATES IV. V, VI. VII, & VIII

Before attempting to understand the second section of Part III, you are well advised to make photocopies of Plates IV, V, VI, VII & VIII and then hand color the Pyramids. By coloring the Pyramids you will learn, in the fastest and easiest way possible, the logic behind their construction.

THE COLORING KEY FOR EACH PYRAMID

Leave the center square of each Pyramid (which contains the letter) uncolored for the time being.

Sides with the Spirit Symbol		White
Sides with the Fire Symbol		Red
Sides with the Water Symbol		Blue
Sides with the Air Symbol		Yellow
Sides with the Earth Symbol		Green or Black

I suggest you start with the Tablet Of Union, (Plate VIII or the English lettered version in the Appendix, Diagram G).

Even though it is small, it is a very important Tablet for its Angels, EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA & BITOM, rule the other four Elemental Tablets, (EXARP rules the Air Tablet, HCOMA rules the Water Tablet, NANTA rules the Earth Tablet and BITOM rules the Fire Tablet.)

The Tablet Of Union is considered the Elemental Tablet of Spirit. The four Elements are represented in their purest form, undifferentiated by the level of admixture that characterizes the other four Elemental Tablets.

The Tablet Of Union acts in exactly the same manner as Spirit acts upon the four Elements. It binds them together so they can combine to be the building blocks of creation yet keeps them separated just enough to prevent the loss of their individual and fundamental natures. This active and passive quality of Spirit is the reason that there are two types of Spirit Pentagrams, Active and Passive.

The Angels of the Tablet Of Union can be said to be the very "roots" of the Angels of the Elemental Tablets.

Once you have colored your Tablet Of Union, you will discover that a very simple pattern is formed by the attributes in the Lines and Files (or Columns). The top and bottom section of each Pyramid is attributed to Spirit. The right side is attributed to the Primary Element (as dictated by which Line the Pyramid is located) and the left side is attributed to the Secondary Element (as dictated by which Column it is located).

Note; This and what follows below will be laughably easy to understand if you have taken five minutes and colored your Tablet Of Union.

THE LINES

The four five letter Names (EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA and BITOM) are the Primary Spirits of the Elements. Each Spirit governs an entire Elemental Tablet.

EXARP is the Spirit of Air and governs the entire Air Tablet. The right section of each Pyramid of EXARP is Air.

HCOMA is the Spirit of Water and governs the entire Water Tablet. The right section of each Pyramid of HCOMA is Water.

NANTA is the Spirit of Earth and governs the entire Earth Tablet. The right section of each Pyramid of NANTA is Earth.

BITOM is the Spirit of Fire and governs the entire Fire Tablet. The right section of each Pyramid of BITOM is Fire.

THE COLUMNS

This same order of Air, Water, Earth and Fire is repeated in the Columns of the Tablet Of Union as Secondary attributions which appear on the left section of each Pyramid. (See Diagram G)

The first Column, EHNB is the purest of all the Column Names.

Each letter rules its respective Line and is three parts Spirit and one part its respective Element.

E governs EXARP
H governs HCOMA
N governs NANTA
B governs BITOM.

The sixteen letters of the remaining four columns contain both Primary and Secondary attributions. (Remember, the Secondary attribution is located upon the left section of these Pyramids.) These sixteen letters govern the sixteen Subangles of the Elemental Tablets.

X = Air of Air
C = Air of Water
A = Air of Earth
I = Air of Fire

A = Water of Air
O = Water of Water
N = Water of Earth
T = Water of Fire

R = Earth of Air
M = Earth of Water
T = Earth of Earth
O = Earth of Fire

P = Fire of Air
A = Fire of Water
A = Fire of Earth
M = Fire of Fire

An easy way to think about how the Tablet Of Union relates to the other four Tablets is to pretend you have an "Elemental Microscope".

Take the letter E from EXARP and put it under your microscope. You will see the entire Air Elemental Tablet.

Take the letter O from BITOM and put it under your microscope. You will see the Earth Subangle of the Tablet of Fire.

Take the second letter N from NANTA and put it under your microscope. Your will see the Water Subangle of the Earth Tablet, etc.

After you have colored your Tablet Of Union color each of the four Elemental Tablets. (You may purchase all of these beautifully mounted on boards from New Falcon Publications.)

HINT #5
COLOR EACH ELEMENTAL TABLET IN FOUR STEPS

Note: There are various ways the Pyramids of the Great Central Cross may be colored. We have chosen the method below because the attributes are uniformly determined through Elemental rulerships.

STEP 1:
THE GREAT CENTRAL CROSS

The Top section of each Pyramid of the Great Central Cross represents Spirit and is painted White.

The Bottom section of each Pyramid of the Great Central Cross represents the Element of the Tablet. In the case of the Water Tablet it is painted Blue. (When painting the Fire Tablet the bottom sections of the Great Central Cross would be Red, the Air Tablet Yellow, the Earth Tablet, Green or Black)

The Left side of each Pyramid of the Great Central Cross represent the Signs of the Zodiac. These are grouped in threes by element and positioned as describe in Chanokh.

The Fire Signs (Aires, Leo and Sagittarius) are colored Red.
The Water Signs (Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces) are colored Blue.
The Air Signs (Libra, Aquarius and Gemini) are colored Yellow.
The Earth Signs (Capricorn, Taurus and Virgo) are colored Green (or Black)

The Right side of each Pyramid of the Great Central Cross represent the planetary rulership of the 36 decans of the Zodiac. There are 36 decans and 36 Pyramids in the Great Central Cross. For our purpose we color the planets according to the rulership of the fixed signs:

Saturn and Mercury for Air are colored Yellow
Jupiter and the Sun for Fire are colored Red Venus and the Moon for Earth are colored Green or (Black) Mars for Water is colored Blue.

STEP 2:
THE CALVARY CROSSES

The Top section of each Pyramid of the Calvary Crosses of the subangles represents Spirit and is painted white.

The Bottom section of each Pyramid of the Calvary Crosses of the subangles represent one of the ten Sephiroth of the Qabalistic Tree of Life and are numbered according to Plates IV, V, VI and VII. We suggest for the time being, that you leave the Bottom sections White and simply number them in black. Later you may wish to paint them one of the four traditional colors of the Sephiroth.

The Left section of each Pyramid of the Calvary Crosses of the subangles represent the Element of the Tablet. In the case of the Water Tablet, the Left section of the Pyramids of each of the four Calvary Crosses would be painted Blue.

The Right section of each Pyramid of the Calvary Crosses of the subangles represent the Element of the subangle itself and painted accordingly. [Upper Left-hand subangle (Air-Yellow), Upper Right-hand subangle (Water-Blue), Lower Left-hand subangle (Earth-Green or Black), Lower Right-hand Subangle, (Fire-Red)] This pattern is the same for all four Elemental Tablets.

STEP 3:
THE KERUBIC ANGELS

These are found above the arms of the Calvary Crosses.

The Top section of each of the four Kerubic Pyramids represent the Elemental Tablet and are colored accordingly. In the case of the Water Tablet, blue.

The Bottom section of each of the four Kerubic Pyramids represent the Element of the subangle itself and is colored accordingly.

Color the Right and Left sections of each of the four Kerubic Pyramids as indicated in Plates IV, V, VI and VII. The order that the elements are arranged follow a logical permutation and dictate the order of the Lines and Columns of the 16 Lesser Pyramids found below the arms of the Calvary Cross.

STEP 4:
THE SIXTEEN LESSER PYRAMIDS

These are found below the arms of the Calvary Crosses.

The Left section of each Pyramid of the Lesser Angels represents the Elemental Tablet. In the case of the Water Tablet it is colored Blue.

The Right section of each Pyramid of the Lesser Angels represents the subangle and is colored accordingly.

Color the Top and Bottom section of each of the sixteen Lesser Pyramids as indicated in Plates IV, V, VI. and VII. Notice how the coloring order is dictated by the squares of the Kerubic Angels.

Granted, all this may take a few hours to execute but it will save you months (or as in my case, years) of confusion.

Now with your colored Tablets before you, read the material in the Second section of Part III of Chanokh and marvel at the "method" to the "madness."

PART IV
THE ENOCHIAN ALPHABET
AND THE ENOCHIAN LANGUAGE

One of the most unique characteristics of Enochian Magick is that the invocations are recited in a language completely unique to the system.

This language comes down to us as the result of the workings of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly and, according to their records, was taught to them by the Enochian Angels themselves.

Israel Regardie in his massive work. The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic (New Falcon Publications, 1984), makes the following comments:

The Enochian language is without any history prior to the skrying of Edward Kelly and John Dee. There is no record of its prior existence, regardless of some fanciful theories which have been invented to account for it. The Enochian language is not just a haphazard combination and compilation of divine and angelic names drawn from the Tablets. Apparently, it is a true language with a grammar and syntax of its own. Only a superficial study of the invocations suffice to indicate this to be a fact. The invocations are not strings of words and barbarous names, but are sentences which can be translated in a meaningful way and not merely transliterated.

I believe, when invoking, that it is of the utmost importance to recite the Call or Calls in Enochian and not use an English translation. Not that it is unimportant for the Magician to know exactly what is being said but it is obvious to me that the intelligences who delivered this language to Dee and Kelly did not do it to hear themselves talk.

Reciting in Enochian instantly changes one's consciousness and induces a state of mind conducive to magical working.

The Calls themselves are very unique and are nothing like the tedious beseechments and endless whining and self debasement that characterize Goetic evocations. Rather, in the Angel's native tongue, they sing of its attributes and environment and offer a dignified invitation to communicate with the Magician.

This format is irresistible to the Angel. Think about it. If a mouse crawled up on your shoe and started to squeak, you would only give it as much attention as you would need to chase it away. But if it crawled up on your shoe, called you by name and then began to recite, in English, a litany of recognizable personal traits:

... Oh thou who art so huge, who wakest with the music of the clock-radio and who bringest in the morning paper, who with thy mouth consumest the eggs of the hen and wipeth thy lips with paper...

... you would sit up and take notice. You might even try to have a meaningful conversation with the little fellow. You wouldn't even mind if he spoke with a thick accent!

The Enochian Calls as they appear in Chanokh are written phonetically and are very close to the standard used by the Golden Dawn which appear in Regardie's Enochian Dictionary in the Appendix of this book.

Plate DC shows the Enochian Alphabet and Plates I, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII are lettered in Enochian.

PART V
THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS OR AIRES

As we will read in Chanokh, Crowley says that Dee:

...symbolized the Fourth-Dimensional Universe in two dimensions as a square surrounded by 30 concentric circles (the 30 Æthyrs or Aires) whose radii increase in a geometrical proportion

The "square" mentioned above is the Four Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union. These are quite literally Watch-Towers that stand at the very edge of the phenomenal universe. Beyond the Watch-Towers are the Æthyrs, the Aires, the Heavens. They can be visualized as thirty spheres, one inside another like layers of a glass onion. The Thirtieth, TEX is the lowest and consequently the closest to the Watch-Towers.

LIL, the First, is the highest and represents the Supreme Attainment. It is the Great work of the Magician to "explore" the Æthyrs one at a time, and learn the lessons, master the problems and receive the wisdom each has to offer.

Most anyone who cares to try has some level of success in the lower Æthyrs. It is most important to keep a detailed record of all workings because eventually you will reach a point beyond which you cannot pass. This point marks the limits of your present level of "initiation" and the last Æthyr you could successfully penetrate holds the key to your spiritual advancement.

Each of the Thirty Æthyrs is populated by Governors whose responsibilities are partially described in Dee's Liber Scientiæ, Auxilii, et Victoriæ Terrestris. For our purpose we will view the Governors as angelic personifications of the different facets of the Æthyrs. They serve as our guides and most importantly they are "someone" to whom we can talk and ask questions. The names of the each of the Thirty Æthyrs and their Governors is provided in the text of Chanokh.

Each Æthyr has three Governors (except the Thirtieth which has four). Sigils (signatures) of the Governors are taken from the Elemental Tablets showing that the influence of the Æthyrs is universal reaching even into the Watch-Towers of the Elements.

These sigils of the Governors are illustrated in Plate X and more clearly in Diagram F and are numbered 1 through 91. In order to more easily find the Sigil of each Governor, the reader is encouraged to number the list of Governors as found in Part V of Chanokh starting with OCCODON-1, PASCOMB-2, VALGARS-3, DOAGNIS-4, etc.

Ironically very little effort is required to "work" with the Æthyrs. One Call only is necessary for all thirty of them. The name of the Æthyr itself being the only variable.

Once the Call is recited the names of the Governors are vibrated one at a time. Often the vision changes drastically when the next Governor's name is vibrated. Take your time with each one and, as always, keep a detailed record of your operation.

Now let us turn our attention to the section of Chanokh designated in the text as:

PART II THE FORTY-EIGHT CALLS OR KEYS

The calls or Keys activate the tablets and subangles in the same way as the power switch turns on a TV before selecting a channel.

At the beginning of this section Crowley tells us which Calls are used in all the various invocations of the Elemental system. He does so in the fewest words humanly possible. Perhaps the reader will appreciate the elucidation below.

FIRST KEY

Use first in all invocations of any of the Angels of the Tablet of Union. (It is not used in the invocation of any of the Angels of the Elemental Tablets.)

SECOND KEY

Use second as invocation of the Angels of the letters E H N B of the Tablet of Union. Like the FIRST CALL it is never used in the invocation of the Angels of the four Elemental Tablets. (The sequence of Calls being 1 and 2.)

Note: The Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Keys are used in certain invocations of the Tablet of Union and in the Invocations of the Elemental Tablets. What follows immediately is how they are used in invocations of the Tablet of Union.

THIRD KEY

For invocations of the Angels of the letters of the line EXARP the sequence of Calls is 1, 2 and 3.

FOURTH KEY

For invocations of the Angels of the letters of the line HCOMA the sequence of Calls is 1, 2 and 4.

FIFTH KEY

For invocations of the Angels of the letters of the line NANTA the sequence of Calls is 1, 2 and 5.

SIXTH KEY

For invocations of the Angels of the letters of the Line BITOM the sequence of Calls is 1, 2 and 6.

THE ELEMENTAL TABLETS

THIRD KEY AIR

Use first in all invocations of the Angels of the Tablet of Air. (When invoking a Senior or the Angels of subangle Air of Air it is the only call necessary.)

FOURTH KEY WATER

Use first in all invocations of the Angels of the Tablet of Water (When invoking a Senior or the Angels of subangle Water of Water it is the only call necessary.)

FIFTH KEY EARTH

Use first in all invocations of the Angels of the Tablet of Earth. (When invoking a Senior or the Angels of subangle Earth of Earth it is the only call necessary.)

SIXTH KEY FIRE

Use first in all invocations of the Angels of the Tablet of Fire. (When invoking a Senior or the Angels of subangle Fire of Fire it is the only call necessary.)

SEVENTH KEY

WATER SUBANGLE OF AIR TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Water subangle of the Air Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 3 and 7.

EIGHTH KEY
EARTH SUBANGLE OF AIR TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Earth subangle of the Air Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 3 and 8.

NINTH KEY
FIRE SUBANGLE OF AIR TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Fire subangle of the Air Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 3 and 9.

TENTH KEY
AIR SUBANGLE OF WATER TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Air subangle of the Water Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 4 and 10.

ELEVENTH KEY
EARTH SUBANGLE OF WATER TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Earth subangle of the Water Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 4 and 11.

TWELFTH KEY
FIRE SUBANGLE OF WATER TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Fire subangle of the Water Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 4 and 12.

THIRTEENTH KEY
AIR SUBANGLE OF EARTH TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Air subangle of the Earth Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 5 and 13.

FOURTEENTH KEY
WATER SUBANGLE OF EARTH TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Water subangle of the Earth Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 5 and 14.

FIFTEENTH KEY
FIRE SUBANGLE OF EARTH TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Fire subangle of the Earth Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 5 and 15.

SIXTEENTH KEY
AIR SUBANGLE OF FIRE TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Air subangle of the Fire Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 6 and 16.

SEVENTEENTH KEY
WATER SUBANGLE OF FIRE TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Water subangle of the Fire Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 6 and 17.

EIGHTEENTH KEY
EARTH SUBANGLE OF FIRE TABLET

For invocations of the Angels of the Earth subangle of the Fire Tablet, the sequence of Calls is 6 and 18.

THE CALL OR KEY OF THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS

As we have mentioned above, the Nineteenth Call, or Key of the Thirty Æthyrs, is the only call necessary for workings with the Æthyrs. It is only necessary to change the name of the Æthyr itself near the beginning of the Call.

Note: In a footnote in Chanokh, Crowley mentions a second name in the Call that "...may appropriately be varied with the Aire". Try as I may to discover a logical correlation between LIL (the Æthyr in question) and IDOIGO (the footnoted name in question), I cannot. Until I do, I will continue to vary the Call of the Thirty Æthyrs only with the name of the Æthyr itself. If I am wrong I am willing to be forgiven.

MINIMUM RECOMMENDED OPERATING PROCEDURES

The question now arises "How do I go about implementing the above information to invoke the Angels of the Elemental Tablets or begin my exploration of the Æthyrs?"

The nature of the original Dee material is such as to make exact and definitive operating procedures unclear. In other books of Enochian Magick, particularly those written in the last 10 years, you will find elaborate instructions that differ considerably from what is suggested below.

As you become more familiar with the system you will develop your own sense of what is logical and appropriate. It is very important during the period of your learning curve to stay focused on source material such as Chanokh.

Chanokh provides basic operating instructions, though not always clearly. It is obvious that Crowley assumed the reader would have a basic magical education and would be able to proceed somewhat on their own understanding. These comments and the supplementary material in the Appendix are intended to help on both these fronts. But we should not ignore the obvious fact that Crowley's original presentation was very short and straightforward. Nowhere does he even hint that the Magician must engage in a long series of beseechments, coercions and just plain magical whinings that characterize other branches of magick.

What is unique about Enochian Magick is the absence of such infantile nonsense. Calls are addressed in the language of the beings involved. There is a simple hierarchy that needs to be recognized. The rest is between you and the Angels.

To make matters even simpler he provides us with five flawlessly constructed "Temple Openings" which are inserted prior to the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Keys. By performing the "Temple Openings" prior to reciting the Calls you will find almost half your work done. If you are unclear as to the appropriate signs, pentagrams or hexagrams used in the Temple Openings refer to the Appendix.

The simple procedure outlined below will take you anywhere you wish to go with the system. Of course you are free to expand and innovate upon the system as much as you feel necessary. (I would not, however, advise that you omit any of the following steps)

PRELIMINARY CONSIDERATIONS

TEMPLE ARRANGEMENTS

These can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish. A clean, uncluttered room with an altar or table in the center is perfectly adequate. You may wish to place your Elemental Tablets on the walls of the four quarters (Air in the East, Fire in the South, Water in the West, and Earth in the North) or you may wish to arrange them upon the altar. It is not essential to have any Tablets in the Temple at all.

DIRECTIONS OF THE WORKING

When invoking, that is when you wish to bring the Spirit to you, face the micro-cosmic-elemental direction dictated by the four winds; operations of Air in the East, Fire in the South, Water in the West and Earth in the North.

When you wish to visit the Spirit in its own world you face the macro-cosmic-elemental direction dictated by the Zodiac; operations of Fire in the East (Aries), Earth in the South (Capricorn), Air in the West (Libra) and Water in the North (Cancer).

For workings of the Thirty Æthyrs it does not matter which direction you are facing.

DETERMINE THE HIERARCHY OF THE SPIRIT IN QUESTION

Remember the Temple Openings contain the invocations of the Three Holy Names of God and the Great Elemental King. It is unnecessary for you to repeat these names in subsequent invocations.

STEP ONE PERFORM THE LESSER
BANISHING RITUAL OF THE PENTAGRAM

This is found in Chapter Seven. Any magical operation no matter how simple should be proceeded by a Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

STEP TWO
OPEN THE TEMPLE AND RECITE
THE APPROPRIATE CALL

Note: Remember, all Temple Openings are found in the text of Chanokh just prior to the appropriate Call.

EXAMPLE ONE

To invoke EHNB from the Tablet of Union:

1. Open the Temple with The Opening of the Portal of the Vault of the Adepts.
2. Recite The First Key and The Second Key.
3. Recite Enochian Conjuration (see below) inserting the Angel Name, EHNB.

EXAMPLE TWO

To invoke EXARP from the Tablet of Union:

1. (Repeat 1 and 2 above.) Open the Temple with The Opening of the Temple in the Grade of 2° = 9□.
2. Recite The Third Key.
3. Recite Enochian Conjuration (see below) inserting the Angel Name, EXARP.

EXAMPLE THREE

To invoke the Keurbic Angel TAAD from the Air subangle of the Water Tablet:

1. Open the Temple with The Opening of the Temple in the Grade of 3° = 8□.
2. Recite The Fourth Key (to open the Water Tablet).
3. Recite The Tenth Key (to open the Subangle of Air).
4. Recite Enochian Conjuration (see below) inserting the Angel Name, TAAD, the names of the six Seniors of the Water tablet: SAIINOV, SOAIZNT, LAOAZRP, LIGDISA, SLGAIOL, LSRAHPM and the Divine Names of the Calvary Cross, OLGOTA and AALCO.

EXAMPLE FOUR

To invoke the Lesser Angel ACCA from the Fire Subangle of the Air Tablet:

1. Open the Temple with The Opening of the Temple in the Grade of 2° = 9□.
2. Recite The Third Key (to open the Air Tablet).
3. Recite The Ninth Key (to open the Subangle of Fire).
4. Recite Enochian Conjuration (see below) inserting the Angel Name, ACCA, the names of the six Seniors of the Air Tablet, AAOXAIF, AVTOTAR, HTMORDA, HIPOTGA, AHAOZPI, HABIORO and the Divine Names of the Calvary Cross, AOURRZ and ALOAI and Kerubic Ruler XGZD.

ENOCHIAN CONJURATION

The conjuration below was extracted from Crowley's Enochian translation of the First Conjuration of the Goetia. Simply insert the name of the Spirit you wish to work with and any and all the names of its hierarchial superiors.

IN ENOCHIAN

Ol vinu od zodakame, Ilasa, Gahe (Insert Angel Name)
od elanusahe vaoresagi laida, gohusa pujo ilasa, darebesa!
Do-o-i-ape____od____od____od____ od__(use as many names as necessary)
Ol vinu-ta od zodameta,
Ilasa, Gahe (Insert Angel Name)

IN ENGLISH

I invoke and move thee, 0 thou, Spirit and being exalted above ye in the power of the Most High,
I say unto thee, obey! In the name of ___and ___ and ___ and ___and ___ I do invoke and by invoking conjure thee, 0 thou, Spirit ____.

Now set to work skrying. Keep paper and pencil handy. Some prefer to have a tape recorder running. It is important to maintain some level of objective consciousness. If you fall asleep you are likely to forget your vision and may run into unpleasant complications.

If you run into any "spiritual" characters that make you feel uncomfortable, test them first with the Holy Names from the Tablet you are working with or (in the case of the Thirty Æthyrs), the names of the Governors. If you are still having difficulties draw the appropriate banishing pentagram (see Appendix for Banishing Pentagrams) and withdraw from the vision.

Do not tire yourself. When you feel fatigued find an opportunity to withdraw from the vision and Banish.

STEP 3
CLOSE THE TEMPLE WITH THE BANISHING RITUAL OF THE PENTAGRAM

I have found the Enochian system to be the safest, cleanest and most logical system of practical magick one can perform. But it is an art and as such requires not only study and practice but also inspiration and the love-hate relationship all artists have with their craft. It is my hope that our book has given you something to study, practice and inspire you.

Chapter five

Liber LXXXIV vel Chanokh

A BRIEF ABSTRACT OF THE SYMBOLIC REPRESENTATION OF THE UNIVERSE DERIVED BY DOCTOR JOHN DEE THROUGH THE SKRYING OF SIR EDWARD KELLY

PART I

The Skryer obtained from certain Angels a series of seven talismans. These, grouped about the Holy Twelvefold Table, similarly obtained, were part of the furniture of the Holy Table, as shewn in Plate I.

Other appurtenances of this table will be described hereafter.

II

Other Pantacles were obtained in a similar manner. (Plate II) is the principal one, which, carved in wax, was placed upon the top of the table. On four others stood the feet of the table.

Note first the Holy Sevenfold Table containing seven Names of God which not even the Angels are able to pronounce.

SAAI $^{21}/_{8}$ EME
BTZKASE^{30}
HEIDENE
DEIMOL^{30}A
I^{26}MEGCBE
ILAOI $^{21}/_{8}$ VN
IHRLAAL $^{21}/_{8}$

These names are seen written without the heptagram within the heptagon.

By reading these obliquely are obtained names of Angels called—
(1) Filiæ Bonitatis or Filiolas Lucis.
E, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, Stimcul
(2) Filii Lucis.
I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, Stimcul
[These are given attributions to the Metals of the Planets in this order: Sol, Luna, Venus, Jupiter, Mars, Mercury, Saturn.]
(3) Filiæ Filiarum Lucis.
S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi, Esemeli
(4) Filii Filiorum Lucis.
L (EL), Aw, Ave, Liba, Iode, Hagone(l), Ilemese

See all these names in the heptagram of the great seal.

So also there are Seven Great Angels formed thus: take the comer letter S, then the diagonal next to it AB, then the next diagonal ATH, the fourth diagonal, where is I with 21/8 (which indicates EL), and we have the name—

SABATHIEL

Continuing the process, we get: ZEDEKIEL, MADIMIEL, SEMELIEL,NOGAHEL, CORABIEL, LEVANAEL.

These names will be found in the Pentagram and about it.

These angels are the angels of the Seven Circles of Heaven.

These are but a few of the mysteries of this great seal: SIGILLVM DEI ÆMETH

III

The Shew-stone, a crystal which Dee alleged to have been brought to him by angels, was then placed upon this table, and the principal result of the ceremonial skrying of Sir Edward Kelly is the obtaining of the following diagrams, Plates III-VIII.

He symbolized the Fourth-Dimensional Universe in two dimensions as a square surrounded by 30 concentric circles (the 30 Æthyrs or Aires) whose radii increase in a geometrical proportion.

The sides of the square are the four great watch-towers (Plates IV-VII) which are attributed to the elements. There is also a "black cross" (or "central tablet" according to the arrangement shewn—compare the black cross bordering the tablets in Plate III with Plate VIII).

Plate III gives the general view.

[The reversed letters which form the word PARAOAN are written in Enochian for convenience, as our A and 0 are not distinguishable reverse from forward.]

Plate IV gives the complete attribution of the tablet of Air.

The 6th file is called Linea Patris.

The 7th file is called Linea Filii.

The 7th line is called Linea Spiritus Sancti.

The great cross divides the Tablet into four lesser (sub-elemental) Tablets, the left-hand top corner being Air of Air, the right-hand top corner Water of Air, the left-hand bottom corner Earth of Air, the remaining corner Fire of Air.

Each of these lesser Tablets contains a Calvary Cross of ten squares, which governs it.

Plates V, VI, and VII are similar for the other elements.

This is the way in which the names are drawn from the great Tablets. [Examples taken from Water Tablet.]

1. Linea Spiritus Sancti gives the Three Holy Names of God of 3, 4, and 5 letters respectively:

MPH ARSL GAIOL

2. A whorl around the centre of the Tablet gives the name of the Great Elemental King, RAAGIOSL [similarly for Air BATAIVAH, for Earth ICZHHCAL, for Fire EDLPRNAA].

3. The 3 lines of the central cross of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost give the names of 6 seniors. [Thus the 4 tablets hold 24 "elders," as stated in the Apocalypse.] They are drawn of seven letters, each from the centre to the sides of the tablet.

Linea Patris, SAIINOV and SOAIZNT
Linea Filii, LAOAZRP and LIGDISA
Linea S.S, SLGAIOL and LSRAHPM

These three sets of names rule the whole tablet, and must be invoked before specializing in the lesser angles of the sub-elements.

4. The Calvary Crosses. The name upon the cross read vertically is the name which calls forth the powers of the lesser angle.

NELAPR (water of water)
OLGOTA (air of water)
MALADI (earth of water)
IAAASD (fire of water)

The name read horizontally on the cross is that which compels the evoked force to obedience.

OMEBB (water of water)
AALCO (air of water)
OCAAD (earth of water)
ATAPA (fire of water)

5. Above the bar of the Calvary Cross remain in each case four squares. These are allotted to the Kerubim, who must next be invoked. They are:

TDIM
DIMT
IMTD MTDI,

being metatheses of these four letters. The initial determines the file governed; e.g., TDIM governs the file which reads T(o)ILVR. These angels are most mighty and benevolent. They are ruled by names of God formed by prefixing the appropriate letter from the "black cross" to their own names.

6. Beneath the bar of the Calvary Cross remain 16 squares not yet accounted for. Here, beneath the presidency of the Kerubim, rule four mighty and benevolent angels—

INGM
LAOC
VSSN
RVOI

7. Triliteral names of demons or elementals are to be formed from these 16 squares, uniting the two letters on either side of the upright of the cross with a letter chosen from the Central Tablet or black cross in accordance with rules which will be given in their due place. Thus: GM, IN, OC, LA et cetera, form bases for these triliteral names.

The following rules explain how the sides of the pyramids of which the squares are formed are attributed to the Sephiroth, Planets, Elements, and Zodiacal signs.

1. Great Central Cross. This has 36 squares, for the decanates of the Zodiac.

On the left side of the Pyramid, Linea Patris has the Cardinal signs, the sign of the Element itself at the top, in the order of Tetragrammaton (Fire, Water, Air, Earth) going upwards.

Linea Filii has the Common signs in the same order.

Linea S.S. has the Kerubic signs, that of the element on the left, in the same order, right to left.

But the order of the decans in each sign is reverse, and thus the planets which fill the right-hand side of the Pyramids go in the first two cases downwards, and in the third from left to right.

The upper sides of the Pyramids are all attributed to the Element of Spirit, the lower sides to the Element of the Tablet.

Each square is also referred to the small card of the Tarot which corresponds to the Decan (refer to Crowley's work, 777, Weiser, 1972).

2. Calvary Crosses.

Each has 10 squares.

The upper sides of the Pyramids are uniformly given to Spirit, the lower sides to the Sephiroth, in the order shewn. The left-hand sides are attributed to the element of the Tablet, the right-hand sides to the sub-element of the lesser angle.

3. Kerubic Squares.

The upper sides pertain to the element of the Tablet, the lower sides to the sub-element. Right and left-hand sides in this case correspond, according to a somewhat complex rule which it is unnecessary to give here. The attributions to the Court Cards of the Tarot naturally follow.

4. Lesser Squares.

The upper side of each pyramid is governed by the Kerub standing on the pile above it. The lower side is governed by the Kerub also, but in order descending as they are from right to left above. [See angle of Air of Water; the Kerubs go Earth, Fire, Water, Air (from the square marked D, the fifth from the left in the top rank of the Tablet), and downward the lower sides of the squares marked 0, D, *E, Z (this should probably read 0, D, X, Z. Ed) go Earth, Fire, Water, Air.]

The left-hand side refers to the element of the Tablet, the right-hand side to the sub-element of the lesser angle.

5. The Black Cross of Central Tablet.

The upper and lower sides are equally attributed to Spirit.

The left-hand sides to the element of the file, in this order from left to right: Spirit, Air, Water, Earth, Fire.

The right-hand sides to the element of the rank in this order: Air, Water, Earth, Fire.

IV

Follows Plate IX, the Alphabet in which all this is written. It is the Alphabet of the Angelic Language. The invocations which we possess in that tongue follow in their due place.

[It is called also Enochian, as these angels claimed to be those which conversed with the "patriarch Enoch" of Jewish fable.]

V

The Thirty Æthyrs or Aires and their divisions and angels are as follows [We omit for the present consideration of the parts of the earth to which they are stated to correspond, and the question of the attributions to the cardinal points and the Tribes of Israel. These are duly tabulated in Dee's Liber Scientiæ, Auxilii, et Victoria Terrestris}:

Name of Aire	Names of Governor	Numbers of Servitors	In All
1. LIL.	OCCODON	7209	14,931
	PASCOMB	2360
	VALGARS	5362
2. ARN.	DOAGNIS	3636	15,960
	PACASNA	2362
	DIALIVA	8962
3. ZOM.	SAMAPHA	4400	17,296
	VIROOLI	3660
	ANDISPI	9236
4.PAZ.	THOTANF	2360	11,660
	AXZIARG	3000
	POTHNIR	6300

5. LIT.	LAZDIXI	8630
	NOCAMAL	2306
	TIARPAX	5802	16,736
6.MAZ.	SAXTOMP	3620
	VAVAAMP	9200
	ZIRZIRD	7220	20,040
7. DEO.	OBMACAS	6363
	GENADOL	7706
	ASPIAON	6320	20,389
8. ZID.	ZAMFRES	4362
	TODNAON	7236
	PRISTAC	2302	13,900
9. ZIP.	ODDIORG	9996
	CRALPIR	3620
	DOANZIN	4230	17,846
10. ZAX.	LEXARPH	8880
	COMANAN	1230
	TABITOM	1617	11,727

[Note that these 3 names come from the black cross, with the addition of an L. This L is one of the 8 reversed letters in the four watchtowers, the other seven forming the word PARAOAN, q.v. infra.}

11. ICH.	MOLPAND	3472
	VANARDA	7236
	PONODOL	5234	15,942
12. LOE.	TAPAMAL	2658
	GEDOONS	7772
	AMBRIAL	3391	13,821
13. ZIM.	GECAOND	8111
	LAPARIN	3360
	DOCEPAX	4213	15,684

14. VTA.	TEDOOND	2673
	VIVIPOS	9236
	OOANAMB	8230	20,139
15. OXO.	TAHANDO	1367
	NOCIABI	1367
	TASTOXO	1886	4,620
16. LEA.	COCARPT	9920
	LANACON	9230
	SOCHIAL	9240	28,390
17. TAN	SIGMORF	7623
	AYDROPT	7132
	TOCARZI	2634	17,389
18. ZEN	NABAOMI	2346
	ZAFASAI	7689
	YALPAMB	9276	19,311
19. POP.	TORZOXI	6236
	ABAIOND	6732
	OMAGRAP	2388	15,356
20. KHR.	ZILDRON	3626
	PARZIBA	7629
	TOTOCAN	3634	14,889
21. ASP.	CHIRSPA	5536
	TOANTOM	5635
	VIXPALG	5658	16,929
22. LIN.	OZIDAIA	2232
	PARAOAN	2326
	CALZIRG	2367	6,925
23. TOR.	RONOAMB	7320
	ONIZIMP	7262
	ZAXANIN	7333	21,915
24. NIA.	ORCAMIR	8200
	CHIALPS	8360
	SOAGEEL	8236	24,796

25. VTI.	MIRZIND	5632
	OBUAORS	6333
	RANGLAM	6236	18,201
26. DES.	POPHAND	9232
	NIGRANA	3620
	BAZCHIM	5637	18,489
27. ZAA.	SAZIAMI	7220
	MATHVLA	7560
	ORPAMB	7263	22,043
28. BAG.	LABNIXP	2360
	FOCISNI	7236
	OXLOPAR	8200	18,066
29. RII.	VASTRIM	9632
	ODRAXTI	4236
	GOMZIAM	7635	21,503
30. TEX.	TAONGLA	4632
	GEMNIMB	9636
	ADVORPT	7632
	DOZINAL	5632	27,532

Plate X. shows us the names of these governors in the four Watch-Towers. Compare with Plate III.

Note that the sigil of each Governor is unique; the four sigils at the comers of Plate X. without the great square are those of the four great Elemental Kings:

Air	TAHAOELOJ
Water	THAHEBYOBEEATAN
Earth	THAHAAOTAHE
Fire	OHOOOHAATAN

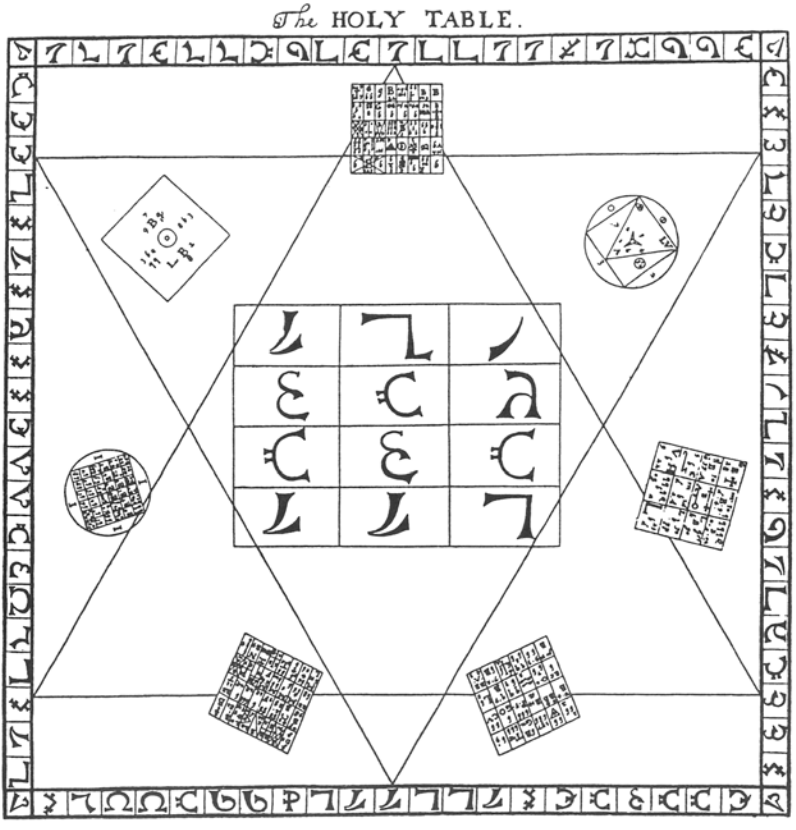

PLATE I.

SIGILLVM DEI ÆMETH.

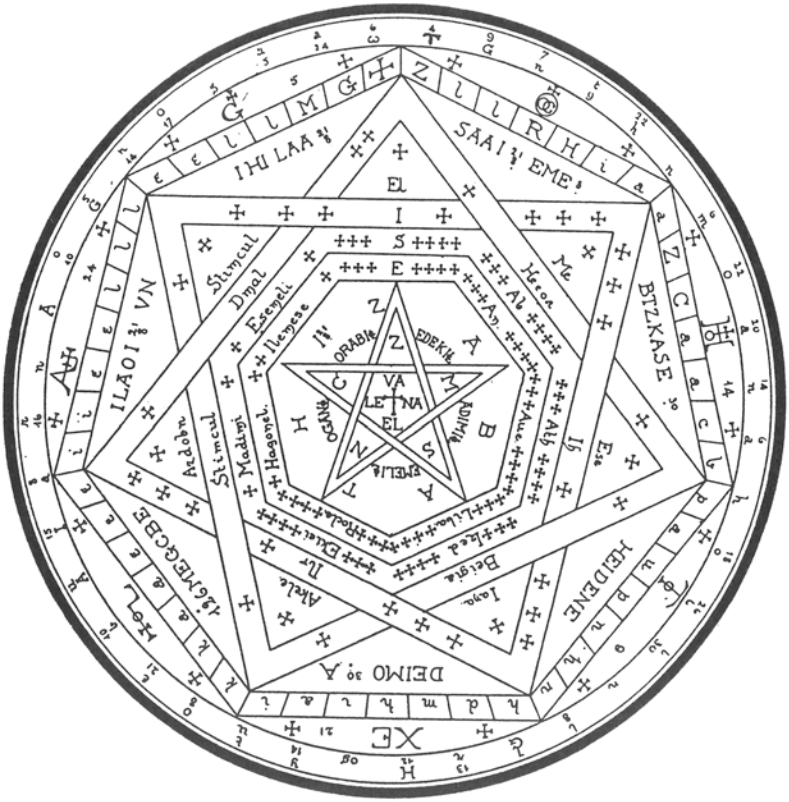

PLATE II.

THE FOUR GREAT WATCH-TOWERS AND THE BLACK CROSS WITHIN GENERAL VIEW.

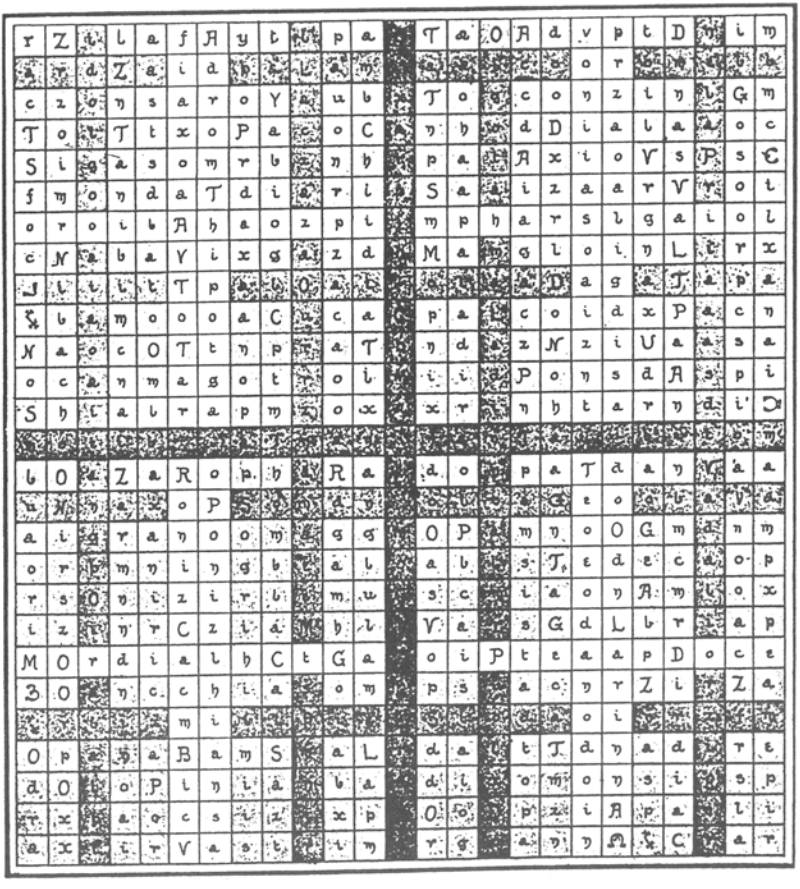

PLATE III.

THE GREAT WATCH-TOWER OF THE EAST, ATTRIBUTED TO AIR.

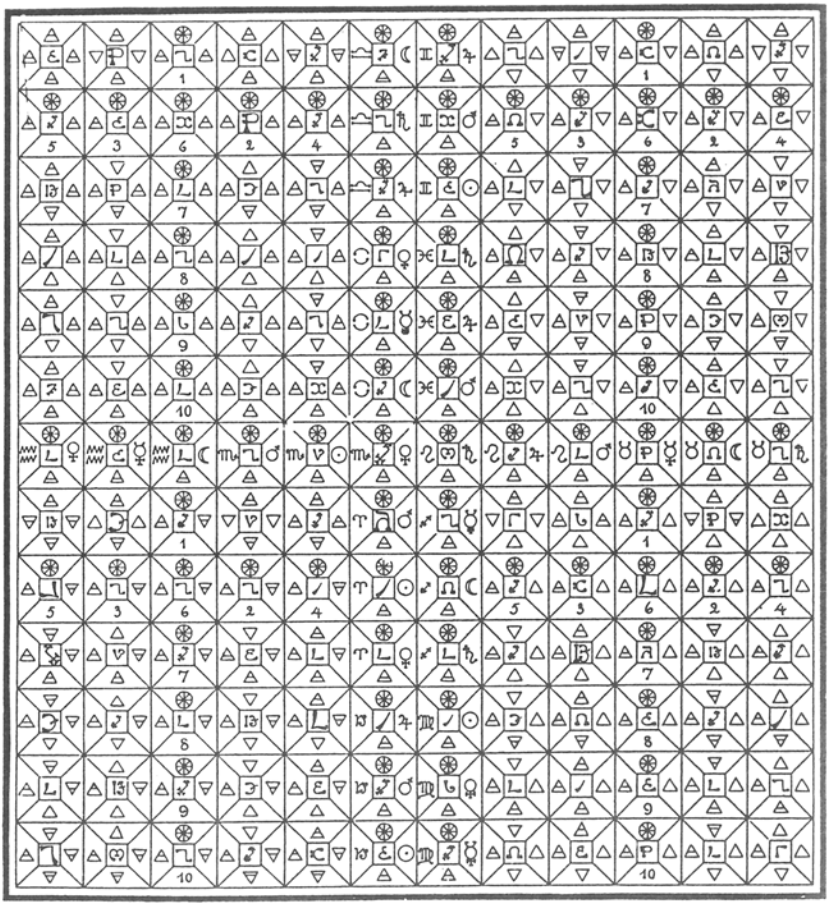

PLATE IV.

THE GREAT WATCH-TOWER OF THE WEST, ATTRIBUTED TO WATER.

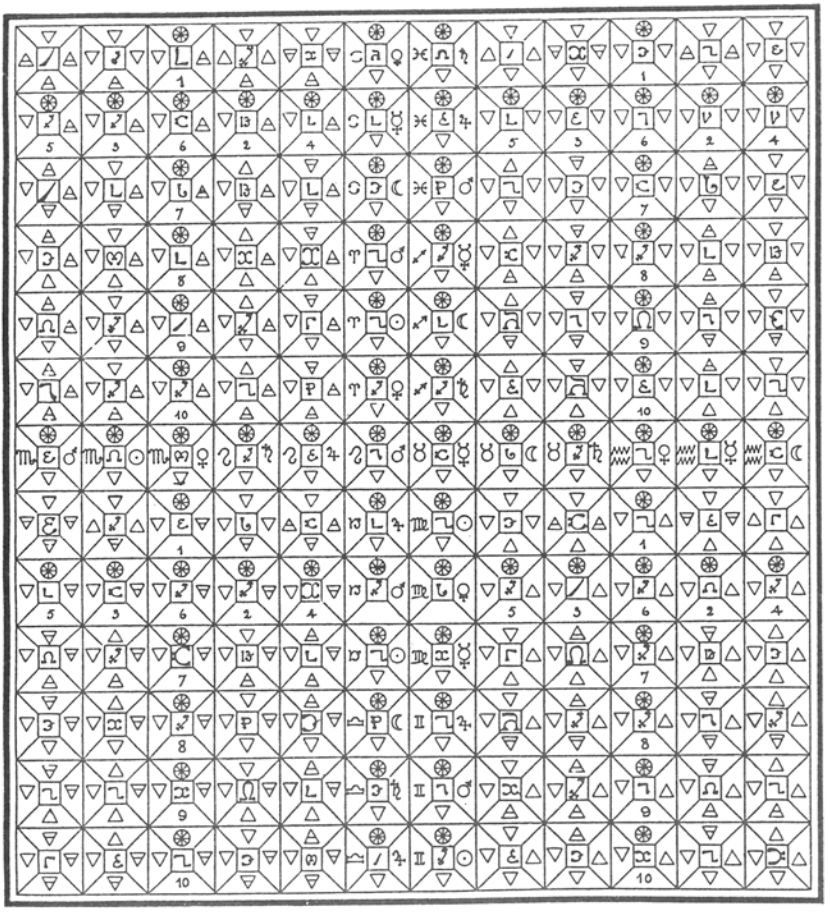

PLATE V.

THE GREAT WATCH-TOWER OF THE NORTH, ATTRIBUTED TO EARTH.

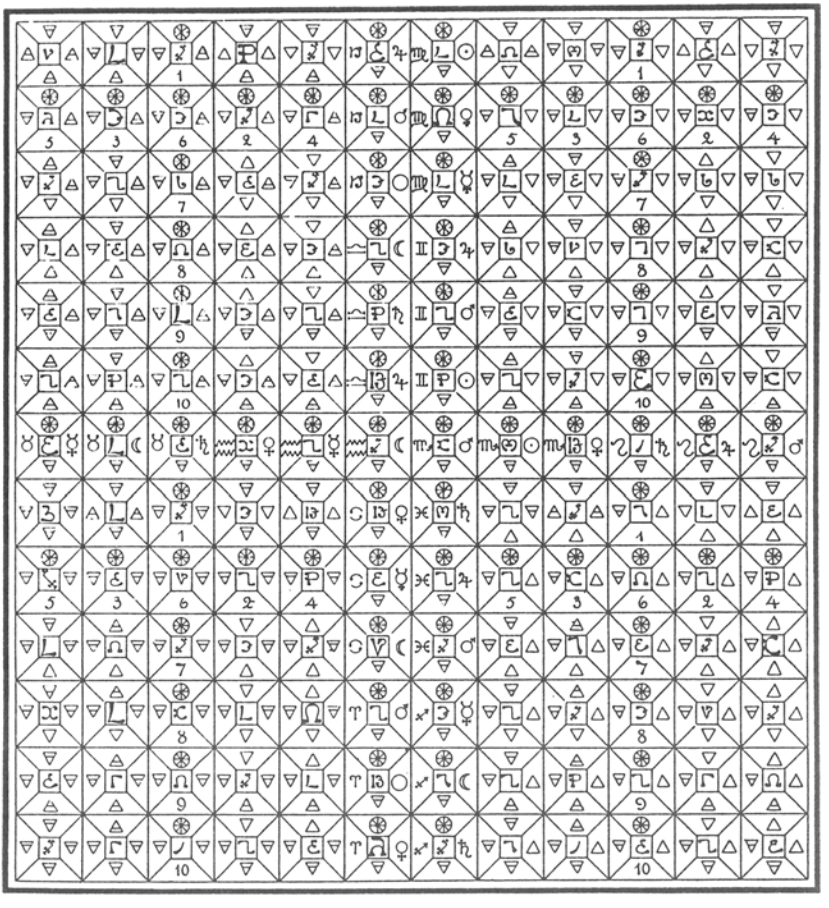

PLATE VI.

THE GREAT WATCH-TOWER OF THE SOUTH, ATTRIBUTED TO FIRE.

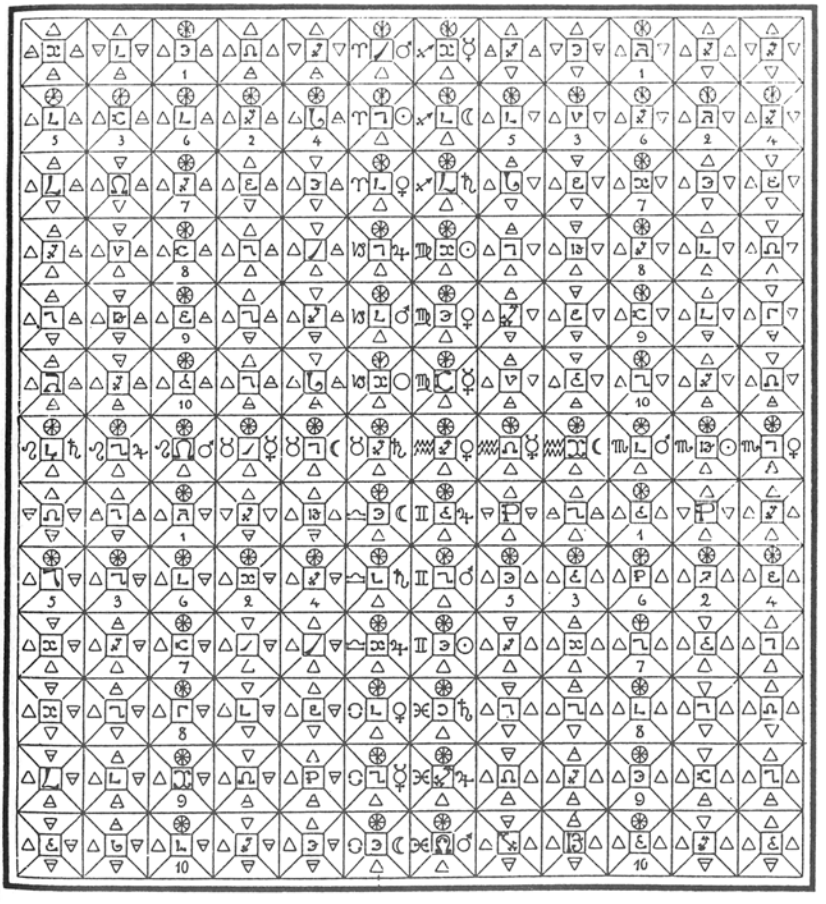

PLATE VII.

THE BLACK CROSS, OR TABLE OF UNION, ATTRIBUTED TO SPIRIT.

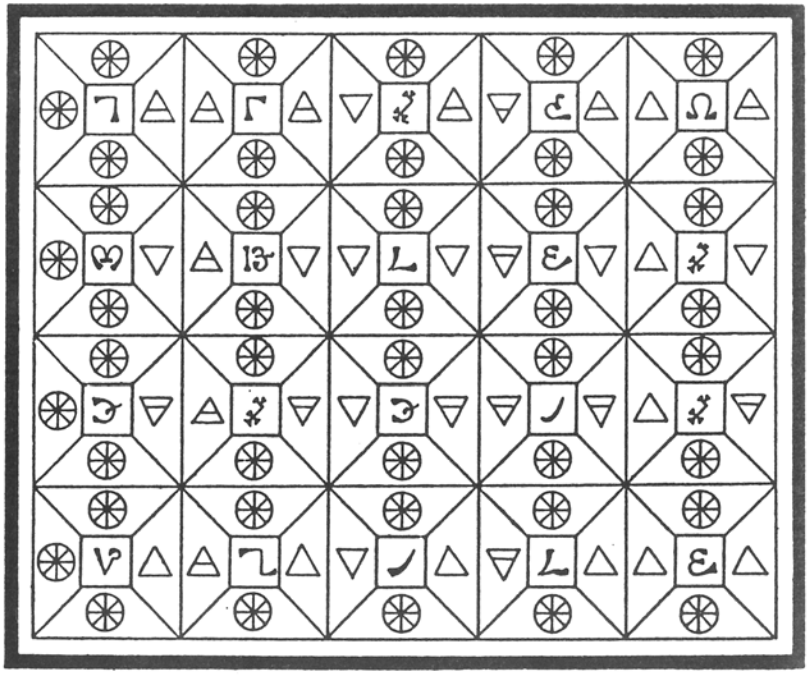

PLATE VIII.

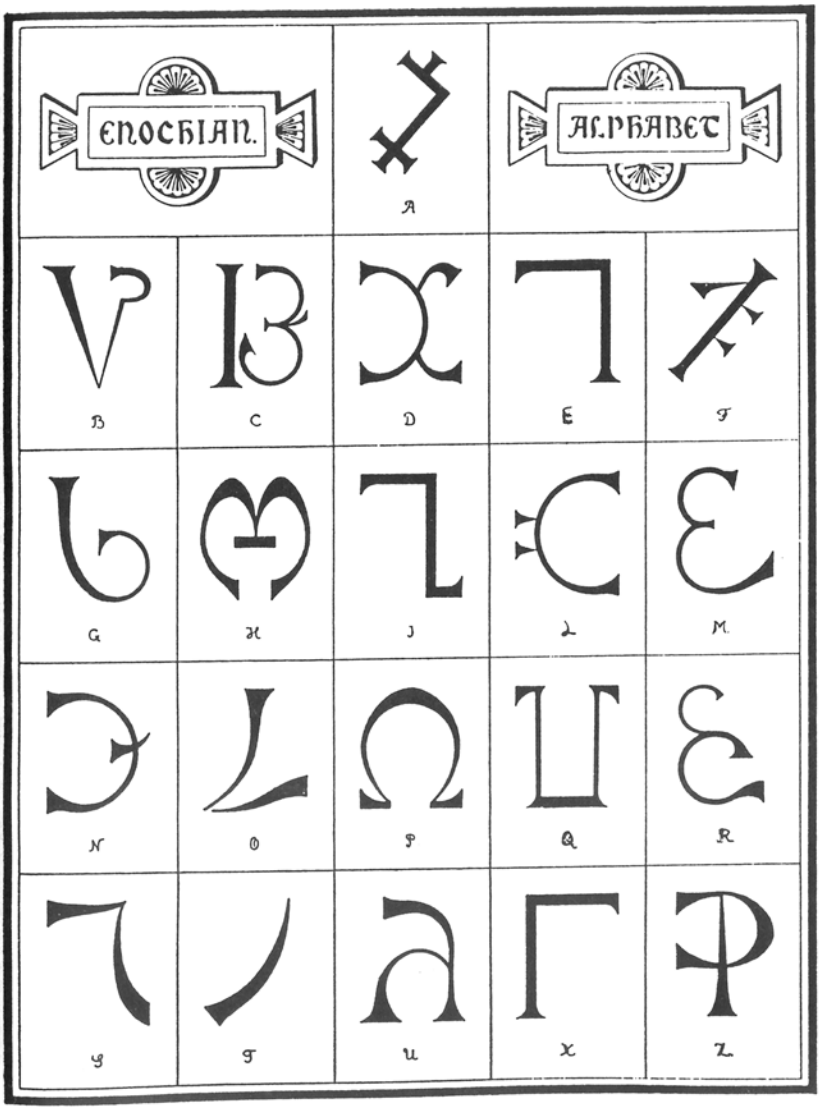

PLATE IX.

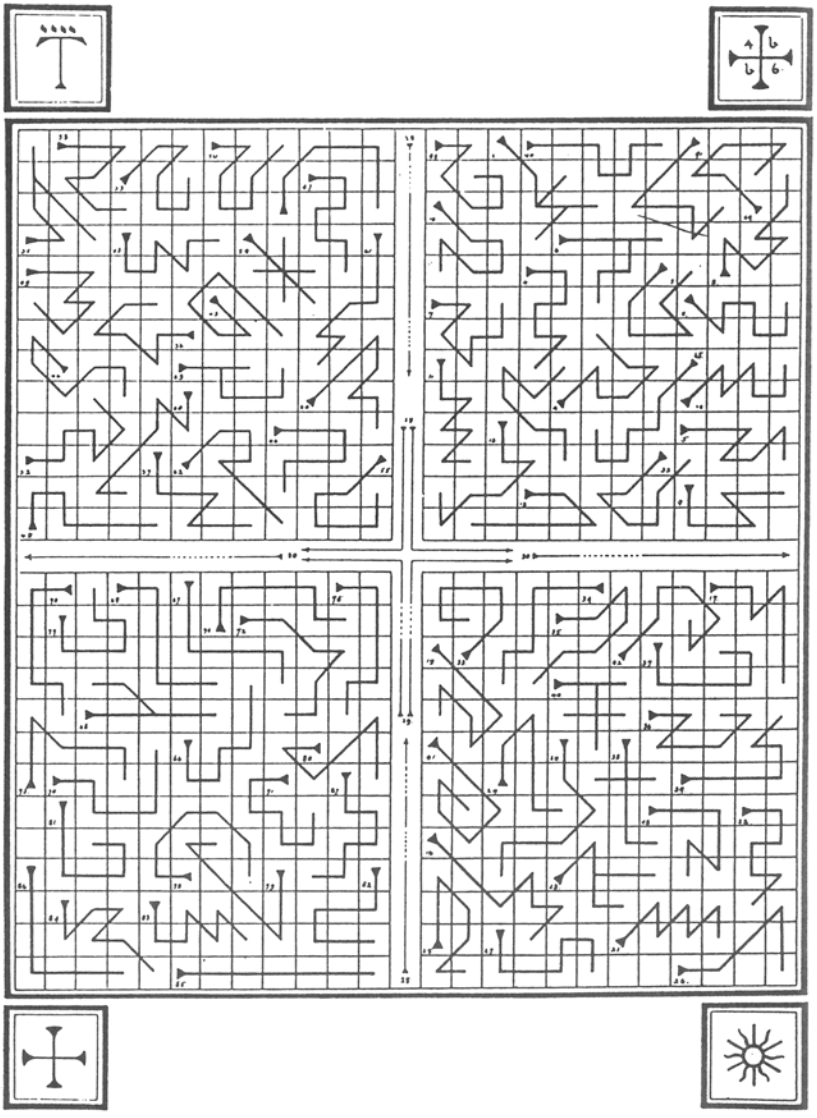

PLATE X.

PART II

THE FORTY-EIGHT CALLS OR KEYS

These are Most Solemn Invocations. Use these only after other invocations. Key tablet hath 6 calls, 1 above other 5.

1: Governs generally as a whole the tablet of Union. Use it first in all invocations of Angels of that tablet, but not at all with other 4 tablets.

2: Used as an invocation of Angels e h n b representing governance of Spirit in the tablet of Union: also precedes, in the second place, all invocations of Key tablet Angels. Not used in invocations of 4 other tablets.

3, 4, 5, 6: Used in invocations of Angels of Tablet of Union, also of angels of 4 terrestrial tablets, thus—

3: Used to invoke Angels of the letters of the line

e x a r p.

For those of Tablet ORO as a whole and for the lesser angle of this tablet, which is that of the element itself, viz. i d o i g o. So for others—

The remaining 12 Keys refer to the remaining lesser angles of the tablets, the order of the elements being Air, Water, Earth, Fire.

Pronounce Elemental language (also called Angelic or Enochian) by inserting the next following Hebrew vowel between consonants, e.g. e after b (bEth), i after g (gImel), a after d, etc.

THE OPENING OF THE PORTAL
OF THE VAULT OF THE ADEPTS

PAROKETH, the Veil of the Sanctuary.
The Sign of the Rending of the Veil.
The Sign of the Closing of the Veil.
[Give these.]
Make the Invoking Pentagrams of Spirit.

In the number 21, in the grand word AHIH ;

In the Name YHShVH, in the Pass Word I.N.R.I., O Spirits of the Tablet of Spirit, Ye, ye, I invoke! The sign of Osiris slain! The sign of the mourning of Isis! The sign ofApophis and Typhon! The sign of Osiris Risen! L.V.X., Lux. The Light of the Cross. [Give these.]

In the name of IHVH ALVH VDOTh, I declare that the Spirits of Spirit have been duly invoked. The Knock 1—4444.

THE FIRST KEY'

OL sonuf vaoresaji, gohu IAD Balata, elanusaha caelazod: sobrazod-ol Roray i ta nazodapesad, Giraa ta maelpereji, das hoel-qo qaa notahoa zodimezod, od comemahe ta nobeloha zodien; soba tahil ginonupe pereje aladi, das vaurebes obolehe giresam. Casarem ohorela caba Pire: das zodonurenusagi cab: erem ladanahe. Pilahe farezodem zodenurezoda adana gono ladapiel das home-tohe: soba ipame lu ipamis: das sobolo vepe zodomeda poamal, od bogira aai ta piape Piamoel od Vaoan[2] ! Zodacare, eca, od zodameranu! odo cicale Qaa; zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, Hoathahe I A I D A!

86 words in this Enochian Call.

[Invokes the whole Tablet of Spirit.]

---

1) Collation of the various MSS. of these calls has not done away with Various Readings; and there is not enough of the language extant to enable a settlement on general principles. — Ed.

2) Read here Vooan in invocations of Fallen Spirits.

THE FIRST KEY

I REIGN over ye, saith the God of Justice, in power exalted above the Firmament of Wrath, in whose hands the Sun is as a sword, and the Moon as a through thrusting Fire: who measureth your Garments in the midst of my Vestures, and trussed you together as the palms of my hands.

Whose seats I garnished with the Fire of Gathering, and beautified your garments with admiration. To whom I made a law to govern the Holy Ones, and delivered ye a Rod, with the Ark of Knowledge. Moreover you lifted up your voices and sware obedience and faith to Him that liveth and triumpheth: whose beginning is not, nor end cannot be: which shineth as a flame in the midst of your palaces, and reigneth amongst you as the balance of righteousness and truth!

Move therefore, and shew yourselves! Open the mysteries of your creation! Be friendly unto me, for I am the Servant of the same your God: the true worshipper of the Highest!

169 words in the English Call.

THE SECOND KEY

ADAGITA vau-pa-ahe zodonugonu fa-a-ipe salada! Vi-i-vau el! Sobame ial-pereji i-zoda-zodazod pi-adapehe casarema aberameji ta ta-labo paracaleda qo-ta lores-el-qo turebesa ooge balatohe! Giui cahisa lusada oreri od micalapape cahisa bia ozodonugonu! lape noanu tarofe coresa tage o-quo maninu IA-I-DON. Torezodu! gohe-el, zodacare eca ca-no-quoda! zodameranu micalazodo od ozadazodame vaurelar; lape zodir IOIAD!

THE SECOND KEY

CAN the Wings of the Winds understand your voices of Wonder? 0 you! the second of the First! whom the burning flames have framed in the depth of my Jaws! Whom I have prepared as cups for a wedding, or as the flowers in their beauty for the chamber of Righteousness! Stronger are your feet than the barren stone: and mightier are your voices than the manifold winds! For you are become a building such as is not, save in the Mind of the All-Powerful.

Arise, saith the First: Move therefore unto his servants! Shew yourselves in power, and make me a strong Seer-of-things: for I am of Him that liveth for ever!

[Invokes: The File of Spirit in the Tablet of Spirit.
E — the Root of the Powers of Air.
H — the Root of the Powers of Water.
N — the Root of the Powers of Earth.
B — the Root of the Powers of Fire. The Four Aces.]

THE OPENING OF THE TEMPLE IN THE GRADE OF 2° =9▫.

GIVE the Sign of Shu.

[Knock.] Let us adore the Lord and King of Air!

Shaddai El Chai! Almighty and ever-living One, be Thy Name ever magnified in the Life of All. (Sign of Shu.) Amen!

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Active in these names: AHIH AGLA EXARP.]

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Air in these names: IHVH ShDI AL Chl.]

And Elohim said: Let us make Adam in Our own image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fowls of the air.

In the Names of IHVH and of ShDI AL Chl, Spirits of Air, Adore your Creator!

[With air-dagger (or other suitable weapon) make the sign of Aquarius.] In the name of RPAL and in the Sign of the Man, Spirits of Air, adore your Creator!

[Make the Cross.] In the Names and Letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle, Spirits of Air, Adore your Creator!

[Hold dagger aloft.] In the Three great Secret Names of God, ORO IBAH AOZPI that are borne upon the Banners of the East, Spirits of Air, adore your Creator!

[Again elevate dagger.] In the Name of BATAIVAH, great King of the East, Spirits of Air, adore your Creator!

In the Name of Shaddai AL Chai, I declare that the Spirits of Air have been duly invoked.

The Knock 333—333—333.

THE THIRD KEY

MICAMA! goho Pe-IAD! zodir com-selahe azodien biabe os-londohe. Norezodacahisa otahila Gigipahe; vaunud-el-cahisa ta-pu-ime qomos-pelehe telocahe; qui-i-inu toltoregi cahisa i cahisaji em ozodien; dasata beregida od torezodul! Hi e-01 balazodareji, od aala tahilanu-os netaabe: daluga vaomesareji elonusa cape-mi-ali vaoresa cala homila; cocasabe fafenu izodizodope, od miinoagi de ginetaabe: vaunu na-na-e-el: panupire malapireji caosaji. Pilada noanu vaunalahe balata od-vaoan. Doo-i-ape mada: goholore, gohus, amiranu! Micama! Yehusozod ca-ca-com, od do-o-a-inu noari micaolazoda a-ai-om. Casarameji gohia: Zodacare! Vaunigilaji! od im-ua-mar pugo pelapeli Ananael Qo-a-an.

Eighty words in the Enochian Call.

THE THIRD KEY

BEHOLD! saith your God! I am a circle on whose hands stand Twelve Kingdoms. Six are the seats of living breath: the rest are as sharp Sickles, or the Horns of Death. Wherein the creatures of Earth are and are not, except (in) mine own hands; which sleep and shall rise!

In the First I made ye stewards, and placed ye in twelve seats of government: giving unto every one of you power successively over the 456 true ages of time: to the intent that from the highest vessels and the corners of your governments you might work my Power, pouring down the fires of life and increase continually on the earth. Thus you are become the skirts of Justice and Truth.

In the name of the same your God, lift up, I say, yourselves! Behold! His mercies flourish, and (His) Name is become mighty among us.

In whom we say: Move! Descend! and apply yourselves unto us as unto the partakers of His Secret Wisdom in your Creation.

167 words in this English Call.

[Invokes: Exarp; the whole Tablet of Air. The angle of Air of Air. The Prince of the Chariot of the Winds.]

THE OPENING OF THE TEMPLE IN THE GRADE OF 3° = 8□

GIVE the Sign of Auramoth.

[Knock.] Let us adore the Lord and King of Water! ElohimTzabaoth! Elohim of Hosts!

Glory be to the Ruach Elohim which moved upon the Face of the Waters of Creation!

AMEN!

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Passive and pronounce these names: AHIH AGLA HCOMA.]

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Water and pronounce: AL ALHIM TzBAVTh.]

And Elohim said: Let us make Adam in Our image; and let them have dominion over the Fish of the Sea! In the Name of AL, Strong and Powerful, and in the name of ALHIM TzBAVTh, Spirits of Water, adore you Creator!

[Make Sigil of Eagle with cup.] In the name of GBRIAL and in the sign of the Eagle, Spirits of Water, adore your Creator!

[Make cross with cup.] In all the Names and Letters of the Great Quadrangle of the West, Spirits of Water, adore your Creator!

[Elevate cup.] In the three great Secret Names of God MPH ARSL GAIOL that are borne upon the Banners of the West, Spirits of Water, adore your Creator!

[Elevate cup.] In the Name of RAAGIOSEL, great King of the West, Spirits of Water, adore your Creator!

In the name of Elohim Tzabaoth, I declare that the Spirits of Water have been duly invoked.

The Knock. 1—333—1—333.

THE FOURTH KEY

OTAHIL elasadi babaje, od dorepaha gohol: gi-cahisaje auauago coremepe peda, dasonuf vi-vau-di-vau? Casaremi oeli meapeme sobame agi coremepo carep-el: casaremeji caro-o-dazodi cahisa od vaugeji; dasata ca-pi-mali cahisa ca-pi-ma-on: od elonusahinu cahisa ta el-o calaa. Torezodu nor-quasahi od fe-caosaga: Bagile zodir e-na-IAD: das iod apila! Do-o-a-ipe quo-A-AL, zodacare! Zodameranu obelisonugi resat-el aaf nor-mo-lapi!

THE FOURTH KEY

I HAVE set my feet in the South, and have looked about me, saying: are not the thunders of increase numbered 33, which reign in the second Angle?

Under whom I have placed 9639: whom none hath yet numbered, but One; in whom the Second Beginnings of Things are and wax strong, which also successively are the Numbers of Time: and their powers are as the first 456.

Arise! you sons of Pleasure! and visit the earth: for I am the Lord your God; which is and liveth (for ever)! In the name of the Creator, move! and shew yourselves as pleasant deliverers, that you may praise him among the sons of men!

[Invokes: Hcoma; the whole tablet of Water.
The Angle of Water of Water.
The Queen of the Thrones of Water.]

THE OPENING OF THE TEMPLE IN THE GRADE OF 1° = 10°

GIVE the Sign of the God SET fighting.

Purify with Fire and Water, and announce "The Temple is cleansed."

[Knock.] Let us adore the Lord and King of Earth!

Adonai ha Aretz, Adonai Melekh, unto Thee be the Kingdom, the Sceptre, and the Splendour:

Malkuth, Geburah, Gedulah, The Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley, Amen!

[Sprinkle Salt before Earth tablet.] Let the Earth adore Adonai!

[Make the Invoking Hexagram of Saturn.]

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Passive, and pronounce these Names: AHIH AGLA NANTA.]

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Earth, and pronounce this Name: ADNI MLK.]

And Elohim said: Let us make Man in Our own image; and let them have dominion over the Fish of the Sea and over the Fowl of the Air: and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth. And the Elohim created ATh-h-ADAM: in the image of the Elohim created They them; male and female created They them. In the Name of ADNI MLK, and of the Bride and Queen of the Kingdom; Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!

[Make the Sign of Taurus.] In the Name of AVRIAL, great archangel of Earth, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!

[Make the Cross.] In the Names and Letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!

[Sprinkle water before Earth Tablet.] In the three great secret Names of God, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, that are borne upon the Banners of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!

[Cense the Tablet.] In the name of IC-ZOD-HEH-CA(L), great King of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!

In the Name of Adonai Ha-Aretz, I declare that the Spirits of Earth have been duly invoked.

The Knock. 4444—333—22—1.

THE FIFTH KEY

SAPAHE zodimii du-i-be, od noasa ta qu-a-nis, adarocahe dorepehal caosagi od faonutas peripesol ta-be-liore. Casareme A-me-ipezodi na-zodaretahe afa; od dalugare zodizodope zode-lida caosaji tol-toregi; od zod-cahisa esiasacahe El ta-vi-vau; od iao-d tahilada das hubare pe-o-al; soba coremefa cahisa ta Ela Vaulasa od Quo-Co-Casabe. Eca niisa od darebesa quo-a-asa: fetahe-ar-ezodi od beliora: ia-ial eda-nasa cicalesa; bagile Ge-iad I-el!

THE FIFTH KEY

THE mighty sounds have entered into the third angle, and are become as olives in the Olive Mount; looking with gladness upon the earth, and dwelling in the brightness of the Heavens as continual Comforters.

Unto whom I fastened 19 Pillars of Gladness, and gave them vessels to water the earth with her creatures; and they are the brothers of the First and Second, and the beginning of their own seats, which are garnished with 69,636 ever-burning lamps: whose numbers are as the First, the Ends, and the Contents of Time.

Therefore come ye and obey your creation: visit us in peace and comfort: conclude us receivers of your mysteries: for why? Our Lord and Master is the All-One!

[Invokes: Nanta; the whole tablet of Earth.

The angle of Earth of Earth.

The Princess of the Echoing Hills,

The Rose of the Palace of Earth.]

THE OPENING OF THE TEMPLE IN THE GRADE OF 4° =7▫

GIVE the sign of Thoum-aesh-neith.

[Knock.] Let us adore the Lord and King of Fire! Tetragrammaton Tzabaoth! Blessed be Thou! The Leader of Armies is Thy Name!

AMEN!

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Active, and pronounce these Names: AHIH AGLA BITOM.]

[Make the Invoking Pentagram of Fire, and pronounce: ALHIM IHVH TzBAVTh.]

[Make the sign of Leo with censer (or other suitable weapon).] In the name of MIKAL, archangel of Fire, Spirits of Fire, adore your Creator!

[Make the Cross.] In the Names and Letters of the Great Southern Quadrangle, Spirits of Fire, adore your Creator!

[Elevate censer.] In the three Secret names of God, OIP TEAA PDOCE, that are borne upon the banners of the South, Spirits of Fire, adore your Creator!

[Lower and lift censer.] In the Name of EDELPERNA, great King of the South, Spirits of Fire, adore your Creator!

In the Name of IHVH TzBAVTh, I declare that the Spirits of Fire have been duly invoked.

The Knock. 333—1—333.

THE SIXTH KEY

GAHE sa-div cahisa em, micalazoda Pil-zodinu, sobam El haraji mir babalonu od obeloce samevelaji, dalagare malapereji ar-caosaji od acame canale, sobola zodare fa-beliareda caosaji od cahisa aneta-na miame ta Viv od Da. Daresare Sol-petahe-bienu. Be-ri-ta od zodacame ji-mi-calazodo: sob-ha-atahe tarianu luia-he od ecarinu MADA Qu-a-a-on!

THE SIXTH KEY

THE Spirits of the fourth angle are Nine, Mighty in the Firmament of Waters: whom the First hath planted, a torment to the wicked and a garland to the righteous: giving unto them fiery darts to vanne the earth, and 7699 continual workmen, whose courses visit with comfort the earth; and are in government and continuance as the Second and the Third— Therefore hearken unto my voice! I have talked of you, and I move you in power and presence, whose works shall be a song of honour, and the praise of your God in your Creation!

[Invokes: Bitom; the whole tablet of Fire.

The Angle of Fire of Fire

The Lord of the Flame and the Lightning,

The King of the Spirits of Fire.]

THE SEVENTH KEY

RA-ASA isalamanu para-di-zoda oe-cari-mi aao iala-pire-gahe Qui-inu. Enai butamonu od inoasa ni pa-ra-diala. Casaremeji ujeare cahirelanu, od zodonace lucifatianu, caresa ta vavale-zodirenu tol-hami. Soba lonudohe od nuame cahisa ta Da o Desa vo-ma-dea od pi-beliare itahila rita od miame ca-ni-quola rita! Zodacare! Zodameranu! lecarimi Quo-a-dahe od I-mica-ol-zododa aaiome. Bajirele papenore idalu-gama elonusahi—od umapelifa vau-ge-ji Bijil —IAD!

THE SEVENTH KEY

THE East is a house of Virgins singing praises among the flames of first glory wherein the Lord hath opened his mouth; and they are become 28 living dwellings in whom the strength of man rejoiceth; and they are apparelled with ornaments of brightness, such as work wonders on all creatures. Whose kingdoms and continuance are as the Third and Fourth, strong towers and places of comfort, the Seats of Mercy and Continuance. 0 ye Servants of Mercy, Move! Appear! Sing praises unto the Creator; and be mighty amongst us. For that to this remembrance is given power, and our strength waxeth strong in our Comforter!

The Angle of Water of Air, in the tablet of Air.

The Queen of the Thrones of Air.

THE EIGHT KEY

BAZODEMELO i ta pi-ripesonu olanu Na-zodavabebe ox. Casaremeji varanu cahisa vaugeji asa berameji balatoha: goho IAD. Soba miame tarianu ta lolacis Abaivoninu od azodiajiere riore. Irejila cahisa da das pa-aox busada Caosago, das cahisa od ipuranu telocahe cacureji o-isalamahe lonucaho od Vovina carebafe? NIISO! bagile avavago gohon. NIISO! bagile momao siaionu, od mabezoda IAD oi asa-momare poilape. NIIASA! Zodameranu ciaosi caosago od belioresa od coresi ta a beramiji.

THE EIGHTH KEY

THE Midday, the first is as the third Heaven made of 26 Hyacinthine Pillars, in whom the Elders are become strong, which I have prepared for mine own Righteousness, saith the Lord: whose long continuance shall be as bucklers to the Stooping Dragon, and like unto the harvest of a Widow. How many are there which remain in the Glory of the Earth, which are, and shall not see Death until the House fall and the Dragon sink? Come away! for the Thunders (of increase) have spoken. Come away! for the Crowns of the Temple and the Robe of Him that is, was, and shall be, crowned, are divided! Come forth! Appear! to the terror of the Earth, and to our comfort, and to the comfort of such as are prepared.

The Angle of Earth of Air, in the tablet of Air.
The Princess of the Rushing Winds,
the Lotus of the Palace of Air.

THE NINTH KEY

MICAOLI beranusaji perejela napeta ialapore, das barinu efafaje Pe vaunupeho olani od obezoda, soba-ca upaahe cahisa tatanu od tarananu balie, alare busada so-bolunu od cahisa hoel-qo ca-no-quodi cial. Vaunesa aladonu mom caosago ta iasa olalore ginai limelala. Amema cahisa sobra madarida zod cahisa! Ooa moanu cahisa avini darilapi caosajinu: od butamoni pareme zodumebi canilu. Dazodisa etahamezoda cahisa dao, od mireka ozodola cahisa pidiai Colalala. Ul ci ninu a sobame ucime. Bajile? IAD BALATOHE cahirelanu pare! NIISO! od upe ofafafe; bajile a-cocasahe icoresaka a uniji beliore.

THE NINTH KEY

A MIGHTY guard of Fire with two-edged swords flaming (which have eight Vials of wrath for two times and a half, whose wings are of wormwood and of the marrow of salt), have set their feet in the West, and are measured with their 9996 ministers. These gather up the moss of the Earth as the rich man doth his Treasure. Cursed are they whose iniquities they are! In their eyes are mill-stones greater than the earth, and from their mouths run seas of blood. Their heads are covered with diamonds, and upon their heads are marble stones[3] Happy is he on whom they frown not. For why? The Lord of Righteousness rejoiceth in them! Come away, and not your Vials: for that the time is such as requireth Comfort.

The Angle of Fire of Air, in the tablet of Air.

The Lord of the Winds and Breezes,

the King of the Spirits of Air.

THE TENTH KEY

CORAXO cahisa coremepe, od belanusa Lucala azodiazodore paebe Soba iisononu cahisa uirequo ope copehanu od racalire maasi bajile caosagi; das yalaponu dosiji od basajime; od ox ex dazodisa siatarisa od salaberoxa cynuxire faboanu. Vaunala cahisa conusata das daox cocasa ol Oanio yore vohima ol jizodyazoda od eoresa cocasaji pelosi molui das pajeipe, laraji same darolanu matorebe cocasaji emena. El pataralaxa yolaci matabe nomiji mononusa olora jinayo anujelareda. Ohyo! ohyo! ohyo! ohyo! ohyo! ohyo! noibe Ohyo! caosagonu! Bajile madarida i zodirope cahiso darisapa! NIISO! caripe ipe nidali!

THE TENTH KEY

THE Thunders of Judgement and Wrath are numbered and are harboured in the North, in the likeness of an Oak whose branches are 22 nests of lamentation and weeping laid up for the earth: which burn night and day, and vomit out the heads of scorpions and live Sulphur mingled with poison. These be the thunders that, 5678 times in the twenty-fourth part of a moment, roar with a hundred might earthquakes and a thousand times as many surges, which rest not, neither know any[4] time here. One rock bringeth forth a thousand, even as the heart of man doth his thoughts. Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe!

---

3) v.l. "Upon their hands are marble sleeves."
4) v.l. "Any echoing time between."

Yea, Woe be to the Earth, for her iniquity is, was, and shall be great. Come away! but not your mighty sounds!

The Angle of Air of Water, in the tablet of Water.
The Prince of the Chariot of the Waters.

THE ELEVENTH KEY

OXIAYALA holado, od zodirome 0 coraxo das zodiladare raasyo. Od vabezodire cameliaxa od bahala: NIISO! salamanu telocahe! Casaremanu hoel-qo, od ti ta zod cahisa soba coremefa i ga. NIISA! bagile aberameji nonucape. Zodacare eca od Zodameranu! odo cicale Qaa! Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA!

THE ELEVENTH KEY

THE mighty Seat groaned, and there were five Thunders that flew into the East. And the Eagle spake and cried aloud: Come away from the House of Death! And they gathered themselves together and became (those) of whom it is measured, and it is as They are, whose number is 31. Come away! For I have prepared (a place) for you. Move therefore, and shew yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation. Be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God: the true worshipper of the the Highest.

The Angle of Earth of Water, in the tablet of Water.
The Princess of the Waters,
the Lotus of the Palace of the Floods.

THE TWELFTH KEY

NONUCI dasonuf Babaje od cahisa ob hubaio tibibipe: alalare ataraahe od ef! Darix fafenu mianu ar Enayo ovof! Soba dooainu aai i VONUPEHE. Zodacare, gohusa, od Zodameranu. Odo cicale Qaa! Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA!

THE TWELFTH KEY

0 YE that range in the South and are the 28 Lanterns of Sorrow, bind up your girdles and visit us! bring down your train 3663 (servitors), that the Lord may be magnified, whose name amongst ye is Wrath. Move! I say, and shew yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation. Be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Angle of Fire of Water, in the tablet of Water.

The Lord of the Waves and the Waters,

the King of the Hosts of the Sea.

THE THIRTEENTH KEY

NAPEAI Babajehe das berinu vox ooaona larinuji vonupehe doalime: conisa olalogi oresaha das cahisa afefa. Micama isaro Mada od Lonu-sahi-toxa, das ivaumeda aai Jirosabe. Zodacare od Zodameranu. Odo cicale Qaa! Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE THIRTEENTH KEY

O YE Swords of the South, which have 42 eyes to stir up the wrath of Sin: making men drunken which are empty: Behold the Promise of God, and His Power, which is called amongst ye a bitter sting! Move and Appear! unveil the mysteries of your Creation, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Angle of Air of Earth, in the tablet of Earth.

The Prince of the Chariot of Earth.

THE FOURTEENTH KEY

NORONI bajihie pasahasa Oiada! das tarinuta mireca ol tahila dodasa tolahame caosago Aomida: das berinu orocahe quare: Micama! Bial' Oiad; aisaro toxa das ivame aai Balatima. Zodacare od Zodameranu!

Odo cicale Qaa! Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE FOURTEENTH KEY

O YE Sons of Fury, the Daughters of the Just One! that sit upon 24 seats, vexing all creatures of the Earth with age, that have 1636 under ye. Behold! The voice of God: the promise of Him who is called amongst ye Fury or Extreme Justice. Move and shew yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God: the true worshipper of the Highest!

The Angle of Water of Earth, in the tablet of Earth.

The Queen of the Thrones of Earth.

THE FIFTEENTH KEY

ILASA! tabaanu li-El pereta, casaremanu upaahi cahisa dareji; das oado caosaji oresacore: das omaxa monasaci Baeouibe od emetajisa laiadix. Zodacare od Zodameranu! Odo cicale Qaa. Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE FIFTEENTH KEY

O THOU, the Governor of the first Flame, under whose wings are 6739; that weave the Earth with dryness: that knowest the Great Name "Righteousness," and the Seal of Honour. Move and Appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation; be • friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God: the true worshipper of the Highest!

The Angle of Fire of Earth, in the tablet of Earth.

The Lord of the Wide and Fertile Land,

the King of the Spirits of Earth.

THE SIXTEENTH KEY

ILASA viviala pereta! Salamanu balata, das acaro odazodi busada, od belioraxa balita: das inusi caosaji lusadanu emoda: das ome od taliobe: darilapa iehe ilasa Mada Zodilodarepe. Zodacare od Zodameranu. Odo cicale Qaa: zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE SIXTEENTH KEY

O THOU second Flame, the House of Justice, which hast thy beginning in glory and shalt comfort the Just: which walkest upon the Earth with 8763 feet, which understand and separate creatures! Great art thou in the God of Stretch forth and Conquer. Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Angle of Air of Fire, in the tablet of Fire.

The Prince of the Chariot of Fire.

THE SEVENTEENTH KEY

ILASA dial pereta! soba vaupaahe cahisa nanuba zodixalayo dodasihe od berinutafaxisa hubaro tasataxa yolasa: soba lad / Vonupehe o Uonupehe: aladonu dax ila od toatare! Zodacare od Zodameranu! Odo cicale Qaa! Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE SEVENTEENTH KEY

O THOU third Flame! whose wings are thorns to stir up vexation, and who hast 7336 living lamps going before Thee: whose God is "Wrath in Anger":

Gird up thy loins and hearken! Move and Appear! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation; be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Angle of Water of Fire, in the tablet of Fire.

The Queen of the Thrones of Flame.

THE EIGHTEENTH KEY

ILASA micalazoda olapireta ialpereji beliore: das odo Busadire Oiad ouoaresa caosago: casaremeji

Laiada eranu berinutasa cafafame das ivemeda aqoso adoho Moz, od maof-fasa. Bolape como belioreta pamebeta. Zodacare od Zodameranu! Odo cicale Qaa. Zodoreje, lape zodiredo Noco Mada, hoathahe IAIDA.

THE EIGHTEENTH KEY

O THOU mighty Light and burning Flame of Comfort! that unveilest the Glory of God to the centre of the Earth, in whom the 6332 secrets of Truth have their abiding, that is called in thy kingdom "Joy" and not to be measured. Be thou a window of comfort unto me! Move and Appear! Unveil the mysteries of your Creation, be friendly unto me, for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Angle of Earth of Fire, in the tablet of Fire.
The Princess of the Shining Flame, the Rose of the Palace of Fire.

MARK WELL!

THESE first 18 calls are in reality 19; that is, 19 in the Celestial Orders; but with us the first table hath no call, and can have no call, seeing that it is of the Godhead. Thus, then, with us hath it the number of 0, though with them that of 1. (Even as the first key of the ROTA hath the number 0.)

After this follow the calls or keys of the Thirty Aires or Æthyrs: which are in substance similar, though, in the name of the Æthyrs, diversified.

The titles of the Thirty Æthyrs whose dominion extendeth in ever-widening circles without and beyond the Watch Towers of the Universe.

(The first is Outermost)

1	LIL	16	LEA
2	ARN	17	TAN
3	ZOM	18	ZEN

4	PAZ	19	POP
5	LIT	20	KHR
6	MAZ	21	ASP
7	DEO	22	LIN
8	ZID	23	TOR
9	ZIP	24	NIA
10	ZAX	25	VTI
11	ICH	26	DES
12	LOE	27	ZAA
13	ZIM	28	BAG
14	UTA	29	RII
15	OXO	30	TEX

THE CALL OR KEY OF THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS

MADARIATZA das perifa LIL[5]cahisa micaolazoda saanire caosago od fifisa balzodizodarasa laida. Nonuça gohulime: Micama adoianu MADA faoda beliorebe, soba ooaona cahisa luciftias peripesol, das aberaasasa nonuçafe netaaibe caosaji od tilabe adapehaheta damepelozoda, tooata nonuçafe jimicalazodoma larasada tofejilo marebe yareryo IDOIGO[6] od torezodulape yaodafe gohola, Caosaga, tabaoreda saanire, od caharisateosa yorepoila tiobela busadire, tilabe noalanu paida oresaba, od dodaremeni zodayolana. Elazodape tilaba pare-meji peripesatza, od ta qurelesata booapisa. Lanibame oucaho sayomepe, od caharisateosa ajitoltorenu, mireca qo tiobela lela. Tonu paomebeda dizodalamo asa pianu, od caharisateosa aji-la-tore-torenu paracahe a sayomepe. Coredazodizoda dodapala od fifalazoda, lasa manada, od faregita bamesa omaoasa. Conisabera od auauotza tonuji oresa; catabela noasami tabejesa leuitahemonuji. Vanucahi ome-petilabe oresa! Bagile? Moooabe OL coredazodizoda. El capimao itzomatzipe, od

---

[5)] Or other Aire as may be willed.
[6)] This name maybe appropriately varied with the Aire.

cacocasabe gosaa. Bajilenu pit tianuta a babalanuda, od faoregita teloca uo uime.

Madariiatza, torezodu!!! Oadariatza orocaha aboaperi! Tabaori periazoda aretabasa! Adarepanu coresata dobitza! Yolacame periazodi arecoazodiore, od quasabe qotinuji! Ripire paaotzata sagacore! Umela od peredazodare cacareji Aoiveae coremepeta! Torezodu! Zodacare od Zodameranu, asapeta sibesi butamona das surezodasa Tia balatanu. Odo cicale Qaa, od Ozodazodama pelapeli IADANAMADA!

THE CALL OR KEY OF THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS

O YE Heavens which dwell in the First Aire, ye are mighty in the parts of the Earth, and execute the Judgment of the Highest! Unto you it is said: Behold the Face of your God, the beginning of Comfort, whose eyes are the brightness of the Heavens, which provided you for the Government of the Earth, and her unspeakable variety, furnishing you with a power of understanding to dispose all things according to the Providence of Him that sitteth on the Holy Throne, and rose up in the Beginning, saying: The Earth, let her be governed by her parts, and let there be Division in her, that the glory of her may be always drunken, and vexed in itself. Her course, let it run with the Heavens; and as an handmaid let her serve them. One season, let it confound another, and let there be no creature upon or within her the same. All her members, let them differ in their qualities, and let there be no one Creature equal with another. The reasonable Creatures of the Earth, and Men, let them vex and weed out one another; and their dwelling-places, let them forget their Names. The work of man and his pomp, let them be defaced. His buildings, let them become Caves for the beasts of the Field! Confound her understanding with darkness! For why? it repenteth me that I have made Man. One while let her be known, and another while a stranger: because she is the bed of an Harlot, and the dwelling-place of him that is fallen.

0 ye Heavens, arise! The lower heavens beneath you, let them serve you! Govern those that govern! Cast down such as fall. Bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten. No place let it remain in one number. Add and diminish until the stars be numbered. Arise! Move! and appear before the Covenant of His mouth, which He hath sworn unto us in His Justice. Open the Mysteries of your Creation, and make us partakers of THE UNDEFILED KNOWLEDGE.

Finished are the Calls or Keys.

The Three Mighty Names of God
Almighty coming forth from
The Thirty Æthyrs

THE First Name—
LAZodaPeLaMeDaZodaZODaZodILaZodUOLaTaZodaPe-KALaTaNuVaDaZodaBeReTa.

The Second Name—
IROAIAEIIAKOITaXEAEOHeSIOIITEAAIE.

The Third Name—
LaNuNuZodaTaZodODaPeXaHEMAOANuNuPeRePeNu-RAISAGIXa.

Ended are the Forty-eight Calls or Keys.

Chapter Six

Divine Eroticism

Intimate union of the worshipper with the Divine Principal is a central theme of religion. It is quite natural that the images which are evoked by the Devotee in his ardor for the Beloved are identical or similar to those that accompany sexual longings. The traditional cultures of India and the Orient, of Africa, Polynesia, of the natives of North and South America, indeed of almost any culture unpolluted by Judeo-Christian-Islamic thought, have no difficulty whatsoever with this parallel.

With the exception of the Song of Solomon, Western religious literature avoids Divine Eroticism like the plague. Even the esoteric disciplines of the West seem uncomfortable with the subject and go to great lengths to veil their terms. The bizarre nomenclature of Alchemy, when studied with half your brain in the bedroom, reveals that perhaps there are several good reasons why the alchemists were called "puffers". But for the most part, we in the West are expected to unite with our Divine Beloved vicariously.

Nuns are the "Brides of Christ", we unite with the Father or the Mother only "through the Son." Even the "magic" ceremony needed to consummate these voyeuristic unions must be experienced vicariously through a priest. In the highly explicit book The Ultimate Taboo—Sex, Religion and Magic (New Falcon Publications, 1991), we explore the abnormalities of such practices and the psycho-sociological phobic reactions to Sex Magic.

I do not intend to use this space to serve as an introduction to the theories or techniques of Sex

Magick or Tantra. There are many fine works available that introduce those subjects very well. For the reader who is already knowledgeable on these subjects, a few helpful hints concerning how Enochian can be used in these areas may prove valuable and rewarding.

The modern view that our normal waking consciousness stands somewhere between the limitless potential of transcendental experience and the "demons" that run amok in our subconscious mind is not too dissimilar to the medieval view that Mankind is sandwiched between God and the Angels, between Heaven and Hell. The working hypothesis of the magician of old went something like this, "God has dominion over me and compels me to do His will. I have dominion over the spirit world, (especially over the so-called fallen angels), and just as I look up to God, they look up to me, therefore I can compel them to do my bidding."

In 1458, the noted Qabalist and court magician, Abraham the Jew, in his classic work. The Book of the Sacred Magick of Abra-Melin The Mage, took this concept of the hierarchy of responsibility a sublime step forward and catapulted magick to the same level as the Yogic disciplines.

Simply put, to work the magick, you must first be united with Divinity. (This experience he calls The Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.) This initiatory landmark is only accomplished after a six month period of purification and a strict regimen of ever-increasing longing for union with the Angel. Once this "marriage" is consummated and the "blessing" of the Angel's presence is bestowed, the magician immediately turns to the lower spiritual world and bestows the same "blessing" on the resident denizens and extracts from them a pledge of loyalty and support.

These wild and infernal spirits who, up until now were unacknowledged, uncontrolled and most likely at odds with the True Will of the magician, were now going to be given the opportunity to work for his and their greater good. And now that the magician had formed an intimate alliance with the Divine, he had the spiritual "authority" to force the lower spirits to cooperate.

Thus, Abraham the Jew reveals an indispensable truth; Magick demands an assault on two fronts at once. It requires realization of your responsibility not only to that which is above but also to that which is below.

It is only through you that the Divine (your Superconsciousness) can manifest on this plane. Without you the spirits of the Infernal regions (your subconsciousness) have no hope of "salvation" (balance and control). Indeed, without your controlling influence they will become a very real threat to your life and sanity. You must see to it that each area receives proper and equal attention. Neglect your higher aspiration and you will find that you soon lack the spiritual integrity to command the spirits. Neglect the spirits and they will sooner or latter surface to demand your attention. Wild beasts can be domesticated and trained to serve you. If you treat them well and allow them to share in your continuing good fortune they can realize their greater potentiality. However, if you abuse them or forget to feed them they will inevitably seize the first opportunity to break out and devour you for their needed nourishment.

The two pillars of the Enochian system, as outlined in Liber Chanokh are:

THE ELEMENTAL WATCH-TOWERS OF THE UNIVERSE AND THE TABLET OF UNION

THE WORLD OF THE ELEMENTAL BEINGS

THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS WHOSE DOMINION EXTENDETH IN EVER-WIDENING CIRCLES WITHOUT AND BEYOND THE WATCH-TOWERS OF THE UNIVERSE.

THE WORLD OF THE DIVINE BEINGS

Both these worlds can be explored sexually and can provide the diligent magician with the joy and fulfillment of his or her Divine Beloved and the passion and energy of being the Divine Beloved to an Elemental lover. Please pay special attention to the following.

ENOCHIAN SEX MAGICK

But to love me is better than all things
Liber AL, I, 61

I will now proceed to ignore my own advice regarding other magician's visions. I hope the reader will recognize the value of what follows and will kindly forgive me.

In the series of visions of the 30 Æthyrs that Crowley chronicled in his remarkable work. The Vision And The Voice, he describes his vision of the Body of the great Goddess. The imagery is so powerful and his narrative colored with expressions of such tender awe, that one cannot but share, however temporarily, his overwhelming desire to unite with Her. To lose oneself utterly in Her would most certainly result in such intensity of bliss as to make the ecstasy of orgasm seem as a candle held up to the sun.

But that was Crowley's vision... Crowley's Great Goddess. To dwell on Her when you have your own Great Goddess (or God) "waiting" for your devotion would be as stupid as refusing a date with the lovely girl next door (who has secretly loved you all her life) because you have to sit at home alone, and pine over a painting of Helen of Troy.

Do you see where I'm heading with this? By a serious and concerted effort on your part, it is possible for you to achieve the highest level of spiritual experience your evolutionary-initiatory status will permit, including a relationship with the Divine Beloved. Once you "know" Her (or Him) all subsequent "earthly" ecstasies take the form of devotional offerings to the Great Lover who rewards the devotee with increasingly sweeter embraces until finally the embrace is eternal.

Where do you seek the initial Vision?

In yourself.

How can you start to look in yourself?

One way is by systematically skrying the 30 Æthyrs.

Nor let the fools mistake love; for there are love and love.
There is the dove, and there is the serpent. Choose ye well!
Liber AL, 1,57

In The Little Mermaid, Hans Christian Andersen writes of an Undine who is so enamored of a mortal man that she relinquishes her status as an immortal being for the opportunity to love and be loved by him. This charming tale contains a profound magical truth. Elemental spirits, whose natures are so specialized that they lack the balance of qualities necessary for sentient life, do indeed long for union with "complete" beings such as ourselves. Because their natures are universal they truly are immortal and if they should ever achieve union with a mortal they would actually "die" to their old, incomplete existence to be "born" into the life of their beloved. This is exactly what we do in our relationship with the Divine Principal.

The spirits of the Elemental Tablets are particularly suitable for such operations and all that is required is to call them up. It is so simple that you may set to work ill-prepared for success. A few words of caution might be in order.

Think before you proceed. Just what are you really prepared to handle? Experience has shown that it is most often wisest to contact a spirit from very low in the elemental hierarchy for operations such as this. Also, as in the everyday world, it is unwise to try to juggle too many of these relationships at the same time. If you think "Hell hath no fury like that of a woman scorned," think again. And sometimes jealousy really is a green-eyed monster.

Finally, and most importantly, Never confuse your love for the Divine with your love for the Elemental. The sexual "role" the magician assumes when making love to the Goddess (or God) is diametrically different than the "role" he or she plays when mating with an elemental spirit. In the former, the magician's attitude is that of adoration and awe and release is a gift from above, the result of ecstatic surrender. (To assume that attitude with an elemental lover would be spiritual suicide.)

The sexual "role" the magician assumes with the elemental is one of loving dominance. The Spirit surrenders to you. You bestow your ecstasy as a gift and allow your elemental partner to share, through you, the Divine love.

Confusing these two "loves" is surely the fountainhead of all the ills sexual repression has visited upon mankind. If it is your Will to be a sex magician, see to it that you use your magick to face and conquer your life, not to hide from it.

Chapter Seven

Techniques Of Enochian Sex Magick

By Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph. D.

There is no evidence that the communicating Angels that delivered the Enochian system to Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly ever instructed them concerning sexual applications of the art.

Biographers will be quick to point out the famous incident of April 1587 when, according to Kelly, the Angel Madimi suggested to Kelly that he and Dr. Dee share their wives in common. (Dee was absent during this communication). Enochian scholars argue that the text of this communication contains many flaws that do not characterize other less personal communications and that this may have been a case of magical wishful thinking on Kelly's part. Nevertheless it seems they did indeed swap wives and in spite of obvious attempts to erase the manuscript, the record confirms this. It seems the only "magical" result of this "operation" was the break up of Dee and Kelly as magical partners and the close of one of the most remarkable chapters in magical history.

To those knowledgeable in the theory and techniques of Tantra, the keys of the Enochian system open a treasure-house of practical applications.

The exercises outlined below should be practiced only after you have a thorough mastery of the system in all its non-sexual applications. Any uncertainties on the part of the magician as to what he or she is doing will destroy needed concentration and create a "break" which will absorb the entire force of the operation. (In sexual workings that could be an overabundant amount of energy particularly if you perform the exercises in my Tantra book.)

EXPLORATION OF THE THIRTY ÆTHYRS

As written earlier in the text, the Thirty Æthyrs are the "heavens" or Aires of the system. Starting with the 30th Æthyrs and working to the 1st, the Magician explores only as far as his or her personal level of Initiation will permit. This process is comparable to "pathworkings" of the Qabalistic system. In Enochian terms, the "Great Work" of the magician is to master all 30 Æthyrs. (Starting with 30 and ending with 1) Experiences with the 30 Æthyrs are highly personal and entirely unique to each magician. Working with the Æthyrs can be a lifetime endeavor and it is entirely presumptuous and inappropriate for another individual to "guide" another in this area.

This personal aspect of the Æthyrs coupled with the simplicity of its "one-Call-does-it-all" procedure makes it ideal for preliminary workings. The great stumbling block to exploring the Æthyr is the difficulty one encounters in "breaking through" to the next Æthyr. In the higher levels this may be because the magician has reached his or her initiatory limit. But in the lower Æthyrs it is more often the case that the magician simply can't "let go" and refocus his or her attention to the section of the brain where the vision is taking place. In Secrets of Western Tantra I provide an entire array of exercises which will help the Magician "let go."

The following exercise is intended exclusively for workings of the Thirty Æthyrs. There are two participants whom we will refer to as the Magician and the Assistant. For our illustration the male participant is the Magician and will recite the Call and "receive" the vision, the female participant is the Assistant and will eventually record the vision. These gender roles are for illustration only. The Magician can just as easily be female and the Assistant male. This particular operation is equally effective for participants of the same sex and can also be adapted for solitary workings. It makes absolutely no difference who is Magician and who is Assistant. It is only important that the couple decide before the operation commences.

Note: There must be no ambiguity about the willingness of either participant to take part in an operation of this kind. If one participant has to be coerced, begged or tricked into participation the vortex of ill-will that will emanate from the offended party will insure not only the failure of the operation but also the destruction of a more precious "magical asset", the respect of another human being.

EXAMPLE:

The Magician wishes to explore the 30th Æthyr, TEX, and the Assistant has expressed to him that it is her Will to participate in the operation.

Both participants bathe and dress at first in simple, soft, white garments. You may light incense, bum candles or use lights or soft music to enhance the mood. Small amounts of alcohol are also useful.

Prepare the room in which you are working with the appropriate symbols for the Æthyr such as the sigils of the Governors or the Elemental Tablet from which they are taken. In the case of TEX it would be the Water Tablet. (One couple I know has the Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union constructed entirely of wooden pyramids which they painstakingly have painted and lettered in Enochian. These are placed on the floor, under their bed, prior to æthyric or elemental workings.)

Begin by performing the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram in the area in which you will be working. (The student is referred to the Appendix section of this book for additional instructions.)

THE LESSER BANISHING RITUAL OF THE PENTAGRAM

The Qabalistic Cross

facing east:

Touch your forehead and say Atoh (aah - toh)
Touch your Heart and say Malkuth (mal - kooth)
Touch your Right Shoulder and say Ve-Geburah (veh - ghee - boo - rah)
Touch your Left Shoulder and say Ve-Gedulah (veh • ghee - doo - lah)
Touch your Heart and say Le-Olam (lee - *oh - lum)
Point the symbolic dagger inward and say Amen (aah - mayn).

Still facing east:

Trace the Banishing pentagram of Earth and vibrate YHVH (yoad — hay — vaahv — hay), as you thrust your symbolic dagger into the heart of the pentagram.

With your arm still extended, turn to the South:

Trace the Banishing pentagram of Earth and vibrate the name ADONAI (aah — doh — noy).

{Remember to thrust the symbolic dagger as you vibrate each God name}.

With your arm still extended, turn to the West:

Trace the Banishing pentagram of Earth and vibrate the name EHIEH (eh — hayh — yay).

With your arm still extended, turn to the North:

Trace the Banishing pentagram of Earth and vibrate the name AGLA (ah — guh — lah).

With your arm still extended return to the East, completing the circle. Now Imagine yourself surrounded in a Flaming Circle of four Pentagrams.

Stand straight with your arms out forming the shape of a Cross:

Say:

Before me Raphael (rah - fay - ale)
Behind me Gabriel (gah - bree - ale)
At my right shoulder, Michael (mee-khigh - ale)*
At my left shoulder, Auriel (oh - ree - ale)

Then Say:

Before me flames the Pentagram
Behind me shines the six-rayed Star.

Finish by repeating the Qabalistic Cross:

Touch your forehead and say Atoh
Touch your Heart and say Malkuth
Touch your Right Shoulder and say Ve-Geburah
Touch your Left Shoulder and say Ve-Gedulah
Touch your Heart and say Le-Olam
Point the symbolic dagger inward and say Amen.

(See the Appendix for examples of the invoking and banishing Pentagrams of all the Elements which are used in Elemental Temple openings and invocations).

The Magician then recites the Call of the 30th Æthyr, TEX, (Madariatza das perifa TEX... etc.) while the Assistant simply relaxes and meditates upon the sounds of the Enochian Call.

When the Call is completed let the Magician slowly vibrate the names of the Governors. (In the case of TEX there are four Governors. All other Æthyrs have three.)

Then, (believe it or not), forget about the operation. Relax, take your time and enjoy each other's company. Build slowly and naturally to greater levels of arousal. Continue to do everything you can to sustain your love making (At least 25 minutes, but for God's sake don't keep looking at your watch!). The idea is to become joyfully and totally exhausted. Then at the moment of orgasm (and not a split second before) let the Magician remember the purpose of the operation (the Skrying of the Æthyr*)* and repeat the first line of the Call; Madariatza das perifa TEX cahisa micaolazoda saanire caosago od fifsa balzodizodarasa laida. This may be done verbally or mentally but it must be well memorized so that it can come forth effortlessly.

(Note: A tape recorder can be used for both repeating Calls and taking notes. Sometimes two recorders are very handy, one for taking notes and the other for playing Calls).

The Magician then falls exhausted and allows the flood of images to wash through his brain. The temptation to fall asleep will be almost irresistible and that is where the skill of the Assistant is most vital.

After a few quiet moments if the Magician is not relating his vision to the Assistant she must take it upon herself to question him. This requires a high degree of tact and subtlety for she does not want to disturb the vision and yet she cannot allow him to fall into a deeper state of unconsciousness. This takes practice. She should have a pad of paper and a pencil handy and should write down everything that the Magician says. She should be especially careful to correctly spell any unknown words or phrases and she should not hesitate to ask the Magician (or the entity speaking through the Magician) the correct spelling of Angelic words.

If the vision stalls and reaches a point where nothing further is happening the Assistant can sometimes give it a push.

EXAMPLE

Magician: All I see is a bunch of trees. Nothing is happening.

Assistant: Try turning around. Do you see anything now?

Magician: Just more trees but there is a small pond in the middle.

Assistant: 'Walk over to the pond. Look in the pond and tell me what you see.

Magician: At first I see only my own reflection but as I keep looking I see that the pond is actually a bowl supported by the wings of four Angels, etc.

If angels or other beings appear in the vision they must be tested by repeating the names of the Governors one at a time. If the entity shows discomfort at the name of any of the Governors dismiss it by continuing to repeat the Governor's name until it disappears and a being appears that is strengthened by hearing the names.

Do not be afraid of anything you "see" or "hear". Maintain an attitude of good natured tolerance even if hideous sights or terrifying beings or creatures appear.

Act like a dispassionate explorer. Fear is failure and the forerunner of failure.

When it is clear that the vision is finished, or when it is obvious that the Magician is now fatigued or ready to fall asleep it is time to end the operation.

It is of the utmost importance that the Magician now "snap out of it" for it is he who must banish and close the Temple. If the Magician is reluctant to "wake up" and perform his duties it is the Assistant's responsibility to see that he does. No effort should be spared to "break the spell" and return the Magician to the objective world. Turn on the lights, talk loudly, get a drink, or splash some water on your face.

Finally, he performs the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram and the Magician and the Assistant review the notes and transfer them to the Magician's diary. The comments of the Assistant are often extremely important and should not be omitted in the record.

Often the couple will wish to change roles and explore the same Æthyr on a subsequent occasion. Allow at least one day between operations.

ELEMENTAL OPERATIONS AND CREATION OF THE MAGICKAL CHILD

Dr. Israel Regardie believed that certain sex magick techniques could be used by advanced students to incarnate "spiritual" energies on the physical plane, as well as making important shifts in the orientation of the Psyche and the Universe. In other words, if these methods were used properly, couples could bring into the world "divine" forces in the children they generated, who could influence the future of the race.

In addition to creating "real children" these methods could be used to create "bio-psycho-spiritual vessels", which would shift the focus of the mind as well as develop new powers and abilities.

The creation of the magickal child by ritualized sexual practices is symbolic in one sense of the whirling forces of nature, mixing and separating in their chaotic dance of creation.

This mixing and separating process is vividly displayed in the Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union of the Enochian system. Working with these basic forces of nature allows conscious co-operation and co-creating with the cosmos, and the magician becomes a miniature form of the cosmic process following its root law.

By willful and conscious co-operation the magician increases and refines his energies, sacrificing himself or herself willingly to Nature instead of being a passive food source in the spiritual food chain. The realization that man's emotional, physical and sexual energies are food for the "gods" can create great personal turmoil at first, however when one begins to joyously participate in the spiritual feeding frenzy, one is "elevated perpendicularly to infinity."

SELECTING THE MAGICKAL CHILD
THE ENOCHIAN METHOD

The selection process is the most difficult and, in truth, the most magickal, aspect of the operation. The "soul searching" necessary for such an important act is awesome and should not be embarked upon with a frivolous attitude.

The Enochian adept (and no other should embark upon such project) is intimately familiar with every area of the Elemental environment and with his or her current initiatory position relative to the Thirty Æthyrs. By reviewing his or her personal diaries of perhaps hundreds of non sexual Enochian workings, the Magician can determine the areas of the system that manifest the qualities which are desirable in the magickal child.

For the purpose of our illustration we will say that we wish create a magickal child of purity and beauty. A child capable of reflecting and transmitting energy and impressions without being affected. A child such as this might be a great actor or politician because in this child others see themselves reflected. This is charming and disarming to others because when they look at the child they will see only what they want to see.

By checking the records of our previous evocations we see that TDIM, the Kerub ruling the Water Subangle of Water is the perfect Spirit to manifest in such a child.

The technique as outlined below has been adapted from the exercise The Orgastic Circulation of Light and is an excellent example of Tantric Enochian evocation.

In Dr. Regardie's copy of Wilhelm's Secret Of The Golden Flower, 3rd impression, 1935, there are a number of passages underlined. Dr. Regardie was not a habitual underliner, thus we may assume that when he did underline it was for a very good reason. One of the passages which he underlined more than once contained references to the circulation of light.

In the next method, the proper circulation of light is essential for true magickal effects to occur and has been modified for use in creating the magickal child. It is urged that the partners should practice the ritual many times prior to including the sexual aspects. As a rule it is wise to practice this together holding hands or touching in some fashion.

At the time determined most auspicious for the conception of the magickal child the Temple is made ready. Banished, Cleansed and Consecrated.

The Temple is then opened in the Grade of 3° = 8° as outlined in Chanokh and the two participants recite a brief Oath declaring their intention to perform this creative act.

PART I
THE GREAT WHIRLINGS

The male should be on his back and the female should sit on top of him. Move only when instructed, unless the penis begins to lose its stiffness.

Begin by imagining a scintillating white light about the size of a small basketball forming above the head and piercing the top of the skull. This is called the Kether point. Now vibrate the Three Holy Names of God (from the Water Tablet). MPH ARSL GAIOL as the sphere of Light grows brighter and more energetic. Do this for five minutes.

On the last six vibrations of MPH ARSL GAIOL the female should move on each sound of the Names.

As the force of this whirling ball of power becomes exceedingly real for you and your partner, allow the energy to descend slowly through the head. Allow it to rest in the throat or Da'ath point. Here imagine a lavender color. Vibrate the Name of the Great Elemental King of Water, RAAGIOSL until the energy becomes exceedingly real for you and your partner.

Again on the last six vibrations of RAAGIOSL the female should move six times.

Bring the energy down through the chest until it rests at the Heart or Tiphareth. Vibrate the Names of the six Seniors of the Water Tablet, SAIINOV, SOAIZNT, LAOAZRP, LIGDISA, SLGAIOL, LSRAHPM. The color of light should be golden yellow growing brighter and clearer as you vibrate each Name.

On the six last vibrations of the names of the Seniors the female should move six times.

Move the power through the diaphragm and abdominal region to the pelvis (Yesod), and vibrate the Divine Names of the Calvary Cross, Water of Water, NELAPR, OMEBB visualizing a sphere of deep purple.

Here on the last ten vibrations of NELAPR and OMEBB the male should move ten times very slowly.

Finally, allow the energy to descend through the legs until it formulates at Malkuth, the feet. Both participants vibrate the name of the Kerub, the Name of their magickal child TDIM visualizing a black sphere.

The male should again move ten times quickly on the final vibrations of the Child's name.

Now, draw the energy up from the Black light of Malkuth changing colors as described above as it ascends to Kether. When the light reaches Kether concentrate on the White brilliance of this region.

When the light is at Kether and your movements are complete, meditate silently for a few moments and then begin the circulation of white light.

Note: At times Dr. Regardie ignored the different colors of the Spheres and simply used the white scintillating light of Kether for each of the points. However, he and I agreed that the colored system is better suited for the practice of Sex Magick.

PART II
THE ORGASTIC CIRCULATION OF LIGHT

Circulate the energy of the the White Light as follows:

Allow it to descend downward and outward via the left side of the body during every exhalation. When it reaches the left foot, transfer the energy over to the right foot and allow it to ascend the right side of the body on the inhalation. This should be done at least 10 times. The partners should move slowly in unison 10 times.

The second circulation of energy begins in Kether and travels down the front of the body on the exhalation and then up the back of the body on the inhalation. This should be done at least ten times as well. The partners should move slowly in unison ten times.

The third circulation, beginning with Kether follows down through the body on the exhalation until it reaches Malkuth. The energy is drawn up through the body to Kether on the inhalation. When it reaches the Crown, imagine it to discharge like water from a fountain, at the end of each inhalation. The fire and sparks of this scintillating fountaining go up and out through the Crown and then descend down and encompasses the body on the exhalation. After the final circulation has been completed and the fountaining maintained for a few movements, the couple should begin moving and breathing heavily as they surround themselves with sparkling light. The .movements should then become spontaneous and at the moment of orgasm the light should be gathered and thrust beyond Sahasrara, toward the Chakra with No Name.

PART III
THE CRYSTALLIZATION OF THE LIGHT

The orgastic Light of the Chakra of No Name may be likened to the Philosopher's Stone, The Golden Flower, or the Lotus. It is a body of light created by the process of transmutation of spiritual-sexual energy and is the womb of the magickal child. This is an experiential realization, thus, the proof of the pudding is in the Doing and Creating.

The process of transmutation requires the proper balance and mixing of heat and cold, passive and active, and white and black. In a broader sense we are using tremendous active forces to create a non-active force. The nurturing we provide the womb-child through our practices creates a worthy resting place of deep silence for the aspirants involved in the creation process.

The circulating of orgastic light is no doubt one of the most beautiful secrets of the Great Work. As the light circulates again and again and your practices become more powerful and refined, a crystallization occurs and you begin to form the magickal child. Whether you choose it to be physical or spiritual or both, the creation of this spirit body allows you to have contact with the forces of the higher Spiritual Body. You have not only opened the doors of perception, but can now begin the process of real action in a way unknown to those who lack this initiation.

Chapter Eight

The Enochian Dictionary

A

WORDS	PHONETIC	ENGLISH
Aaf	(Ah-ahff)	Amongst
Aai (AAo)	(Ah-ah-ee)	Amongst
Aaiom	(Ah-ah-ee-ohm)	Amongst us
Aala	(Ah-ah-lah)	Placed you
Abaivonin	(Ah-bah-ee-voh-nee-noo)	Stooping Dragon
Abila (Apila)	(Ah-bee-lah)	Liveth forever
Aboapri	(Ah-boh-ah-pay-ree)	Let them serve you
Abraassa	(Ah-brah-ah-ess-sah)	Provided
Abrang	(Ah-brah-noo-gee)	I have prepared
ACAM	(Ah-kahm)	7,6,9,9
Adgt	(Ah-dah-gee-tay)	Can
Adna	(Ah-dah-nah)	Obedience
Adohi	(Ah-doh-hee)	Kingdom
Adoian	(Ah-doh-ee-ah-noo)	Face
Adphaht	(Ah-dah-pay-hah-tay)	Unspeakable
Adroch	(Ah-dah-rohk-hay)	Olive Mount
Adrpan	(Ah-dah-ra-pahn-noo)	Cast down
Af	(Ah-eff)	Nineteen
Affa	(Ah-eff-fah)	Empty
Ag	(Ah-gee)	None, No
Aglo	(Ah-gloh)	In Thy
Alar	(Ah-lahr)	Have set
Aldi	(Ah-el-dee)	Of gathering
Aldon	(Ah-el-doh-noo)	Gather up, Gird
Allar	(Ah-el-lahr)	Bind up
Am	(Ah-em)	Beginning
Amipzi	(Ah-mee-pay-zoad-ee)	I fastened
Amiram	(Ah-mee-rahm)	Yourselves
Amis	(Ah-meess)	End
Amma	(Ah-em-mah)	Cursed
Ananael	(Ah-nah-nah-el)	Secret Wisdom
Anetab	(Ah-nay-tahb)	In government

Angelard	(Ah-nu-gee-lahr-dah)	His Thoughts
Aoiveae	(Ah-oh-ee-vay-ah-ay)	Stars
Ar	(Ah-ray)	To Vanne
Ar	(Ah-ray)	That (in order)
(Ar) Tabas	(Tah-bahs)	That Govern
ARN	(Ah-rah-noo)	2nd Aethyr
As	(Ah-ess)	Was
ASP	(Ah-ess-pay)	21st Aethyr
Aspt	(Ah-ess-pay-tay)	Before
Ath	(Ah-tay-hay)	Works
Atraah	(Ah-tay-rah-ah)	Your Girdles
Audcal	(Ah-vah-dah-kahl)	Mercury
Avavaco	(Ah-vah-vah-koh)	Thunders of increase
Avavox	(Ah-vah-vohx)	His pomp
Aviny	(Ah-vee-nee)	Millstones
Aziagier	(Ah-zoad-ee-ah-gee-ayr)	Harvest
Aziazor	(Ah-zoad-ee-ah-zoad-ohr)	Likeness
Azieh	(Ah-zoad-ee-ay)	Whose hands

B

Babage (n)	(Bah-bah-gay)	South
Babalon (d)	(Bah-bah-lohn)	Wicked (harlot)
Baeouib	(Bah-ay-oh-veeb)	Righteousness
BAG	(Bah-gee)	28th Aethyr
Baghie	(Bah-gee-hee-ay)	Fury
Bable (r)	(Bah-bay-lay)	For, Because, For Why?
Bahal	(Bah-hah-lah)	Cried loudly
Balit	(Bah-leet)	The Just
Balt (an)	(Bah-lay-tay)	Justice
Baltim	(Bah-lay-teem)	Extreme Justice
Baltoh	(Bah-lay-toh)	The Righteous
Baltoha	(Bah-lay-toh-hah)	For my own righteousness
Balye	(Bah-lee-ay)	Salt
Balzarg	(Bah-lay-zoad-ar-gee)	Stewards, Presidents
Bal-zizras	(Bah-lay Zoad-ee-zoad-rahs)	Judgement
Bams	(Bahm-ess)	Let them forget
Basgim	(Bahs-geem)	Day
Bazm (elo)	(Bah-zoad-em)	Mid-day
Bia (l)	(Bee-ah)	Voices
Biah	(Bee-ah)	Stand

Bien	(Bee-ay-nu)	My voice
Bigliad	(Beeg-lee-ah-dah)	In our comforter
Blans	(Blah-noo-ess)	Harboured
Blior	(Blee-ohr)	Continual comforters
Bliora	(Blee-oh-rah)	Comfort
Bliorax	(Blee-oh-rahx)	Shall comfort
Bliors	(Blee-oh-ray-ess)	Our comfort
Bogpa	(Boh-gee-pah)	Reigneth
Bolp	(Boh-lah-pay)	Be thou
Booapis	(Boh-oh-pees)	Let her serve them
Bramg	(Bay-ray-mee-gee)	Are prepared
Bransg	(Bay-ray-ness-gee)	Guard
Brgow	(Bay-rah-goh-vah)	Sleep
Brin	(Bay-reen)	Have
Brint	(Bay-reen-tay)	Hast
Busd	(Boos-dah)	Glory
Busdir	(Boos-dee-ray)	Glory
Butmon	(Boot-tay-mohn)	His mouth hath opened
Butmoni	(Boot-tay-moh-nee)	Their mouths

C

C	(Kah)	Unto, with
Cab	(Kah-bay)	Rod
Cacacom	(Kah-kah-cohm)	Flourish
Cacocasp	(Kah-koh-cahs-pay)	Another while
Cafafm	(Kah-fah-fahm)	Their abiding
Calz	(Kah-lah-zoad)	The firmament
Cam(piao)	(Kah-em)	While
Camliax	(Kah-em-lee-ahx)	Spake
Canal	(Kah-nah-lah)	Workmen
Caosg (o)	(Kah-oh-ess-gee)	The Earth
Capimaon	(Kah-pee-mah-oh-nu)	Numbers of Time
Capimi-ali	(Kah-pee-mee ah-lee)	Successively
Carbaf	(Kah-ray-bahf)	Sink
Cars (Cors)	(Kah-ress)	Such
Casarm	(Kah-sah-raym)	To Whom
Casarman	(Kah-sah-ray-mah-nu)	Under whose Casarmg	(Kah-sah-ray-em-gee)	To Whom
Ceph	(Kay-pay-hay)	Title of (z)
Chirlan	(Kah-hee-ray-lah-nu)	Rejoiceth

Chis (or Chris)	(Kah-hees)	Are
Chisdao	(Koh-hees-dah-oh)	Diamonds
Chiso	(Kah-hee-soh)	Shall be
CHR	(Kay-hay-ray)	20th Aethyr
Cial	(Kee-ah-lah)	9, 9, 9, 6
Ciaosi	(Kee-ah-oh-see)	Terror
Cicle	(Kee-kah-lay)	Mysteries of Creation
Cla	(Kee-lah)	4, 5, 6.
Cnila	(Kee-nu-lah)	Blood
Caozior	(Koh-ah-zoad-ee-ohr)	Increase
Cocasb	(Koh-kah-see-bay)	Time
Colis	(Koh-lees)	Making
Collal	(Koh-lay-lahl)	Stones
Commah	(Kohm-mah)	Bindeth, trussed together
Como	(Koh-moh)	A window
Comselh	(Kohm-say-lay-hay)	A circle
Conisbra	(Koh-nees-bay-rah)	The work of man
Const	(Kohn-ess-tay)	Thunders
Cophan	(Koh-pay-hah-nu)	Lamentation
Cor	(Koh-ray)	Number
Coraxo	(Koh-rah-x-oh)	Thunders of judgement
Cordiziz	(Koh-ray-dee-zoad-ee-zoad)	Reasonable creatures of earth, men
Cormp	(Koh-ray-em-pay)	Numbered
Cormp	(Koh-ray-em-pay)	Hath yet numbered
Cormpt	(Koh-ray-em-pay-tay)	Be numbered
Crcrg	(Kah-ray-kah-ray-gee)	Until
Cri-mi	(Kah-ree mee)	Praises
Cro-od-zi	(Koh-roh oh-dah zoad-ee)	The 2nd Beginning
C-rp (crip)	(Kah Ar-pay)	But

D

D (Dial)	(Dah)	Third
Da	(Dah)	There
Damploz	(Dah-me-pay-loh-zoad)	Variety
DAOX	(Dah-oh-x)	5, 6, 7, 8
Darbs	(Dah-ray-bah-ess)	Obey
DARG	(Dah-ray-gee)	6, 7, 3, 9
Darr	(Dar-ray-ray)	Philosopher's Stone
Darsar	(Dah-ray-sahr)	Wherefore

Dax	(Dahx)	Loins
Dazis	(Dah-zoad ees)	Their Heads
De	(Day)	Of
DEO	(Day-oh)	7th Aethyr
DES	(Day-ess)	26th Aethyr
Diu	(Dee-vah)	Angle
Dlafod	(Dah-lah-foh-dah)	Sulphur
Dluga (Dlagar)	(Dah-loo-gah)	Giving
Dlugam	(Dah-loo-gahm)	Given
Dlugar	(Dah-loo-gahr)	Gave them
Do	(Doh)	In
Doalim	(Doh-ah-leem)	Sin
Dobix	(Doh-beex)	Fall
Dodpal	(Doh-dah-pah-el)	Let them vex
Dods	(Doh-dahs)	Vexing
Dodseh	(Doh-dah-say-hay)	Vexation
Dooain (or p)	(Doh-oh-ah-ee-noo)	His name
Don	(Doh-noo)	Title of letter E (r)
Dorpha	(Doh-ray-pay-hah)	Have looked about me
Dorphal	(Doh-ray-pay-hahl)	Looking with gladness
Dosig	(Doh-see-gee)	Night
Drilpi (a)	(Dah-ree-lah-pah)	Great
Drix	(Dah-ree-x)	Bring down
Droln	(Dah-roh-lah-noo)	Any
Ds	(Dah-ess)	Who, that or which
Du-i-b (Duiv)	(Doo-ee-bay)	Into the third angle
Drun	(Dah-roo-noo)	Title of letter

E

E	(Ay)	I
Eca	(Ay-kah)	Therefore
Ecron	(Ay-kah-roh-noo)	Praise
Ed-nas	(Ay-dah Nah-ess)	Receivers
Ef	(Ay-eff)	Visit us
Efafage	(Ay-fah-fah-gay)	Vials
El	(Ay-lah)	The same
Elzap	(Ay-lah-zoad-ah-pay)	Course
Em	(Ay-mee)	Nine
Emod	(Ay-moh-dah)	8, 7, 6, 3

Emetgis	(Ay-may-tay-gees)	Seal
Emna	(Ay-mee-nah)	Herein
Enay	(Ay-nah-ee)	The Lord
Eors	(Ay-oh-ray-ess)	Thousand
Eran	(Ay-rah-noo)	6332 (6322)
Erm	(Ay-ray-mee)	Ark
Es	(Ay-ess)	Fourth
Esiasch	(Ay-see-ar-ess-cha)	Brothers
Ethamz	(Ay-tay-hah-me-zoad)	Are covered
Etharzi	(Ay-tay-hah-ray-zoad-ee)	Peace

F

F (also EF)	(Eff)	Visit
Fa-a-ip	(Fah ah ee-pay)	Your voices
Faboan	(Fah-boh-ah-noo)	Poison
Fafeh	(Fah-fay-hay)	Intent
Fafen	(Fah-fay-noo)	Your train
Fam	(Fah-mee)	Title of S
Faod	(Fah-oh-dah)	The Beginning
Faonts	(Fah-oh-nu-tay-ess)	Dwelling (verb)
Faorgt	(Fah-ohr-gee-tay)	Dwelling place
Fargt	(Fah-ray-gee-tay)	Their dwelling places
Farmz	(Fah-ray-mee-zoad)	Ye lifted up your voices
Faxs	(Fahx-ess)	7336
Fifalz	(Fee-fah-lah-zoad)	Weed out
Fifis	(Fee-fee-ess)	Execute

G

G	(Gee)	(With)
GA	(Gah)	31
Gah	(Gah-hay)	Spirits
Gal	(Gah-lah)	Title of D
G-chis-ge	(Gee Kah-hee-ess gay)	Are not the
Ge	(Gee)	Is not
Ged	(Gay-dah)	Title of G
Ge-Iad	(Gay Ee-ah-dah)	Our Lord and Master
Geobofal	(Gay-oh-bah-fah-lah)	Great Work
Ger	(Gay-ray)	Title of Q

Gigipah	(Gee-gee-pah-hay)	Living Breath
Gisa	(Gee-sah)	Title of T
Givi	(Gee-vee)	Stronger
Gizyaz	(Gee-zoad-ee-ah-zoad)	Mighty Earthquakes
Gnay	(Gee-nah-ee)	Doth
Gnetaab	(Gee-nay-tah-ah-bay)	Your Governments
Gnonp	(Gee-noh-nu-pay)	I garnished
Gohe (or Goho)	(Goh-hay)	Saith
Gohia	(Goh-hee-ah)	We say
Gohol	(Goh-hoh-el)	Saying
Goholor	(Goh-hoh-lohr)	Lift up
Gohulim	(Goh-hoo-leem)	It is said
Gohus	(Goh-hoos)	I say
Gon	(Goh-noo)	Title of I
Gono	(Goh-noh)	Faith
Gosao	(Goh-sah-oh)	Stranger
Graa	(Gee-rah-ah)	Moon
Graa	(Gee-rah-ah)	Marquises
Graph	(Gee-rah-pay-hay)	Title of E
Grosb	(Gee-roh-ess-bay)	Bitter Sting

H

Hami	(Hah-mee)	Creatures
Harg	(Hah-ray-gee)	Hath planted
Hoath	(Hoh-ah-tay-hay)	True Worshipper
Holdo	(Hoh-lah-doh)	Groaned aloud
Hol-q	(Hoh-lah Koh)	Measureth (ed)
Hom	(Hoh-mee)	Liveth
Homil	(Hoh-mee-el)	True Ages
Homin	(Hoh-mee-noo)	Age
Hubai	(Hoo-bah-ee)	Lanterns
Hubar	(Hoo-bah-ray)	Ever burning lamps
Hubard	(Hoo-bah-ray-dah)	Living lamps

I

I	(Ee)	Is
Iad	(Ee-ah-dah)	God
Iadnah	(Ee-ah-dah-nah-hay)	Knowledge

Iadnamad	(Ee-ah-dah-nah-mah-dah)	The undefiled knowledge
Iadpil	(Ee-ah-dah-pee-el)	Him
Iaiadix	(Ee-ah-ee-ah-deex)	Honour
Ia-ial	(Ee-ah ee-ah-el)	Conclude us
Iaida	(Ee-ah-ee-dah)	The highest, most high
Iaidon	(Ee-ah-ee-doh-noo)	All-powerful
Ial	(Ee-ah-el)	Burning
Ialpirgah	(Ee-ah-el-pee-ray-gah)	Flames of first glory
Ialpon	(Ee-ah-el-poh-noo)	Burn
Ialpor	(Ee-ah-el-poh-ray)	Flaming
Iaod (of)	(Ee-ah-oh-dah)	Beginning
Iarry	(Ee-oh-ray-ree)	Providence
ICH	(Ee-kah-hay)	11th Aethyr
Id	(Ee-dah)	Always
Idoigo	(Ee-doh-ee-goh)	Him that Sitteth on the Holy Throne
Ieh	(Ee-ay-hay)	Art
Iehusoz	(Ee-ay-hoo-soh-zoad)	His mercies
Iisonon	(Ee-ee-soh-noh-noo)	Branches
Ils	(Ee-el-ess)	O Thou
Ilsi	(Ee-el-see)	Thee
Im-va-mar	(Ee-mee vah mah-ray)	Apply yourselves
Insi	(Ee-noo-see)	Walkest
Iod	(Ee-oh-dah)	Him
Ioiad	(Ee-oh-ee-oh-dah)	Him that liveth forever
Ip	(Ee-pay)	Not
Ipam	(Ee-pah-mee)	Beginningless
Ipamis	(Ee-pah-mees)	Endless
Ipuran	(Ee-poo-rah-noo)	Shall not see
Yolcam	(Ee-oh-ol-kah-mee)	Bring forth
Yolci	(Ee-oh-el-kee)	Bringeth forth
Yor	(Ee-oh-ray)	Roll
Yrpoil	(Ee-ar-poh-ee-lah)	Division
Irgil	(Ee-ar-gee-lah)	How many
Isro	(Ee-ess-roh)	Promise
Ixomaxip	(Ee-x-oh-mohx-ee-pay)	Let her be known
Iza-zaz	(Ee-zoad-ah zoad-ah-zoad)	Have framed within
Izizop	(Ee-zoad-ee-zoad-oh-pay)	From the highest vessels

L

L	(Lah)	The first
L (o) (a)	(Lah)	The first one
Laiad	(Lah-ee-ah-dah)	The Secrets of Truth
Lap	(Lah-pay)	For
Larag	(Lah-rah-gee)	Neither
Las	(Lah-ess)	Rich
LEA	(Lah-ay-ah)	16th Aethyr
Lel	(Lay-lah)	The same
Levithmong	(Levee-tha-mon-gee)	The Beasts of the Field
LIL	(Lee-lah)	1st Aethyr
Limlal	(Lee-em-lah-lah)	His Treasure
LIN	(Lee-noo)	22nd Aethyr
LIT	(Lee-tay)	5th Aethyr
LOE	(Loh-ay)	12th Aethyr
Loholo (Sobolo)	(Loh-hoh-loh)	Shineth
Lolcis	(Loh-lah-kee-ess)	Bucklers
Loncho	(Loh-nu-kah-hoh)	Fall
Lon-doh	(Loh-noo doh)	Kingdoms
Lonsa (Lonshi)	Loh-noo-sah)	Power
Lonsh	(Loh-noo-ess-hay)	In power exalted
Lonshin	(Loh-noo-ess-hee-noo)	Their powers
Lors-l-q	(Loh-ray-ess el koh)	Flowers
Lrasd	(El-rah-ess-doh)	To dispose
Lring	(El-ree-nu-gee)	To stir up
Lu	(Loo)	Not or nor
Lucal	(Loo-kah-lah)	The North
Luciftian	(Loo-kee-eff-tee-ah-nu)	Ornaments of brightness
Luciftias	(Loo-ku-eff-tee-ah-ess)	Brightness
Lu-ia-he	(Loo ee-ah hay)	A Song of Honour
Lulo	(Loo-loh)	Tartar of Wine
Lusd (an)	(Loo-ess-dah)	Feet
Lusda	(Loo-ess-dah)	Their feet
Lusdi	(Loo-ess-dee)	My feet

M

Maasi	(Mah-ah-see)	Laid up
Mad	(Mah-dah)	The same your God
Madrid	(Mah-dah-ree-dah)	Iniquities

Madriiax	(Mad-dah-ree-ee-ahx)	O Ye Heavens
Malpirgi	(Mah-lah-pee-ar-gee)	Fires of life & increase
Malprg	(Mah-lah-pee-ar-gee)	Through-thrusting fire (Or Fiery Darts)
Mals	(Mah-lah-ess)	Title of P
Manin	(Mah-nu-nu)	In the Mind
Ma-of-fas	(Mah ohff fahs)	Not to be measured
Mapm	(Mah-pay-mee)	9639
Marb	(Mah-ah-bay)	According
Matorb	(Mah-toh-ar-bay)	Echoing
MAZ	(Mah-zoad)	6th Aethyr
Med	(May-dah)	Title of O
Miam	(Mee-ah-mee)	Continuance
Mian	(Mee-ah-nu)	3663
Micalp	(Mee-kah-el-pay)	Mightier
Micalzo	(Mee-kah-el-zoad-oh)	In Power
Micaolz	(Mee-kah-oh-el-zoad)	Mighty
Micma	(Mee-kah-mah)	Behold
Miinoag	(Mee-ee-noh-ah-gee)	Corners
Mir	(Mee-ray)	A torrent
Mirc	(Mee-ar-kah)	Upon
(z)Mnad	(Mee-nah-dah)	Another
Molap	(Moh-lah-pay)	Men
Molvi	(Moh-lah-vee)	Surges
Mom	(Moh-mee)	Moss
Momao	(Moh-mah-oh)	The Crowns
Momar	(Moh-mah-ray)	Shall be crowned
Monasci	(Moh-nah-ess-kee)	The Great Name
Monons	(Moh-noh-noo-ess)	Heart
Mooab	(Moh-oh-ah-bah)	It repenteth me
Mospleh	(Moh-ess-pay-lay-hay)	The Horns
Moz	(Moh-zoad)	Joy

N

Na	(Nah)	Your
Na-hath	(Nah Hah-tay-hay)	Title of H
Nana-e-el	(Nah-nah ay ay-lah)	My Power
Nanba	(Nah-noo-bah)	Thorns
Napeai	(Nah-pah-ay-ee)	Oh you swords

Napta	(Nah-pay-tah)	Two edge swords
Nazarth	(Nah-zoad-ahth)	Pillars of gladness
Nazavabb	(Nah-zoad-ah-vah-bay-bay)	Hyacinthine Pillars
Nazps	(Nah-zoad-pay-ess)	Sword or Earls
Netaab	(Nay-tah-ah-bay)	Government
NI	(Nee)	28
NIA	(Nee-ah)	24th Aethyr
Nibm	(Nee-bah-mee)	Season
Nidali	(Nee-dah-lee)	Mighty Sounds
Niis	(Nee-ee-ess)	Come Ye
Niiso	(Nee-ee-soh)	Come Away
Noaln	(Noh-ah-lah-noo)	May (be)
Noan (Noas)	(Noh-ah-noo)	Ye are become
(i) Noar	(Noh-ah-ray)	Become
Noasmi	(Noh-ah-ess-mee)	Let them become
Nobloh	(Noh-bay-loh)	The Palms
Noco	(Noh-koh)	Servant
Nocod	(Noh-koh-dah)	Thy servants
Noib	(Noh-ee-bay)	Yea!
Nonig	(Noh-mee-gee)	Even
Nonca	(Noh-noo-kah)	Unto You
Nonci (f)	(Noh-noo-kee)	O You (ye)
Noncp	(Noh-noo-kah-pay)	For You
Noquodi	(Noh-koo-oh-dee)	Their Ministers
(c) Noquol	(Noh-koo-oh-lah)	O Ye Servants
Nor	(Noh-ray)	Sons
Noromi	(Noh-roh-mee)	O Ye Sons!
Nor-molap	(Noh-ray moh-lah-pay)	Sons of Men
Nor-quasahi	(Noh-ray koo-ah-sah-hee)	Ye Sons of pleasure
Norz	(Noh-ray-zoad)	Six
Nothoa	(Noh-tay-hoh-ah)	In the midst (?)

O

O	(Oh)	5
O	(Oh)	Be
Oado	(Oh-ah-doh)	Weave
Oadriax	(Oh-ah-dah-ree-ahx)	Lower Heavens
Oali	(Oh-ah-lee)	I have placed
Oanio	(Oh-ah-nee-oh)	Moment
OB	(Oh-bay)	28

Obelisong	(Oh-bah-lee-soh-noo-gee)	Pleasant deliverers
Obloc	(Oh-bay-loh-kah)	A Garland
Oboleh	(Oh-boh-lay-hay)	Your Garments
Obza	(Oh-bay-zoad-ah)	Half
Od	(Oh-dah)	And
Odo	(Oh-doh)	Open or Openest
Odzi	(Oh-dah-zoad-ee)	Beginning
Oe	(Oh-ay)	Sing (ing)
O-q	(Oh koh)	But
Ohio	(Oh-hee-oh)	Woe
Ohorela	(Oh-ho-ray-lah)	I made a Law, Dukes
Oi	(Oh-ee)	This (or that is)
Oiad	(Oh-ee-ah-dah)	Just or God
Oiap	(Oh-ee-ah-pay)	The same
OL	(Oh-lah)	24th part
Ol	(Oh-lah)	I made you (I have made)
Olani	(Oh-lah-nee)	Two Times
Ollor	(Oh-lah-loh-ray)	Man
(Ollora, Ollog)	(Oh-lah-loh-rah)	Same
Oln	(Oh-lah-noo)	Made
Olpirt	(Oh-lah-pee-ray-tay)	Light
Om	(Oh-mee)	Know or Understand
Omoas	(Oh-mah-ah-ess)	Their Names
Oma (p)	(Oh-mah)	Understanding
Omax	(Oh-mahx)	Knowest
Ooa	(Oh-oh-ah)	Their
Ooaona	(Oh-oh-ah-oh-nah)	Eyes, visible appearance
Ooge	(Oh-oh-gay)	Chamber
Op	(Oh-pay)	22
Oroch (a)	(Oh-roh-kah-hay)	Under you (beneath)
Orri	(Oh-ray-ree)	Barren Stone
Ors	(Oh-ray-ess)	(with darkness)
Orscor	(Oh-ray-ess-koh-ray)	Dryness
Orsca	(Oh-ray-ess-kah)	Building
Orsha (Orsba)	(Oh-ray-ess-hah)	Drunken
Orth	(Oh-ray-tha)	Title of F
Os	(Oh-ess)	Twelve
Othil	(Oh-tay-hee-lah)	I have set
Ovcho	(Oh-voh-kah-hoh)	Let it confound
Ovof	(Oh-voh-eff)	May be magnified
Ovoars	(Oh-voh-ah-ar-ess)	The Center

Ox	(Ohx)	26
Oxex	(Ohx-ayx)	Vomit out
Oxiayal	(Ohx-ee-ah-yahl)	Mighty Seat
OXO	(Ohx-oh)	15th Aethyr
Ozazm	(Oh-zoad-ah-zoad-mee)	Make me
Ozol	(Oh-zoad-oh-lah)	Their heads
Ozongon	(Oh-zoad-oh-nu-goh-nu)	Manifold Winds
Ozozma	(Oh-zoad-oh-zoad-mah)	And make us

P

P	(Pay)	8
Pa	(Pah)	Be
Pa-aox (t)	(Pah-ahx)	Remain
Paeb	(Pah-ay-bay)	An Oak
Page	(Pah-gay)	Rest
Paid	(Pah-ee-dah)	Always
Pal	(Pah-lah)	Title of X
Pambt	(Pah-mee-bay-tay)	Unto me
Panpir	(Pah-noo-pee-ray)	Pouring down
Paombd	(Pah-oh-mee-bay-dah)	Her members
Papnor	(Pah-pay-noh-ray)	This remembrance
Par	(Pah-ray)	In Them
Parach	(Pah-rah-kah-hay)	Equal
Paracleda	(Pah-rah-kah-lay-dah)	A wedding
Paradial	(Pah-rah-dee-ah-lah)	Living dwellings
Paradizod	(Pah-rah-dee-zoad-oh-dah)	Virgins
Parm	(Pah-ray-mee)	Run
Parmg	(Pah-ray-mee-gee)	Let it run
Pashs	(Pah-ess-hay-ess)	Children
Patralx	(Pah-tay-rah-layx)	Rock
PAZ	(Pah-zoad)	4th Aethyr
Pd	(Pah-dah)	Thirty-three
Pe	(Pay)	Title of B
PEOAL	(Peh-oh-ah-lay)	5, 9, 6, 3, 6
Pi	(Pee)	Places (Bed)
Piad	(Pee-ah-dah)	Your God
Pi-adph	(Pee ah-dah-pay-hay)	Depths of my Jaws
Piamo-l	(Pee-ah-moh-ell)	Righteousness
Piap	(Pee-ah-pay)	Balance
Pidiai	(Pee-dee-ah-ee)	Marble

Pii	(Pee-ee)	Bed (or She is a place)
Pilah	(Pee-lah)	Moreover
Pild	(Pee-lah-dah)	Continually
Pilzin	(Pee-lah-zoad-ee-nu)	Firmament of Waters
Pir	(Pee-ray)	Holy Ones
Piripsax	(Pee-ree-pay-sahx)	With the Heavens
Piripsol	(Pee-ree-pay-sohl)	The Heavens
Plapli	(Pay-lah-pay-lee)	Partakers
Plosi	(Pay-loh-see)	As many
Poamal	(Poh-ah-mah-lah)	Your Palace
Poilp	(Poh-ee-lah-pay)	Are divided
Pop	(Poh-pay)	19th Aethyr
Praf	(Pay-rah-eff)	Dwell
Prdzar	(Pay-ray-dah-zoad-ahr)	Diminish
Prg	(Pay-ray-gee)	Flames
Prge	(Pay-ray-gay)	With the Fire
Prgel	(Pay-ray-gay-lah)	Of Fire
Priaz (i)	(Pay-ree-ah-zoad)	Those
Prt	(Pay-ray-tay)	Flame
Pugo	(Poo-goh)	Unto
Pu-im	(Poo-eem)	Sharp sickles (Knights)

Q

Q	(Koh)	Or
Q (Cocasb)	(Koh)	Content of Time
Qaa	(Kah-ah)	Your Garments
Qaaon (s)	(Kah-ah-oh-noo)	In Your Creation
Qanis	(Kah-nee-ess)	Olives
Qting	(Koh-tee-noo-gee)	The Rotten
Quaal (Quaadah)	(Koo-ah-ah-lah)	The Creator
Quar	(Koo-ah-ray)	1636
Quasb	(Koo-ah-ess-bay)	Destroy
Quasahi	(Koo-ah-sahee)	Pleasure
Qui-i-n	(Koo-ee ee noo)	Wherein
Qurlst	(Koo-arel-ess-tay)	As an handmaid

R

R	(Ar)

Ra-as (y)	(Rah ah-ess)	The East
Raclir	(Rah-kah-lee-ray)	Weeping
Restel	(Ray-ess-tay-lah)	That you may praise Him
RII	(Ree-ee)	29th Aethyr
Rior	(Ree-or-rah)	Widow
Ripir	(Ree-pee-rah)	No place
Ripson	(Ree-pay-soh-noo)	Heaven
Rit	(Ree-tay)	Mercy
Rlodnr	(Ree-loh-dah-noo-ar)	Mercury
(Ror)	(Roh-ray)	Sun, Kings
Roxtan	(Rohx-tah-nu)	Wine
Rsam	(Rah-sah-em)	Admiration

S

S	(Ess)	Fourth
Sa	(Sah)	In
Saanir	(Sah-ah-nee-ray)	Parts
Salbrox	(Sah-lah-brohx)	Sulphur
Sald	(Sah-lah-dah)	Wonder
Salman	(Sah-lah-mah-nu)	A house
Samvelg	(Sahm-vay-lah-gee)	To the Righteous
Sapah	(Sah-pah)	Mighty Sounds
Sision	(See-see-oh-noo)	Temple
Siatris	(See-ah-tay-ree-ess)	Scorpions
Sibsi	(See-bay-see)	The Covenant
So	(Soh)	In
Sobam	(Soh-bah-mee)	Whom
Sobha	(Soh-bay-hah)	Whose
Sobra	(Soh-bay-rah)	In whose
Solpeth	(Soh-lah-pay-tay-hay)	Hearken
Sonuf	(Soh-noof)	Reign
Surzas	(Soo-ray-zoad-ah-ess)	He hath sworn
Symp	(See-mee-pay)	Another

T

T	(Tay)	Also
Ta	(Tah)	As
Taba	(Tah-bah)	To Govern

Tabaame	(Tah-bah-ah-may)	Prelates (governors)
Tabaan	(Tah-bah-ah-nu)	Governor
Tabaord	(Tah-bah-oh-ray-dah)	Let her be governed
Tabaori	(Tah-bah-oh-ree)	Govern
Tabges	(Tah-bay-gay-ess)	Caves
Tal	(Tah-lah)	Title of M
Talbo	(Tah-lah-boh)	Cups
TAN	(Tah-noo)	17th Aethyr
Tastax	(Tah-ess-tayx)	Going Before
Tatan	(Tah-tah-noo)	Wormwood
Teloah	(Tay-loh-ah)	Death
Teloc (Vovim)	(Tay-loh-kah)	Him that is fallen
Teloch	(Tay-loh-kah-hay)	Death
TEX	(Tayx)	30th Aethyr
Thild	(Tay-hee-lah-dah)	Their own Seats
Thil (n)	(Tay-hee-lah)	Seats
Ti	(Tee)	It
Tia	(Tee-ah)	Unto us
Tianti	(Tee-ah-nu-tee)	She is (or bed)
Tibibf	(Tee-bee-bay-eff)	Sorrow
Tilb	(Tee-lah-bay)	Her
Tiobl	(Tee-oh-bay-lah)	In her
Tliob	(Tay-lee-oh-bay)	Separate, to
Toatar	(Toh-ah-tay-ray)	Hearken
Toh	(Toh-hay)	Triumpheth
Toglo	(Toh-gee-loh)	All things
Toibl	(Toh-ee-bay-lah)	Within her
Tonug	(Toh-nu-gee)	Let them be defaced
Tooart	(Toh-oh-oh-ray-tay)	Furnishing
TOR	(Toh-ray)	23rd Aethyr
Torg (i)	(Toh-ray-gee)	Creatures of Earth
Torzu	(Tor-zoad-oo)	Arise
Torzul	(Toh-ray-zoad-oo-lah)	Shall Rise
Torzulp	(Toh-ray-zoad-oo-lah-pay)	Rose Up
Tox	(Tohx)	Of Him
Tranan	(Tay-rah-noh-noo)	Marrow
Trian	(Tay-ray-ee-ah-nu)	Shall Be
Trint	(Tay-ray-ee-nu-tay)	Sit
Trof	(Tay-roh-eff)	Building
Turbs	(Toor-bay-ess)	Their Beauty

V

Vabzir	(Vah-bay-zoad-ee-ray)	Eagle
Vaoan	(Vay-oh-ah-noo)	Truth (purified, glorified)
Vau	(Vah-oo)	Title of U or V
Vaul	(Vah-oo-lah)	Work
Vaun	(Vah-oo-nu)	Ye might work
Vcim	(Vah-kah-ee-mee)	They frown not
Veh	(Vay-hay)	Title of C or K
Vap	(Vay-pay)	Flame
Vgear	(Vah-gay-ah-ray)	The strength of man
Vgeg (i)	(Vah-gay-gee)	Wax Strong
Vi	(Vee)	In
Vi-i-v	(Vee-ee-vah)	The second angle
Vin	(Vee-noo)	Invoke
Virq	(Vee-ray-koh)	Nests
Vi-v	(Vee vah)	The Second
Vlcinin	(Vah-lah-kee-nee-nu)	Happy is He
Vls	(Vah-lah-ess)	The Ends
V-ma-dea	(Vah-mah-day-ah)	Strong Towers
Vmd	(Vah-mee-dah)	Called
Vml	(Vah-mee-lah)	Add
Vmplif	(Vah-mee-pay-lee-eff)	Our Strength
Vnalah	(Vah-nah-lah)	Skirts
Vnas (Vnal)	(Vah-nah-ess)	These
Vnchi	(Vah-noo-kah-hee)	Confound
Vnd-l	(Vah-noo-dah-lah)	The rest
Vnig	(Vah-nee-gee)	Requireth
Vniglag	(Vah-nee-gee-lah-gee)	Descend
Vnph	(Von-pay-hay)	Anger
Vohim	(Voh-hee-mee)	Hundred
Vonpho	(Von-pay-hoh)	Wrath
Vonsarg	(Voh-nu-sah-ray-gee)	Everyone
Vooan	(Voo-ah-nu)	Truth, with them that fall
Vorsg	(Vor-sah-gee)	Over You
Vovina	(Voh-vee-nah)	The Dragon
Vp	(Vah-pay)	Not
V-pa-ah (i)	(Vah pay ah-hay)	Wings
Vran	(Vah-rah-noo)	The Elders
Vrbs	(Vah-ray-bay-ess)	Beautified
Vrelp	(Vah-ray-lah-pay)	A Strong Seer of Things

VTA	(Vah-tah)	14th Aethyr
VTI	(Vah-tee)	25th Aethyr
VX	(Vah-ex)	42
Un	(Oo-noo)	Title of A
Ur	(Oo-ray)	Title of L
Uran	(Oo-rah-noo)	Shall see

Z

Z (od)	(Zoad)	They (as)
ZAA	(Zoad-ah-ah)	27th Aethyr
Zacar-e	(Zoad-ah-kah-ray)	Move
Zamran	(Zoad-ah-mer-rah-noo)	Show Yourselves
Zar	(Zoad-ah-ray)	(Courses)
ZEN	(Zoad-ay-noo)	18th Aethyr
ZID	(Zoad-ee-dah)	8th Aethyr
Zien	(Zoad-ee-ay-nu)	My hands
Zildar	(Zoad-ee-lah-dah-ray)	Flew
Zilodarp	(Zoad-ee-loh-dah-ray-pay)	Conquest
ZIM	(Zoad-ee-mee)	13th Aethyr
Zimii	(Zoad-ee-mee-ee)	Have entered
Zimz (a)	(Zoad-ee-mee-zoad)	My vestures
ZIP	(Zoad-ee-pay)	9th Aethyr
Zir	(Zoad-ee-ray)	I am
Zirdo	(Zoad-ee-ray-doh)	I am
Zirn	(Zoad-ee-ray-noo)	Wonders
Zirom	(Zoad-ee-roh-mee)	There were
Zirop	(Zoad-ee-roh-pay)	Was
Zixlay	(Zoad-ix-lay)	To stir up
Zizop	(Zoad-ee-zoad-oh-pay)	Vessels
Zilda	(Zoad-lee-dah)	To water
Znrza	(Zoad-nu-ray-zoad-ah)	Sware
Z-ol	(Zoad oh-lah)	Hands
ZOM	(Zoad-oh-mee)	3rd Aethyr
Zomd	(Zoad-oh-mee-dah)	In the midst of
Zonac	(Zoad-oh-nah-kah)	They are apparelled
Zongon	(Zoad-oh-nu-goh-nu)	The Winds
Zonrensg	(Zoad-on-raynu-ess-gee)	Delivered
Zorge	(Zoad-or-gee)	Be friendly unto me
Zumbi	(Zoad-oo-mee-bee)	Seas
Zylna	(Zoad-ee-lah-nah)	In itself

The Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram

This ritual operates upon the Macrocosm in the same manner that the Pentagram ritual operates upon the Microcosm. It is to be performed after the "Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram" and is most appropriate for invocations of the Enochian Seniors.

1. Stand upright, feet together, left arm at side, right arm across body, holding the wand or other weapon upright in the median line. Then face East, and say:

2. "I.N.R.I. Yod. Nun. Resh. Yod. Virgo, Isis, Mighty Mother. Scorpio, Apophis, Destroyer. Sol, Osiris, Slain and Risen. Isis, Apophis, Osiris, IAO."

3. Extend the arms in the form of a cross, and say:

"The sign of Osiris Slain." (See illustration.)

4. Raise the right arm to point upwards, keeping the elbow square, and lower the left arm to point downwards, keeping the elbow square, while turning the head over the left shoulder looking down so that the eyes follow the left forearm, and say:

"The sign of the Mourning of Isis" (See illustration.)

5. Raise the arms at an angle of sixty degrees to each other above the head, which is thrown back, and say:

"The sign of Apophis and Typhon." (See illustration.)

6. Cross the arms on the breast, and bow the head, and say: The sign of Osiris Risen." (See illustration.)

7. Extend the arms again as in (3) and cross them again as in (6), saying:

"L.V.X. Lux, the Light of the Cross."

8. With the magical weapon trace the Hexagram of Fire in the East, saying:
"ARARITA."

(This is a word created by the initials of a Hebrew sentence which means "One is His Beginning: One is His Individuality: His Permutation is One.") This hexagram consists of two equilateral triangles, both apices pointing upwards. Begin at the top of the upper triangle and trace it in a clockwise direction. The top of the lower triangle should coincide with the central point of the upper triangle.

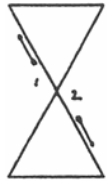
9. Turn to the South. Trace the Hexagram of Earth saying: "ARARITA."

This Hexagram has the apex of the lower triangle pointing downwards, and it should be capable of inscription in a circle.

10. Turn to the West. Trace the Hexagram of Air saying: "ARARITA."

This hexagram is like that of Earth: but the bases of the triangles coincide, forming a diamond.

11. Turn to the North. Trace the Hexagram of Water saying: "ARARITA."

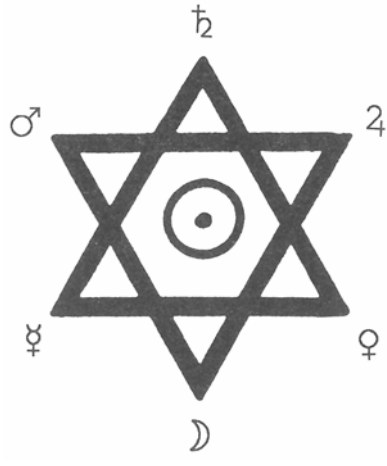


This hexagram has the lower triangle placed above the upper, so that their apices coincide.

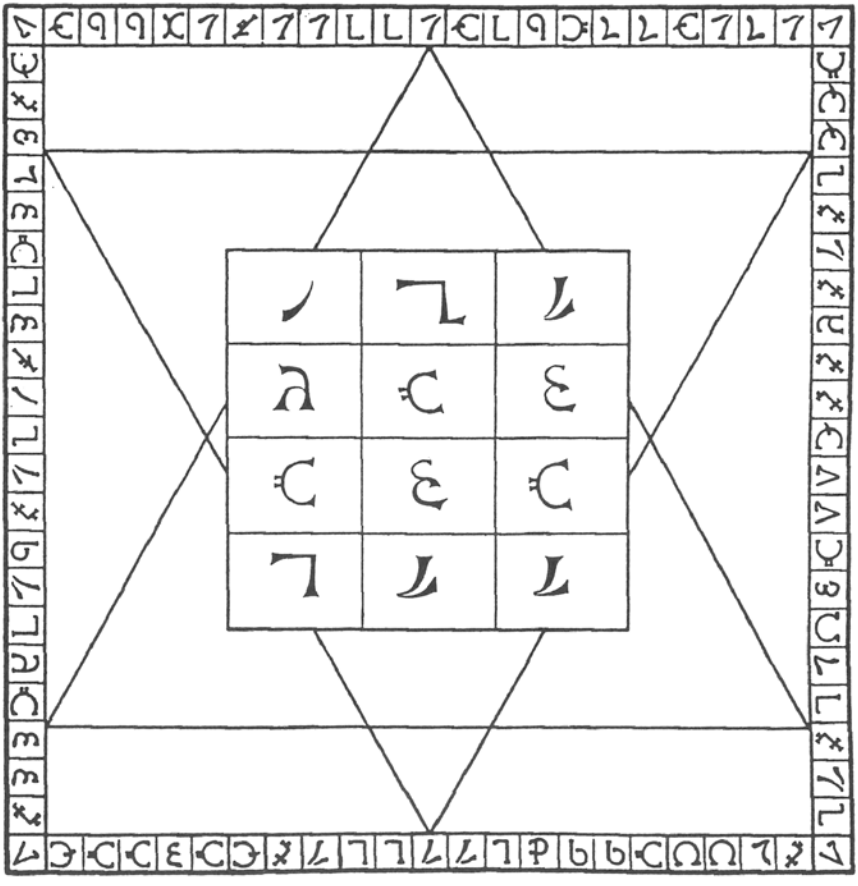
12. Return to the East and repeat steps (1-7)

The Banishing Ritual is identical, save that the direction of the Hexagrams must be reversed.

To invoke or banish Planets or Zodiacal signs, the Hexagram of Earth alone is used. Draw the hexagram, beginning from the point which is attributed to the planet you are dealing with.

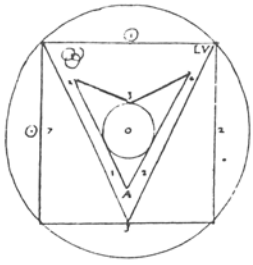


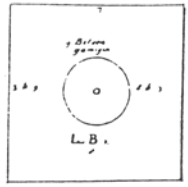
Appendix



The Corrected Holy Table
Diagram A

Planetary Talismans
Diagram B

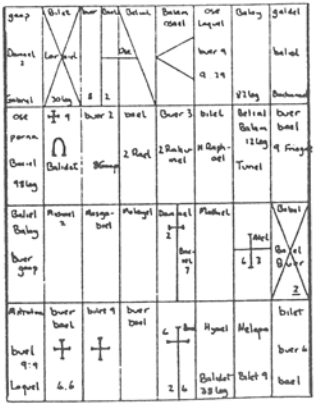




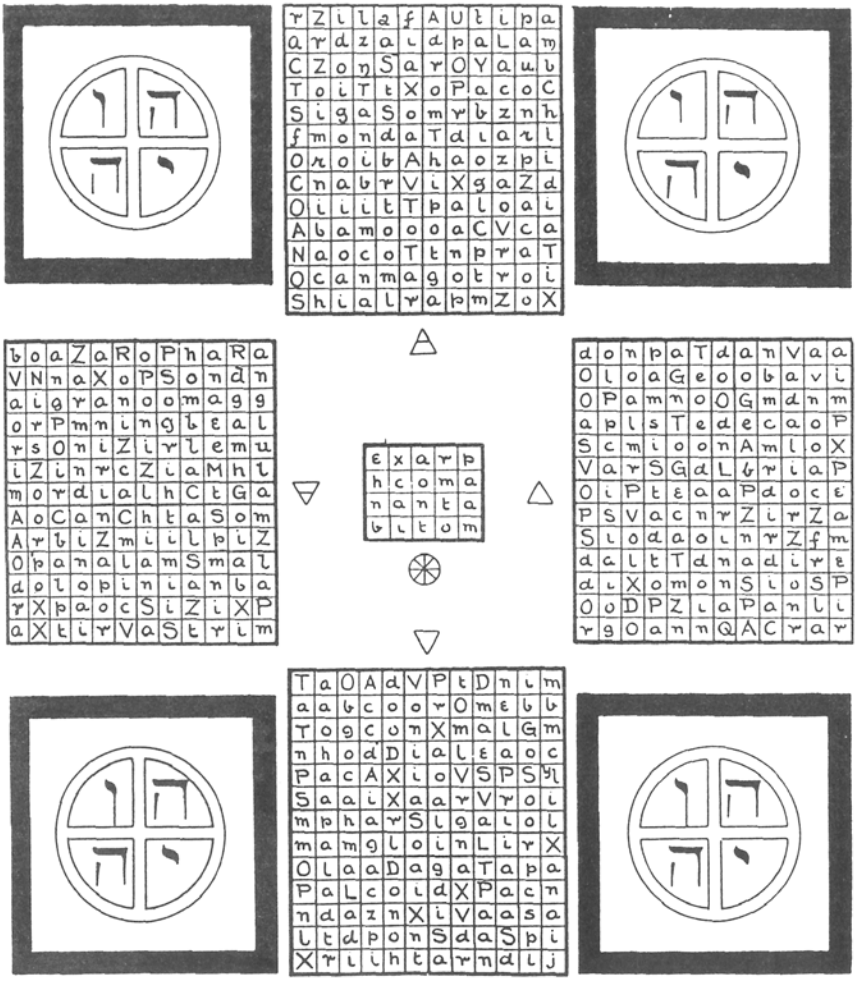
Gabriel ☥ Bilet 28 leg	Michael 30 ☿ Osael Babel Gabreel	999 Reel Osael Babel Gabreel
Berith ♃ ♏ the true Kings of the North Sitrael Malantha Thamaor ♆	Balsel Aeon	Lokgun hyaiel Balay Galdel Osael
Asmodai ☾ 5 Buer Pudel	Methial Dabriel darquel buer 2 Amaimon	Laquel 10 leg buer paaron paridel
valac 9 times hyael bilet 22 leg	☿ 2 ☿ buer amon gorson ose	25 leg Barabarat Lama damael

buer ♄ bael	buer buer ose	537 leg buer buer buer	buel Belial gemon valac	Turiel 13 leg buer buer buer	buer 9 times
Dromiel 6 Barabarat	ose 6 Belial bathin	Bileth 16 ☾	baths buer bileth Paimon 3	barbatos Gamigin Ophiel	buer baths Cimeriel Vual
8 Camael Berlpharos	Och ose 7 buer bael		99	99 Balam	buer Larasie
Gemori ose 36 leg Belial	☿ 3 buer bael	99 5 buer baths	♄ 6	7.2 buer Barbatos	Bileth Balkan ☿ ♃

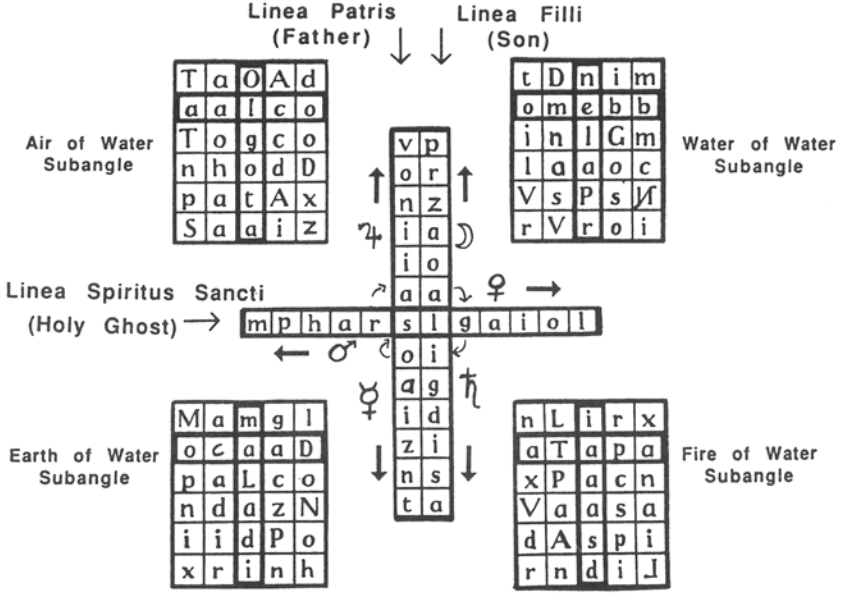
2 buer	Gaap	Glasia Labolas	22 Leg Baths	Bathin 26 Leg baths buer bael	baths buer Lokgun Buer	Balam 101 leg	Belial
baths bael buer balam 8	Gaap baths buer	bael buer	gaap gaap baths	buer	bael	62 leg bael Belial Balam	Belial ☥ Bael
Camael Sc leg ♀	bael Ose Ose dabel 29	Belial	Buer 9 times translated	Valac Belbel 5	Buer 5 times	bael 3 times	baths 3 times 83 leg
Buer 6	Baths	Buer murmur 166 leg	buer	bael	Caim murmur	Belial	Buer Amaimon 100 bael
buer	Bathin	bael	buer Februgrammaton	4 times Belial Bael 9	Belial Bael Balam buer baths	buer baths 72 leg Furcas	bael



gaap Camael 2 Gabriel	Bilet Lar Jolay	Buer 8	Bael 2	Belial Sitri	Balam asael	ose Laquel buer 9 9 29	Balay	galdel balal 87 leg
ose paron Barrel 98 leg	☥ 9 Baldael	buer 2 8 Camp	buel 2 Rael	Buer 3 2 Bahumet	bilet 11 Raphael	Belial Balam 12 leg Tunel	buer bael 9 Fingal
Gabriel Balay buer gaap	Michael 2	Assagaet	Malagel	Dan 2 Barmi 7	Methiel	Tabel 6 3	Babel Bel Buer 2
Adrumel buel 9·9 Laquel	buer bael ☥ 6.6	bilet 9 ☥	buer bael	♄ Bael 2 6	Hyael	Melapa Baldael 38 leg	bilet buer 6 bael



The Elemental Tablets And Cherubic Emblems
Diagram C



The Tablet Of Water
Great Central Cross And Subangles
Diagram D

d	o	n	p	a	T	d	a	n	V	a	a
a	l	o	a	G	e	o	o	b	a	u_v	a_i
O	P	a	m	n	o	v_o	G	m_n	d	n	m
a	p_b	l	s	T	e	c_d	e	c	a	o	p
s	c	m	i	o	a	n	A	m	l	o	x
V	a	r	s	G	d	L	b_y	r	i	a	p
o	i	P	t	e	a	a	p	D	o	c	e
P	s	u_v	a	c	n	r	Z	i	r	z	a
S	i	o	d	a	o	i	n	r	z	f	m
d	a	l_b	t	T	d	n	a	d	i	r	e
d	i	x	o	m	o	n	s	i	o	s	p
O	o	D	p	z	i	A	p	a	n	l	i
r	g	o	a	n	n	o_p	A	C	r	a	r

T	a	O	A	d	u_v	p	t	D	n	i	m
a_o	a	b_l	c	o	o	r	o	m	e	b	b
T^o	a_g	c	o	n	x_z	m_i	a_{nu}	l	G	m n	h	o	d	D	i	a	i	l_a	a	o	c
f_p	a	t_c	A	x	i	v_o	V	s	P	x_s	y_{Nh}
S	a	a	i	z_x	a	a	r	V	r	L^e	i
m	p	h	a	r	s	l	g	a	i	o	l
M	a	m	g	l	o	i	n	L	i	r	x
o	l	a	a	D	n_a	g	a	T	a	p	a p	a	L	c	o	i	d	x	P	a	c	n
n	d	a	z	N	z_x	i	V	a	a	s	a r_i	i	d	P	o	n	s	d	A	s	p	i x	r	i_r	n	h	t	a	r	n_a	d	i	L

r	Z	i	l	a	f	A	y_u	t	l_i	p	a
a	r	d	Z	a	i	d	p	a	L	a	m
C	z	o	n	s	a	r	o	v_Y	a	u	b
T	o	i	T	t	z_x	o	P	a	c	o	C
S	i	g	a	s	o	n_m	r	b	z	n	h
f	m	o	n	d	a	T	d	i	a	r	l_i
o	r	o	i	b	a	h	a	o	z	p	i t_c	N	a	b	f_a	V	i	x	g	a	s_z	d
O	i	i	i	t	T	p	a	l	O	a	i
A	b	a	m	o	o	o	a	C	u_v	c	a
N	a	o	c	O	T	t	n	p	r	u_a	T
o	c	a	n	m	a	g	o	t	r	o	i
S	h	i	a	l	r	a	p	m	z	o	x

b	O	a	Z	a	R	o	p	h	a	R	a u_v	N	n	a	x	o	P	S	o	n	d	n
a	i	g	r	a	n	o	a_o	m	a	g	g o	r	p	m	n	i	n	g	b	e	a	l
r	s	O	n	i	z	i	r	l	e	m	u
i	z	i	n	r	C	z	i	a	M	h	l
M	O	r	d	i	a	l	h	C	t	G	a
R_o	C_o	a_c	n_a	c_{nm}	h_c	i_h	i_{bt}	s_a	o_s	m_o	t_m
A	r	b	i	z	m	i	l_1	l	p	i	z
O	p	a	n	a	l_B	a	m	S	m	a	T_L
d	O	l	o	P_F	l	n	i	a	n	b	a r	x	p	a	o	c	s	i	z	i	x	p
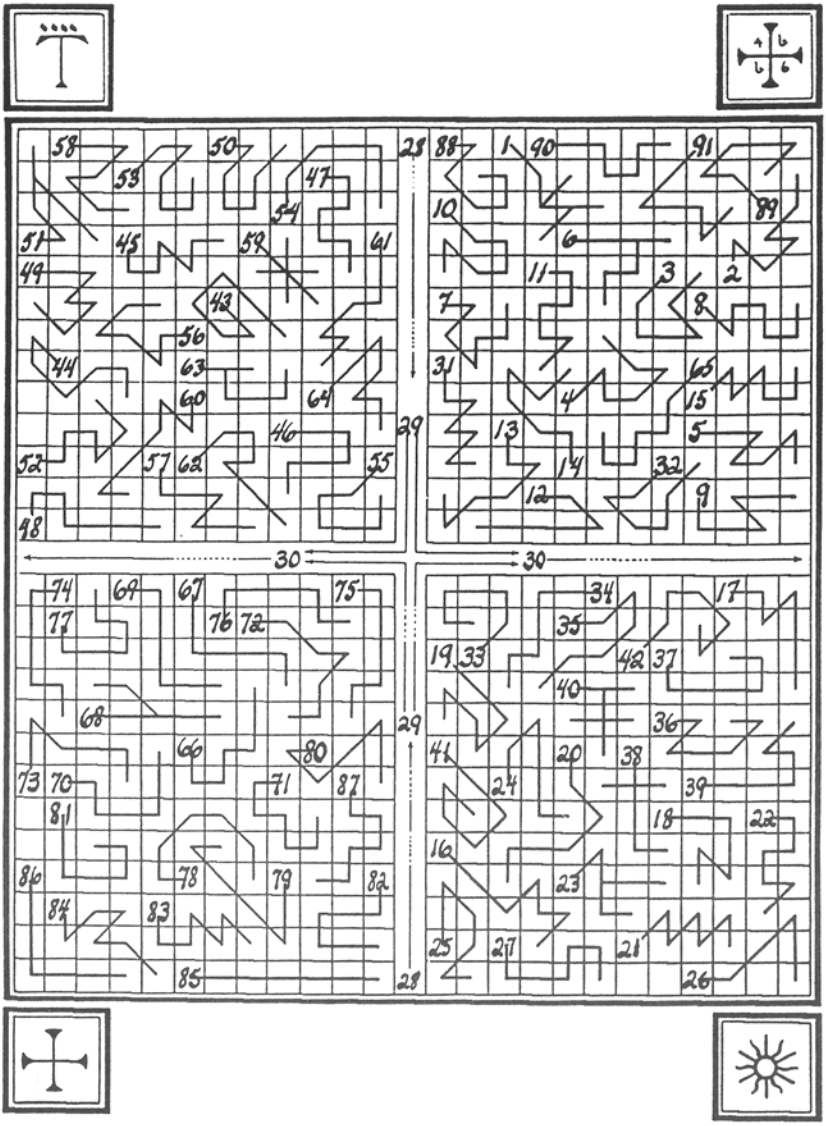
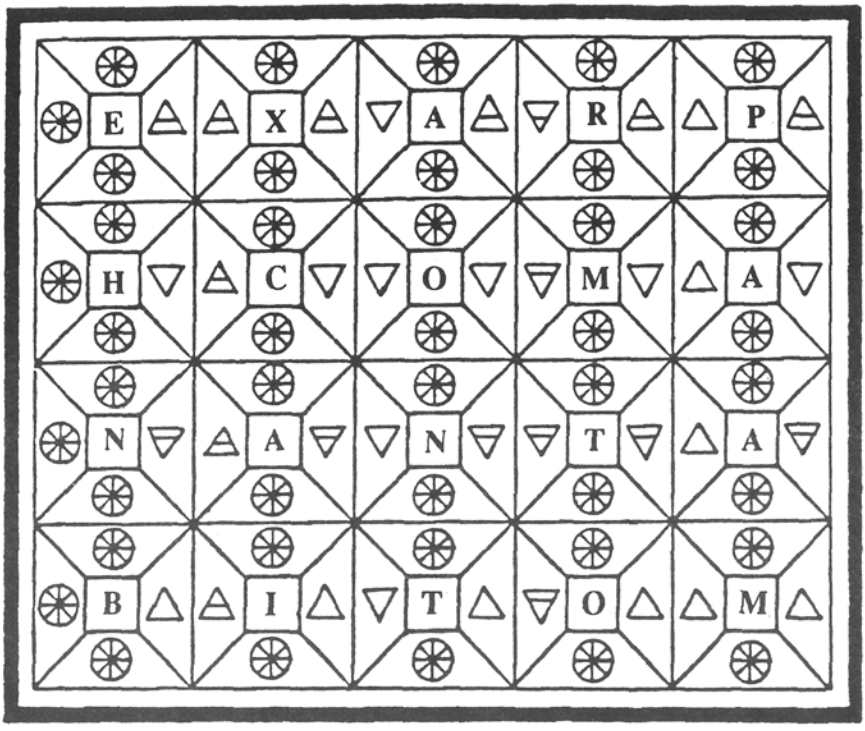
a	x	t	i	r	V	a	s	t	r	i	m

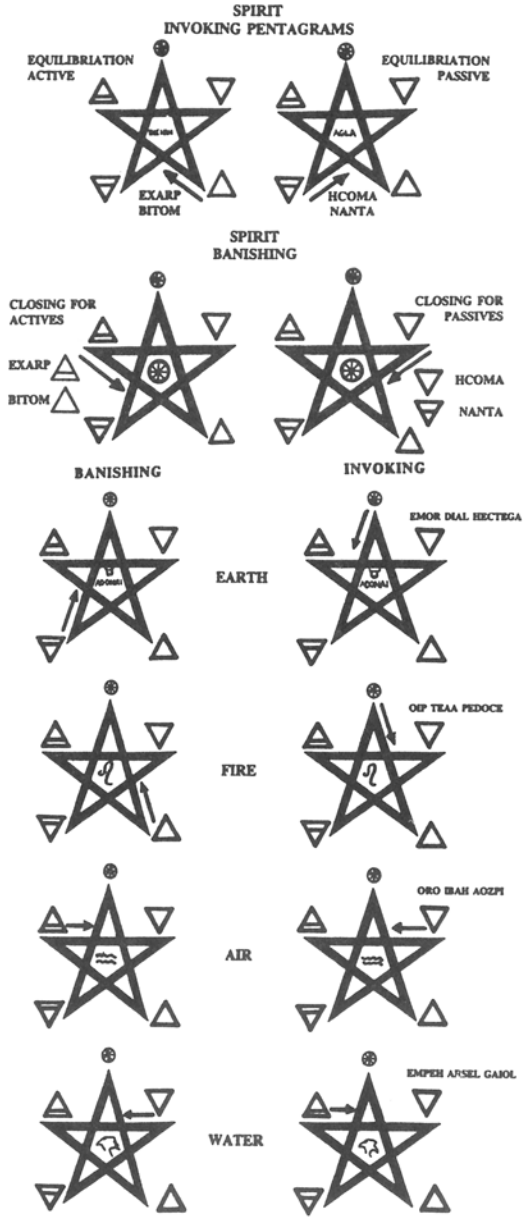
Four Elemental Tablets With Alternate Spellings
Diagram E



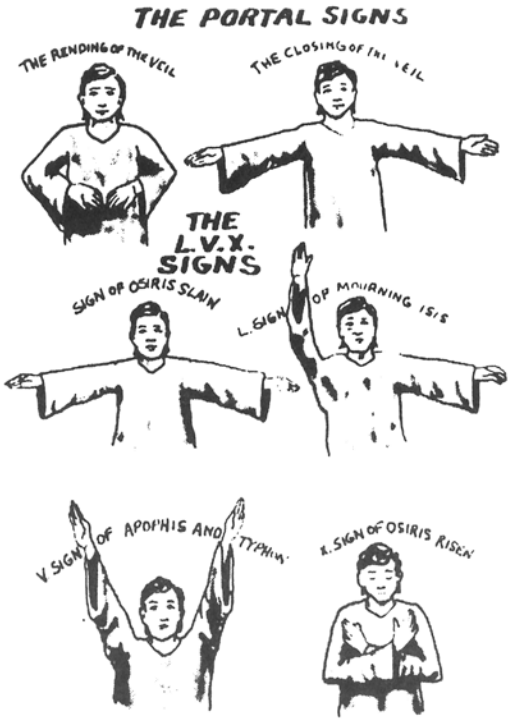
The Sigils Of The Governors
Diagram F



The Tablet Of Union (English Letters)
Diagram G



Pentagrams
Diagram H



Signs Of The Grades
Diagram I

Shu Set

Auramot Thoum-aesh-neith

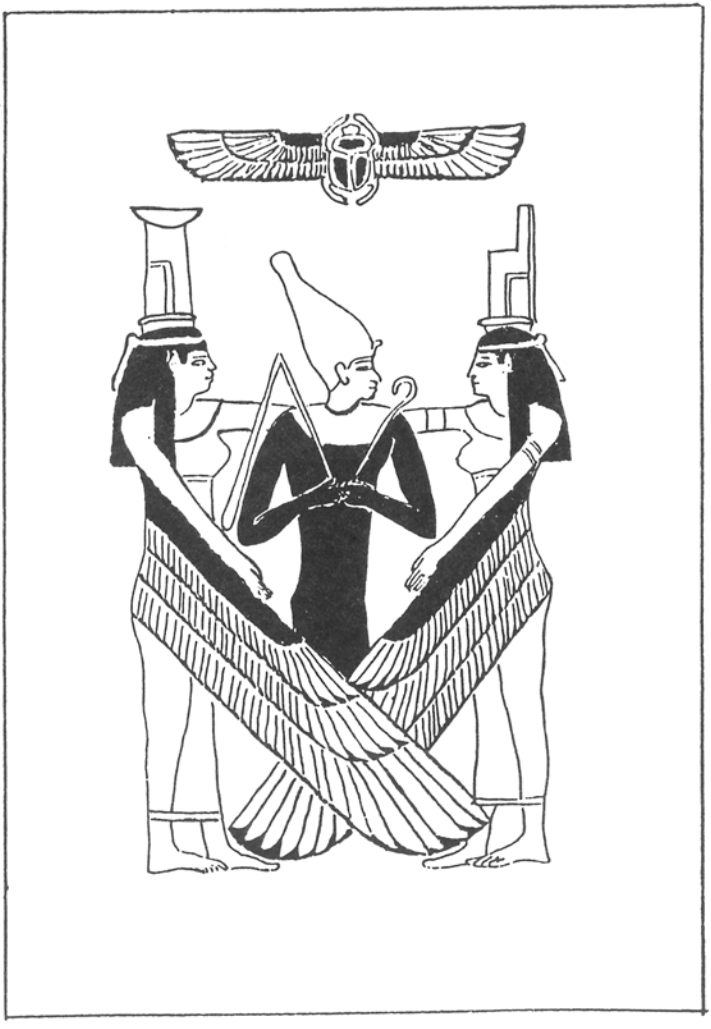
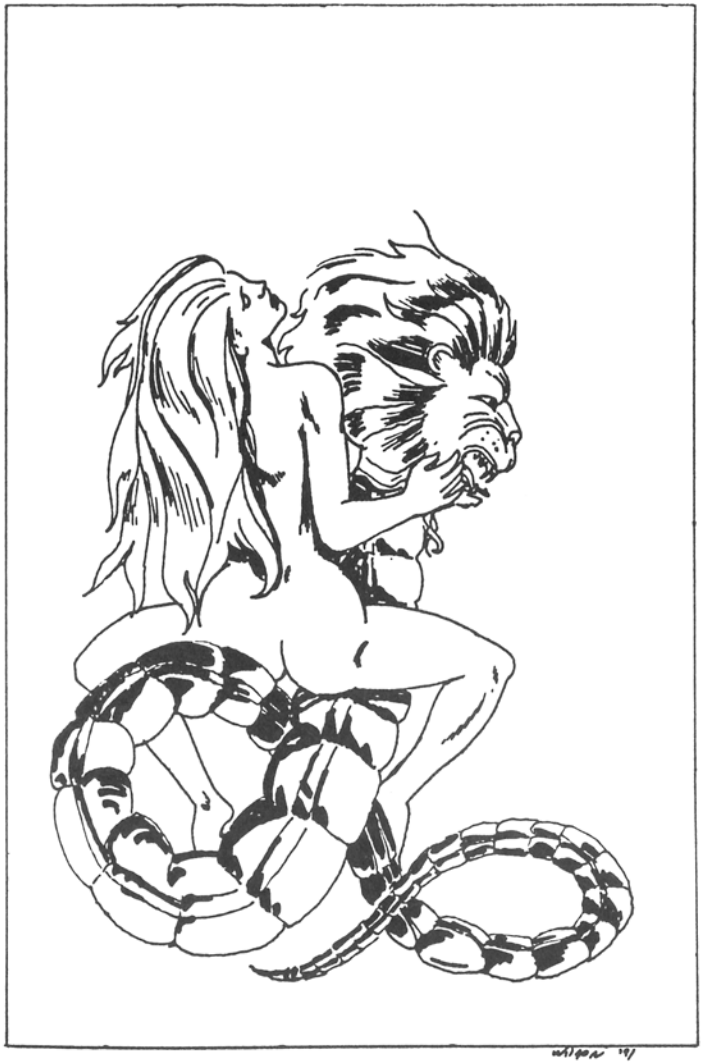
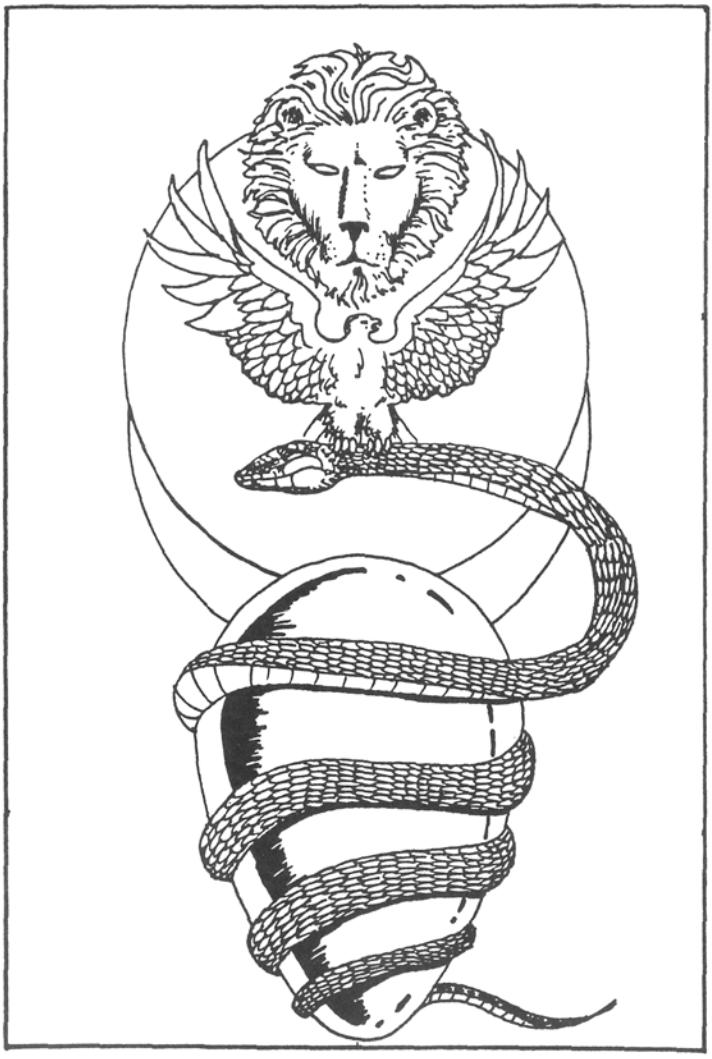
Diagram I



The Lovers
Divine And Elemental

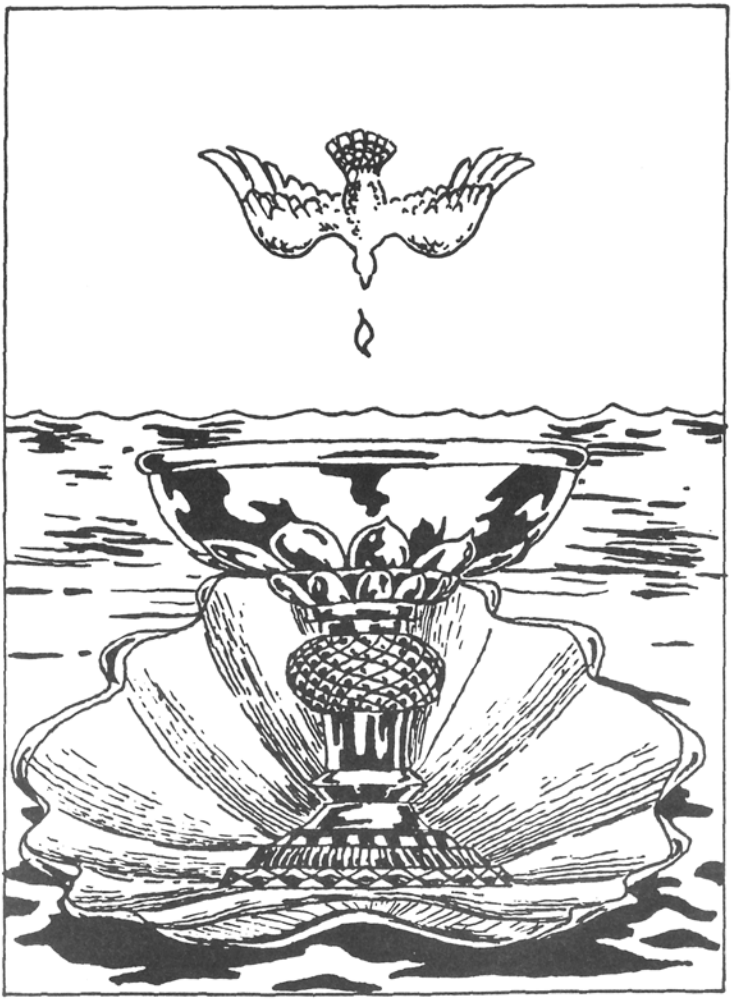


Babalon And The Beast Conjoined



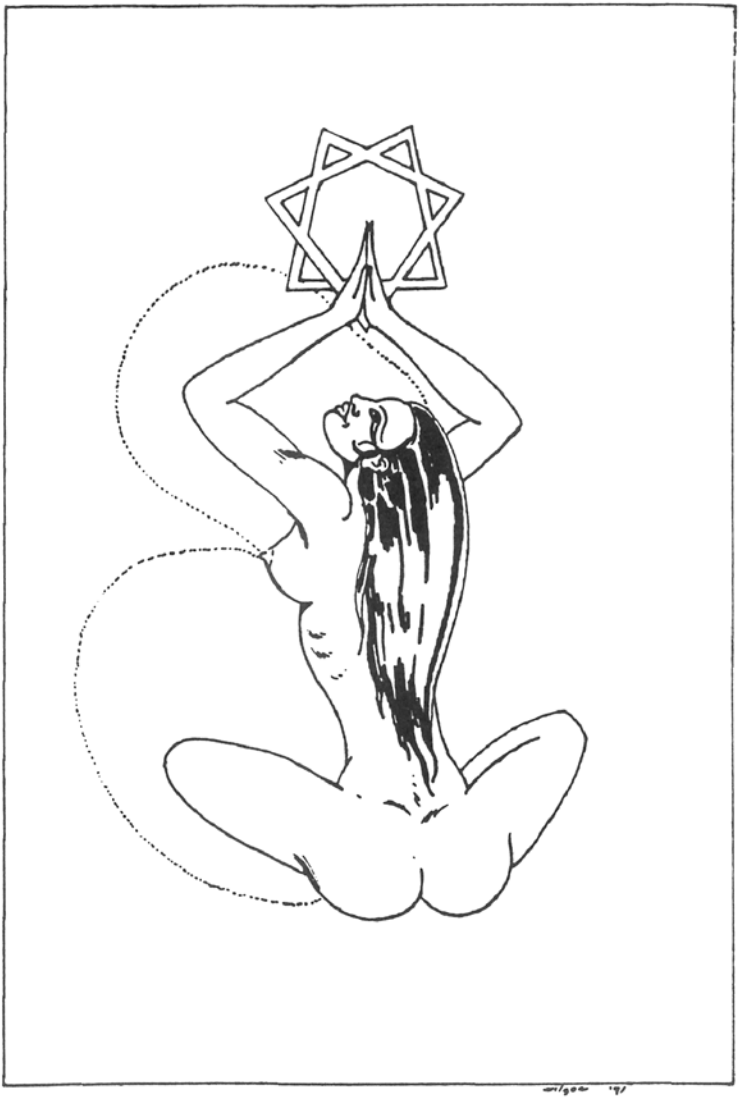
The Quintessence Of Sexual Alchemy

The Charging Of The Seed
Through Concentrated Will

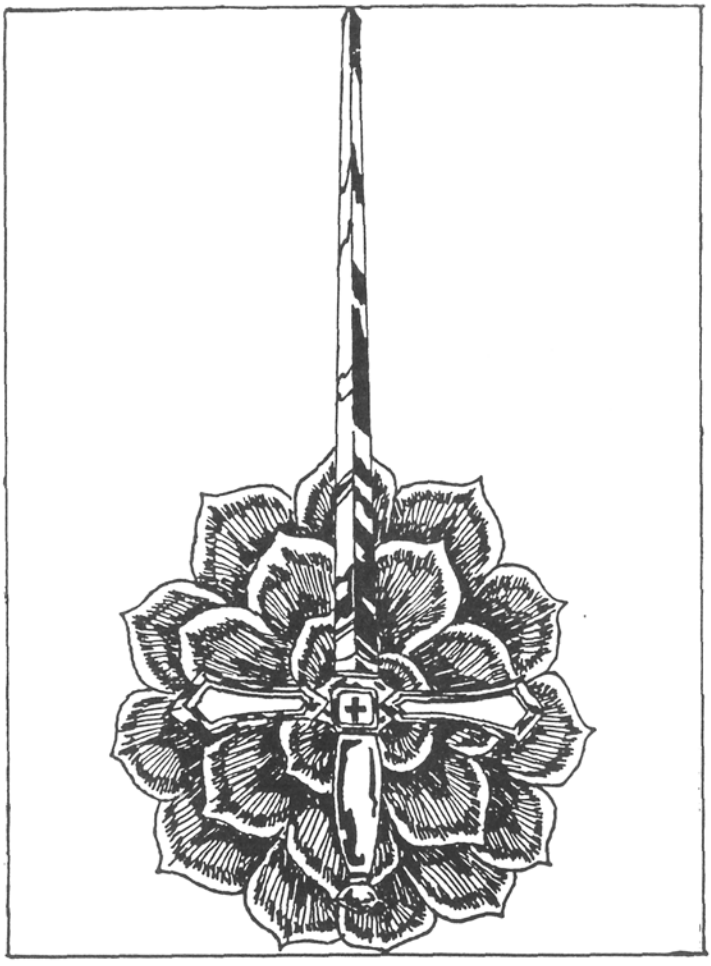


The Holy Graal
The Creation Of The Elixir Of Life

The Annihilation Of The Ego
In The Thunder Orgasm



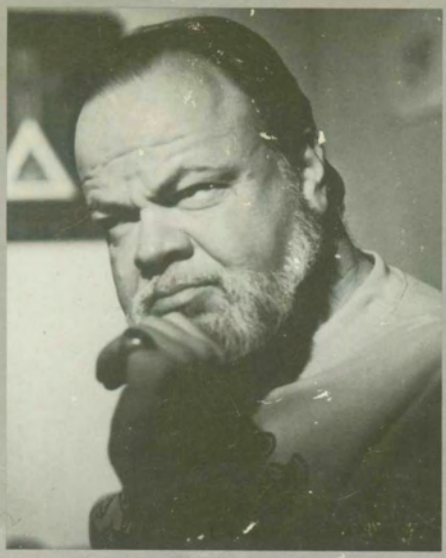
The Orgastic Circulation Of Light
The Supreme Attainment



The Lingam And Yoni
Western Tantric Symbolism

ENOCHIAN SEX MAGICK

Lon Milo DuQuette



Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.

The Enochian World of Aleister Crowley gives the student immediate access to the world's most powerful yet misunderstood system of magick. Crowley's work was the launching pad for all that followed. Originally published in 1912 it rent the veil of the Inner Order of the Golden Dawn and revealed its most precious jewel for all to see.
Mr. DuQuette and Dr. Hyatt bring over forty years of practical experience in this field to show you how to start using this powerful system right now.
For the first time the reader is provided with instructions that bridge the gap between the material and spiritual worlds by integrating Enochiana with Sex Magick.
What Crowley did for Enochian Magick Hyatt and DuQuette have done for Crowley's work.

Gary Ford, P.R.S.

Aleister Crowley (1875-1947) was one this century's most profound students of Magick, Qabalah, and Yoga psychology. He is now widely recognized as the first Western investigator to give initiation a truly scientific method.
Lon Milo DuQuette is an Adeptus Exemptus of The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn as well as a high ranking officer of other Thelemic Esoteric Orders. He is regarded as one of the leading authorities in Enochian Magic.
Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D. is a leading authority on Sex Magick and Tantra and the author of the world famous classic Undoing Yourself. For years he was Israel Regardie's close associate and is the President of the Israel Regardie Foundation.

NEW FALCON PUBLICATIONS

ISBN: 1-56184-029-7

$9.95

DR. JOHN DEE

ELIZABETHAN MYSTIC AND ASTROLOGER

92

By

G. M. HORT

A. h. 7

London
WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LTD.
8-11 Paternoster Row, E.C.

DR. JOHN DEE

DR. JOHN DEE:

ELIZABETHAN MYSTIC AND ASTROLOGER

BY

G. M. HORT

LONDON
WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LTD.
8-11 PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
1922

Fa

CORNELL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

DR. JOHN DEE

CHAPTER I

THE subject of this sketch cannot claim to rank among the world's successes.

He was, indeed, one of those who court failure rather than success; who occupy themselves instinctively with the things which are too hard for them rather than with those they could accomplish with ease and dignity.

Dr. Dee's lot was cast, moreover, in troubled and baffling circumstances. He suffered much from his enemies, and still more from his false friends. Popular prejudice and popular ignorance, which were busy with his name in his lifetime, continued to pursue it long after his death. Butler's Hudibras contains a vicious caricature of him; and writers more serious and restrained than Butler have done less than justice to his character and work, content to accept the floating tradition that blackened the one and dismissed the other as negligible![1]

Yet it is difficult to see how even the most hostile of them could have read the story of his life (especially those parts of it which he himself has narrated) without feeling some measure of sympathy and respect for this eager enthusiast and patient scholar, so devout yet so daring, so gentle of heart yet so inflexible of purpose.

[1] On the other hand, it has been contended with some show of reason that Prospero in The Tempest is Shakespeare's idealised portrait of Dee.

The man was, in truth, a hero in his way. He was also an occult student of no mean order; and there is a sense in which we may count his failures in that Quest to which he sacrificed his best years and powers, and his fair fame also, as higher and worthier than many an acknowledged success.

. . . . . .

John Dee was born on July 13, 1527, in London, where his father, Rowland Dee, a gentleman of ancient Welsh descent, but apparently of no great fortune, held a minor post in the Royal Household.

We can form but a vague picture of the future philosopher's early childhood in Tudor London.

The times were tempestuous and transitional, and the political and religious troubles many.

The execution of Fisher and More took place, for example, when young John was eight years old; and the passionate discontent with the enforced religious changes broke forth in the unsuccessful insurrections of the succeeding year (1536).

But children, as a rule, trouble themselves but little with public events, except in so far as their own lives are affected by some particular penalty or privilege. We may safely surmise that the principal shadow on Dee's childhood was the one which, unfortunately, was never to be very far from him in mature life—the shadow, namely, of narrow means and financial difficulty.

Rowland Dee was, apparently, rather shabbily treated by his royal master; the advancement for which he looked never came; and his post as "a gentleman-server" could have been neither very important nor very remunerative. What he and his wife, Jane (whose maiden name was Wilde, and who seems to have been always a loving and beloved mother to her gifted son), thought of the religious changes we do not hear.

It would appear that Dee had a religious upbringing, such as the times afforded.

About the year 1537, when the greater monasteries were still waiting the doom that had overtaken the lesser ones, the boy was sent to the Chantry School of Chelmsford, where the worthy chantry priest, Peter Wileigh (with whose "honest conversation" even the King's Commissioners, some years later, could find no fault), grounded him in the elements of Latin grammar.

In this quiet little market-town, by the slow-moving river Chelmer, the mind and manners of young John must have received some lasting impressions from what he there saw and shared of the stately ritual of the old religion.

He, together with other little scholars, must have heard many Masses said and sung at those chantry altars, whereof we know that one of them was dedicated to "Our Lady St. Mary" and one to Corpus Christi. He must often have served his tutor and other priests in the capacity of "altar-boy," and grown familiar with the details of the great Mystic Ceremony which, more than any other, links the living with the dead, the seen with the unseen.

We may conjecture that his schooldays were happy ones, and that he loved both his tutors and his tasks.

On the other hand, the cravings of his eager brain for what, in after-years, he described as "good learning" must have been but ill-satisfied at Chelmsford.

The grammar-schools of that day were truer than they now are to their limiting name. They aimed at little more than familiarising the scholar with the language in which his future studies at the University would have to be pursued. The Universities, indeed, took the place of the modern upper schools, and boys entered as undergraduates at what we should call a very immature age.

Dee himself was only fifteen when he left Chelmsford for Cambridge and entered as student at St. John's.

The reputation of St. John's stood high among its fellows. It took its origin and its name from a twelfth-century house of Austin Canons; but as a college it was comparatively new, and had won the special commendation of Erasmus, who had discerned in it "sound learning and a truly evangelic spirit," the result of the fostering care of the enlightened and saintly Bishop Fisher, whose work lived after him, though he himself was gone.

Here Dee entered, like other newcomers, on the scholastic Trivium—the three years' course of grammar, logic, and rhetoric—which, in all mediæval universities, was followed by the Quadrivium—the four years devoted to the more practical sciences of mathematics, geography, music, and astronomy.

In his own words, he gave himself "vehemently to study." University life in those days was a strange yet not unwholesome mixture of rigid discipline and wide freedom. A student, provided he obeyed certain elementary communal rules as to attendance at lectures, chapel, and the like, could dispose of his time much as he wished. Dee was certainly not one of those who wandered "flown with insolence and wine" in the streets after nightfall, or laughed and idled through the lectures which their ignorance of the language in which these were delivered made unintelligible to them.

At one time, he only spared himself four hours for sleep and two for meals and recreation. The rest, apart from the unavoidable attendances at divine service—the "compulsory chapels" of a later day!—was devoted wholly to his books.

He had the blended fervour and patience of the true scholar. Those were the days when the New Learning was (by a seeming contradiction) turning men's thoughts more and more towards the wisdom of the ancient world. For centuries the Greek authors had been read, where read at all, in Latin translations. Now, scholarship had rediscovered that wonderful tongue of antiquity which, in our days, has been in danger of some neglect, as a musty, dusty heritage, but which, to Erasmus and his followers, was an enchanted key to the doors of all knowledge, the hall-mark of advanced, ever-advancing knowledge.

Of Roger Ascham (some twelve years Dee's senior, and himself a St. John's man) we hear that his lamp was often burning before daybreak; that he curtailed his sleep to study Greek. We can be fairly sure that Dee himself had a like habit. In 1546 he was appointed Under-Reader of Greek at the newly founded Trinity College, where Robert Pember, Ascham's tutor, was Principal Reader in the same subject. Dee was also made a Fellow of Trinity; and, earlier in the same year, he had graduated as B.A. at his own college.

A curious little incident may be recorded here, since it has something of the prophetic about it.

The Greek students of Trinity—the pupils, of course, of Pember and Dee himself—were to give a representation of the Pax of Aristophanes; and the young under-reader—then but a youth of nineteen—took upon himself the task of stage-management, and planned a realistic stage-effect—the actual ascent or flight of Trygæus, the vinedresser, mounted on his great scarab or dung-beetle, from the stage to the "Palace of Zeus," situated somewhere in the roof.

The mechanical contrivance by which this was accomplished was probably suggested to Dee by the accounts he had read of the devices of the Athenian stage—devices which, as we know, were of the crudest description: such, for instance, as the use of upper windows at which an actor could suddenly appear; or of high ledges to which, when he represented a supernatural being, he could be hoisted by a crane. It is incredible that an Athenian audience should have estimated such obvious illusions at more than their face value. Indeed, historians are fond of reminding us that to eke out such scanty effects and to obtain the correct dramatic thrill, a strong imagination must have been necessary in the spectators.

Dee's audience seems to have used its imagination in a different and more disastrous manner! It was, we are told, this piece of boyish ingenuity and clever handicraft that gave rise to the first of those rumours of sorcery, those "vain reports," as Dee himself calls them, which were so long destined to darken our scholar's reputation and, more than once, to endanger his life!

Very likely the reproach was, at first, only flung at him as a jest by some fellow-scholar. But in those days "sorcery" was too serious a matter to make a jest of. We sometimes loosely suppose that the mediæval superstitions concerning witchcraft and black magic had died down in Tudor times, and that their notorious revival under "the learned fool," James I, was a new and dreadful development, due to him and his fanaticism. It is true that in the all-too-eventful reigns of Henry VIII and his son and daughters the fear of sorcery was kept somewhat in the background, owing to the multitude of other causes for fear—the frenzy against heresies, seditions, and treasons, and the many more convenient pretexts for putting unpopular people to death. But the belief in sorcery remained a dreadful reality. An Act against Sorcery, with terrible penalties attached to its practice, stood in the Statute Book.

In 1541—Dee's last year at Chelmsford—a certain Welsh minstrel had been denounced as "a false prophet" and put to death on that charge! The mere claim to any sort of supernatural powers might become at any time unspeakably dangerous to the claimant. So we can easily understand how the jest of Dee's friends might turn to a weapon for his enemies, and how he must have resented and feared the imputation.

At first, however, it could have done him but little harm. He had, in those days, more friends than enemies, and moved in an academic society which popular superstition could not absolutely dominate.

What he himself calls his "boyish attempts and exploits scholastical" won for him much favourable notice. And his energies led him on to ever greater efforts and achievements.

About this time he began to be occupied with practical astronomy, and took countless observations of the heavens. Then, in the May of 1547—his twentieth year—his increasing thirst for knowledge carried him to the Low Countries—to the great University of Louvain—the resort of so many learned men, mathematicians and philosophers.

Among the friendships he made at this time, that with the famous Gerardus Mercator seems to have been the most fruitful and significant. Mercator is remembered, even by the general reader, as the originator of a method of cosmographical projection, in which latitude and longitude are indicated by straight instead of curved lines, to serve the purposes of navigation and steering by compass. Dee brought back with him to England and to his university two of Mercator's globes, as well as some astronomical instruments "newly devised," which he presented to Trinity College.

His stay at Cambridge was short. Indeed, he seems to have returned there chiefly to take his M.A. degree, and to obtain from the authorities a written testimonial to his character and scholarship, with which he could return to Louvain, where he was formally entered as student in the summer of 1548.

The University of Louvain—founded in 1426 by John, Duke of Brabant—was, as Rashdall tells us, "one of the earliest and, for a time, by far the most famous home of the New Learning in Europe."

Its federation of colleges included the Collegium Trilingue, or "College of Three Tongues," for the study of Greek, Latin, and Hebrew; and its system of competitive honours—which it seems to have been the first university to develop—was a spur to the ambitious and promising scholar. It will be remembered also that such a scholar had, in those days, an advantage that he does not enjoy quite so freely now. No university of Europe but was a kind of native land to him! In all of them the teaching was conducted in a tongue which he already knew—the Esperanto of the learned—Latin.

The young clerk from Cambridge, who had already friends in the town, found at Louvain a congenial environment, and gained, we are told, a great reputation as a mathematician and philosopher.

Mathematics, we may note in passing, were far more philosophical than they are in our time!

The teaching of Pythagoras as to the mystical meaning of numbers had deeply impressed mediæval scholasticism; the propositions of Euclid were often treated as parables, and became the basis of conjectures and theories concerning those spiritual bodies of which the geometrical were types and shadows.

The mathematician of that day was no cut-and-dried materialist. He thought, dreamed, and speculated from the visible to the invisible, guided therein by the maxim of St. Thomas Aquinas that the sources of knowledge are two—reason and revelation.

Dee's studies at Louvain must have done much to feed his interest in occult matters. In alchemy and astrology he was now an eager explorer; nor does he seem to have been troubled here by any reproach of sorcery.

Louvain had been, indeed, the home and refuge of the great alchemist, Cornelius Agrippa, who had acted as secretary and librarian to Margaret of Parma, and whose great work De Occulta Philosophia had been published at Antwerp in 1531. The opinions of Agrippa (who, in this book, defends the practice of magic as one of the lawful ways by which man can attain to a knowledge of God and Nature) evidently made a lasting impression upon the restless yet profoundly religious mind of Dee. Throughout his life this view of occult practices as being no hindrance to a devout faith, and in some cases a positive aid to it, remained strong and clear in him. . . . But of this we shall have occasion to speak, at more length, later on in his story.

At Louvain, Occultism was but one of his many interests. He taught logic, arithmetic, and the use of the globes; and was visited by great men—"a noble crowd," as Isaac Disraeli calls them—from the court of Charles V, then resident at Brussels. . . . He himself, narrating years afterwards to Queen Elizabeth's Commissioners the story of those proud days, says that his fame had even wider wings. "Beyond the seas, was a good opinion conceived of my studies mathematical and scholastical." And probably those who saw and spoke with him conceived a good opinion of more than his attainments!

Aubrey described him even in his worn old age as a singularly handsome man. In youth he must, indeed, have been goodly to look on, with that tall slender figure of his, regular chiselled features, fair skin, and bright colour. The melancholy, austere expression with which the portrait in the Ashmolean Museum has familiarised us could not have been natural to him then. Among his supernormal gifts we cannot reckon prevision of his own misfortunes; and it must have been full of self-confidence and exuberant hope that, in the summer of 1550, just after his twenty-third birthday, he left Louvain and set out on his homeward journey to England, pausing on his way at Paris, the seat of another great university, and an ideal showplace for a scholar of parts.

In Paris Dee tarried for some months. His fame had preceded him there, and he was able, during his stay, considerably to add to it.

At the College of Rheims (one of the University federation of forty odd colleges, and named after its founder, Guy de Roye, Archbishop of Rheims) he gave a course of lectures on Euclid, free to all who chose to attend—an innovation in the educational methods of those days.

We have already spoken of the philosophical and mystical element that the scholars of the time discerned in mathematics. In Dee's teaching, this element must have bulked very large; even as we know it did in the Preface which he wrote, in later years, for the first English edition of Euclid.

A great audience flocked to hear him. The hall of the College would not hold the eager crowd, and many climbed the outer walls and looked in at the windows.

The University grew anxious to keep this brilliant bird of passage; Dee was offered a professorship of mathematics and a stipend of two hundred crowns.

But mere routine work, however honourable, was never, either now or later, greatly to his mind. He refused the post, and pursued his journey towards England, where he probably knew that Sir John Cheke (another of the Greek scholars of St. John's College, and now tutor to the young King, Edward VI) was ready to stand his friend at court.

CHAPTER II

THERE is no actual warrant for the very general belief that Dee took, at Louvain, the doctor's degree which had not been conferred on him at Cambridge.

The chances are that the title "Doctor," so inseparable from his name in after-life and in the popular idea of him, was merely bestowed in its original complimentary sense, when it had become self-evident that he was verily and indeed doctus, or learned.

As "Doctor" he was doubtless known at the court of Edward VI. Towards the close of the year 1551, Sir John Cheke introduced him to Secretary Cecil, and accepted on behalf of his royal pupil two MS. treatises on astronomical subjects, which Dee, already an industrious writer, had dedicated to the young King.

A yearly pension of a hundred crowns was now granted him by Edward. This was exchanged (not very profitably, as it afterwards appeared) for the lay-rectorships of Upton-on-Severn in Worcestershire and Long Leadenham in Lincolnshire. Soon after we hear of Dee's refusing the offer of a lectureship in Mathematical Science from the University of Oxford!

He was seemingly content with his income from the aforesaid rectorships, and with the patronage of the Duchess of Northumberland, which he enjoyed at this time, writing, at her request, a treatise on the cause of tides and another on the heavenly bodies.

The Duchess's ill-fated husband (the father-in-law of Lady Jane Grey) is better known to the general reader as an ambitious politician than as a literary student. But he was actually a man of considerable culture, a friend of Ascham's, and, for a short time, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. Dee may well have believed that, in the shadow of such powerful patrons, he would be able to live a life of learned leisure, independent of formal appointments, and devoted more and more to his favourite lines of study.

What those lines were, and how increasingly he was attracted to them, was soon to appear.

In 1552 Jerome Cardan, the famous physician of Padua, visited England, and lodged at the house of Sir John Cheke, where Dee must frequently have seen and talked with him. Cardan was then in his prime; an occultist, surrounded by all the mysterious glamour of Padua, the supposed school of the necromantic art, with an intense belief in his own powers, and a keen, commanding intellect.

He had been invited to prescribe for the young King, whose health gave increasing anxiety; and, since Astrology was then a recognised aid to medicine, he drew the horoscope of the royal boy. His report was cautious enough. He prophesied the possibility of long life, if certain dangers from grave illnesses could be surmounted. But to Sir John Cheke, himself an astrologer, and to Sir John's learned young friend, the English scholar of Louvain, we can easily imagine that he spoke more freely, both on this and on kindred matters.

Dee was considerably Cardan's junior, and may well have looked up to him with something of a disciple's reverence, eager to learn what the Italian, on his part, would not have been unwilling to teach. The range of their discussions may be guessed when we remember the supernormal powers that Cardan claimed to possess and to exercise at will. He could, he declared, project his soul out of his body! He had a peculiar kind of clairvoyant vision! He practised divination, and dreamed prophetic dreams!

Also—and this is a fact particularly significant in the light of Dee's after-history!—Cardan believed himself to be accompanied by a genius or guardian spirit, like the dæmon of Socrates, which gave him counsel and assisted him in his undertakings.

At the same time he was a bold and independent thinker, by no means credulous, nor bound by the accepted superstitions of his time.

For instance, he confidently pronounced "witchcraft" to be a form of insanity; and in physical science and his own profession of medicine he anticipated many modern theories and methods.

The whole life of this remarkable and, in his last years, unfortunate man is of unusual interest; but we are here concerned only with his influence on the gentler, less enterprising spirit of Dee, and with the stimulus and inspiration his companionship must have given to the younger man.

From this time the bent of Dee's studies is no longer in doubt: henceforth we see him committed, for good or ill, to the pursuit of occult knowledge.

The troubles following on the death of Edward VI (which took place soon after Cardan's return to Italy) could not have failed to distress and disturb the peace-loving scholar. Northumberland's tragic fate must have been also a blow to him. But the new Queen seems to have been kindly disposed to the son of Rowland Dee, and she had sufficient culture to respect and patronise his learning.

Apparently Dee was invited by the Queen to draw her horoscope. At any rate he did draw it, and, in due time, that of her Spanish bridegroom also.

The favour, however, of the elder sister was not destined to advance his fortunes very far. His eyes and thoughts were already turning toward the younger; and soon, with the connivance of her personal servants, the young "Astrologer Royal" entered into correspondence with the Princess Elizabeth, in her semi-captivity at Woodstock.

It was inevitable that he should wish to know what the stars predicted for her future; whether to the daughter of Anne Boleyn a better fate was promised than to the daughter of Catherine of Aragon; inevitable also that Elizabeth should be eager to hear anything that could raise her hopes, or, at least, allay her fears.

Dee drew her horoscope; then, seemingly, was imprudent enough to show her that of her sister, and to discuss with her the differing aspects of the planets in the two maps.

Such discussions, in the case of royal personages, are easily suspected to be treasonable, and again we hear the ominous cry of "black magic"—more dangerous now, and urged with a more malignant will. There is a wild tale of children whom Dee had bewitched, and even of enchantments directed against the Queen's life!

Dee's lodging in London was searched, and his papers and his person seized.

All the cumbrous machinery of the law was brought against him; and even after he had been acquitted by the Star Chamber on the charge of treason, it seemed as if the popular accusation of heresy would give his enemies their will.

He was very near the flames! With him in the Bishop of London's prison, sharing his room and his very bed, was one Barthlet

Green, "a meek, religious man," but a suspected heretic, and, to his inexpressible horror, Dee saw his companion in misfortune dragged forth to his terrible doom. The passionate sympathy he showed could have done his own cause little good; but it is to Mary's credit that she recognised that there was no substantial evidence against him. He had, as Disraeli phrases it, "no leisure to become a heresiarch"; and though he doubtless held but loosely by the Faith in which he had been brought up, he could have had no violent animus against it. His learning in Divinity seems even to have won the confidence of Bishop Bonner; though the story that he assisted the Bishop to examine some suspected heretics is now generally discredited.

When set at liberty again, Dee occupied himself for a while with projects for founding a State National Library, and he drew up and presented to the Queen "a Supplication for the Recovery and Presentation of Ancient Writers and Monuments." [1]

His own library was by this time considerable; so, too, in spite of, or perhaps, because of his late misfortunes, was his reputation as an astrologer and a sage.

The rest of Mary's troubled reign passed for him peacefully enough. He lodged in London, though we do not know in what quarter, pursued his studies, and eked out the modest income that came from his rectorships

[1] Practically nothing came of this.

by drawing horoscopes and giving astrological advice to people of all classes who came to consult him.

In 1558 Queen Mary died, and her younger sister, remembering the sage whose prophecies had beguiled her dark hour, at once sent for Dee to come to court and to calculate a favourable day for her crowning. Dee named January 14, 1559, and was, from this time on, as his biographer, Miss Charlotte Fell-Smith, expresses it, "continually busied about one thing and another at the fancy of the Queen."

This was not, perhaps, in itself undesirable. Dee's attachment to Elizabeth seems to have been quite sincere, and he was never unwilling then or later to come at her bidding to give his judgment on any strange circumstance which troubled her—such as the discovery in Lincoln's Inn Fields of a wax image of herself, with significant pins driven through its heart, the appearance of a great comet, and so on! But Elizabeth had much of the Tudor close-fistedness; and her astrologer's services were not substantially repaid. Preferments for which he sought were given to others, and he seems to have grown weary of his ambiguous position.

It is also possible that the Statute against Sorcery (a re-enactment of the former statute of Henry VIII) passed in 1562, had some influence on his desire again to leave England.

Sir Walter Scott and other authorities think this Act was chiefly aimed against those who falsely pretended to be magicians or victims of magic, and that it was not intended to convict anyone seriously of sorcery. But a man who had been twice accused of "black magic" may well have felt uneasy while such legal machinery was in motion.

Dee's expressed object in this new journey abroad was to take to the great printing press of Antwerp some of his more important MS.; among them the Monas Hieroglyphica—that curious cabalistic treatise on the Elements which, Mr. Arthur Waite has reminded us, had much to do with the later tradition of Dee as the founder of the Rosicrucian Brotherhood. The tradition, however, as Mr. Waite shows, is quite spurious; and, in any case, the Monas—an unpractical, mystical work, which says little or nothing of the means by which alchemy was to attain its ends—cannot be said to support it.

In these dissertations on "the primal Monad, the mortal and immortal Adam, and the horizon of Eternity," we are in the region of pure theory. Later writers employed the symbols used by Dee in their own more utilitarian alchemical works, and Dee got the credit of the association.

But the Monas, useless as a proof of Dee's Rosicrucianism, has a value of another kind. It serves to show that its author (however, under stress of circumstances in later life, he may have prostituted his gifts, and used spiritual things for material ends) was really unworldly, a lover of wisdom for wisdom's sake, a dreamer and a thinker.

The book was dedicated to the Emperor Maximilian II; and Dee presented him with a copy, which was, apparently, graciously accepted.

In June 1564, two months after the publication of the Monas, its writer returned to England. He was kindly received by the Queen, who, as he says, deigned to become a scholar in his book, and greatly comforted and encouraged him.

Preferment, however, though promised, did not come; and in the Preface which Dee wrote for Henry Billingsley's Elements of Euclid (published by an English press in 1570), the disappointed scholar bitterly laments the reproach and suspicion under which he still labours. Honest students and modest Christian philosophers, he significantly says, are counted as magicians and conjurers. "He that seeketh by St. Paul's advertisement in the creatures' properties and wonderful virtues, to find just cause to glorify the Eternal and Almighty Creator . . . is condemned as a companion of hell hounds and a caller and conjurer of wicked damned spirits."

This sounds preposterous language to be applied to one so high in royal favour as Dee then was! Even in those days of ferocious superstition, the violent prejudice against him and the dark construction persistently put upon all his actions seem in need of some explanation. In the Preface he infers that it is his scientific studies and experiments—so much beyond his age!—that have blackened his character in the popular eye; and there is, beyond doubt, considerable truth in this. But as all the learned men of his time did not suffer—even among the ignorant!—the same dark reproach, and as Astrology and Alchemy had, with some reservations, a recognised place among the Sciences, we must find the explanation of Dee's peculiar unpopularity in his increasing obsession with what we now call the Psychic, in the atmosphere of mystery which surrounded his attempts to develop those supernormal powers which he believed to exist in man and to be capable of lawful use.

One of the faculties which he believed that he himself possessed was that of discovering hidden treasure. He offered to use this in the service of the State, and told Cecil (now Lord Burleigh) that if he were allowed to exercise his gift under the protection of Royal Letters Patent, he would do his utmost to discover mines of gold and silver "for her Grace's only use."

It must be remembered that the ancient belief that treasure buried in the earth was in the keeping of demons, and only to be discovered by their help, still influenced the opinion of those days in regard to treasure hunting. The Statutes against Sorcery made the discovery of hidden treasure "by the aid of magic" a penal offence, punishable, if persisted in, by death itself!

Dee's anxiety for a licence from the State is therefore very explainable. And there is a certain boldness even in his cautious proposal. He practically sets aside the idea that such "discoveries" come under the head of "magic," and will see in them nothing but the lawful putting forth, in a scientific, well-trained way, of supernormal powers with which human nature itself is dowered!

Elizabeth's astrologer still enjoyed the royal favour. She was gracious and friendly in all her dealings with him, and made him occasional gifts of money. But his researches, in which he now needed paid assistants, were greatly hindered by lack of funds. There is little doubt that it was his desire for knowledge, rather than avarice, that made him hanker after hidden hoards.

Little or nothing seems to have come of his request, though a later grant to him of a royalty on mines may have been an indirect result of it.

Fortunately for him he had now a roof of his own. His widowed mother owned a house at Mortlake; and this she practically ceded to her son, only reserving a set of rooms in it for her own use.

The Thameside village of Mortlake was then a village indeed, near enough to London to make it easy of access by the river to which the garden of Mistress Dee's house sloped down, yet remote enough for the solitude and freedom from interruption that the scholar, now past middle age and sobered by several disappointments, desired to secure.

Here Dee worked ceaselessly in his library and laboratory, and received with due dignity the visits of his royal patroness and of the great folk who sought his counsel.

Here also, in 1574, he married as his first wife, a young woman of whom we know nothing save that she died in the following year, and was buried in Mortlake churchyard, on the very day of one of the Queen's informal, unexpected visits. Elizabeth, on this occasion, refused to enter the house of mourning, but dismounted from her horse in a field near by, in order that Dee might show her the curious properties of a convex mirror.

After being a widower for two years, Dee married Jane Fromond, lady-in-waiting to Lady Howard of Effingham, who was to be the mother of his eight children, and his faithful and beloved companion for many years, though she was considerably his junior.

About a month before her eldest grandchild's birth—which happened on his father's fifty-second birthday!—Mistress Dee made over to her son, in due legal form, her house and lands at Mortlake. She continued, however, to live in the house, where, in 1580, Dee records her "godly end," at the age of seventy-seven.

These years at Mortlake were not unprosperous. Dee produced a good deal of literary work of the more practical sort; wrote a treatise on naval defence, and made some geographical researches of which Burleigh spoke highly to the Queen. Navigators employed him to draw up instructions for their course; and Elizabeth graciously received some charts and maps, which he had made with wonderful skill and mathematical accuracy. These were designed to set forth the Queen's title to undiscovered countries. He was also employed in making the calculations necessary for the proposed reform of the Calendar.

But Dee was one of those in whom many normal tastes and outside interests may exist and flourish without weakening the bonds of the inner life or the claims of the ruling passion. It was still in Darkness that he sought for light, from Silence that he asked a message....

In his Private Diary, among numerous notes of domestic and political matters, we get, ever and anon, a brief reference to things psychic, to some sign, real or supposed, that had reached him from the Other World.

He carefully records dreams, mysterious rappings, and the like. But these chance phenomena, which might come unasked to any man, do not satisfy his intense desire for real intercourse with the Unseen—an intercourse which he hopes to establish by other means.

The Diary for May 25, 1581, has this significant entry :

"I had sight offered me in Chrystallo ; and I saw."

We have now to consider at greater length the nature of that clairvoyant vision, and the reasons for which Dee sought to obtain it.

CHAPTER III

DEE had been now some twelve years in the riverside house at Mortlake. They had not been obscure or isolated years, including, as they did, a journey abroad on some unnamed business of the Queen's, continual marks of court favour, and the frequent visits of important people. Nor had they been mentally idle ones. Apart from his public services, the scholar had been indefatigable in his researches, striving always to increase his store of "good learning," experimenting with his scientific instruments, and adding to his library of other men's wisdom manuscript works of his own.

He had arrived at an age when the student and thinker looks for some definite result of his study and thought; when he is, as a rule, sufficiently wearied with the path to desire a sight of the goal.

There are not sufficient grounds to infer, with some of his critics, that Dee was obsessed by the old alchemical ambitions of finding the "Philosopher's Stone" and the "Elixir of Life."[1] But the discovery of these and kindred secrets may well have appeared to him as a possible solution of his financial embarrassments, and as an opening to a way of freedom for still greater quests.

[1] Philosopher's Stone.—The so-called "stone" was really a powder or mixture which "drove off the impurities of baser metals." The "elixir" was gold in a liquid or drinkable form = Aurum potabile.

A good deal of the work done at Mortlake must have had a practical purpose in view. But Dee did not feel that the alchemical experiments made by him and the young assistants he hired to work with him were carrying him fast enough towards the wished-for heights. The idea of access to certain stores of wisdom which God had withheld from man, but had, presumably, given to spiritual creatures of a higher order, had long attracted him, and had gained, with advancing years, increasing power over his mind. As he himself pathetically phrased it to Edward Kelley, in the first days of that notorious fellowship, he had "long been desirous to have help in his philosophical studies through the company and information of the angels of God!" Here we see the influence of his astrological studies—studies which, when intelligently pursued, must needs widen the spiritual outlook.

Magic, vulgarly so called, he utterly repudiated. He was, he declared, "neither studied nor exercised" in it. And in so far as magic professes to accomplish or discover anything independently of the will and help of God, he spoke the truth. In the strict sense of the word he never practised magic. He merely practised certain means by which, as he believed, the spiritual part of him might be aroused and put into communication with the spiritual world and those who inhabited it.

Crystallomancy—the time-honoured practice "of inducing visions by gazing into a clear depth"—may well have commended itself to him as one of the most venerable of such means, hallowed, as it were, by generations of devout seekers after hidden truths. He had always, besides, taken a keen interest in the science of Optics, then making such bold strides in unexpected directions, and he already possessed some curious mirrors of whose strange possibilities he must have been aware and over which he must have often mused. Had he himself any faculty of seership? A fleeting glimpse of it is suggested by the entry in the Diary! But from the first it is evident that he knew his limitations; knew that this was a path to knowledge he would not be able to tread alone.

It is in accord with occult tradition that the gift of vision belongs but to a few; and those few not necessarily of the highest intelligence or profoundest learning. The seer, with his purely intuitive faculty, might well be the mere instrument of lofty purposes which he did not really understand or share. Experience also tended to show that seership was a power more often displayed in the young and immature than in the old and experienced.

So Dee sought for a scryer among his youthful disciples and assistants; and was soon convinced that he had found what he wanted in one, Barnabas Saul, who, with the pious pomp and circumstance always so dear to him, he proceeded to consecrate as his scryer.

He is a shadowy figure enough, this forerunner of a greater medium; this young lay-preacher turned occultist, who, later, under terror of the law, was to repudiate the powers he had claimed, and to slip back into the obscurity from which Dee had drawn him!

Saul served the doctor in the capacity of seer for little more than two months. His scrying was done with a globular crystal, described by Dee as "my stone in a frame which was given me of a friend," and placed, according to a reported supernatural injunction, where the rays of the sun could fall upon it. When, in later days, Dee showed this stone to Kelley, he told him of his belief that certain good angels were "answerable" to it; in other words, in the habit of manifesting either in or near it. "I was once willed by a scryer to call for the good angel Anael to appear in that stone to my own sight." This curious reminiscence suggests Saul's power of conveying to Dee his own sense of vision. But it also suggests the part played in the invocations by Dee's own will and knowledge.

It was certainly he and not Saul who identified the apparition with Anael—the "answering angel" who, in Talmudic tradition, often made God's secrets known to men; and it was quite as certainly Dee's subliminal mind that transmitted the strange, significant message of Anael that many things should, later, be revealed to Dee, not through Saul, but through a seer who should succeed him and be "assigned to the stone."

This prophecy was not long in fulfilment. Early in the spring of 1582, Saul was brought before the judges at Westminster on some charge, which, whether one of sorcery or not, involved perilous enquiries into his occult practices. The young man thought it safer to disown his psychic gifts, and also, it seems, to slander the sage in whose service he had been using them! He and Dee parted on ill terms; but the unpleasant episode had not quenched Dee's devout desires. Only two days after Saul's departure, the scholar's Diary records the coming of another guest, who was introduced as the friend of a certain Mr. Clerkson, and who gave the name of Edward Talbot.

The stranger—who was about twenty-seven years of age—at once began to speak of occult matters; and when he declared himself "willing and desirous to see or show something in spiritual practice," the scholar eagerly produced the showstone, and told, as aforesaid, the tale of its powers as an instrument of vision.

In a short time the young man, kneeling devoutly before it, was praying with apparent sincerity that sight might be given to him therein; while the elder, kneeling or sitting a little apart, earnestly invoked the help of God and His good creatures "for the furtherance of the Action."

Of this séance—the first of many with the same seer—Dee records with joyful triumph that, before it had lasted fifteen minutes, an angel (Uriel, the spirit of light) appeared in the stone.

So began the long association of our scholar with one who was so deeply to influence his life. It is an association which irresistibly recalls Hans Andersen's story of the learned man and his ambitious shadow, which, by dint of trading on its owner's kindliness, contrived to make itself appear the more substantial and important personality of the two!

Edward Kelley, alias Talbot (there is considerable doubt as to which was his true name), was a born adventurer, with, as it would seem, the ingenious brain and personal charm which many of his kind possess.

Miss Charlotte Fell-Smith, in her Life of Dee, rightly says that sober fact and wild romance are so inextricably mixed in Kelley's story that it is difficult to know what to believe. But, at any rate, the traditions of his career are hardly those that would have grown up round an upright or high-principled man.

He had been an apothecary's apprentice; then (according to the commonly received story) a forger and coiner, who, in the barbarous fashion of the times, had been condemned to lose his ears and to stand in the pillory. For some time before his coming to Dee he had led a wandering life, in the course of which his necromantic practices had included the digging up of a corpse in a Lancashire churchyard, and the summoning of the spirit of the dead man to reply to certain questions. Later, either in the wilds of Wales or at Glastonbury in Somerset, the mystic Avalon, he was said to have found an alchemical manuscript of priceless value, as well as some of the famous "powder of projection" which the adepts used in their attempted manufacture of gold.

It would have been strange indeed if one in possession of such treasures, and with so glib a tongue in talking of them and of his own psychic powers, had failed of a welcome in the house at Mortlake.

Even if Dee guessed at the unedifying episodes in his new friend's past, the elder man's natural charity and kindliness led him to discount them, or even to regard them as an additional reason for showing benevolence to one who had already paid so dearly for his errors, and who was young and gifted enough to amend his life.

It was Mistress Dee who was troubled with premonitions of disaster.

Until now, despite the slanders of the ignorant and the many annoyances from lack of money, the family life of the Dees had a certain tranquillity and decent order. In the course of it an aged and honoured mother had "made a godly end"; children had been brought to the font of baptism; faithful servants had been duly and justly paid; and the master of the house, for all the shadow of the black art that lay upon his studies, had been known as a pious and upright gentleman, whom Barnabas Saul had not, after all, been able to involve in his recent disgrace.

Now, the faithful wife dimly felt that this comparative peace and safety was about to be withdrawn; that her learned, unworldly husband was about to enter on a darker and more dangerous phase of study, under the leadership of this penniless but ingenious stranger, with his strange air of authority and supernormal knowledge, and his violent, moody temper, which he took so little pains to conceal.

She showed from the first a great dislike and distrust of Kelley—the name by which he soon came to be known in the household. But his wife's resentment, though there is evidence that Dee was much grieved and disturbed by it, was powerless against the growing influence of so wonderful and satisfactory a seer.

Angelic visions in the showstone came thick and fast now. Angelic voices sounded often in the little inner room, once a bedchamber, where the philosopher, withdrawn from the household's comings and goings, and denied even to important guests, gave himself over more and more to the life of dreams. There were not wanting all the "magical" accessories of ceremonial scrying.

By the end of the spring Kelley had obtained, with Dee's aid and approval, the so-called "table of practice" on which the stone was to be set, with a red silk cloth of peculiar make spread under it, and an inscribed tablet of wax to serve as a pedestal.

The legs of the table itself were also to be supported by similar, but smaller, tablets of wax.

Then, in late autumn, came the acquisition of another crystal, called, from the circumstances of its giving, "the angelical stone."

Towards sunset, in the November of 1582, in the western window of the laboratory, there came to Dee's tranced eyes a vision of a child-angel, bearing in his hand "a bright object, clear and glorious, of the bigness of an egg."

Later, Dee spoke to the Emperor Rudolph of this crystal as the gift of Uriel, the spirit of light, and said that it was of greater value than any earthly kingdom.

It is almost certain that this showstone, however obtained, is the one still to be seen in the British Museum, together with three of the inscribed tablets of wax.

Of these mystic seals it should here be mentioned that they bore, on their upper sides, the familiar cabalistic figure of interlaced triangles—the so-called pentacle or seal of Solomon—together with the seven "hidden names" of God and the names of certain angels and spirits. The "table of practice," which was made of "sweet wood," and was two cubits, or about 3 feet, in height, was also inscribed with sacred characters and with a mystic cruciform sign.

In the accounts of the sittings, we sometimes hear, moreover, of "the curtain of the stone." But this was seen in the crystal, and belonged, not to the material, but to the psychic, accessories. The peculiar clouding of the stone which precedes the vision, and follows after its departure, is familiar to all crystal-gazers.

Stress has often been laid on the fact that Dee himself saw little or nothing. We have his own regretful statement: "You know I cannot see or scry." But although both the character of his gift and the imperiousness of his temper made Kelley seem the leading spirit in this strange partnership, Dee, the careful recorder, eager questioner, and learned interpreter, was still, in a sense, the dominant force.

The complaint of Kelley that the spirits address him in learned tongues which are incomprehensible to him is, to say the least of it, significant. And the angelic visitants were certainly more likely to have used Dee than Kelley for such a message, addressed to the younger man, as this: "Thou, O yougling, but old sinner, why dost thou suffer thy blindness to increase? Why not yield thy limbs to the service and fulfilling of an eternal verity? Pluck up thy heart and follow the way that leadeth to the knowledge of the end."

Again, on an occasion of Dee's absence, we hear of Kelley's unsuccessful attempt to summon a spirit known as Medicina, who had, in Dee's presence, previously appeared in the crystal.

We have to bear in mind that the phenomena of these séances cannot be explained as mere crystallomancy. The crystal purports to give no more than a fleeting vision of some future or far-off event. It utters no voice; and the figures that move in its dream-like scenes are silent as puppets. Here the part played by the crystal irresistibly reminds us of "the cabinet" of modern spiritualistic séances. It is, generally speaking, a place from which materialised spirits emerge, and to which, having made themselves known and conversed for awhile, they again return.

The language of Dee's Liber Mysteriorum, or Book of Mysteries, otherwise known as the Spiritual Diary, in which the record of the transactions is set down, is often vague and ambiguous; but at least it leaves us in no doubt that the spiritual creatures were heard as well as seen, and that many of them manifested themselves outside the limits of the crystal. Dee, if he never actually saw them, was conscious of their presence; and, as we have already said, there were many occasions when he, and not Kelley, seems to have been the mouthpiece of their messages.

There is no doubt that he also had mediumistic gifts, though not of the showier order. Equally there is no doubt that he did not knowingly employ those gifts in mere necromancy. The spirits he wished to converse with were not spirits of the dead, but "the living angels of God," the higher ranks of creatures.

But although the scrying now took up so much time and thought, and was rewarded by such frequent visions, it could not be said to be of much practical assistance in Dee's involved personal affairs.

We know that he had expected that it would be, and that he repeatedly put questions to the apparitions upon matters that troubled him; for instance, the refusal of the Queen's advisers to reform the Calendar according to the calculations he (Dee) had made, and the baffling characters of some manuscripts of Kelley's which were supposed to relate to hidden treasure or the means of manufacturing gold.

Worldly anxieties were natural, since his debts at this time amounted to £300. But the spiritual voices answered him but vaguely. Even Michael, the spirit of wisdom, who frequently appeared in, and sometimes outside, the limits of the crystal, said little that could be used for practical guidance. He gave but mystic encouragements, and counselled faith and patience.

Nor did the scryer invariably have sight of such heavenly apparitions. "Merry" spirits of fantastic dress and foolish speech came and went, and vexed the grave scholar with occasional ribaldries. Yet withal Dee's confidence remained unbroken.

His profound piety probably made him blame himself that knowledge was withheld. When the spirit known as Medicina finely said that there were no secrets save those that were "buried in the shadow of men's souls," he voiced Dee's own belief that God desired to hide nothing from the faithful seeker.

And to Kelley's frequent outbursts of angry impatience, and threats to leave the unprofitable scrying and "follow some study whereby he may live," the scholar answered with firm serenity that he, for his part, was content to wait God's time.

The séances, interrupted by occasional journeys of Kelley's (ostensibly with the object of seeking hidden treasure), had continued for about a year, when there came a new development. A distinguished foreign guest of the Queen—the Polish nobleman Adalbert Laski—sent word to Mortlake that he desired to visit Dee, to see his books, and to talk with him of magic—a subject of which he (Laski) professed to be a student.

The Pole was by all accounts an intriguing and not particularly honest politician, who had taken French bribes in the matter of the election of Henry III of France to the crown of Poland, and who now aspired to that crown himself. His chief concern was to obtain money to further his ambitious schemes ; and if money could be got by "magical" means, he was willing to patronise "magicians"! But he was a handsome and gracious-mannered man, and seems to have made a good impression at the house by the river, where, after having been introduced to Dee by Leicester, in the Earl's own apartments, he presented himself with only two attendants, and graciously "tarried supper." Again, a month later, he came more ceremoniously, by water, in a barge rowed by the Queen's men, and other visits followed.

Dee had to apply to the Queen for funds to entertain this new patron! But the Polish prince professed to desire help from the spiritual creatures, and made flattering promises that he would reward their agents.

A spirit known as Madimi, who appeared about this time in the shape of a pretty female child, and another feminine spirit called Galvah, were questioned about the prince's political prospects. In Laski's presence also, Kelley professed to summon Laski's own guardian angel, and to learn of him concerning his charge.

A good deal of practical information here mixes with the mystical.

Laski was told of Burleigh's dislike of him, and of possible danger if he remained in England.

Dee also received mysterious warnings through Madimi of his own danger from spies, who suspected the Pole of treason, and hated Dee as well.

Burleigh and Walsingham were said to be joined together against Dee. His house might be entered and searched.

In addition to these causes for anxiety, Dee was getting seriously distressed by the behaviour of Kelley, who was again threatening to depart, calling himself unfairly treated, and throwing himself into such mad fits of rage that Dee sincerely believed him possessed by evil spirits.

To get rid of these, a form of exorcism was gone through by Madimi—an interesting "spiritual creature," who in this and other matters shows Dee's mental influence on the séances, and who on one occasion described Dee's "faith and imagination" as a kind of "sight perfecter than Kelley's."

Kelley professed himself much benefited by the exorcism; but his deliverance was short-lived, for a little later Dee's Diary records another wild fit of rage.

Dee's habitual gentleness doubtless emboldened the younger man to put no curb on his outbursts. Kelley had another easy victim, too, in the young wife whom he had married, shortly after his arrival at Mortlake; professedly at the command of the spirits, and without even the pretence of affection.

Mistress Kelley also became an inmate of the philosopher's hospitable house, where Mistress Dee pitied and befriended her, but must have felt her presence an additional burden on Dee's already heavily taxed resources.

Indeed, those resources were becoming more and more insufficient for what was required of them. In his devotion to the crystal, Dee seems to have largely neglected his astrological work, and did not, as in earlier years, add to his income by drawing the horoscopes of all and sundry. Kelley put him to continual expense. The Queen was still friendly: but the light of a royal countenance is not enough to live by.

Altogether, the hour seemed ripe for some new venture, such as had been of late foreshadowed by the spirit-voices. Laski was returning to Poland, and was eager to take his new friends with him, to employ the supernatural wisdom to which they seemed to have access, in the furtherance of his fortunes and the manufacture of the much-needed gold.

It was a wild project, and there is some suggestion that Dee recognised its wildness. But Kelley urged him on; and, after all, he was himself an incurable optimist and lover of noble patrons.

In 1583, on the afternoon of September 21 (which he does not forget to note was the Calendar feast of St. Matthew), he left Mortlake, neglecting, in characteristic fashion, to arrange his financial affairs, and apparently believing that his absence would not extend over more than a few months. He was accompanied by his wife and three children, by the Kelleys, and some servants.

The party was joined by Laski and his own attendants; and together they set out for Holland, en route for Poland.

CHAPTER IV

THE long journey, which began ominously enough with a narrow escape from shipwreck, was continued overland with many hardships and delays.

Travel, in those days of cumbrous travelling coaches, was not, at the best, easy; and these travellers were further encumbered with women, children, and heavy baggage.

No wonder that, in a strange vision of Kelley's, at Lübeck, which they reached early in November, an apparition in kingly raiment exhorted Dee to "pluck up his heart and pine not away with inward groaning." This apparition, one of a company of eleven, seems rather to have been a phantasm of the living than a messenger from the Other World; and to have represented some royal patron who was waiting to receive and reward the travellers. But Dee obviously distrusted the dazzling promises of riches and fame, and asked in pathetic words for guidance.

Winter was setting in, and travelling was increasingly toilsome.

There was a suggestion that Laski should go on before, leaving the others to follow, when spring came; but Dee thought this would be unfair to the Prince, and so they made shift to push forward.

In the vision at Lübeck, Dee had also received dark warnings about the house at Mortlake, left in the ineffective charge of Mistress Dee's brother. "It may be that thy house may be burnt!"

As a matter of fact, though the house was still standing, it was, at or about this time, broken into by a hostile mob, which destroyed all it could lay hands on of "the magician's" precious books and instruments. Still, no thought of returning seems to have entered into Dee's mind. Early in February they reached Lask, the Prince's estate, near Cracow; and here again came visions in the crystal, and presently news, through the voice of "Madimi," that all was well at Mortlake and that the Queen was still Dee's friend.

At Cracow, whither the travellers soon removed, Kelley, in his anxiety about money, tried to scry alone, but was reproved and baffled by a spirit known as Nalvage. The description of this spirit, by the way, recalls the young King, Edward VI. So possibly we have here an invocation of the dead!

Then followed some weeks of investigations after Dee's own heart. Nalvage and Gabriel spoke in some mystical language, and gave mystical information which Kelley did not understand and which filled him with angry impatience. Again he declared that he would scry no more ; and again Dee persuaded and calmed him.

The old Polish town of Cracow must have held much that was congenial and inspiring to Dee. The travellers lodged near a church, and the angelic voices counselled to acts of ceremonial piety, such as church-going and the observance of holy-days—things always dear to the pious scholar.

At Cracow also came the curious vision of the Four Castles, which a spirit, known as Ave, interpreted as "watch towers provided against the devil." There was a castle for each point of the compass, and each was in the care of a mighty angel, so that the whole world appeared in the vision as under the protection of these invisible citadels and their garrisons.

Much time and trouble were spent in drawing an elaborate diagram representing all this ; and Dee would have been content to hear much more of the good angels, their names and functions. But Laski was already restless at the lack of practical results ; and, with a view to hastening these, insisted that Dee and Kelley should proceed to Prague and see the Emperor Rudolph, son of that Maximilian to whom Dee had dedicated his Monas.

To Prague they went accordingly in the late summer, leaving the women and children in Cracow.

But Rudolph, an eccentric and moody man, heard with thinly veiled impatience Dee's long and rambling story of angelic visions; and Uriel's reported message to himself to "forsake his sins and turn to God" could have done little to increase his cordiality. He was civil, but committed himself to nothing; and, in spite of the friendship formed with Dee by Dr. Curtius, a learned member of the Council, and much kindness from the Spanish Ambassador, the stay in Prague was not profitable.

It was, however, a prolonged stay. The women and children came on from Cracow; and in the spring of 1584 another son was born to Dee, to be named Michael, after the great Archangel, and to receive baptism in Prague Cathedral.

Dee urged on Rudolph the great opportunity the Emperor was neglecting. He and Kelley, if Rudolph would but be their patron, would use the powder of projection to enrich him beyond the dreams of avarice.

But Rudolph remained cold, and, as Curtius said to Dee, regarded such things as impossible of belief without proof.

In April 1585 return was made for a short time to Poland; and at Cracow Laski presented his protégés to King Stephan Bathori, generally known as Stephan the Great.

Stephan received them courteously, and some experiments with the crystal were attempted in his presence. But these were, apparently, not successful. At any rate, Stephan was even more unresponsive than Rudolph, and the wanderers had no choice but to return once more to Prague.

And here they were not to be suffered to rest!

The Pope's Nuncio at Rudolph's court was thundering now against the scandal of their presence; and the "magicians" were bidden to quit the city and the Emperor's dominions within six days.

At this crisis of indignity, however, they found a new patron and a new refuge. Count Wilhelm Rosenberg, Viceroy of Bohemia, interested himself with Rudolph in their behalf, and invited them to his castle at Tribau, or Trebona, in South Bohemia.

This was a pleasant place, surrounded by pleasant country; and Dee records with satisfaction the "goodly Chapel next my chamber," where the scrying was resumed.

A few months later Dee received an invitation from the Emperor of Russia to enter his service and to come and live at his court at Moscow. But the scholar, though highly gratified, refused. He desired no engagement that would bind him to a foreign prince, and under Rosenberg's protection he was enjoying comparative peace and comfort.

At Trebona, progress of a kind seems at last to have been made. Kelley's much-talked-of powder of projection is said to have produced gold; and Dee rejoiced in his companion's triumph, and wrote of it exultantly to Walsingham.

But now Kelley was finally resolved to have done with the crystal-gazing, the full record of which, both at Mortlake and abroad, had been kept by Dee in the aforementioned Book of Mysteries, or Spiritual Diary.

We may here say of this remarkable book that it is strange that anyone who carefully read it could have subscribed to the theory (once popular) that Dee made use of a mystical method of writing to conceal political secrets, and that he accompanied Laski to Poland as Elizabeth's agent and political spy. For the records could only have been kept by a true enthusiast, a spiritualist of deepest sincerity and faith.

While Kelley gazed into the showstone, Dee would be often wrapt in prayer, suspending his duties of noting what was seen and heard to murmur fervent intercessions for himself and others, now in English, now in Latin, and always in dignified and reverent words.

He could idealise the crudest details of "the Actions," as when a certain spirit who appeared wearing jewellery asked if they thought her a jeweller's wife, and Dee answered calmly that they thought her "the messenger of Him Who had purchased the jewel of eternal bliss by the jewel of His precious blood."

Here and in many another place Dee does not seem far from the standpoint of those mystics who allegorised the Philosopher's Stone itself into a type of Christ! But for Kelley, spiritual studies were valuable according to their power of increasing material comforts. He had never loved visions for their own sake, and now they were an obvious waste of the time that might be profitably spent on transmutation.

In vain the angelic voices told him that his gift of clairvoyance was of more worth than earthly treasure. He remained obdurate; and Dee reluctantly consecrated—with his habitual prayers for God's blessing on the work—young Arthur Dee in his stead.

But Arthur, who was only between seven and eight years of age, proved a very poor substitute. His bewildered child-eyes saw nothing of significance in the crystal. Then Kelley was persuaded to scry once more; but felt, or professed to feel, reluctance to tell his vision. It was certainly a subject for shame; as Dee calls it, a hard and impure doctrine. According to Kelley, Madimi and a spirit known to them as "Il" were persistently counselling that he and Dee must "share all things in common," not excepting their two wives. Both in and out of the crystal they had appeared to him, conveying this message by dumb show and by words. And Uriel, the spirit of light, the angel of God, had also appeared, with the same horrible counsel!

Dee was confounded. He does not seem to have accepted the explanation which most spiritualists of his piety would accept nowadays—namely, that such evil advice came from demons, disguised in the shape of angels of light. He preferred, after the first horrified protests, to view the idea as an allegory of closer spiritual union among the four; and he drew up a document which was a virtual consent, and which the four signed! He has been vehemently blamed for this. But, deluded as he was, we must acquit him of all evil intentions; and, so far as we know, there was no attempt on the part of anyone of the four to carry out the impudent suggestion. Kelley, indeed, was fully occupied with more ambitious projects. As Miss Fell-Smith observes, he had no idea of sharing anything with his master. The "great secret" of transmutation he kept jealously to himself, and cunningly increased his own prestige with Rosenberg, in whose eyes the older sage, with his slow, painstaking methods, was gradually becoming a mere shadow of the younger, bolder one.

Dee was never invited now to share the alchemical counsels of the Count and Kelley. The scrying in "the goodly chapel" was entirely at an end.

Saddened and humiliated, Dee's thoughts turned towards England, whither Elizabeth had already invited him to return.

He wrote her a stately letter congratulating her on the defeat of the Spanish Armada; then, in the spring of 1589, gathered his goods together, and set out from Trebona with his family, further now increased by the birth of another son, Theodor.

They had been at Trebona a year and a half. Another year and three-quarters was to elapse before they reached England. So that their absence extended altogether to six years.

Dee fully expected Kelley to join, and embark with, him; and after a sojourn of several months in Bremen waited long for the younger man at Stade, the port of Bremen.

But he waited in vain. Kelley had no intention of returning to England, and, later, return was to be put out of his power.

Dee, in England, was to hear from time to time dazzling rumours of his success in the making of gold, and of honours he could never have hoped to gain in his own native country. Later came a story of swift and sudden disgrace—imprisonment, and, finally, death in prison, possibly by violence, possibly by his own hand.

Characteristically, the old scholar mourned for his treacherous friend, saw him sometimes in dreams, and in his own last days spoke regretfully of the wondrous things they had experienced together.

But they never met again. The strange fellowship was ended.

It is hardly necessary to say that of the annual sum of money promised to Dee when he left Bohemia, not a penny was ever received.

CHAPTER V

THE Christmas of 1589 saw Dee back in his own house at Mortlake. A few days previously he had been graciously received by Elizabeth in audience at Richmond; and the bitter memory of his humiliating experiences must have been somewhat softened by her kindness, and by that of friends like Adrian Gilbert, who came at once to visit him and to offer him help.

But his financial situation was sufficiently alarming. He had lost (through his own carelessness in not arranging for their payment to him when abroad) the small revenues from his lay-rectorships; many of his most valuable books and instruments had been destroyed in the mob's attack on his house; and there was, very naturally, no sign of the promised supplies from Bohemia. All his children were still young, and a few months after the return to Mortlake another daughter was born. Bestirring himself again in the quest for preferment, Dee asked, as he had asked many years before, for the mastership of the Hospital of Holy Cross, Winchester. But though influential persons interested themselves on his behalf, the matter, like many another, came to nothing.

Full and free permission from Elizabeth to continue his alchemical experiments without hindrance from the laws in force against magic was, however, a consolation of sorts.

He still believed that Kelley, with whom he had some correspondence, might eventually return, or, failing that, that he himself might discover the great secret of transmutation by his own efforts. So he gave himself earnestly to his old studies, in which the Queen still took some gracious interest; and no doubt he also earned something by the drawing of horoscopes and other astrological work.

But it was a painful struggle. As he himself says, he was stinted in food and clothing, devoured by usurers, and daily put to shame.

At last, towards the end of 1592, the Queen, in response to his desperate petition, sent to Mortlake two commissioners—Sir John Woolley and Sir Thomas Gorges—to hear his statement of his affairs and to report to her.

Dee drew up for them that lengthy autobiographical statement known to us as the Compendious Rehearsal; and as he read it to them in his library at Mortlake, we may well believe that his voice often faltered with emotion and the sense of what he had suffered.

He who had given his life to the pursuit of knowledge, who had ever meant "all truth, sincerity, fidelity, and piety to God, Queen, and Country," saw himself in advancing age without provision for to-day or prospect for to-morrow. Yet, as he said, there was a very easy remedy for his lamentable case. The Queen could bestow on him some office with due maintenance attached. The Queen did immediately send him a hundred marks, and though preferment still hung fire, there is evidence that the ecclesiastical prejudice against the spiritualistic philosopher was not quite such a barrier to it as formerly.

Archbishop Whitgift showed him respect and kindliness, and at length, through his good offices, Dee was recommended to the wardenship of Christ's College, Manchester, and actually obtained it.

The Manchester of Tudor times was already one of the most thriving and populous of English provincial towns, or, as they were then commonly called, villages.

Thanks to the Flemish weavers who settled there in the reign of Edward III, it boasted a busy trade, a cloth-mill, and a market.

The College, a pre-Reformation foundation which had provided priests and other spiritual necessities for the growing town, had been recently granted a new charter, with a warden, four fellows, two chaplains, and choristers. It seemed likely to provide a congenial retreat for a man of learning, and Dee took the long journey northward in a mood of gratitude and hope, though it must have been somewhat of a wrench to leave Mortlake, where, since the return to England, three little daughters had successively been born to him, and Michael, the son born at Prague, had died of some childish illness.

The old house, too, was full of memories of Kelley and the crystal-gazing. Dee may well have felt that he was leaving much of his real life behind him, in the grave of those four walls.

Which, indeed, is very much our feeling also!

As Warden of Manchester College, Dee seems little more than a shadow of his true self. That tall, slender figure in the scholar's loose-sleeved gown seems grotesquely out of place, with the busy Lancashire "village" for a background.

Soon he himself was complaining bitterly of the continual interruptions to his beloved studies by "the cares and cumbers" of "this defaced and disordered College," which had not even gained him freedom from money troubles, but, on the contrary, involved him in money troubles of its own.

The revenues had sadly shrunk, and were, through the continual disputes over tithes and lands, still shrinking. The Warden was still supposed to be in priest's orders, and Dee, as a layman, had to pay curates to fulfil such priestly duties as had survived to Anglican times.

And in the society into which he was now thrown there was little demand for the gifts which he esteemed above all others and found his greatest happiness in using. The sleepy, post-mediæval College and the expanding township were both of them "provincial" in their own way, both had their own narrow bigotry.

The new Warden received some odd tributes to his occult learning. We hear of him as lending books on demonology, out of his library, to puzzled justices, to assist them in examining and sentencing supposed witches; and as being consulted about a case of possession, in which one Hartley, "a conjurer," had made himself notorious.

Dee's curate, the Rev. Matthew Palmer, denounced as imposture Hartley's attempts to cast the evil spirits out of a poor woman and her children, who were grievously troubled with fits; and Dee himself sent for Hartley and "sharply rebuked him"—with the result, we are given to understand, of a temporary improvement. Dee, however, did not himself attempt the act of exorcism, but left it to "a godly preacher."

Probably his medical knowledge told him that epilepsy and not Satan was at the root of the trouble. With popular superstition and ignorance he had never had more sympathy than the majority of learned men.

The struggle to live went on.

The Fellows of the College do not seem to have been on very good terms with their Warden; and there were continual disputes with them and with the tenants of the College lands.

The Warden, however, did a little farming of his own land; and visits from friends from London, as well as a lengthy stay he himself made in London to transact College business, varied the monotony of the provincial years.

The happenings of this later period are not narrated with the old fullness in his Diary, but we get occasional glimpses of his inner life. Still he records dreams which may possibly prove prophetic! Still he meditates on occult works which he yet means to write, and on the triumph that may yet crown his alchemical researches!

We know also that he had occasional resort to the crystal; sometimes with the aid of a Mr. Francis Nicholls, who had been one of his astrological pupils at Mortlake; sometimes with Bartholomew Hickman, the son of an old acquaintance, whose mediumistic powers Dee had apparently detected years ago, when Bartholomew was a lad in his father's house.

So the years drifted on. Theodor, the boy born at Trebona, followed Michael to an early grave; but the other young Dees were growing up.

Sometime in 1602 Arthur (the child once consecrated as scryer, who in later life studied and practised medicine, and became the close friend at Norwich of Sir Thomas Browne) married the daughter of a Manchester Justice of the Peace; and Dee had the horoscopes of young grandchildren to draw. Arthur seems to have been an affectionate and dutiful son, and of great comfort to the old scholar in the still darker time that was to follow on this interval of peace.

The spring of 1603 saw the death of Elizabeth, and with her died all hope of further preferment. Indeed, Dee seems to have believed his life in actual danger from the new Act against witchcraft, and the horrible zeal with which James and his advisers administered it. He drew up impassioned petitions to the King, to be cleared of the "infamous slanders" that represented him as "a conjurer and caller of devils." They went unregarded, but there was no definite attempt to molest him.

It may even be that James felt a certain respect for him, or feared his mysterious powers. There is a story (though not a very well authenticated one) that Dee or Kelley had foreseen in the crystal the Gunpowder Plot—the faces of the traitors, and the intended fate of the King and Parliament. At any rate, the new Government seemed content to leave the old man to die in peace.

One sharp and crowning sorrow was to follow. In the spring following Elizabeth's death the plague came to Manchester, and Jane Dee died of it. Perhaps, as Miss Fell-Smith conjectures, some of her children were also victims. At least, we do not again hear anything of the three younger girls. Katherine, the eldest, survived to minister tenderly to the stricken man, round whom the mortal shadows were thickening, whose long life, vulgarly supposed to be one of the results of alchemical skill, was fast drawing to its close.

But there was to be light at eventide!

With every possible door of worldly advantage closed, and with even the Manchester wardenship perforce resigned through broken health and increasing infirmities, the old hope of intercourse with the Invisible was rekindled. About a year after Elizabeth's death, while Dee lay ill in London, there came to his scryer, Bartholomew Hickman, a sight of "God's blessed Creature," Raphael, the angel of healing, and Dee received comfort and reassurance about his physical state.

In the summer of the same year, when the old man, with his daughter, was lodging in an inn at Westminster, the vision came again, bringing this time a more definite message of health and vigour restored, and of "a long journey to friends beyond the sea" where all that Dee had so long desired to know should be made plain to him! . . . the secret of transmutation, and greater secrets still!

True to his old careful habit, Dee has many questions to ask about the manner and companions of that journey. His weakening mind is occupied with many trifling details. Yet, at the last, all doubts and troubles seem of a sudden to be resolved.

At Raphael's bidding, he renounces his anxiety about the moneys that he should have received from the Emperor Rudolph—"The Emperor of all emperors will be thy comfort. Thou hast no more need of Rudolph," says the angelic voice.

It has been well observed [1] that in these last séances it is the voice, not the appearance, of the messenger of which we hear most. In earlier years Dee, who could "neither see nor scry," was troubled at his limitations, and resorted eagerly to clairvoyants to transcend them. He had never really quite believed that the vision of faith and imagination was "perfecter" than Kelley's gift of seership.

Now it is his own psychic powers that seem summoned and aroused. The subjective has become of more importance than the objective. "He sees with the soul."

The words of Raphael were not long in fulfilment. Dee had truly no more need of Rudolph or of any earthly thing, and in December 1608 the long journey—beyond the seas of time—was indeed taken.

It is pleasant to think that the love and care of a faithful little circle—of his son and daughter, of Bartholomew Hickman and another disciple, John Pontoys—surrounded him to the last; and that death came to him at quiet Mortlake, where, in spite of all the slanders, his memory was not unhonoured by the village folk, one of whom spoke of him to his kinsman Aubrey as "a great peacemaker"

[1] Life of Dee, by Charlotte Fell-Smith.

among quarrelsome neighbours, and as "a mighty good man."

. . . . .

We have spoken of the injury inflicted on Dee's posthumous reputation by popular prejudice and ignorance.

Perhaps also, occultists and mystics themselves are inclined to give him less than his due. He so often fell short of his lofty aims that it is easy to forget how lofty those aims in truth were, and how his very failures were, in part, the failures of one whose vision was beyond that of his age. His varied knowledge and eager, speculative mind often proved a hindrance to practical attainments.

It has been said that Dee was a spiritualist rather than an occultist; but, even so, he brought to his spiritualism some high, far-reaching thoughts from his occult studies.

He investigated spiritualism as an astrologer who had not forgotten the nobler lessons of his art; and his belief in "the might of stars and angels" saved him from too blind a belief in the wisdom of the spirits of the "earthbound" dead. His own words to Kelley, aforequoted, are his own best Apologia. It was, in truth, "the company and information of the angels of God" that he sought; and if he did not always take the best means to attain it, his desire—that "infinite desire" which a great mystic [1] has described as more pleasing to God than any finished work—burned high and true to the last.

[1] "A great mystic"—Catherine of Siena.

In an age at once superstitiously credulous and superstitiously sceptical, he upheld the great tradition that human nature itself contains the germs of supernormal faculties which, rightly understood and developed, may establish a real communication with the Spiritual World.

We may say with some justice that he himself did not use those faculties to any great profit.

But he passed on the Torch! Modern Psychical Research owes something to his memory.

Printed in Great Britain by Hazell, Watson & Viney, Ld., London and Aylesbury.

THE

"Mystics and Occultists" SERIES

Uniformly Bound in Limp Cloth

This Series is designed to give a brief biography and concise account of the works and teachings of the great leaders of mediæval and modern times in Mystical Philosophy and Occult Science.

Theophrastus Paracelsus: Mediæval Alchemist. By W. P. SWAINSON. 1s. 6d. net.

"The life of Paracelsus, his writings and teachings, form a subject of perennial interest."—The Theosophist.

Roger Bacon: The Father of Experimental Science. By H. STANLEY REDGROVE, B.Sc. 1s. 6d. net.

"The analysis of Roger Bacon's claim to greatness is as sound as the whole book is interesting."—Sheffield Independent.

Franz Anton Mesmer: His Life and Teaching. By R. B. INCE. 1s. 6d. net.

"Written in a lucid and illuminating manner."—Birmingham Weekly Post.

Emanuel Swedenborg: The Swedish Seer. By W. P. SWAINSON. 1s. 6d. net.

A brief life of the Swedish Seer, and an outline of his teaching.

Cornelius Agrippa: Occult Philosopher. By LEWIS SPENCE. 2s. net.

"A slight sketch of the very chequered career of Cornelius Agrippa, of Nettesheim (1486–1535), the cabalistic philosopher, whose real enthusiasm for truth has been obscured, both during and after his life, by ecclesiastical intolerance." The Times.

Giordano Bruno: Mystic and Martyr. By EVA M. MARTIN. 2s. net.

"Miss Martin's book is an admirable short sketch of an outstanding and heroic personality."—Bookseller.

WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LIMITED,
8 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.4

The "Mystics and Occultists" Series

Uniformly Bound in Limp Cloth

Joseph Glanvill and Psychical Research in the Seventeenth Century. By H. STANLEY REDGROVE, B.Sc. (Lond.), F.C.S., and I. M. L. REDGROVE. Limp Cloth. 2s. net.

"Joseph Glanvill occupies a most important position in the history of that experimental philosophy which has become the great guiding influence of the English mind."—W. E. H. Lecky.

Jacob Boehme: The Teutonic Philosopher. By W. P. SWAINSON. 2s. net.

CONTENTS.—Early Life—Later Life—The Man—Byss and Abyss—The Three Principles—The Seven Qualities—The Created Universe—Adam's Fall—Atonement and Redemption—Conclusion.

A brief biography and summary of the philosophy and teachings of the divinely illuminated shoemaker of Goerlitz.

Joan of Arc. By R. B. INGE. 2s. net.

A fascinating study of the life and mission of the "Matchless Maid."

Prentice Mulford: New Thought Pioneer. By EVA MARTIN, Author of "Giordano Bruno," etc. 2s. net.

This brief biography and sympathetic study of Mulford's philosophy will be heartily welcomed by his many admirers.

READY SHORTLY

Raymond Lully: Illuminated Doctor, Alchemist and Christian Mystic. By ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE.

Dr. Dee. By G. M. HORT.

John Baptist Van Helmont: Chemist, Physician and Philosopher. By H. STANLEY REDGROVE, B.Sc.

Louis Claude de Saint Martin, the French Mystic, and the Story of Modern Martinism. By A. E. WAITE.

Thomas Lake Harris and his Occult Teaching. By W. P. SWAINSON.

St. Francis of Assisi, The Troubadour of God. By EDITH K. HARPER.

WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LIMITED,
8 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.4

RIDER'S PUBLICATIONS

The Great Initiates. Complete Edition of EDOUARD SCHURÉ'S "Les Grands Initiés," with an Introduction to Esoteric Teaching, and a Frontispiece Portrait of the Author. Translated by FRED ROTHWELL, B.A. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 2 vols.
10s. 6d. net the two volumes.

"Deep learning, a sustained and convincing eloquence, and a penetrating poetry of atmosphere are the distinguishing qualities of 'The Great Initiates,' translated from the French of M. Edouard Schuré by Mr. Fred Rothwell."—Sunday Times.

Occultists and Mystics of all Ages. By the HON. RALPH SHIRLEY, Author of "A Short Life of Abraham Lincoln," "The New God," etc. Crown 8vo, cloth, illustrated. 4s. 6d. net.

CONTENTS.—Apollonius of Tyana—Plotinus—Michael Scot—Paracelsus—Emanuel Swedenborg—Cagliostro—Anna Kingsford and Edward Maitland.

"This book may not inaccurately be described as romance—using the word in its widest understanding. It deals with the deeds and sayings of wonderful people, who each in turn helped to mould and to remake the state of the world. This book can be cordially commended to all lovers of these engrossing subjects."—The Ladies' Field.

Re-Incarnation. A Study of Forgotten Truth. By E. D. WALKER. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 350 pp.
5s. net.

"The volume is scarcely less interesting as an anthology of prose and verse extracts about Re-incarnation from ancient and modern writers than as a detailed exposition of the theory itself."—Athenæum.

The Law of Being. By HELEN BOULNOIS, Author of "The Dominion of Health," "The Healing Power," etc. Crown 8vo, cloth. 3s. net.

"An exposition of the doctrine that man alone can realise in himself the threefold existence of body, mind, and spirit; and that his mind represents a reflexion or portion of the Creative Intelligent Energy."—The Times.

WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LIMITED,
8 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.4

RIDER'S PUBLICATIONS

Thought-Coin. By BART KENNEDY. With an Introduction by the Hon. RALPH SHIRLEY. Crown 8vo, cloth. 5s. net.

"In this book Mr. Kennedy discusses some of the deep problems of life, and he has an inspiring message which he proclaims in delightful language. His book may be confidently recommended to serious thinkers."—Nottingham Guardian. "He certainly gives us much to think about. . . . Through all the worst of his troubles he seems to have been able to retain a keen sense of humour."—Yorkshire Observer.

The Symbolism of Colour. By ELLEN CONROY, M.A. Crown 8vo, cloth. 3s. 6d. net.

The association of colour with ideas and emotions is attractively illustrated by Miss Conroy's studies. A large field of interest is explored by the author in the variety of aspects from which past ages have viewed the subject.

The Spirit of the New Philosophy. By JOHN HERMANN RANDALL. Crown 8vo, cloth. 6s. net.

"A conception of unity capable of becoming a vital experience in the growing consciousness of mankind is set forth by John Hermann Randall as the basic solution for the various problems confronting the world."—The Scotsman.

The Inner Teaching and Yoga. By CHARLES WASE. Crown 8vo, cloth. 4s. 6d. net.

An attempt to make the Yoga philosophy of the East available to the Western World. Instructions are given which may be tested by those who seek to obtain results in self-development.

The Hidden Self and its Mental Processes. By H. ERNEST HUNT. Author of "Self-Training," etc., etc. Crown 8vo, cloth. 4s. 6d. net.

"A popular study of Psycho-analysis."—Scotsman. "Books on Psycho-analysis go on increasing, so one is glad to have a popular study which deals simply with recent developments."—Birmingham Gazette.

WILLIAM RIDER & SON, LIMITED,
8 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.4